and as they came to but one slight check, it was useless to follow further. At this time there were but four with the hounds, and two of these dropped off shortly after, and left the other two to finish.—Mr. John Jacob, riding a sister to Torrent, and Harnett, the huntsman; the next was Mr. Edward Garraway. After running over Mr. Cassan's land, they crossed into Grainahound, and ran him into a sewer within a mile of Foulk fox cover, in the county of Kilkenny. So severe was the pace and large the fences, that four horses without riders got on the Ballinakill road together, and one (the Mountain Hare) went in the direction of Croom (?), and up to dark had not been heard of. The beautiful condition of the hounds was the admiration of every person out; and as long as they are under the management of Robert H. Stubber, Esq., their popular and sporting master, we may expect the same sport we have enjoyed the first of this season.

FOR THE INFORMATION OF NATURALISTS, ANTIQUARIANS, MUSEUMS, AND LOVERS OF THE WORLD'S PRODUCE.—We have been favoured by a correspondent who has been making an extensive tour through different parts of England and Yorkshire, for the purpose of obtaining information of what novelties he could meet with. Amongst his inquiries, heard of Mr. George Palmer's collection of antlers, &c., residing at Wentworth Park. Having obtained an introduction to Mr. Palmer the park-keeper, who I found to be a very obliging and intelligent man, he very politely (as a stranger) showed me his vast collection of antlers. I was astonished on finding some of the most splendid specimens in the world, from the diminutive animal the chamois up to the far-famed Wapiti deer (now nearly extinct). In course of conversation with Mr. Palmer, find he has for nearly a quarter of a century collecting such a museum together, with a great expense and labour. He appears to possess antlers from most of the animals found, and from some unknown. His collection contains about 200 specimens from different parts of the world, undecipherable for their beauty and magnitude, I will challenge the world (as a private individual) to produce such a collection as Mr. Palmer. He has a fine specimen of diseased horns from nature, about sixty of them. What a rare case they would make for some museum. Mr. Palmer seems tired of collecting, and no doubt would dispose of all his collection.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF A HORSE.

To the Editor of THE FIELD.

SIR,—I send you this commencement of the Autobiography of a Horse, because your humanity has already granted insertion to many communications affecting the happiness of animals. If you should see fit to give a place to the story of which this is the beginning, I can only trust that it may be the means of alleviating some of the sufferings to which the noblest of all God's creatures—man alone excepted—are at present subjected.

I need hardly add that if this Autobiography be found worthy in any way of answering this high end, it is wholly and thoroughly in your hands, to do with it, after its publication in your most valuable paper, what you please.—Yours, X. Y. Z.

Years of suffering have almost completely obliterated from my memory the events of the three first years of my life. As I desire in these pages to mention nothing of which I am not quite sure, I shall commence my narrative at the time when I found myself the property of John Stafford, Esq., intended for the use of his daughter Lucy. I remember well the day when I was brought round to the front door, to be inspected by the assembled family. Amongst all those who had come to admire the new horse, my eyes lighted upon one, who, in my inmost soul I trusted was to be my future mistress. She was small—that in itself was something—was very pretty, and had a look of such charming gentleness about her, that I felt sure, if she was to ride me, my life must be happy. Ah! how little then did I dream of what was before me—of the years of weariness and pain—how little did I know that at the present time, broken-kneed, broken-winded, broken-hearted, I should be gradually whipped to death; hastening to my end not less surely—oh! how infinitely more painfully—than the next appointed victim in the knacker's yard! I knew this not, and with what pleasure did I see the lady I had fixed my eye upon come up to me and pat me with her gentle hand! With what joy did I hear her speak a few kind words at once to my ear, claiming me as hers, and promising me kindness at her hands! "Lucy," one of her sisters exclaimed—"Lucy, is the horse your very own?" "My own—my very own" was the reply. "Dearest papa, I am so much obliged to you."—"What shall you call it, Lucy?"—"Oh! I never thought of that: Emperor; will that do?" "Only it is a lady, and ought to have a lady's name."—"Oh, then, will Janet or Isabelle do?" Isabelle was fixed upon as my new name. "And I shall give you a feed every morning my own self," continued my young mistress, "and no one shall ever ride you but myself, and though mamma has given me such a beautiful whip, you shall never be whipped unless you are very very naughty, and that you never will be." "I am afraid," said a pleasant looking lady, whom I supposed to be Mrs. Stafford, "if horse and mistress come to such pleasant terms, mamma's whip will not be of much use." "Oh yes, mamma, you know all ladies ride with whips; and Isabelle may sometimes forget herself, or may not understand what I want; but I hope not, and I am sure you would not like me to use your whip unless it is necessary."—"No, my darling, indeed I would not, but I certainly don't expect my Lucy to be cruel. Indeed, I think Isabelle will have such a pleasant mistress that she will be quite spoiled for any other." Mrs. Stafford did not mistake the kindness of her daughter. I had not been more than a fortnight at Stafford Lodge, before I was confirmed in my opinion of the humanity of my mistress. She was riding me in company with a friend of hers, when we came to a steep hill. Her friend, a Miss Cathcart, wished to canter up it. Miss Stafford objected—"it is so dreadfully steep."—"But it is so delightful cantering up these hills."—"It must be very painful to the horse; it must be tiring enough carrying us up at a walk." "I never saw," replied Miss C., "such an odd girl as you are, Lucy, you always seem to think more for your horse than for yourself; you can't half enjoy a ride, if you go on in this absurd manner. I am sure I am not cruel, but certainly I should never think of giving up my own pleasure for fear of tiring my horse." "And yet, dear Emily," my rider replied, "I suppose it is just as disagreeable for horses to be tired, as for us. I know I should not like to have to run up this hill, and so I will not make my horse canter up with me on his back." "The idea of comparing horses with women—well, I shall canter up and wait for you," so saying, she gave her horse a smart touch with her whip and off they set. How I loved my young, kind mistress for her humanity! Oh, if ladies knew the dreadful effort it is to have to cauter up steep hills, with their fair burdens on their backs, I am sure they would not so invariably take this enjoyment. We were not long in rejoicing Miss Cathcart, who declared she never had enjoyed a canter so much in her life. "I don't think," said Miss Stafford, "I should like to be your horse, Emily."—"No," she replied, "neither should I." It is very delightful being carried by one's own horse so quickly up a steep hill; but I can quite imagine that it is not so pleasant for the horse to carry one up. But, for that matter, I am not quite sure that I should like to change existence with your horse, though I believe it to be the happiest of all horses. You enjoy galloping along the road, but I can quite imagine that it is not as enjoyable to your horse to gallop with you. I should think in all cases it was much pleasanter for the lady to be carried by the horse, than for the horse to carry the lady. I don't think I should quite like to have a hit in my mouth, or to feel a whip very near me, or many other little things which your horse has to submit to."—"No, I suppose you are quite right; but what I mean is, that if I had the misfortune to be a horse, and not a woman, I should not like to be your horse. You seem to me, dearest Emily, not to think very much about what is pleasant or unpleasant to it." "Oh Lucy," Miss C. replied, apparently much grieved, "you don't really think I am cruel, do you? I am sure, for a horse, mine leads quite a happy life. Just think how much worse must be the life of one of these poor unfortunate horses that draw the London omnibuses,—or, still worse, of a London cab-horse."—"Oh, yes," said my mistress, "it really quite pains me in London to see how dreadfully these poor cab-horses are worked and whipped. But I suppose it does no good thinking of their suffering and making oneself uncomfortable. I shall only try and make Isabelle's life as happy as possible." And truly did she keep her word; and if in after life I have discovered the truth of what I then heard, and have felt that, in comparison with the life I lead, the life of the horse of the least humane lady in the world must be one of almost perfect happiness. At least I have one bright spot to look back upon; and while my body is agitated by my inhuman treatment, and my wearied limbs are forced to unremitting labour and rapid speed by the ceaseless strokes of a deeply-knotted whip, my mind at least can dwell upon the fair form, the gentle touch, the kind words of her who was once my mistress. This remembrance is the one bright spot in my dark life of agony, and from my heart—broken as it is—I thank and bless her for it. And let all those fair riders whose eyes may light upon these pages, believe the word of one who has had experience, but has now no further interest in the matter save for others of his race, that horses—speechless, reasonless as they are—value highly the kindness of those whose unlimited power serves but to make their kindness the more kind.

COURSING

COURSING FIXTURES.

(Weather permitting.)

NOVEMBER, 1854.

PLACES.	DATE.	JUDGE.
Ashdown Park Champion (Berkshire).....	20
Chatsworth Open (Derbyshire).....	22 and 23	Mr. A. Bennett
Sunderland (Salop).....	23 and 24	Mr. Nightingale
Newcastle, Northumberland, and Durham.....	28, 29, and 30	Mr. A. Bennett
Coquetdale (Northumberland).....	Not fixed	Mr. Warwick

DECEMBER.

Biggar Club (Lanark).....	5
Kenilworth.....	5 and 6	Mr. Tibbett
Ridgway (Lancashire).....	7 and 8
Spelthorne (Middlesex).....	7 and 8	Mr. Lawrence
Caledonian (Lanark).....	14

JANUARY, 1855.

Biggar Club (Lanark).....	23
The Renewed trial between North-Western and South-Western Coursers, at Lytham (Lancashire).....	29 and fol. days

FEBRUARY.

Spelthorne (Wilts).....	7, 8, and 9	Mr. Lawrence
Newmarket Open.....	12
Baron Hill, Beaumonts (Anglesea).....	13

MARCH.

Caledonian Open (Lanark) ..	15
Biggar Open (Lanark).....	27
Ridgway (Lancashire).....

WINMARLEIGH OPEN COURSING MEETING.

TUESDAY, November 7.

Judge—Mr. R. CURVEN. Hon. Sec.—Mr. A. N. ELLITHORPE.

WINMARLEIGH CUP.

Mr. J. Holden's bd b Myrtle beat Mr. J. Lewtas's r b Sultana
Mr. Simpson's r d Sir William Perry beat Mr. Wignall's be w b Jenny Lind
Mr. Airey's bd w d Leveson beat Mr. Parkinson's bk b Phantom
Mr. J. Miller's bk w d Halstone beat Mr. J. Parkinson's f w b Truth
Mr. Wignall's r w d Delta beat Mr. Williams's w b b Rally
Mr. H. Townsend's f d Navigator beat Mr. R. Parkinson's bk b Little Kate
Mr. Airey's bd b Lettuce beat Mr. Simpson's be w d Dirk Blatterick
Mr. J. Parkinson's f d Paxton beat Mr. J. Holden's bd b Mantle

Second Ties.

After Myrtle and Sir William Perry, and Lettuce and Paxton had each run an undecided course, the stakes were divided, in consequence of darkness setting in.

WINMARLEIGH PUPPY CUP.

Mr. Agar's f b Lady Jane (by Blanche, out of Silk) beat Mr. T. Varley's br w d Pilot (by Roland the Brave, out of Cylla)
Mr. Scott's bk w d Rattle (by Roland the Brave, out of Cylla) beat Mr. H. Gardner's bk b Gansboy (by Planet, out of Jenny)
Mr. Airey's f d Lord John (by Hughie Graham, out of Lady) beat Mr. Simpson's r d Kingston (by the General, out of Exile)
Mr. H. Gardner's r b Grace (by Mentor, out of Madonna) beat Mr. Simpson's be b Countess (by Blanche, out of Silk)
Mr. Scott's bk w d Mariner (by Roland the Brave, out of Cylla) beat Mr. Gardner's bd d Greenhorn (by Blanche, out of Sister to Cerito)
Mr. Airey's f d Sultan (by Hughie Graham, out of Lady) beat Mr. A. N. Ellithorpe's f w d Squib (by Herve, out of Florence)

BRAMPTON COURSING MEETING (CUMBERLAND).

November 9, 10, and 11.

Judge—Mr. WARWICK. Slipper—Mr. RICHARD NOBERT. Stewards—Mr. RAMSBAY, Mr. CARRICK, Mr. DOBSON, Mr. THOMPSON, Mr. TWEDDLE, and Mr. LEE. Honorary Secretary—Mr. GILL. Field Keeper—Mr. GREISDALE.

THE BRAMPTON CUP. For dogs of any age, at £5 5s. each.

Mr. G. A. Thompson's bd and w b Titmouse beat Mr. Birnie's f b Gem of the North
Mr. G. H. Burnett's bk and w d Cock of the North beat Mr. John Bell's f b Posthumous
Mr. Dobson's f and w d President beat Mr. Joseph Bell's f and w d Young Cardinal
Mr. Radcliff's r d Toddlin' Hauke beat Mr. George Bell's bk and w b Jeanette
Mr. Halliburton's r d Country Squire beat Sir James Rossall's r b Twirl
Mr. Taylor's f and w d Telegraph beat Mr. Hamshay's w and bk d Mangonel
Mr. Lee's be and w b Eve (late Jane's my Darling) beat Mr. Fayke's bd and w d Scottish Cavalier
Mr. Gill's bd d Tom Spring beat Mr. Bowman's f and w d Bee Hunter
Mr. Pickering's bd d Cheap Trip (late The Hero) beat Mr. Milburn's bk and w b Maid of the Mill
Mr. Forster's w and f b Queen Mary beat Mr. Lawson's bd d Random
Mr. Hamble's f d British Lion beat Mr. Benne's f d Fatstaff
Mr. Phillips's f and w d Donald beat Mr. J. Hodgson's f d Rocket
Mr. T. B. Thompson's r d Knight of St. George (late Foreman) beat Mr. Jones's r b Lady Penbrooke
Mr. Hodgson's f and w d Tyrant beat Mr. Hedley's bk and w d Baron
Mr. Murray's f and w b Lady Heron beat Mr. Twiddle's f and w b Meg Merrilies
Mr. Carrick's r and w d Drunken Tom beat Mr. Hudspeth's r and w d Spring

Second Ties.

Cock of the North beat Titmouse	Cheap Trip beat Queen Mary
Toddlin' Hauke beat President	Donald beat British Lion
Telegraph beat Country Squire	Knight of St. George beat Tyrant
Eve beat Tom Spring	Drunken Tom beat Lady Heron

Third Ties.

Cock of the North beat Toddlin' Hauke	Cheap Trip beat Donald
Eve beat Telegraph	Knight of St. George beat Drunken Tom

Fourth Ties.

Eve beat Cock of the North	Knt. of St. George beat Cheap Trip
----------------------------	------------------------------------

Deciding Course.

Eve beat Knight of St. George, and won the Cup.
---	--

Pedigree.

Eve (late Jane's my Darling), by Clementson's Eden, out of Eve Knight of St. George (late Foreman), by The Nutman, out of Saunders's Jessie, sister to Liddesdale

HILTON AND HIGH LEVEN OPEN COURSING MEETING.

THURSDAY AND FRIDAY, Nov. 9 and 10.

Judge—Mr. M'GEORGE. Stewards—Messrs. F. COATES, J. RAMSEY, HENNER, J. JOHNSON, T. STOCKDALE, J. SNRWOOD.

THE HILTON CUP. By twenty-six all-aged Dogs, at £3. 10s. each.

The winner to receive £38; the second, £12; the third and fourth, £5 each; winners of two courses, £3 each.
Mr. Chapman's r d Ben Will beat Mr. Jenkins's w and f b Sarah Jennings (late Lady Scorton)
Mr. Vaughan's r d Vulcan beat Mr. Ireland's r b New Year's Eve
Mr. Marshall's w and be b Maid of Marske beat T. C. Constable's, Esq., r d Young Champion
Mr. Stockdale's b d Black Doctor beat D. Grant's, Esq., f and w b Nancy
Mr. Blenkinsop's f and w d King Tom beat D. Grant's, Esq., bd d Dart
Mr. Stephenson's f d Bugle beat Mr. Layton's r d Leamington
Mr. Waullass's b d King of the World beat Mr. Wilson's br and w b Magpie
Mr. Snowden's bk b Merry Bird beat Mr. Ireland's r d Tip (2)
T. Constable's, Esq., r d Luck's All beat Mr. Layton's bk and w d Phantom
D. Grant's, Esq., r d Lanercost beat Mr. Vaughan's bk and w b Ringlet
Mr. Scarth's bk b Nancy beat Mr. Blenkinsop's f and w d Younger Hill
Mr. Jennings's w and r d Dead Robbery at Catterick (late Young Comet) beat Mr. Shepherd's b and w d Balaklava
Mr. Stockdale's br and w d Rasping Jack beat D. Grant's, Esq., r and w d Crocus

Second Ties.

Ben Will beat Vulcan	Luck's All beat Nancy
Black Doctor beat Maid of Marske	Dead Robbery beat Lanercost
Bugle beat King Tom	Rasping Jack ran a bye
King of the World beat Merry Bird

Third Ties.

Bugle beat Black Doctor	Rasping Jack beat Dead Robbery
Luck's All beat King of the World	Ben Will ran a bye

Fourth Ties.

Bugle beat Ben Will	Rasping Jack beat Luck's All
---------------------	------------------------------

Deciding Course.

Rasping Jack (by Rasper, out of Vote of Thanks) beat Bugle (by Jaggler, out of Patty) and won the stake
---	--

THE LEVEN STAKE. By four Puppies of 1853. The winner to receive £6; second, £2.

Mr. D. Cousins's f d Flying Dutchman beat Mr. Icton's b and w b Lady Jane
Mr. Robinson's f and w d Collingwood beat Mr. Clayton's b and w d Prince

Deciding Course.

Collingwood beat Flying Dutchman

This meeting was well attended and delightfully conducted; hares plentiful; the courses were all well seen, and Mr. M'George's (the judge) decisions gave general satisfaction; Mr. Ingledew (slipper) also merits much praise.

NEWMARKET CHAMPION COURSING MEETING.

TUESDAY AND FOLLOWING DAYS.

PUPPIES' STAKES.

Mr. Dobede's bk b Damask beat Mr. Jackson's f b Miss Nightingale
Mr. Randall's bk b Riot beat Mr. Buckworth's bk and w d Brigand
Lord Stradbroke's r d Melbourne beat Capt. Desant's bk b Banquo
Mr. Reed's bk b Realty beat Mr. Little's r b Letter A
Mr. King's bk b Ruler beat Lord Stradbroke's bk d Marlo
Mr. Gillett's bd d Governor beat Mr. King's bk d Reglan
Mr. Jardine's w and bk b Motacilla (2) beat Mr. Dobede's bk b Ruby
Mr. Little's bk d Lascelles (3) beat Capt. Desant's bk d Mustapha
Lord Stradbroke's be d Mullingar (2) beat Mr. Dobede's bk d Hutchman
Mr. Gillett's bk and w b Glory beat Mr. Fyson's bk d Fernought
Mr. Jardine's w and bk d Mahout beat Mr. Pell's be and w b Purity
Mr. Dobede's bk d Derwent beat Mr. Pell's be b Philomel

Second Ties.

Motacilla beat Melbourne	Mahout (2) beat Glory
Damask beat Mullingar	Buler (2) beat Realty
Riot beat Lascelles	Derwent (2) beat Governor

Third Ties.

Motacilla beat Ruler	Riot beat Derwent
Mahout beat Damask

MATCH FOR £200.

Mr. Jackson's r b Hermitage (2) beat Mr. Brown's w and bk b Border Chief

ALL-AGED STAKES.

Lord Stradbroke's r d Malrae beat Mr. Reed's bk b Rifle
Mr. Little's bd d Lancaster agst Mr. Honeywood's bk b—Lancaster ran a bye; Mr. Honeywood's b, dr
Mr. Jackson's r d Troublesome Jack beat Mr. Dobede's bk b b Devna
Mr. Buckworth's bk d Barrister beat Mr. Miller's bk d Barababas
Mr. Randall's f and w b Rival beat Mr. Fyson's r d Furious
Mr. Fyson's f d Fatalist beat Mr. Dobede's bk d Dog Rose
Mr. Miller's bk b Mildew beat Lord Stradbroke's bk and w b Mildew
Mr. Secreton's bk b Mortality beat Lord Stradbroke's r b Masic
Mr. Pertwee's r b Kate (2) beat Mr. Jardine's be b Mortification
Mr. King's be d Rokoby beat Mr. Pertwee's r b Kitty
Mr. Swinburne's f b Lively beat Mr. Dobede's bk d b Darling
Mr. Jardine's bk d Maharajah (late Gipsy King) beat Mr. Swinburne's bk b Elfin

Second Ties.

Kate beat Fatalist	Troublesome Jack beat Mortality
Barrister beat Mildew	Lively beat Malrae
Maharajah (late Gipsy King) beat Lancaster	Rival beat Rokoby

Third Ties.

Maharajah beat Troublesome Jack	Rival beat Kate
	Barrister beat Lively

EXNING STAKES. For all ages.

Mr. Fyson's r b Fly beat Mr. Secreton's r b Stop It
Mr. Randall's r b Remembrance (2) beat Mr. King's bk d Rutland, drawn
Mr. Dobede's bk d Darling beat Mr. Swinburne's bk b Elphin
Mr. Gillett's r d General beat Mr. Richards's bk d Britton
Mr. Fyson's r d Furious beat Mr. Pertwee's bk d Kaleudar
Mr. Miller's bk b Barababas beat Mr. Reed's r b Rajah
Mr. Buckworth's r b Blush beat Mr. Jardine's be b Mortification
Mr. Miller's bk d Barababas beat Mr. Gillett's bd d Gality

Second Ties.

Barababas beat General Blush beat Barababas	Remembrance beat Fly Darling (2) beat Furious
---	---

NEWMARKET STAKE.

Mr. Gilson's r b Olivea beat Mr. Gillett's bk and w d Go-along.
Mr. Buckworth's bk and w d Brigand beat Mr. Swinburne's be d Let-m-go
Mr. Secreton's r b Splice beat Mr. Swinburne's r b Elastic
Mr. Dobede's be d Dragon beat Mr. Swinburne's be b Latitudo
Mr. Dobede's bk d Dragon beat Mr. Reed's bk b Ruby
Capt. Besant's bk b Banquo beat Mr. Purser's b b Pandora

Second Ties.

Latitudo beat Glyceria	Dragon beat Brigand
Banquo beat Splice

BOTTISHAM STAKES. For Puppies.

Mr. Pell's be and w b Purity beat Mr. King's bk and w d Rasper
Mr. Swinburne's r b Expert beat Mr. Fyson's bd d Fernought

CHIFFENHAM ALL AGES STAKES.

Mr. Dobede's bk b Devna beat Mr. Swinburne's bd d Electric
Mr. Secreton's bk b Mortality beat Mr. Gillett's f b Gazelle

COURSING AT MARTON, ON THE ESTATE OF SIR THEOPHILUS BIDDOLPH.

Mr. MATTHEW'S DAY.

Judging from the meet at Marton station, on Monday last, it would appear that there is some truth in the words "No joys can compare with the hunting of the hare," for although the morning was murky, and assumed a threatening aspect, a very large field of horse and foot assembled. Many of the sportsmen, taking advantage of the rail, had travelled a long distance. One gentleman, who came on purpose, breakfasted in London after riding gallantly all day, and who afterwards dined with the party at Marton, returned to town the same evening to supper. There were sixteen and a half brace of dogs, and the following owners, most of whom were present, will be a sufficient guarantee for the purity of their breed. Most of the dogs were carefully clothed, and they all appeared in first-rate condition. Several of them are booked to enter the lists at Kenilworth, where they will no doubt shine, and very probably bring away the shiners:—T. Hayton, Esq., of Kilsby; Mr. Roughton, of Coventry; T. Lawrence, Esq., of Thurlston; Mr. Hicken, of Bourton; Mr. Blundell, of Frankton; —Black, Esq., of Toft; Mr. Kelsey, of Duchurch; Mr. Russell, of Priuethorpe; R. Cowley, Esq., of Kilsby; Mr. Iveus, of Itelington; Mr. Bracey, of Rytton; Mr. Bick, of Rugby; and, last and not least, Mr. J. Cowley, of Hilmorton, whose pup, our correspondent was informed by a better, bolted when loosed from the slips, right after a flock of sheep, for which piece of ill-manners he got a severe flogging, which he no doubt will bear in mind; but there is some excuse for him, as his master is a butcher, and this was his debut.

The early part of the day brought little sport, but as the day wore there were some capital courses, and the game sprung up like mushrooms. Mr. Hayton's dogs, Hamlet and Cassio, distinguished themselves by running two severe courses in brilliant style. Mr. Hicken's Tipper (he ought to be called Clipper), with Mr. Bracey's brow dog, succeeded in killing a wetting hare, after most skillfully preventing her from taking a double fence—by the side of which she dodged for full five minutes. Mr. Roughton's black dog, accompanied by a novice, deserves honourable mention for the manner in which they finished their hare in a turnip field, after a good course. Mr. Bick's Sprig had a chalk put down to his account. Mr. Black's Driver earned a laurel, and Mr. Lawrence's dogs did credit to their master. Fifteen hares were slung on the keeper's old pony at the finish, and the party wended their way to the Hare and Hounds Inn, Marton, where a most excellent dinner had been provided; consisting of roast beef, a fine boiled leg of mutton, a roast hare, a pair of Cochins China fowls (like young turkeys), boiled, with lots of pastry, plum puddings, &c. &c. It was very gratifying to find so good a spread, but more so to see that upwards of thirty gentlemen (all as hungry as hunters) sat down to partake of it. T. Lawrence, Esq., was the chairman, and Mr. Hicken, the elder, acted him. There was lots of jokes passed between the jovial crew, and the lounge-room of the Hare and Hounds resounded with some excellent and appropriate songs after the cloth was drawn, and the best of feeling prevailed. The merits of the various "beauties" who had most distinguished themselves during the day, and for some time past, were discussed upon; and the company separated, to find their way homewards, in about as dark a night as ever enshrouded this terrestrial ball.

CORK SOUTHERN COURSING CLUB.

TUESDAY, November 7.

The members of the above club met this day at Warner's Cross, on the old Bandon road, contiguous to the Ballinacraig Railway Station, and with their friends enjoyed some excellent sport. The following is a return:—

THE PUPPY STAKES.

Mr. Massey's bk and w b Pretty Polly beat Mr. Hugh Hawkes's fa d Jolly Miller
Mr. Wallace's bk and w b Heart's Ease (late Maid of the Mill) beat Dr. O'Neill's r d Peck
Mr. Wice's r d Wildfire beat Mr. Hugh Hawkes's w and r b Hour
Mr. O'Neill's r d Gallimore beat Mr. Massey's r d Barrister the Second, after an undecided course.

Second Ties.

Pretty Polly beat Heart's Ease
Wildfire beat Gallimore, after an undecided course

Deciding Course.

Pretty Polly beat Wildfire, and won the stakes

MATCHES.

Mr. H. Hawkes's fa d Jolly Miller beat Mr. Massey's r d Barrister the Second
Dr. O'Neill's r d Peel beat Mr. Clinton's bk b Merry-go-round
Mr. Curtis's fa b Consolation beat Mr. Clinton's fa b Annie Island
Mr. Clinton's bk d Jim-along Josey, beat Mr. Hayes's f d Spring
Mr. Clinton's bk b Ah! Beware (late Kiss-me-quick) beat Dr. O'Neill's r b Mountain Spryte

The next meeting of the club will take place at Upton, when the Eglinton Challenge Cup, open to all dogs, will be run for.

CARLOW COURSING CLUB.—WEDNESDAY, Nov. 1.

Judge—Mr. WM. JOHNSON. Slipper—Mr. HILL.

The first meet of the season of the Carlow Coursing Club took place on the above date, at Lisnava, and was attended by a large number of the gentry of the surrounding neighbourhood, amongst whom we noticed, Captain McClintock Bunbury, M.P., and Lady; H. Eustace, Esq., and Lady; J. Marx, Esq., and Miss Marx, and the Misses Whitty; Messrs. L. and S. Crosthwaite, Gale, Hill, Campion, Johnson, prove of good service to vessels coming in or going out in foggy weather or dark nights; the buoy is also so constructed as to afford refuge for twelve or fourteen persons, should any vessel be stranded on the bar, and the crew be able to get to it.

BALAKLAVA, CRIMEA.—There is one ship here with stores belonging to some speculator, and from the stern of which is hung a large advertisement: "Oppenheim, dealer in British goods." Two yachts, Lord Euston's and M. De Burgh's, are likewise here, having very recently arrived in the harbour. —Dublin Evening Mail.

PENZANCE TO AUSTRALIA.—A Mount's Bay fishing-boat, of only 16 tons—the Mystery, of Newlyn, Captain Richard Nicholls—now lies within a short distance, ready to sail for Australia. Her length is 87, her breadth 11, and her depth 6 feet; while her adventurous crew consists of the captain, Job Kelynak, the mate, and Richard Badcock, William Badcock, Philip Curnow, Lewis Lewis, and Charles Boase, seamen. She is ballasted with water, has four months' provisions on board, and bears on her bow and sails the number 233. The navigation of thousands of miles of ocean by such a craft is a great undertaking, and a success or failure will be looked for with considerable interest. —Cornish Telegraph.

MAITA.—The cutter yacht, Syren, belonging to Mr. Moore, arrived from Marseilles on the 4th inst. The schooner yacht Zoe, belonging to Mr. Hammersley, arrived from Messina on the 7th.

* * We shall feel obliged by the Secretaries of "Rowing Clubs," and others forwarding their Appointments of Matches or Notices of Meetings to come, at their early convenience.

MATCHES APPOINTED.

November 20.—T. Cole (the Champion of the Thames) and J. Messenger, of Teddington, to row from Putney to Mortlake, for £200 a side.

November 21.—Colquhoun Silver Sculls, Cambridge.

November 27.—John Bosson and Sampson Beesley, Pint Race from Oxford to Illey and back, for £10 a side.

November.—Robert Newell and William Pocock, to row from Putney Bridge to the Ship at Mortlake, for £25 a side.

CHAMPIONSHIP OF THE THAMES.

The aquatic season—prolonged this year to an extremely late period—will conclude on Monday next with a race for the championship of the Thames and £400, between Thomas Cole, who now holds the title, and James Messenger, who aspires to it. For some time past this event has been the theme of conversation in the aquatic circles, and as the time approaches for the issue the interest which it creates is considerably heightened, and there is no doubt but those who witness it will experience the gratification consequent upon a first-rate trial of skill and stamina. For many years past, rowing, as a science, has been improved upon, and we know of no two men so competent to illustrate that improvement as Cole and Messenger. What may be the fortune of the day it is, indeed, difficult to say; and the very best judges are hanging back to ascertain something that may determine their choice before they make investments. The Locomotive steamer has been chartered for the dile to accompany the race, and will convey the umpires and referee. The match will start at a little after two, the distance being from Putney to Mortlake. Both men are in active training.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY BOAT RACES.

PAIR OARS.—The annual race for the silver cups, oars, and medals, will take place on Monday and Tuesday, November 27th and 28th. Gentlemen who intend to enter, must pay their entrance money into the Old Bank, and send their names to the secretary on or before Saturday, November 25th. The racing will commence punctually at two o'clock each day.

FOUR OARS.—The annual race for the silver cup and medals will take place on Monday and Tuesday, December 4th and 5th. Colleges that intend to enter must pay their entrance money into the Old Bank, and send the names of their crews to the secretary on or before Saturday, December 2nd. The racing will commence punctually at two o'clock each day.

SCRATCH FOUR OARS.—On Thursday and Friday, December 7th and 8th, a grand scratch four-oar match, for quart and pint tankards, will take place. These races are open to all members of the University of Oxford. The racing will commence each day punctually at two o'clock. A list for names will be found in the University Boat Club barge.

ROWING AT OXFORD.

THE PENDROKE COLLEGE SCRATCH FOUR-OARED RACES, for quart power tankards, were rowed, on Friday, November 10th, when seven boats started, as follows:—

FIRST HEAT.

Mr. Wrigall (stroke)	Mr. Jones (stroke)
Mr. Caldwell	Mr. Godber
Mr. Hawkins	Mr. Templeman
Mr. Molyneux	Mr. Blenkarn
Mr. Geest (coxswain)	Mr. Kines, jun. (coxswain)

Mr. Weigall, after a good race, came in winner by about a length.

SECOND HEAT.

Mr. Hooper (stroke)	Mr. Radford (stroke)
Mr. May	Mr. Lapworth
Mr. James	Mr. Hartman
Mr. Hough	Mr. Frye
Mr. Clarke (coxswain)	Mr. Alexander (coxswain)

Mr. Hooper's boat, although his coxswain lost the rudder lines at the start, won by a couple of lengths.

THIRD HEAT.

Mr. Mellish (stroke)	Mr. Johnstone (stroke)	Mr. Greston (stroke)
Mr. Townsend	Mr. Birby	Mr. Orier
Mr. Bent	Mr. Jeorlaine	Mr. Barrow
Mr. Robins	Mr. Rice	Mr. Ouslow
Mr. Callicot (coxswain)	Mr. Rhoades (coxswain)	Mr. Stephens (coxswain)

For this heat Mr. Mellish's boat came in winner by scarcely a boat's length. Mr. Johnstone's crew rowing very pluckily.

Mr. Mellish, Mr. Weigall, and Mr. Hooper now rowed the decisive heat; No. 3 of the latter's boat unfortunately got his oar entangled in the weeds at starting. Mr. Mellish's boat from the first drew a head, and won easily by several lengths; Mr. Weigall second. No. 2 of the winning boat was remarkable for his facetious observations to the lookers-on and his unique costume.

EXETER COLLEGE SCRATCH FOUR-OARS.

On Monday the 13th instant, the Exeter College Scratch Four-oared Races came off. The following three boats started in the first heat:—

Mr. Stocken (stroke)	Mr. T. H. Marshall (st)	Mr. Salmon (stroke)
Mr. S. Marshall	Mr. Davy	Mr. Salmon
Mr. Phillips	Mr. Risley	Mr. Congreve
Mr. Dundas	Mr. Tucker	Mr. Churchill
Mr. Robinson (cox)	Mr. H. Stone (cox)	Mr. Turner (coxswain)

Mr. Stocken took up his station nearest the Berkshire shore, Mr. T. H. Marshall in the middle, and Mr. Salmon on the Oxfordshire.

At the word "off" Mr. Stocken showed a head, and in a few strokes cleared his length and kept the lead, eventually winning by two and a half lengths. A glorious race ensued between Mr. Marshall and Mr. Salmon for the second place, which ended in favour of Mr. Marshall by a quarter of a length.

SECOND HEAT.

Mr. O. Cave (stroke)	Mr. Le Mesurier (st)	Mr. Giblin (stroke)
Mr. W. Stone	Mr. Causton	Mr. Sutton
Mr. West	Mr. Douglas	Mr. Reay
Mr. Grant	Mr. Henry	Mr. Hecklota
Mr. Houseman (cox)	Mr. Sterry (coxswain)	Mr. Morris (coxswain)

Mr. Le Mesurier took the Berkshire shore, Mr. C. Cave the middle, and Mr. Giblin the Oxfordshire. It was a capital race for the first place, between Mr. Le Mesurier and Mr. C. Cave, ending in favour of the latter by half a length.

FINAL HEAT.

The final heat was between Mr. Stocken and Mr. C. Cave's crew. Mr. Stocken took the lead at the start, kept increasing it, and won easily by five or six lengths. The course was from the Long Bridge to the Exeter barge.

WORCESTER COLLEGE SCRATCH FOUR-OARED RACES.

On the afternoon of Saturday, the 11th instant, the Worcester College Scratch Four-oared Races took place, over the usual course. The following were the entries:—

Mr. Hooke (stroke)	Mr. Smallwood (stroke)
Mr. Skay	Mr. Cole
Mr. Barnwell	Mr. Allington
Mr. Aldworth	Mr. Shipton
Mr. Eckersell (coxswain)	Mr. Westbrook (coxswain)

Mr. Wheeler (stroke)	Mr. Hill (stroke)
Mr. Woolhough	Mr. Gageys
Mr. Bartholp	Mr. Healy
Mr. T. Smith	Mr. Drummond
Mr. Yapp (coxswain)	Mr. E. Anderson (coxswain)

The first heat was between Mr. Hooke and Mr. Smallwood. The superiority of the former was evident from the commencement. Mr. Hooke took the lead and kept it, winning by three lengths.

The second heat was between the crews of Mr. Hill and Mr. Wheeler. Soon after the start Mr. Hill's Bow-oar broke the button of his rowlock, which impeded their speed, and the consequence was that Mr. Wheeler won easy by three lengths.

The final heat was well contested, being a breast and breast race to the Cherwell, where Mr. Wheeler's boat went ahead, and maintained it, despite the rowing of their plucky opponents, and came in first a few yards only.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE SCRATCH FOURS.

These races took place on Friday, November 10. Six boats appeared at the scratch.

In the first heat the following was the order:—

First.	Second.	Third.
1. Bowden	1. Gordon	1. Bradshaw
2. Field	2. Pulk	2. Brown
3. Atkinson	3. South	3. Henderson
4. Woodhall	4. Deane	4. Reid
Barrow—coxswain	Mumtrey—cox	Davey—coxswain

In this heat there was a fine race between Woodhall and Denne; the former eventually winning by three-quarters of a length.

SECOND HEAT.

First.	Second.	Third.
1. Grogson	1. Glyn	1. Henderson
2. Wood	2. Finch	2. Johnston
3. Craster	3. Hitchcock	3. Jones
4. Ingham	4. Chynton	4. Luce
Elers—coxswain	Bateman—cox	Illice—coxswain

This promised to be a fine race; but Mr. Hitchcock's boat, by unfortunately fouling the other two soon after the start, destroyed its chance, and Mr. Craster rowed in an easy winner.

The deciding race between Mr. Woodhall and Mr. Craster was won by the latter.

EXETER COLLEGE CHALLENGE SCULLS, OXFORD.—The Exeter College Challenge Sculls, held by Mr. C. A. Turner, for the last year have been awarded to Mr. W. F. Stocken, who rowed over the course on Friday, the 10th inst., no other competitor having been found to try his skill with the above-named gentlemen.

THE NEW UNIVERSITY BARGE, OXFORD.—The new University barge is now approaching completion. The barge portion was built by Mr. Daniel Downing, of Pangburn, and the house part is being constructed by Mr. John Castle, builder, of Oxford. The new barge is ninety-five feet long and seventeen feet wide, and consists of a club-room forty feet long and fifteen feet wide, a dressing-room, with a warm bath, which will always be ready in case of accident, and a committee-room and offices. The barge is substantially built from a Gothic design, by Mr. E. J. Buntou, architect, of this city, and will be a great ornament to the river side. The committee are making great exertions to raise a subscription to defray the expenses of the undertaking. The club numbers 1,500 members.

IMPORTANT TO BOAT CLUBS, BOAT BUILDERS, &c.—The Oxford University old club barge has been announced for disposal by private tender. It may be seen on the river Isis, adjoining Christ Church Meadow, Oxford, and examined, by permission of Mr. Grant. Tenders, sealed, and addressed to the committee of the Oxford University Boat Club, must be delivered at Mr. Grant's office, 33, St. Aldates, Oxford, on or before the 11th day of December next, of whom any necessary information may be obtained.

ROWING AT CAMBRIDGE.

UNIVERSITY FOUR-OARED RACES.

These races commenced on Friday, the 10th instant.

Seven boats started in the following order:—

1. 3rd Trinity	5. Corpus and Calus
2. King's and Sidney	6. 1st Trinity
3. Trinity Hall	7. Lady Margaret
4. Emmanuel

Only one bump was made, the King's and Sidney coalition upsetting near the Plough.

SATURDAY, 11th.

1. Trinity Hall	4. 3rd Trinity
2. Lady Margaret	5. Emmanuel
3. Corpus and Calus	6. 1st Trinity

The Corpus and Calus coalition crew made their bump at Grassy; the others rowed over.

MONDAY, 13th.

1. Emmanuel	4. 1st Trinity
2. 3rd Trinity	5. Corpus and Calus
3. Trinity Hall

Both bumps were made without much difficulty.

TUESDAY, 14th.

1. 3rd Trinity	2. Corpus and Calus	3. Trinity Hall
----------------	---------------------	-----------------

No bump was made this race.

FRIDAY, 17th.

The deciding heat was rowed to-day between the Third Trinity and Trinity Hall, and, after a very exciting race, was won by the former. Full particulars in our next.

QUEEN'S COLLEGE SCULLS, CAMBRIDGE.—The races for the Philip Challenge Cup came off on Saturday, the 11th inst. The following gentlemen entered: Messrs. Stamford, Griffin, Pigeon, Roberts. In the first race Mr. Griffin bumped Mr. Stamford, and Mr. Roberts bumped Mr. Pigeon. In the final race between Mr. Roberts and Mr. Griffin the former of these gentlemen won easily.

ARTIFICIAL REARING OF SALMON ON THE TAY.

Last Saturday we paid another visit to the salmon pond near Storemount Field on the Tay, and found the person in charge clearing out the last box of the gravel which was used for last year's hatching. This gravel is to be again ribbled and washed, to free it from the eggs of insects, previously to its being used for next year's hatching. In the canal into which the water that runs through the boxes empties itself, we observed some thousands of the fry, and we noticed that they had grown considerably; but on reaching the pond, with Peter Marshall, the curator, we were not prepared to see so great a difference, both in their size and colour, from what they were at our last visit. On throwing into the pond some of the boiled liver upon which they are fed, the water appeared alive with them, all eager to seize the food, and their silvery sides glistening in the sun, which they showed (after having got a morsel) when turning to descend to the bottom, would have interested the shillest spectator. Peter threw the food into every part of the pond, to show us that all parts of it were equally well stocked, and he requested us to take our stand on a platform that projects a considerable way into the pond, and from which we could see the bottom, while he threw in food right under where we were stationed, and although previous to the food being thrown not a fish could be seen, suddenly the bottom seemed alive, and a shoal darted up, and devoured the food ere it reached the bottom. We could have stood long here looking at the sight. The salmon and trout and even the parr, when in their native stream, lie behind stones, ready to seize hold of any food that may be brought down by the current, which having done, they descend to the same stone, but where such a multitude as this pond contains can each find a stone, puzzles us to determine; still the fish are thriving, even better than fry of the same age in the river. The fry in the pond are from five to six inches long, and, to all appearance, beginning to put on their smolt scales. If this turn out correct, and the fry of the Tay pond are smolts in March or April next, Mr. Shaw of Drumknrig, and Mr. Ramsbottom of Clitheroe's theory, will be proved wrong, and Mr. Young's of Bonar-Bridge will be found correct. If this should be the case, there will be no need of two ponds, as by the time that next year's ova are hatched, the present tenants of the pond will be down seawards; but we would earnestly recommend to those who have the management of the experiment, at all events to get the present pond enlarged. It is astonishing, indeed it is marvellous, that so many thousands of fish can live and thrive, as they are doing, in so small a pond, and reflects great credit on Peter Marshall, who has the charge of them. What struck us on our visit, as most surprising, was the difference of size of the fry in the canal and connecting stream from those in the pond—in the former place many of the young parrs were not above from two to three inches, while all those in the pond that came under our observation were from five to six inches—indeed, we are almost sure that were some of the smallest of those in the canal to descend to the pond, they would become the prey of its inmates. The difference of size can scarcely be accounted for by the difference of time in depositing the ova in the boxes, for, from a memorandum kept by Mr. Buist, the first of the ova was deposited in the boxes on the 23d of November, 1853, and the last about a month afterwards; but as some of the ova was taken from grise, the fry of the grise may not be so large as the salmon of the same age, the colour, however, of the fish in the canal and connecting run is at present not so silvery as those in the pond, which, in our opinion, shows they are not so far advanced. This may account for parrs of all sizes being got in the river, but cannot account for parrs of all sizes being found at all times of the year in a salmon river, for admitting that the fry at present in the pond, &c., go down to the sea in March, and April, and May, and if we are to judge that those parrs at present do the same, then for the months of July and August there would be no parrs in salmon streams larger than two or three inches; unless we are to understand (which we believe to be the case) that there are some salmon spawning in almost every month of the year; be this as it may, the following spring, we hope, will set at rest the much disputed question of a one or two years' residence of parr in the river, previous to their becoming grise, after going seawards. As far as the experiment has yet gone, it has been completely successful. In Mr. Buist's office may be seen, preserved in spirits, the fry taken from the boxes and pond, from the ova up to their present state, and at the same place fish of the same age taken from the river. Still so prejudicial are some of our fishers on the Tay, that they will not believe their own eyes, but say, that as their fathers before them, who knew more about salmon than the folk of the present day, believed that the fry of ova, deposited on the fords in November or December, went to the sea in the following spring and came back in June, July, and August, so will they. It is useless reasoning with these people, for as far as the experiment has gone, this is not the case, and we trust this experiment will be carried to a successful termination, so that it may put to rest for ever all disputed questions with regard to the rearing of this noble fish. At a meeting held here on Friday last, of the salmon proprietors of the Tay, it was agreed to tax themselves for the keeping up of the present experiment for another year. We believe the Earl of Mansfield was very anxious that another pond should be made at this time, which we are sorry to learn was not entertained. We lament this, as the present experiment cannot be said to have had fair play with such an insignificant pond for the many thousand fish it at present contains.

the fund subscribed for all soldiers' widows, and not merely for the widows of soldiers who married, or enrolled themselves in conformity with certain regimental regulations, and also that to punish the widow of the offender is unjust. The major has waxed wrath, has branded the Times, which has argued this case fairly and temperately, as the most "disreputable" paper in England, and has justified himself by the opinion of some more officers, equally reverent of pedantry. If he prove obstinate, however, injury will be done to the fund. The poor woman is the widow of the man who died for his country; and it is not for Major Powys, a mere trustee, to limit the application of funds lodged in his hands for a specific purpose.

Parliament has been again prorogued until the middle of December; so that all question, if ever there was one, of an early sitting, is at rest. Lord Palmerston has gone to Paris, either to arrange for a visit of the Emperor and Empress, or to discuss the conduct of the war, or both. The Duke of Argyll has been elected Rector of Glasgow University, triumphing over Mr. Disraeli. No other event connected with our politics or political men has marked the week.

Our obituary contains a name of almost European celebrity. Mr. Charles Kemble, the actor, expired on Sunday last. He was in his 80th year, and we saw him in excellent health about three weeks prior to his decease. With this conscientious artist and accomplished gentleman expires the last representative of the Kemble school, with its graceful but artificial traditions. Neither the actors nor the plays of the period when the Kembles were in their glory would now be attractive, the public taste requiring in both a vitality and a truthfulness to Nature which were not then deemed even desirable. But while thus characterising a deceased school, let it not be forgotten that its pupils strove to be artists; that they studied, and observed, and took small parts, and treated the art of acting with a respect shown by too few of the modern school. Charles Kemble began as a "stick," played small parts, and at length attained the power and finish which in his Mercutio and Mirabel were so extraordinary. It may be interesting to many readers to know that Mr. Kemble's last speech was at the Shakespeare dinner of the Garrick Club in April last, when he returned thanks for the actors, whose health had been proposed by Mr. Charles Dickens, the chairman upon the occasion.

We deeply regret to add that since the above was in type most mournful intelligence has reached us. We have now to deplore a serious calamity, in the fact that Sir George Cathcart, and Brigadier-Generals Strangways and Goldie, have fallen under the fire of the Russian enemy.

Home News.

THE COURT.

Her Majesty held a private council on Wednesday at Windsor Castle, at which it was determined that Parliament should be further prorogued to the 14th December.

The Hon. Charles Augustus Murray, C.B., Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the Shah of Persia, was presented to her Majesty, at an audience, by the Earl of Clarendon.

Dr. Logan (with the Maharajah Duleep Singh) was presented to the Queen, at an audience, and was knighted.

Sir Benjamin Hall, Bart., President of the General Board of Health, was, by command of the Queen, sworn of her Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council, and took his place at the board.

Among the visitors at the Castle during the week has been the Maharajah Duleep Singh.

FASHIONABLE WORLD.

The Duke and Duchess of Northumberland are entertaining a few select friends at Stanwick-park, near Richmond, Yorkshire.

The Duchess of Wellington, who has been passing some days with her sister, Lady Charlotte Watson Taylor, and family, at the Bedford Hotel at Brighton, has returned to town.

The Duke and Duchess of Norfolk are entertaining a select party at Arundel Castle. The circle includes Lord and Lady Foley and the Hon. Adelaide Foley, Mr. and Mrs. John Stanley, &c.

The Duchess Emily of Beaufort and the Ladies Somerset have arrived at the new family residence in the Stable-yard, from Badminton, for the winter. Lady Rose Lovell and her infant daughter are going on favourably at the noble duke's mansion in Berkeley-square.

The Marquis of Bath is entertaining a distinguished circle with the sports of the field at Longleat, Wilts. The Hon. Francis Villiers, M.P., has left town to join the party.

The Marquis of Northampton has left Castle Ashby to join the circle assembled at Ashridge, the seat of Lady Marianne Alford.

The Earl and Countess of Shaftesbury are passing the season at St. Giles's, Dorset. The Viscountess Jocelyn is staying with her noble relatives.

The Earl of Clarendon arrived in town, on Wednesday morning, from the Greve, near Watford, Herts.

Viscount and Viscountess Palmerston left town on Monday, for Paris, on a visit to their Imperial Majesties the Emperor and Empress of the French.

Viscount and Viscountess Falkland have arrived at the Clarendon Hotel, from Skutterskelfe, near Yarm, Yorkshire.

Viscount and Viscountess Ebrington have arrived in Grosvenor-square, from Castle Hill, Devon.

Lord and Lady William Compton, and Lord Spencer Compton, have left town on a visit to Lady Marianne Alford and family, at Ashridge, near Berkhamstead.

Mrs. Gladstone arrived at the residence of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, in Downing-street, on Monday, from Hawarden Castle.

Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Chandos Pole have arrived at the Clarendon Hotel, from Radborne Hall, Derbyshire.

We are sorry to observe among the list of deaths from cholera in front of Sebastopol that of Sir Geo. Young, Bart., Lieutenant Royal Artillery, and brother of the late Sir William Young, Bart., of the 23rd Fusiliers, who was killed at the battle of the Alma. Sir George succeeded to the title on the death of Sir William. He was only nineteen years of age. —Morning Post.

THE COUNT DE ST. AULAIRE.—We regret to announce the demise of the Count de Sainte Aulaire, at the age of 77. The melancholy event took place on Monday, at his hotel, in the Rue Saint-Dominique-Saint-Germain.

LORD PALMERSTON'S JOURNEY TO FRANCE.—DOVER, Thursday Evening.—Lord Palmerston arrived at Dover at 2 p.m. this day, and leaves for Calais by the South-Eastern Company's packet at eight to-morrow morning.

METROPOLIS.

PROROGATION OF PARLIAMENT.

[From the Supplement to the London Gazette, of Nov. 14.]

At the Court at Windsor, the 14th day of November, 1854; present, the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty in Council. It is this day ordered by her Majesty in Council that the parliament, which stands prorogued to Thursday, the 16th day of November inst., be further prorogued to Thursday, the 14th day of December next.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—Nov. 16.

Thursday being the day to which parliament stood prorogued, the house met at half-past three.

The Lords Commissioners present were the Right Hon. the Lord Chancellor, Lord Stanley of Alderley, and Lord Montagu. Their lordships having taken their seats in front of the throne, the Lord Chancellor rose and said, their lordships had been summoned by virtue of her Majesty's commission for the further prorogation of parliament, and directed Mr. Fulman, the Yeoman Usher of the Black Rod, to summon the members of the House of Commons to appear at the bar during the reading of the commission.

Mr. FULMAN having retired, proceeded to the house of Commons for that purpose, and shortly returned, accompanied by Sir Denis Le Marchant, chief clerk, and other officers of the house, as the representatives of her Majesty's most faithful Commons.

Mr. SHAW LEFEBVRE, deputy clerk of the house, then read the commission proroguing parliament from Thursday, the 16th of November, until Thursday, the 14th day of December next.

The LORD CHANCELLOR then, in the usual manner, in the name of her Majesty, declared parliament prorogued to that day accordingly.

Their lordships then rose.

THE MANCHESTER MEMORIAL TO WELLINGTON.—This memorial of the late Duke of Wellington consists of a colossal statue of his Grace, as he appeared in the House of Lords on the occasion of his pronouncing his celebrated peroration, "I am one of those who have passed probably a longer period of my life engaged in war than most men," &c. The statue surmounts a pedestal and plinth of red granite, around which are statues, seated, representing the mythological deities of War, Wisdom, Victory, and Peace. The height of the whole, from the base to the summit, is nearly forty feet. The Duke is in modern costume, the angular parts of which have by judicious management been got rid of, and the treatment is very broad, simple, and effective. The likeness is accurately preserved, and the attitude dignified and characteristic. The subordinate figures are in a pure taste, and expressive of power and majesty. The group is about to be cast in bronze, and the model will in a few days be sent to the foundry for that purpose. At present it is at the studio of the artist, Mr. Noble, in Bruton-street, Berkeley-square, where the admirers of the great warrior and the patrons of the higher order of art may for a short time avail themselves of the opportunity of seeing it.

A SCENE ON THE CORN EXCHANGE.—A correspondent states that on Monday morning great excitement was caused in the Corn Exchange by the news of the glorious victory near Sebastopol. A copy of the second edition of the Daily News, contained General Canrobert's official despatch, having with difficulty been procured, a gentleman mounted on an improviser platform, and read aloud the news, for the information of four or five hundred persons attending the market. At the close three cheers for the light cavalry were called for, followed by groans for the Greeks, a number of whom were in attendance on the market, and witnessed the scene.

HEALTH OF LONDON.—The Registrar-General reports that last week the total number of deaths registered in London was 1,160. In the ten corresponding weeks of the years 1844-53 the average number was 1,011, and if this is raised in proportion to increase of population, it becomes 1,112. From a comparison of the results, it appears that the mortality is now not much in excess of the usual amount, but it exceeds in a more important degree the point to which the usual mortality, in an improved condition of London might be reduced. Cholera, which was fatal last week in 23. In the same weeks diarrhoea numbered 46, 33, and 35 deaths. Nine of the deaths from cholera occurred on the north side of the river, the remaining 14 on the south side; three of which are returned in the sub-district of St. Paul's, Deptford, 4 in the district of Lambeth. Scarletina has for some weeks predominated among zymotic diseases. In the first week of October the deaths referred to it rose to upwards of 100; since that time it has fluctuated near the same point, but its tenacity has not been to decrease. Last week the births of 839 boys and 727 girls, in all 1,566 children, were registered in London. In the nine corresponding weeks of the years 1845-53 the average number was 1,451.

Our Opera-Glass.

ADELPHI.—On Thursday evening a new farce, from the experienced pen of Mark Lemon, Esq., entitled "A Slow Man," was presented at this theatre with complete success. Of this novelty a contemporary thus speaks:—"Mr. Massinger Watts (Mr. Keeley) believes himself to be a poet, is in love with Miss Lucinda Dix, and prides himself on being a slow man. Circumstances, however, prove that he is not only no poet, but that he is a fast man, and he nearly loses the object of his affection by the latter discovery. To come to particulars: Mr. Massinger Watts has thought it right to amuse himself with the lighter branch of his poetic inspirations, and turn troubadour, in honour of the anniversary of his charmer's birth, and is discovered under her window fast asleep on the garden roller, but wakes up as the clock strikes six. As he recollects that he took up his station there at midnight, he has no difficulty in accounting for the stiffness of his limbs, and the violent sneezing fit with which he is seized. He attempts to sing, but can only make a croaking that disturbs Doctor Dix, the father of his love, who advises him to go home and take the usual remedies; but before he can escape from the garden, some disorderly young men are heard to wrench off the Doctor's knocker. He is ashamed, as he says, to go in with the milk, but as he has taken a new lodging it does not matter. The outgoing tenant is Mr. Hector Rackett (Mr. Parselle), who is a very fast young man, and has scarcely removed his trunks, boxing-gloves, and single-sticks, before Mr. Massinger Watts takes possession, bringing with him no luggage but two bags full of light literature—amongst the rest, the MS. of his epic poem, which he is preparing for the press, and for which purpose he has taken a quiet apartment, as at home his mother kept a parrot. He begins to read his poem, but there comes a knock at the door, and Mr. Bricks presents his card, and wishes to know if he wants any vermin to worry, as he has a beautiful lot of rats, which would afford him much sport. He declines this, but pays two sovereigns for a pet dog, as a present to the fair Lucinda; which, when delivered, turns out to be a regular brindle bull-dog. Then the bell-hanger begins to work, and sends a long gimblet up right through the floor. Presently a tremendous noise is heard in the next room, the door is burst open, and the late tenant rushes in sparring with Ned Crosswell, the Brentford Pot, and followed by a number of noisy friends, who insist upon the slow man drinking their healths in humpers of champagne. He has no sooner got rid of them, and sits down once more to read his MS., when one of the late tenant's companions seeks refuge from the police, and deposits Doctor Dix's knocker on the table. Lastly come the Doctor and his daughter to resent the insult of having a bull-dog sent as a present, and discovers all the bottles, boxing-gloves, and chairs, upset about the room; but above all, the Doctor recognises his own knocker, upon which Lucinda gives up the unfortunate Watts; but he is saved by his new landlady declaring that he had just taken the lodgings, which is confirmed by the appearance of Mr. Hector Rackett, also a candidate for the hand of Miss Dix, but willingly resigns her to his successful rival. Mr. Keeley was excellent; the rest of the piece was carried on with a boisterous impetuosity which did not give the audience time to think or to cease laughing after the first scene to the fall of the curtain. Miss Wyndham played Miss Lucinda Dix, and having nothing to do but look pretty, all the requisites of the part were performed to admiration. Mr. Parselle and Mr. R. Romer exerted themselves effectively, as did all concerned. The piece was given out by Mr. Keeley for repetition with some slight expressions of discount, which only served to increase the applause."

THE PATRIOTIC FUND.—On Monday last, the Messrs. Tussaud most kindly appropriated the whole of the receipts—both morning and evening exhibitions, to this truly philanthropic undertaking.

TURKISH MUSEUM.—The reduction of the charge of admission to this exhibition at Hydo-park Corner, from half a crown to one shilling (except on Saturdays), has had the effect of very considerably increasing the number of visitors. One cannot but fear that, in this muddy weather, the fine carpets of our oriental friends will not pass unsoiled, since the English have not yet learnt to leave their slippers at the door, à la Turque and mount staircases in the clean mest papouty of Stamboul. With a proper respect for the carpets at this exhibition, all visitors are therefore invited not to neglect the doormat, a necessary hint, since the place is altogether too neat for very many of our rough and ready sight-seers, who would dash into it as they would to the arena of the cattle show in Baker-street. But the Turkish Museum assumes to be a sort of drawing-room entertainment, and the élite of London are certainly its best patrons. It deserves a long visit from every one.

DEATH OF MR. CHARLES KEMBLE.—It is with deep regret we announce the death of this once distinguished actor, which took place on Sunday last. Mr. Charles Kemble was born at Brecknock, in South Wales, in 1775; consequently he had attained his 79th year when he died. Few actors of the old school are so well remembered by the present race of playgoers as this gentleman, whose personations of the higher class of comedy were brought down to a comparatively late date, and are still spoken of with admiration as histrionic portraiture of unique merit. The youngest of the great branch of the Kemble family, he shared with his illustrious brother John, and his stately sister, the honours which attach so pre-eminently to the name. Many of the parts which he filled may be said to have virtually left the stage when age and infirmity occasioned his retirement into private life; and we shall probably never see the Mirabels, Dorcourts, Absolutes, and Charles Surfaces, of the drama again realised with such exquisite tact and refinement. Mr. Charles Kemble's professional history was marked by the usual vicissitudes which belong to the actor's career. We are told that he originally began the world as a clerk in the Post Office, after having completed his education at Douay, in 1792; but that a taste for theatricals influencing him, as it did other members of the family, he made his début at Sheffield, as Orlando, in "As You Like It." His early efforts, however, were anything but successful, and he was described by a critic of the day as "a tall awkward youth, with a hatchet face, a figure badly proportioned, and of weak limbs, his acting being evidently worse than his appearance." About the year 1800, however, he began to challenge a different sort of estimate; and joining, in 1803, his brother John in the proprietary and management of Covent-garden Theatre, he gradually rose to that eminence as a delineator of polite comedy which no other actor ever rivalled. Certain of his tragic personations were also of unquestionable excellence; and his Falconbridge, Pierre, Romeo, and others, are yet fondly and honourably mentioned. He was induced to reappear on the stage in the year 1840, and play a brief round of characters; but the venerable actor was all but unequal to the task, and though some of the old genius was still visible, the trembling voice and stooping figure betokened the extent of the physical decay, and the exhibition did not long continue. For some years past Mr. Charles Kemble had been the victim of an incurable deafness; this, however, did not prevent his taking an interest in the art of which he was once so conspicuous an ornament. To him Miss Glyn, one of the few actresses of high and thoughtful cultivation that we now have, owes all her elocutionary power, as regards form and method, and we have in her a vivid reflection of the genuine Kemble school. Mr. Charles Kemble married, in 1806, Miss Theresa Decamp. His children, Mrs. Butler, Mrs. Sartoris, and the Rev. John Kemble, the eminent Saxon scholar, we need hardly remark, have nobly maintained the intellectual glory of the house.

THEATRICAL ENGAGEMENTS IN FRANCE.—It has frequently been decided by the French courts that a married woman cannot contract a theatrical engagement without the express or tacit authorisation of her husband. On Saturday the question was raised before the President of the Civil Tribunal, sitting in chambers, whether or not a married woman can become a dramatic author without such consent:—Madame Roger de Beauvoir, formerly Mlle. Doza, of the Theatre Français, is separated from her husband. Some time ago she wrote a piece in one act, called "Eulce Deux Aïes," which was accepted by the Théâtre des Variétés. Recently it was put in rehearsal. Thereupon M. Roger de Beauvoir gave a formal notice that he would not allow the rehearsals to continue. Mlle. Roger de Beauvoir accordingly on Saturday applied to a judge in chambers for authorisation to continue the rehearsals in spite of her husband's opposition. M. Roger de Beauvoir, on the contrary, demanded that they should be positively forbidden until a full court should decide whether or not he had the power to prevent his wife from becoming a dramatic author. The president decided that, as rehearsals are not the same thing as a performance, they may be continued, until the opinion of the court can be obtained on the main question.

—Galignani.

PROVINCIAL.

FOOTBALL AT WINCHESTER COLLEGE.—On Saturday week the annual game of twenty-two of the commoners versus twenty-two of the collegians, took place in the College Meads. Some very excellent play was shown on both sides, and although the odds were in favour of the collegians, the commoners, by their great perseverance, obtained a tie, being, when the hour was called, five goals on both sides. The sides were as follows:—College: Phillpotts (captain), Edwards, Williams, Wickham, sen., Sewell, Hook, Majedie, Paggot, Bouchier, Abbridge, Eaton, Corrie, Margo, George, Towne, Wickham, jun., Phillpotts, jun., Deane, Williams, jun., Lambert, Harris, sen., Lipscomb. Commoners: Hiebus (captain), Theobald, Webster, Noworthy, Stratfield, Hayward, Gundry, Wary, Heuty, Russell, Holmes, Harrison, sen., Bonny, Pauli, Priestley, Robertson, Park, Williams, Barrow, jun., Dawn, Helliher, Merriman, sen.

SCOTLAND.

GLASGOW UNIVERSITY.—The election of Lord Rector of Glasgow University took place on Wednesday, the retiring Rector being the Earl of Eglinton. Three candidates were proposed—viz., Mr. Disraeli, M.P., by the Conservatives, Mr. Thomas Carlyle by the Liberals, and the Duke of Argyll by the Presbyterian section of both parties. The contest was conducted with the usual keenness, the turmoil being confined to the boys and lads in the college. Mr. Carlyle was withdrawn at a late hour, when the students went to the vote on the two other candidates, and the result was, that the Duke of Argyll was elected by a majority in all the nations. The state of the vote was as follows:—

	Argyll.	Disraeli.
Natio Glottiana	132	62
— Londoniana	29	23
— Transatlantica	47	19
Rottlesiana	61	43
	269	147

A protest was taken against the validity of the Duke's election, on the ground that his Grace is Chancellor of the University of St. Andrews, and that it is therefore illegal to hold office in two colleges. The office of Lord Rector is almost a nominal one. Upon installation he delivers an address, and no more is heard of him. Under present circumstances, it may be found that a member of the Cabinet has something else to occupy his time than that of preparing an essay for the Glasgow students.

Foreign Intelligence.

FRANCE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Paris, Thursday, Nov. 16.

The War—Perpetrations to continue it on a gigantic scale—Movements of Troops—Literary and Critical Squabbles—J. J. and Alexander Dumas—His rupture with his Editors—Invitation to the Public—Management of the Grand Opera—Gambling and Suicide—Remarkable Criminal Trials.

THE emplois of the War-office and the commissariat have been, for the last week or two, more laboriously occupied than for many years past, in correspondence and arrangements for sending out another army to the assistance of the troops in the East. Telegraphic wires communicate from these offices with the Palace at St. Cloud, where the Emperor is understood to be occupied with Marshal Vaillant, the Minister of War, and other military authorities, for several hours every day. In the mean time the deepest silence is imposed by superior orders upon the personnel of all the bureaux connected with the administration, so that no details of what is intended finds its way to the public, except by the actual movement of troops, which no system of concealment can hide. Some of the regiments in the vicinity of Paris are already en route towards the coast, and artillery regiments are ordered to be ready to move at twelve hours' notice. It is surmised that Lord Palmerston's visit to the Emperor is immediately connected with the plans of the Allies for the energetic prosecution of the war, which it is now the opinion of all military men can only be brought to a conclusion by the employment of a most colossal force.

"Critical" and theatrical squabbles supply much of the chit-chat of the week in Paris. Madame Georges Sand, whose reputation, literary and social, is known to all the world, has just written a drama called Flaminio, composed upon two or three of her novels—well written, as every thing she does, but worth nothing as a drama. This has been generally attacked by the critics of the press; not, it is alleged by the lady's friends, in consequence of its proper demerits, but because Madame Sand, who is, like all the world here, publishing her "Memoirs," has, in that work, dealt rather sharply with that class of scribblers. Among the rest, the well-known J. J. of the Debats has severely criticised the play; upon which, Alexander Dumas indites a slashing epistle to J. J. (Jules Janin), accusing him of private malice against Madame Sand, and, at the same time, challenging him to do his worst against his (Dumas's) multitudinous works—consisting—he lets the reader know (for the character always breaks out)—of 900 volumes of novels, and 50 plays. It is fair to add, that this formidable mass contains a few clever things, but, for the most part, the veriest trash ever consigned by the public to precipitate oblivion. In general, I must add, the critical department of the once so distinguished Parisian press is in the most miserable state,

J. J. being one of the last remnants of its former galaxy of brilliant writers.

Dumas is also the hero of another "row." As the proprietor of a journal called Le Mousquetaire, he last week had a dispute with the principal writers, and conducted himself so cavalierly, that these gentlemen, who, it seems, have been writing for many months for "glorie," and very little pay, insisted on some explanation. An interview accordingly took place, the result of which was communicated to the public in the following style:—

"Dear Reader,—I have sent all the recherches of the Mousquetaire to the right about—turned the whole gang out of doors. You may now come and subscribe without fear of being booted to death with ennui. I shall write the whole journal myself.—Your obliged friend,

"ALEXANDRE DUMAS."

This week has witnessed another revolution in spite of the 2nd of December, which was to have put an end to them in Paris for aye. The present one is, however, confined to the grand opera; the late dictator, M. Nestor Roqueplan, after having been despoiled of all authority, and left with barely the shadow of the title of director, found the thing would not do, and resigned his barren sceptre. The immediate reason for this step is not yet known, but that there exists some imperative cause there is little doubt; for our Nestor, would be indeed unworthy of his Homeric cognomen, were he to give up 25,000 francs a year and a residence like a palace, to say nothing of the other agencens, without some solid reason. However he gave it up, and it was transferred instanter to M. Crosnier, formerly director of the Porte St. Martin, and subsequently of the Opera Comique, and at present member of the Senate. The malicious say the senator owes this piece of Government favour to his having brought out a piece at the Porte St. Martin in 1831, on the subject of Napoleon. This could scarcely be the cause, for the affair at the Porte St. Martin—which, by the way, was also given at Covent Garden—was a pale imitation of a drama by Alexander Dumas, previously represented at some other theatre. The reason will probably be found in the fact that M. Crosnier has the character of an able administrator, and that the Minister, having got into a scrape by meddling with affairs of which he is profoundly ignorant—an ignorance which has not escaped the spiteful perspicacity of the green-room—has been glad to obtain the aid of a man who possesses experience in theatrical affairs, and is popular with the profession and also with the press, to put an end to the confusion and discord which official arrogance had created. Roqueplan was too well-known a courtier to be of any assistance in the affair; and has we have seen, he obligingly resigned; the quid pro quo we shall see registered in the Moniteur, some of these days, without a doubt. You will have seen that La Cruvelli has returned. An emissary was despatched to the fair fugitive in Germany, and his explanations and persuasions not only induced her to return, but led her to consent to the insertion of a paragraph in the journal, half excusing her sudden flight. Stories abound, in which the name of an eminent functionary is mixed up with the lady's abrupt departure, are scandalous inventions, being simply the resuscitation of an indecent anecdote told of a well-known actress in the days of Louis XVIII.

You will have seen a startling trial which took place this week in Paris, of a young man for the murder of poor Wahl, the Swiss watchmaker, mentioned some little time ago—one of the most cold-blooded crimes on record. What occasioned the most surprise at his trial, however, was the acquaintance of the murderer—a fair-haired slender lad, with light eyes, and a face of prepossessing innocence. Though upwards of twenty, no one would have given him above sixteen years of age, and altogether—the appearance of the culprit, with the sans-froid of his manner in giving details relative to the perpetration of the deed—presented a moral contrast, the most frightful that can be imagined. The conduct and remarks of the judge in this case—and indeed in most trials here—were very like those of a garrulous angry old woman, and presented a singular contrast to the dignity and temper of the English bench.

The papers have been more prolific in crime this week than usual, the guilty parties being in most cases—and this is worth note in England just now—convicts who had served their time at the hulks, and were again let loose on the public. In one case, a robber broke into a farmer's house in the Dordogne while the family were at church, but was disturbed in his operations by the accidental arrival of one of the sons. He despatched the unfortunate youth with a latchet, and carried off all the money and valuables he could find. He was discovered, and it appeared he was married to a daughter of the farmer's. In his defence he pleaded that a son-in-law could not be tried for robbing his wife's father, it being, at worst, only a misappropriation of property; and as for the death of the young man, that, he declared, was no murder at all, as he had been attacked, and killed the deceased in self-defence. This strange view of the law satisfied the jury, who brought in a verdict of meurtre, similar to our "manslaughter," and acquitted him of robbery! So much for trial by jury in the Department of Dordogne.

Gambling is at present carried on in Paris to an extent positively frightful. In almost every saloon a card table is to be found, and languent, rouge-et-noire, and vingt-un, are all the vogue. The other evening, at the house of an English gentleman in the Rue de Rivoli, a young Frenchman, M. de X—, of —, lost £4000 to Sir W. H—, a young man of fortune. This weighed so deeply on his mind, that the next day he committed suicide at the well-known restaurant of the Maison Dorée. After eating with great apparent enjoyment a cosy little dinner, as he sat reclining in his arm chair, sipping his claret, a loudish report was suddenly heard. A gentleman sitting at a neighbouring table inquired whether an explosion of the gas had taken place. The young man replied, "No; I have shot myself—voilà tout!" and a pistol fell from his hand. The bullet had broken the spine, and he almost instantly expired. This unfortunate youth belonged to a highly respectable family, and a most touching letter was found on the body, bidding his mother adieu. This event has created great consternation in the English circle in Paris, and gambling is, for a time, at least, among the things talked of at the at houses of Mr. R— G—, where the luckless game took place which led to this sad catastrophe.

Law Intelligence.

COURT OF QUEEN'S BENCH.—NOV. 14.

(Sittings in Banco.—Before Lord Campbell and Justices Coleridge, Wightman and Erie.)

ALCENUS V. NYGRIN.—RIGHT OF ACTION BY AN ALIEN.—This was an action brought by John Gabriel Alcenus against Carl Gustave Nygrin, for money payable, work done, and on account stated for £52. 10s. The defendant pleaded that the plaintiff was an alien—that is to say, born in the empire of Russia, and was now an enemy of our Sovereign Lady the Queen, and was residing in this kingdom without the license, safe conduct, or permission of our Lady the Queen. To this plea there was a demurrer. The arguments having been heard on both sides.—Lord Campbell said that the action must abate and judgment must pass for the defendant. Although the plaintiff was entitled before the declaration of war to all the privileges enjoyed by British subjects, yet he could not maintain his action flagrante bello.—Judgment for the defendant.

GROSS INJUSTICE BY A FRIENDLY SOCIETY.—THE QUEEN V. JARDINE, ESQ.—Mr. Crompton Hutton moved last week for a rule to show cause why a mandamus should not issue to the defendant, one of the police magistrates of the Metropolis, to command him to hear a dispute relative to a claim on the funds of the United Kingdom Friendly Benefit Society, held at Castle-street, Long-acre, made by the widow of Charles Long, who had been one of its members. The following were the facts stated by the learned counsel. The society was established in May, 1839, Long became a member on the 22nd of February, 1841, and continued so until the early part of 1851, when the society some little time before Long's death, without any fine, summons, or notice of any kind whatever, and without giving him any opportunity of explaining or denying the charge made against him, sent him a letter to say that he had ceased to be a member of the society on account of a violation of one of its rules. Long was too ill to attend to the notice, and he shortly afterwards died. After his death his widow applied to the society, but could get no relief, and a gentleman, named Milne, an attorney, wrote on her behalf to the secretary, expressly stating, that he did not write as an attorney, but solely as a friend of the poor woman, whose case he had heard, and who, he believed, really had an honest claim against the society. The case was afterwards referred to arbitration, under the rules of the society, and the applicant contended that the award, which was unfavourable to her, could not be supported, first, because the resolution of expulsion against Long had been passed without his having received any notice, as required by the 32nd rule of the society, which provides, "that should any member be charged with a breach of these articles, for which the penalty is exclusion, and he be not present, he shall be summoned to attend to hear and answer such charges, and any accused member neglecting or refusing to attend for two meeting nights, after being summoned, (without assigning a satisfactory cause for his absence to the committee) he adjudged guilty and dealt with accordingly." And, secondly, because the rule under which Long was expelled, and which forbade a member while on the sick list from doing any work for profit or reward, had not been infringed, inasmuch as the only work charged as having been done by Long against the rules of the society, was that of wheeling for about a quarter of a mile a wicker barrow, containing some clean linen, which his wife, a laundress, had just washed, this being evidently not work for profit or reward. The learned counsel went very fully into the case, to show that the award was utterly void, and that this case ought to be heard before the magistrate. The court expressed, but with regret, an opinion that the rule must be refused. This certainly was a hard case, but that did not alter the rule of law. The application, in fact, amounted to an application that the magistrate might review the award, which could not be done. Whatever might be thought of the decision against this poor woman, it was final. The present application must be refused. This decision is of great importance to members of Friendly Societies, the effect of it being, that however unjust or absurd the award of the arbitrators may be, and even although such award may be also (as in the above case) in direct violation of the rules of the society, no remedy is afforded to the unfortunate member, except when it can be proved that the award was corruptly and fraudulently made, or, in other words, that the arbitrators decided in favour of the society, knowing and believing that their decision ought to be in favour of the member. To obtain such proof is, of course, impossible, where the arbitrators act with ordinary prudence, and go through the common legal form, retiring to consider their award, or appearing to do so, and the consequence is, that any member may be victimised with impunity by means of weak or unjust arbitrators, acting under the influence of a few of the leading men in the society, whose hostility or personal prejudices may, however unworthy, have been excited against him, and lead them to endeavour to exclude him from the society. The intention of the Legislature in allowing no appeal from the decision of the arbitrators, was the very laudable one of preventing litigation between the society and its members, as well for the protection of the individual members as of the society, and supposing impartial and independent men, possessed of an ordinary amount of common sense, to be appointed arbitrators, no objection could exist to this mode of proceeding, but a full consideration of the way in which these societies are formed, and the arbitrators appointed, will show, that so far from being independent, they are almost certain to entertain a bias in favour of the society and to the prejudice of any individual member disputing its authority. It is a well-known fact, that these societies are formed in the first instance by a few active men, who canvass for and obtain a certain amount of members, and start the society; these few men form the managing committee, appoint the arbitrators, and, in fact, are the governing body of the society, and, practically, the other members leave it to these men to make the necessary rules and appointments for the government of the society, and either never interfere at all, or if they do interfere, are immediately outvoted by those members who form the tail of the committee. Now, as the committee appoint the arbitrators it is not likely that they should appoint persons unknown to themselves, or that such persons, having no interest in the society, would, unless acquainted with some of the committee, accept such an office. Hence it happens that the arbitrators, or the greater part of them, are in general personal friends or acquaintances of some or one of the managing committee, and that in the event of a dispute occurring between a member and the society, or rather the committee of the society, a strong probability must always exist of the matter being talked over, and the arbitrators prejudiced against the member, or possibly even of their forming a decision adverse to him before the arbitration takes place. We have been led to make these remarks, as it appears to us that at present members of a friendly society have not that protection against injustice committed on the part of the managing committee which they ought to have, and we think it deserving of the consideration of Mr. Tidd Pratt, and of the gentlemen by whom these Acts of Parliament are framed, whether, under ordinary circumstances, it is possible that individual members will obtain justice at the hands of arbitrators appointed in the manner which now prevails, and whether it may not for the future be desirable that all disputes arising between friendly societies and their members should, in the first instance, be referred to magistrates, who are perfectly independent of both parties, and whose decision would therefore be free from any suspicion of an undue leaning towards either.

Police Intelligence.

BOW-STREET.

BETTING-HOUSE CASE.—The proceedings arising out of the late apprehension of 114 persons, by Superintendent Pearce, at the Rising Sun public-house, Long-acre, were resumed before Mr. Jardine, the principal defendants being represented by Mr. Huddleston and Mr. Parry.—The number of defendants had been reduced to about seventy by the discharge of those who were not found in the rooms devoted to betting purposes. The others were all set at liberty upon their own personal recognizances, with the exception of Ryan, the waiter, who was required to find bail.—Mr. Jardine inquired of the Superintendent if any of the defendants actually engaged in betting could be pointed out by the police.—Superintendent Pearce was under the impression that all persons present, whether so engaged or not, were liable.—Mr. Jardine presumed that a distinction must be drawn between the persons taking part in the betting and mere spectators—such a distinction as was generally observed in proceedings against unlicensed theatres, &c. The managers on such occasions were the persons chiefly responsible.—The Superintendent had no doubt that his worship's construction of the act was correct, but it differed from the view he had been led to take of the matter.—Mr. Huddleston said, it never was intended by the Legislature that mere betting in a room should come within the provisions of the Act for the Suppression of Betting-shops, for in that case the establishment of Mr. Tattersall's and many of the London clubs would be equally liable. The language of its promoters and the preamble of the bill itself clearly proved that the measure was designed to suppress those offices in which the owner was in the habit of keeping a sort of bank, advancing or receiving money upon racing events or similar contingencies to and from persons who assemble there for the purpose of betting. The defendants in this case assembled together, taking refreshments and betting among themselves. Neither Mr. Morbey, the landlord, nor any other person connected with his house, took any part in the betting, either by holding stakes or otherwise, and therefore the defendants were in exactly the same position as the aristocratic frequenters of Tattersall's.—Superintendent Pearce said, there was evidence of money being paid and received by several of the defendants.—Mr. Huddleston: But those defendants were not in the position of owners or managers.—Mr. Parry: They might have been settling past debts. A man might say to another, "I owe you a sovereign, and here's the money."—Mr. Huddleston would go still further. He was prepared to contend that the betting was perfectly legitimate, so long as the owner or manager of the house took no part in the betting. Now, it is so happened that Mr. Morbey was not at home at the time when his house was cleared, although he had attended now to answer any charge that the police might wish to bring against him.—after some further observations from both the learned counsel to the same purport, Mr. Jardine said, the police were fully justified in what they had done by the 12th section of the act, which authorised them to take into custody every person found in Mr. Morbey's house at the time. But the question arose, what was to be done with the defendants after they were taken? This involved two considerations—firstly, in regard to those who were found there betting; and, secondly, with respect to the managers who were assisting. Under the Police Act all the persons engaged in betting might have been fined £5 each, but there was no reference to the Police Act in the new bill for the suppression of betting-houses. It being clear in his mind, therefore, that the defendants were not proved to have committed any offence legally, upon the evidence before him, he should direct them to be discharged.—The announcement was received with some applause.—Mr. Parry complained that many of his clients had been exposed to considerable hardship by these vexatious proceedings, for doing no more than was being done hourly, on a much more extravagant scale, by the first gentry of the land.—Mr. Huddleston wished to know if there was any charge against Mr. Morbey?—Superintendent Pearce said, there was nothing pending against the landlord at present.—Mr. Huddleston thought it right to say that Mr. Morbey had not infringed the act in any possible way. He supplied the company using his house with refreshments, and as many of his patrons were "sporting characters," it was natural enough that they should amuse themselves by betting on the racing events of the day. He had never participated in the betting,—he neither made nor received deposits.—Mr. Jardine: There is no charge against Mr. Morbey. I don't know if his counsel is not making out a case against him. (A laugh.) With regard to the waiter, Robert Ryan, his case was somewhat different. He was prepared to hear it argued.—The evidence of the police given at the first examination, showing that Ryan was acting as room-keeper, manager, &c., having been read over, Mr. Huddleston repeated his argument to the effect that neither the owner nor his servants could be liable to the penalties of the act unless found actually betting with the company.—Mr. Jardine could not adopt the learned counsel's limited interpretation of the 3rd clause, which made any one "assisting" in conducting the business of a house "to which persons resorted" for betting upon races, liable to the penalties. The defendant Ryan must be regarded as "assisting" in conducting the business of the house at the time in question, and therefore he should order him to pay a fine of £50, or to be committed to prison for three months.—Mr. Huddleston gave notice of appeal against his worship's decision, and consequently the defendant was admitted to bail.—Thomas Prestcott, who had been remanded upon a charge preferred by Mr. Osmond, keeper of a coffee-shop in the Strand, was brought up and discharged, his worship considering that the case was not supported by evidence.

MARLBOROUGH-STREET.

STABBING.—James Hayward, shoemaker, of 17, George-street, Sloane-square, was brought before Mr. Bingham for final examination, charged with attempting to stab a lady in Hyde Park, and with having stabbed Henry Rowan, a park constable, who took him into custody.—Henry Rowan, No. 10 park constable, said, about three o'clock in the afternoon of the 7th inst., as a gentleman and lady were riding in Rotten-row, he saw the prisoner, who was on the footpath, with an open knife in his hand, make a stab at the lady just below the knee. The lady called out to him, "That man has a knife!" Witness ran forward to take the prisoner into custody, but the prisoner resisted capture and struck him on the chest with the knife, which penetrated to the bone. The prisoner then cut him on the right cheek and on his arms. He endeavoured to close with the prisoner, upon which the prisoner said, "if he did not desist he would run the knife through his body." Witness, however, contrived to close with the prisoner, and after a short struggle, succeeded in taking from him a shoemaker's sharp-pointed knife. With the assistance of a constable the prisoner was secured and lodged in the station-house. Witness had his wounds dressed, which fortunately, owing to the thickness of his clothes, were not serious. One of the stabs on the chest, had it gone a little deeper, would have proved fatal.—Police-constable Skinner, A 557, was called to assist in taking the prisoner to the station. After much resistance this was accomplished, and on searching him several letters were found. The first was directed to his Excellency the American Ambassador.—

Don. Sir.—In respect to a contention that certain personages connected with the French and English Governments are conspiring by false signatures to extract capital from me which is in the American funds, I wish them to regard all such as forgeries, and I shall most respectfully consider the American Government responsible to me alone.—I read your Excellency's humble servant, JAMES HAYWARD.—1, George-street, Chelsea.

The other letter was to the English Ambassador in France.—"Tell them to mind no more bribes. Here it will not do, as all France is up. They say they will do better if put up a little longer, as English cakes are best done brown, they then crumble so pleasant. State what fools we have been to ourselves. We could have pocketed thousands in the time the case has been on. I would recommend you in future to wear green spectacles, because I like every one to see their own graves are they fall into them. We will try what a compromise will do at the last, as your last will no doubt form a perfect model."—JAMES HAYWARD.

The constable added, that other letters in a similar strain were directed to Lord John Russell and Lord Palmerston.—The prisoner was remanded, in order that the state of his mind should be ascertained. As there could be no doubt from the letters and the incoherent language of the prisoner that he was not in his right senses, Mr. Bingham directed the relieving officer of St. Luke's to be sent for.—Mr. Smith, the relieving officer, having made his appearance, was informed by the magistrate that the prisoner was a dangerous lunatic, he having been in confinement several times—twice for stabbing his brother, and once for stabbing his father, and that therefore he ought to be given into the charge of the authorities of the parish in which he resided, in order that a regular medical report of the state of his mind might be procured, so that he would, in future, be kept in safe custody.—The defence of the prisoner was that he had been kept in rags by the aristocracy, and as he believed the lady to belong to the nobility, he thought he had a right to bring her also to rags.—Mr. Smith undertook that the parish should do everything that was needed in this case, and the prisoner was consigned to the care of the parish.—The gentleman who was with the lady when the attack took place, having been in the interim ordered by Government to Constantinople, could not attend to give evidence.

LAMBETH.

Tuesday having been appointed by Mr. Elliott as the day on which he intended to deliver judgment in the case under the Act for the Suppression of Betting-houses, the defendants, Mr. Henry Naphole Simmonds, of 2, High-street, Newington, Mr. Richard Jenkins, of 17, Princes-street, Soho, Mr. Edward White, of 6, Halford-terrace, Newington, were in attendance, and the court was much crowded by betting men and others who seemed to take an interest in the result. Mr. Lind, the Superintendent of the P Division of police, was present to watch the case on the part of the crown, and Mr. Clarkson, instructed by Mr. Solomon, attended on the part of the defendants. When the case was called on Mr. Clarkson rose, and addressing the magistrate said:—I have been requested to appear before you, Sir, on the subject-matter of an information or warrant obtained by officer Quin-near, and another against Mr. Henry Naphole Simmonds and others. With reference to the other persons I do not know whether you will call on me to make any statements at all. It appears to me, as far as they are concerned, there is no evidence against them, but that I will leave entirely with you.—Mr. Elliott: Against them there is no evidence.—Mr. Clarkson then, at considerable length, proceeded to argue the case on the part of Simmonds, who, he contended, was not liable under the statute.—Mr. Elliott: It appears to me that there is sufficient evidence on which to come to the conclusion that this party is brought within the provisions of the act. It seems to me quite clear, that this is a house that has been used for a purpose within the meaning of the act. First of all, there is very little doubt, I think, that this house was used for a purpose of resorting thither and betting on the events of horse races. There can be no doubt the place was used for this purpose, not only from the circumstance of books having been found, and the manner in which it was fitted up, but also from the evidence which has been produced before me. The question is, whether this person, Simmonds, is responsible under the act? It is contended that the business carried on is not his, but his sister's. It may be or not, but the question is, whether he is not the person who is managing? The words of the act are very extensive and embrace even persons "using the same." The question is, whether the defendant does not use this house for the purpose of attending there and receiving bets on horse-racing, and upon the evidence, it appears to me the case is quite clear, for we have not only the evidence of Scott, who states that he went in there and made a bet, but books are found in which notice of that bet is made, as well as columns of similar bets in the same handwriting. Therefore it clearly appears to me that the house is used by him, whether as owner or occupier. He is the person carrying on business, and using it, not for carrying on the trade of a tobacconist, but of carrying on, managing, and using this house for the purpose of betting. It appears to me quite clear the party is brought within the provisions of the act, and therefore it is necessary for me to impose such a penalty as the case requires. This act was passed with the view of preventing a peculiar system of betting which has been found most detrimental to the morals of her Majesty's subjects, and, therefore, I feel warranted from all the circumstances of the case to inflict a penalty on the defendant of £20, or, in default, to be imprisoned for one month. With regard to the other three defendants, they are discharged.—Mr. Solomon, on the part of his client, gave notice of appeal, and the necessary bail having been put in the defendant was discharged.

DISSENSIONS AMONGST DISSENTERS.—The case of "Tidman v. Ainslie" is at length settled. Mr. Ainslie has apologised for the intemperate language he used in defence of Davies.

Annual.

It is the intention of the Lords of the Admiralty to enter 400 men forthwith among the different branches of artisans employed in the Devonport dockyard.

THE BALTIC FLEET.—KIEL, HOLSTEIN, Nov. 11.—By a private letter received yesterday from St. Petersburg, we are informed that the winter has set in with its usual severity. The barometer had fallen within a few degrees of zero, from which it might be inferred that the Neva will speedily be covered with ice, and the Russian fleet frozen in both at Cronstadt and Helsingfors. Even at this port, several degrees to the southward of the Gulf of Finland, hard frosts have occurred during the last two nights. Snow fell for several hours yesterday. The temperature at 4 a.m. was 28 deg. of Fahrenheit. The wind shifted to N.N.W. in the afternoon; a clear sky supervened, and another severe frost set in.

A LETTER FROM A JACK TAR.—"Off Sebastopol, Oct. 23, 1854.—My Dear Brother,—If you want to bear the roar of cannon come to this place, and you will have enough of it. We have had eleven days, and it may be as many more before we get possession of Sebastopol. We had the pleasure of throwing some of Lancaster's shells at them the day after we arrived on the station. The Arrow went in company with the Samson, and in sight of the fleet, to try the effect of our long range; the enemy was not idle, for as we ran down the coast we came all at once on a battery, and they sent their shot and shell around us thick, and to mend the matter the engine would not work for some time, so there we lay a target for them—at length away we went and 'astounded the Browns.' Two days after we paid them another visit—my eye, what a dust there was in the forts. The naval brigade on shore works well, and so do the red jackets. I wish I was with them. Our fleet engaged the first day, and to tell you the truth they got roughly used—but, 'never say die, while there's a shot in the locker.' Everybody is in good spirits, and expects to beat the enemy. P.S. No Sundays in this place—all work on fighting. I am glad to say we have had none hurt as yet—that is to say on board our craft."

WOON B. GRANITE.—"After leaving Kaushik bay we passed close by the forts of Sebastopol. We were quite within range (though the enemy never attempted to fire), and therefore with our glasses we could see every chink and cranny in the fortresses, which we had ample time to survey. Every fort towards the sea, those of Alexander and Paul on the south side, and Nicholas and Constantine on the north, were perfectly covered from the base to the summit with shot marks. In this there was no difference between those attacked by the English or French, except that Fort Constantine to the north had two of the casemated ports knocked into one. It was at a spot where the Agamemnon had been moored, and where her whole broadside had been concentrated with something like effect. As far as we could judge, it seemed that the amount of damage done to the batteries is literally and truly nothing. Where several shots have struck in the same place, the granite is splintered and broken away to the depth of about a foot, or even less. Where only one or two balls have struck, there are mere whitish marks, as if the spot had been dashed with flour. To restore these forts to their original look would of course be expensive, because unnecessary. As forts they are as strong as if a shot had never been fired against them. A very small amount of money would repair the actual damage done to the cornices of the lower embrasures. The spots on the walls below the embrasures are not worth notice, for a few inches of stone make little difference where the walls are fourteen, and in some parts eighteen-foot thick. Unless I had seen it with my own eyes, I could never believe that such a tremendous fire could have been directed incessantly for six hours against stone walls with such trifling results."

H.M.S. TIGER.—"Berlin, Nov. 12.—Messrs. Fred. Hammond, Arthur Lowdon, and Percy Nind, midshipmen, and Henry Robinson cadet, with William Bead, private R.M. of the late Tiger, have arrived from St. Petersburg, on their way to England, whither they will proceed to-morrow or next day."

THE PACIFIC.—According to the latest accounts received, the following was the position of the different vessels composing the French and English squadron in the Pacific:—July 31, a fleet of eight English and French vessels of war, one of them a steamer, was spoken in lat. 30.30 north, long. 150.51 west. The English sloop of war Amphitrite and the French corvette Artemise sailed from Monterey on the 15th of September. The French frigate Alcide, 80 guns, and the English sloop Cockatrice were in Callao Roads on the 10th. The English steamer Dido and the French corvette Aventuro were at Valparaiso on the 30th of September. The steamer Trineon and the Battlesnake were at San Francisco at the date of last advice (September 16). No intelligence has yet been received of the whereabouts of the Russian vessels Diana and Aurora since their departure from the Sandwich Islands in July last.

CHINA.—Shanghai withstands all attempts by the Imperialists to retake it. Admiral Sterling, with the Winchester (50), Encounter screw steamer (14), and the paddle steamers Styx (6) and Barrington (6), left Shanghai on the 25th ult. for Japan, en route, it is supposed, for the Bay of Okhotsk, where, on the Island of Kodak at its entrance, there is a large Russian town, defended by two citadels mounting more than a hundred cannon, and where no doubt will be found a portion of the Russian squadron lately in these seas.

STEAMERS.

LIVERPOOL.—Not only has the royal mail steamship Europa been taken by the Government but the iron screw steamship Alps, Captain Moonie, which sailed for Havre on Sunday, to be the pioneer of a Canard line from that port to New York, has also been chartered, and will proceed from Havre to Toulon to embark French troops.

INCREASED STEAMBOAT ACCOMMODATION BETWEEN BELFAST AND DUBLIN.—We learn that the enterprising firm of Messrs. Charley and Malcoln have, in order to meet the requirements of the public, succeeded in getting arrangements made for establishing a communication twice a week between this port and Dublin, instead of once weekly, as at present. This step having been for some time in contemplation, the senior member of the firm proceeded to Dublin a few days ago, and arranged the matter with the City of Dublin Steam Packet Company. First-class steamers alone are to be employed on the station. They will leave this port for Dublin on Tuesdays and Fridays, taking goods and passengers.—Belfast Chronicle.

THE ARCTIC STEAMER.—The New York Express denounces

in eloquent and feeling terms the conduct of a portion of those on board the Arctic. It says:—"According to the statement of one of the saved (Captain Crann), no sooner was the ship found to be sinking than two of the quarterboats were taken possession of by the second and fourth officers and crew; another boat (making the third) was taken possession of by the engineers, supplied with provisions, water, &c. In this last boat it seems there were but eight or nine persons. It could have safely accommodated many more, but revolvers were drawn by those on board against those who were shrieking and struggling to get on board. In that fearful struggle were many helpless women and children, but their pitiful appeals for life were unheeded by the robust cowards who had stolen the boats, and turned their backs upon those whom it was their duty to preserve, or at least to endeavour to preserve. Oh, what a manly spectacle that must have been! Hardy, rough-handed, broad-shouldered, strong-framed men—accustomed to a business, too, the constant hazard of which one would naturally think deadens in some degree everything like personal fear—men like these treacherously deserting feeble and delicate women, and shutting their ears to cries from little children that should have touched hearts of adamant! It is enough to make us all ashamed of humanity, and envy the better nature of the beasts of the field. Not one woman saved!—not one child!—at least we have at the moment we write this no assurance of the fact. The circumstances connected with the loss of the British steamer, Birkenhead, on the coast of Africa, not many months since, are still fresh in the memories of all. The steamer struck on a hidden rock, stove a plank at the bows, and went to the bottom, we believe, in half an hour's time. There were a regiment of troops on board. As soon as the alarm was given, and it became apparent that the ship's fate was sealed, the roll of the drum called the soldiers to arms on the upper deck. That call was promptly obeyed, though every gallant heart there knew that it was his death summons. There they stood as if in battle array—a motionless mass of brave men—men who were men indeed. The ship every moment was going down and down—but there were no traitors, no deserters, no cravens there! The women and children were got into the boats, and were all, or nearly all, saved. There were no boats for the troops—but there was no panic, no blanched, pale quivering lips among them. Down went the ship, and down went that heroic band, shoulder to shoulder, firing a feu de joie as they sank beneath the waves. Men like these never perish; their bodies may be given to the fishes of the sea, but their memories are, as they ought to be, immortal."

MALTA, Nov. 11.—The Miranda, Jura, and Quecu of the South have sailed hence for the Crimea.

FRENCH NAVY AND MERCHANT SERVICE.

The Moniteur de la Flotte quotes a letter from the Crimea of the 28th ult. The allied squadrons had resumed the stations they occupied previous to the attack of the 17th. The Ville de Paris was repairing the damages she had sustained, and all the ships were in the best possible condition as respected their material and personnel. The Charlemagne was to return to France; a shell had exploded in the engine room, and rendered some repairs indispensable. The Jena, Ville de Marseille, and Suffren had been ordered to Toulon, to be employed in conveying troops and warlike stores. The Jena has consequently been relieved before Eupatoria by the ship Henri IV. The duties of the steamers were extremely arduous, being kept constantly moving, carrying troops provisions, and the mails, between Constantinople, Gallipoli, Varna, and the Crimea. They likewise effected continual reconnaissances along the coast, watching the movements of the enemy from Perikop to Kertch. The crews of the ships anchored at Katscha and Kamiesch, on the other hand, were not idle. They every day supplied fatigue parties, they prepared earth-bags as well as the men of the corps of engineers, and when commanded by the General-in-Chief, or the Admirals, they conveyed, as if by enchantment, to the top of the steepest heights, the powerful guns of the ships, to enable the besiegers to compete with the Russian 63 and 74-pounders, and their howitzers of 130.

THE STEAM-TRANSPORT EMU left Toulon on Friday, Nov. 10, for Sebastopol, with 1,000 French troops on board.

ON THE 15TH OF OCTOBER the whole French army at Sebastopol consisted of 48,000 including 5,300 horse. Of the additional reinforcements from Varna and Gallipoli, 9,000 had already arrived at the date of General Canrobert's last despatch after the battle of the 5th, which, with other reinforcements before Sebastopol, gave the French general 68,000 troops. The effective number is of course less. General Levallant had arrived.

THE TWO RUSSIAN GUNS taken at Bomarsund have arrived in Paris. They are of bronze, and of small calibre, the diameter of one is only fifteen centimetres, and of the other sixteen centimetres (about six inches); their length is not quite a metre. They have on them the following inscription in Russian:—"St. Petersburg, 1811," and "St. Petersburg, 1807." The carriages present nothing worth notice. These guns are intended for the Marine Museum.

Military.

LORD HARDINGE and the 23RD FUSILIERS.—The promoters of the special subscription on behalf of the bereaved survivors of the 23rd have felt the declaration of those who oppose the scheme (that the regiment is chiefly composed of Irishmen and Scotch) almost as a libel upon their countrymen. Their sense of injustice has reached the ear of the Commander-in-Chief, who in a private letter to a friend thus refers to the subject:—"I send the last return of the Welsh Fusiliers, signed by its gallant and distinguished leader, who fell so nobly at its head in the action of the Alma. I wish the return had specified Welshmen, and I shall give directions that in the Welsh Fusiliers the four countries shall be separately and distinctly recorded. The number was 969, and of which only eight were Scotch and 182 were Irish. But the Welsh Fusiliers have always been a remarkable regiment, and their conduct on every occasion has shown that they have in no instance degenerated from their former fame. The Welsh Fusiliers were engaged at Albuera, and by a curious coincidence, they lost fourteen officers, killed and wounded, the same as at Alma; but the loss of men was greater at Albuera, namely, 824 men, and at the Alma 197 men." The above has given the greatest satisfaction to those who felt that the bravery of the Welsh was detracted from by being draughted into other regiments instead of that which bears its name.

THE REGIMENTS which are expected to reinforce the British cavalry in the Crimea are the 7th Hussars, the 16th Lancers, and the 1st, 2nd, 3rd, and 7th Regiments of Dragoons.

A ST. PETERSBURG OFFICIAL DESPATCH fuller than those previously to hand states that in the engagement of the 5th the Russian Lieutenant-General Simonoff was killed. Letters from Sebastopol have been received at Vienna, stating that Admiral Nachimoff, who had been wounded, and whose death was erroneously reported in some despatches, had recovered, and was taking an active part in the defence of the place.

LEAD SHIPPED FROM HULL FOR RUSSIA.—Last week fifty tons of lead were shipped from London to Memel, via Hull, which it was known would be taken from thence to St. Petersburg. The Custom-house authorities at Hull refused to pass it, but a telegraphic message was received from London authorising them to forward it, and that was accordingly done.—Staffordshire Advertiser of Nov. 11.

4TH QUEEN'S OWN LIGHT DRAGOONS.—List of killed and missing in the action of the 25th October, 1854:—Major Halkett, Lieutenant Sparke, Sergeant-Major Fowler (married, four children), Sergeant-Major Herbert (married, one child), Sergeant Campbell (married, two children), Sergeant Thomas, Sergeant Lynch, Trumpet-Major Crawford (married, four children), Trumpeter Lovelock, Corporal Armstrong, Corporal Spence; Privates Parks, Phelan, Nemoye, Waigat, Thomsett, Michael O'Brien, Donaldson (married), Huxall, Boxall, Lucas, Moody (married), George Robinson, Swan, Frederick, Bagshaw, Farquharson, King (married), Hutton, Marshall, Barnes, Bolton, Fletcher. Forty-eight horses killed, one died of wounds, eight destroyed in consequence of injuries, eighteen wounded, still living.

REINFORCEMENTS AND STORES FOR LORD RAGLAN.

ACCOUNTS received from Limerick state that orders had been received there by the 16th Lancers and the 72nd Highlanders to hold themselves in instant readiness for war service in the Crimea. Both regiments are in admirable condition for sharing in the honours of the campaign.

THE FOLLOWING INFANTRY BATTALIONS will be added to the reinforcements to be dispatched immediately to the Crimea:—The 1st Battalion of Grenadier Guards; the 34th Regiment, now at Corfu; the 62nd Regiment from Malta; the 71st Highland Light Infantry from Corfu; the 90th Light Infantry from Dublin; the 97th Regiment from Athens; the 82nd Regiment, now at Edinburgh, will not be sent to the East, as stated.

THE BATTALION OF THE GUARDS will be attached to Major-General Bentinck's brigades, which will then consist of four battalions; but, in point of number, it will not differ much from the other infantry brigades. There will thus be left on home service the 2nd battalion of each of the three regiments of Foot Guards, which may be looked upon as so many strong depôts to keep up the war battalions to their effective strength. The five battalions of the line mentioned above will be joined by the 68th Light Infantry, which is now in the Crimea, but is not attached permanently to any division. These six battalions will be formed into the Fifth Division of the British army; and, as three of the regiments are light, the 68th, 71st, and 90th, will probably constitute a Light Infantry Brigade. We believe no arrangements have been yet made as to the command of this division, but it is not unlikely that Colonel Lockyer, of the 97th (who held a command at Chobham), and Colonel Denny, of the 71st, will be the Brigadier-Generals.

AS REGARDS THE CAVALRY, an arrangement has been come to different from what was originally intended. Instead of sending out the cavalry regiments on home service as regiments, the effective men of those corps will be incorporated with the regiments now in the Crimea, so as to bring them up to such a strength as a cavalry regiment in time of war should possess. With the exception of the King's Dragoon Guards, our cavalry regiments of the line consist of six troops of forty-five men each, the regimental staff and officers making up the entire number to something over 300. The officers of the cavalry regiments at home will not be transferred to those abroad, but will remain with their own corps, and will be usefully employed in keeping up an effective supply of trained men and horses to the regiments abroad. Owing to the recent losses, the ten cavalry regiments now in the Crimea cannot be said to muster 1,000 men. When the new arrangements are carried into effect they will be increased by 5,000 men, and from the regiments at home there will be no difficulty in at once supplying 2,000 of this number.

The Europa steamer is expected to be in Kingstown harbour to day (Saturday), to receive on board the 90th Regiment, 1,000 strong, for conveyance to the Crimea.

The Blake transport, 811 tons, having on board draughts belonging to the 9th, 14th, and 92nd Regiments, destined, the two former for Malta, and the latter for Oibraltar, sailed from Queenstown on Saturday last for her destination.

The Hannibal, 90, Captain the Hon. Frederick Gray, left Plymouth Sound on Tuesday afternoon for Malta and the Black Sea. She is very deeply laden, and has 1,200 men on board.

The Snake screw steam despatch gun-boat, Lieutenant-Commander McKillop, was paid in advance at Woolwich on Tuesday, and proceeds with all dispatch to Sebastopol. The Snake, now ready for active service, completes the six despatch gun-boats, each mounting two of Lancaster's 68-pounder oval guns, and all for service in the Black Sea.

The Government transport Edward is being laden with provisions at the Royal William Victualling yard, Plymouth, for Constantinople and the Black Sea.

The Aliport transport, 811 tons, having on board draughts belonging to the 3rd, 14th, and 62nd Regiments, sailed from Queenstown on Saturday last for Malta.

The Cleopatra steamed out of Cork harbour in the afternoon of Saturday last for the Crimea, having on board draughts for various regiments now serving there.

Mr. Penfold, from the Royal Naval Hospital at Haslar, is appointed agent to the Naval Hospital, Therapia.

The Rajah steamship, one of the Peninsular and Oriental Company's fleet, has arrived in Portsmouth harbour to fill up with provisions and war stores for Constantinople.

Captain Broughton's company, 2nd battalion of Royal Artillery, at Woolwich, have been placed under orders to hold themselves in readiness to embark for Malta, to do duty there in place of a company sent on to the Crimea, and, when further reinforcements of artillery are sent to Malta, they will proceed to the seat of war, in the event of their services being required.

The Royal Albert, 121, screw three-decker, Captain Sir Thomas Pasley, Bart., is ordered from Sheerness to Portsmouth, with all dispatch. The better to expedite her, a party of sixty able seamen, selected from the Neptune, 120, and Prince Regent, 90, under the direction of Lieutenants Thomas Brandreth and R. J. Wynniatt, of those ships, were dispatched from Portsmouth to Sheerness, to assist in unloading the Royal Albert to Spithead, she being short-handed of A.B.'s. Orders were received at the same time at Portsmouth to prepare hedding, hammocks, &c., for 2,000 men, as the steam three-decker is about to carry a battalion of Foot Guards and the whole of their equipments to the seat of war in the Crimea, together with a large supply of warlike stores. Her crew will be made up to 1,000 men by draughts, it is reported, before starting. When out she will take the flag of the Commander-in-Chief. The Royal Albert will be at sea before the close of next week.

WE ARE RECRUITING at the rate of 1,000 men a-week, and have a little fear of wanting the raw material of soldiers as if we had a legion of spies and a whole army of crimps to enforce the utmost rigours of conscription. The martial and adventurous spirit of the nation is roused by the stirring tidings which almost every post brings to our shores; and the service has regained in the midst of a bloody and desperate war that popularity which it was in some danger of losing in the piping times of peace. The cavalry regiments at home will not be sent abroad, but will serve as training schools for the recruits of the regiments on foreign service. It is intended to raise each troop to seventy-five men, and to add two troops to each regiment, which will give a total increase of 1,500 sabres to the force in the Crimea; and, besides, all deficiency occasioned by casualties is to be made up. It is proposed to purchase for the use of the cavalry seasoned horses instead of three-year-olds, as better able to bear the fatigues and privations of a campaign, and less liable to injury by a long voyage.

IT APPEARS that in addition to the various mail contract steamers already chartered, the Government have just taken up the Europa, of 1,800 tons, and the Alps screw-steamer, of 1,500 tons, belonging to the Cunard Company, together with the Indiana, of 2,367 tons, belonging to the General Screw Company, from New York, whence she sailed on the 31st ult. last, and the Thames, of 1,889 tons, belonging to the Brazil line of the Royal Mail Steam Company.

THE PENINSULAR COMPANY'S STEAMER CANDIA has proceeded from Southampton to Toulon, to take in French troops for the Crimea. The royal mail steamer Thames proceeded to Toulon for the same purpose. The Ripon proceeds, and the Indiana and Nubia as soon as they can be got ready. The Candia is victualled for 1,200 men, for forty-two days. The Nubia will take as many, and the Ripon above 1,000. The Indiana is to be victualled for 1,400 men. The Government will pay £1,600 a month more for her than for the other steamers of the General Screw Company, on account of the larger number of troops she will carry. The Messrs. Cooksey, Brothers', establishment, at Southampton, has been working night and day victualling the Candia and the other troop steamers. The mail packets will go to Toulon from Southampton victualled, coaled, and provided with hammocks. Everything else that is necessary for the troops will be furnished by the French Government.

IMMENSE SHIPMENT OF MILITARY STORES FOR THE EAST.

—The officers, mechanics, and police of the H division, at present stationed in the Tower of London, are most actively engaged in the shipment of naval and military stores from that ancient garrison. The principal portion consists of warm clothing, hedding, patent iron bedsteads, preserved food, and various articles of consumption for the sick, together with a number of large tents. Orders were received from the Admiralty, to prepare, with all possible speed, an immense number of stores, and several thousand stand of arms, with ammunition, which are intended for the several regiments about to depart to the seat of war. Such is the great amount of the orders forwarded from the Government authorities, to be completed in a few days, that additional hands have to be employed day and night, in getting the goods on board the vessels, which are at present moored off the river frontage of the Tower.

ARTILLERY FOR BALAKLAVA.

On Thursday, Captain Broughton's company, 2nd battalion, proceeded by the North Woolwich Railway to Euston-square, and thence by railway to Liverpool, to embark at that port in the Europa, under orders to proceed at once to Balaklava, the previous order, to remain at Malta in the first instance, having been countermanded. Captain Broughton's company has been sent out 150 strong, including all ranks.

Captain Graydon's company, 1st battalion, the next on the roster for foreign service, expects to leave Woolwich about Monday next for Balaklava; and Captain Gibbons's 9-pounder field battery at Norwich, and Captain Smyth's 9-pounder field battery at Ipswich, with two other companies, are all expected to embark before the end of the present month for service in the Crimea. A report is in circulation in the garrison, that, including Captain Broughton's company, which left yesterday, eleven additional companies will be on their way or arrive at the seat of war in the East before Christmas.

Yeomanry and Militia.

SEVERAL of our gallant militia regiments are now well-trained, and have offered their services in the Crimea. We may especially mention the Monmouthshire, 2nd West Yorkshire, and several others.

SEVERAL men of the Somerset Militia at Cork have volunteered into the regiments proceeding on active service, and they are now heating up for recruits in Cork.

The Gazette.

[From Tuesday's Gazette.]

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 10.

Corps of Royal Marines.—Second Lieut. Howard Sutton Jones, to be First Lieut., vice J. E. W. Scott to half-pay.

COMMISSIONS SIGNED BY LORDS-LIEUTENANT.

INVERNESS-SHIRE.—James Murray Grant, Esq., to be Vice-Lieut.; The Right Hon. Robert Campbell, Baron Abinger, to be Deputy Lieut.; John Walker, to be Deputy Lieut.; William Robertson, to be Deputy Lieut.; Alexander Matheson, M.P., to be Deputy Lieut.; Edward Ellice, M.P., to be Deputy Lieut.; Henry William White, to be Deputy Lieut.; Alexander MacRae, to be Deputy Lieut.; Andrew Belford, to be Deputy Lieut.; Lieut.-Col. Hugh Inglis, to be Deputy Lieut.; Arthur John Robertson, to be Deputy Lieut.; Francis Duckfield Palmer Astley, to be Deputy Lieut.; Humly George Gordon Duff, to be Deputy Lieut.; Duncan Cameron, to be Deputy Lieut.; Angus Macdonald, to be Deputy Lieut.; John Fraser, to be Deputy Lieut.; Lieut.-Col. Alexander Mackintosh, to be Deputy Lieut.; Arthur Thomas Malkin, to be Deputy Lieut.; James Mackintosh, to be Deputy Lieut.; Major Duncan Macpherson, to be Deputy Lieut.

76th Inverness-shire Regiment of Militia.—William Fraser, Esq., to be Capt., vice Gordon, resigned.

COUNTY AND CITY OF EDINBURGH.—City of Edinburgh Artillery Regiment of Militia.—Lieut.-Col. William Geddes, C.B., to be Lieut.

Col.; John Orr, Esq., to be Capt.; Patrick John Cbeine, Esq., to be Capt.; Rodham Catherine Davidson Home, Esq., to be Capt.; William Nathaniel Fraser, Esq., the younger, to be Lieut.; Herbert John Hughes, Esq., to be Lieut.; James Peddie Harper, Esq., M.D., to be Surg.
MOXONSHIRE.—Royal Monmouthshire Militia.—George Wilson to be Surg.; John Grant Wilson, gent., M.D., to be Assist.-Surg.
GLoucester.—Royal North Gloucester Regiment of Militia.—Lieut. Allen Alexander Bathurst, to be Capt., vice Noel, resigned; Ensign, Robert Beckles Hunter, to be Lieut., vice Bathurst, promoted.
CARDIGAN.—Royal Cardigan Militia.—Thomas Davis Lloyd to be Capt., vice Powell, promoted.
BERKS.—Hungerford Corps of Yeomanry Cavalry.—Reginald Routh, Esq., to be Cornet.

From Friday's Gazette.
WAR-OFFICE, Nov. 17.

7th Regiment of Dragoon Guards.—Quartermaster David Scotland to be Cornet; Cornet David Scotland to be Adjutant.
 6th Dragoons.—Ensign Alfred Henderson White, from the 47th Foot, to be Cornet.
 11th Light Dragoons.—George Edward Bayly Potts, gent., to be Cornet.
 17th Light Dragoons.—Captain Henry Roxby Benson to be Major; Lieutenant Alexander Learmonth to be Captain; Cornet Thomas Taylor to be Lieutenant.
 1st or Grenadier Regiment of Foot Guards.—Captain and Lieutenant-Colonel and Brevet-Colonel Charles William Ridley to be Major; Lieutenant and Captain Lord Arthur Hay to be Captain and Lieutenant-Colonel, Oct. 19; Ensign and Lieutenant John Montagu Burgoyne to be Lieutenant and Captain, Oct. 17; Ensign and Lieutenant Alexander Mitchell to be Lieutenant and Captain.
 To be Ensigns and Lieutenants without Purchase.—William Phillip, Viscount Molyneux, Francis Wheeler, Viscount Hood.
 17th Foot.—William Robinson, gent., to be Ensign.
 22nd Foot.—Surgeon George Williamson, M.D., from the 75th Foot, to be Surgeon.
 26th Foot.—Lieutenant Flenness Arthur Quarry to be Captain.
 40th Foot.—Ensign Arthur Maynard Mollar to be Lieutenant.
 42nd Foot.—William Baird, gent., to be Ensign; Thomas Augustus Forbes Leth, gent., to be Ensign.
 45th Foot.—Ensign Richard Blair to be Lieutenant; Ensign Richard Grey to be Lieutenant; Adam Perry, gent., to be Ensign; Lieutenant Drury Richard Barnes to be Adjutant.
 62nd Foot.—Captain Lennard Barrett Tyley to be Major; Lieutenant Charles Morgan Smythies Langhorne Gwynne to be Captain; Ensign G. W. Bulkeley Hughes to be Lieutenant; Thomas Abercrombie Fraser Duff, gent., to be Ensign.
 63rd Foot.—Lieutenant G. C. Widdrington Curteis to be Captain; Ensign Houcage Thomas Twysdon to be Lieutenant, Stewart Hervey Bruce, gent., to be Ensign.
 72nd Foot.—Charles Montizambert Stockwell, gent., to be Ensign.
 75th Foot.—Surgeon James Coghlan, from the 22nd Foot, to be Surgeon.
 79th Foot.—Lieutenant Edward William Cuning to be Captain, Ensign George Thomas Scovell to be Lieutenant, Charles Edward M'Nurdo, gent., to be Ensign.
 Rifle Brigade.—John Croft Moore, gent., to be Ensign.
OFFICE OF ORDNANCE, Nov. 14.
 Royal Regiment of Artillery.—Second Lieutenant Frederick George Bayley to be First Lieutenant; Sergeant Major James Black to be Quartermaster.
 Corps of Royal Engineers.—Brevet Major John Chaytor to be Lieutenant-Colonel; Brevet Major William Francis Drummond Jervois to be Captain; First Lieutenant Edward Charles De Moleyns to be Second Captain; Second Lieutenant Edward Osborn Hewett, to be First Lieutenant; Second Lieutenant Frederick Mould to be First Lieutenant.

Freemasonry and Masonic Intelligence.

MONDAY, Nov. 20.—Grand 'Masters' Lodge, No. 1, Freemasons' Tavern; British Lodge, No. 8, Freemasons' Tavern; Lodge of Emulation, No. 21, Albion Tavern; Lodge of Felicity, No. 66, London Tavern; Lodge of Tranquillity, No. 218, George and Vulture; Chapter 4, St. George's, Freemasons' Tavern; Chapter 12, Prudence, Ship and Turtle.

TUESDAY, Nov. 21.—Mount Lebanon Lodge, No. 87, Green Man Tavern, Tooley-street, Southwark; Calogian Lodge, No. 188, Freemasons' Tavern; St. Paul's Lodge, No. 229, London Coffee House; Chapter 49, Mount Sinai, Gun Tavern, Fimlico.

WEDNESDAY, Nov. 22.—Lodge of Antiquity, No. 2, Freemasons' Tavern; Lodge of United Pilgrims, No. 745, Horns Tavern, Kensington.

THURSDAY, Nov. 23.—House, Com. Tem., School at 2; Grenadiers' Lodge, No. 78, Freemasons' Tavern; Lodge of Regularity, No. 108, Freemasons' Tavern; Shakespeare Lodge, No. 116, Albion Tavern; Chapter 206, Donatle, Falcon Tavern, Fetter-lane.

FRIDAY, Nov. 24.—Mount Moriah, No. 40, Freemasons' Tavern; Universal Lodge, No. 212, Freemasons' Tavern.

LODGE OF FAITH, No. 165.—This excellent lodge met on the 31st of October, for the purpose of installing the W.M. elect, Br. Gillard, which was most admirably performed by Br. Ruckstraw. Messrs. Stewart and Bahe were initiated into the order, and Br. Wheeler was passed to the second degree. After the installation, the W.M. appointed Br. M'Nanus S.W., Br. Oddele J.W., Brs. Carter and Fitch, S. and J. D., Br. Kardele S.G., and Br. Longstaff, Tyler. The W.M. placed the collars of the treasurer and secretary on Brs. Onslow, senior and junior, to which offices they had been unanimously re-elected. The visitors were numerous, among whom we observed, Brs. Polter, 11; J. W. Adams, P.M., 163; J. Smith, P.M., 206; Corser, W.M., 276; Haywood, 169, &c. After lodge business the brethren partook of an excellent banquet, and the evening passed off most delightfully.

OLD CONCORD LODGE, No. 201.—This lodge met for the second time this season, since the vacation on the 7th inst. the W. M. Brother Kennedy presiding with his wonted ability. He initiated the Rev. M. Laughlin and Mr. Henry Alfred Taylor into the mysteries of Freemasonry, and also raised to the third degree Br. Cosgrave. Br. P.M. Borth, and the Immediate P.M., were appointed trustees to the benevolent fund. The visitors were Br. Kirby, W.M., 169; Br. Killick, P.M., 108; Br. Sachs, late of 201; Br. Alekanles Saydell, (German Lodge); Br. Groves, 48; and Br. Illingworth, of Texas (United States). Br. Kirby returned thanks for the visitors, in which he offered a justly deserved compliment upon the excellent working of the lodge, and Br. Laughlin acknowledged the healths of the initiators, and took the opportunity of adverting to the delightful feeling of brotherly love of which Freemasonry appeared to be composed. He had had a most favourable preconceived opinion of it; and if he was at all disappointed, it was that it exceeded greatly what he expected. It appeared evident that the precepts of Masonry were founded upon the purest principles of piety and truth; therefore to be a good mason was to be a good man. The after part of the evening was pleasantly passed, several excellent songs being given by Brs. Henry A. Taylor, Shiel, Underwood, and G. E. Taylor, who presided at the pianoforte.

POLISH NATIONAL LODGE No. 778.—The duties of this excellent lodge were resumed at the Freemasons' Tavern, on Thursday, the 9th, upon which occasion there was a godly merriment, the lodge business being admirably performed by the W.M. Br. L. A. Ritterbandt. Brs. Coggin and Banks, of the Freemasons' Tavern, were elected joining members of the lodge, for which Br. Banks returned thanks in an admirable speech, in which he said, "He was greatly obliged to the members of the lodge for the honour they had done himself and partner in electing them members of the Polish National Lodge; he was sorry to say he could bring no strength to the lodge, some might bring them honour, some intelligence, but he could increase the value of the lodge no further than by adding one more to their number. It was upwards of a quarter of a century since he was initiated into Freemasonry, and regretted to add, that his Masonic knowledge was very limited; but he trusted he possessed one qualification of Freemasonry, namely, good-fellowship, which he remembered was strongly impressed upon him at an early period, the superstructure of society being comprised in the words 'brotherly love, relief, and truth.' He believed in the sociability of mankind, and thereby contradicted the speculations of the gloomy philosopher of Malmesbury. He (Br. Banks) contended that man was essentially a social animal, and that every Freemason's lodge was a practical proof of it. His own ways and feelings were a refutation of the doctrine of that ancient writer. He believed that Freemasonry was the foundation of all the charitable feelings, and of all the eleemosynary institutions, that exist in this great country. He would now revert to the constitutional part of the lodge, which was Polish. He had from an early period felt strongly in favour of the nationality of Poland, and had sympathised with the struggle of that gallant nation. He had formerly read a line of Campbell's, viz., "Freedom shrieked when Kosciuszko fell," he thought that that was the death of Poland; but on reflection, he found that a shriek was not the knell of death, but suffering only, and he was happy in the feeling that Poland was not dead, but that she would come out of her sufferings like the 'Phoenix' from her own ashes."

GLOBE LODGE, No. 23, Emergency.—Brs. W. Knight and Plowright were present, to be raised to the third degree in Masonry, which ceremony was performed most beautifully by Br. P.M. Blackburn, in the absence of the W.M. Br. Hewlett, who, we regret to learn, was prevented attending in consequence of severe indisposition. Br. Morris was passed to the second degree, and a Mr. William Adams was initiated into the order; after which the Brethren adjourned until the third Thursday in December.

FIDELITY LODGE OF INSTRUCTION.—The annual festival of this lodge was held at the Falcon Tavern, Fleet-street, on Thursday evening, which was attended by nearly forty brethren. The chair was occupied by Br. P.M. Dearsley, a gentleman well-known in both craft and arch-masonry for his urbanity of disposition, and the kindness of feeling which is ever inherent in a good Mason. Br. P.M. Heath, in a speech highly creditable to his taste and ability, presented, in the name of the lodge, a P.M.'s jewel to Br. Grant, the hon. secretary, in which he extolled the great Masonic talent of Br. Grant. Very few Masons, he said, had, in so short a time, gained so much Masonic knowledge, and no one was more willing to impart the same to those desiring of learning. He (Br. Heath) concluded by calling upon the Brethren to assist him in wishing prosperity and long life to Br. P.M. Grant, which was enthusiastically responded to. Br. Grant briefly but most feelingly returned thanks, after which the company separated, highly delighted with their evening's entertainment.

THE MASONIC MIRROR.—The first number of a monthly journal, under this title, made its appearance on the first of the month. It is edited by a gentleman of high literary attainments; and, from the sources of information at his command, coupled with his position in the press, we augur a success for this work beyond the most sanguine expectations. It is intended not only to give notices of Masonic meetings, but to offer a species of literature of a high character, rendering it quite as interesting to the public generally, as to the Freemason in particular. The address breathes a true Masonic feeling, and is worthy of the writer. "The Hand of good fellowship" is offered, which we cordially grasp. We hail with pleasure such an ally as the Masonic Mirror, for there's "room enough for all," and trust to find that in Masonry, as everything else, "union is strength."

THE FREEMASONS OF BATH have taken the initiative in raising amongst themselves a contribution to the Patriotic Fund, and the honorary secretary of the Local Association has already received a creditable sum from one Masonic body, dedicated to the widows and families of those on active service in the East. We trust that this praiseworthy example may be followed by every kind of Masonic body throughout England, Scotland, and Ireland.

GEORGE AND BLUE BOAR HOTEL, HIGH HOLBORN.—Mr. G. F. Taylor, intends holding here, for his benefit, a madrigal and glee concert, of a convivial character, among gentlemen only, on the evening of Monday, November the 27th instant, to commence at eight o'clock precisely. Tickets, two shillings and sixpence each, to be had of Mr. G. Taylor, 21, Robert-street, Hampstead-road; at the Freemasons' Tavern; and at the George and Blue Boar, Holborn.

.. The "History of Freemasonry" will be concluded in our next.

Our Letter-Bag.

THE USE VERSUS THE ABUSE OF THE SPUR.

DEAR MR. EDITOR.—Permit me, through the medium of your valuable and widely-circulated journal, to offer, on behalf of several other ladies and myself, our united and very sincere thanks to your kind correspondent "Justus" for the gallantry he has displayed in defence of our rights and privileges, which have been attempted to be invaded in a most unjust and ungenerous manner. I have carefully perused the last letter of "A Brighton Ladies' Riding Horse," and, in reply, beg most distinctly to repeat that no lady, who knows how to ride properly, would ever attempt to spur her horse without she had cause to do so; and the person who could knowingly abuse a dumb animal has no right to be named as a gentleman, inasmuch as she is unentitled to the denomination, and it is therefore an act of injustice to mention such individuals as specimens of their sex. No animals can be better cared for or more kindly treated than ladies' horses generally, and the painful experience alluded to by your "Brighton" correspondent has evidently been derived from his having had the misfortune to principally carry a diversity of inexperienced riders, who, for some trifling amount paid to an owner, have procured from him the services of his horse, and in these cases the poor animal's physical powers of endurance are no doubt very frequently overtaxed in order to satisfy the avarice of his proprietor, who is then equally, if not more, reprehensible than the rider, who may probably be ignorant that the horse's incapacity arises from fatigue caused by previous exertion.

These remarks may apply to the owners and riders of many hired "hacks," as such unfortunate animals are not inappropriately termed; but there certainly can be no reason why ladies who know how to ride properly, and who are generally mounted on their own horses, should be prohibited from either wearing a spur, or from using it when necessary. I generally take equestrian exercise six days in the week, and although I now always ride with a suitable whip and a small silver spur, yet I seldom use either, as I never punish my horses unless they really require correction; and, in fact, after a lady's horse has been once spurred by his mistress the slightest inclination of her left foot will usually suffice to convey her wishes, and thus prevent the spur being again needed.

The experience of either a Brighton or any other hired hack will not warrant his asserting that the majority of lady equestrians ride with a whip only, and without a spur, as the facts are the very reverse. The horses of her Majesty the Queen are trained with the spur, and we are all well aware that no lady can possibly be either more humane in disposition or more perfect in equestrian accomplishments, than our most Gracious Sovereign, who does not consider it beneath her dignity either to wear a spur or to apply it when requisite.

Her Imperial Majesty the Empress of the French, and many other distinguished horsewomen, invariably ride with a spur, which they do not hesitate to use, if occasion requires.

It is somewhat remarkable that your anti-lady's-spur correspondents make not the least objection to a pair of massive and sharply-pointed steel spurs being worn upon gentlemen's more powerful heels, which if vigorously applied, must inflict very severe punishment; and yet these very individuals would wish to prohibit us from wearing our tiny silver spur of slender proportions, as a single weapon of offence, and far less formidable in its administration than a pair of gentlemen's sharply-pointed spurs. If a lady's horse carries his mistress properly and obeys her wishes he will receive continual assurances of kindness from her softly-gauntleted hand; but if, on the contrary, he be refractory, obedience must be enforced, and the horse made sensible that his rider is really his mistress, and that she will not permit him to be her master. Therefore, a lady who may be thus compelled to whip and spur her horse is no more to be reprobated than a gentleman would be if similarly situated.

A lady cannot be too particular in selecting appropriate equestrian costume, as she ought always, when vaulted in the saddle, to be correctly appointed cap-a-pie, it being quite as needful that a horsewoman should be properly booted and spurred as it is for her to wear a comfortably fitting hat or habit.

I trust that you will pardon this lengthy intrusion, and, with many thanks for your polite impartiality, I remain, your constant reader,
 Liscard, Cheshire, Nov. 13, 1854. DIANA.

THE SPUR.

SIR.—It is now nearly a year since the vexed question of the use of the spur by fair riders was started in your valuable journal; this question is no nearer settled now than it was this time last year. The discussion has been an interesting one, but, as yet, it has not been very practical. Now, Sir, why is this? I think the reason is plain. We have had a great many letters from gentlemen who are not very well qualified to decide the point. We have had several letters from horses, who are not likely to be impartial judges; but what we want, is more letters from ladies themselves. The question is—If I understand it rightly—"will a lady ride more comfortably if she uses a spur?" My own mind is quite made up to a negative answer, but I want ladies themselves to discuss the question. There have been a few letters signed by ladies' names; some of them, I think, had internal evidence that they were not written by ladies at all, and none of them fairly stated the reasons for or against the use of the spur. Let "Annie," "Amy," or, "Diana," if they be really what their names imply, give more actual reasons why the spur should be used; and surely some ladies will be found—ladies in evidence and in deed—to give reasons against the use of the spur, which they themselves would never use. I would suggest that every lady who may read these lines should send to you her experience with respect to the use of the spur. It would not be necessary that every letter should be published immediately, and, if you are overwhelmed with productions, the fair writers and the public may surely trust that you will make an impartial or judicious selection. Only let me add that those ladies who shrink from appearing in print need fear nothing from an assumed name, or, even, they might get a gentleman friend to express their feminine feelings.—I remain, Sir, yours, A GENTLEMAN.

P.S.—I trust, Sir, that no letter will be sent to you with a signature opposed to truth.

FERRETS.

SIR.—I think your correspondent, T. F., has said all that can be said on the subject of the treatment of ferrets. Since I wrote upon it last year, in THE FIELD, I have experienced the cleanliness which arises from closely squeezing down the straw into a separate box at the end of the ferret cage, which box should have a hole in it just large enough for the ferret to enter.

By doing this, the ferret will burrow into the centre of the straw, and make his bed so tight and small that he must turn out to avoid dirtying it, which he will do, if you only just give him room to turn.

In the cage part there should be no straw, but a little sand, which will facilitate the cleaning out of the cage. Two ferrets will occupy a small bed; and there is an etiquette amongst ferrets in bed which will prevent them from dirtying each other there; and two ferrets are enough for one cage. As your correspondent rightly says, great cleanliness, pure food, warmth, and ventilation, without chilly draughts, are the best preservatives against disease; and this was the advice I gave last year. A ferret cage should be made upon the principle of the little cages for white mice, that is, with a bedroom and parlour. UDRA.

SIR.—Would any of your readers be good enough to inform me in your next publication, the exact whereabouts of the course over which Mrs. Allan McDonogh is going to ride a steeple-chase against the Knight of Glyn, and I hope that you will favour your subscribers, of whom I am one, with a very full and particular account of this interesting match. And I feel quite sure that your numerous readers amongst the fair sex will be much obliged to you to inform them how, and in what way, Mrs. Allan McDonogh is equipped to ride this match; I mean, whether she rides with a third ponicle, or with or without a stirrup; also what kind of bridle she uses, as also what description of spur and whip. I merely write this as a suggestion, and hope you will act upon it, as I am quite sure all these particulars would have much interest, as the many letters you have received on the use of the spur and whip by ladies prove.—I am, your obedient servant, H. Y.

What day is the match? One paper states, the second Tuesday in December.

THE PATRIOTIC FUND.

SIR.—Freemasons are ever effecting much good in society—witness their schools &c.—and I am given to understand the Grand Lodge is very rich. Now, a donation of one thousand pounds therefrom to the Patriotic Fund would, I am confident, be hailed with delight by every brother in the three kingdoms. Allow me to throw on the hint through the columns of THE FIELD.—Yours, &c., RED ARROW.

SALMON.

To the Editor of THE FIELD.

SIR.—I noticed with pleasure in your last week's publication, the success which has attended the salmon breeding on the Tay, and hope to see the same measures carried out in some of our English rivers, many of which could be made first-rate salmon and gillie fisheries, without much trouble or expense. I know two streams in particular—viz., the Yore and Wharf, in Yorkshire, in which beautiful clear streams the salmon still annually struggle over the numerous obstacles placed in their way, to return to their favourite spawning-beds; from which I conclude, if these obstacles could be so altered, or salmon-ladders (which I am informed are of trifling cost) placed in such positions that the fish could more readily ascend the rivers, there would be abundance of fish, and good sport for the fishermen.

It has been a matter of surprise to many, and regret to all lovers of the sport, that the several noblemen and gentlemen through whose estates these rivers flow, have not taken the requisite steps to accomplish so desirable an object, now that the success of artificial propagation has been established beyond all doubt.

I quite agree with your observations on stake-nets, and shall be glad if any of your very able contributors can inform me if the stake-nets are allowed to stand on Sundays, or if they can suggest any means of abolishing so objectionable a system, and one so highly injurious to all salmon rivers.

I should also like to know, from those conversant with the subject, what is the cheapest and best kind of salmon-ladder. I have no doubt a few observations on the subject, in your columns, would be very acceptable to many, who, like myself have not seen one, but may be equally anxious to adopt them in rivers with which they may have to do. I trust you will excuse my troubling you on this subject, and remain your constant reader, FLYFISHER.

Leeds, Nov. 10, 1854.

HORTICULTURE.

RIFE STRAWBERRIES.—Mr. Nicholls, of Eastham Ferry Hotel, has, in his garden, some strawberry plants, from which ripe fruit was taken this week. The fruit was as large and fine as it usually is in early summer, and, having grown in the open air, affords a proof of the mildness of the climate of the locality.—Liverpool Mercury.

MILDNESS OF CLIMATE.—In a garden belonging to W. C. Birdsworth, Esq., at Lytham, may at present be seen a quantity of strawberries nearly ready for gathering.

THE TEMPLE GARDENS.—These gardens, which are situated in the heart of the City of London, present at this time one of the finest floral exhibitions that can well be conceived. The chrysanthemum, so acceptable as an autumn flower, is here cultivated with the greatest care and skill. Being what may be termed a coarse-breathing plant, it is able to contend against the smoke and dust with which the atmosphere in the City is charged; and here may be seen every variety of colour and size of which the flower seems capable, from pure white to the deepest red, and from the size of a button to that of a common cauliflower. And although the gardens are the privileged resort of the benchers of the Temple, yet they are liberally opened to the respectable residents of the neighbourhood who obtain a standing order, and in the summer evenings to the public at large. It is a most refreshing sight there to watch the gambols of the multitude of children, who escape from the crowded courts and alleys to roll about on the soft green turf, which, however, they too soon destroy, to be again renewed by the showers of spring. Great credit is due to the "Templars" for their liberality, and to the worthy gardener who has the care of this oasis of the City.

AGRICULTURE.

November 22, 23.—Annual Meeting of the Gloucester Agricultural Association.

November 28.—Wilt's Agricultural Society's Cattle and Poultry Show, at Devizes.

December 11.—Dotley Root Show.

December 14.—Romsey Society's Christmas Show.

FARM OPERATIONS FOR NOVEMBER.—Wheat sowing should now be proceeded with vigorously, so as to be concluded within the month; as the season advances, the quantity of seed should be increased. Winter vetches may yet be sown provided the soil be not wet; they are best sown at this period in beds six to eight feet wide. A little manure will greatly increase the crop. Rye and bere may be sown any time during the month, either for a spring crop or to stand for seed; sixteen, or eighteen, or twenty stone will sow the Irish acre according as the soil is more or less rich. Stall Feeding.—Cattle intended for fattening should be housed forthwith. When first put in, feed sparingly on the white or inferior class of turnips, with a liberal supply of hay, lest they get hoven or too laxative in the bowels. After they are accustomed to the house and food, the turnips may be increased in quantity; but if symptoms of purgation should appear, the quantity of turnips must be curtailed. Feed three times a day—eight in the morning, twelve at noon, and five in the afternoon. Hay should be given the first in the morning, before the turnips, and a little after each meal, when they should be left at rest and undisturbed until the hour for the next meal arrives; by the addition of 3lbs. to 6lbs. of oil cake daily the quantity of turnips may be curtailed, and the fattening process pushed on more rapidly. Sheep may also be fed in the house on roots, hay and corn, or linseed-cake. Pigs. Both fattening and store-pigs should now have abundance of cooked food; the fattening ones should have a liberal allowance of grain with their roots, but the stores may be less liberally supplied with grain, though they must have a full allowance of cooked roots, offal with a little meal, bran, or pollard. Grass lands should now be topped-dressed, whether designed for pasture or hay, with the rich compost, farm-yard manure, or vitriolised bones. Plough all stubbles with a deep furrow, intended for next season's green cropping; if the land be foul, it should be thoroughly grubbed and cleaned before ploughing.—Galway Indicator.

WILT'S AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY, DEVIZES.—The presidency of this institution has been rendered vacant by the resignation of Mr. Long, M.P., who has retired in consequence of indisposition. A meeting of the members of the committee of the society has been already held upon the subject, and a requisition got up, calling upon Mr. Southern, M.P., to allow himself to be named as Mr. Long's successor. The gentleman's reply, we believe, is to the effect that if the farmers of the county will more generally come forward and give their support to the association, he will be happy to co-operate with them. He will attend the general meeting of the members, to be held at the Bear Hotel, on Tuesday the 28th inst., and address the company upon the subject of the requisition with which he has been honoured. We trust, therefore, that as many of the subscribers as possibly can will attend upon that occasion, and show by their presence that the society is still deserving of, and that it shall continue to receive, their future support.

FARMERS IN THE SOUTH OF ENGLAND are purchasing sheep in the north of Scotland to fat them for the London market. Four-yr-old sheep are purchased for about 17s. 6d. a head. The conveyance of them to the south costs about 3s. a head more. These sheep have been fed on the moors, and have never tasted a turnip. They are found rather wild at first—almost too wild for the fences.

THE FRENCH DECREE ON DISTILLATION FROM CORN.—We read in the Pays:—"The present situation is as follows:—The price of spirits still keeps up at between 172fr. and 176fr. the hectolitre; but in order to obtain a hectolitre of alcohol, the distiller employs about 350 kilogrammes of rye or barley at 20fr. the 100 kilog., giving an expense of 70fr. The cost of manufacture does not exceed on an average 20fr. the hectolitre; the result is, that a hectolitre of alcohol costs 90fr. Between that price and the quotation of from 172fr. to 176fr., which holds up even with the competition of foreign spirits, subject to a duty of only 15fr., there was, it will be seen, a large latitude left to speculators for profit. They thus had a profit much more than sufficient for their movement to continue without any diminution worth speaking of. The decree will cause a great quantity of corn and farinaceous substances, hitherto used for distillation, to be again given to consumption. That result, joined to the abundance of provisions, will contribute much, it is to be hoped, to speedily reduce prices in the market to their normal state." Galvani says on the same subject:—"The Pays anticipates the best results from this measure. It is to be hoped that the expectation will be realised. A decree which, however temporary, must be ruinous to a considerable number of persons who have embarked their capital in distilleries, and throw out of employ a very large number of workmen, can only have been resolved upon from a strong conviction that it is for the necessary welfare of the masses. The same measure has been occasionally adopted in some other countries, and we believe with advantage. The Minister of Agriculture, in the report on which this decree is founded, states, as one of the motives of it, that alcohol is now made or can be made from substances which do not form part of the food of the people. The Minister does not mention any of these substances, but probably one of them is the asphodel or daffodil, which the Moniteur has stated to be distilled for alcohol in Algeria, and which, according to the account in that journal gives a spirit of a very fine quality. This may be a remunerative process in Algeria, where the plant grows in abundance in a wild state, or where there are large tracts of land on which it could be cheaply cultivated; but it does not follow that there would be the same result in Europe, where this plant would occupy land which is now cultivated for food or other remunerative products. We do not imagine that the Minister can allude to the distillation of wood for spirit, for it is a new industry, and as yet there are no results which warrant a conclusion that a pure and cheap spirit can be obtained from this process. Three patents for the distillation of alcohol from wood have been taken out in France within the last twelve months, but neither of them has gone farther in the way of execution than mere scientific experiments."

POULTRY.

To the Editor of THE FIELD.

Sir,—I am obliged, as I am sure many other of your readers who are amateur poultry keepers are, by your devoting a portion of your valuable paper to matters relating to poultry, and poultry keeping.

In reply to the first part of the letter of "Amateur," in last week's paper, I beg to say that, in my opinion, what are called Spanish and Minorca fowls are of one common stock, no matter how white the faces of the former, or how rufous those of the latter. By selecting white-faced cocks and hens, and breeding from them, and from the purest white-faced of their progeny, in process of time, and with constant care, what are called white-faced Spanish are produced. That this is the case, this instance of "Amateur" goes to prove. I have now several elegant white-faced fowls, the produce of the stocks of Captain Hornby and Mr. Potts, which, so far as present appearances go, will some be whiter and others much redder than their progenitors. The white-faced, I am inclined to think, an arbitrary feature, without any value whatever. Sure I am that birds with red around and above the eye may be as large, as good in feather, and equal, as layers, to any with a pure white face; and, perhaps, in all these respects—because in general health—better.

As to the change in the appearance of the Cuckoo cock, it occurs to me that is attributable to the presence of foul blood. It is not always that a cross can be observed, in a bird which at other periods will not conceal its degenerate origin. I know a case in which a black hen molted white, and also one in which another had molted speckled.—I am, &c.,

Nov. 8, 1854.

THICK-NECKED TURKEYS.

As we crossed a flat on the top of a mountain we heard a horrible noise from a large gang of turkeys, a sure sign of bad weather. Conwell sprang from his horse, and we ran towards the sound. When near enough I cheered on the dog, and in an instant the whole forest was alive with turkeys. A great big fellow flapped into a tree about sixty yards in front of me, and fell to the ground with a ball from my rifle. While loading, I observed Conwell going about with his rifle at his cheek, watching all the long necks; then he stopped, took aim, and fired. But the turkey only reeled on the bough, and recovered himself. As soon as I was loaded I knocked over a second, and by this time the greater part of the gang had made off; but the one Conwell had hit sat still, badly wounded, with the blood dropping fast. Conwell had now loaded again, and shot him through the head. On my asking why he had not selected another, as he was sure of this one, he answered, that this was the fattest and heaviest of the whole gang; and he was right. Mine were both large birds, but his weighed more by three pounds. He laughed and said he had not looked out for the best in vain, and told me, "when the turkeys are all sitting on the tree, frightened at the dogs, there is no occasion to be in a hurry to shoot the first that comes; a good sportsman should choose the best, which is easily done; a short thick neck is the infallible sign. The longer the turkey, the longer and thinner his neck. The bird seems larger, but take care to shoot the thick necks, and I'll wager that they ain't so bad to eat." Long experience has since taught me that he was right, but it required some time before he was cool enough to look at the turkeys on their perch, and make a choice amongst them.—Gerstaecker's Wild Sports in the Far West.

Bits and Spurs.

WHITWASHING.—London is a dark place; its narrow streets, high houses, and smoke-pall make its various apartments gloomy and cheerless. We obviate this somewhat by the expensive reflectors of Chappuis and others; but much more might be done, and by very cheap means. White washed boards, placed at an angle of 45 deg. in the areas of cellars, and against the windows of many dark apartments, will strangely illuminate them, and make places clear as daylight which were otherwise quite dark. Much also might be done by the very simple and cleanly process of whitewashing the backs of all houses. These very often in the city form irregular quadrangles, which, if whitewashed all round once a year, would add much to the cheerfulness and lightness of places that are now gloomy and miserable enough; at the cost of a few shillings the daylight might be extended an hour in every twenty-four.—The Builder.

HOOD'S ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.—"Answers to newspaper correspondents" make a leading feature in many of the largely circulating periodicals of the day. The industrious writers must often be at a loss both to imagine questions and replies. Perhaps they may gain something by learning how Tom Hood used to answer his correspondents. Here is a specimen:—"The Echoes," we fear, will not answer. "Alien" is foreign to his subject. "W," Tears of Sensibility, had better be dropped. "B," is surely humming. "The Night Thoughts" are not admired, because the author was young. "T," says that his tale is out of his own head: is he a tadpole? "Y. Y.," a word to the Y.'s is sufficient. "The essay on the funeral ceremonies of different nations should be printed in the dead languages. We decline it on the part of the English." "Mr. R. complains that we are 'backward in forwarding his paper.' Does he mean by the clause to take us for crabs? The sonnet to Miss Tree is forwarded by the twopenny post." "The Captive" is ready to be restored." "The essay on agricultural distress would only increase it."

TO BE LEFT TILL CALLED FOR.—About some three years ago a labouring man in this town was consuming two half-ounces of tobacco daily, and sometimes more, paying 1d. for the half ounce. On going into the shop of Mr. T. P., draper and grocer, as was his usual practice and learning that the price of tobacco had been raised to 2d, the half-ounce he laid down his pipe and tobacco-box on the counter, requesting Mr. P. would take charge of them until he called for them. From that day forward he deposited a fourpenny piece (being the sum that it usually cost him for tobacco) daily in a box, and, on opening it last Saturday, he had the gratification of beholding upwards of £20, accumulated in fourpenny pieces. He then very judiciously counted out £20 worth and placed them in the savings' bank, leaving the remainder as nest eggs to invite further deposits.—Carmarthen Journal.

A SAPPER'S ATTEMPT AT TURKISH.—The following is sent by the correspondent of the Post as a specimen of the conversation which he heard between a linguist sapper and a Turkish driver:—"Arabajee, caval soo, yok; haidee Balak-lava Adjutant Irett; chahook Johnny no forget haidee, chahook; buono, yes, understandy."

Advertisements.

HENRY PEAT,
HUNTING SADDLER,
14, OLD BOND-STREET,
LONDON.

LOANS.—Persons desirous of obtaining ADVANCES from £50 to £250, upon approved personal security, repayable by easy instalments, extending over a lengthened period, are invited to examine the principles of the IRISH MUTUAL SUBSCRIPTION LOAN ASSURANCE CLASSES. Prospectuses, Reports, and every information, may be obtained on application at the British Mutual Life Office, 17, New Bridge-street, Blackfriars. Rules &c. each copy, or 1s. per post. CHARLES JAMES THICK, Resident Secretary.

SALMON FISHERIES IN THE TWEED TO LET.

TO BE LET, ON LEASE, for such a term of years as may be agreed on, with entry at 25th May next, the FISHERIES and FERRY OF EDENMOUTH. The Fisheries bring about a mile below the Town of Kelso, extend to nearly three miles in length on the north side of the River, comprehend the whole Tweed Salmon Fishing within the Barony of Ednam, and embrace some of the best Angling Catches in that River. Also, TO LET, with entry now or at Whit-sunday next, the desirable VILLA of SHAIR-PIELAW HOUSE, situated within the Palace Grounds of Bendersdyke Park, and containing Dining-room, Drawing rooms, Five Bed-rooms, Kitchen, Servants' Apartments, and Conveyances. The House is within a mile of Kelso, and is in the immediate vicinity of Edenmouth Fisheries, and will be let either separately from, or in connection with these, as may be desired. Apply to SMITHS and ROBSON, Solicitors, Kelso.

THE BIRMINGHAM CATTLE AND POULTRY SHOW, 1854.
THE SIXTH GREAT ANNUAL EXHIBITION OF STOCK AND DOMESTIC POULTRY will be held in BINGLEY HALL, on TUESDAY, WEDNESDAY, THURSDAY, and FRIDAY, the 12th, 13th, 14th, and 15th of DECEMBER next.
The PRIVATE VIEW AND ANNUAL DINNER on TUESDAY, December 12th.

GUNS, RIFLES, AND REVOLVERS.
J. LANG has an extensive assortment of Second-hand GUNS, by all the first London Makers, at half their original cost, which he has taken in exchange, in addition to his own superior GUNS and RIFLES, as turned out by the late Joseph Manton, for the superior finish of which J. Lang obtained a prize medal at the Great Exhibition. Rifles on the most approved plan for the Conical Ball, for Deer-shooting or long distances. Revolving Pistols on J. Lang's own plan, as also Dean and Adams' Colt's, &c.; but a trial is recommended before risking money or life.
22, Cockspur-street, London.

SEWAGE CHARCOAL MANURE.
THIS highly fertilising MANURE, which is Pure Charcoal, completely saturated with London Sewage, will be found most efficient for every species of crop, more especially for Peas, Beans, Turnips, Mangold Wurzel, and other root crops. It will produce a greater return for the outlay than Guano or any other manure at an equivalent value; it also possesses the property of retaining its fertilising power longer than other Manures now in use. It may be obtained at the SEWAGE MANURE WORKS, Stanley-bridge, Fulham, at 4s. per ton, and, in quantities less than half a ton, at 5s. per cwt., for ready money only; and in quantities not less than a ton will be delivered at the London Terminus of the Railroads free of charge for carriage. It may also be had from Messrs. G. GIBBS and Co., No. 26, Down-street, Piccadilly, Agricultural Seedsmen, Agents for London; and from all the other Agents of the Company.

ALLSOPP'S PALE ALE in BOTTLE, as supplied to the CRYSTAL PALACE; also in Casks of 16 Gallons, recommended by Baron LIEBIG.
Address, MARKINGTON PARKER and Co., 54, Pall-mall, London.

TO NEWSPAPER PROPRIETORS.
THOMAS GURNEY, Junr., Stoke Maudville, Aylesbury, begs to subjoin his Charge for Corresponding with Proprietors of Newspapers.—2 s. d.
All kinds of News Leading Articles, per annum 31 10 0
Agricultural News and Leading Articles 10 10 0
Without Articles 5 5 0
Sporting News and ditto 10 10 0
Without Leading Articles 5 5 0
Local News 5 5 0
Leading Articles 5 5 0
Literary Reviews, &c. 4 0 0
T. G. will be happy to supply News Agents with The Field and Bell's Weekly Messenger.

BANK OF DEPOSIT,
NATIONAL ASSURANCE AND INVESTMENT ASSOCIATION.
No. 3, PALL MALL EAST, LONDON.
Established A.D. 1841.
Empowered by Special Act of Parliament.

PARTIES desirous of INVESTING MONEY are requested to examine the Plan of this Institution, by which a high rate of Interest may be obtained with perfect security.
The Interest is payable in January and July at the Head Office in London; and may also be received at the various Branches, or through Country Bankers, without delay or expense.
PETER MORRISON, Managing Director.
Prospectuses and Forms for opening accounts sent free on application.

HOW TO KEEP a HORSE for 1s. 14d. per day, bruise your Oats.—CHAFF CUTTERS, Out Bruisers, Stanger Feeding Machines, Mangles, at 50s.—Four Mills.—MARY WEDLAKE, 118, Fenchurch-street.—Book on Feeding, 1s.

COCHRANE'S PATENT FIXING GIRTH or PAD prevents the Saddle from shifting forward, however low or defective the Horse's shoulder may be.
Manufacturer, GEORGE BLAIR, 30, Brewer-street, Golden-square, London.

IMPORTANT to FAMILIES PUR-CHASING, who study elegance with economy. JAMES COOK'S THREE GUINIA FRENCH POLISHED MAHOGANY ARABIAN BED-STEAD, Bedding, Cabinet, Carpet, Looking-glass, and Upholstery Warehouse.—Broadway-house, 22 and 23, Queen's-buildings, Knightsbridge. Estimates given, and a list of prices sent post-free.

DO YOU WANT BEAUTIFUL HAIR,
WHISKERS, MOUSTACHES, &c.?
ALICE MELVILLE'S PALMAMILLA in all cases strengthens weak hair, prevents its falling off, checks greyness, produces a thick and luxuriant growth, dispels scurf and dandruff, and makes it clean, soft, curly, and brilliant in appearance. For baldness, from any cause, it is certain and effective;
and for the production of Whiskers, Moustaches, Eyebrows, &c., in three or four weeks, it can be fully depended upon.

Price 2s.; sent post free (anywhere) on receipt of 24 penny postage stamps, by Miss Melville, 25, Argyle-square, King's-cross, London.

"My whiskers are growing very thick,"—R.
Mede, Esq.

"It restored my hair, which I had lost in patches,"—W. Slur.

"It has quite checked the greyness,"—Miss Ellis.

"My moustache is greatly improved,"—Captain
Ross.

SOUND AND WHITE TEETH

Are not only indispensably requisite to a pleasing exterior in both sexes, but they are peculiarly appreciated through life as highly conducive to health and longevity. Among the various preparations offered for the purpose,

ROWLAND'S ODONTO, or PEARL DENTIFRICE, stands unrivalled in its capability of embellishing, purifying, and preserving the Teeth to the latest period of life. Prepared from Oriental Herbs with unusual care, transmitted to this country at great expense, this unique compound will be found to eradicate all tartar and concretions, and impart a pearl-like whiteness to the enamelled surface, remove spots of incipient decay, render the gums firm and red, fix the teeth firmly in their sockets, and, from its aromatic influence, impart sweetness and purity to the breath.

Price 2s. 9d. per Box.
CAUTION.—The words "ROWLAND'S
ODONTO" are on the Label, and "A. ROW-LAND and SONS, 20, Hatton-garden," engraved on the Government Stamp affixed on each box.
Sold by them and by Chemists and Perfumers.

KNOW THYSELF.—Persons desirous of knowing the gifts, defects, talents, tastes, affections, and other characteristics of themselves or any friends in whom they are interested, must send a specimen of the WRITING, stating sex and age (including thirteen penny postage stamps), to Miss GRAHAM, 3, New-road, Harnsey, Mid-dlessex, and they will receive a minute graphologi-cal delineation, written in a style peculiarly her own. Testimonial from W. R. "Having seen several of your portraits of character, and being much struck with the forcible truths contained in them, I should like your opinion of mine."—Miss H. S. "Your delineations are most faithful."—
Miss Grove. "Your letter gave great satisfaction."— Miss Rosa C. "Accept my sincere thanks for your advice. I was exceedingly doubtful of him."

FENDERS, STOVES, and FIRE
IRONS.—Buyers of the above are requested, before finally deciding, to visit WILLIAM S.
BURTON'S SHOW-ROOMS, 39, Oxford-street (corner of Newman-street), Nos. 1, 2, and 3, Newman-street, and 4 and 5, Perry's-place. They are the largest in the world, and contain such an assortment of FENDERS, STOVES, RANGES, FIRE-IRONS, and GENERAL IRONMONGERY, as cannot be approached elsewhere, either for variety, novelty, beauty of design, or exquisiteness of workmanship. Bright stoves, with bronzed ornaments and two sets of bars, £2. 14s. to £5. 10s.; ditto with ornate ornaments and two sets of bars, £5. 10s. to £12. 12s.; Bronzed Fenders complete, with standards, from 7s. to £3; Steel Fenders from £2. 15s. to £4; ditto, with rich ornate ornaments, from £2. 15s. to £7. 10s.; Fire irons, from 1s. 9d. the set to £1. 4s. Sylvester and all other Patent Stoves, with radiating hearth-plates. All which he is enabled to sell at these very reduced charges.
Firstly—From the frequency and extent of his purchases; and Secondly—From those purchases being made exclusively for cash.

THE PERFECT SUBSTITUTE for SILVER.—The REAL NICKEL SILVER, introduced twenty years ago by WILLIAM S.
BURTON, when PLATED by the patent process of Messrs. Elkington and Co., is beyond all comparison the very best article next to sterling silver that can be employed as such, either usefully or ornamentally, as by no possible test can it be distinguished from real silver.

	Fiddle Pattern.	Thread Pattern.	King's Pattern.
Tea Spoons, per dozen.	1s. 2d.	26s.	32s.
Dessert Forks	30s.	40s.	45s.
Dessert Spoons	30s.	42s.	48s.
Table Forks	40s.	50s.	61s.
Table Spoons	40s.	58s.	65s.

Tea and Coffee Sets, Waiters, Candlesticks, &c., at proportionate prices. All kinds of Re-plating done by the Patent Process.

	Fiddle Pattern.	Thread Pattern.	King's Pattern.
Table Spoons and Forks, full size, per dozen.	12s.	28s.	30s.
Dessert ditto and ditto.	11s.	21s.	25s.
Tea ditto	5s.	11s.	12s.

CUTLERY, WARRANTED.—The most varied assortment of TABLE CUT-LERY in the world, all warranted, is on SALE at WILLIAM S. BURTON'S, at prices that are remunerative only because of the largeness of the sales. 33-inch Ivory-handled table-knives, with high shoulders, 11s. per dozen; dessert knives, 10s.;
if to balance, 1s. per dozen extra; carvers, 4s.
4s. per pair; larger sizes, from 14s. 6d. to 25s. per dozen; extra fine ivory, 32s. if with silver ferrules, 37s. to 50s.; white bone table knives, 7s. 6d. per dozen; dessert knives, 5s. 6d.; carvers, 2s. 3d. per pair; black bone table knives, 7s. 1d. per dozen; dessert, 6s.; carvers, 2s. 6d.; black wood-handled table knives and forks, 6s. per dozen; table steels, from 1s. each. The largest stock in existence of plated dessert knives and forks, in cases and otherwise, and of the new plated fish carvers. Also a large assortment of Razors, Penknives, Scissors, &c., of the best quality.

WILLIAM S. BURTON has TEN LARGE SHOW-ROOMS (all communicating), exclusive of the shop, devoted solely to the show of GENERAL IRONMONGERY, including cutlery, metal silver, plated and japanned wares, iron and brass bedsteads, &c., so arranged and classified that purchasers may easily and at once make their selections.

Catalogues with engravings sent (per post) free.
The money returned for every article not approved of.

29, OXFORD-STREET (corner of Newman-street); Nos. 1, 2, and 3, NEWMAN-STREET; and 4 and 5, PERRY'S-PLACE.

BILLIARD TABLES.

MESSRS. THURSTON AND CO.,

MANUFACTURERS by appointment to her Majesty, 14, Catherine-street, Strand, London, caution their friends and the public against spurious imitations of their Tables, lately advertised by men professing to have left their Establishment. They beg to say that they have not parted with any of their workmen whose services were worth retaining.—N.B. 14, Catherine-street, Strand, is the only house where the THURSTON TABLE can be obtained. Messrs. Thurston and Co. are the patentees of the Improved vulcanised Cushions, which retain their elasticity in the coldest climate. Also Manufacturers of the Central Revolving Lamp, the best light ever constructed for Billiard Tables.

WHISTLER'S, 11, STRAND.

GUNS, RIFLES, AND PISTOLS

BY EVERY MAKER IN THE WORLD.

SPORTSMEN are invited to inspect

WHISTLER'S

SECOND-HAND STOCK.

They will find a Gun to suit their shooting, and easy to the pocket.

ANY ARTICLE TAKEN IN EXCHANGE.

WHISTLER, 11, STRAND,

OPPOSITE THE

GOLDEN CROSS HOTEL.

ALLEN'S ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE,

CONTAINING SIZE, PRICE, AND DESCRIPTION
OF UPWARDS OF 100 ARTICLES.

CONSISTING OF PORTMANTEAUS, TRAVELLING
BAGS, LADIES' PORTMANTEAUS, DESPATCH BOXES,
WRITING DESKS, DRESSING CASES, and other Travelling Requisites, forwarded on receipt of two stamps.

ALLEN'S Travelling Bag (patented) has the opening as large as the Bag itself, and therefore possesses an immense advantage over all others.

ALLEN'S Registered Despatch Box and Writing Desk, and their
New Quadruple Portmanteau (containing four compartments), are the best articles of the kind ever produced.

J. W. & T. ALLEN,

MANUFACTURERS OF PORTABLE BARRACK ROOM FURNITURE, AND

MILITARY OUTFITTERS (see separate Catalogue),

18 & 22, WEST STRAND.

WATER
POISONED

LEADEN
PIPES.

"The above engraving represents accurately a section of a lead pipe, which was employed for a short time in conveying water from a well on the grounds of Mr. DICK, of Bonchurch, Isle of Wight.
The original section of pipe is 84 in. long, 2 1/2 in. diameter, and 5-16 in. thick. A great part of the internal surface is corroded by the action of the water; but, as shown in the drawing, four deep excavations have been made, and another is shaded out of view by the manner in which the section of the pipe has been cut. The water has cut these deep pits almost through the pipe, and not only upon the portion which we have illustrated, but have formed similar channels throughout the entire length."— Expositor.

N.B.—The corrosive water of the Isle of Wight has no effect on Gutta Percha Tubing. See Testimonial below.

DURABILITY OF GUTTA PERCHA TUBING.

Many inquiries have been made as to the durability of Gutta Percha Tubing, the Gutta Percha
Company have pleasure in giving publicity to the following letter from Sir RAYMOND JARVIS, Ventnor, Isle of Wight.

(Second Testimonial).

March 10, 1872.

"In reply to your letter received this morning, respecting the Gutta Percha Tubing for pump service, I can state, with much satisfaction, it answers perfectly. Many builders and other persons I have lately examined it, and there is not the least apparent difference since the first laying down, now several years; and I am informed that it is to be adopted generally in the houses that are being erected here."

THE GUTTA PERCHA COMPANY, PATENTEES,

18, WHARF-ROAD, CITY-ROAD, LONDON.

CHARLES LENNY,

Coach and Harness Manufacturer,
20, NORTH END, CROYDON.

BEGS to call attention to his Broughams, Clarences, Barouches, with his registered noiseless wheel-plate, this shortening the distance between the wheels, and lessening the draught for the horse, allowing the wheels to lock quite under, and having high front wheels.

C. L. has constantly on sale Cab and Driving Phaetons, Stanhope and single Horse ditto, Pony Carriages, and Park Phaetons. He also solicits attention to his Newport Pique and other Carriages, either with panels or wickerwork sides, and to his Barnet Cart, in panel or wickerwork, any of access, and possessing all the advantages of the Malvern
Cart, but less expensive.

He has also a large stock of Croydon Basket Carriages, cheap and elegant, and in every variety of shape, either for sale or building to order, with or without hands, to suit either the Shetland Pony or the Horse.

C. L. would also invite an inspection of his registered Phaeton in basket-work, suitable either for one or a pair of ponies or horses.

Carriages of all kinds let on hire for long or short engagements.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS
PATENT.

MAJOR'S REMEDIES for the HORSE.
The best and most effectual ever discovered, superceding the "burning iron" and the torture of
"cautery."

MAJOR'S BRITISH REMEDY for the Cure of Kingbone, Spavin, Splints, &c. A single bottle sufficient to cure from four to six Spavins, price
2s. 1s.

MAJOR'S SINOVITIC LOTION (the Remedy,
No. 2), for Grogginess, Weak Joints, Sprains of the Back Sinews, Ruptures of the Sheaths of Tendons, Suspensory Ligaments, Shoulder Lameness, and Inflammation; also for the cure and prevention of breaking down, &c. In bottles, large size, 2s. 1s.;
small, 10s. 6d. each. The above invaluable remedies can now be forwarded to any part of the United Kingdom. Prepayment, by Check or Postoffice order, made payable to Joseph Major, Postoffice, Clarendon-road.

Letters addressed to Joseph Major, Horse Infirmary, British-yard, Cockspur-street.

Agent for Newmarket, Mr. Thomas Dunlop; for Scotland, Messrs. Gardner and Ainslie, Edinburgh; Mr. W. F. Wells, chemist, 52, Sackville-street, agent for Dublin; agent for Glasgow, Mr.
W. A. Preston, 16, Stockwell-street, and 41,
Adelphi-street.

HORSE INFIRMARY and SHORING

FORGES, 24, Park Lane, and at Tattersall's Yard (for many years conducted by the late A.
Henderson).

HENRY B. STEVENS, Veterinary Surgeon
(from Newmarket), informs his friends and the public that he has taken the above premises, and is now enabled to offer his services in the Cure of Curbs, Splints, Spavins, &c. (at his Infirmary), without blemishing, with which diseases his practical experience in Newmarket for twenty years has rendered him peculiarly conversant.

STEVEN'S "ON-CHAMP" (with Advice), supplied at the above address, in Boxes, with directions for use, 2s. 6d. each, or 3s. free by post.
Sold by Rogers, Newmarket, and all respectable Druggists.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER

TRUSS is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PAT-ENT LUTTER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a single truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d.; postage, 1s. Double ditto, 31s. 6d., 36s., and 41s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 6d. Post-office orders to be made payable to JAMES WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly ELASTIC and COMPRESSIBLE, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of WEAKNESS and SWELLING of the LEGS, VARICOSE VEINS, SPRAINS, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn up like an ordinary stocking. Price from 7s. 6d. to 16s. each. Postage, 6d.

MANUFACTURED, 224, Piccadilly, London.

FORD'S EUREKA
ING IS now ready, in 200 different patterns. Specimens, in various colours, sent post free on receipt of six stamps.

FORD'S COLOURED EU-REKA SHIRTS, six for 27s.

FORD'S WHITE EU-REKA, best quality, six for 40s.;
second quality, six for 31s.; if washed, ready for use, 2s.
extra.

CAUTION.—Ford's Eureka
Shirts are stamped, "28, FOULDER, LONDON," without which none are genuine.

Catalogues, with particulars, post free.

RICHARD FORD, 39, Foul-
try, London.

SPAVIN, SPLENT, CURB, RING-BONE, and THOROUGHPIN CURED.
without pain or lameness, or the horse requiring rest. The remedy to be had in Bottles, 10s. 6d., and 21s. each; also, a certain Cure for Cracked Heels, in Packets, 2s. 6d. each, forwarded on receipt of a Post-office order, payable at Deptford, to GEORGE TABERNACLE, Queen's-road, New-cross.

SARSAPARILLA and CHAMOMILE

RESTORATIVE PILLS, for Purifying the blood and Strengthening the Digestive Organs, are suited for either sex, and will prove a certain cure for Indigestion, loss of appetite, dimness of sight, fainting fits, wasting of the flesh, languor, skin diseases, rheumatic and nervous affections, and all impurities of the blood arising from a vitiated cause. By the diligent use of this purifying medicine the energies of the whole nervous system will be augmented, a more powerful healthy action of every faculty produced, feebleness and all the deplorable symptoms of disease will vanish, and strength and health be restored. They have also a specific action on the secretions and excretions, and assist nature to expel from the system all humours and impurities through the lungs, liver, kidneys, and skin—in power possessed by no other medicine.
They are also especially calculated to cure scrofula, mercurial diseases, scrofulous eruptions, gonorrhea, rheumatism, pains in the bones, ulcers, sores, or any long-standing chronic malady. They will speedily cure the many distressing diseases peculiar to women.

Prepared by W. A. FRENCH, or at the Laboratory, 39a, Tottenham, two doors west of Chancery-Lane. Price 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. per box. Either size sent free per post, on receipt of the price in cash or stamps.

DEAFNESS.

DEAFNESS.—Dr. MANFRED'S IM-PORTANT DISCOVERY.—The New Treatment for instantly restoring Hearing without operation, use of instruments, blistering, leeching, physicking, pumping, syringing, or the usual absurd treatment. One consultation is sufficient; a permanent cure is guaranteed to any sufferer of forty or fifty years duration.

This truly wonderful discovery is known and valued only by Dr. H. Manfred, who has made diseases of the ear his chief study both in hospital and private practice. The new treatment is applied by him daily on numbers of applicants with perfect success in every case, running persons to hear conversation with ease and delight, and almost instantly removing those noises in the head and ears. Thousands of letters from persons cured, many of which may be seen. Dr. Manfred, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons, Consulting Surgeon in Diseases of the Ear only, will receive patients daily, from ten until five, free of any charge, except in those cases where restoration of hearing is positively certain. Dr. Manfred, M.R.C.S., 72, Regent-street, London.

NOTICE! (Entrance, first floor in Air-street.)—
Just published, free by post for eight stamps, a Method for Self Cure, for country patients only.

DEAFNESS and NOISES in the HEAD.—Instruction for the Cure of Deafness, 2, Suffolk-place, Pall-mall, London. Instant and permanent restoration of hearing guaranteed, without the use of ear-trumpets, instruments, or causing one moment's inconvenience to the most nervous sufferer. Dr. HOGGON'S new and extraordinary discovery, by one consultation, enables deaf persons of either sex to hear immediately with perfect ease the lowest whisper, and magnetically removes all ringing in the ears. Hospital and private testimonials, and certificates from the most eminent physicians and surgeons in England, in whose presence deaf persons had been cured, and many hundreds of private patients cured, can be seen or referred to. Hours of consultation, eleven till four every day. FRANCIS

ROBERT HOGGON, Member of the London
Royal College of Surgeons, May 2, 1845; Licentiate of the Apothecaries' Company, April 30, 1846.

And Published,
SELF-CURE OF DEAFNESS, for COUNTRY
PATIENTS; a Stop to Empiricism, Quackery, and Exorbitant Fees. Sent, on receipt of seven stamps, free. Examination free.
2, Suffolk-place, Pall-mall.

HEALTH RESTORED.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS.—
An Extraordinary Cure of Dropsy, after suffering for eighteen months.

Copy of a Letter from Mr. G. Briggs, Chemist, Goole, dated February 15th, 1853.

TO PROFESSOR HOLLOWAY.

Sir, I have much pleasure in informing you of a most surprising cure of dropsy, recently effected by your valuable medicines. Captain Jackson, of this place, was afflicted with dropsy for upwards of eighteen months, to such an extent that it caused his body and limbs to be much swollen, and water oozed as it were from his skin, so that a daily change of apparel became necessary. Notwithstanding the various remedies tried, and the different medical men consulted, all was of no avail, until he commenced using your Pills, by which,
and a strict attention to the printed directions, he was effectually cured, and his health perfectly re-established. If you deem this worthy of publicity, you are at liberty to use it.

I am, Sir, yours respectfully,
(Signed) G. BRIGGS.

Sold at the Establishment of Professor HOLLOWAY, 211, Strand (near Temple-bar), London, and by all respectable Druggists and Dealers in Medicines throughout the civilized world, at the following prices.—1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., 11s., 22s., and 33s. each box.

N.B.—Directions for the guidance of patients in every disorder are affixed to each box.

There is a considerable saving by taking the larger sizes.

Printed by BERNARD LIXTON, of No. 28, Robert-street, the Parish of Shoreditch, in the County of Middlesex, at the Print-office of TAYLOR and GRANTING, Nos 4 and 5, Gray's-Inn-Petitors; and published by him at No 468, Strand, opposite Adam-street, Adelphi, in the said County, - NOVEMBER 18,

THE FIELD SUPPLEMENT

Vol. IV.—No. 99.]

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1854.

[GRATIS.]

THE FIELD OF WAR.

COMPULSORY PRE-PAYMENT OF LETTERS AND NEWSPAPERS FOR THE BRITISH FORCES IN TURKEY AND THE BLACK SEA.

General Post-office, November, 1854.

Letters addressed to officers serving in the British army or navy in Turkey or the Black Sea, the writers of which have neglected to pay in advance the British and French rates of postage chargeable for their conveyance in the closed mails despatched from London on the 3rd, 9th, 13th, 19th, 23rd, and 29th, (or 30th) of every month, have hitherto been forwarded by the French mail packets with the ordinary unpaid correspondence for Constantinople.

Much difficulty, however, having been experienced in the delivery of those letters, and in the collection of the postage to which they are liable, no letters addressed to the army or navy in Turkey or the Black Sea will hereafter be sent from this country unless the postage is paid in advance.

Letters posted unpaid will be opened and returned to the writers.

The following are the combined British and French rates of postage chargeable upon this correspondence:—For a letter addressed to an officer in the British army or navy, or to a non-commissioned officer or private soldier or seaman in Turkey or the Black Sea, weighing under $\frac{1}{2}$ ounce, 3d.; weighing $\frac{1}{2}$ ounce, and under 1 ounce, 6d.; exceeding $\frac{1}{2}$ ounce, and not exceeding 1 ounce, 1s.; exceeding 1 ounce, and not exceeding 2 ounces, 1s. 2d.; exceeding 2 ounces, and not exceeding 3 ounces, 1s. 4d.; exceeding 3 ounces, and under $3\frac{1}{2}$ ounces, 1s. 6d.; exceeding $3\frac{1}{2}$ ounces, and not exceeding 4 ounces, 2s. 4d.; and so on, adding 2d. British for each additional ounce, and 10d. French postage for every $3\frac{1}{2}$ ounces.

The existing regulations which have been already notified to the public require that postage, at the rate of 2d. for each paper, should be paid in advance upon newspapers addressed to the army or navy in Turkey or the Black Sea; but, as many newspapers so addressed continue to be posted unpaid, particular attention is called to the circumstance that, in all cases where the requisite amount of postage is not prepaid, the newspapers, instead of being sent forward in the closed mails, via Marseilles, are detained in this country until an opportunity offers of despatching them by a ship of war or other vessel in the service of her Majesty.

THE SIEGE OF SEBASTOPOL.

The following official account of the proceedings on the 17th and 18th appeared in an Extraordinary Gazette on Saturday afternoon, Nov. 11.

War Department, 11.55 a.m., Nov. 11, 1854.

His Grace the Duke of Newcastle has this day received a despatch, of which the following is a copy, addressed to his Grace by General the Lord Raglan, G.C.B.

[This despatch was lost in its passage through France, and was received at the above hour by his Grace, to whom it was transmitted by his Excellency the Lord Cowley, G.C.B.]

Before Sebastopol, Oct. 18.

My Lord Duke,—It was arranged between General Canrobert and myself that the batteries of the two armies should open immediately after daylight on the morning of the 17th, and we invited Admiral Dundas and Admiral Hamelin to attack the enemy's works at the mouth of the harbour with the combined fleets, as nearly simultaneously as circumstances might permit.

Accordingly, upon a signal being given from the centre of the French lines, the batteries of the two armies commenced their fire about a quarter before seven yesterday morning.

On this occasion we employed about sixty guns of different calibre, the lightest being 24-pounders.

It may here be proper to observe that the character of the position which the enemy occupy on the south side of Sebastopol is not that of a fortress, but rather of an army in an entrenched camp on very strong ground, where an apparently unlimited number of heavy guns, amply provided with gunners and ammunition, are mounted.

The guns having opened as above stated, a continuous and well-directed fire was carried on from the works of the two armies until about ten o'clock a.m., when, unfortunately, a magazine in the midst of the French batteries exploded, and occasioned considerable damage to the works, and I fear many casualties, and almost paralysed the efforts of the French artillery for the day.

The British batteries, however, manned by sailors from the fleet, under the command of Captain Lushington and Captain Peel, and by the Royal Artillery, under the superintendence of Lieutenant-Colonel Gambier, kept up their fire with unremitting energy throughout the day, to my own and the general satisfaction, as well as to the admiration of the French army, who were witnesses of their gallant and persevering exertions, materially injuring the enemy's works, and silencing the heavy guns on the top of the loopholed tower to which I alluded in my despatch of the 13th instant, and many of the guns at its base, and causing an extensive explosion in the rear of a strong redoubt in our immediate front; the enemy, notwithstanding, answered to the last from a number of guns along their more extended line.

The fire was resumed this morning at daylight by the British sailors and artillery, and responded to, though in a somewhat less degree, by the Russians; but the French troops, being occupied in the repair of their batteries, and in the formation of others, have not contributed to the renewal of the attack except from a work on their extreme left; they expect, however, to be able to do so to-morrow morning.

I beg to lay before your Grace a return of the loss sustained by the Royal Navy, and the army under my command, between the 13th and 17th instant, and to this I am deeply concerned to add that the Colonel the Hon. Francis Houl, commanding the 3rd Battalion Grenadier Guards, an excellent officer, whose death in the trenches this morning has just been reported to me.

The English, French, and Turkish fleets, moved towards the mouth of the harbour about noon, and kept up a heavy fire upon the enemy's forts for several hours.

I am not fully acquainted with the details of the attack, or its result, but I understand that the Rear-Admiral Sir Edmund Lyons, with the Agamemnon and Sanspareil, assisted occasionally by the London, Queen, and Albion, gallantly approached to within 600 yards of Fort Constantine, the great work at the northern entrance, where he maintained himself till late in the afternoon, and succeeded in exploding a magazine, and causing considerable injury to the face of the fort.

Since I wrote to your Grace on the 28th, six battalions of Turkish infantry and 300 Turkish artillery have been added to the force in front of Balaklava.

These troops have been sent from Constantinople, and placed under my command by the Government of the Porte, and I feel greatly indebted to her Majesty's Ambassador, Viscount Stratford de Redcliffe, for the ability and energy with which he brought under the notice of the Sultan the importance I attached to an immediate reinforcement of the imperial troops.

I have, &c.,

His Grace the Duke of Newcastle, &c.

RAGLAN.

Return of Killed and Wounded in the Forces under the Command of General Lord Raglan, G.C.B., from 13th to 17th October, 1854, inclusive.

Artillery—2 rank and file killed; 1 sergeant, 25 rank and file wounded.
3rd Battalion Grenadier Guards—1 officer, Captain Rowley, killed; 10 rank and file wounded.

42nd Regiment—1 sergeant, 1 rank and file wounded.
55th Regiment—1 officer, Ensign Twyden, slightly wounded.

47th Regiment—4 rank and file wounded.
49th Regiment—1 rank and file wounded.

1st Regiment of Foot—1 rank and file killed; 6 rank and file wounded.

38th Regiment—1 rank and file killed; 1 sergeant, 10 rank and file wounded.

50th Regiment—1 officer, Lieutenant-Colonel Waddy (slightly), 1 sergeant, 4 rank and file wounded.

44th Regiment—3 rank and file killed; 1 officer, Lieutenant Wood (slightly), 1 sergeant, 4 rank and file wounded.

20th Regiment—2 rank and file killed; 5 rank and file wounded.
21st Regiment—2 rank and file wounded.

51th Regiment—3 rank and file wounded.
68th Regiment—1 officer, Assistant-Surgeon O'Leary, 3 rank and file killed, 3 rank and file wounded.

1st Battalion Rifle Brigade—1 rank and file killed; 1 sergeant, 3 rank and file wounded.
7th Regiment—1 rank and file wounded.

23rd Regiment—6 rank and file wounded.
33rd Regiment—1 sergeant, 4 rank and file wounded.

19th Regiment—1 sergeant, 1 drummer, 6 rank and file wounded.
77th Regiment—2 rank and file wounded.

88th Regiment—1 sergeant, 5 rank and file killed; 1 sergeant, 14 rank and file wounded.

2nd Battalion Rifle Brigade—3 rank and file killed; 1 drummer, 7 rank and file wounded.
Total—3 officers, 1 sergeant, 21 rank and file killed; 3 officers, 9 sergeants, 2 drummers, 121 rank and file wounded.

J. B. BUCKNALL ESTCOURT, Adjutant-General.

War-office, Nov. 11, 1854.

The Right Hon. the Secretary at War has received from his Grace the Duke of Newcastle the following list of casualties amongst the non-commissioned officers and privates in the forces under the command of General the Lord Raglan, G.C.B., from the 13th to the 17th October, 1854, inclusive:—

Nominal Return of Casualties in the Forces under the Command of General Lord Raglan, G.C.B., from 13th to 17th October, 1854, inclusive.

3rd BATTALION GRENADIER GUARDS.

Wounded.—Privates George East, James Fordham, Henry Gilbert, William Bridgman, Thomas Wheatstone, John Newton, John Steel, Elijah Smith, William Taylor, Benjamin Tibbitt.

13th REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded.—Sergeant William Hawkin; Private Patrick Salmon.

47th REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded.—Privates Patrick Hanley, Frederick Chittack, John Donohoe.

49th REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Killed.—Private William Hanley.

1st REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Killed.—Private William Webb.

Wounded.—Privates Martin Kenny, John Ray, William Goose, James Mulready, Thomas Jones.

47th REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded.—Patrick Michael Calligan.

38th REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Killed.—Private Michael Sweeney.

Wounded.—Sergeant John Smith; Privates Donald Elliott, William McCullough, Henry Humphreys, William Warcham, William McQuade, George Savery, Daniel Finn.

44th REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Killed.—Corporal James Pither; Privates Thomas Kennedy and William Warr.

Wounded.—Sergeant James Holland; Privates Nelson Dunlavy, Joseph Shambrook, and Henry Huels.

50th REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded.—Privates Patrick Walsh, Michael Doherty, John Dignan, Edward Doyle, Samuel Darr, John Gray, Thomas Wilson.

20th REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Killed.—Privates James Wesley and Thomas Wyatt.
Wounded.—Privates John Langley, James Riton, and G. Young.

21st REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded.—Privates Robert Deegan and John Kay.

57th REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded.—Privates Michael Murphy and Robert McFarlane.

68th REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Killed.—Privates James Hore, William Gwyer, Patrick Carroll.
Wounded.—Privates James Wilson, Patrick Holden, George Brown.

1st BATTALION RIFLE BRIGADE.

Killed.—Private John Mead.

Wounded.—Colour-Sergeant James Forrell; Privates Joseph Lowe, Robert Gouffellon, James Werten.

7th REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded.—Private James Henry.

23rd REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded.—Corporal James Dawson; Privates William Corfield, David Davies, James Murphy, George Moulton, James Odlary.

33rd REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded.—Sergeant John Woodcock; Privates Patrick Threlston, Patrick Hradley, William Ward, Patrick Doherty, William Greenwood.

10th REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded.—Colour-Sergeant Patrick Campion; Corporals John Austin and Thomas Cruikshank; Drummer Henry Haulton; Privates James Maher, John Corbett, Thomas Dixon, Michael Loughlin.

77th REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded.—Privates Edward Gullford and Gilbert Monaghan.

8th REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Killed.—Sergeant John Matthewsman; Privates Robert McDonald, Peter Leonard, Michael Hynes, Michael Perryman, and Daniel Griffin.

Wounded.—Sergeant Michael McDonough; Privates Timothy Doherty, Thomas Foley, Morris Savage, Patrick Leonard, Patrick Burns, Morris Ferris, Edward English, Patrick Cullen, John Bush, Daniel Monarty, Patrick Morrissey, James Kenny, and John Daly.

2nd BATTALION RIFLE BRIGADE.

Killed.—Corporal W. Campbell, Privates John Bishop and John Carlow.

Wounded.—Bugler Daniel McCarthy; Privates William Regan, George Cunn, Alfred Green, Joseph Croy, James Herry, Charles Taylor, Thomas Minfold.

The following is also the Nominal Return of the Casualties in the Royal Artillery since the 13th inst.

Head Quarters before Sebastopol, Oct. 18, 1854.

Killed.—Pocock, acting bombardier; name not reported, gunner and driver.

Wounded.—Henry Webber, acting bombardier, slightly; John Urr, gunner and driver, slightly; Robert Garland, sergeant, severely; J. Walker, corporal, severely; E. Solomon, acting bombardier, severely; J. Wilson, gunner and driver, severely; R. Bake, acting bombardier, severely; J. Carson, gunner and driver, severely; J. Hughes, gunner and driver, severely; J. Orron, gunner and driver, severely; J. McKaffery, gunner and driver, severely; J. Welsh, gunner and driver, severely; R. Mallett, gunner and driver, slightly; D. McCawley, gunner and driver, severely; C. Hawkins, gunner and driver, severely; Samuel Nicolls, gunner and driver, dangerously; John Crofts, gunner and driver, severely; James Murphy, gunner and driver, slightly; James McFadden, bombardier, slightly; T. Haggott, gunner and driver, slightly; Patrick Devlin, gunner and driver, severely; J. Gummie, gunner and driver, slightly.

Four other men were wounded; their names not yet reported.

J. B. BUCKNALL ESTCOURT, Adjutant-General.

THE ATTACK ON BALAKLAVA.

(From the London Gazette Extraordinary of Sunday, Nov. 12.)

War Department, Nov. 12, 4 o'clock p.m.

His Grace the Duke of Newcastle has this day received two despatches, with enclosures, of which the following are copies, addressed to his Grace by General the Lord Raglan, G.C.B.

Before Sebastopol, Oct. 28.

My Lord Duke,—I have the honour to acquaint your Grace that the enemy attacked the position in front of Balaklava at an early hour on the morning of the 25th inst.

The low range of heights that runs across the plain at the bottom of which the town is placed was protected by four small redoubts hastily constructed. Three of these had guns in them; and on a higher hill, in front of the village of Camara, in advance of our right flank, was established a work of somewhat more importance.

These several redoubts were garrisoned by Turkish troops, no other force being at my disposal for their occupation.

The 93rd Highlanders was the only British regiment in the plain, with the exception of a part of a battalion of detachments composed of weakly men, and a battery of artillery belonging to the Third Division; and on the heights behind our right were placed the Marines, obligingly landed from the fleet by Vice-Admiral Dundas. All these, including the Turkish troops, were under the immediate orders of Major-General Sir Colin Campbell, whom I had taken from the First Division with the 93rd.

As soon as I was apprised of this movement of the enemy, I felt compelled to withdraw from before Sebastopol the First and Fourth Divisions, commanded by Lieutenant-Generals his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge and the Hon. Sir George Cathcart, and bring them down into the plain; and General Canrobert subsequently reinforced these troops with the First Division of French infantry and the Chasseurs d'Afrique.

The enemy commenced their operations by attacking the work on our side of the village of Camara, and after very little resistance carried it.

They likewise got possession of the three others in contiguity to it, being opposed only in one, and that but for a very short space of time.

The furthest of the three they did not retain, but the immediate abandonment of the others enabled them to take possession of the guns in them, amounting in the whole to seven. Three in the three lesser forts were spiked by the one English artilleryman who was in each.

The Russian cavalry at once advanced, supported by artillery, in very great strength. One portion of them assailed the front and right flank of the 93rd, and were instantly driven back by the vigorous and steady fire of that distinguished regiment, under Lieutenant-Colonel Ainslie.

The other and larger mass turned towards her Majesty's heavy cavalry, and afforded Brigadier-General Scarlett, under the guidance of Lieutenant-General the Earl of Lucan, the opportunity of inflicting upon them a most signal defeat. The ground was very unfavourable for the attack of our Dragoons, but no obstacle was sufficient to check their advance, and they charged into the Russian column, which soon sought safety in flight, although far superior in numbers.

The charge of this brigade was one of the most successful I ever witnessed, was never for a moment doubtful, and is in the highest degree creditable to Brigadier-General Scarlett and the officers and men engaged in it.

As the enemy withdrew from the ground which they had momentarily occupied, I directed the cavalry, supported by the Fourth Division, under Lieutenant-General Sir George Cathcart, to move forward, and take advantage of any opportunity to regain the heights; and, not having been able to accomplish this immediately, and it appearing that an attempt was making to remove the captured guns, the Earl of Lucan was desired to advance rapidly, follow the enemy in their retreat, and try to prevent them from effecting their objects.

In the meanwhile the Russians had time to reform on their own ground, with artillery in front and upon their flanks.

From some misconception of the instruction to advance, the Lieutenant-General considered that he was bound to attack at all hazards, and he accordingly ordered Major-General the Earl of Cardigan to move forward with the Light Brigade.

This order was obeyed in the most spirited and gallant manner. Lord Cardigan charged with the utmost vigour, attacked a battery which was firing upon the advancing squadrons, and, having passed beyond it, engaged the Russian cavalry in its rear; but there his troops were assailed by artillery and infantry as well as cavalry, and necessarily retired, after having committed much havoc upon the enemy.

They effected this movement without haste or confusion; but the loss they have sustained has, I deeply lament, been very severe in officers, men, and horses, only counterbalanced by the brilliancy of the attack and the gallantry, order, and discipline which distinguished it, forming a striking contrast to the conduct of the enemy's cavalry which had previously been engaged with the heavy brigade.

The Chasseurs d'Afrique advanced on our left and gallantly charged a Russian battery, which checked its fire for a time, and thus rendered the British cavalry an essential service.

I have the honour to enclose copies of Sir Colin Campbell's and the Earl of Lucan's reports.

I beg to draw your Grace's attention to the terms in which Sir Colin Campbell speaks of Lieutenant-Colonel Ainslie, of the 93rd, and Captain Barker, of the Royal Artillery; and also to the praise bestowed by the Earl of Lucan on Major-General the Earl of Cardigan and Brigadier-General Scarlett, which they most fully deserve.

The Earl of Lucan not having sent me the names of the other officers who distinguished themselves, I propose to forward them by the next opportunity.

The enemy made no further movement in advance, and at the close of the day the brigade of Guards of the First Division and the Fourth Division returned to their original encampment, as did the French troops, with the exception of one brigade of the First Division, which General Canrobert was so good as to leave in support of Sir Colin Campbell.

The remaining regiments of the Highland Brigade also remained in the valley.

The Fourth Division had advanced close to the heights, and Sir George Cathcart caused one of the redoubts to be occupied by the Turks, affording them his support, and he availed himself of the opportunity to assist with his rifle-men in silencing two of the enemy's guns.

The means of defending the extensive position which had been occupied by the Turkish troops in the morning having proved wholly inadequate, I deemed it necessary, in concurrence with General Canrobert, to withdraw from the lower range of heights, and to concentrate our force, which will be increased by a considerable body of seamen, to be landed from the ships under the authority of Admiral Dundas, immediately in front of the narrow valley leading into Balaklava, and upon the precipitous heights on our right, thus affording a narrower line of defence. I have, &c.,

RAGLAN.

His Grace the Duke of Newcastle, &c.

Enclosures.

Balaklava, Oct. 27.

MY LORD.—I have the honour to report that the cavalry division under my command was seriously engaged with the enemy on the 25th inst., during the greater part of which day it was under a heavy fire; that it made a most triumphant charge against a very superior number of the enemy's cavalry, and an attack upon batteries which, for daring and gallantry, could not be exceeded. The loss, however, in officers, men, and horses has been most severe.

From half-past six in the morning, when the Horse Artillery first opened fire, till the enemy had possessed itself of all the different forts, the cavalry, constantly changing their positions, continued giving all the support they could to the Turkish troops, though much exposed to the heavy guns and riflemen, when they took post on the left of the second line of redoubts by an order from your lordship.

The Heavy Brigade had soon to return to the support of the troops defending Balaklava, and was fortunate enough in being at hand when a large force of Russian cavalry was descending the hill. I immediately ordered Brigadier-General Scarlett to attack, with the Scots Greys and Eniskillen Dragoons, and had his attack supported in second line by the 5th Dragoon Guards, and by a flank attack of the 4th Dragoon Guards.

Under every disadvantage of ground, these eight small squadrons succeeded in defeating and dispersing a body of cavalry estimated at three times their number and more.

The Heavy Brigade having now joined the Light Brigade, the division took up a position with a view of supporting an attack upon the heights, when, being instructed to make a rapid advance to our front, to prevent the enemy carrying the guns lost by the Turkish troops in the morning, I ordered the Light Brigade to advance in two lines, and supported them with the Heavy Brigade. This attack of the Light Cavalry was very brilliant and daring; exposed to a fire from heavy batteries on their front and two flanks, they advanced unchecked until they reached the batteries of the enemy, and cleared them of their gunners, and only retired when they found themselves engaged with a very superior force of cavalry in the rear. Major-General the Earl of Cardigan led this attack in the most gallant and intrepid manner; and his Lordship has expressed himself to me as admiring in the highest degree the courage and zeal of every officer, non-commissioned officer, and man who assisted.

The Heavy Brigade advanced to the support of the attack under a very galling fire from the batteries and infantry in a redoubt, and acted with most perfect steadiness and in a manner to deserve all praise.

The losses, my Lord, it grieves me to state, have been very great indeed, and, I fear, will be much felt by your Lordship.

I cannot too strongly recommend to your Lordship the two General-officers commanding the brigades, all the officers in command of regiments, as also the divisional and brigade staffs; indeed, the conduct of every individual, of every rank, I feel to be deserving of my entire praise, and, I hope, of your Lordship's approbation.

The conduct of the Royal Horse Artillery troop, first under the command of Captain Mande, and, after that officer was severely wounded, of Captain Shakespear, was most meritorious and praiseworthy. I received from those officers every possible assistance during the time they respectively commanded.

I have, &c.,

LUCAN.

Lieutenant-General Commanding
Cavalry Division.

His Excellency the Commander of the Forces, &c.

Camp Battery, No. 4, Balaklava, Oct. 27.

SIR.—I have the honour to inform you that on the morning of the 25th inst., about seven o'clock, the Russian force which has been, as I already reported, for some time among the hills on our right front, debouched into the open ground in front of the redoubts Nos. 1, 2, and 3, which were occupied by Turkish infantry and artillery, and were armed with seven 12-pounders (iron). The enemy's force consisted of eighteen or nineteen battalions of infantry, from thirty to forty guns, and a large body of cavalry. The attack was made against No. 1 redoubt by a cloud of skirmishers, supported by eight battalions of infantry and sixteen guns. The Turkish troops in No. 1 persisted as long as they could, and then retired, and they suffered considerable loss in their retreat. This attack was followed by the successive abandonment of Nos. 2, 3, and 4 redoubts by the Turks, as well as of the other posts held by them in our front. The guns, however, in Nos. 2, 3, and 4 were spiked. The garrisons of these redoubts retired, and some of them formed on the right, and some on the left flank of the 93rd Highlanders, which was posted in front of No. 4 battery and the village of Kadikoi. When the enemy had taken possession of these redoubts, their artillery advanced with a large mass of cavalry, and their guns ranged to the 93rd Highlanders, which, with 100 invalids under Lieutenant-Colonel Daveney in support, occupied very insufficiently, from the smallness of their numbers, the slightly-rising ground in front of No. 4 battery. As I found that round-shot and shell began to cause some casualties among the 93rd Highlanders and the Turkish battalions on their right and left flank I made them retire a few paces behind the crest of the hill. During this period our batteries on the hills, manned by the Royal Marine Artillery and the Royal Marines, made most excellent practice on the enemy's cavalry, which came over the hill ground in front. One body of them, amounting to about 400 men, turned to their left, separating themselves from those who attacked Lord Lucan's Division, and charged the 93rd Highlanders, who immediately advanced to the crest of the hill and opened their fire, which forced the Russian cavalry to give way and turn to their left, after which they made an attempt to turn the right flank of the 93rd, having observed the flight of the Turks who were placed there, upon which the Grenadiers of the 93rd, under Captain Ross, were wheeled up to their right and fired on the enemy, which manœuvre completely discomfited them.

During the rest of the day the troops under my command received no further molestation from the Russians. I beg to call Lord Raglan's attention to the gallantry and eagerness of the 93rd Highlanders under Lieutenant-Colonel Ainslie, of which probably his Lordship was an eye-witness; as well as the admirable conduct of Captain Barker and the officers of the field battery under his orders, who made most excellent practice against the Russian cavalry and artillery while within range.

I have, &c.,

COLIN CAMPBELL,

Major-General.

Brigadier-General Estcourt, Adjutant-General.

THE ATTACK ON THE 26TH.

Second Division, Heights of the Tchernaya, Oct. 27.

MY LORD.—Yesterday the enemy attacked this division with several columns of infantry, supported by artillery. Their cavalry did not come to the front. Their masses, covered by large bodies of skirmishers advanced with much apparent confidence. The division immediately formed line in advance of our camp, the left under Major-General Pennefather, the right under Brigadier-General Adams. Lieutenant-Colonel Fitzmayer and the Captains of batteries (Turner and Yates) promptly posted their guns and opened fire upon the enemy.

Immediately on the cannonade being heard, the Duke of Cambridge brought up to our support the Brigade of Guards under Major-General Bentinck, with a battery under Lieutenant-Colonel Dacres. His Royal Highness took post in advance of our right to secure that flank, and rendered me throughout the most effective and important assistance. General Bosquet, with similar promptitude, and from a greater distance, approached our position with five French battalions. Sir G. Cathcart hastened to us with a regiment of Rifles, and Sir G. Brown pushed forward two guns in co-operation by our left.

The enemy came on at first rapidly, assisted by their guns on the Mound-hill. Our pickets, then chiefly of the 49th and 30th Regiments, resisted them with very remarkable determination and firmness. Lieutenant Connolly, of the 49th, greatly distinguished himself, as did Captain Bayly, of the 30th, and Captain Atcherley, all of whom, I regret to say, were severely wounded. Sergeant Sullivan also displayed at this point great bravery.

In the meantime our eighteen guns in position, including those of the First Division, were served with the utmost energy. In half an hour they forced the enemy's artillery to abandon the field. Our batteries were then directed with equal accuracy and vigour upon the enemy's columns, which (exposed also to the close fire of our advanced infantry) soon fell into complete disorder and flight. They were then literally chased by the 30th and 95th Regiments over the ridges, and down towards the head of the bay. So eager was the pursuit that it was with difficulty Major-General Pennefather eventually effected the recall of our men. These regiments and the pickets were led gallantly by Major Manleverer, Major Chaupion, Major Eiman and Major Hume. The Russians were similarly pursued further towards our right by four companies of the 41st, led gallantly by Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. P. Herbert, A.Q.M.G. The 47th also contributed. The 55th were held in reserve.

Above eighty prisoners fell into our hands, and about 130 of the enemy's dead were left within or near our position. It is computed that their total loss could scarcely be less than 600.

Guns, I am sorry to say, has been above eighty, of whom twelve officers are killed, and five wounded. I am happy to say hopes are entertained that Lieutenant Connolly will recover, but his wound is dangerous.

I shall have the honour of transmitting to your lordship a list of officers, non-commissioned officers, and privates whose conduct attracted special notice. That of the pickets excited general admiration.

To Major-General Pennefather and Brigadier-General Adams I was, as usual, greatly indebted. To Lieutenant-Colonel Dacres, Lieutenant-Colonel Fitzmayer, Captains Turner, Yates, Woodham, and Hemlin, and the whole of the Royal Artillery, we are under the greatest obligation.

Lieutenant-Colonel Herbert, A.Q.M.G., rendered the division, as he always does, highly distinguished and energetic services. Lieutenant-Colonel Wilbraham, A.A.G., while serving most actively, I regret to say, had a very severe fall from his horse. I beg leave also to recommend to your Lordship's favourable consideration the excellent services of Captains Glazbrook and Thompson, of the Quartermaster-General's department, the Brigade-Majors Captains Armstrong and Thackwell, my personal staff, Captains Allix, Gubbins, and the Hon. W. Boyle.—I have, &c.,

DE LACY EVANS, Lieut.-General.

Right Hon. Lord Raglan, G.C.B., &c.

THE PROGRESS OF THE SIEGE.

(No. 86.)

Before Sebastopol, Oct. 28.

MY LORD DUKE.—I have nothing particular to report to your Grace respecting the operations of the siege since I wrote to you on the 23rd inst. The fire has been somewhat less constant, and our casualties have been fewer, though I regret to say that Captain Childers, a very promising officer of the Royal Artillery, was killed on the evening of the 23rd, and I have just heard that Major Dalton, of the 49th, of whom Lieutenant-General Sir De Lacy Evans entertained a very high opinion, was killed in the trenches last night.

The enemy moved out of Sebastopol on the 26th with a large force of infantry, cavalry, and artillery—amounting, it is said, to 6,000 or 7,000 men—and attacked the left of the Second Division, commanded by Lieutenant-General Sir De Lacy Evans, who speedily and energetically repulsed them, assisted by one of the batteries of the First Division and some guns of the Light Division, and supported by the brigade of Guards, and by several regiments of the Fourth Division, and in rear by the French Division commanded by General Bosquet, who was most eager in his desire to give him every aid.

I have the honour to transmit a copy of Sir De Lacy Evans's report, which I am sure your Grace will read with the highest satisfaction, and I beg to recommend the officers whom he particularly mentions to your protection.

Captain Bayley, of the 30th, Captain Atcherley, of the same regiment, and Lieutenant Connolly of the 49th, all of whom are severely wounded, appear to have greatly distinguished themselves.

I cannot speak in too high terms of the manner in which Lieutenant-General Sir De Lacy Evans met this very serious attack. I had not the good fortune to witness it myself, being in front of Balaklava at the time it commenced, and having only reached his position as the affair ceased, but I am certain I speak the sentiments of all who witnessed the operation in saying that nothing could have been better managed, and that the greatest credit is due to the Lieutenant-General, whose services and conduct I have had to bring under your Grace's notice.

I enclose the return of the losses the army has sustained since the 22nd.—I have, &c.,

RAGLAN.

His Grace the Duke of Newcastle, &c.

Return of Casualties from the 22nd to the 26th of October, both days inclusive.

CAVALRY.

Staff.—2 officers killed; 4 officers wounded.
4th Light Dragoons.—2 officers, 5 sergeants, 3 drummers, 24 rank and file, 60 horses, killed; 2 officers, 1 sergeant, 21 rank and file, wounded.
8th Hussars.—2 officers, 3 sergeants, 23 rank and file, 93 horses, killed; 2 officers, 2 sergeants, 1 drummer, 14 rank and file, wounded.
11th Hussars.—2 sergeants, 30 rank and file, 72 horses, killed; 3 officers, 3 sergeants, 20 rank and file, wounded.
13th Light Dragoons.—3 officers, 3 sergeants, 1 drummer, 20 rank and file, 70 horses, killed; 2 sergeants, 12 rank and file, wounded.
17th Lancers.—3 officers, 1 sergeant, 32 rank and file, 90 horses, killed; 4 officers, 1 sergeant, 2 drummers, 31 rank and file, wounded.
4th Dragoon Guards.—1 rank and file, 1 horse, killed; 2 sergeants, 3 rank and file, wounded.
1st Royal Dragoons.—2 rank and file, 10 horses, killed; 4 officers, 1 sergeant, 1 drummer, 5 rank and file, wounded.
2nd North British Dragoons.—2 rank and file, 14 horses, killed; 4 officers, 5 sergeants, 48 rank file, wounded.
6th Dragoons.—2 rank and file, 2 horses, killed; 3 sergeants, 10 rank and file, wounded.
5th Dragoon Guards.—2 rank and file, 10 horses, killed; 2 officers, 0 rank and file, wounded.
Royal Artillery.—1 officer, 2 sergeants, 4 rank and file, killed; 2 officers, 1 sergeant, 23 rank and file, wounded.
Royal Engineers and Sappers and Miners.—3 rank and file wounded.
Total.—12 officers, 16 sergeants, 4 drummers, 142 rank and file, 281 horses, killed; 27 officers, 21 sergeants, 4 drummers, 199 rank and file, wounded.

J. B. BUCKNALL ESTCOURT, Adjutant-General.

Return of Casualties among Officers from the 22nd to the 26th of October, 1854, both days inclusive.

October 27.

Staff.—Lieutenant-General the Earl of Lucan, wounded slightly; Brigadier-General the Hon. J. Y. Scarlett, wounded slightly; Captain the Hon. W. Charteris, killed; Captain George Lockwood, killed or missing; Lieutenant H. F. Masse, wounded slightly; Lieutenant A. L. Elliot, wounded slightly.

6th Dragoon Guards.—Lieutenant H. F. Swinfen, wounded slightly; Cornet the Hon. G. Neville, wounded severely.

1st Royal Dragoons.—Lieutenant-Colonel John Yorke, wounded severely; Captain W. de Elmsall, wounded severely; Captain George Campbell, wounded severely; Cornet W. W. Hartopp, wounded severely.

2nd Dragoons.—Lieutenant-Colonel H. D. Griffith, wounded slightly; Captain G. C. Clarke, wounded severely; Cornet Lenox Prendergast, wounded severely; Cornet H. E. Handley, wounded slightly.

4th Light Dragoons.—Major J. T. D. Halkett, killed; Lieutenant H. A. Sparke, killed; Captain G. J. Brown, wounded severely; Captain Thomas Hutton, wounded severely.

8th Hussars.—Lieutenant J. C. Viscount Fitzgibbon, killed (doubtful); Cornet G. Clowes, killed (doubtful); Lieutenant D. Chatterback, wounded slightly; Lieutenant and Adjutant Edward Seager, wounded slightly.

11th Hussars.—Captain E. A. Cook, wounded slightly; Lieutenant H. Trevelyan, wounded slightly; Cornet G. P. Houghton, wounded severely.

13th Light Dragoons.—Captain J. A. Oldham, killed; Captain T. H. Goad, missing; Cornet H. Montgomery, missing.

17th Lancers.—Captain J. P. Winter, killed or missing; Lieutenant J. H. Thompson, killed or missing; Cornet and Adjutant J. Chadwick, killed or missing; Captain William Morris, wounded severely; Captain Robert White, wounded severely; Captain A. F. C. Webb, wounded severely; Lieutenant Sir William Gordon, wounded severely.

Artillery.—Captain S. Childers, killed; Captain E. Moubrey, wounded slightly; Lieutenant J. E. Hope, wounded slightly.

1st Regiment.—Lieutenant J. M. Brown, wounded slightly.

30th Regiment.—Captain F. T. Atterley, wounded slightly; Captain P. Bayley, wounded slightly.

41st Regiment.—Lieutenant H. C. Herriott, wounded severely.

49th Regiment.—Lieutenant J. A. Conolly, wounded dangerously; Ensign P. Cahill, wounded severely.

50th Regiment.—Brevet-Major Hon. J. P. Maxwell, wounded slightly.

57th Regiment.—Lieutenant H. J. Buller, wounded severely.

88th Regiment.—Lieutenant and Adjutant A. D. Maule, wounded severely.

Aide-de-Camp to Brigadier-General Airey—Capt. L. E. Nolan, killed. J. B. BUCKNALL ESTCOURT, Adjutant-General.

Return of Casualties from the 22nd of October to the 26th October, both days inclusive.

Staff.—1 officer, killed.

3rd Battalion Grenadier Guards.—1 rank and file, wounded.

1st Regiment of Foot.—1 officer, wounded; 4 rank and file, wounded.

7th Regiment.—10 rank and file, wounded.

19th Regiment.—4 rank and file, wounded.

20th Regiment.—1 rank and file, wounded.

23rd Regiment.—1 rank and file, wounded.

28th Regiment.—1 rank and file, wounded.

30th Regiment.—2 officers, wounded; 1 sergeant, wounded; 6 rank and file, killed; 22 rank and file, wounded.

41st Regiment.—1 officer, wounded; 1 rank and file, killed; 9 rank and file, wounded.

44th Regiment.—1 rank and file, wounded.

47th Regiment.—2 rank and file, killed; 7 rank and file, wounded.

49th Regiment.—2 officers, wounded; 1 sergeant, wounded; 1 drummer, wounded; 1 rank and file, killed; 17 rank and file, wounded.

50th Regiment.—1 officer, wounded; 1 rank and file, wounded.

57th Regiment.—1 officer, wounded.

63rd Regiment.—1 rank and file, wounded.

77th Regiment.—2 rank and file, killed.

88th Regiment.—1 officer, wounded; 1 rank and file, killed; 6 rank and file, wounded.

95th Regiment.—1 sergeant, wounded; 1 rank and file, killed; 8 rank and file, wounded.

1st Battalion Rifle Brigade.—1 rank and file, wounded.

2nd Battalion Rifle Brigade.—5 rank and file, wounded.

79th Regiment.—1 rank and file, wounded.

Total.—1 officer, killed; 9 officers, wounded; 3 sergeants, wounded; 1 drummer, wounded; 14 rank and file, killed; 101 rank and file, wounded.

J. B. BUCKNALL ESTCOURT, Adjutant-General.

A Return of the Killed and Wounded in the NAVAL BRIGADE on the 23rd of October, 1854.

Wounded.—William Revell, A.B., Trafalgar, slightly; Robert Holy-hoche, A.B., Rodney, slightly; Charles Aberdeen, A.B., Queen, slightly; George Wilkinson, Coxswain's Pinnace, Vengeance, slightly; Henry Colvin, A.B., Rodney, slightly.—Total, wounded, 5.

STEPHEN LUSHINGTON, Captain Commanding Naval Brigade To the Military Secretary to his Excellency Lord Raglan, Commander-in-Chief of the Army.

A Return of the Killed and Wounded in the NAVAL BRIGADE on the 24th of October, 1854.

Wounded.—Trevor Dunning, Diamond, slightly; James Bevan, ordinary, Queen, slightly; James Simmoos, captain's crew, Queen, mortally—died three hours afterwards; William Bailey, A.B., Rodney, severely; Richard Lawrence, ordinary, Queen, slightly; Lieutenant Steel, Royal Marine Artillery, Britannia, slightly.—Total died from wounds, 1; total wounded, 5.

STEPHEN LUSHINGTON, Captain Commanding Naval Brigade. The Military Secretary to his Excellency Lord Raglan, Commander-in-Chief of the Army.

A Return of the Killed and Wounded in the NAVAL BRIGADE on the 26th of October, 1854.

Killed.—James Coleman, Coxswain's barge, Trafalgar.

Wounded.—J. Sept Day, A.B., Trafalgar, severely; Thomas Knott, ordinary, Trafalgar slightly.—Total killed, 1; total wounded, 2.

STEPHEN LUSHINGTON, Captain Commanding Naval Brigade. The Military Secretary to his Excellency Lord Raglan, Commander-in-Chief of the Army.

THE CAVALRY CHARGE IN THE CRIMEA.

OCT. 25.—At daylight, says a letter from the Himalaya, heard very sharp and heavy firing towards Sebastopol, and also near Balaklava, increasing towards nine o'clock, and from that time incessant. Could see occasionally shells bursting over the high hills by which the bay is surrounded; so as soon as possible I went on shore, and found that a very heavy cavalry action, with artillery, was going on, the Russians having driven the Turks completely out of three batteries which had been erected and armed with our guns, and the Turks placed to man them. However, they got panic-stricken and fled, and down came the Cossacks and Russian cavalry (Imperial Guards) to attack ours, and a most bloody fight ensued, our Light Cavalry—viz., 4th Dragoons, 8th and 11th Hussars, and 17th Lancers—being dreadfully cut up, having charged a battery of guns numbering thirty. They were supported by the Greys, who have again distinguished themselves beyond praise, suffering, however, severely in the affair. They charged right through the Russian cavalry, who numbered about five to one; got surrounded by them, made another charge, and cut themselves out by sheer fighting. Colonel Griffith got shot in his head, Brevet-Major Clarke a sabre cut at the back of his neck, Cornet Prendergast shot right through the foot, Cornet Handley stabbed in the side and arm, being at one time surrounded by four Cossacks, three of whom he shot with his revolver, and the fourth was cut down by his sergeant. I saw this young gallant follow a few hours after, and he was then getting ready to rejoin his regiment from the temporary hospital, not finding his two wounds of sufficient consequence to keep him from his post. The Colonel did the same, after getting his head dressed. Major Clarke did not, I believe, leave the field. I also saw Lieutenant Elliott, 5th Dragoon Guards, riding into Balaklava, his face so covered with blood and his hand bound up that he could not recognise him. The gallant Captain White, too, of the 17th Lancers, was lying on his back when we came up to him, with a round shot right through his leg, with Sir W. Gordon, dreadfully cut about the head, both receiving, however, every attention and care from Surgeon Kendall, who was formerly at Southampton with Mr. Ward, surgeon of that town. In this garden and temporary hospital could be seen men with every description of wound, from the sabre cut to the grape and canister shot. One poor fellow's leg was taken off while we were there, nor can one easily forget the shocking scenes, the result of such a day's fighting. The surgeons (Brush and his assistant, Chapple) of the Greys were working away with their sleeves turned up, arms bloody, faces the same, looking more like butchers than surgeons, so hard had they worked all day. As to the Russians, with the aid of my glass, a good Dolland, I could distinctly see the colour of their uniform (grey), and their standard, with an eagle on the top of it; I could also plainly see the dead, both men and horses, on the scene of the late encounter. I observed one horse stand fully an hour by the side of his dead rider, while others were wildly galloping about, not knowing which way to turn their riderless course. Lieutenant Maxse, aide-de-camp to Lord Cardigan, was severely shot in the foot and ankle, and was carried on board his Lordship's yacht the Dryad. He was close to the unfortunate Captain Nolan, of the 15th Hussars, who was shot in the breast while cheering and gallantly charging the enemy, and who, after getting off his horse, made two or three staggers forward, and fell dead.

The charge of the Light Brigade of cavalry on the batteries of the enemy, some thirty guns strong, though brilliantly and bravely done, was most disastrous in its consequences to that gallant and devoted band, for it seems that out of 700 who went into the fray only 130 answered their roll when it was over; and it appears to have been done under a misapprehension of an order from the commander-in-chief. Lord Cardigan pointed out to his superior officer the immense difficulty of charging a battery, flanked by another, into a sort of cul de sac, with the hills lined with rifles and guns; but, receiving the positive order to charge, at it he and his splendid brigade went, and as they approached within a few hundred yards of the big battery a shell burst close to him, and struck Captain Nolan in the chest, which caused the poor fellow to scream awfully, and his horse turned and galloped to the rear, when his gallant but impetuous rider was found lying dead. The Light Brigade still kept sweeping on till they were right in front of them, when a 32-pounder went off within two feet of Lord Cardigan's horse, quite lifting him off the ground, but he got in among them, and was, where he always will be when it comes to the point, in the first rank. It seems they rode right through the guns and turned, after killing the men who were serving them. His Lordship's extra aide-de-camp, it is supposed, was wounded and taken prisoner, for he has not since been heard of. Mr. Wombwell, of the 17th Lancers, had a most extraordinary escape, showing a monstrous deal of pluck. His horse was—it is said two were—shot under him, and he was taken prisoner, but while being marched off he saw an opportunity, mounted a Russian's horse, and galloped back, rejoining some of his brigade who had reformed, and charging again without sword or pistol. Mr. Cooke, of the 11th, also had a regular run for his life of a mile and a half, pursued by the Russian cavalry, to avoid whom he ran under range of the guns of one of their batteries, and finally escaped. Major Clarke, of the Greys, in addition to a bad cut in the neck, had his horse's tail almost cut off by a sabre cut; and I hear the gallant Adjutant Miller, an unusually powerful man, did extraordinary execution when he got to close quarters with them. Lord Cardigan was attacked by two Cossacks, who with their lances gave him several pricks, and rather staggered him in his saddle; but his lordship being well mounted, and a good cross-country rider, and, moreover, as cool as brave men ever are in real danger, parried their thrusts, and escaped with the aforesaid lance-pricks in his leg.

In the retreat of the Light Cavalry they dashed past a regiment of Russian Lancers, who were just about to form in their way, and who, as our men galloped past, poked at them with their lances. At this time they were exposed to the fire of one battery only, for the French General (Boisquet), acting in a truly brotherly spirit, though he disapproved of the manoeuvre, and, indeed, could not understand it, had ordered the Chasseurs d'Afrique against one of the flanking batteries, which they silenced for the time being. This the gallant French did at an enormous sacrifice of their own numbers. The service has sustained a most severe loss by the death of Captain L. E. Nolan, mentioned above. He was the celebrated writer on cavalry strategy, and was slain in this affair of the 25th of October, while acting on the staff of Brigadier Airey, Quartermaster-General. Captain Nolan for many years belonged to the 15th (King's) Hussars, in which gallant regiment he served in India, and returned previous to his regiment, having been ordered for home service. The Hon. Walter Charteris, of Lord Lucan's staff, was son to the Earl of Wemyss, consequently brother of Lord Elcho, and nephew of Lordis Lucan and Cardigan, and brother-in-law of the Earl of Warwick. Lieutenant Charteris was in his 26th year. He was an officer of the 92nd Highlanders, and was latterly on the staff of his uncle, the Earl of Lucan, an extra aide-de-camp. Major Halkett, of the 4th Light Dragoons, also slain, was nephew of Sir Colin Halkett, Governor of Chelsea Royal Hospital. Lieutenant Morris, of the 17th Lancers, who was so severely wounded, saw distinguished service in India under Lord Hardinge and Gough, and holds (if alive) two medals and a clasp. Viscount Fitzgibbon, of the 8th (Royal Irish) Hussars, son of the Earl of Clare, is stated to be among the killed.

The following is said to be from an officer of distinction:—

"Camp, near Balaklava, Oct. 27.

"You will be glad to hear I am alive after our tremendous affair of the 25th.

"We were ordered to charge some Russian batteries and cavalry, and the light brigade went down, the 17th and 13th leading in the line; the 11th were ordered to hang a little back as a support, and the 4th and 8th followed, in a sort of third line.

"We all knew that the thing was desperate before we started, and it was even worse than we thought.

"In our front, about a mile and a half off, were several lines of Russian cavalry and nine guns; to get at which we had to pass along a wide valley, with the ground a little falling, and in itself favourable enough for a charge of cavalry; but the sloping hills on each side gave the enemy an opportunity (which they used) of placing guns on both our flanks as we advanced; and not only guns, but infantry, with Minié rifles.

"However, there was no hesitation; down our fellows went at the gallop, through a fee in front and on both flanks, which emptied our saddles and knocked over our horses by scores. I do not think that one man flinched in the whole brigade, though every one allows that so hot a fire was hardly ever seen. We went right on, cut down the gunners at their guns (the Russians worked the guns till we were within ten yards of them); went on still, broke a line of cavalry in rear of the guns, and drove it back on the third line. But here our bolt was shot; the Russians formed four deep, and our thin and broken ranks and blown horses could not attempt to break through them, particularly as the Russian cavalry had got round our flanks, and were prepared to charge our rear (with fresh men). We broke back through them, however, and then had to run the gauntlet through the cross-fire of artillery and Minié rifles back to our own lines, with their cavalry hanging on our flank. The heavy brigade, which had made a good charge of its own in the morning, covered our coming out of action and lost some men from the artillery.

"There is no concealing the thing—the Light Brigade was greatly damaged, and for nothing; for, though we killed the gunners and the horses of nine 12-pounders, we could not bring them away.

"Nolan (who brought the order) is dead. The first shell that burst hit him in the breast. He gave a loud cry, his horse turned, trotted back (with him still in the saddle) between the first and second squadrons of the 13th, and carried him so for some way, when he fell dead. He was hit in the heart.

"In the two leading regiments, including Lord Cardigan (who led in person) and his staff, we had nineteen officers. Only three came out of action untouched, both man and horse; all the others were killed, wounded, or prisoners, or had their horses hurt. The 17th had no field officers, but five captains. They came out of action commanded by the junior captain, I believe. Morris is severely wounded; Winter is supposed to be killed; Webb is shot through the thigh; White through the leg; Thompson is supposed to be killed, &c. One of Lord Cardigan's aides-de-camp is wounded—Maxse; the other, Lockwood, is missing, and supposed to be killed. We have lost about 355 horses (exclusive of officer's horses), out of a little more than 600 which we (the light brigade) had in the field. Besides that, a great number are wounded with gunshot wounds, and about twenty-five have already been destroyed, and more will. . . . It was a bitter moment after we broke through the line of cavalry in rear of their guns when I looked round and saw there was no support beyond our own brigade, which, loading in the smoke, had diverged and scarcely filled the ground. We went on, however, and hoped that their own men flying would break the enemy's line and drive them into the river. When I saw them form four deep instead, I knew it was 'all up,' and called out to the men to rally. At this moment a solitary squadron of the 8th came up in good order. This saved the remnant of us; for we rallied to them, and they, wheeling about, charged a line which the Russians had formed in our rear. You never saw men behave so well as our men did. As we could not hold our ground, all our dead and badly wounded were left behind, and we know not who are dead or who are made prisoners. All this makes me miserable, even to write; but it is the naked truth. Our loss in men is not so great as that in horses; for men whose horses were shot in the advance got back on foot. I hear from a man who dined with Lord Raglan to-day that they do us justice at head-quarters, and say that our attack was an unheard-of feat of arms, and Lord Raglan says that the moral effect has been wonderful. The Russian prisoners, since taken at Sebastopol, say that the Russians were petrified at the audacity of the attack, and the energy that could, after such a fire, break through their lines. These prisoners were taken in a very successful affair by Sir Do-lay Evans, who is a first-rate division leader."

The writer of a private letter says:—"I saw two orders or medals which had been taken from the coat of one of the dead, one of the date of 1832, the other 1846. On leaving the field of battle I turned one of the wounded Russians over on his back. He had a fearful sabre cut in his side. The poor devil looked anything but good tempered at me; they are all stern, determined-looking fellows, and if these are a sample of the army, they are certainly not clothed in the wretched manner that the majority of the people in England are led to believe. Their clothes are very good—quite equal to our army, and their arms also; I speak of their cavalry. I did not see any of their infantry among the killed or wounded, as they were not engaged near the spot. A great number of our cavalry distinguished themselves individually; among them Lord Cardigan, who had four of the enemy on him at one time, and was nearly unhorsed more than once, but I believe he is not wounded, though his clothes are a good deal cut about. One of the 4th Dragoons came walking by me with his horse's head dreadfully cut. He told me that it was one of the enemy's horses, and that he had lost his own front under him."

(FROM A DRAGOON OF THE HEAVY BRIGADE.)

Camp, Balaklava, near Sebastopol, Oct. 27.

You say you hear nothing of our regiment; well, I will tell you something about it. In the first place, in coming from Varna, across the Black Sea, we were overtaken by a most awful storm and gale of wind. Our vessel, the Wilson Kennedy, went on her beam ends, and the stabling gave way, all the horses were thrown over to one side of the ship, and, in one horrid night, 100 of them kicked and worried each other to death; and there we were for two nights and days fastened down with 100 dead and dying horses; we only saved eleven out of our ship, and on the third day we throw 101 overboard. We were eight days, all but a wreck, beating about the Black Sea, and had to go back to Constantinople after all, at which place they put us on board a steamer, and landed us in the Crimea; and, now, indeed, our work has begun. We are protecting the rear, while the besiegers are attacking the town. The whole of the cavalry are encamped on an open plain surrounded by hills and mountains, and we have indeed plenty cut out for us. Over these hills there are thousands of Cossacks and a large Russian army who are trying to get up to Sebastopol, and it is our duty to keep them back; they are constantly coming down upon us, and we have had some severe struggles, but they have not the "pluck" of Englishmen, for, though we are far inferior in numbers, we always beat them back. We

And now occurred the melancholy catastrophe which fills us with sorrow. It appears that the Quartermaster-General, Brigadier Airey, thinking that the Light Cavalry had not gone far enough in front when the enemy's horse had fled, gave an order in writing to Captain Nolan, 15th Hussars, to take to Lord Lucan, directing his Lordship "to advance his cavalry nearer to the enemy. A braver soldier than Captain Nolan the army did not possess. He was known to all his arm of the service for his entire devotion to his profession, and his name must be familiar to all who take interest in our cavalry for his excellent work published a year ago on our drill and system of remount and breaking horses. He entertained the most exalted opinions respecting the capabilities of the English horse soldier. Properly led, the British hussar and dragoon could in his mind break squares, take batteries, ride over columns of infantry, and pierce any other cavalry in the world, as if they were made of straw. He thought they had not had the opportunity of doing all that was in their power, and that they had missed even such chances as they had offered to them,—that, in fact, they were in some measure disgraced. A matchless rider, and a first-rate swordsman, he held in contempt, I am afraid, even grape and canister. He rode off with his orders to Lord Lucan. He is now dead and gone. God forbid I should cast a shade on the brightness of his honour, but I am bound to state what I am told occurred when he reached his Lordship. I should premise that as the Russian cavalry retired, their infantry fell back towards the head of the valley, leaving men in three of the redoubts they had taken, and abandoning the fourth. They had also placed some guns on the heights over their position, on the left of the gorge. Their cavalry joined the reserves, and drew up in six solid divisions, in an oblique line, across the entrance to the gorge. Six battalions of infantry were placed behind them, and about thirty guns were drawn up along their line, while masses of infantry were also collected on the hills behind the redoubts on our right. Our cavalry had moved up to the ridge across the valley, on our left, as the ground was broken in front, and had halted in the order I have already mentioned. When Lord Lucan received the order from Captain Nolan and had read it, he asked, we are told, "Where are we to advance to?" Captain Nolan pointed with his finger to the line of the Russians, and said, "There are the enemy, and there are the guns, Sir, before them; it is your duty to take them," or words to that effect, according to the statements made since his death. Lord Lucan, with reluctance, gave the order to Lord Cardigan to advance upon the guns, conceiving his orders compelled him to do so. The noble Earl, though he did not shrink, also saw the fearful odds against him. Don Quixote in his tilt against the windmill was not near so rash and reckless as the gallant fellows who prepared without a thought to rush on almost certain death. It is a maxim of Döcker, that "cavalry never act without a support," that "infantry should be close at hand when cavalry carry guns, as the effect is only instantaneous," and that it is necessary to have on the flank of a line of cavalry some squadrons in column, the attack on the flank being most dangerous. The only support our Light Cavalry had was the reserve of Heavy Cavalry at a great distance behind them, the infantry and guns being far in the rear. There were no squadrons in column at all, and there was a plain to charge over, before the enemy's guns were reached, of a mile and a half in length. At 11.10 our Light Cavalry Brigade rushed to the front. They numbered as follows, as well as I can ascertain:—

	Men.
4th Light Dragoons	118
8th Irish Hussars	101
11th Prince Albert's Hussars	110
13th Light Dragoons	130
17th Lancers	145
Total	607 sabres.

The whole brigade scarcely made one effective regiment, according to the numbers of continental armies; and yet it was all we could spare. As they passed towards the front, the Russians opened on them from the guns in the redoubt on the right, with volleys of musketry and rifles. They swept proudly past, glittering in the morning sun in all the pride and splendour of war. We could scarcely believe the evidence of our senses! Surely that handful of men are not going to charge an army in position? Alas! it was but too true—their desperate valour knew no bounds, and far indeed was it removed from its so-called better part—discretion. They advanced in two lines, quickening their pace as they closed towards the enemy. A more fearful spectacle was never witnessed than by those who, without the power to aid, beheld their heroic countrymen rushing to the arms of death. At the distance of 1,200 yards the whole line of the enemy belched forth, from thirty iron mouths, a flood of smoke and flame, through which hissed the deadly balls. The flight was marked by instant gaps in our ranks, by dead men and horses, by steeds flying wounded or riderless across the plain. The first line is broken, it is joined by the second, they never check their speed an instant; with diminished ranks, thinned by those 30 guns, which the Russians had laid with the most deadly accuracy, with a halo of flashing steel above their heads, and with a cheer which was many a noble fellow's death-cry, they flew into the smoke of the batteries, but ere they were lost from view the plain was strewn with their bodies and with the carcasses of horses. They were exposed to an oblique fire from the batteries on the hills on both sides, as well as to a direct fire of musketry. Through the clouds of smoke we could see their sabres flashing as they rode up to the guns and dashed between them, cutting down the gunners as they stood. The blaze of their steel, as an officer standing near me said, was "like the turn of a shoal of mackerel." We saw them riding through the guns, as I have said, to our delight we saw them returning, after breaking through a column of Russian infantry, and scattering them like chaff, when the flank fire of the battery on the hill swept them down, scattered and broken as they were. Wounded men and dismounted troopers flying towards us told us the sad tale—demigods could not have done what they had failed to do. At the very moment when they were about to retreat an enormous mass of Lancers was hurled on the flank. Colonel Shewell, of the 8th Hussars, saw the danger, and rode his few men straight at them, cutting his way through with fearful loss. The other regiments turned and engaged in a desperate encounter. With courage too great almost for credence, they were breaking their way through the columns which enveloped them, when there took place an act of atrocity without parallel in the modern warfare of civilised nations. The Russian gunners, when the storm of cavalry passed, returned to their guns. They saw their own cavalry mingled with the troopers who had just ridden over them, and, to the eternal disgrace of the Russian name, the miscreants poured a murderous volley of grape and canister on the mass of struggling men and horses, mingling friend and foe in one common ruin. It was as much as our Heavy Cavalry Brigade could do to cover the retreat of the miserable remnants of that band of heroes as they returned to the place they had so lately quitted in all the pride of life. At 11.35 not a British soldier, except the dead and dying, was left in front of these bloody Muscovite guns. Our loss, as far as could be ascertained, in killed, wounded, and missing at two o'clock to-day, was as follows:—

	Went into Action Strong.	Returned from Action.	Loss.
4th Light Dragoons...	118	39	79
8th Hussars	104	38	66
11th Hussars	110	25	85
13th Light Dragoons...	130	61	69
17th Lancers	145	35	110
	607	198	409

It is not certain that all these were killed, wounded, or missing; many may still come in, and about eighty wounded have already returned. Captain Nolan was killed by the first shot fired, as he rode in advance of the Hussars, cheering them on. Lord Lucan was slightly wounded. Lord

Cardigan received a lance thrust through his clothes. Major Hackett, of the 4th Light Dragoons, was killed. Lord Fitzgibbon, of the 8th Hussars, was desperately wounded, and has since, I fear, died. Cornet Houghton, of the 11th Hussars, is killed. Captains Good and Oldham and Cornet Montgomery, of the 13th Light Dragoons, are killed. Captain Charteris, 92nd Foot, aide-de-camp to Lord Lucan, is killed. Captain Morris, who was in command of the 17th Lancers, and whose reputation as a gallant officer and good swordsman is known to the army, has received several dreadful wounds, and has been carried on board ship. The other wounded officers are—Captain Maxse, aide-de-camp, slightly; Captain Hutton, 4th Light Dragoons; Lieutenant Sparke, 4th Light Dragoons; Captain Cook, 11th Hussars; Lieutenant Trevelyan, 11th Hussars. Captain Lockwood, of the Cavalry Staff, is missing. Mr. Womblewell, of the 17th, had a narrow escape. He was dragged off his horse by the cap and taken prisoner by some Cossacks. A Russian officer addressed him and told him not to be afraid, for that he would be well taken care of, though ceci gens la were rather rough in their manners. However, they were saved the trouble of guarding him, for in the last charge he made his escape and got back to his lines.

DEFENCE OF THE TOWN OF EUPATORIA.

The town of Eupatoria, situated at the northern extremity of Kalanitia Bay, has of late become a place of great importance to the allied fleet, in consequence of the supplies of cattle, which have been sent from it in great abundance. The town, which was wholly unprotected, has been placed under the command of Captain Brock, R.N., who for some time past has been busily engaged in throwing up breastworks for the defence of the Tartar population who inhabit it, and whose countless herds feed upon the steppe that surrounds it. As the inhabitants have shown a decided predilection for English rule, and the supplies drawn from their flocks made the retaining of the town a matter of the greatest importance, a force of marines, consisting of 400 English, 200 French, and 150 Turks, have been landed and placed under Captain Brock's command. This force has been subsequently augmented by the presence in the bay of her Majesty's ships Leander, Firebrand, and Megara, and one French and two Turkish line-of-battle ships, which have been detached from the allied fleet. Rumours had been rife for some time past of a large force of the imperial cavalry having appeared in the neighbourhood, and these were confirmed on the afternoon of the 11th of October by the appearance on the steppe of large bodies of horse, who threatened the town on the land side. A requisition for reinforcements was immediately sent by the governor to Captain King, commanding her Majesty's ship Leander, by whose orders First-Lieutenant Hamilton of that ship landed in command of 100 seamen and marines and one field-piece, and accompanied by Third-Lieutenant Colin Campbell, the Rev. J. Stuart Robson, chaplain, Assistant-Surgeon Blake, Messrs. Mitchell and Bryne, mates; and Lord Edward Cecil and Messrs. Dupuis, Buckle, and Lake, midshipmen. A party of forty men landed from her Majesty's steamer Megara, under the charge of Mr. Irvine, the mate, and also placed under Lieutenant Hamilton's command. On the following morning the field-piece was placed in a commanding position at the back of the town, where it adjoins the steppe, a small redoubt was thrown up, and a party of blue-jackets stationed in it. In the course of the forenoon Captain Brock, accompanied by Captain King and one of the marine officers and the field-piece, made a reconnaissance on the steppe, when a body of cavalry, about 600 in number, suddenly appeared, and advanced within 500 yards. They then opened their ranks and showed four guns, which opened fire with shot and shell, some of which fell within the town. The Leander's field-piece returned the fire, and a shell from it burst among the enemy's ranks, killing and wounding fifteen. Being, however, unsupported by small arms, Captain Brock ordered the party to retreat to the town, which they did, having first taken the gun to pieces and spiked it. The alarm was now given, and the whole of the blue-jackets and marines belonging to the Leander and Megara, and headed by Lieutenants Hamilton and Campbell and the Rev. J. Stuart Robson and Mr. Irvine, immediately got under arms, and advanced to the steppe in double quick time to support the field-piece. On arriving at the scene of action, they discovered that the enemy had retired, and that the seaman, with Captain King, had remounted and unspiked their gun, which was then escorted back to its position. The whole of the men belonging to the Leander and Megara remained at this redoubt during the day, and were quartered at night in a house adjoining. Towards midnight one of the marines was attacked with cholera in its most malignant form, and died, after great suffering, in four hours. At three a.m. on the morning of the 13th Lord Edward Cecil, the midshipman on watch with the field-piece, observing a body of the enemy's cavalry advancing towards the redoubt by a road which led to it from the steppe, immediately opened fire upon them, and the officers, seamen, and marines, rushing out from their quarters, lined the redoubt and barricades on its right.

A brisk fire was now commenced and sustained for some time. The flashes of the muskets were incessant, and the bullets whistled in every direction, while the appearance of the shells from the gun, as they described their curve through the air, was extremely beautiful. The enemy soon retreated, finding that the little force in the redoubt was on the alert, and without any disposition to yield it. At 10 a.m. the same morning, the remains of the poor marine who had died of cholera found an honourable grave, the service being read by the chaplain, Mr. Robson. The same day the Naval Brigade was strengthened by the arrival of Lieutenant Pym, of her Majesty's ship Firebrand, with a party of thirty-five men, another field-piece, and a rocket tube. A fresh redoubt was constructed in the course of the day for their reception, and the first one was strengthened by having its ditch widened and deepened, and the breastwork made more substantial. On the 15th the enemy advanced again in force, burning the villages and carrying off corn and cattle in every direction on the north side of the town. The Firebrand and Arrow gun-boat was therefore dispatched along the coast, and fired several shells, which caused them to disperse in great confusion, and with considerable loss. The Leander on the following evening, dispersed another body of 300 cavalry, who advanced almost to the southern entrance of the town, with the intention of cutting off the herds of cattle which had been driven in from the steppe for safety. Lieutenant Hood, of her Majesty's ship Arethusa, who had been sent from the fleet with some rocket tubes, had also a slight engagement on the morning of the 19th, when the enemy, taking advantage of a thick fog, pushed forward a body of cavalry towards the windmills outside the town, in which this officer had stationed himself with a party of blue jackets. The Russians were driven back, but not until they had killed and wounded several of our Tartar allies. This kind of skirmishing occurs every day, and, as the videttes of the enemy are within three miles, and their numbers are reported to amount to 3,000 or 4,000, they may attack the town at any moment, and great vigilance on the part of its defenders is called for, and not in vain. The defences of the town are now in a very respectable condition; a deep ditch, with a strong breastwork, has been cut across the level ground, in front of the northern and southern entrances, and guns have been planted in advantageous positions. At the back of the town several strong redoubts have been erected and armed with field-pieces and rockets, and a large proportion of the force stationed in the immediate neighbourhood. The streets which debouch upon the steppe have been closed by strong barricades, and the general feeling of the garrison is that they can now bid defiance to any number of cavalry who may venture an attempt to force an entrance, and they have not the slightest objection to their making the attempt. If a heavy column of infantry were to support the cavalry in an attack, the work of the garrison might be warner, but the Russian infantry have enough on their hands just now at Sebastopol, and, even should this occur, Eupatoria would not fall into their hands without a severe struggle.

FRENCH OFFICIAL DESPATCHES.

The French Minister has received the following from General Canrobert:—

"Camp before Sebastopol, Oct. 27.

"M. LE MARÉCHAL.—We are continuing the construction of fresh batteries, destined to batter the eastern front of the bastion which we are attacking. They are placed on the bare rock, and it is only by the explosion of petards and by means of sand-bags and other laborious expedients that we make our way. Still we shall in a short time be able to multiply our fire against the defences, in requiring which as fast as they are destroyed the enemy labours with remarkable obstinacy.

"The siege will evidently form an epoch among the most laborious operations of the kind.

"The town has suffered much from our fire, and we know that the loss of the defenders has been enormous.

"The English protect Balaklava, where they disembark their munitions, with a body of marines, a battalion of infantry, and some Turks.

"On the morning of the 25th, at break of day, some hills, 2,500 metres distant from the port, defended by some very imperfect redoubts, each manned by about 150 Turks, were carried by a very superior Russian force, which occupied them, having driven out the Turks.

"As soon as information of this affair reached Lord Raglan and myself we proceeded to the heights which border the valley of Balaklava, and form the limits of our position.

"The enemy then occupied the hills I have mentioned, covering in masses the woody heights which bound the valley towards the Tcheruaya, and displaying a force estimated at 20,000 men, besides those which were hidden from our view by the ravines and thickets.

"It was evidently his intention to entice us into deserting our excellent position, and to make us descend towards him into the plain. I contented myself with uniting, at the request of Lord Raglan, my cavalry to the English horse, which occupied a position on the plain before Balaklava, and which had already executed a most brilliant charge against the enemy's cavalry.

"Besides this, and while Lord Raglan established two divisions of infantry before the port, I caused all the men that I could spare from my first division to descend to the foot of the front slopes of our position.

"Things were in this state, and the day already far spent, when the English Light Cavalry, 700 strong, led away by too much ardour, charged vigorously the whole mass of the Russian army.

"This impetuous charge, executed under a cross-fire of musketry and artillery, produced at first great confusion among the enemy's ranks, but this troop, hurried away too far from us, suffered considerable loss. After having sabred the gunners of two batteries it was forced to return, weakened by the loss of 150 men.

"During this time my brigade of Chasseurs d'Afrique, which was in the plain on the left of the English cavalry, was eager to get to its assistance, and did so by a bold manoeuvre, which was made spoken of, and which consisted in attacking on the left a battery of guns and some battalions of infantry, which it forced to retreat, and thus stopped a murderous fire which had been kept up on the English. In this affair we lost about twenty men killed and wounded, two of whom were officers. The loss on the enemy's side was considerable, and he suffered our Chasseurs to effect their retreat in good order and without molestation.

"The night supervened to put an end to the combat.

"The day after the Russians made a sortie from the place, and towards Inkermann attacked the division of Sir Do. Lynch Evans, which covered the siege works. Received by a trashing fire, and with that solidity which is peculiar to our allies, the Russians left on the ground more than 300 dead, and found themselves chased to the outskirts of the town, losing in their flight about 100 prisoners.

"This short and smart affair was most brilliant, and has certainly compensated for the painful incidents of the day before."

The favourable news published in the Moniteur caused a rise in the French funds, which were done on the Boulevards at 73f. 25c., and closed at 73f.

BATTLE ON "GUY FAWKES DAY."

PARIS.

The Minister of War has also received a subsequent despatch from General Canrobert:—

"Before Sebastopol, Nov. 6.

"The Russian army, increased by reinforcements from the Danube and from the southern provinces, and animated by the presence of the GRAND DUKES MICHAEL AND NICHOLAS, attacked yesterday the right of the English position before the place.

"The English army maintained the battle with the most remarkable solidity, supported by a portion of General Besquet's division.

"The enemy, much more numerous than we, was driven back with enormous loss, estimated at 5,000 to 8,000 men.

"This obstinate struggle lasted throughout the whole of the day.

"At the same time, on my left wing, General Forey had to drive back a sortie of the garrison. The troops led by him drove back the enemy into the town, with a loss of 1,000 men.

"This brilliant feat of arms, which was not achieved without some loss to the allies, reflects the highest honour upon our armies."
 "The siege continues regularly."

NEWS RECEIVED IN LONDON ON THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 16.

(BY SUBMARINE AND BRITISH TELEGRAPH.)

We have received from Marseilles the following telegraphic summary of letters, brought to Marseilles by the Sinai:—

"A correspondent at Constantinople writes on the 5th that the latest advices which had reached that city from the Crimea were of the 3rd inst.

"Sir De Lacy Evans was ill, having had a fall from his horse.

"Sickness was on the increase, and the cold very severe at night.

"A French battery of sixty-four guns opened fire on the 1st, and made great impression.

"Our fire, as well as that of the Russians, was weak.

"A Turkish ship of eighty guns and a frigate had sunk during the late gale.

"The Himalaya is disabled, and unable to keep the sea."

The following despatch contains some additional particulars of the news brought by the Sinai:—

"The Sinai arrived at Marseilles, bringing news from the Crimea of the 3rd inst.

"It had been decided that the assault of Sebastopol should be made soon after the 5th.

"Three thousand men, under the orders of Prince Napoleon, were to attack first the fortress near the cemetery.

"The state of Sebastopol was frightful.

"There was no water, and typhus prevailed in the town.

"The fire of the place had much diminished.

"A great resistance was, nevertheless, expected in the interior of the town.

"Four ships of the Russian fleet had been sunk.

"Admiral Sir E. Lyons was watching Anapa, Tamana, and the Sea of Azoff.

"Admiral Bruat had landed on the 26th, near Balta, where he had been very well received by the inhabitants.

"The weather was beautiful in the Crimea; but in the offing the sea had been very heavy, and many ships had been obliged to put to sea.

"Admirals Hamelin and Dundas were in the Bay of Katscha.

"The Sinai met at sea the brigade of General Mayran, on its way from Athens to the Crimea, and 2,000 Zouaves, who had been embarked in Algeria."

DESPATCHES RECEIVED IN LONDON YESTERDAY, NOV. 17.

(BY SUBMARINE AND BRITISH TELEGRAPH.)

We have just received from Paris, Vienna, and Hermannstadt, the following telegraphic despatches:—

"PARIS.

"The new French divisions are about to sail for the East, and all preparations are being made at Toulon and at Marseilles for their departure before the end of the month.

"A despatch of the 8th from Prince Menschikoff announces that the operations of the siege continued, and that the allies were intrenching themselves strongly on the left flank of their position.

"VIENNA.

"Official Russian news, from the 5th to the 9th, states that nothing of importance had occurred at Sebastopol.

"The allies were fortifying their position on the left bank of the Tchernaya as strongly as possible.

"The bombardment continued, but the breaches were always repaired.

"HERMANNSTADT.

"Several Turkish detachments are close to the Bessarabian frontier.

"Babadagh is occupied by the Turks."

We have since received, by way of Trieste, the following despatch from Constantinople, dated November 6:—

"No news had arrived from the Crimea up to the evening of the 4th.

"The firing was slack on both sides.

"The assault was in preparation, and scaling ladders had been ordered up.

"The truth as to the reported loss of the Egyptian vessels was still undetermined."

ANOTHER DESPATCH FROM LORD RAGLAN.

(From the London Gazette Extraordinary of Thursday.)

PORTMAN-SQUARE, Nov. 16, 12.30 a.m.

The Duke of Newcastle has to-night received a telegraphic despatch, of which the following is a translation, from General Lord Raglan, G.C.B.

The despatch was delayed between Bucharest and Vienna by an interruption of the telegraph, from injuries received during a violent storm.

TRANSLATION OF A TELEGRAPHIC DESPATCH RECEIVED BY THE DUKE OF NEWCASTLE, ON 16TH NOVEMBER, 12.30 A.M., FROM LORD RAGLAN.

November 6.

The enemy, with immense forces, attacked yesterday, in the dawn of morning, the right of the English position before Sebastopol, which was defended by the Second Division, and the Brigade of Guards of the First Light Division, the Fourth Division and part of the Third, and subsequently by the division of General Bosquet, and other corps of the French army, which by their gallant conduct contributed essentially to the decided success of the day.

General Canrobert immediately came to the spot, and gave me the support of his assistance and of his excellent counsel. The battle was extremely obstinate, and it was not till past noon that the enemy was definitely repulsed and forced to retreat, leaving the field of battle covered with his dead and several hundreds of prisoners. The number of the enemy much exceeded that which was opposed to us at Alma, and the losses of the Russians have been enormous. Our losses have also been very great. General Sir George Brown, Major-General Bentinck, Brigadier-General Adams, Buller, and Torrens, have been wounded. They are all doing well.

The conduct of the troops in the face of an enemy so superior in numbers has been excellent.

(Signed) RAGLAN.

Received at Bucharest, Friday, the 10th November, at half-past four p.m., and forwarded to Kronstadt at six p.m.

THE BRITISH AGENT.

DESPATCHES FROM LORD RAGLAN.

(From the Supplement to the London Gazette Extraordinary of Thursday, the 16th November.)

WAR DEPARTMENT, Nov. 17, 12½ o'clock afternoon.

HIS GRACE the Duke of Newcastle has this day received three despatches and enclosures, of which the following are copies, addressed to his Grace by General the Lord Raglan, G.C.B.:—

Before Sebastopol, October 31, 1854.

MY LORD DUKE.—Adverting to that part of your Grace's despatch of the 10th inst., No. 116, in which it is stated that her Majesty will be most anxious to receive such further accounts from me as may tend to relieve the affectionate anxiety of the friends of the wounded, I have the honour to acquaint your Grace that the Inspector-General of Hospitals has reported, from personal observation, that the majority of the wounded are making satisfactory progress, although there is too much reason to apprehend that among such a number of severe and dangerous injuries, a certain proportion of casualties must occur.

I have, &c., RAGLAN.

HIS GRACE the Duke of Newcastle, &c., &c., &c.

Before Sebastopol, Oct. 31, 1854.

MY LORD DUKE.—When I wrote to your Grace on the 28th instant, I was not in possession of the names of the officers of the Cavalry Division who had distinguished themselves in the action of the 25th.

I have now the honour to enclose a letter from Lieutenant-General the Earl of Lucan, containing the list of those whose services entitle them to be specially mentioned, and I beg leave to recommend them to your Grace's notice.

In the despatch to which I above refer, I had the honour to draw your Grace's attention to the conduct of Major-General the Earl of Cardigan and the Hon. Brigadier-General Scarlett.

I omitted, in my despatch of the 28th September, to state that when, in the battle of Alma, Lieutenant-Colonel Webber Smith was obliged, in consequence of being severely wounded, to leave the field, Major Champion assumed the charge of the 95th, which your Grace will recollect was one of the regiments that suffered most; and he gained great credit by the way in which he conducted the command.

I am glad of the opportunity to repair this omission.

I stated to your Grace on the 28th instant, that Major Dalton, of the 49th, had been killed in the trenches; this was an error; the officer whose loss the service has to deplore is Major Powell, of the same regiment. I deeply regret that the mistake should have occurred.—I have, &c., RAGLAN.

HIS GRACE the Duke of Newcastle, &c., &c., &c.

Before Sebastopol, Oct. 30, 1854.

SIR,—In reference to my report of the action before Balaklava, on the 25th instant, I have now the honour to submit the names of officers who, on that occasion, well entitled themselves to the notice of the Commander of the Forces, and for whom I seek his Excellency's kind protection:—

Major-General the Earl of Cardigan, Commanding Light Cavalry Brigade; Brigadier-General Scarlett, Commanding Heavy Brigade; Colonel Lord George Paget, Commanding 4th Light Dragoons; Lieutenant-Colonel Shewell, Commanding 8th Hussars; Lieutenant-Colonel Hodge, Commanding 4th Dragoon Guards; Lieutenant-Colonel Griffiths, Commanding 2nd Scots Greys; Lieutenant-Colonel Yorke, Commanding 1st Royal Dragoons; Lieutenant-Colonel White, Commanding 6th Enniskilling Dragoons; Lieutenant-Colonel Douglas, Commanding 11th Hussars; Captain Jenyns, Commanding 13th Light Dragoons; Captain Morris, Commanding 17th Lancers; Captain Burton, Commanding 5th Dragoon Guards; Captain Maude, Royal Horse Artillery; Colonel Lord William Paulet, Assistant Adjutant-General, Cavalry Division; Lieutenant-Colonel Mayow, Brigade-Major, Light Cavalry Brigade; Major MacMahon, Assistant Quartermaster-General, Cavalry Division; Captain Connolly, Brigade-Major, Heavy Brigade; Captain B. Walker, 7th Dragoon Guards, my first aide-de-camp; Captain Fellowes, 12th Lancers, Deputy-Assistant Quartermaster General, Cavalry Division.

I have, &c., LUCAN,

Lieutenant-General Commanding Cavalry Division.

The Military Secretary, &c., &c., &c.

Before Sebastopol, November 3, 1854.

MY LORD DUKE.—Since I wrote to your Grace, on the 28th ultimo, the enemy have considerably increased their force in the Valley of the Tchernaya, both in artillery, cavalry, and infantry, and have extended to their left, not only occupying the village of Canara, but the heights beyond it, and pushing forward pickets, and even guns, towards our extreme right; and these yesterday fired a few shots, apparently to try the range, which fell somewhat short.

These movements have induced me to place as strong a force as I can dispose of on the precipitous ridge in that direction, in order to prevent any attempt to get round to Balaklava by the sea; and the whole line is strengthened by a breastwork, which has been thrown up by the Highland Brigade, the Royal Marines, and the Turkish troops, thus circumscribing that part of the position; whilst immediately in front of the gorge leading into the town, a strong redoubt is in course of being completed, which is to be garrisoned by the 93d Regiment, and armed with several guns; and on high ground behind, and to the left, is a battery manned by seamen, which terminates the position to be defended by the troops under the command of Major-General Sir Colin Campbell.

Further to the left, and in a more elevated position, is the brigade of the 1st French Division, commanded by General Vinols, ready to move to the assistance of any of the British force that may be assailed, and maintaining the connection between the troops in the valley and those on the ridge on which the main armies are posted.

The harbour of Balaklava is under the charge of Captain Daeres of the Sanspareil, and Rear-Admiral Sir Edmund Lyons is in the roadstead outside, and is in daily communication with me.

Thus every possible step has been taken to secure this important point; but I will not conceal from your Grace, that I should be more satisfied if I could have occupied the position in considerably greater strength.

With reference to the operations of the combined armies engaged in the attack on Sebastopol, I have the honour to state, that there is no material diminution in the enemy's fire; and yesterday morning, two hours before daylight, the cannonade from all parts of the south front was heavy in the extreme, both on the French and British lines, and it occasioned, I deeply regret to say, some loss, but less than might have been expected under the circumstances.

In the meanwhile the French, who have before them the town and real body of the place, have taken advantage of the more favourable ground, and are carrying on approaches systematically on the most salient and commanding part of the enemy's lines; and they have constructed and opened batteries, the precision of the fire from which has most materially damaged the Russian works, although as yet they have not succeeded in silencing their guns.

The weather is still fine, but it has become extremely cold, and there was a severe frost last night.

I beg to submit to your Grace the nominal returns of casualties amongst the non-commissioned officers and rank and file, from the 22d October to the 1st November, both days inclusive, and a list of officers killed and wounded between the 27th October and 1st November.

Captain Maude, of the Horse Artillery, an excellent officer, is, I am assured, doing well.

I likewise enclose the naval return of casualties.—I have, &c., RAGLAN.

HIS GRACE the Duke of Newcastle, &c., &c., &c.

Return of Casualties among Officers from 27th October to 1st November, both days inclusive.—2nd November, 1854.

October 25th.

Royal Artillery—Captain G. A. Maude, wounded dangerously (omitted in the return from 22nd to 26th.)

October 28th.

49th Regiment—Major C. T. Powell, killed.

J. B. BUCKNALL ESTCOURT, Adjutant-General.

Return of Casualties from 27th October to 1st November, 1854, both days inclusive.

CRIMEA, November 2nd, 1854.

Artillery—1 officer (Captain G. A. Maude), 1 sergeant, 5 rank and file, wounded.

Sappers and Miners—1 rank and file, wounded.

Coldstream Guards—1 rank and file, wounded.

7th Regiment—1 rank and file, wounded.

19th Regiment—1 rank and file, wounded.

20th Regiment—1 drummer, 1 rank and file, wounded.

21st Regiment—2 rank and file, killed.

49th Regiment—1 officer (Major Powell), killed.

57th Regiment—2 rank and file, wounded.

63rd Regiment—1 rank and file, killed; 1 rank and file, wounded.

77th Regiment—1 rank and file, wounded.

88th Regiment—1 rank and file, killed; 1 sergeant, 5 rank and file, wounded.

1st Batt. Rifle Brigade—1 rank and file, killed; 1 rank and file, wounded.

Total—1 officer, 5 rank and file, killed; 1 officer, 2 sergeants, 1 drummer, 23 rank and file, wounded.

J. B. BUCKNALL ESTCOURT, Adjutant-General.

War Office, Nov. 17.

The Right Hon. the Secretary at War has received from his Grace the Duke of Newcastle the following list of casualties amongst the non-commissioned officers and privates in the Forces under the command of General the Lord Raglan, G.C.B., from the 22nd October to 1st of November, 1854, both days inclusive.

Nominal Return of Casualties in the Forces under the Command of General Lord Raglan, G.C.B., from 22nd of Oct. to 1st Nov., both days inclusive.

October, 22nd, 1854.

ARTILLERY.

Killed—Acting-Bombardier William Fox. Gunner Alfred Element.

Wounded—Bombardier John Blacker, slightly. Gunners John Bennett, severely; Samuel Cator, severely; Henry Sims, slightly; John Williams, slightly; James Mitchell, slightly; John Dugan, slightly; John Preslee, slightly.

1st REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded—Private William Bristow, slightly.

7th REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded—Private John Shepherd, severely; James Robinson, slightly; Patrick Tyne, slightly; Thos. Kirk, slightly; John Ford, slightly.

20th REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded—Private David Swan, slightly.

30th REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded—Private J. Byng, slightly.

77th REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Killed—Private John Mason.

23rd October.

ARTILLERY.

Killed—Gunners J. Hodgson, R. Morrison.

Wounded—Sergeant J. Mitchell, slightly; Acting Bombardier W. Pinion, slightly; Gunner D. Walsh, slightly; W. Hannigan, severely; R. Coats, severely; J. Death, severely.

1st REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded—Private William Noonan, slightly.

47th REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Killed—Private C. Kerivan.

50th REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded—Private J. Wait, severely.

24th October.

ARTILLERY.

Killed—Sergeants F. Taylor, J. Spiers.

Wounded—Bombardier J. M. Mann, severely; Gunner W. Pemberton, dangerously.

Wounded on 20th, omitted in last return.—Bombardier James Dundas, slightly; Gunners W. Cavanagh, slightly; E. Kench, slightly; R. Russell, slightly; Bombardier W. Lane, slightly.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

Wounded—Privates J. Wheeler, slightly; J. Bland, dangerously.

19th REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded—Privates P. M. G. Gun, severely, since dead; Edward Keating, severely.

41st REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded—Private M. Starkey, severely.

63rd REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded—Private Robert Ives, slightly.

77th REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Killed—Corporal Charles Dermott.

1st BATTALION RIFLE BRIGADE.

Wounded—Private J. Carter, slightly.

2nd BATTALION RIFLE BRIGADE.

Wounded—Private W. Jackson, severely, since dead.

26th October.

ARTILLERY.

Wounded—Gunners William Davidson, Arthur Jackson, Joseph Gobsell.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

Wounded—Private James Dilling.

7th REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded—Private Edwin Butler, severely.

20th REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded—Private James Lynch, severely.

25th REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded—Private Edmund Flaherty, slightly.

44th REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded—Private Benjamin Ford, slightly.

67th REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded—Private A. McNamara, slightly.

68th REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Killed—Private Michael Gullivan.

Wounded—Private Patrick Crawley, slightly.

1st BATTALION OF RIFLE BRIGADE.

Wounded—Private William Wright, slightly.

25th October.

4TH DRAGOON GUARDS.

Killed—Private Thomas Ryan.

Wounded—Trooper Sergeant-Major John Evans, slightly; Sergeant William Percy, slightly; Private James Anclielass, slightly; Henry Preece, slightly; William Scanlon, dangerously.

5TH DRAGOON GUARDS.

Killed—Corporal James Taylor; Private Bernard Callery.

Wounded—Corporal Charles M'Keegan, severely; Private Edward Malone, severely; Henry Herbert, severely; John M'Cabe, severely; William Wilson, severely; Charles Babbington, severely; Joseph Jennings, severely; G. H. Dickson, slightly; William Morris, slightly.

1ST DRAGOONS.

Killed—Privates Charles Middleton, Thomas Shore.

Wounded—Sergeant M. Noake, severely; Trumpeter George Stacy, severely; Privates J. R. Astlett, severely; James Blake, severely; George Taylor, severely; B. Kennedy, slightly; Samuel Woodward, slightly.

2ND DRAGOONS.

Killed—Corporal A. P. Clifford; Private Henry Campbell.

Wounded—Troop Sergeants-Major Mat. Brown, slightly; James Dearden, slightly; James Davidson, slightly—Sergeants Thomas Kneath, severely; John Wilson, severely; David Gibson, severely—Corporal Francis Campbell, severely—Privates Owen Ward, severely; Richard Foster, severely; William Jackson, severely; A. D. Gardiner, severely; William Johnston, slightly; Henry Lochrie, slightly; Thomas Goffey, slightly; James Hunter, slightly; Robert Kerr, slightly; William Heywood, slightly; Alexander Weir, slightly; John McNeel, slightly; Charles Glauzy, slightly; Robert Rarnet, slightly; Peter Burley, slightly; William Seggie, severely; William Hammond, severely; Robert Thompson, severely; George Alexander, slightly; William Davis, severely; William Caulfield, slightly; James Aitken, slightly; William Donaldson, severely; James M'Pherson, slightly; James Hackett, slightly; James Bothwick, severely; John Borland, slightly; Donald Davidson, slightly; Walter Fawke, slightly; A. S. Long, severely; Thomas Trill, severely; William Marshall, slightly; James Watson, slightly; William M'Pherson, slightly; William J. Allis, severely; James Allen, slightly; Richard Livingstone, severely; M'Adam Galbraith, severely; William Connell, slightly; Charles Currie, slightly; James Colter, slightly; John Knowles, slightly; William Morrison, severely; Thomas Langdon, slightly; James Taylor, slightly; George Burns, slightly.

6TH DRAGOONS.

Killed—Privates Robert Elliot; Alexander Latimer.

Wounded—Troop Sergeant-Major Alex. Shields, slightly; Sergeants Richard Jeffreys, severely; Frederick Bolton, dangerously; Corporal John Kidney, slightly; Privates Michael Rourke, dangerously; Robert Turner, severely; Charles Clarke, severely; John McCanna, slightly; Robert Kenne, slightly; James Rackler, slightly; William Breadin, slightly; John Davis, slightly; William Lyons, slightly.

4TH LIGHT DRAGOONS.

Killed or Missing—Troop Sergeant-Major Francis Herbert; Sergeants Richard Lynch and Edward Campbell; Corporal Henry Spence; Trumpeters Edward Lovelock and Thomas Burns; Privates James Donaldson, Daniel Haxhall, Thomas Blutton, Charles Marshall, Thomas Moody, Michael Phelan, George Robinson, George Swan, Thomas Tomset, Charles Waigh.

Wounded—Troop Sergeant-Major Hen. Jennings, slightly—Corporal Denis Heron, slightly—Privates James Devlin, severely; James O'Leary, slightly; John Hughes, slightly; Thomas Armes, slightly; Joseph Carter, slightly; Edward Bradley, slightly; Joseph Phillips, slightly; William Sutcliffe, slightly; James Tyler, slightly; Frederick Downing, slightly; Thomas Herbert, slightly; George Croydon, slightly; Thomas Rogers, slightly; William Jones, slightly; Joseph Whitby, slightly; William Thorn, slightly; Peter Carrull, slightly; John Gray, slightly; Joseph Gosbell, severely; William Keenan, slightly.

8TH HUSSARS.

Killed or Missing—Troop Sergeant-Major H. McNair; Sergeants Michael Rielly, William Williams; Corporal William Donald; Privates Joshua Adams, John Barry, Michael Brennan, James Dice, Andrew Finnegan, Denis Hanrahan, Thomas Heffern, Edmund Herbert, Matthew Keating, Martin Lemmon, Edward McDonald, George Morris, Charles Waterer, John White.

Wounded—Troop Sergeant-Major Clarke, slightly; Trumpet-Major William Gray, slightly; Corporal John Sewell, severely; Trumpeter John Dunn, severely; Privates Francis Bray, dangerously; John Brown, severely; Henry Cheshire, severely; James Clement, severely; Patrick Doolan, dangerously; William Fulton, slightly; R. O. Glendire, severely; Richard Kennedy, severely; Patrick Kiterick, slightly; Joseph Ross, severely; William Ryan, dangerously; Christopher Spain, slightly; Thomas Tomanley, severely.

11TH HUSSARS.

Killed or Missing—Sergeants T. Jordan, J. Jones; Corporal T. France; Privates R. Bubb, R. Levett, J. M. George, C. Allured, C. B. Cooper, W. Davis, R. Gwinnell, G. Horne, R. Lazell, J. Stephenson, J. Jackman, J. Larkin, D. Purcell, T. Shrive, D. Ward, H. Wakelin, W. Wareham, G. Wootton, J. Elder, L. Shoppee, W. H. Spring, J. Bruntow.

Wounded—Sergeants R. Davies, slightly; W. Rentley, slightly; J. Lawson, severely—Corporals E. Hudson, slightly; C. Cork, slightly—Privates D. Andrews, slightly; H. Groom, slightly; H. Jewell, severely; W. Walker, slightly; T. Roberts, severely; W. H. Pennington, slightly; J. Glainster, dangerously; R. Martin, severely; S. Milburn, severely; J. C. Parvis, severely; G. Turner, dangerously; E. Wilcox, slightly; R. Young, severely; W. Firth, severely; W. Taylor, slightly; G. Jowett, slightly; J. Bingham, slightly; S. Samer, severely; T. Strutt, slightly; H. Shergold, slightly; J. Kilvert, slightly.

13TH LIGHT DRAGOONS.

Killed or Missing—Troop Sergeant-Major John Webster; Corporal E. W. A. Smith; Privates Thomas Blackett, Charles Court, William Dorell, Robert Fraser, A. Holliday, William Lawson, Thomas McGorrie, James Slattery, James Watson, T. J. Williams.

Wounded—Sergeant Frederick Peake, severely; Privates John Brooks, severely; John Ettridge, severely; John Keen, severely; Joseph Moore, dangerously; Henry Pegler, severely; Joseph Rhodes, severely; Richard Rowley, severely; William Sewell, severely; George Williams, severely; George Wilde, slightly.

Sent on board ship without being seen by the Regimental Surgeon—Sergeant Edward Martin; Privates James Cameron, James Cunningham, Joseph Douglas, H. D. Naylor, James Naylor, William Nicholson, John Velch, Thomas White, Edmund Wright, Robert Evans.

17TH LANCERS.

Killed or Missing—Sergeant Edward Tulbot; Corporals James Hall; Cont. Wrigley; Privates Charles Aldows, William Baker, William Barker, John Bow, George Brown, Walter Brooks, Henry Carter, Thomas Concoran, Richard Dollar, Patrick Dowling, George Flowers, Henry Gray, William Harrison, John Lees, Robert Llig, Frederick Melrose, Charles Mitton, Robert McNair, Robert Jackson, Henry Pearce, Johnstone Sewell, James Stamage, John Wilson.

Wounded—Sergeant James Scarfe, severely; Corporal John Pyne, slightly; George Taylor, severely; Lance-Corporal John Brown (3rd), slightly; Trumpeter William Brittain, dangerously; Martin Landfred, slightly; Privates John Andrews, severely; Peter Brown, severely; James Buck, slightly; Frederick Clifford, dangerously; Wm. Doyle, slightly; Thomas Dudley, severely; John Duggan, severely; Patrick Fegan, slightly; Jas. Friend, slightly; Thos. Foster, dangerously; John Hart, slightly; George Herriott, slightly; Thos. Magee, slightly; Thomas Mullen, dangerously; James Mustard, slightly; David McNeill, severely; John Gravenor, slightly; James O'Gorman, slightly; John Payne, slightly; William Pearson, severely; William Phelan, severely; William Pavis, severely; Patrick Rafferty, severely; Benjamin Soky, severely; David Stanley, severely; John Stewart, severely; Jas. Watts, severely.

October 26.

3RD BATTALION GRENADIER GUARDS.

Wounded—Private Matthew Lake.

1ST REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded—Private Robert Kernan, slightly.

7TH REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded—Private William O'Connell, severely; John Myland, severely; Edward Carney, severely; William Hopes, slightly.

19TH REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded—Private James Goma, slightly; William Crowley, slightly.

23RD REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded—Private John Cahille, severely.

30TH REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Killed—Privates Charles Freeman, George Rose, Bryan Mathews, Thomas Jenkinson, Patrick Morris, George Smith, 4th, Robert Hunter.

Wounded—Sergeant Daniel Sullivan, slightly; Corporals Thomas Delany, slightly; John Sharp, 1st, severely; Privates John Evans, slightly; Archibald Fisher, slightly; John Tucker, severely; Edward Horgan, severely; David McCabe, dangerously; William Whilme, slightly; Bartholomew Regan, severely; Patrick Doody, slightly; William O'Brien, slightly; Francis Sturgeon, dangerously; John Smith, 4th, slightly; James Kerr, severely; Charles Reynolds, severely; David Bennet, severely; Michael Keeney, severely; Edward Brennan, severely; John Law, slightly; Peter McGinn, slightly; James Gibbins, dangerously.

41ST REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Killed—Private John Martin.

Wounded—Privates Robert Dudley, severely; Charles Light, severely; Roger Hanrahan, severely; John Clough, severely; Michael Grace, slightly; William Tilly, severely; Timothy Keefe, severely; Daniel Donovan, severely (since dead).

47TH REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Killed—Frederick Pittman.

Wounded—Corporal William Bowler, slightly—Privates Patrick Fiday, severely; Robert Mulligan, slightly; John Neill, slightly; John Cantrill, slightly; Patrick Mannard, slightly; William Donihuan, slightly.

49TH REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Killed—Private George Swayne.

Wounded—Colour-Sergeant William Armstrong, severely—Corporals James Campbell, severely; Daniel Dunn, severely; Charles Henry, slightly—Drummer Eugene Sweeney, severely—Privates James Atherton, dangerously; William Brown, severely; James Canlid, severely; Thomas Fahy, severely; Thomas Fensone, severely; John Jones, dangerously; Samuel Jones, severely; Edward Jurlan, slightly; John Lake, slightly; Michael Lyons, dangerously; Thomas Monaghan, severely; James Parker, severely; James Sable, severely; Thomas Donahy, slightly.

88TH REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Killed—Private James Kilden.

Wounded—Privates Thomas O'Brien, slightly; Bartholomew Purcell, slightly; Michael Connolly, slightly; John McMahon, slightly.

95TH REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Killed—Private Charles Cardee.

Wounded—Sergeant-Major Roger Conner, slightly; Privates John Doody, slightly; Peter Ombely, slightly; John McElligott, slightly; George Clarke, slightly; George Elliott, slightly; Charles Leggat, slightly; Thomas Baxter, slightly; James Dalton, slightly.

2ND BATTALION RIFLE BRIGADE.

Wounded—Corporal D. Graham, slightly. Privates William Crouch, slightly; J. Rielly, slightly; J. Waldron, slightly.

J. B. BUCKNALL ESTCOURT, Adjut.-General.

27th October.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

Wounded—Sergeant John Mord, dangerously (omitted in return 25th Oct.); Gunner William Wilson, slightly; John Cliburn, slightly.

57TH REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded—Private Henry Mullen, slightly.

63RD REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded—Private John Leonard, slightly.

28th October.

7TH REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded—Private Francis Breton, severely.

29th October.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

Wounded—Gunnery Robert McKee, slightly; James Morley, slightly. William Williams, slightly.

70TH REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded—Drummer James Horsford, slightly; Private Samuel Pemberton, slightly.

57TH REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded—Private James Carson, slightly.

30th October.

19TH REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded—Private James Flynn, wounded on the 21st, not returned before.

SAPPERS AND MINERS.

Wounded—John Hutton, slightly.

31st October.

1ST BATTALION RIFLE BRIGADE.

Killed—Charles Lewis.

Wounded—William Martin, slightly.

77TH REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded—James Long, slightly.

1st November.

COLDSTREAM GUARDS.

Wounded—Private William Tooley, severely.

21ST REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Killed—Privates Fenton Dumphrey, John Wright.

63RD REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Killed—Private Joseph Brennan.

20TH REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Wounded—Privates George Akias, mortally; William Seaford, severely; Charles Humphries, slightly.

88TH REGIMENT OF FOOT.

Killed—Private John M. Hugh.

Wounded—Sergeant Edward Somers, slightly; Corporal William Knowles, slightly; Privates Thomas Kelly, dangerously; Alexander Anderson, severely; Michael Garaghy, severely; John Dawns, severely.

J. B. BUCKNALL ESTCOURT, Adjutant-General.

Return of Prisoners taken by the Russians, the 25th October.

4TH LIGHT DRAGOONS.

Wounded—Troop Sergeant-Major William Fowler; Corporal William Thomas; Privates Thomas Linsor, Thomas Fletcher, Thomas Lucas, James Boxhall, James Normoyle.

8TH HUSSARS.

Wounded—Cornet George Clowes; Corporal William Taylor; Privates John Rerlin, William Perry, James Macanion, Edward Turner, John Fitzgibbon.

11TH HUSSARS.

Wounded—Corporal James Williams; Privates William Sheppard, John Herby, Walter Hyde, John Dryden.

13TH LIGHT DRAGOONS.

Wounded—Troop-Sergeant Major George Smith; Trumpeter William Howard; Privates William Martin Christopher Haulon, A. Harris, John Maccan, William Duke, George Cooper, Thomas Cook, William Renton.

17TH LANCERS.

Wounded—Lieutenant John Chadwick; Privates Thomas Brown, Thomas Marshall, James McCallister, Henry Ellis, Henry Young, Thomas Sharp, Alfred Tanner, Robert Edge, James Wightman, William Kirk, John Lyle.

4TH LIGHT DRAGOONS.

Not wounded—Trumpeter Hugh Crawford; Corporal Joseph Armstrong; Privates James Ragshaw, Thomas King, Charles Frederick, Michael O'Brien, Samuel Parka, Robert Farquharson, James Bolton.

5TH HUSSARS.

Not wounded—Privates Patrick Horan, Richard Palfreman, William Bird.

11TH HUSSARS.

Not wounded—Privates N. Henry, Henry Parker.

13TH LIGHT DRAGOONS.

Not wounded—Troop Sergeant-Major John Lincoln; Private Charles Warren.

OFFICERS OF THE COMMISSARIAT.

Not wounded—Issuers Edmund Johnson and James Kerrs. J. B. BUCKNALL ESTCOURT, Adjutant-General.

A Return of the Killed and Wounded in the Naval Brigade during the three days ending 31st October.

RODNEY.

Wounded—Thomas Marlow, ordinary, slightly, 29th October.

BRITANNIA.

Wounded—John Williams, A.R., slightly, 30th Oct. Total wounded, 1.

STEPHEN LUSHINGTON.

Captain Commanding Naval Brigade. To the Military Secretary to H. E. Lord Raglan, Commander-in-Chief of the Army.

A Return of the Killed and Wounded in the Naval Brigade, on the 1st November, 1854.

LONDON.

Wounded—William Garrett, leading seaman, slightly.

ARETHUSA.

Wounded—William Walker, A.R., slightly.

VENGANCE.

Wounded—Thomas Lemmon, A.R., slightly. Total wounded, 3.

STEPHEN LUSHINGTON.

Captain Commanding Naval Brigade. To the Military Secretary to H. E. Lord Raglan, Commander in Chief of the Army.

MISCELLANEOUS ANECDOTES, INCIDENTS, AND MEMORANDA.

IN H.M.S. AGAMEMNON's engagement with the batteries, which lasted for four hours, she fired seventy-four rounds from each gun on the side engaged.

BELLEROPHON was the last ship, and hauled out at seven o'clock. Two shells had burst on the main deck, and one on the upper deck, which killed poor little Forster. He was standing under the poop, the port side, when the shell came in, and burst close to him. He was as black as a coal. A piece of his skull was knocked out; he also had severe wounds on his face, and luckily he died twenty-four hours afterwards, but was not sensible.

A NIGHT VISIT TO THE TRENCHES is always impressive. The silence in the batteries, broken alone by the spade and pick of the sappers smoothing the earth disturbed by the enemy's balls; the massive guns frowning from their embrasures; the stupendous strength of the parapets and traverses; the calm slumbers of the covering party, enveloped in their blankets; and the rumbling of approaching ammunition waggons—one and all strike the imagination of the spectator. An occasional shell from the Russians enlivens the proceedings, the tract of the projectile being traced by the burning fuse from the muzzle of the gun to the point of explosion.

CAPT. L—, OF THE 77TH (says a letter in a Dublin paper), amused me with an account of the talk of his company in the trenches, when lying down for security, and round shot and shells perpetually flying over their heads. It was Sunday, and they were so close to the town that the bells were heard quite distinctly through the booming of the guns. One of the soldiers said reflectively to his comrade, "Them Cossack people is very religious, but their creed, though not Catholic, very like it," and then he added, "Bonaparte was one." The other doubtfully inquired how so, for he thought he was French, when the first assured him that he was born in Corsica, which there was no denying, and all around yielded assent. All this was in sober earnest.

A FRIEND IN THE CRIMEA writes:—"One of the Russian generals whom we took prisoner being asked his opinion of the English troops, replied, 'that they were all splendid; but that whenever the Russians saw the half-naked fellows without trousers marching at them, they knew the day was lost, for the savages came on them with a yell that no human power could withstand.'"

THE ESCAPE OF CAPTAIN A. BROWN, 44TH REGIMENT, was of the most extraordinary character. He was in the act of lighting his cigar, with his right arm partially elevated, when a cannon ball shattered the arm, and, in running off, took away three fingers of the left hand, killing the soldier who was standing next him. A letter has been received from the Rev. Mr. Whibley by his friends. The rev. and heroic priest administered the sacraments to him after amputation had taken place and his wounds had been dressed. He was then pronounced to be going on favourably.

SECOND EDITION.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

THE SIEGE OF SEBASTOPOL.

(By Special Telegraph.)

The following additional details of the attack upon the English lines on the 5th inst., which is known to us hitherto only by the despatches of General Canrobert and Lord Raglan, are forwarded by special telegraphic despatch via Varna, from Constantinople. The despatch is dated the 9th inst.:

"A fierce battle was fought before Sebastopol on the 5th. The Russian troops newly arrived from Perokop attacked the English position.

"After a battle which lasted seven hours, the Russians were repulsed with a loss of 8,000 men.

"The English lost 102 officers and 2,500 men, and the French lost 48 officers and 1,300 men, killed and wounded.

"Three English generals were killed—General Cathcart, and Brigadier-Generals Goldie and Strangways.

"Five were wounded—General Adams, Bentinck, Buller, Torrens, and Sir George Brown.

"General Canrobert is also wounded.

"The British Guards suffered very severely.

"On the 6th and 7th the allies were fortifying their positions."

The Duke of Cambridge had a horse shot under him. General Brown's arm has been amputated.

(By Submarine and British Telegraph.)

Suleiman Pasha, who commanded the Turkish troops in the Crimea, has been degraded by the Sultan.

The Charlemagne, Napoleon, and Jena returned to Constantinople on the 5th.

The frigate Egyptienne was wrecked at the entrance to the Bosphorus.

Prince Napoleon, who is suffering from dysentery, has returned to Constantinople.

The horses of the allies in the Crimea have suffered so much from want of water, that it is doubtful whether powerful cavalry reinforcements ought to be sent there.

The Egyptian ship Abadi Schibad is said to have gone down, with the Admiral and 700 men on board.

Steamers have been sent to fetch 4,000 men of the garrison of Tchuruk to Sebastopol.

The Russians have retired from the neighbourhood of Balaklava, to wait for reinforcements.

Up to the 7th there had been little rain at Balaklava.

According to advices from Constantinople of the 6th, 5,000 French troops had left for the Crimea.

4,000 Tunisians had embarked at Batumi for the Crimea.

There was no recent intelligence from the army in Asia.

Pans, Friday Night, Nov. 17.

The Moniteur contains the following news:—

"Vienna, Nov. 16.

"A telegraphic despatch from a Russian source, dated Odessa, Nov. 11, announces that no event of importance had taken place before Sebastopol on the 6th, 7th, and 8th inst.

"The Russians were occupied repairing the damage done to the fortifications.

"On the 6th the allies were actively pursuing their siege operations. The situation of the besiegers on the 8th was evidently a good one. The action of the 5th had produced its effect."

Captain Fellows, of the 12th Lancers, was sent by Lord Raglan with a flag of truce to Prince Menschikoff, to ascertain the names of the officers attached to the Light Cavalry Brigade who had been taken prisoners on the 25th. He learnt, to the regret of all, that out of the many missing, only two officers, Cornet G. Clowes, of the 7th Hussars, and Cornet T. Chadwick, of the 17th Lancers, had escaped that murderous fray. These two officers, along with Captain Landriani, a Sardinian officer, an amateur with the French army, had been made prisoners. Prince Menschikoff is said to have remarked, in the course of the conversation, that, much as he regretted it, the allied force was a lost army (?)

The Moniteur also contains a despatch of General Canrobert, dated the 2nd, and the continuation of his journal of the siege operations.

Five seamen of the Albion, straggling, have been taken prisoners by the Cossacks.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 5.—To-day the Veetis arrived, with Miss Nightingale and thirty-seven nurses for the sick and wounded at Sentari. Dr. Canning, Inspector-General, Dr. Price, senior surgeon, and Dr. Mackleroy, with eleven French surgeons, arrived in the Veetis.

MUTINY OF BRITISH TROOPS ON BOARD THE JURA.

LANDING OF THE MUTINEERS AT MALTA.

MALTA, Nov. 10.—The Jura, screw-steam transport, arrived on the 5th in 24 days from Cork, having on board Captain Macquarrie, of the 63rd, (sick throughout the voyage); Captain Thompson, of the 5th Dragoon Guards; Lord Killeen, of the 8th Hussars; Captains Hassard and Lea, of the 57th; Lieutenant Copeland, of the 57th; Surgeon Hamburg, Assistant-Surgeons Hyde, Rutherford, Renwick, Obens, White, Young, Webb, Jewan, Phelps, and Ryal; Mr. Staines, of the commissariat; 23 ensigns, and 1,193 non-commissioned officers and privates of various regiments. It was intended that this ship should proceed direct to the seat of war; but the insubordinate conduct of a company of the 50th, and another of the 55th regiments, rendered her putting into Malta necessary. From the information we can collect, it would appear that three or four men who were serving a period of imprisonment by sentence of court-martial, had their sentence remitted on their wish to volunteer for foreign service becoming known. They were put on board the Jura with several recruits, and first showed an insubordinate spirit by not saluting the officers. The example was soon followed by the recruits, and matters went on from bad to worse. The next pretext was, an insufficient ration of water; and, as if by so doing the supply would be increased, they finally proceeded to destroy the water casks and wasted the contents; fortunately, however, the vessel's condensing apparatus was sufficient to keep up a supply to replace the loss. At one time the insubordination reached to such a pitch that as many as 100 sentries had to be kept over the guilty parties, two of which latter received at sea fifty lashes; and Captain Wickham, commanding the vessel, loaded with grape and brought two of the ship's guns to bear upon that part where the prisoners were confined, and the soldiers of the 63rd were kept over them with their loaded muskets. The two companies have been landed at Malta, where the ringleaders will be tried and punished. They have been placed under the command of Colonel Borton, of the 9th. In their stead, 186 non-commissioned officers and privates of the 62nd, with Major Shearman, Captains Ingall and Daubeny, Lieutenants Hay and Dickson, and Assistant-Surgeon Young, were embarked. With the 170 men landed, five officers were left behind, much to their annoyance, depriving them, through the bad conduct of the men, from participating in the glory which awaits the rest of the regiment, who went on in the Miranda, viz., Colonel Trollope, Captains Tyler, Forster, Kilvington, Wilkinson, and Gwynno; Lieutenants Gooch, Hunter, Gilpin, and Blakiston; Ensign Cubitt, Surgeon Langley, Paymaster Drought, Quartermaster Nowlan, and 378 non-commissioned officers and privates. She also took up Lieutenant Hickey and Griffiths of the R.A., 1 gunner, and two drivers; Assistant-Surgeon Grant (for Scutari); Mr. Bloxam, acting mate of the Valorous; Mr. Townsend, second master; three seamen, four marines, and one steward's boy, for the Algiers; four seamen for the Gladiator; one stoker for the Stromboli; and one seaman for the Rodney.

SPAIN

A telegraphic despatch of the 14th from Madrid states that there was a rumour that Marshal Espartero was about to retire from the Ministry.

Bourse, Nov. 13.—The Three-per-Cents. closed at 34 75.

RACING.

"On the green, green turf."

MR. EDITOR.—The attention of the London division of tourists has oscillated during the week between Shrewsbury and Bow-street. The great "Sun" affair, however, has turned out a mere matter of moonshine. Out of an extensive foray that produced one hundred and fourteen prisoners, only one was deemed amenable to justice. Well might Mr. Jardine be puzzled with the question—"What was to be done with the defendants after they were taken?" The huge mountain laboured, and the luckless waiter was the mouse. The law required an example, and it was found in the person of Ryan, who was fined £50, with the alternative of three months' imprisonment. And this, too, in the face of the negative given to Mr. Huddleston's inquiry, "If there was any charge against Mr. Morbey, the landlord?" With all due deference to the law, it strikes me that the mouse did not engross all the ridicule of the occasion. Notice of appeal was given against the decision; and it is almost needless to add that nearly double the amount of the fine was subscribed in a very few minutes for the use of the appellant.

The case of Mr. Simmonds, on the Surrey side of the Thames, was decided at the Lambeth Police Court on the same day. But Mr. Simmonds was not equally well defended. His counsel ceded too much, and the defence rested on a technicality that was at once over-ruled. The penalty inflicted here was £20, or, in default, imprisonment for one month. The three other persons found in the tobaccoist's shop were discharged.

The Act of Parliament, as at present interpreted, must endanger, not only Tattersall's, but most of the coffee-rooms and parlours of the various taverns and public-houses; and, with a little straining, many dining-rooms of private individuals might be brought within its perilous vortex. The past session was remarkable for much "fancy" legislation, of which the "New Beer" and "Betting Houses" bills must decidedly bear the palm. But, at a time when affairs do not altogether wear the couleur de rose—though too sanguinary is the aspect in the East—and all men may be called upon to make great sacrifices, it is hardly politic to cause unnecessary irritation. Mr. Davies, much to his credit, has, I understand, subscribed £100 to the Patriotic Fund; and, I am convinced that taken as a body, sporting men will not be beaten by any class for loyal and generous feeling.

Shrewsbury has been winding up the season in first-rate style. Though the meeting may not have redounded to the profit, it certainly has to the reputation, of its concoctors. Especial praise is due to the exertions of Mr. Frail. It would really take time to count up the number of horses that have been engaged. Instead of the middle of November, there was racing enough on any one day for a summer's afternoon, "by Shrewsbury clock, Hal!" For the Shrewsbury Handicap the first name I gave you last week was that of the winner, La Belle. With fifty horses and a light Handicap before me, I could not expect such fortune. Pantomime, too, became an immense favourite, but monetary reasons prevailing, it is whispered, he was struck out at the "twelfth hour" precisely, on the day of the race. Old Candlewick, at length fairly used up, afforded a case of "break down." There was a huge mistake in advancing Incubus to the first rank of favouritism, as he was nearly last in the race. This said Incubus of Stevens' must have proved a distressing nightmare to his backers. After ten unsuccessful runs throughout the year, La Belle did the "handsome" for her owner and stable by popping not only her head, but neck and shoulders, in first. The sister to Red Lion has long been wanted, and came at last. I was not quite so happy in my selection for the other great handicap, "The Column," on the following day, for Catherine Parr, though starting the favourite at 6 to 4, obtained no better position than "third." The winner, Ianthe, can run pretty smartly with a light weight, when wanted. This mare, you may remember, was one of my "chosen few" for the Cambridgehire, but she did not favour me with a start. Orinoco was backed for some money, but it is evident that he likes a rule minus rather than plus a quarter. Middleborough, as if conscious of having defeated Virago over the same ground, put on his best running, and after beating Catherine Parr in the "Column," won a small handicap yesterday, and was bought in for 180 guineas, the selling price being £50; proving that a victory may be dearly purchased in racing as well as martial matters. The Steeplechase showed no improvement on its immediate predecessors, and, unless some energetic exertions be shortly made, I fear that we must expect to see this exciting sport fall into desuetude. I regret to find that Fowler, the rider of Labyrinth, the only one of my three who put in an appearance, broke his collar bone, through the horse blundering at a leap in the first round. Minerva carried off the Hurdle-race with ease, emulous, perhaps, of the success of Banstead and Rosa, in their new line of business. Cock of the North shirked the "Copeland Nursery;" but I shall be disappointed if we do not find him "Cock of the Walk" on more than one occasion next spring.

The ever active Mr. Topham, not content with his Autumn Meeting at Liverpool a fortnight back, has provided a rich fund of sport for a capital little gathering on the opposite banks of the Mersey. Many of the races at the Haylake Meeting must necessarily partake of a local character; but there are others of a sufficient importance to excite general interest.

THE FREE HANDICAP HURDLE RACE.—The 5 lbs penalty ought not to hamper the efforts of Minerva, after yesterday's display; but in her absence, despite his ominous name, I must go for Tumbler.

THE SHORTS HANDICAP.—Bardolph.

THE HELPER PLATE.—My choice must fall on Katinka or Young Hack.

THE STEEPLCHASE.—Royalty and Tipperary Boy are most to my liking.

THE VISITORS' PLATE, on the second day, is undoubtedly intended to be the important event; and for which let me take Boddicot, Catherine Parr, and Whalebone, in the order named.

THE WRITER CUP.—For this little affair, Ginger may become "hot!"

THE TWO AND THREE-YEAR-OLD SELLING STAKES.—Poor Maria may here appear not unworthy of notice.

THE SELLING STEEPLCHASE.—Any one must be puzzled to pick out the winner. Mr. Henderson may, however, furnish a clue in—Labyrinth. Yours, TOBY PEERS.

Friday, 17th November, 1854.

MANCHESTER.—FRIDAY.

There was a tolerable attendance at the Post-office Hotel to-day, and a disposition manifested to do business upon the 2,000 Guinea Stakes, The Derby, Chester Cup, and The Visitors' Plate, run for on Thursday next at Haylake. This is the first year of its being an opening meeting. 10 to 1 was taken once to £50 about Graculus Euriens for the Derby, and afterwards offered. Frequent offers were made to back four against the field for the 2,000 Guinea Stakes, or to take 5 to 4 that the field beats four. A great number of horses continue to be backed for the Chester Cup at 100 to 1, but less odds have been taken about the Heifer, Dalkith, and Arthur Wellesley. The greatest amount of money has been invested upon the Heifer, about whom, we understand, as low as 10 to 1 was taken at Shrewsbury yesterday; 1,000 to 30 was, however, the highest offer at the rooms to-day. Below will be found the latest quotations:—

Visitors' Plate (Haylake).
5 to 1	2 agst The Gem (off)	6 to 1 agst Catherine Parr (off)
6 to 1	1 — Jack Leeming (t)
Chester Cup, 1855.
1000 to 30	2 agst The Heifer (off to £40 to 1)
Two Thousand Guinea Stakes.
5 to 1	1 on the Field (off)	7 to 1 Bonnie Morn (wanted)
The Derby.
10 to 1	1 agst Graculus Euriens (t & off)	20 to 1 agst Dick Hatterick (off)
13 to 1	1 — Lord of the Isles (t)	200 to 6 — Bonnie Morn (t)
13 to 1	1 — St. Hubert (t)	1000 to 30 — Polydora (off to 1)
1000 to 60	1 — Wild Dayrell (off to 20 to 1)	40 to 1 — Affghan (off to £40 to 1)

Markets.

MONEY MARKET.

THURSDAY.—As the despatch of Lord Raglan, published this morning, failed to lessen the apprehensions entertained with regard to the loss by which the victory of the 5th of November, was purchased, the English funds opened at a further decline, but a recovery soon took place, and prices were then maintained with more steadiness than for some days past. Consols for money, which left off after regular hours on Wednesday evening at 92, were first quoted 91½, and for a short period touched 91½. From thence they advanced to 92, at which price there were buyers at the official termination of business. For the 7th of December they closed officially at 92½, but the final transactions were at an eighth lower. Bank Stock closed at 211 to 212; Reduced, 90½ to 91; New Three-per-Cents, 90½ to 91; Long Annuities, 4½; India Bonds, 8s. to 12s. premium; Exchequer Bills, 3s. to 6s. premium; and Exchequer Bonds, 99½ to 100.

FRIDAY.—The English Funds closed with a decline of fully ½ per cent. upon the opening prices.—Consols closing officially at 91½ 91½ for money, and 91½ 91½ for December. Reduced at 89½ 90; and the New Three-per-Cents, 89½ 90. Exchequer Bills, 2s. to 5s. premium. Exchequer Bonds, 99½ to 99½. Peruvian Bonds are flat at 6½. Turkish Scrip has fallen as low as 7 and 7½ dis. for account. Sardinian Bonds were last dealt in at 88½. Railway Shares, considering the fall in the English Stocks, keep up well.—Caledonian close at 59½ 59½; Great Northern, 8½ 90; North Westerns, 99 to 99½; Midlands, 6½ 68. In Miscellaneous securities and foreign shares there is no change to report.

SATURDAY.—Consols opened at 91 to 91½; afterwards, 91, sellers, noon, 91½ to 91½; at quarter-past one, 91½, sellers.

COUNTRY GRAIN.

IRSWIN, November 14.—With a large attendance of persons we do not find a large supply of wheat. The trade remained steady at last week's prices; the millers, being bare in stock, are taking off such samples as are offered to them. We noticed a considerable increase to the quantity of barley. This, however, had no influence on prices; and a rapid sale was made of all qualities at an advance of 8s. to 4s. per quarter on last week's transactions. Beans and peas inquired for; but we saw none at market.

COUNTRY CATTLE.

DEAR SMITHFIELD, Tuesday, Nov. 14.—There was but a limited supply of fat beasts to day, most of which were of the inferior sort; the best things were in good request, and all readily sold. Sheep was about the average, and a shade higher. Fat calves more plentiful but a heavy sale. Fat pigs scarce and well sold, fully maintaining last week's prices. Beef made 5½d. to 6d., mutton, 6½d. to 7d.; veal, 7d. per lb.; pigs, 10s. per score; rough fat, 6s. 5d. per stone, commencing 23rd October; hides, young, 8s. and above, 3½d. per lb.; ditto, young, under 8s. 3½d.; old cows, all weights, 3d.; cut hides, 2½d.; calf skins, 10lb. and under 4d.; above 10 and under 16, 4½d.; above 16, 3½d.; all cut calf skins 3½d. less.

DUBLIN SMITHFIELD CATTLE MARKET.

THURSDAY, November 16.—There was a short supply, owing to the unfavourable state of the day. Former prices fully supported: Beef, 4s. to 6s. per cwt. in sink; mutton, 5½d. to 6½d. per lb. in sink; veal, 7½d. to 8d. per lb. in sink; pork, 4s. to 5s. per cwt. Demand for live pigs continue for England. More doing in the way of slaughter for contracts.

BANKRUPTS.

TUESDAY.—Henry Bois, Fenchurch-street, and Addiscombe-road; Croydon, merchant.—William Turner, Bow-lane, Cheap-side, tailor, trimming seller.—John Willey, High-street, Borough, cabinet maker.—John Henry Banks, Little Queen-street, Holborn, engraver.—Raffael Monti, Great Marlborough-street, and Princess-street, Hanover-square, sculptor.—Peter Cattell, Long-acre, coachmaker.—John Brown, Winchester, carpenter.—Samuel Osler, Grange-road, Bermondsey, leather factor.—John Lampert Pain, Church-terrace, and Aldenham-street, St. Pancras-road, and Acton-place, Ragnigge-wells-road, builder.—Samuel Bailey, Davies-street, Berkeley-square, hotel-keeper.—Robert Thomas, Wardour-street, Oxford-street, tool maker.—John Bennett, Hart-street, Bloomsbury, artists' brush manufacturer.—John Clay, Wednesbury, bricklayer.—John Berry, Coventry, licensed victualler.—Thomas Walker Lhiood, Cannock, Staffordshire, cattle dealer.—Henry Perks, Liverpool, porter merchant.—George Hoyle and John Tattersall, Whitwell Bottom, near Newchurch, Lancashire, cotton manufacturers.—James Brown, Michael Brown, and Nichol Brown, Monk Wearmouth, Durham, builders.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS.

BIRTHS.

On the 7th inst., at Wilton Lodge, Hawick, Mrs. Edmund Elliot, relict of the late Lieut.-Colonel Elliot, 79th Highlanders, of a son.—On the 8th inst., at Southsea, the wife a Lieut. Savage, Royal Artillery, of a son.—On the 18th inst., at a Mount, Nutshalling, near Southampton, the wife of J. A. Draige, Esq., Bengal Civil Service, of a daughter.—On the 14th inst., at 3, Stratford Villas, Camden New-town, the wife of G. M. King, of a daughter.—On the 15th inst., in Brunswick-square, Brighton, the wife of the Rev. Dr. Morris, of a daughter.—On the 14th inst., at Waverley, near Liverpool, the wife of Lieut.-Colonel Arthur J. Lawrence, of a daughter, stillborn.—On the 15th inst., at Springfield Lodge, Grove-hill, Camberwell, the wife of G. C. Porter, Esq., of a daughter.—On the 15th inst., at West Woodhay House, Berks, the wife of Robt. W. Robertson, Esq., of Tooting, Surrey, of a daughter.—On the 16th inst., at Eiden Hall, the wife of Francis Rhodes Newton, Esq., of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

On the 14th inst., at Old Charlton (from the house of a friend), by the Rev. Oswald P. Sergeant, of Somerton, Oxfordshire, Frank Bowers, of Biddien Mold, eldest son of the Very Rev. the Dean of Manchester, to Henrietta Gertrude, sixth daughter of the late Rev. John Day, of North Tuddenham, Norfolk, and of Pelham-crescent, Brompton.—On the 14th inst., at St. James's, Westbourne-terrace, by the Rev. Lord Bayning, Frederick Bacon Frank, Esq., of Campsall Park, Yorkshire, and Earlim-hall, Norfolk, to Mary Anne, eldest daughter of Sir Baldwin Wake Walker, K.C.B.—On Thursday the 16th inst., at St. Mary, Stratford-le-Bow, by the Rev. G. T. Driffield, rector, George, youngest son of the late Samuel Goss, Esq., of Bow, Middlesex, to Eleanor Elizabeth, fourth daughter of Henry Pound, Esq., of Harley-place, Bow.

DEATHS.

On the 6th inst., at Milliken, Renfrewshire, William John, the infant and eldest son of Sir Robert Napier, Bart.—On the 8th inst., at Cheltenham, Lieutenant John Gurley, R.N., of Grenada, W.I., aged 55.—On the 12th inst., Edward Barker, Esq., of Barstow Hall, Warwickshire, in the 80th year of his age.—On the 14th inst., at her residence, 73, Carlton-road-villas, Kentish-town, London, Anna Morgan, widow of Major Richard Morgan, of Lyme Regis, Dorsetshire.

Printed by J. H. Smith, at No. 2, Bouverie-street, London, E.C.4. Published for the Proprietor, at the Printing Office of TAYLOR and BARNES, No. 4 and 5, Gracechurch-place, E.C.4. and published by hand at No. 408, Strand, opposite Aldgate-street, A.D. 1854.

Vol. IV.—No. 100.]

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1851.

[WITH SUPPLEMENT, PRICE 6d.

TO ADVERTISERS.
EVERY SATURDAY, PRICE SIXPENCE, STAMPED.

THE FIELD:

The Country Gentleman's Newspaper.

A first-class Journal, devoted to every kind of information interesting to persons "Out of Town," ns

Tunting, | Racing, | Coursing, | Boating,
Shooting, | Angling, | Yachting, | Archery.

AND
The Garden; | The Farm; | The Household.
It is expressly designed for Families.

The official Stamp Returns for the quarter ending June, 1850, give it a circulation of 3,872 Copies Weekly.

Great improvements are now being made in it, and its circulation is rapidly extending.

The following is a list of ADVERTISING:

SCALE OF CHARGES.	2 s. d.
Twenty words and under.....	0 2 6
Each additional ten words.....	0 0 6
A half Column.....	1 10 0
A Column.....	3 0 0
A Page.....	8 8 0

For three insertions a reduction of one-eighth; and for six insertions a reduction of one-fourth will be made.

Field Office, 408, Strand.

PRIZE CATTLE SHOW OF THE SMITH-FIELD CLUB.

THE ANNUAL EXHIBITION OF PRIZE CATTLE, SHEEP, GOATS, IMPLEMENTS, &c., &c., to be held on TUESDAY MORNING, 21st DECEMBER, at the Public Rooms, 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th DECEMBER, at the Bazaar, KING-STREET, and BAKER-STREET. Open from Daylight till Nine in the Evening.—Admission, 1s.

THE BIRMINGHAM CATTLE, AND POULTRY SHOW, 1851.

THE SIXTH GREAT ANNUAL EXHIBITION OF STOCK AND DOMESTIC POULTRY will be held in BINGLEY HALL, DERBY, on TUESDAY, WEDNESDAY, THURSDAY, and FRIDAY, the 12th, 13th, 14th, and 15th of DECEMBER next.

The PRIVATE VIEW and ANNUAL DINNER on TUESDAY, December 12th.

THE SECOND ANNUAL EXHIBITION OF THE DERBYSHIRE AND MIDLAND COUNTIES' POULTRY ASSOCIATION will be held in the COUNTY HALL, DERBY, on THURSDAY and FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 30th and DECEMBER 1st, 1851. Doors open on Thursday at eleven a.m., and close at eight p.m. Admission, 2s. 6d. each till four p.m.; after four, 1s. each.—Doors open on Friday at nine a.m., and close at eight p.m. Admission, 1s. each till four p.m.; after four, 6d. each.

Silver Medals will be given instead of money prizes for the first Prizes of the value of 20s. and 30s., at the option of the Exhibitors taking those Prizes.

Exhibitors are requested to notice that Specimens for Exhibition must be delivered, carriage paid, at the County Hall, before four o'clock on Wednesday, November 29th.

ALFRED MADELEY, Hon. Sec.

Horticulture, &c.

FOREST TREES, EVERGREENS, &c., &c.
FRANCIS and ARTHUR DICKSON and SONS respectfully acquaint their patrons, and those about to plant, that their detailed priced CATALOGUE of "Forest and Ornamental Trees, Evergreens, Fruit Trees," &c., is published, and will be forwarded on application.

The Nurseries lying high and exposed, the whole of their Trees and Plants are hardy and vigorous; and having been transplanted periodically, are also well rooted, and are consequently calculated to thrive in the most exposed situations.

Separate Catalogues of "Roses" (descriptive), "Fruit Trees" (descriptive), "Stove and Greenhouse Plants," and "Herbaceous and Alpine Plants," are published, and will be forwarded on application.

UPTON NURSERIES, Chester, 1st Nov. 1851
Seed Warehouse, 106, Eastgate-street (opposite the Royal Hotel).

JAMES MELDRUM, NURSERYMAN, KENDAL, WESTMORELAND, begs to offer, upon the most reasonable terms, upwards of One Million of fine stout two-year SEEDLING OAKS, and also two-year SEEDLING ASH.—Price on application.

THE LARGEST and CHEAPEST NURSERY in ENGLAND for Geraniums (show and fancy), French Geraniums, Puchsias, Verbenas, Fairy Roses, Chrysanthemums, Helio tropes, Cinerarias, Calceolarias, Primulas and other soft-wooded plants, is the FLORAL NURSERY, ACTON ROAD, TURNHAM GREEN, near London. More than 250,000 plants are there cultivated annually.

The stock of show Geraniums exceeds 50,000, and comprises upwards of 750 varieties, amongst which almost every known kind will be found. The newest sorts, such as Carlos, Virginia Rosa (Poster's), Leah, Ficta, Margurata, Empress, Neatness, &c., can be had at 3s. each, or 30s. per dozen. The older varieties from 2s. to 24s. per dozen.

The selection of FRENCH GERANIUMS consists of 40 distinct sorts, at 2s. 6d. each, or 25s. per dozen.

SEEDLING CINERARIAS (10,000), from seed of first-rate flowers, at 4s. per dozen, in 6-sized pots, 20,000 really good SEEDLING HERBACEOUS CALCEOLARIAS now on hand at 4s. per dozen, in 6-sized pots.

30,000 VERBENAS.—Those let out in 1851 by Smith, Moekett, Turner, Chauviere, Bragg, and others, 8s. per dozen; all the older varieties, 5s. and 4s. per dozen.

Every possible quantity of good framed PRIMULAS at 4s. per dozen in 6-sized pots, and 6s. per dozen in 18s.

CHRYSA nthemums (Liliputian and large flowering) at 6s. and 8s. per dozen, all the best sorts.

70,000 SCARLET GERANIUMS, including all the new kinds, at prices remarkably low.

The foregoing have been selected as examples only, it being impossible, within the limits of an advertisement, to afford particulars of a stock so extensive. Catalogues will, however, be forwarded to all parts gratis.

Every possible exertion will be made to give the most perfect satisfaction to all who may favour this Establishment with their patronage. None but thoroughly established Plants will be sent out, and full reliance may be placed on prompt attention and fair dealing.

The Trade will be liberally dealt with. Provincial Nurserymen and Florists will do well to try this Establishment.

Terms cash, or a satisfactory reference
JOHN WESTWOOD, Proprietor.

MESSRS. J. and H. BROWN offer to the nobility and gentry the following, which they will forward to any part of the kingdom:—

Andromeda foetida, fine, per dozen, 12s. to 18 0	a. d.
25 Azaleas, new hardy Belgian varieties, one of a sort on their own roots.....	10 0
25 Azaleas, American varieties, do do.....	10 0
Hardy Heaths, Lelums, and Kalmias, per dozen.....	6 0
25 Hardy American plants, one of a sort.....	10 0
12 Rhododendrons, including Scarlet, White, and Rose, hardy varieties.....	12 0
25 Hardy American plants, one of a sort.....	10 0
6 Fine hardy Magnolias, one of a sort.....	5 0
50 Dwarf Roses, two of a sort, on their own roots.....	10 0
Standard and half standard Roses, per doz., 12s. to.....	15 0
Fine climbing Roses, of sorts, per dozen.....	6 0
Greenhouse Azaleas, choice varieties, per doz., 12 0
12 Camellias, well set with buds, fine sorts.....	30 0
Orchidea Plants, fine species, per dozen.....	30 0
21 Choice Ericas, one of a sort.....	16 0
12 Chrysanthemums, new, show, and Pom-pone varieties.....	8 0

FRUIT TREES.

Fine standard and dwarf-trained Peaches, Nocturnes, Apricots, Plums Pears, and Cherries. The best and most approved sorts of these respective kinds, to name, each, 2s. 6d. or, per dozen..... 30 0
Untrained or maiden do., 1s. 6d. each, or, per dozen..... 12 0
Apples, dwarfs, and standards of best sorts, per dozen, 1s. to..... 15 0
Fine Gooseberries, Currants, and Raspberries, per dozen..... 3 0
Figs, Medlars, Quinces, Walnuts, and Mulberries, each..... 2 0
Filberts, new, thin-shelled, and red-skinned, per dozen..... 3 0
Strong Vines, from eyes and layers, in pots, per dozen..... 18 0
New Gardens and Greenhouses furnished on moderate terms.

ALBION NURSERY, STOKE NEWINGTON, London.—Nov. 25.

HYACINTHS, TULIPS, &c.
WILLIAM E. RENDLE and Co., SEED MERCHANTS, PLYMOUTH, have still on hand a fine assortment of all the best Hyacinths, Tulips, Anemones, Ranunculus Gladioli, Sparaxis, Lilium, Crocus, Iris, Jonquille, Snowdrops, Anagallis, and other kinds of Bulbous Roots.

The present is an excellent time for planting them either in pots or in the ground, but the sooner the better. All orders will be properly attended to. RENDLE'S CATALOGUE of BULBOUS ROOTS can be had in exchange for two penny stamps, on application to WILLIAM E. RENDLE and Co., Seed Merchants, Plymouth.

LARGE SURPLUS STOCK OF TREES, SHRUBS, &c., NOW ON SALE AT

MESSRS. WILLIAM E. RENDLE and Co.'s NURSERY, PLYMOUTH.—The Proprietors, having a large surplus Stock of the following, can offer them at greatly reduced prices; and all Orders above £10 will be delivered free of carriage in any Station on the Broad Gauge Railways, and to Cork, Dublin, and Liverpool by Steamers.

400,000 Seedling Scotch Fir.....	300,000 "
500,000 " Larch Fir.....	200,000 "
200,000 " Pinus australis.....	10,000 "
10,000 " Turkish and English Oak.....	3 ft. in height.
10,000 " Cedrus Deodora, from 6 in. to 3 ft. in height.....	20,000 all the best varieties of Strawberries.

10,000 of the best Rhubarb Roots in cultivation. With a large and general assortment of Nursery Stock, including Forest Trees, Shrubs, and Fruit Trees, such as are generally found in a large Provincial Nursery.

All who intend to plant, either in the Forest, the Shrubbery, or the Garden, during the present Autumn, should procure their New Autumn Descriptive Catalogue, which can be had in exchange for one penny stamp, on application to WILLIAM E. RENDLE and Co., Nurserymen and Seed Merchants, Plymouth. Established 1776.

THE FOREST, the PARK, the SHRUBBERY, and the GARDEN.—Noblemen and Gentlemen requiring Trees, Shrubs, or Fruit Trees, during the present Autumn should obtain RENDLE'S NEW AUTUMNAL DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE which can be had on application from WILLIAM E. RENDLE and Co., Nurserymen and Foresters, Plymouth. Established 1776. New Seeds, growth of 1851. Arrangements are now being made at this Establishment for a large supply of genuine and good Seeds for the coming season.

To be Let, Sold, &c.

SALMON FISHERIES IN THE TWEED TO LET.

TO BE LET, on LEASE, for such a term of years as may be agreed on, with entry at 26th May next, the FISHERIES and FERRY OF EDELMOUTH. The Fisheries being about a mile below the Town of Kelso, extend to nearly three miles in length on the north side of the River, comprehend the whole Tweed Salmon Fishing within the Barony of Edinham, and embrace some of the best Angling Casts in that River.

Also, TO LET, with entry now or at Whit-Sunday next, the Desirable VILLA of SLAUGHTER, comprehending the whole of SLAUGHTER HOUSE, situated within the Pollock grounds of Healdersdyke Park, and containing Dining-room, Drawing room, Five Bed-rooms, Kitchen, Servants' Apartments, and Conveniences.

The House is within a mile of Kelso, and is in the immediate vicinity of Edinmouth Fisheries, and will be let either separately from, or in connection with these, as may be desired.

Apply to SMITHS and ROBSON, Solicitors, Kelso.

HUNTING RESIDENCE TO LET.

TO BE LET, FURNISHED, with immediate Possession, a COUNTRY LODGE OF 10 ROOMS, RUTLAND, with a Garden, Pleasure Grounds, and Eight Acres of fine Pasture Land adjoining, situated four miles from the Colchester Kennels, within reach of three other Parks of House, and a quarter of a mile from the Oakham Railway Station. The House is roomy and commodious, and there is excellent stabling for thirteen Horses (Eight Boxes and Five Stalls). Apply to Mr. D. S. BOYCE, House Agent, Oakham; or to R. W. BAKER, Esq., Colchester, Oakham; Colchester, Nov. 17, 1851.

MATCH HORSES ON SALE.

SEVERAL PAIRS, consisting of GREYS, BAYS, and CHESTNUTS, from 13-1 to 16-2 high, chiefly young and good sleepers. Some are also good Saddle Horses. On view, and may be tried on the "Trent" &c., at REA'S CON-TRACT HORSE and CARRIAGE REPOSITORY, SOUTHWAKE.

From 80 to 100 HORSES always on SALE by PRIVATE TREATY.

NORTH WILLINGHAM WOOD SALE.

TO BE SOLD by AUCTION, by Mr. CHARLES TATESON, at the BOUCHER-RETT'S ARMS INN, WILLINGHAM CORNER, on THURSDAY, the 7th of DECEMBER, 1851, about 150 Lots of Wood, viz: 35 Lots of Ash Poles, 13 Lots of Alder ditto, 12 Lots of Birch ditto, 10 Lots of Larch ditto (very good), 12 Lots of Oak Timber, about 20 Lots of Ash and Elm Timber, and about 20 Lots of Scotch Fir Timber; particulars of which will appear in full and cards. The purchasers at the last year's sale are requested to pay for their respective lots at the above time on the morning of the present sale. Timber on the table at Two o'clock, and the Sale to commence at Four, 1851.

EXTENSIVE and IMPORTANT ANNUAL SALE OF FAT STOCK.

J. HOLLAND, jun., respectfully announces that he is honoured with instructions from the Right Hon. Lord BERNERS to SELL by AUCTION, on TUESDAY, the 5th Day of DECEMBER, 1851, on the FARM PREMISES at PEGGUY, in the COUNTY of LEICESTER, 63 very superior fat BEASTS, consisting of 22 very prime fat Scotch bullocks of unusually good quality, 37 superior fat short-horn and home-bred bullocks, 5 fat Ayrshire cows and heifers, and 1 fat Scotch calf; 310 very excellent fat SHEEP, consisting of 222 half-bred Leicester and Down fat sheep (very superior), 25 Leicester fat shaverings, 15 half-bred fat Scotch, and 45 thorough-bred fat Southdowns; 50 fat and porker PIGS; and 4 Draught HORSES.

Catalogues will be ready fourteen days previous to the sale, and may be had at the principal Inns in the neighbourhood of Mr. Wilmam, Tugby Farm; and at the Auctioneer's Office, 20, Market-street, Leicester.

Refreshments as usual at Eleven o'clock, and the Sale will commence at Twelve prompt.

REA'S CENTRAL HORSE and CARRIAGE REPOSITORY.

St. George's-road, Southwark (within a mile of the London Bridge).

TO BE SOLD by AUCTION, on TUESDAY, November 28th, at Twelve o'clock precisely, upwards of

ONE HUNDRED and TEN HORSES,

(on Commission). A number of Carriages, &c., of various descriptions, for unreserved sale; several pairs of Holstein Carriage and Brougham Horses, Hunters (some of which are direct from Ireland), Wright-carriage Cobs, Ladies' Hackes, &c. Also Forty powerful, sound Cart and Van Horses, Carriages and Harness, particulars of which may be had in Catalogue the morning of sale.

PRIVATE COMMISSION DEPARTMENT.

From Eighty to One Hundred Horses, and several Hundred Carriages and Vehicles, always on Sale daily by Private Treaty.

Keep, 3s. per Day and Night. Horses taken from the London Railway Terminals without charge to the owner.

N.B.—Near the Elephant and Castle.

Miscellaneous.

PROVISION AGAINST DISABILITY by Sickness or Accident, effected with the LAW PROPERTY and LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, 30, Essex-street, Strand.

Example: A person aged 30, may secure an Annuity of £100 a year in case of permanent disability, by payment of only 35s. per annum.

Forms and particulars forwarded to any applicant, by E. BARNES, Secretary.

REDEMPTION OF MORTGAGES and LOANS secured by a Policy which guarantees the repayment of Loans at a fixed period, or earlier in case of death, so that the Property may pass unincumbered to the family, by the LAW PROPERTY and LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, 30, Essex-street, Strand. Apply to E. BARNES, Secretary.

LOANS.—Persons desirous of obtaining ADVANCES from £50 to £250, upon approved personal security, repayable by easy instalments, extending over a lengthened period, are invited to examine the principles of the BRITISH MUTUAL SUBSCRIPTION LOAN ASSURANCE CLASSES. Prospectuses, Reports, and every information, may be obtained on application at the British Mutual Life Office, 17, New Bridge-street, Blackfriars. Rules 6d. each copy, or 1s. per post. CHARLES JAMES THICKE, Resident Secretary.

MORTGAGES at 5 per Cent.—£5,000 ready to be immediately advanced in one sum, or in smaller sums of not less than £50, on security of Leasehold, Freehold, and Copyhold Houses and Land; also on property derived under Wills, consisting of Life Annuities, Reversionary Interests, &c.—Apply to Mr. BIGGS, 9, Adam-street, Adelphi.

BANK OF DEPOSIT, NATIONAL ASSURANCE and INVESTMENT ASSOCIATION, No. 3, Pall Mall East, LONDON. Established A.D. 1811.

Empowered by Special Act of Parliament.

PARTIES desirous of INVESTING MONEY are requested to examine the Plan of this Institution, by which a high rate of Interest may be obtained with perfect security. The Interest is payable in January and July at the Head Office in London; and may also be received at the various Branches, or through Country Bankers, without delay or expense.

PETER MORRISON, Managing Director. Prospectuses and Forms for opening accounts sent free on application.

Miscellaneous.

THE HUNTING SEASON.
F. P. HARRISON'S "ERA" FLANNEL SHIRT, for Hunting, Shooting, &c., obtainable only at
 No. 49, MARKET-STREET, READING.
 "It is only to be seen to be admired, and when once worn will never be deserted."—Era, April 3rd, 1853.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS
 PATENT.

MAJOR'S REMEDIES for the HORSE,
 the best and most effectual ever discovered, saving the "burning iron" and the torture of "cautery."

MAJOR'S BRITISH REMEDY for the Cure of Rheumatism, Spavins, Splints, &c. A single bottle sufficient to cure from four to six Spavins, price £1. 15s.

MAJOR'S SINOVITIC LOTION (the Remedy, No. 2), for Grogginess, Weak Joints, Sprains of the Back sinews, Ruptures of the Sheaths of Tendons, Suspensory Ligaments, Shoulder Lameness, and Inflammation; also for the cure and prevention of breaking down, &c. In bottles, large size, £1. 15s.; small, 10s. 6d. each. The above invaluable remedies can now be forwarded to any part of the United Kingdom, Pre-payment, by Check or Post-office order, made payable to Joseph Major, Post-office, Charing-cross.

Letters addressed to Joseph Major, Horse Infirmary, British-yard, Cuckpurs-street.
 Agent for Newmarket, Mr. Thomas Dunning; for Scotland, Messrs. Gurner and Alastair, Edinburgh; Mr. W. F. Wells, chemist, 52, Suckville-street, agent for Dublin; agent for Glasgow, Mr. W. A. Preston, 16, Stockwell-street, and 44, Adelphi-street.

THE MOST APPROVED STOVES.
 The demand for the CHUNK and VESTA STOVES (separately patented) still continuing unabated, and numbers having been sold last season (in all upwards of 14,000), through the patronage of families who have had experience of their pre-eminently useful qualities, WILLIAM S. BURTON has renewed confidence in recommending them for their cleanliness, economy, and safety. During the last thirteen years they have been found sources of great comfort in the bed-room of the invalid, affording an uniform temperature throughout the day and night, with one supply of fuel, without attention. Particulars sent post-free. Chunk, 30s. to 40s.; Vesta, from 35s.; Stoves for Warehouses, &c., from 10s. each. Joyce's Patent Fuel, 4s. 6d. per sealed bag.

WILLIAM S. BURTON has ten large Show Rooms (all communicating), exclusive of the shop, devoted solely to the show of GENERAL FURNISHING IRONMONGERY (including cutlery, nickel silver, plated and japanned wares, iron and brass bedsteads) so arranged and classified that purchasers may easily and at once make their selections.

Catalogues with engravings sent (per post) free. The money returned for every article not approved of.
 39, OXFORD-STREET (corner of Newman-street); 2 and 3, NEW-MAN-STREET; and 4 and 5, PERRY'S-PLACE.

THE BEST SHOW OF IRON BED-STEADS IN THE KINGDOM is WILLIAM S. BURTON'S. He has two very large Rooms, which are devoted to the exclusive show of Iron and Brass Bedsteads and Children's Cots, with appropriate Bedding and Mattresses. Common Iron Bedsteads, 18s.; Portable Folding Bedsteads, from 12s. 6d.; Patent Iron Bedsteads, fitted with dovetail joints and patent sucking, from 21s.; and Cots, from 21s. each. Handsome ornamental Iron and Brass Bedsteads, in great variety, from £2. 10s. to £13. 10s.

THE PERFECT SUBSTITUTE for SILVER.—The REAL NICKEL SILVER, introduced twenty years ago by WILLIAM S. BURTON, when PLATED by the patent process of Messrs. Elkington and Co., is beyond all comparison the very best article next to sterling silver that can be employed as such, either usefully or ornamentally, as by no possible test can it be distinguished from real silver.

	Plated Pattern.	Theriac Pattern.	Rug's Pattern.
Tea Spoons, per dozen.	18s.	20s.	32s.
Dessert Forks	30s.	40s.	46s.
Dessert Spoons	30s.	42s.	48s.
Table Forks	40s.	50s.	64s.
Table Spoons	40s.	58s.	61s.

Ten and Coffee Sets, Whittens, Candlesticks, &c., at proportionate prices. All kinds of Re-plating done by the Patent Process.

CHEMICALLY PURE NICKEL NOT PLATED.

	Fiddle Thread.	King's.
Table Spoons and Forks	12s.	28s.
Full size, per dozen.	12s.	28s.
Dessert ditto and ditto.	12s.	28s.
Ten ditto	5s.	11s.

GAS CHANDELIERs and BRACKETS.—The increased and increasing use of gas in private houses has induced WILLIAM S. BURTON to collect from all the various manufacturers all that is new and choice in Brackets, Chandeliers, and Chandeliers, adapted to offices, passages, and dwelling-rooms, as well as to have some designed expressly for him; these are now on show in one of his Ten large Rooms, and present, for novelty, variety, and purity of taste, an unequalled assortment. They are marked in plain figures, at prices proportionate with those which have tended to make his Establishment the largest and most remarkable in the kingdom, viz., from 12s. 6d. (two light) to £16.

LAMPS of all SORTS and PATTERNS.
 —The largest, as well as the choicest, assortment in existence of FRENCH and ENGLISH MODERATE, PALM, and SCANDINAVIAN, AIR-GAS, SOLAR, and other LAMPS, with all the latest improvements, and of the newest and most recherche patterns, in Ornolu, Bohemian, and Plain Glass, or Papier Maché, is at WILLIAM S. BURTON'S, and they are arranged in our large room, so that patterns, sizes, and sorts can be instantly selected.

REAL FRENCH COLZA OIL, 4s. 9d. per gallon.
PALMERS' CANDLES, 9d., 9½d., and 10d. per lb.

WILLIAM S. BURTON has TEN LARGE SHOW ROOMS (all communicating), exclusive of the shop, devoted solely to the show of GENERAL FURNISHING IRONMONGERY (including cutlery, nickel silver, plated and japanned wares, iron and brass bedsteads) so arranged and classified that purchasers may easily and at once make their selections.

Catalogues with engravings sent (per post) free. The money returned for every article not approved of.
 39, OXFORD-STREET (corner of Newman-street); 2 and 3, NEW-MAN-STREET; and 4 and 5, PERRY'S-PLACE.

WATER
POISONED

"The above engraving represents accurately a section of a leaden pipe, which was employed for a short time in conveying water from a well on the grounds of Mr. Dice, of Bonchurch, Isle of Wight. The original section of pipe is 8½ in. long, 2½ in. diameter, and 5-16 in. thick. A great part of the internal surface is corroded by the action of the water; but, as shown in the drawing, four deep excavations have been made, and another is shaded out of view by the manner in which the section of the pipe has been cut. The water has cut these deep pits almost through the pipe, and not only upon the portion which we have illustrated, but have formed similar chasms throughout the entire length."—Expositor.

N.B.—The corrosive water of the Isle of Wight has no effect on Gutta Percha Tubing. See Testimonial below.

DURABILITY OF GUTTA PERCHA TUBING.

Many inquiries having been made as to the durability of Gutta Percha Tubing, the Gutta Percha Company have pleasure in giving publicity to the following letter from Sir RAYMOND JARVIS, Ventnor, Isle of Wight.

"In reply to your letter received this morning, respecting the Gutta Percha Tubing for pump service, I can state, with much satisfaction, it answers perfectly. Many builders and other persons have lately examined it, and there is not the least apparent difference since the first laying down, now several years; and I am informed that it is to be adopted generally in the houses that are being erected here."

THE GUTTA PERCHA COMPANY, PATENTEES,
 18, WHARF-ROAD, CITY-ROAD, LONDON.

HENRY PEAT,
HUNTING SADDLER,
 14, OLD BOND-STREET,
 LONDON.

THE SUCCESSFUL RESULTS OF THE LAST HALF CENTURY HAVE PROVED BEYOND QUESTION THAT

ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL
 possesses peculiarly nourishing powers in the growth, restoration, and improvement of the human hair, and is now universally acknowledged to be the cheapest and most superior oil for turning grey, strengthening weak hair, cleansing it from scurf and dandruff, and makes it beautifully soft, curly, and glossy. Its operation in cases of baldness is peculiarly active; and in the growth of the beard, whiskers, eyebrows, and mustachios, it is unfailing in its stimulative operation. For children it is especially recommended, as forming the basis of a beautiful head of hair. In dressing the hair nothing can equal its effect, rendering it so admirably soft that it will lie in any direction, and imparting a transcendent lustre.

Price 3s. 6d. and 7s.; Family Bottles (equal to four small), 10s. 6d., and double that size, 21s.

CAUTION!—On the Wrapper of each Bottle are the words ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL, in two lines. The same are engraved on the back of the Wrapper nearly 1,500 times, containing 29,025 letters.

Sold by A. ROWLAND and SONS, 20, Hatton-garden, London, and by all Chemists and Perfumers.

TO SPORTSMEN.—Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent, for valuable and extraordinary improvements in the most powerful and brilliant Telescopes, Camp, and Race-course, and Perspective Glasses, to know the distances of objects viewed through them—of great importance to Sportsmen, the Army, Navy, and others. Messrs. S. and B. SOLOMONS, Opticians, 39, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly. Observe—Opposite the York Hotel. These Telescopes possess such extraordinary powers, that some three-and-a-half inches with an extra eye-piece will show distinctly Jupiter's moons, Saturn's ring, and the double stars. With the same Telescope can be seen a person's countenance three-and-a-half miles distant, and an object from sixteen to twenty miles. They are of larger, and all sizes, with increasing powers accordingly.

THE ROYAL EXHIBITION, 1851.—A valuable, newly-invented, very small powerful waistcoat-pocket glass, the size of a walnut, by which a person can be seen and known one-and-a-half miles distant. They answer every purpose on the race-course, at the opera-houses, country scenery, and ships are clearly seen at twelve to fourteen miles. They are invaluable for shooting, deer-stalking, yachting, to sportsmen, gentlemen, game-keepers, and tourists. Opera and Race-course Perspective Glasses, with wonderful powers; an object can be clearly seen from ten to twelve miles distant. Newly-invented Spectacles. The most aged defective sight is brought to its youthful, natural, and original state. Invisible and all kinds of Acoustic Instruments for relief of extreme Deafness.—39, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, opposite the York Hotel.

GREAT COMFORT TO INVALIDS.
A FIXED WATER-CLOSET for £1.
 Places in gardens converted into comfortable Water-closets by the PATENT HERMETICALLY SEALED PAN, with its Self-acting Valve, entirely preventing the return of cold air or effluvia. Any carpenter can fix it in two hours. Price £1. Also, Hermetically-sealed Inodorous Chamber Commodes, £1, £2 4s., and £3, and improved Portable Water-closets, with Pump, Cistern, and Self-acting Valve. A Prospectus, with Engravings, forwarded by enclosing two postage stamps.
 At FIFE and Co.'s Sanatorium, 46, Leicester-square, London.

IMPORTANT TO FAMILIES FURNISHING. who study elegance with economy. JAMES COOK'S THREE GUINEA FRENCH POLISHED MADAGASCAR ARABIAN BEDSTEAD, Bedding, Cabinet, Carpet, Looking-glass, and Upholstery Warehouse, Bromley-house, 22 and 23, Queen's-buildings, Knightsbridge. Estimates given, and a list of prices sent post-free.

BY LEADEN
PIPES.

FORD'S EUREKA
 COLOURED SHIRT-ING is now ready, in 200 different patterns. Specimens, in various colours, sent post free on receipt of six stamps.

FORD'S COLOURED EUREKA SHIRTS, six for 27s.

FORD'S WHITE EUREKA-S, best quality, six for 40s.; second quality, six for 31s.; if washed, ready for use, 2s. extra.

CAUTION.—Ford's Eureka Shirts are stamped, "38, POULTRY, LONDON," without which none are genuine.

Catalogues, with particulars, post free.

RICHARD FORD, 38, Poultry, London.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS
PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS is allowed by upwards of 200 Medical gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the manufacturer, Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a single truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d.; postage, 1s. Double ditto, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, 1s. 8d. Post-office orders to be made payable to J. WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly ELASTIC and COMPRESSIBLE, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of WEAKNESS and SWELLING of the LEGS, VARICOSE VEINS, SPRAINS, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price from 7s. 6d. to 16s. each. Postage, 6d.

MANUFACTORY, 228, Piccadilly, London.

A NEW DISCOVERY IN TEETH.

MR. HOWARD, SURGEON-DENTIST, 52, Fleet-street, has introduced an entirely New Description of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural teeth, as not to be distinguished from the originals by the closest observer; they will never change colour or decay, and will be found superior to any teeth ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots, or any painful operation, and will support and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication. Decayed teeth rendered sound and useful in mastication. 52, Fleet-street.—At home from one till five.

BIBLE BIBLE BIBLE!

If you suffer from the above distressing complaint, send twelve postage stamps to W. S. WORBOYS, CHEMIST, 76, NEW CUT, LAMBETH, London, and receive a Box of Pills, Diet Table, and plain rules in cases of sickness or accident, by return of post.

N.B.—If you wish to keep the doctor out of your house, don't neglect this timely advice.

DEAFNESS and NOISES in the HEAD.—Institution for the Cure of Deafness, 9, Suffolk-place, Pall-mall, London.—Instant and permanent restoration of hearing guaranteed, without the use of ear-trumpets, instruments, or causing one moment's inconvenience to the most aged or nervous sufferer. Dr. HUGHTON'S new and extraordinary discovery, by one consultation, enables deaf persons of either sex to hear immediately with perfect ease the lowest whisper, and magically removes all ringing in the ears. Hospitals and private testimonials, and certificates from the most eminent physicians and surgeons in England, in whose presence deaf persons had been cured, and many hundreds of private patients cured, can be seen or referred to. Hours of consultation, eleven till four every day. FRANCIS ROBERT HUGHTON, Member of the London Royal College of Surgeons, May 2, 1845; Licentiate of the Apothecaries' Company, April 30, 1846.

Just Published, SELF-CURE OF DEAFNESS, for COUNTRY PARISHES; a Step to Empiricism, Quackery, and Exorbitant Fees. Sent, on receipt of seven stamps, free. Examination free.
 9, Suffolk-place, Pall-mall.

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

HUNTING.
 M. M. M.—The South Essex Fox-hounds will meet on Tuesday, 29th, at Hassildon Church, and on Saturday, Dec. 2nd, at Orsett Heath, at half past ten. You will find the other information you seek in another column.

Huntsman.—The cards were sent by post, and must therefore have miscarried. Send your address in full, and we will despatch them with pleasure.

Harkness.—1.—If, as you say, the Master of the Hounds was a considerable distance from the hounds when they burst, you need not have waited for him. The etiquette of the field, however, compels you to "hold hard" until the Master gets up. 2.—We have seen a young gentleman severely horsewhipped for rudely rushing before another when in the act of gathering for a leap. The tailoring fox-hunters are a sad nuisance when out on a full day.

Charles.—As your horse is such a terrific puller it is no use in saw his head off. You can try the bridle in question, but bridle of a punishing nature very often irritate—not subdue. We would recommend you to sit quietly, with both hands well down—if he will not then go kindly, let us know.

An Admirer.—If you want real good hunting, with heavy fencing, devote a few days to Lord Henry Bentinck's hounds. They are very fast, and you would have to leap high and go very fast to see the death. No drawing-room fox-hunter need go down into Lincolnshire, for they ride across country more like devils than men.

Mellon.—There are but few hunters fast enough for sleepchasing—especially when we frequently find steeplechasing not more than nine, ten, and sometimes right stone. A perfect weight-carrying hunter has but a poor chance with the generality of the "weeds" that very frequently carry off the prizes. You will find Yorkshire the best county, and if you cannot meet with one there to suit you, go over to Ireland.

A Master of Fox-hounds.—You are not the only kennels in which the disease is prevalent. To remove them to higher ground would not cure your hounds, as we have known the disease very bad in kennels built on high ground, and on a dry sandy soil. We shall shortly publish some remarks on the treatment of hounds.

COURSING.
 T.—Favour us by forwarding the pedigree, and if shall of course be inserted.

RACING.
 Query.—Barker rode Knight of St. George for the Worcestershire Stakes.

Jacky.—We do not undertake to decide wagers.

Tom.—Dirk Hatterick was scratched for the Con-vivial Stakes (York) at 9 a.m. on the 3rd of August last.

Walter.—The amount you state was offered and taken. Sherrin.—Little Davie won the Tradesmen's Plate (Derby).

POULTRY.
 M. T. B.—If you can send out well-bred fowls at a trifling expense it might answer. Poultry breeding is carried on with spirit in the United States. We give the average price of choice fowls there as a guide for your speculation.—Brahma fowls from 6 to 10 dollars per pair; those hatched in 1853 from 10 to 16 dollars the pair. Sumatra pheasant, or Ebon game, about the same price. White Shanghaes 5 to 10 dollars per pair. Hong-Kong fowls, 15 dollars per pair. Brecken geese, if fine, 10 dollars per pair.

Burton.—The pullets are generally dark coloured—rocks red, interspersed with black.

Williams.—The Shropshire Poultry Show will take place on Tuesday, the 29th of November.

T. B., Bristol.—Stevens, King-street, Covent Garden.

MASONIC.
 J. H.—Yes. We are glad to receive communications from Lodges. We cannot attend every Lodge in London—therefore must depend sometimes upon Secretaries favouring us with a report of their meetings.

Tom.—We are certain the Queen is maligned in such a manner. Some ladies we are aware, have an objection to Masonry (and that is most frequently caused by Masons themselves), but the Queen's uncle (with the exception of the Duke of Cambridge) being all Masons, and her much-loved parent the Duke of Kent, and revered uncle the Duke of Sussex, both being Grand Masters, she could have no well-founded objection to Prince Albert's entering that excellent Order. We have reason to know that preparations were made at the "Alpha Lodge," Kensington, by the Duke of Sussex, some few years since, for the purpose of initiating the Prince. The Duke's death took place before the arrangements were completed, and thus the matter dropped, more particularly as there was no member of the Royal Family in a position to succeed to the Grand Chair.

AQUATIC.
 S.—The owner of the celebrated Mosquito, which raced so often with Volante, is a candidate for the Royal London Yacht Club.

Z.—You are not eligible for the Lilley Club. Candidates must be yachtmen.

MISCELLANEOUS.
 Breeder and Trainer.—The following is the only information we can yet give you on the subject. It is the order issued by the Inspector-General of Cavalry to officers in command of regiments and depôts, &c.—"No three-year-old is for the present to be purchased. Officers commanding are to use their utmost endeavours to obtain four-year-olds at the present price, £26. 5s. With a view to render the augmentation recently authorised to the cavalry regiments serving at home and in Turkey (but especially those in Turkey) available for service with the least possible delay, the Secretary at War has sanctioned seasoned horses being purchased at the following prices:—Five and six-year-olds, £32; seven and eight-year-olds, £40. These horses, if in good condition, and no horse be purchased at these prices that is not at once fit to be put into the ranks as regards condition and stamina. As few horses from the class from which cavalry horses are purchased arrive at the age of seven or eight years without being blemished or showing some defect, veterinary surgeons are to be instructed not to reject horses for defects which will not interfere with a horse doing his work; and to bear in mind that the object to be attained is to procure a constitutionally sound horse, fit for the immediate service for which he is required. You will report to me on the 1st of every month what progress you have made in the last month in procuring horses, specifying their ages, for the information of the General Command-in-Chief. By order, &c.—JOSEPH THACKWELL, Lieutenant-General, Inspector-General of Cavalry."

CONTENTS.
Chronicle of the Week	1,107
Field Sports and the War	1,108
Racing and Hunting	1,109
Coursing	1,110
Yachting	1,111
Rowing—The Championship of the Thames	1,112
Crickets	1,113
Angling	1,114
Tournament in America	1,115
The Sportsman's Library	1,116
The Garden	1,117
The Farm	1,118
Poultry Yard	1,119
Country House	1,120
Field Naturalists	1,121
Field of War	1,122
Life of the Marquis	1,123
List of Killed and Wounded	1,124
General News, Masons, etc. etc.	1,125
Latest Intelligence	1,126

NOTICE.

With the first number of the new volume of THE FIELD, and the new year, there will be presented to the Subscribers

THE SPORTSMAN'S ALMANAC,

AND

Country Gentleman's Calendar;

THE FIELD, THE GARDEN, THE FARM,
For the Year 1855.

This Almanack will contain superb Engravings, from designs by ANSDALL, WILSON, and others, with all the information useful for reference in the country house.

N.B.—This will be given to all who are Subscribers to THE FIELD for the year 1855.

ADVERTISEMENTS for "The Sportsman's Almanack" should be sent to THE FIELD Office without delay to secure insertion.

The Field.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1854.

TO OUR READERS.

THE FIELD has passed into new hands, and the conductors are desirous of stating explicitly what are their views and intentions.

The place which THE FIELD is designed to occupy is that which its name implies—a journal devoted to the collection of every kind of information calculated to inform and amuse those who take an interest in rural sports, amusements, or occupations, from the country gentleman, the lord of acres, to the man of business, who goes home, after his day's work in town, to enjoy his garden and paddock. A love of the country and of rural occupations is a characteristic of Englishmen; and it is the design of THE FIELD to minister to that wholesome taste.

We desire it to be expressly understood that we contemplate no rivalry with what are called the sporting newspapers, such as Bell's Life, the Era, and the Racing Times. We do not compete with them in their peculiar walks, and therefore we shall be content to occupy worthily a domain of our own—a domain sufficiently extensive to engage the entire energies of one journal, and in which a constituency will be found quite large enough, and certainly sufficiently influential, to gratify the utmost ambition. We shall purposely exclude all themes that are not perfectly consistent with decency, with humanity, with religion, and with the taste of the educated and refined. The sports which we shall record will be those shared and sanctioned by the best men, which are manly without being brutal, recreative without debauchery, and invigorating without vulgarity—HUNTING, SHOOTING, FISHING, YACHTING, CRICKET, RIDING, and DRIVING are the field sports which we shall embrace. The Country Occupations upon which we purpose to keep our readers fully informed, will be the Garden, the Home Farm, the Poultry-yard, the Stable, the Dairy, the Household. The COUNTRY AMUSEMENTS that will have a place will be such as Chess, Billiards, and in-door Games of all kinds, the Library and the Arts.

A department will be devoted to NATURAL HISTORY, to which we invite the contributions of whatever that is curious our readers may note. We shall report also the proceedings of those delightful societies, the Field Naturalist Clubs.

THE FIELD will be peculiarly a family paper; its contents will be sedulously weeded of whatever a gentleman would be unwilling to place in the hands of his children. It will, we trust, be so conducted that every member of a family shall find in it something to instruct and to amuse. It will make no endeavour to become the newspaper of "the man about town," but to be that of "the man out of town;" and, inasmuch as a vast number of those whose business is conducted in towns are dwellers in the country, we shall hope to enlist among our readers not a few of that class also.

In addition to the special news to which THE FIELD is dedicated, it will give a condensed and well-arranged collection of the general News of the Week.

Particular attention will be paid to the departments of the "Garden" and the "Farm," which are of such universal interest, and they will be entrusted to the care of competent editors, who will take those departments exclusively.

Our LETTER BAG will be open for the reception of correspondence on any of the subjects embraced in the scheme of THE FIELD, and we invite communications.

As for illustrations, they will be introduced when there is something that requires to be illustrated; but mere pictures, apropos of nothing, are mere impertinences; their cost is great, and much better ones can be procured for a penny in John Cassell's illustrated sheet. The expense is enormous, and, applied to other departments of the paper, would make them thoroughly efficient. This we purpose to do, reserving woodcuts for occasional introduction, when there is something which it will be desirable to describe to our readers through the eye.

As THE FIELD is designed to be a country gentleman's paper, we propose not to occupy so large a space with a mere Racing Calendar, which interests only a fraction of its readers, and which will necessarily be more fully obtained by them in Bell's Life, or the Racing Times, and to devote the space thus gained to other departments of more general interest and utility. A well-condensed report of the Racing News will, we believe, be far more pleasing to the great majority of our readers, while it will not be unacceptable to those who refer also to other journals, whose speciality it is, for the full details.

Such is an outline of our design, but we must pray the patience of our readers while we are carrying it into full operation, for this can only be accomplished by degrees.

Upon all the subjects named above, we invite the communications of our readers. There are many topics on which information is sought by some, that the experience of others can answer; let them send the inquiry for insertion, and, doubtless, it will elicit replies. Thus, in a department of NOTES AND QUERIES, do we hope to facilitate the communication of mutual intelligence on all country things.

For the rest we have little to say. This is not a party journal—it is for all parties. It will present a faithful history of the week, and a well-condensed collection of the news, but not to such an extent as to restrict too much the special information which it is designed to collect and convey.

In conclusion, we ask the continued confidence of all the existing readers of THE FIELD, at least, until they have given a fair trial to our scheme; and if they should then approve it, we ask them to do us this further favour—to make known to their friends that there is a journal which every lover of the country may read with pleasure and profit, and place in the hands of his family with safety.

Let us add a request, that if any reader has any objection to the scheme we have described, or to any part of it, he will candidly intimate it to us, for we are desirous of doing that only which is satisfactory to our readers. We shall also be obliged by suggestions for additions or alterations that may occur to any of our friends, as likely to be improvements of the plan. It is impossible for the most experienced conductors of such a journal as this to anticipate the wants of the public: they can only be learned by trial.

CHRONICLE OF THE WEEK.

WE have now received the fullest intelligence of a most decisive and sanguinary battle, fought in the valley of the Inkerman. The garrison of Sebastopol, reinforced by Osten-Sacken's army of 50,000 men, and animated into a fanatic fury by the presence of the Grand Duke Constantine and the two sons of the Emperor, fiercely attacked the extreme right of the English position with columns of infantry, supported by artillery, and estimated by Lord Raglan to have been not less than 60,000 strong. At the same time, a demonstration was made in the valley before Balaklava, by a body of 10,000 Russians; but this was merely intended to divert the French troops and the Highland Brigade from rendering any assistance to the English. The Russians advanced, under cover of the fog and rain, early on the morning of the 5th, and it seems universally admitted that they took the English by surprise. The Second Division and the Light Division bore the first brunt of the attack, and these were promptly supported by Sir G. Cathcart's Division (the Fourth), and the Brigade of Guards. It was a hand-to-hand fight, by a handful of men against a multitude. The Guards covered themselves with glory, and around a battery defended by the Coldstreams the Russians bodies lay three or four deep. It was a mêlée rather than a battle, and, astounding as the fact may be, it is unquestioned that 8,000 English troops successfully resisted 60,000 Russians from day-break till noon. General Bosquet's Division then came up to the support of the English, and the Russians were at length driven back with tremendous loss. They left 6,000 dead upon the field, and Lord Raglan estimates that their loss in killed, wounded, and prisoners, was not less than 15,000 men. On our side the loss was deplorable—462 killed, 1,952 wounded, and 191 missing. We lost three of our most valued general-officers, namely, Sir G. Cathcart, Brigadier-General Strangways, and Brigadier-General Goldie; 43 officers were killed, and 103 wounded; the Coldstreams alone lost 8 officers. The Russians behaved with the greatest barbarity, stabbing and shooting the wounded as they lay defenceless on the ground. It is said that Menschikoff forbade them to give quarter, by a general order, before the battle. While the struggle was at its height, a sortie was attempted from the walls of Sebastopol, but was driven back by the French, with the loss of 1,000 men.

There appears to be a strong feeling in the army that Lord Raglan was to blame, in leaving the extreme right of the position open to attack. It is even asserted that the weakness of this point had been frequently and specially called to his attention by Sir De Lacy Evans and other general officers, but that he neglected to take any precautions. That the position was undefended by artillery, or even by breast-works, is universally admitted; and the terrible execution made by two eighteen-pounders, brought up by Lieutenant-Colonel Dickson, serve to prove the great facility with which the approach might have been defended. It is clear that the allies have not only a numerous, but a brave and skilful enemy to contend against, and they need all the vigilance and skill of their own commanders to preserve them from such needless sacrifices of human life.

The allied arms have met with a reverse upon the Russian shores of the Pacific. Four French vessels—the Forté, the Eurydice, the Artemire, and the Obligado; and four English—the President, the Pique, the Amphitrite, and the Virago—sailed from Honolulu to attack the Russian fortress of Petropaulovski, on the coast of Kamtschatka. On the 31st of August the bombardment commenced, and on the 1st of September troops were landed to attack the batteries. The Russians retired from the batteries into a wood of indefinite extent, and kept up a fire upon the troops. Unable to hold the place, the troops retired to the ships, and the setting-in of the arctic winter compelled them to return. The Allies lost about 200 men, killed and wounded. Admiral Price was killed by the accidental discharge of his own pistol, and Captain Parker fell fighting bravely at the head of the marines.

The Independence Belge states, "upon good authority," that the Czar, after bringing Lord Dunkellin to St. Petersburg, has set him at liberty. Why bring him to St. Petersburg? Lord Raglan made overtures of exchange before Lord Dunkellin was removed from Sebastopol, but they were not accepted. To be sure, if they had been, the Czar would have missed the opportunity of making such another convert as Lieutenant Royer.

The Parisians are said to be highly indignant against Prince Napoleon, for leaving the seat of war on the plea of illness. They contrast his conduct with that of the brave old Maréchal, who died, as it were, at his post, though racked by the most tormenting disease. The popularity of Prince Napoleon is of importance to him, because (failing issue to the Emperor) he will be the next in succession.

Some of our contemporaries, who have a talent for the discovery of mares' nests, accuse the Government of keeping back despatches; and complain, that while they and the public are deprived of them, the contents supply the gossip of the ministerial coteries and clubs. The loudest complainant of all declares that he has good information that a despatch arrived on Saturday, the contents of which are not yet published, but that a domestic spent several hours in making himself master of it. It is just possible that when the informant of our contemporaries took in the evening beer, Jeames may have boasted of having special intelligence from the Crimea; but our contemporary should remember that that valuable domestic is apt to be a little imaginative.

There can be little or no doubt that this war (we do not refer to the method of carrying it on) is a most popular war. The abundance of recruits (putting to shame even the hateful conscript system), the willingness with which the working-classes bear the burthens of increased taxation and high bread, and the eager response of the nation to the appeal of the Queen in founding the Patriotic Fund, are all touching proofs of this. Nor is the enthusiasm in the colonies much less: witness Canada, whose Legislative Assembly is voting £20,000 for the use of the Patriotic Funds of both England and France—a graceful tribute to the two nations from a population springing out of both. That the war is popular among the gentry of England, what better proof need we than the fact that an applicant for a commission was told that there were twelve hundred names upon the list; the average before the war being about two hundred? We have been told that a Hertfordshire gentleman, bearing an ancient and honoured name, baseli his claim to a commission for his younger son upon the fact that the elder brother had been killed at the Alma. The immediate answer was, that his son was appointed. A correspondent of the Times suggests that the twelve hundred applicants should form themselves into a volunteer corps, to be called "The Patriotic Band," and which he predicates would soon make itself illustrious by the chivalry of their breeding.

People are talking, and journalists are writing, about the recent depression of the funds, as if it were an extraordinary and dispiriting circumstance. In our opinion it is one of the best proofs of the inherent confidence and courage of the nation that the funds are so high. The price of money is from six to seven per cent., there have been recent failures of enormous magnitude, bread is at famine prices, the nation is paying a double income-tax, and, finally, we are engaged in a most expensive and indefinite war, and still the funds are above ninety. Judging from precedent, the present price should be below eighty.

The conduct of Major Powys and his arbitrary exclusion of bonâ fide widows of soldiers from a participation in the funds of the association formed for their relief, continue to give great dissatisfaction to the subscribers of the fund. Some of the subscribers are even calling for the restoration of their money. Meantime, the committee (yielding to the pressure of public opinion), have called a meeting to reconsider the obnoxious rule. What a pity it is that so national and benevolent a scheme should be frustrated and discredited by pragmatic officiousness!

The ball and concert at Guildhall, in aid of the Patriotic Fund, took place on Wednesday evening. It went off merrily, despite such contretemps as the want of musicians for an hour and a half; but we cannot help regarding it as a breach of good taste, that people should be dancing and singing over such news as we are receiving from the Crimea.

Mr. Perry has returned from Paris, to apologise to Mr. Bedborough for his unintentional incivility, and to explain that the money was wanted for "a safe and advantageous investment, producing a larger rate of interest than could be derived by remaining at the London bankers." However this may be, Mr. Bedborough does not appear to be satisfied, for another advertisement has appeared, declaring that "he cannot advertise further remittances," and stating that "in addition to the reasons given in the Times of the 9th inst., for withholding the petitions to her Majesty in favour of Mr. Perry, the treasurer has now to state that Mr. Perry has distinctly intimated to him that it is not his intention to accept any situation or office in her Majesty's service." It is but fair to Mr. Perry to state that he has placed it in the power of Mr. Bedborough and Mr. Darvill to test the accuracy of his statements, and has further, in writing, empowered those gentlemen (if they find his conduct, since the termination of the court-martial, to have discredited him to the sympathy of the public) to hand over the whole of the money in the hands of the bankers to the Royal Patriotic Fund. This is candid and honourable in him.

Political news (strictly speaking so) is not very abundant. The nation (which means a section of the press) is clamouring for a winter Parliament; but it is very well understood that February is the earliest month thought of by the Cabinet. It would, indeed, be a very awkward thing for Ministers to face the Commons before Sebastopol is taken, and there can be no doubt that they look to the bravery of the troops to extricate themselves from their present difficulty.

Sir Joseph Paxton, intoxicated with his Sydenham success, aspires to be a legislator, and addresses the electors of Coventry with a profession of Radical principles. Mr. Disraeli promises to add another to the phrases assumed by his versatile genius; for the Conservative Club of Glasgow has agreed to propose him for Lord Rector. This is not, however, the only career open to Mr. Disraeli, for the Rev. Canon Stowell, in a speech to the working-men of Manchester the other night, indicated him as the only statesman "whose trumpet does not give an uncertain sound," and pronounced him to be the fittest leader of the Protestant party!

Lord and Lady Palmerston are in Paris, and have been to see the Emperor at St. Cloud; though why they are there has not oozed out. The French made a great fuss about it, and attached great political significance to the visit; forgetful that his Lordship is only Home Secretary, and cannot, therefore, intermeddle with foreign affairs. Most probably the visit has reference to arrangements for the impending visit of the Emperor to this country.

The question at issue between the Committee of Almoners, managing the royal foundation of Christ's Hospital, and the head master, Dr. Jacob, has attracted a great deal of public attention. It would seem that ever since Dr. Jacob's appointment, more than a year ago, the system of discipline has been most unsatisfactory to him. Representations to the committee were made in vain, and at last he resolved to avail himself of the opportunity offered by the ancient privilege of preaching before the governors of the school on St. Matthew's day, to say publicly, and in the most solemn manner, what he had so often said privately. In this sermon he pointed out the defects of the school—defects which no one acquainted with the system, and unprejudiced, will presume to deny. He declared that the intellectual and moral wants of Christ's Hospital were not so fully and satisfactorily provided for as the physical; that the boys in general were very ignorant in important branches of English instruction, without having attained any accurate knowledge in their classical studies; that a large mass of them would, in fact, be unable to compete with the scholars of a well-conducted National School; that, in the selection of under masters, it had not been thought necessary to select men of ascertained experience and practical skill in influencing boys for good; and, finally, that the present system was chiefly to be distinguished by the absence of almost everything which might develop and strengthen the better feelings and tendencies of boyhood, that it helped to encourage the worst habits, and to throw the boys upon the gratification of their lower appetites, as their only source of pleasure. This free speaking on the part of Dr. Jacob was received with great indignation by the Committee of Almoners, who have hitherto exercised an unquestioned despotism over the school; and a resolution was passed by them, to the effect that Dr. Jacob was "unfit to hold the office of head master." On Monday last a general meeting of the governors was called for the purpose of considering the circumstances of the case, and the result was a vote of thanks to Dr. Jacob for his sermon, carried by an overwhelming majority. This is, in effect, tantamount to a vote of want of confidence in the committee, who are expected to retire. The whole affair is regarded with intense satisfaction by all who understand and are interested in the facts of the case; for it is expected to have the effect of rescuing this really noble institution from the dominancy of a clique quite unfitted to govern it in accordance with the progressive spirit of the age.

Cases in the law courts during the past week suggest some curious speculations as to the true nature of the marriage contract in England. The Lord Chancellor consigns Mr. George Augustus Hamilton Cliechester to the durance vile of the Queen's Bench for daring to pay his addresses to Miss Clara Thornhill—she being a ward of the court and the inheritor of a very large fortune, and he being over head and ears in debt. The Countess Ferrers (sister to the delinquent) narrowly escaped the same fate, for presuming to favour the suit of her brother, and professing her readiness to receive the young lady if she should elope from her guardians. In the eyes of the Lord Chancellor both the lover and the sister have been guilty of one of the most heinous offences against the majesty of the law—namely, that of presuming to the hand of a ward of court, without a previous reference to the Master. Although the guardianship of the Chancellor is only a substitution for the parental function, to run away with a ward of court is an offence to be punished with imprisonment and the payment of costs; whilst an elopement under ordinary circumstances can only be met with pursuit and a horsewhip. The only objection urged against Mr. Cliechester is that he is in debt; as if men of rank had never heretofore patched up their falling fortunes by the aid of the dowered daughters of the moneyocracy—as if Lord Chancellors had not even done so. However, Mr. Cliechester is now incarcerated, and Lady Ferrers is told that, inasmuch as she became the convenient medium for love letters, concealed in the lining of a basket, and written, "not on paper, which would have made a crackling noise and have attracted attention, but written on linen," (to think of the dragon-like surveillance which surrounds a ward of the court!) she has committed a most disgraceful act, such as "must for ever lower her in the society of her equals." Another case (Barron v. Barron) comes before the Lords Justices of Appeal, surrounded by a veil of mystery. There was "an uncomfortable part of the case" which did not appear upon the surface. The question arose upon the marriage settlements. A widow lady of forty-four had married a young solicitor of twenty-eight; the lady had property, and the gentleman an "octave of living children by a triad of co-existing mothers." We are not surprised to find them quarrelling, scarcely four years after marriage, about the dividends payable under the settlement; still less to find that there is "an uncomfortable part of the case." To give variety to the picture, we next turn to the case of a bankrupt, Bullock,—made so mainly by the extravagance of his wife. Mr. Bullock was a chemist, in Conduit street, and Mrs. Bullock had run up a bill for £350 at a mercer's shop, within ten months. In one day alone £52 had been spent. Can we be surprised, after this, at finding the husband in the Bankruptcy Court?

The genius of our modern contractors for gigantic undertakings has developed a new feature in speculation. The Victoria London Dock Company have agreed to lease their undertaking to Messrs. Peto, Betts, and Brassey for twenty-one years; the lessees securing the payment of five per cent. upon the share capital, and an equal division of profits beyond five per cent. between themselves and the shareholders. There can be little doubt that, under this system, the working of this or any other company will be much more efficiently and economically conducted than heretofore, and we shall not be surprised to hear of railway companies adopting the hint. It is said that some prospective foreign railways have already fallen into the hands of the same contractors, upon similar terms. Somebody suggested that these gentlemen should contract to take Sebastopol, and we have little doubt that it would be feasible.

The advices from South Australia announce a proposal to the home Government for the construction of a railway 1000 miles long, to connect South Australia, Victoria, and Sydney. The estimated capital is £10,000,000, to be raised by loan, the interest to be provided by the three colonies, and guaranteed by the imperial Government, and the land for ten miles on each side the line to be placed under the administration of commissioners, to be gradually realised, one half for the payment of the loan, and the other half for the introduction of labour. The work is to proceed at the rate of 200 miles per annum, and be completed in five years. As ancillary to this, another scheme has been forwarded for enormous docks at Sydney, Melbourne, and Adelaide, capable of containing the largest ocean steamers, and for which a capital of £21,000,000 is needed. All this seems grand, but we doubt whether the colony had not better depend upon its own resources for the support of undertakings which can only be prudently entered into if the colony absolutely requires them—that is to say, can pay for them. It is safe to predict that the home Government will refuse the guarantee.

Continental news is meagre. Our country friends will be sorry to hear from Mr. Franke, of Cette, so poor a report of the wine crop in France. "This year's vintage (writes he) has proved lamentably bad and deficient, even more than was expected; in fact, the produce of the whole of the south of France scarcely reaches the sixth part of the usual average." Alas, for the light Bordeaux, the luscious wines of the Rhone, and the imperial vintage of Burgundy! The ingenious faisseurs de vin on the other side of the Channel, undismayed by the prohibition against converting grain into alcohol, are said to be purchasing large quantities of Irish whiskey for conversion into French brandy. This will re-act upon the price of whiskey here, and we shall have to pay, indirectly, for economising the French grain.

Spain is once more in a state of transition. Espartero has resigned the position of President of the Council of Ministers, and it is thought, with a view of assuming a post giving him a more constitutional influence over the Queen. The gossip of Paris is, that the Queen of Spain contemplates abdication in favour of the Count de Montemolin; that she dreads the effects of revolution, and wishes to escape the perils attendant upon the uncertain tenure of the crown.

The obituary of the week includes, we are sorry to say, two very worthy gentlemen, known in the world of politics and letters—Lord Dudley Stuart and Mr. Frederick Knight Hunt. The former died at Stockholm, on the 17th instant, after a few days' illness, and in the course of a tour through the north-western countries of Europe. In him the Poles have lost a sincere and untiring friend, and Marylebone a pains-taking Member. His Lordship was fifty-one years of age, and had represented Marylebone for seven years. Sir Hamilton Seymour is spoken of as his successor. Mr. Knight Hunt was well known among journalists, and was the chief editor of the Daily News. Originally a surgeon, he abandoned that profession for journalism, and joined the staff of the Daily News about eight years ago. In 1851 he became editor, and continued, up to within a fortnight of his death, to execute the duties of that office with ability and kindness of spirit. He died at Forest Hill on the 18th instant, in the forty-first year of his age. Mr. Hunt was also known as the author of a valuable historical account of the London press, entitled "The Fourth Estate."

FIELD SPORTS AND THE WAR.

There is a direct connection between the Field Sports and country occupations and amusements, to which this journal is devoted, and the war we are waging on the other side of Europe.

The whole world has read, with admiration and amazement, the daring, dashing deeds of heroism done by our troops in the Crimea—the unflinching front displayed to overwhelming forces—the uncomplaining endurance of fatigues and privations—which have proved of what manly stuff an Englishman is made. And not the private only, who may be supposed to have been inured to hardship from childhood, but the officers, gently nurtured, tenderly trained, accustomed to luxury, and, as it might be thought, ignorant of toil and privation, have proved themselves to be as strong to endure, as brave to dare, and as able to perform the services of the campaign, as the men with whom they share the perils, the pains, and the horrors of the field.

We believe that this unexpected and most gratifying spectacle is mainly due to the field sports and manly country occupations, which are so marked a characteristic of the life of the English gentleman. He is taught to ride as soon as he can walk; he spends the greatest portion of his days in the open air, in healthy and manly occupations; he is accustomed to imperil his life in the hunt; he faces danger and difficulty on the seas, in his yacht; he exercises his limbs in long days of shooting; he invokes his ingenuity with the fly-rod; he strengthens his muscles with the oar; he cultivates his eye and hand with the cricket-ball and the bow. These were the trainings of our gentlemen, who have proved, on the heights of the Crimea, the value of the lessons they had learned in the field at home.

With such evidence of their national importance, we trust that all these manly exercises and field sports will be encouraged more and more. They have no necessary connection with the rascality that have been imported into some of them. The English gentleman may indulge his taste for sports, without sharing the iniquities of the turf, the ring, or the betting-house. These are excrescences which have grown out of their abuse, or, rather, which have fastened themselves upon the legitimate field sports,—the proper recreations of the gentleman. It will be the endeavour of THE FIELD to sever them—to show that there is no necessary connexion between the manly English sports which are bringing forth their glorious fruits before Sebastopol, and the unmanly, un-English, unwholesome fungi that have fastened upon them, and almost made the name of sport distasteful to the true gentleman, and caused it to be looked upon with suspicion by religion and morals. If the true English Gentlemen will assist us in the good work, we trust to show, by the contents of this their Journal, that the sports and pastimes of THE FIELD, and the occupations of the country house may be enjoyed and promoted, so that no man shall be ashamed to acknowledge indulgence in their wholesome exercises, nor be afraid to place THE FIELD in his drawing-room, for the instruction and entertainment of his family.

TOWN AND COUNTRY.

The turn of "the Country" has come at last. The Town has had its turn of low prices and prosperity; high prices and prosperity are now the lot of the Country. Although the war is the cause of this change, by which Country is so largely benefiting at the expense of Town, Country may fairly congratulate itself that it has not been the selfish promoter of its own interests. The war that has produced the present state of things was notoriously instigated by the towns. It was in the towns that the most clamorous advocates for war were found; the country people were apathetic, and perhaps even rather adverse than otherwise. Country has a right, therefore, to enjoy its prosperous season; nor can any distress suffered by Town be attributed, as formerly it was, to the selfishness of Country, whether shown in the form of laws for its own benefit, or in wars maintained for its own profit.

THE SINEWS OF WAR.

We have already spent £10,000,000 on the war, and next year we are to spend £20,000,000. The experience of all former wars shows that the tendency is to a steady increase of expenditure, and we may look forward to a demand for £50,000,000 annually. The practical question is, how it shall be raised.

Mr. Gladstone says, by taxes, making the war support itself, without adding to the debt. Another party in the Cabinet is reported to favour the revival of the system of loans, which is, in fact, a contrivance for throwing the payment of our debts upon posterity.

In ordinary cases, Mr. Gladstone's principle of ready-money payments is the honest and the wisest one. But it is not difficult to show that the present case is exceptional.

Almost every other war in which we have been engaged has been for some present advantage, real or supposed, to the generation by which it was undertaken. But this is not the case with the existing war. It has been commenced entirely for the advantage of posterity, and for no single benefit to ourselves. There was no immediate danger from the growth of Russian power. Ourselves, our children, even our children's children, had nothing to fear directly from any possible development of Cossack strength.

We have deliberately entered the field to check its progress, now, from a long-sighted dread of the danger that would certainly proceed from two centuries more of Russian expansion and ambition. It is a magnanimous sacrifice of ourselves for the benefit of a remote posterity, for which we are entitled to respect and honour. But are we called upon to bear the whole cost? Is it not strictly just to send in to posterity the bill of a war undertaken merely for the advantage of posterity? Have we not done enough by giving to it our blood and sinews, the loss of our best and bravest men, wide-spread misery, destroyed commerce, individual distress, insolvency and ruin, which must come sooner or later? The price we must pay will be heavy enough; posterity, which will reap all the advantages, can very well afford to pay the money cost. Therefore, we prefer loans as being both just and expedient. But, nevertheless, there must be increased taxes. How should they be levied?

Some people, who don't pay it, exclaim, "Double the income-tax." This would be very well if the income-tax were equally levied upon the whole population, as it ought to be—every man in the community contributing an equal proportion of his income to the Exchequer. But that is not the case. The income-tax is paid by only one-fifteenth part of the population having incomes. Wherefore should the cost of the war be imposed upon them alone? The war is wholly national. It is not undertaken for the protection of property, but for national glory. A man's share in the national glory is not proportioned to his property, as is his interest in the home government. There is no reason why all should not share the evil of war, in which all are equal participants in equal proportions.

But, then, it is said to be impossible to levy an income-tax on all incomes. It is so; and what is the conclusion? That all incomes which cannot be reached directly should be reached indirectly, by a war-tax upon some of the necessities of life. This would each man be made to contribute to the war, and a large revenue be raised, by distributing the burden over many, instead of concentrating it upon a few.

His Royal Highness Prince Albert, attended by Major-General the Hon. Charles Grey and Captain Du Plat, left Windsor at ten minutes past two o'clock on Wednesday, by a special train of the South-Western Railway, for London, and presided at a meeting of the governors of the Wellington College, held at the Palace of Westminster. The other governors present were the Marquis of Lansdowne, the Marquis of Salisbury, the Earl of Derby, the Earl of Ellenborough, the Earl of Ellesmere, Viscount Hardinge, the Bishop of London, the Right Hon. Sidney Herbert, Sir James Graham, the Right Hon. Spencer Walpole, Sir Howard Douglas, Sir James Weir Hogg, the Rev. G. R. Gleig, and Colonel the Hon. W. P. Talbot (honorary secretary).

RACING

DATES OF RACES.

FEBRUARY.—Nottingham	20	Nottingham	30
Liverpool Spring	22	Goodwood	28
MARCH.—Doncaster	24	AUGUST.—Brighton	8
Salisbury	8	Brighton Club	10
Warwick Spring	20	Wolverhampton	13
APRIL.—Newmarket Craven	9	Reading	14
York Spring	17	Leaves	16
Malton	10	York	22
Newmarket First Spring	23	Exham	24
MAY.—Chester Spring	1	Derby	24
Newmarket Second Spring	8	SEPTEMBER.—Warwick	4
Shrewsbury	10	Doncaster	11
Bath	19	Beaufort	18
Epsom	22	Leicester	19
Manchester	30	Newmarket First October	24
JUNE.—Ascot	5	Northampton	27
Hampton	13	OCTOBER.—Chester	2
Ilbury	20	Wrexham	4
Stockbridge	21	Newmarket Second October	5
Worcester	23	Warwick Autumn	10
Newcastle	26	Richmond	17
JULY.—Newmarket	3	Newmarket Houghton	22
Worcester	3	Worcester	30
Leicester	6	NOVEMBER.—Epsom	1
Liverpool	11	Liverpool	6
Stamford	17	Shrewsbury	13

TATTERSALL'S.—MONDAY.

The principal transactions on the Derby were as follows:—2,000 to 1,000 to 200, and 200 to 100 taken about Graculus Esuriens; 15 to 1, in fifties and ponies, and 15 to 1, to £125, about Oulston; 1,000 to 25, freely, and 1,750 to 50 about Polydora colt.

CLOSING PRICES.

The Vindict's Plate (Hoylake).

3 to 1 agst The Gen (t)	5 to 1 agst Boddicot (t)
4 to 1 — Catherine Parr (t)	5 to 1 — Jack Leeming (t)

Chester Cup.

1000 to 10 agst Brother to Grey Tommy (t)

Derby.

9 to 1 agst Graculus Esuriens (t)	33 to 1 agst Colt by Cotherstone, out of Polydora (35 to 1 t)
12 to 1 — St. Hubert (t)
15 to 1 — Oulston (t)
20 to 1 — Wild Dayrell (t)	40 to 1 — Afghan (t)

TATTERSALL'S.—THURSDAY.

1,800 to 200, agst Graculus Esuriens for the Derby, and 1,000 to 25 agst Frederick, were the only bets laid. Very few members dropped in.

MANCHESTER.—TUESDAY.

Few investments have been made only to small sums, except one bet of 12 to 1, to £50, about Lord of the Isles, for the Derby. 22 to 1 was taken rather freely to-day about Cruiser, and 20 to 1 would have been taken to money about Wild Dayrell.

Visitors' Plate (Hoylake).

5 to 2 agst The Gen (t)	6 to 1 agst Barr two (off)
3 to 1 — Catherine Parr (t)

Derby.

10 to 1 agst Graculus Esuriens (off)	23 to 1 agst Cruiser (t f)
10 to 1 — De Clare (off)	40 to 1 — Afghan (t)
12 to 1 — Lord of the Isles (t)	40 to 1 — Frederick (t)
20 to 1 — Wild Dayrell (w)	40 to 1 — Polydora (t)

HOYLAKES RACES.—WEDNESDAY, Nov. 22.

The attendance, in spite of the inclement weather, was moderately good, and the sport of a spirited character, the races being closely contested. This was the first open meeting yet held on the course.

The Open Free Handicap Hurdle Race of 5 sovs each, with 25 added. Two miles and a distance. Seven subscribers.

Mr. Davies's b f Minerva, 4 yrs, h-b, 8st 8lb (5lb extra)

Mr. Brotherton's b f Success, 3 yrs, h-b, 8st 1lb .. J. Turner 1
Mr. W. Topham's b g Clermont, 5 yrs, 8st 4lb .. J. Jones 2
Mr. Barton's b g The Tumbler, 5 yrs, 9st .. G. Evans 4
Betting—5 to 4 on Minerva, and 3 to 1 agst any other. Won by a length; a bad third.

The Short's Handicap of 5 sovs each, with 30 added. Half a mile.

Mr. Smith's br c Erdington, 4 yrs, 10st 7lb Mr. Smith 1
Mr. Blake's br f Cossy, 4 yrs, 10st Mr. Devonport 2
Mr. Harrison's b g Hyacinth, 5 yrs, 12st Capt. Rhys 3
Betting—6 to 4 on Hyacinth, and 2 to 1 agst any other. Won by a length; half a length between second and third.

The Hylake Plate (Handicap) of 50 sovs. For all ages. Three-quarters of a mile. 10 subs.

Mr. Phillips's b f Vivid, 3 yrs, 6st 4lb Mr. Thorpe 1
Mr. Moore's gr h Young Hack, 5 yrs, 8st 7lb Mr. Cliff 2
Capt. Rhys's b c Master Horton, 3 yrs, 8st .. Mr. Willington 3
Mr. Wilkinson's br c Dear-me, 4 yrs, 7st 6lb Mr. Charlton 4
Betting—5 to 4 agst Dear-me, 5 to 2 agst the winner, and 3 to 1 agst Young Hack. Won easily by two lengths; half a length between second and third.

The Hoylake Open Steeplechase of 10 sovs each, h ft, with 80 added. About three miles. 16 subs.

Mr. Land's ch g Needwood, aged, 11st 2lb Tasker 1
Mr. Davenport's ch g Sailor, 6 yrs, 9st W. White 2
Mr. Brotherton's ch in Gravelley Lass, 6 yrs, 9st 4lb, Owner 3
Capt. Evans's br b Tipperary Boy, aged, 10st 8lb .. S. Darling 4
Mr. Behren's ch g Frederick Jerome, aged 8st 4lb, Mr. Green 5
Capt. Rhys's b g Boyalty, 6 yrs, 9st 4lb, Morgan 6
Mr. Smith's ch g Porter (late Australia) 5 yrs, 9st, G. Evans 7
Mr. Withers's h in Nora Creina, 4 yrs, 8st 8lb, E. Jones 8
Betting—Even on Tipperary Boy, 5 to 2 agst Needwood, 6 to 1 agst The Sailor, and long odds agst any other. Won by half a length; long intervals between the others placed; the others did not pass the post.

A Selling Stakes of 5 sovs each, with 25 added. For all ages. Half a mile. 6 subs.

Mr. Harrison's b g Hyacinth, 5 yrs, 8st 6lb, £20 .. Charlton 1
Mr. Owen's b g Thiotheus, 6 yrs, 8st 4lb, £30 .. W. White 2
Betting—6 to 4 on the winner. Won by a head. The trainer of Sister was fined £5 for withdrawing his horse, after his name had been exhibited upon the telegraph board as a starter.

TURFIANA.

At TATTERSALL'S, on Monday, the re-appearance in the room of a gallant officer of the Guards who had fought and bled at the battle of the Alma, excited peculiar curiosity and gratification. In the course of an animated description which he was giving to some friends, he produced a Miniature ball which had been taken out of the thigh of the late Lord Cheltenham. The exhibition created a deep sensation. The production of this mournful memento caused speculation to turn on Sebastopol, and a gallant general, distinguished in sporting circles by the appellation of "The Veteran," offered to hot an even thousand that the allies are in possession of Sebastopol before Christmas-day.

SOME EXPERT THIEF carried off the Welter Cup, at Shrewsbury, last week, while the horses were running for it. It had been exhibited in front of the stand during the day, and much admired.

DONCASTER RACES.—The Doncaster Town Council held a special meeting on Wednesday last, and the £1,200 Race-groat, was triumphantly carried by a majority of fourteen to four. The minority wanted to limit the grant to £1,000.

THE steeplechase mare, Kate, by Harry Lorrequer, was put up to auction last Saturday, at Dyer's; but the biddings not being sufficient, she was bought in.

THE race-horse, General Gilbert, by Galaoz, now rising five years old, is advertised for sale in Belfast.

IN consequence of the Kilkeny Hunt Club being about to reduce their establishment, several of their horses, and ten couples of hounds, will be sold by auction this day (Saturday) at Dyer's.

THE forfeits in the second class of the Madride and the Kildare Handicap, at the Curragh April Meeting, 1855, are to be declared to the keeper of the match-book, Kingstown, on the 1st of January. Several other stakes close on the same day.

Mr. REARTON'S gr. m. Maid of Australia, by Arthur, won a sweepstakes of 1 sov. each, 10 sovs added, at the Rathcoony (co. Cork) steeplechase, on the 15th inst., beating Mr. Joy's Joy-be-with-them, Mr. Dyer's Sir Humphrey, Mr. Phillips's Tearaway, Mr. Haines's The Rejected, and Mr. O'Brien's Kiss-me-quick-my-mother's-coming. Mr. O'Brien's Touch-and-go won the hack race at the same meeting.

APPOINTMENTS FOR THE WEEK.

THE CHELTENHAM SUBSCRIPTION STAG-HOUNDS (CAPTAIN WEST'S).—Friday, Beckford Inn, at half-past eleven.

THE BRAMHAM MOOR FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Ruddin Park; Wednesday, East Kewick; Friday, Bickerton Bar; Saturday, Bishop Wood, at half-past ten.

THE ATHERSTONE HOUNDS.—Monday, Barton-in-the-Beans; Wednesday, Hoar Park; Friday, Parleton; Saturday, Clifton Village, at eleven.

H. C. MEINELL INGRAM'S HOUNDS.—Monday, Longford; Thursday, Swankstone Bridge; Saturday, Wichnor Park, at a quarter before eleven.

THE NORTH STAFFORDSHIRE HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Barlaston Hall; Thursday, Thurstock, at half-past ten.

THE WARWICKSHIRE HOUNDS.—Monday, Long Itchington; Tuesday, Weston House; Thursday, Billesby Hall; Friday, Epwell Village, at a quarter before eleven.

THE WORCESTERSHIRE HOUNDS.—Monday, Shrawley Wood; Wednesday, Red Lion, Bradley Green; Friday, Wyre, at half-past ten.

THE DEWLAND HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Tregwynt; Friday, Kildredin Bridge, at ten.

EARL FITZWILLIAM'S HOUNDS.—Monday, Ashton Wold; Wednesday, Leighton Village; Friday, Hilly Wood, at ten.

THE ESSEX (MR. HENLEY GREAVES'S) HOUNDS.—Monday, Takeley Gate; Wednesday, Epping Long Green; Friday, Old Sampford; Saturday, Sutton, at eleven.

MR. DRAKE'S HOUNDS.—Monday, Islip Town End; Tuesday, Cottisford Village; Thursday, Hanu Green; Saturday, Trafford Bridge, at a quarter before eleven.

MR. ASSHETON SMITH'S HOUNDS.—Monday, Longstock Down; Tuesday, Manningford; Wednesday, Doles Turnpike; Thursday, Wilster Wood; Friday, Amesbury; Saturday, Norman Court, at eleven.

THE CHESHIRE HOUNDS.—Monday, Curah Minsall; Tuesday, Mere; Thursday, Broomlands; Friday, Crew.

TICKHAM FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Nov. 27, Tunstall; Thursday, Nov. 30, Synhalo; Saturday, Dec. 2, Lysted; Tuesday, Dec. 5th, Rainham; Friday, Dec. 8, Stone Style, at half-past ten.

THE EARL OF YARBOROUGH'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Grausby House; Wednesday, Rye Hill; Friday, Kirton Station, at eleven.

THE F. B. HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Doebym House; Friday, Croft West, at half-past ten.

THE COTTESMORE HOUNDS.—Monday, Pickworth Village; Tuesday, Thistleton; Thursday, Burley-on-the-Hill; Saturday, Knosington.

THE BADSWORTH FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Kirkly Guide Post; Thursday, Wentbridge; Saturday, Hindley Common, at half-past ten.

YORK AND AINSTY FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Red Honso; Thursday, Whixby; Saturday, Pill Moor, at half-past ten.

THE E. E. F. H.—Tuesday, Pebmarsh; Saturday, Notley Gate, at eleven.

LANARSHIRE AND RENFREWSHIRE FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Nov. 28, Castle Mills; Saturday, Dec. 2, Bishopton; Tuesday, Dec. 5, Craigcuds Gate; Saturday, Dec. 9, Castle Semple, at a quarter before eleven.

THE ALBINGTON HOUNDS (MR. BAKER'S).—Tuesday, Hagley; Thursday, Ran Dams; Saturday, Chillington.

MR. WHEELER'S HOUNDS.—Monday, Theale; Tuesday, Round Oak, Padworth; Thursday, Beech Hill; Friday, Stanford-street, at eleven.

THE PYTCHLEY HOUNDS.—Monday, Brixworth; Tuesday, Chapel Brampton; Wednesday, Lilbourne; Friday, Harrington; Saturday, Badby Toll-gate, at a quarter before eleven.

THE DUKE OF BECCLEUCH'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Jed Waterfoot; Tuesday, Haining; Thursday, Springwood Park; Saturday, Mertoun, at half-past ten.

THE PECKERIDGE HOUNDS.—Monday, Brint Pelham; Wednesday, Woodside Green; Saturday, Aston Village, at half-past ten.

COLONEL WYNDHAM'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Gumber, Corner; Wednesday, Shopham Bridge; Saturday, Lawington House, at half-past eleven.

THE EARL OF PORTSMOUTH'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Wasing Park; Tuesday, Hurstbourne Park; Wednesday, Sidmonton Brick Kiln; Friday, Combe Village, at eleven.

THE EARL OF LONSDALE'S HARRIERS.—Friday, Halcott, at twelve.

THE OLD BERKSHIRE FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Hinton; Wednesday, Culham Bridge; Friday, Feruham; Saturday, Noah's Ark, at half-past ten.

THE H. H.—Monday, Lasham Village; Tuesday, West Tisted; Thursday, Bighton Wood; Saturday, George Inn, Odiham, at a quarter before eleven.

MR. GALT'S HOUNDS.—Monday, Riseby Mill; Tuesday, Hartford Bridge Flatt; Friday, Greywell Hill, at half-past ten.

MR. COLTER'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Nov. 28, Shoreham Hill; Thursday, Nov. 30, Farmingham Wood; Saturday, The Portobello, Tuesday, Dec. 5, New Barn; Saturday, Dec. 6, Stansted, at half-past ten.

BARON ROTHSCHILD'S HOUNDS.—Monday, Oving; Thursday, Rowham, at eleven.

THE QUEEN'S HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Hayes; Friday, New Lodge, at eleven.

MR. DRACON'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Brentor; Thursday, Greston Bridge, at half-past ten.

MR. TRELAWSKY'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Buller's Arms, Dean; Saturday, Hemerdon, at half-past ten.

THE RABY HOUNDS.—Monday, Walworth Castle; Wednesday, Wotton Bridge; Friday, Manfield, at half-past ten.

THE NORTH WARWICKSHIRE HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Frogmore; Thursday, Weston; Saturday, Little Allen, at eleven.

THE CARLISLE HARRIERS.—Tuesday, Cargo; Friday, Coat-hill, at ten.

THE EAMONT HARRIERS.—Monday, Park House, Plumpton; Wednesday, Stainton; Saturday, the Click'em, Longwathby Moor, at half-past ten.

THE H. HARRIERS (ROCHESTER).—Monday, St. Mary's Hall; Thursday, Mortimer Cliff, at eleven.

THE HIGH PEAK HARRIERS.—Tuesday, Pilsbury Barn; Thursday, Grange Mill; Saturday, Waterloo Inn, at eleven.

IRELAND.

THE WARD UNION STAG-HOUNDS.—Monday, Fluthouse; Wednesday, Kiltbride, at one.

THE CARLOW AND ISLAND FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Ballycarney Bridge; Wednesday, Fighting Cocks; Friday, Figtree, near Kilbora; Saturday, Aghade Bridge, at eleven.

THE CLANE FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Carrigerry Gate, at eight; Friday, Spancehill, at a quarter to eleven.

THE DULEEK FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Leggur Hall; Thursday, Beaumont, at eleven.

THE DUNALLOO FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Annalitha Chapel, at eleven.

THE EYECOURT FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Heathlawn; Thursday, Kellysgrove, at eleven.

THE GALWAY FOX-HOUNDS (The Blazers).—Tuesday, Cregmore, at eleven.

LORD WATERFORD'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Saturday (this day), Cat's Rock, at eleven.

THE LIMERICK FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Creaves Cross, at a quarter to eleven.

THE LOUTH FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Rokeby Hall; Friday (a deer), Harbertstown, at eleven.

THE MEATH FOX-HOUNDS.—Saturday (this day), Slane; Monday, Crossakeel; Wednesday, Killeen, at eleven.

THE MUSKERRY FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Oldcastle, at half-past ten.

MR. KING'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Doon, at eleven.

MR. CHARLES MAHON'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Balla; Thursday, Bloomfield, at eleven.

MR. NAGHTON'S FOX-HOUNDS (The Kohn-noora).—Monday, Milton Pass; Thursday, Castle Park, at eleven.

SIR NUGENT HAMBLE'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Bohadoun Mountain; Friday, Clushmore, at half-past ten.

THE QUEEN'S COUNTY FOX-HOUNDS.—Saturday (this day), Lacka; Tuesday, Timoney; Saturday, Derryfore, at eleven.

THE WESTMEATH FOX-HOUNDS.—Saturday (this day), Donore; Wednesday, Tyrrellspass; Saturday, Killucan, at eleven.

THE WEXFORD FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Ballysoy; Friday, Castlorough, at eleven. Should the weather prove unfavourable, the hounds will meet next day at the kennel.

THE FERNY GARRISON HARRIERS.—Tuesday, Rockmills, at eleven.

THE KILMACUD HARRIERS.—Monday, Glencullen; Thursday, Tallaght Race-course, at eleven.

THE OMMOND HARRIERS.—Tuesday, Peterfield, at eleven.

THE LEGALE HARRIERS.—Monday, Ballyrolly; Thursday, Moneyearring, at twelve.

THE PALMERSTOWN HARRIERS.—Saturday (this day), Greenhills; Tuesday, St. Margaret's, at twelve.

THE TRINAM HARRIERS.—Monday, Summer Hill; Thursday, Caledon, at eleven. Should the weather prove unfavourable, the hounds will meet next day at the kennel.

THE WICKLOW HARRIERS.—Monday, Oulanka; Friday, Coolagad, at eleven. Should the weather prove unfavourable, the hounds will meet next day at the kennel.

THE WEXFORD AND KILLINICK HARRIERS.—Monday, Silverspring; Thursday, Mayglass, at half-past ten.

MR. FETHERSTONHAUGH'S BEAGLES.—Monday, Robinstown, at eleven. Should the weather prove unfavourable, the hounds will meet next day at the same place.

NOTES FROM MELTON MOWBRAY.—No. II.

To the Editor of the Field.

SIR,—This place now begins to assume much more of its usual appearance, and during the present week some of the principal visitors have arrived for the season. There has been steady rain, and the country is very much improved indeed; but still it is far from being what may be termed either good-going or soft; consequently, there is little to particularise in runs. The Cottimore met last week at Little Dalby, and, strange to say, drew several covers blank; many reasons have been adduced to account for this, but I have reason to believe that a wholesale destruction of foxes has been going on not far from there, and also that the real vulpine is now well known. I heard a farmer from that neighbourhood say that no less than nine foxes were poisoned in Cold Overton Wood this summer, and also that some were trapped as well; it is a sad sequel to know that such has been the case, because the master of those hounds is in everything a gentleman.

The Quorn had a nice run from Scraftoft Spinney last Thursday. The field was not at all numerous, and the ground then very hard, which prevented those who were out from riding. I believe I never saw the hounds go so fast in my life as they did sometimes on that day. We ran to Ingersby, thence to Quenby Hill and Cold Newton, where, no doubt, the fox was headed, or he was going straight for John O'Gaunt; turning to the right, however, he went for Botany Bay, and thence into and through Billesdown Coplow, and doubled back again for Ingersby and Keyham, &c. He was, I hear, killed after one hour and a quarter.

Sir R. Sutton had a bad fall that day, but he was not much hurt. The very superior turn-out of the Quorn this season is the admiration of every one. Their stand of seventy horses is really splendid—every horse being of a first-class character, indeed, if they were not it would not be possible to hunt the country eight times a-week.

The Belvoir Hounds can hardly be said to have commenced in reality, because the noble Lord Forrester, who is the master, has only arrived to-day. However, they have been to Piper Hole to-day, and had a good day's sport. Plenty of foxes and a good field. This has also been the first day's hunting with several this season.

Perhaps something better may turn up in a few days to record, in the meantime I am yours, &c.

Melton Mowbray, Nov. 22.

NELLASALIS.

EXTRAORDINARY RUN WITH MR. LUMLEY'S HOUNDS.

This famous pack had an extraordinary run on Thursday. It is a rather unusual circumstance for a fox to be killed in one of the public streets in Doncaster; and it may be inferred that the pressure from without, on this occasion, must have been remarkably severe to occasion his capture within a dwelling-house. Yet, such was the case. The meet was appointed for Funningley Park, and at the appointed time a good field assembled to participate in the pleasures and excitement of the day. Merry threw his hounds into the adjacent plantings, and a few correct notes indicated a find. The pack was soon got together, and judiciously handled. The fox broke cover, and lent his course for Cantley; where, finding the quarters far too hot for him, he dashed along, leaving Gate Wood on his right, and sought refuge in Sandall Beat, and so onwards to the Red House Farm, at a rattling pace. Reynard proving himself one of the right sort. Having been tightly pressed at the Red House Farm, he rushed on to the race course, and turned for the Intake Farm, and so onwards, behind the race-koots up the Town Field, where another hunt was presented before the horsemen. He went right ahead, and crossed the Thorne-road into the field occupied by Messrs. Hall and Co. in the direction of the Holmes; thence through the garth of Mr. Silvester and the sand-pits adjacent; crossing the Broxholme-lane into Copley's field opposite the Nether-hall. Mr. Mapplebeck's garden was also sought as a hiding place; but being disturbed by Mr. Mapplebeck himself, he was forced to take the wall at the top of East Lathgate. The pack still pressed tightly upon him, and it was evident that nothing could stop their determined resolution. Reynard seeing some strange curs before him, rushed along Cooper's-yard (or the Chapel-yard) into Hall-gate. "Any port in a storm" was now the impulse of the parate of Funningley Park woods. He ran, as a last resource, through the lower passage of the residence of Mr. Withers Moore, surgeon; and, turning up some steps dashed through a glass-door into the house, breaking one of the squares. He was secured, and the hounds administered the quietus, to the perfect astonishment of every one around. The time occupied in the run, from the find to the finish, was fifty-four minutes. The field had been well "riddled" before reaching Hall-gate; but there were up at the death Mr. Lumley, Lord Galway, Mr. R. J. Bentley, and Captain T. Smith, besides Merry and the whips. The brush was presented to Mr. Withers Moore.

ESSEX AND HERTS HUNTS.—FOX-HUNTING AWARD.

The differences which have existed for so many years as to the right of the Essex Hunt to draw the forest of Takely, has been finally set at rest. The subject has been, during a series of years, frequently brought before the "Fox-hunting community," with a view to its settlement, but to no purpose—the Essex hunts continuing to draw, and the Herts hunts denying their right to do so. A couple of arbitrators were appointed, viz., Lord Yarborough and Lord Redesdale, both masters of hounds, as well as a committee to collect evidence and conduct the case. After considerable investigation the arbitrators issued their award, which deserves great credit for its clear and concise form, as well as for the way in which it has defined the law of fox-hunting in regard to "neutral covers." The following is the award:—

1. Immemorial usage is the common title to a fox-hunting country. When the date of the commencement of such usage is known, the right to it will depend on the manner in which it commenced.

2. In the case referred to us satisfactory proof is given that the forest has been drawn by both hunts as long as any living man can remember. The evidence of the Culvert family, as to its belonging exclusively to the Herts Hunt, can only be received as a record of their opinion. At the time when the statement was made, the Essex was drawing it, as well as before and since; and in making the statement, Mr. Culvert does not say that they did so by permission asked and granted, or give the date and particulars of any agreement on the subject.

3. There is a wide difference between permission and suffrance as regards a title to a fox-hunting country. No term of years will bar an original right of the liberty to draw commenced on permission granted conditionally with a power to resume. An encroachment may be neglected for a time, and nevertheless afterwards properly and successfully resisted, if satisfactory proof can be given that it was an encroachment and an innovation on former practice between the hunts. But a practice claimed as a right by one hunt and suffered to be exercised by the other for a period of sixty years and more, when all evidence as to the time and manner in which it originally commenced is lost, must be held to establish that right, or a door will be opened for endless disputes as to boundaries.

4. The fact of the forest having been drawn by the Essex is admitted, and a reason assigned for its never having been formally objected to—viz., that it was a great nursery and preserve of foxes, and then so strong and impracticable a woodland, that there was no getting a fox away, and no chance of a run from it; and that as it was necessary for the sport of both counties that it should be routed as much as possible, the Herts were glad to see the Essex go there, and do the disagreeable work, and therefore no objection was taken to their doing so. This is a very important admission. It is seldom that so clear a reason can be assigned for the origin of a neutral draw, as the case of a woodland, to which no one was very anxious to go, but which it was the interest of both hunts to have regularly disturbed.

5. The neutral districts so established between the hunts extended beyond the forest, and disputes arose. In 1812, an arrangement was come to between the masters of the hunts, which the Herts rely on as establishing their exclusive right to the forest, because it is not mentioned among the neutral covers. The answer of the Essex is that it is not mentioned because there never was a doubt as to its neutrality, and that the dispute was only as to certain woods outside. In support of this they prove that the forest was regularly drawn by them afterwards. The Herts reply that this was done because Mr. Houlton, the chief proprietor there, became joint master of the Essex, and asked permission to draw it from Mr. Hanbury, the master of the Herts; and a copy of a letter from Mr. Hanbury to Mr. Houlton is produced, in which he says that he understands that the latter wishes to draw "some more covers" as neutral, and that though he was not himself an advocate for a neutral country, he and Mr. Calvert had every wish, on Mr. Houlton's account, to accommodate him, and would meet him and ascertain his wishes. What these were is not known—the words "some more covers" could hardly apply to the forest, nor is there any proof given that they did apply, or that any extension of the neutral country then took place. On the contrary, from the ease Mr. Hanbury and Mr. Calvert bestowed on these matters, it is hardly possible that, if anything was done, no written memorandum should have been kept; and the probability is, that on discussing the matter, the objections of Mr. Hanbury to extend the neutral country were found insurmountable, notwithstanding his desire to accommodate Mr. Houlton.

6. The forest continued to be drawn by the Essex till 1832, when Lord Petre took the Herts hounds, and "claimed an exclusive right to the forest and the other covers, and asked for a reference." A meeting took place, and the result was, that there was no reference, and that Mr. Conyers was not dispossessed. Again, in 1838, Mr. Houlton, the owner of the forest, became master of the same hounds, and desired "to have the forest drawn on certain confined conditions, or a reference;" but Mr. Conyers still kept his old ground. It is clear that if Mr. Houlton's father had only got leave to draw the forest conditionally from Mr. Hanbury, in 1812, there must have been positive evidence of that fact in 1832, as it must have been known to many. It is asserted that in 1832 the claim was only waived during Mr. Conyer's life; but, as in 1838, the owner of the forest, then master of the Herts hounds, asked to have the arrangements respecting that draw "defined, or a reference," it is clear that no abandonment of the Essex claim of right took place in 1832; while Mr. Houlton's demand negatives the idea of any agreement having been entered into by the Herts, to abstain from making a claim only during Mr. Conyer's life.

7. The reference asked for on these two occasions has now been brought before us, and after having given our best consideration to the subject, we are of opinion that, according to fox-hunting laws, the forest does not belong exclusively to either hunt, but must be considered neutral for the reason assigned in the 3rd and 4th paragraphs.

Nov. 19, 1854.

YARBOROUGH.
REDESDALE.

TWO DAYS WITH LORD SOUTHAMPTON'S HOUNDS.—On the 18th inst. we met at Whaddon, and had a fine display of music in an adjoining wood. Went off at a jolly pace to Selden, back to Ham Park, on to Oakhill and Shenley woods, by Bradwell to Linford and Willen, and pulled the ramant down in the open in Mr. Scriven's field, after a rattling run of two hours. On the 22nd inst. we met at Wing, and, although the day was, as regards sport, cold, it was warm with thoroughly English hospitality. Jogged on to Mentmore, the seat of that worthy sportsman, Baron Rothschild, and partook of a magnificent dejeuner, laid out for his lordship and sporting friends by the worthy baron, who, with his usual courtesy, was in waiting to receive us. After doing justice to the cheer, the large field trotted on to Mentmore covers. Foxes were soon on foot; but owing to the cold snow storm, and the unfavourable state of the weather, sport was very slow; nevertheless, the ride to Montmore seemed to make up for the lack of sport.

A SLASHING RUN WITH THE SOUTHDOWN FOX-HOUNDS.—On Wednesday, the 8th instant, the meet was at Berwick Station, when a sure find was anticipated at Ludley coppice. No sooner were the hounds in cover than they began baying, old Rachel and Precious showing symptoms that Charley was on his pads. After ringing the cover round, he broke away at a rattling pace towards Mr. Martin's, at the Polhills to Chilverbridge, taking the river and through the white fields. Now follow boys who can,—

"O'er kedges and stiles, they make no denial;
Our horses they leap them so well!"

At length he took nearly to Hay Reads, where he headed, dashing over the South Coast Railway, taking the beautiful grass lands to Milton pay-gate. The hounds now were chirruping him along merrily, pug bounding his way through Mr. Edward Cme's lanes at Milton-street, leaving Mr. T. Lamb's to the right. Here there was a slight check, old Charley going now at a gay pace, with his head in the direction for Long Man, Windore Hill, running along the side hill, over which he soon mounted, and the hounds then ran into him in the Dens. Thus ended a pleasant run with the Southdown Fox-hounds.

MR. WICKSTEAD'S HARRIERS.—On Saturday, 18th, this beautiful little pack met on Bartlebury Common, and afforded a great treat to the sportsmen of the neighbourhood. It was unfortunately a bad scenting day; but, notwithstanding, they worked admirably, and pulled down three hares. The Squire, who is a first-class sportsman, hunts his pack himself, and is assisted by a very able whip, well mounted.

MATCH BETWEEN MRS. ALLAN McDONOUGH AND THE KNIGHT OF GLYNN.—In reference to the above match, our Irish correspondent has furnished us with the following, in answer to the queries of "H. Y.," which appeared in our last:—The match is to come off on the first Monday in December, as originally stated in THE FIELD, over the Confy Castle course, (situate about nine miles from Dublin,) which is almost skirted by the Midland Great Western Railway. Mrs. McDONOUGH is to ride Seaman, winner of the Limerick Grand National Steeplechase, last month; and the Knight of Glynn, his own mare, Victory, whose cross-country performances are by no means discreditible. The match is for 100 sovereigns; the distance, three miles over a fair hunting country, and both riders are to mount as light as possible. Seaman is a perfectly trained hunter, and has been ridden to hounds regularly in the County Kildare by Mrs. McDONOUGH, who, under the tuition of her husband, once a crack steeplechase rider, is a most accomplished horse-woman. How Mrs. McDONOUGH will be attired is not generally known, but in all probability she will wear a short crimson habit and black Jerry hat, those being her husband's colours. She will also use both whip and spur, and a plain snaffle bridle. The match has caused three other events to be arranged for the same day, under the stewardship of Sir Edward Hutchinson, Bart., and Capt. Smith, 48th Northamptonshire Militia; so that first-rate sport is anticipated. Rumour, with her hundred tongues, has it that the gallant Knight will suffer himself to be beaten by his fair competitor, but the prevalent opinion is, that the match is a bona fide one, and that both riders will do all in their power to win.

COURSING

APPOINTMENTS. NOVEMBER, 1854.

PLACE.	DATE.	JUDGE.
Newcastle, Northumberland, and Durham	28, 29, and 30	Mr. A. Bennett
Coquetdale (Northumberland)	Not fixed	Mr. Warwick

DECEMBER.

Biggar Club (Lanark)	5	Mr. Tildett
Kendworth	5 and 6
Ridgway (Lancashire)	7 and 8
Spelthorne (Middlesex)	7 and 8
Caledonia (Lanark)	14	Mr. Lawrence

JANUARY, 1855.

Biggar Club (Lanark)	23	Mr. Lawrence
The renewed trial between North-Western and South-Western Coursers, at Lytham (Lancashire)	29 and fol. days

FEBRUARY.

Spelthorne (Wilt)	7, 8, and 9	Mr. Lawrence
Newmarket Open	12
Biggar Clamkood (Lanark)	13
Baron Hill, Beaumaris (Anglesea)

MARCH.

Caledonian Open (Lanark) ..	15
Biggar Open (Lanark)	27
Ridgway (Lancashire)

ASHDOWN CHAMPION COURSING MEETING.

Judge—Mr. McGeorge.

THE CRAVEN CUP. For Puppies.

Mr. Minton's bk b Busy Bee beat Mr. Rawworthy's r b Rattlesnake
Mr. Swindorne's r b Expert beat Mr. Long's f b Carnation
Mr. Brewer's b and w b Bessie beat Mr. Le Brewer's r d Ben Bolt
Mr. Bowles's bk b Black Shadow beat Mr. Lawver's s b b Legerdemain
Mr. Bowles's bk b Bella Donna beat Mr. Tawer's r b Widow
Mr. Wrigley's r b York-dire Lass beat Mr. Lawver's r b b Madam
Mr. Long's f d Scipio beat Mr. Minton's bk b Madam
Mr. Jardine's bk b Moor Hen ran a bye
Mr. Williams's f b Tichba ran a bye
Mr. Jardine's bk b Mania beat Mr. Bowles's be b Ladigo
Mr. Lawrence's r b Gazelle ran a bye

Second Tie.

Belladonna beat Gselle
Mania beat Yorkshire Lass
Elastic beat Moor Hen

Third Tie.

Belladonna beat Elastic
Mania beat Expert

Deciding Course.

Belladonna was drawn, lamo

Mr. Long's f d Scipio beat Mr. Jardine's bk b Mania, and won the Stakes.

THE ASHDOWN CUP. For Greyhounds of all ages.

Mr. Minton's bk b Miniver beat Mr. Jackson's bk d Major
Mr. Bowles's r d Impatient beat Mr. Jackson's bk d Julius
Mr. Hunt's r d Nimrod beat Mr. Rendall's bk b Rhoda
Mr. Jardine's f b Mixture beat Mr. Read's f b Lady Shelton
Mr. Lawrence's bk d Linkboy beat Mr. Scott's r d Glaucius
Mr. Swindorne's bk b Elfin beat Mr. Rendall's bk b Risk
Mr. Rawworthy's bk b Rosetta beat Mr. Scott's brd d Raglan
Mr. Lawrence's brd d Lurley beat Mr. Long's r d Good Morning

Second Tie.

Mixture beat Linkboy
Elfin beat Rosetta

Deciding Course.

Lurley, after an undecided course, beat Mixture.

Nimrod beat Elfin.—Nimrod was afterwards drawn, and Lurley won the Cup.

THE LAMBOURN STAKES. For Dog Puppies.

Mr. Long's bk Gipsy Prince beat Mr. Bowles's f Billy the Norman
Mr. Williams's bk Twysay Gynure beat Mr. Le Brewer's f Briser
Mr. Lawrence's bk Lascar beat Mr. Brewer's bk Bony-Whacker
Mr. Eustace's f Driver beat Mr. Rendall's bk Rodkey

Second Tie.

Gipsy Prince beat Driver
Lascar beat Twysay Cymaf

Deciding Course.

Mr. Long's bk d Gipsy Prince beat Mr. Lawrence's bk d Lascar, and won the Stakes.

WEYLAND STAKES. For all ages.

Mr. Long's r b Lucogene beat Mr. Warkins's r b Wild Eyes
Mr. Read's r b Lady Skerington beat Mr. Long's f b Puite
Mr. Hunt's r b Nancy beat Mr. Bowles's b and w b Fusty
Mr. Bowles's r b Bledieia Orange beat Mr. Minton's bk b Magazine
After two undecided courses Magazine was drawn
Mr. Jardine's bk b Meris beat Mr. Miller's bk b Merry Lady
Mr. Rendall's r b Revival beat Mr. Lawrence's bk b Louisa

Second Tie.

Meris beat Imogene
Revival beat Lady Skerington

Third Tie.

Blenheim Orange beat Revival | Meris ran a bye

Deciding Course.

Mr. Jardine's bk b Meris beat Mr. Bowles's r b Blenheim Orange, and won the Stakes

SWINLEY STAKES. For Puppies.

Mr. Vesey's r d Bonaco England beat Mr. Brewer's r d Boxer
Mr. Rawworthy's Rattlesnake beat Mr. Williams's Topsy
Mr. Rendall's bk d Refuse beat Mr. Long's be d Coccolulus
Mr. Lawrence's bk b Luna beat Mr. Bowles's be b Ladigo

Second Tie.

Rattlesnake beat Refuse
Luna beat Bonaco England

Deciding Course.

Mr. Lawrence's bk b Luna beat Mr. Rawworthy's r b Rattlesnake, and won the Stakes

COMPTON BOTTOM STAKES. For all ages.

Mr. Hodson's be b Wings beat Mr. J. Scott's w d Raglan
Mr. Jackson's be d Julius beat Mr. Williams's bk d p Tike
Mr. Long's r d Good Morning beat Mr. Bowles's bk d Juno

Second Tie.

Julius beat Wings
Good Morning ran a bye

Deciding Course.

Mr. Jackson's bk d Julius beat Mr. Long's r d Good Morning, and won the Stakes

BOTLEY STAKES. For Puppies.

Mr. Bowles's f d Billy the Norman beat Mr. Williams's f b Triglioni
Mr. Lawrence's bk b Louisa beat Mr. Jardine's bk b Moor Hen

Deciding Course.

Louisa beat Billy the Norman, and won the Stakes.

The weather was on the whole highly favourable. Hares were strong and plentiful, and most of the contests were marked by points of great merit.

The decision of the judge, Mr. McGeorge, elicited unqualified approbation.

COURSING MEETING.—The "Lovers of the Leash" had a treat last week at Llanddiniolen, through the kindness and liberality of the 'Squire of Llanfair, who is always anxious to promote sport. There was a good muster of dogs from the kennels of H. R. Williams, Esq., of Penrhos, — Price, Esq., of Cadnant, Messrs. Humphreys, of Menni Bridge, and other gentlemen. The hares were stout and plentiful, and afforded excellent opportunities for testing the speed and gameness of the dogs, several of which ran long and severe courses, over the excellent ground between Llanddiniolen and Castell. The spectators were numerous and respectable, from both Carnarvon and Bangor. J. G. Griffiths, Esq., of Llanfair, and his brother, William Griffiths, Esq., were on the ground the greater part of the day, and the Hon. Col. and the Misses Pennants patronised the sport by their presence for a short time. On the whole, the admirers of the long tails enjoyed an excellent day's sport.

YACHTING.

HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE.

	MON.	TUE.	WED.	THUR.	FRI.	SAT.	SUN.
Nov. 25, Saturday	5.9	5.30
" 26, Sunday	5.5	5.35
" 27, Monday	7.6	7.31
" 28, Tuesday	8.21	8.9
" 29, Wednesday	9.48	10.14
" 30, Thursday	10.50	11.30
Dec. 1, Friday	11.39
" 2, Saturday	0.11	0.36
" 3, Sunday	0.55	1.31
" 4, Monday	1.30	2.9
" 5, Tuesday	2.19	2.39
" 6, Wednesday	3.05	3.14
" 7, Thursday	3.55	3.50
" 8, Friday	4.45	4.51
" 9, Saturday	5.34	5.1
" 10, Sunday	5.20	5.41
" 11, Monday	6.1	6.23
" 12, Tuesday	6.47	7.11
" 13, Wednesday	7.35	8.10

To find High Water at the subjoined places, take the above time at London Bridge, and add or subtract the time in the following Table.

SUBTRACT FROM LONDON BRIDGE.				ADD TO LONDON BRIDGE.
	H.	M.	S.		H.	M.	S.
Brighton	11	0		Amsterdam	0	53
Bristol	3	0		Antwerp	2	18
Cardiff	2	10		Brest	1	39
Cherbourg	3	37		Calcutta	5	53
Cork	3	32		Cherbourg	0	23
Dublin	2	05		Cardiff	4	53
Everett	2	57		Cork	3	54
Guernsey	4	53		Guernsey	3	38
Graveland	0	37		Hambois	3	53
Greenwich	3	21		Harwich	3	53
Southampton	2	37
Weymouth	4	10

CLUB MEETINGS, 1854.

- November 29.—Meeting of the Lilley Club.
 November 29.—Half-yearly Meeting of the Royal Northern Yacht Club, at Glasgow.
 December 1.—Monthly Meeting of the Prince of Wales Yacht Club.
 December 2.—Monthly Meeting of the Royal Harwich Yacht Club.
 December 4.—Annual Ball of the Royal Mersey Yacht Club. Proceeds go to the Patriotic Fund.
 December 5.—Annual Dinner of the London Model Yacht Club, at Anderson's Hotel.
 December 5.—Monthly Meeting of the Royal Mersey Yacht Club.
 December 5.—Monthly Meeting of the London Model Yacht Club, at Anderson's.
 December 6.—Weekly Meeting of the Lilley Club, at the Nell Wynne, at 8 p.m.
 December 6.—Monthly Meeting of the Royal Thames Yacht Club, at the Bedford Hotel, Covent Garden.
 December 12.—Meeting of the Lilley Club.
 December 18.—Monthly Meeting of the Royal London Yacht Club.
 December 20.—Meeting of the Lilley Club.
 December 27 (Wednesday).—Full Meeting of the Lilley Club, being the last for the year 1854.

ROYAL LONDON YACHT CLUB.

On Monday last, the 20th inst., the usual monthly meeting opened, after the conclusion of the house dinner, with some forty members present, for business, the Commodore filling the chair, and — Phillips, Esq., the vice chair. The Commodore was supported on the right by the treasurer (Mr. Angle), and on the left by Mr. Crossley, and Vice-Commodore Arcebeckne, R.H.Y.C. The latter gentleman kindly presented to the club portfolio a lithograph (by Dutton) of his own schooner-yacht, the Novice, for which a vote of thanks was passed to him on the motion of Mr. W. Goodson. The business of the evening commenced by Mr. Secretary Gregory reading the minutes of the October meeting, which were confirmed. A ballot was then taken, when the sixteen following gentlemen were admitted, and seven others were added to the candidates' list for the ballot in December. These will add three yachts to the club-list. Those now admitted were—the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, Mr. J. G. Moon, Mr. Alderman Rose, Mr. Alderman and Sheriff Muggridge, Mr. G. A. Wallis, Mr. Frederick G. Mocc, Mr. William H. Parn (Mayor of Dover), Mr. Stephen Court, Mr. William Monk, Mr. Samuel Bowyer, Mr. H. D. Steel, Mr. Richard Till, Mr. Edwin Simpson, Mr. Henry Phillis, Mr. Livian Pearce, and Mr. Edward Tanner.

We may mention that a very rapid method of taking the ballot has been adopted by this club. The names of the candidates are printed in large type, and one under the other, on a slip of paper, and the following "instructions" are subjoined:—

"Should any candidate be objected to, his name should be struck out, which is equivalent to a black ball against him.

"If any member wishes not to vote for or against any candidate, a cross (X) must be placed against such candidate's name."

One of these ballot-papers is given to every member present up to ten p.m., when the ballot-box is closed. All that a member, therefore, has to do is to put his ballot-paper into the box (he does not sign it), and, a few minutes after ten o'clock, two scrutineers examine the ballot-papers. The erasures are added up, and it is then decided whether any given candidate is black-balled or not. We are not aware that any other yacht club yet follows this excellent plan.

The ANNUAL BALL was fixed for Wednesday, February 14, on the motion of Mr. Stanbridge, seconded by the commodore. We have reported the ANNUAL DINNER below.

On the motion of Messrs. Monk and Tress, the club voted ten guineas to the "Patriotic Fund," to which a member added £5, being the amount of a drawn bet in which he had been concerned. There was no other business done, except that a conversation ensued as to members in arrears with their annual subscriptions (Rule 21); and as it was clearly proved each had received due notice, they have now only themselves to blame for the "untoward" result.

THE ANNUAL DINNER.

Thursday evening was a gay one at Willis's Rooms. No less than 179 yachtsmen (visitors included) then attended the annual dinner of the Club. Commodore Goodson presided, supported on the right by Mr. Sheriff Crossley and Vice-Commodore Andrews, and on the left by Vice-Commodore Arcebeckne, Rear-Commodore Cardinall, — Reynolds, Esq., and other influential members of the aquatic world. The room was most tastefully decorated, and the arrangements reflect the highest credit on the stewards, who, we are informed, determined to do things in style, called in the practised aid of Mr. Bradley, of the Lyceum Theatre. Club ensigns and Bugees, and Acker's signal-flags, and the national banners of England, France, and Turkey, were suspended in great numbers on the walls; and at the head of the room, over the Commodore's seat, was an elegant device, in which the letters "R. L. Y. C." glittered upon a true-blue ground, displaying also the arms of the Club. Wreaths of laurel were attached to many of the national colours, significant emblems of the several victories recently achieved in the Crimea. There were three long tables, and one cross one, and all were filled. The Club buttons never previously had mustered in such force. A piano was also in the room, and Miss Messent, Miss Felton, Mr. Genge, Mr. Farquharson Smith, and Mr. Kenney, appeared—and immensely distinguished themselves—as the vocalists of the evening, and every person present was courteously supplied with the songs, neatly bound up in an ornamental cover. We must here at once pay our tribute to the Messrs. Willis for the very liberal manner in which everything that depended upon them was carried out. The rooms—notwithstanding their constant use—were as clean as if fresh from the painter's hands, the wines unexceptionable, the attendance civil and smart, the dinner fit even for that great patron of yachting, her Majesty herself, of which any one may be convinced, by merely perusing the subjoined

BILL OF FARE.

FIRST COURSE.		SECOND COURSE.
Hare Soup.	Paletine Soup.	Oxtail Soup.
Turbot.	Mulgatawney Soup.	Sauces.
	Crimpt Cod.
ENTREES.		ENTREES.
Currie d'homand on Casserole.	Cotelettes à la Wyndham.
Ris de Veau piqué à la Dauphin.	Salmon de l'écaille.
Tendrons de Veau au Concombres.	Vol au Vent des huîtres.
Petit patés de Perigaud.	Cotelettes à l'indienne.
RELATES.		RELATES.
Saddles of Mutton.	Bœuf à la Dubois.
Boiled Chickens.	Roast Turkey.
Boiled Capons.	Poulets au Maroilles.
Tongues.	York Hams.
Roast Beef.	Maunches of Mutton.

PIGION PIE.

THIRD COURSE.		THIRD COURSE.
Pheasants.	Suipes.	Wild Ducks.	Golden Plovers.
	Widgeons.	Capons.
ENTREES.		ENTREES.
Gelée de Noyau.	Trilles.
" de Dantzig.	Gâteau à la Cardinal.
" d'Orange.	" à la Provencal.
Tourts de Pommes.	Blanche Manger.
" d'Abricot.	Boudin à la Royale.
" de Cranberry.	Boudin de Cabulet.
Châottes de Russe.	Chantilly Baskets.
Crèmes à la Vanille.	Mushrooms.
" à la Bohémien.	Maccaroni.
" de Citron.

After Non Nobis had been admirably sung, and when the dessert was put on the table, a glance at the printed toasts of the evening showed that one great "bore" in many yacht clubs would be absent in this—we allude to ad libitum speech-making. Here about a dozen toasts were arranged, with the names of those selected to propose them, so that throughout the evening all went merry as a marriage-bell, and none spoke but what was set down for him, except, perhaps, the toast-master, who, in a moment of forgetfulness, pronounced Mr. Farquharson Smith's name in a funny manner it would be somewhat difficult to imitate, and which triumph of elocution certainly caused the heartiest laugh of the evening.

On rising to give the first toast, Commodore Oodson said, "that the health he was about to propose needed no preface; it was one which Englishmen were ever ready most loyally and enthusiastically to respond to. He should, therefore, call upon them to drink the health of 'Her Majesty, the Queen.'" Three times three cheers followed, and the national anthem was sung, by nearly 200 voices, in a heart-felt style, that would have mightily terrified old Menechillo himself, could he but have heard it. Singing followed every toast, that of "Prince Albert" being the next; but when the "Army and Navy" was given, coupled with the name of an officer of the 18th Royal Irish, the applause was tremendous. The commodore, in introducing this toast, said that "for about forty years we had had no opportunity of drinking the 'Army and Navy' with such enthusiasm as must now naturally be felt, while the victories of Alma and of Inkerman, the cavalry charge, and the naval bombardment of Sebastopol, were so fresh in our memories. Such services deserved the highest eulogium the most eloquent could pronounce, and the deepest gratitude the whole country could evince. He was sure all present would do honour to the toast in a bumper, especially when he coupled with it the brave navies and armies of our allies, the invincible French and the turbaned Turk." (The cheering lasted above five minutes when this toast was given, all present standing up, and very many, in the enthusiasm of the moment, waving handkerchiefs, doyleys, &c.)

Lieut. WARD (18th Royal Irish) ably returned thanks for his brethren in arms; was proud that they had been found ready and willing to do their duty, and thoroughly satisfied that they would ever continue to do so, and successfully too, however the Czar of Russia might vainly hope to the contrary (applause). Mr. Farquharson Smith's song of "The Tight Little Island" followed, and received an unanimous encore, for which "Simon the collarer" was substituted. The next toast, proposed from the chair, was "The Royal London Yacht Club," in introducing which, the commodore expressed his gratification at seeing so large an assemblage of yachtsmen as was then present—a true sign that the good cause was making more progress than ever; and yet, numerous as the present party appeared, it was in fact but one-third of the number on the club-books (cheers). Even from the shores of the Baltic candidates were joining them. This toast was followed by a song from Miss Messent. "The Corporation of the City of London," was the next toast drunk, for which Mr. Sheriff Crossley returned thanks. It was, indeed, a novelty to see a sheriff, in official costume, attending a yacht-club dinner, and even his two attendant footmen, in their gorgeous liveries, came in for a good share of observation. We have now only space to mention very briefly that the commodore's health was proposed by Mr. Phillips, very warmly received, and feelingly responded to; that Rear-Commodore Cardinall gave the toast of Vice-Commodore Andrews; that Sheriff Crossley proposed the Treasurer and other officers (Mr. Angle returning thanks); and that the Editor of this Journal had the honour of returning thanks for THE PRESS. Some other toasts round up the evening, and the Club is now looking forward to Valentine's Day, when the ANNUAL BALL will come off at Willis's Rooms, and for that we expect no less than five or six hundred will apply for tickets. Fortunately this Club is celebrated for the discrimination as well as the energy of its stewards. Hence it invariably succeeds.

ROYAL NORTHERN YACHT CLUB.

The half-yearly meeting, to ballot for members, and other business of the Club, will be held in Currier's Royal Hotel, George-square, Glasgow, on Wednesday, the 29th inst., at half-past five o'clock. Members will afterwards dine in the hotel—dinner on the table at six. Those intending to be present, will please leave their names at the bar of the hotel, on or before Monday, the 27th inst.

To be balloted for.—W. C. Ward Jackson, Esq., yacht Gitana; proposed by W. B. Higgins, Esq.; seconded by John M. Rowan, Esq. F. C. Trench Gascogne, Esq., schooner Myth; proposed by Sir John P. O'Byrne, seconded by George Middleton, Esq. William C. Patterson, Esq.; proposed by James Smith, Esq.; seconded by George Smith, Esq.

LONDON MODEL YACHT CLUB.

The next general monthly meeting will be held at Anderson's Hotel, 164, Fleet-street, on Tuesday, December 5th, at seven o'clock precisely, when the following gentlemen will be balloted for.—Mr. W. H. Martin; — Trickett; P. J. Maybury; William Maybury; T. H. Dixon. The committee will meet on that evening (December 5th) at six o'clock precisely. The hon. sec.'s notice of motion, deferred from last meeting, and an amendment thereon by Mr. Armitage, will be finally considered. Notice of motion by Mr. B. Luxton:—"That the maximum tonnage for first class yachts be 10 tons." Notice of motion by the vice-cmn.:—"That the first class tonnage be raised to 8 tons, the original maximum tonnage for first class yachts, as established June 7th, 1852." The election of officers for the year 1855 will take place. The Eighth Anniversary Dinner will be on the table at eight o'clock, to which all the members (and their friends) are invited. Names to be left at the bar, at Anderson's Hotel, at once.

YANKEE YACHTING.

SWEEPSTAKES AT BLOXI.

A more beautiful contest has never been witnessed on Southern waters. The day was fine, the breeze was about six knots, and blew from the north. The entries to the sweepstakes were the Mischief, from Mobile, sailed by Capt. Geo. Blakesly; the Ripple, of New Orleans, sailed by Charles Braisted; and the Sylph, sailed by John Clements. The Sylph is owned by John G. Robinson, Esq., of this city, but we think she sails from Biloxi. The entrance fee was $200, p.p.

In drawing for positions, the Ripple luckily won the windward (No. 1), the Mischief was second, and the Sylph third. The starting point was from outside the bar and abreast of the light house. The race was triangular, distance fifteen miles. The first stake boat was to windward, five miles distant from the Judges' boat (towards Deer Island), the second stake boat five miles to Westward of the first, (the wind quartering on the course or line of sailing), and the same distance (to the southward) from the judges' boat.

The judges were Mr. Enoch Everett, of Mobile, and Mr. Geo. May and Henry Rarshide, of New Orleans.

At half-past one o'clock, p.m., the first signal gun was fired; at thirty-five minutes past one, the second gun was fired, and the yachts were ranged in line. At forty-five minutes past one, the third gun (signal for starting) was fired. The Mischief and Sylph got away well together, but the Ripple, unfortunately having her anchor fail, lost several seconds, if not a full minute, before getting under way. But for this accident, it is our opinion, the Ripple would have won the stake. (The sequel will show that she was only beaten four seconds by the successful boat.)

The yachts were well backed up in the way of betting by their respective friends, and each was in some instance taken against the other two, but generally the betting was one boat against a "named" one.

Mobile was well represented among the spectators, while there was a goodly number of New Orleans gentlemen in the crowd.

The fine steamboat Creole, Capt. Post, accompanied the fleet, moving with a light head of steam around the course sailed; thus affording an excellent opportunity to her passengers of witnessing every point in the race. The Creole was decked out with a number of beautiful flags, and perfectly crowded with the beauty and fashion of Biloxi. Throughout the whole affair the utmost order and good-feeling prevailed, and the gentlemen and crews of the contending yachts were marked in their courtesies to one another. Mr. Robinson, the liberal owner of the beautiful Sylph, absolutely kept "open house," where scores of his friends and guests were bountifully supplied with every possible luxury.

But we must proceed to detail the race, which is easily done.

At starting, the Mischief took the lead, the Sylph second, and the Ripple was detained by her anchor being foul. By this accident the Mischief and Sylph got some eighty or 100 yards advantage of the Ripple. Before reaching the first stake-boat, however, the Ripple gained beautifully on the leading boats and passed them. The Sylph also passed the Mischief. In rounding the stake-boat, the Ripple showed ahead first; being ten seconds ahead of the Sylph, who was seven seconds ahead of the Mischief—making the Ripple seventeen seconds in the lead of the Mischief.

The Ripple continued to lead for the second stake-boat—the wind on the starboard quarter and freshening. The Sylph took in gaff-top-sail and flying-jib. This manoeuvre had the appearance from the judges' boat, of an accident, and it was thought she had carried away her top-sail. The Ripple also lowered her gaff-top-sail. The Mischief glides along and passes the Sylph. The second stake-boat is next gained, and the Ripple turns it one minute ahead of the Mischief, and the Mischief also turns it fifteen seconds ahead of the Sylph. The latter, of course, is one minute and fifteen seconds behind the Ripple.

The home run is now entered upon, and the Ripple looks like the winner. The boats have to beat and tack all sorts of ways. This gives an advantage to the Sylph, who turns upon her heel as gracefully and lightly as a fair belle does in the rounds of a waltz. Soon the Mischief is overhauled by the Sylph. The coming out point is near the Judges' boat and the fleet move rapidly towards it. Ripple still leads; Sylph second. Another accident happens to the Ripple, and one which loses her the race. In going about, so as to tack, and while in stays, her centre-board touches the mud and holds her aground several seconds. The end of the race is gained. The Ripple is out first; beating the Sylph one minute and forty-six seconds; but losing the race to the Sylph by four seconds on account of allowance of time for difference of measurement. The Mischief was twenty-three seconds behind the Sylph. Summary:

FIRST STAKE BOAT.

Sid. Story's Ripple 1, and 10 seconds ahead of Sylph; John G. Robinson's Sylph 2, and 7 seconds ahead of Mischief; Mischief Club's Mischief, 3.

SECOND STAKE BOAT.

Ripple 1, and 1 minute ahead of Mischief; Mischief 2, and 15 seconds ahead of Sylph; Sylph 3.

Home.—Ripple 1, and 1 minute and 46 seconds ahead of Sylph; Sylph 2, and 23 seconds ahead of Mischief; Mischief, 3.

Result.—Sylph wins by 4 seconds; Ripple loses by 4 seconds; Mischief loses by 43 seconds. Whole distances, fifteen miles. Time, 2 hours and 10 minutes.—N. O. Picayune.

VENTURE AND VESPER.

A match for $500 a side was made between the above named yachts, which is thus described by "Skewball," in a letter to the N. O. Picayune, dated, Mobile, October 11, 1854:—

"Dear 'Pic.'—The match race between the Venture and Vesper did not come off at Point Clear on Monday last; there not being a 'five-knot breeze,' it was postponed until yesterday, to take place at Hollywood. The day opened very unpropitious for a race; it rained cats and dogs, and blew at times a small hurricane; but towards twelve o'clock the rain ceased and the boats prepared for the race, with a stiff breeze from the south-east. On drawing for positions, the Vesper had choice. On firing the gun for starting, the Vesper took the lead, and with free sheets off they went with railroad speed; but before they reached the first stake boat, the wind hauled more to the south, and contrary to expectations, made the course to the first stake boat a beat to windward. The stake was reached first by the Vesper, and she rounded about 10 seconds ahead of the Venture. From this point to the next stake it was dead before the wind, and with gafftopsails and flying jibs set, they continued their course, and soon the Venture was seen to pass her competitor and continued slowly to open the gap and reached the second stake boat 1 minute and 25 seconds ahead. On rounding this stake the wind was abeam, but was much lighter than at starting. The Venture continued to gain on the Vesper and reached the home stake 3 minutes and 50 seconds ahead, winning the race and money.

"The Vesper was sailed by John Pearce, and the Venture by Charles Braisted, assisted by a crew that can't be beaten in the southern waters.

"There was very little excitement. The Vesper being a new boat, built upon a new model, very little betting took place—she was an 'untried nag,' although her owner had great expectations from some private trials he had given her. She is no doubt a good boat, but I think we have two other second-class boats that can beat her.

"A match for $1000 a side has been made between the Vesper and Stingaree, ten miles dead to windward, to come off on the first day of next, one-half forfeit. It is a long way off, but it will give time to rebuild the old 'Seourge.'"

A HINT TO YACHTSMEN.—"We will venture on another hint. Here are scores of wealthy noblemen and gentlemen whose comfortable yachts will probably lie in harbour all this winter. We presume that with such costly toys they have a taste for real enterprise and generous hospitality. No doubt, too, they could easily forego for one winter the familiar routine of stuffy dinners and stupid company. Let them take their good things with them to Balaklava, exhibit a genial hospitality, and enlighten their own minds with the choicest spirits—the best fellows to be found anywhere in the whole world—now fighting our battles in the Crimea."—Times, Nov. 24.

CUNNINGHAM'S PATENT TOPSAILS.—One of the greatest difficulties in successfully manœuvring a ship is the inability to secure promptitude in the oftentimes perilous and always difficult operation of taking in reefs in the topsails. The difficulty is also as great, and the promptitude is also as urgent, in making sail. In cases of sudden lee-shores, failure of the wind, suddenly coming under high lands, in entering bar-harbours, and in various other situations in which ships are constantly placed, the failure in obtaining the necessary power over the vessel in consequence of the inability properly to handle these sails has involved the ruin of many a noble ship, just when her captain had calculated his time to an hour to reach port. If a proof of a peculiarly melancholy nature were required to show the importance of this operation, the recent loss of the Tayleur, on the Irish coast, would furnish it, where as the breeze freshened at nine in the evening, the necessity of reducing and close reefing topsails became apparent; and yet, as the vessel was fitted with topsails on the old method, it was found impossible, although so much depended on the operation, to accomplish it successfully before three or four o'clock in the morning. All the time the ship had drifted so much to leeward that she was found to be so far under the cliff that she could not be again got out to sea. This catastrophe, as in many other instances, was mainly brought about by the inefficiency of the crew; and now that "recent legislation" has opened the way for the admission of such pretenders to the name of sailor—and emigration and other causes have operated to thin the number of our thorough-bred tars—owners may well be fearful of trusting their vessels to such ill-assorted and incompetent crews. An excellent invention has been discovered to remove the chances of catastrophe from such cases as have been enumerated. Henry Cunningham, Esq., R.N., F.S.A., has perfected and patented an invention by which topsails, topgallant-sails, and others, can be safely and speedily reefed from the deck, and that with so little outlay of manual labour that, in the case of a 500-ton ship, three hands have been found sufficient to reef a maintop-sail in the short space of two minutes; and the reefs can be shaken out from the deck with the same facility. The captain of a bark which was fitted with these sails close reefed his maintop-sail with the aid of one of his passengers; thus proving that there is no need that so many of the crew should be thorough sailors as heretofore, and that the only seamanship now required for this operation is the ability to pull a rope. The simple plan adopted by Mr. Cunningham is to impart a rotary motion to the yard during its descent upon the mast, while the sail is so constructed as to admit of being wound upon the yard during its descent. Thus the sail is reefed in its upper part instead of the lower as of old, and the reef is taken in with great rapidity, and with the utmost ease. The yard of the vessel is not fitted immediately to the mast, but is mounted so as to turn freely in sling hoops and yard-arm irons, which are carried on a shorter and lighter yard—called a chafingspar—a little abaft. The yard is slung in a chain which passes round a notched wheel, in which notches the links of the chain act; thus, by means of commination to the deck, full command is given to the motions of the yard. Amongst the other advantages of the invention is one that carries its own recommendation: there is a small additional expense in the fitting in some cases, but the wear and tear of the sail is so much reduced, that twelve months more wear will be got out of it. The invention has already been largely adopted, and few vessels will for the future undergo a refit without being provided with this most important contrivance.—Maidstone Journal.

"We shall feel obliged by the Secretaries of 'Rowing Clubs,' and others, forwarding their appointments of matches or notices of meetings to come, at their early convenience."

MATCHES APPOINTED.

November 27.—John Bosson and Sampson Beesley, Port Race from Oxford to Ilkley and back, for £10 a side.

November.—Robert Newell and William Pocock, to row from Putney Bridge to the Ship at Mortlake, for £25 a side.

GREAT RACE FOR THE CHAMPIONSHIP OF THE THAMES AND £400.

The above great aquatic event, upon which thousands had been speculated, came off on Monday, and a more gallant or beautiful race was never witnessed. It was, from first to last, a masterly exhibition of skill and prowess, leaving the disinterested spectator nothing to desire, and the backer of the loser nothing to regret. The champion of 1853—the renowned Thomas Cole—the idol of the river Thames—the pet of its best rowing men, and favourite of those deemed most competent judges—has sustained a defeat, has been fairly vanquished upon his merits, and has had his laurels, while yet full green, plucked from his brow. Sic transit gloria mundi. How long his successor may retain them is yet to be seen.

The opponents in Monday's race were Thomas Cole, of Chelsea, and James A. Messenger, of Teddington. Until the latter part of the year 1852 Robert Coombes had, for a very lengthened period, been the champion, but lost that honorary distinction to Cole, by the latter achieving two successive victories over him. James Messenger last year, for a second time, beat James Candlish, the champion of the Tyne; and his excellent style of rowing on those occasions induced his friends to consider that he had sufficient merit justly to entitle him to aspire to the championship of the Thames, the ne plus ultra of perfection and celebrity in rowing. Although Messenger had beaten Cole for Mr. Evan Morris's coat and badge while an apprentice, and in the following year or so in a sculler's race, yet when other contests were taken into consideration in which they had been engaged, together with the improved condition of Cole, and his triumph over the renowned veteran, Coombes, no hesitation was felt by his backers in accepting Messenger's challenge. Having thus briefly adverted to the past, we at once proceed to the race, which was for £200 a-side (a stake, in our opinion, too large), from the Steam-boat pier at Putney, to the ship at Mortlake.

Cole made his appearance in a very excellent boat, built by Salter. His weight was 9st. 8lbs., and when he uncovered, his symmetrical proportions and condition were the theme of general admiration. Messenger was afloat in a few minutes afterwards, in a very beautiful boat, built by himself. His weight was 10st. 10lb., and in the opinion of some it was considered that he had too much flesh upon him; but the result proved that he was the stronger man for it. They are both of the same age—twenty-seven years. So eager had been some of Messenger's friends to get money on the event, that 5, and in some instances 6, to 4 had been laid upon him; but the odds yesterday were so great in favour of Cole, that takers were scarce at 5 and 6 to 4.

At two o'clock the Locomotive, chartered by the Messrs. Searle—with the umpires and referee, Mr. E. Searle, in her bow—the Sunbeam, and Citizen L. steamers, moved to their respective positions to accompany the race, at which time there were thousands of persons congregated on the shores, and a great many small boats upon the river. Messenger won the choice of station, and took the Middlesex side, his opponent being but a few yards away towards the Surrey side. Amidst the greatest excitement around, the men started at three minutes past two very evenly, but in half-a-dozen pulls Cole had the nose of his boat slightly in front, and off French's grounds was half his length in advance; and, stroke by stroke, he continued to mend his position, and just above Craven Cottage, having fairly drawn himself clear, took his opponent's water, and for three minutes at least was half a clear length in advance of Messenger, who was rowing with his stem in a line with the other's stern. So certain did the event seem, that 10 to 1 was freely offered upon Cole, who was considered to have his man completely in his hands; but a great change succeeded. Upon opening the Reach the heavy wind, which was a dead noser, made the water rough and the labour greater, and here the weight, power, and condition of Messenger, began to tell against his opponent. Messenger's boat began gradually to overlap his opponent's, and, amidst the most deafening shouts, the two men fiercely contended past the Crab Tree to Hammersmith-bridge. Gradually Messenger shot foot by foot ahead, his style unaltered save that it was longer in the sweep, while the rocking of Cole's boat indicated distress on the part of its occupant; but he still rowed on, "gripping" the water with all the power he possessed, but his efforts were unavailing, and his opponent passed through Hammersmith-bridge a length and a-half ahead. Cole made repeated and most manly efforts to regain his lost position—never did a man row a stern wager more determinedly right to the very finish; but he could not mend his position; and Messenger was greeted the winner by a clear length and a-half, at 24 min. 45 secs. after the start. There were a few persons ungenerous enough to find some fault with Cole's style, but there was nothing to condemn in it; and had he been victorious, it would have been considered the perfection of art. Messenger, who was trained by Mr. Styles, at the Rose and Crown, Putney, has been long admired for his artistic style, but it was questioned by very many whether it was as effective as Cole's.

ROWING AT OXFORD.

BRASENOSÉ AND TRINITY SCRATCH FOUR-OARED RACES. These annual Scratch Four-oared Races, between the members of Trinity and Brasenose Colleges, commenced on Saturday the 18th instant, and finished on the following Monday. The prize was a Challenge Cup, given by a late member of Trinity, and a late member of Brasenose; with presentation quart tankards for each of the winners, and pints for the crew of the second boat. There were eight boats entered—the heats were rowed in the following order:—

FIRST HEAT.
Friedal, B. N. C.	Carlyon, Trin. C.	Chichester, Trin. C.
Hopkins, Tr. C.	Wigget, Trin. C.	Emerson, Trin. C.
Warburton, B. N. C.	Elliott, Trin. C.	Morhead, B. N. C.
Lloyd, Trin. C.	Sorgissou, B. N. C., str.	Wollaston, Trin. C., str.
Sentle, B. N. C., Cox.	Wyllie, Trin. C., Cox.	Lee, B. N. C., Cox.

This was a well contested heat, and was with difficulty won by Mr. Lloyd, by about two feet.

SECOND HEAT.
Dickenson, B. N. C.	Baker, Trin. C.	Waddington, B. N. C.
Tofuall, B. N. C.	Fritchard, B. N. C.	Clarke, B. N. C.
Davey, B. N. C.	Rogers, B. N. C.	Payne, Trin. C.
Pain, B. N. C., stroke.	Wyllie, Trin. C., str.	Williams, Trin. C., str.
Butler, B. N. C., Cox.	Jones, Trin. C., Cox.	Elars, Trin. C., Cox.

This heat was also well contested. Mr. Pain was the winner, by about half-a-boat's length.

THIRD HEAT.
Kidd, Brasenose College	Yorke, Brasenose College.
Chamberlayne, Brasenose College.	Bennett, Trinity College.
Ellis, Trinity College.	Kaipo, Brasenose College.
Macrorie, Brasenose College, stroke.	Codrington, Brasenose College, str.
Pott, Brasenose College, Coxswain.	Fellows, Brasenose College, Cox.

This heat was won easily by Mr. Kidd. The final heat took place on Thursday, and caused considerable interest among the members of both colleges—the winning boats of Saturday contending, viz., Mr. Dickenson's, Mr. Kidd's, and Mr. Farnival's. A splendid struggle ensued; neck-and-neck was the order of the race, and so even was the rowing, that the spectators were not quite agreed as to which boat came in first, until the umpire decided in favour of Mr. Dickenson, whose crew, it will be observed, were all Brasenose men.

ROWING AT CAMBRIDGE.

UNIVERSITY FOUR-OARED RACES.

The deciding heat (the result of which we gave in our second edition last week), was rowed between Third Trinity and Trinity Hall, on Friday, 17th inst. The following were the crews:—

3rd Trinity.		Trinity Hall.
1. Garden.		1. Salvin.
2. Alderson.		2. Healy.
3. Johnson.		3. Fairlie.
4. Jones.		4. Schreiber.
Green—steerer.		Fitzroy—steerer.

Trinity Hall winning the toss started first, and kept well out of their distance till the Long Reach. Here the Third Trinity put on a splendid spurt, and eventually passed their post a few seconds before Trinity Hall reached theirs.

THE COLQUHOUN SCULLS.

The races for these sculls commenced on Tuesday the 21st. The very heavy rain made the attendance of spectators very select, although great interest is taken this year in the final result. There were ten entries; but only nine started, in the following order, the brackets denoting the bumps made,

1. Blake, Corpus.
2. Brandreth, 3rd Trinity.
3. Richards, Caius.
4. Baker, Jesus.
5. Smith, 1st Trinity.
6. Leathes, St. John's.
7. Kennedy, Caius.
8. Suter, Trinity Hall.
9. Wright, St. John's.

All the bumps were made pretty easily, with the exception of Baker, who having five distances start on Wright, kept away to Ditton Corner.

SECOND RACE, WEDNESDAY, 22ND.

The following was the order:—
1. Salter.	4. Richards.
2. Wright.	5. Leathes.
3. Blake.

Wright made his bump at Ditton; Blake, although he had fouled the bank opposite Grassy, being a little within his distance.

THURSDAY, 23RD.

The following was the order:—
1. Richards.
2. Leathes.
3. Blake.
4. Wright.

Leathes was bumped in the first Reach, and Richards over two places, at Ditton Corner.

CANNON v. CARPE.—A sculler's match, which created a great deal of interest amongst the "Wise Men of the East," took place on Tuesday, between Thomas Cannon of Hermitage-stairs, Wapping, and James Carpe, of Church-stairs, Rotherhithe, for £40. The distance was from Charlton Pier to the Thames Tunnel, and a great number of persons were congregated on board a steamer to view the race. The wind was, however, so strong, and the water so rough, that no idon could be formed of the merits of the men, both becoming water-logged. Carpe took the lead, but near Cunkold's Point his opponent passed him; and, as it was useless to continue rowing, Carpe gave up, and his antagonist finished the distance to claim. We understand that another match will be the consequence.

DOGS.—The Commissioners of Inland Revenue have determined in all cases where parties have been assessed for dogs, and have neglected to pay the tax, to cause the defaulters to be committed to prison, and we understand that numerous warrants for defaulters in this borough are in course of preparation.—Hindoor Express.

WILD DUCKS.—As the cold weather approaches wild fowl become more numerous in our firth, and usually attract a number of aquatic sportsmen to the town. For the last week or two Mr. Wyndman has had some capital punt shooting between Inverness and Munlochy, generally bagging about a score a-day to his own gun. The poor villagers of Clachnaharry, near whom Mr. Wyndman has been staying, have largely benefitted by his good sport and liberality.—Inverness Courier.

CRICKET.

WORTHING CRICKET CLUB.
AVERAGES OF THE BATTERS.

Batters.	No. of Matches.	No. of Innings.	No. of Runs.	Most in one Inning.	Average.	Over.	Times not out.
Lord H. Paget.....	18	32	249	42	7.78	25	12
Lord A. Paget.....	18	31	120	17	3.87	27	1
Captain Biggell.....	11	17	65	25	3.3	3	1
Captain Perry.....	14	25	245	55	13.3	3	1
Captain Wallace.....	13	23	111	31	4.83	19	1
C. Beanecker, Esq.,.....	7	12	116	30	9.66	3	1
W. P. Honeywood, Esq.,.....	5	10	43	15	4.3	3	1
C. Plumer, Esq.,.....	1	1	58	58	58	1	1
T. Haynes, Esq.,.....	2	4	52	24	13	1	1
T. Agar, Esq.,.....	8	12	127	64	10.58	7	1
W. Blake, Esq.,.....	8	13	63	11	4.84	1	1
J. Smith, Esq.,.....	4	8	53	21	6.62	1	1
B. Melville, Esq.,.....	4	8	52	17	6.5	1	1
A. Watson, Esq.,.....	4	8	51	17	6.37	1	1
H. Fenell, Esq.,.....	3	4	75	45	18.75	3	1
H. Cecil, Esq.,.....	10	15	49	17	3.26	4	3
Mr. Gray.....	10	19	150	16	7.89	17	1
Mr. Cortis.....	7	14	81	15	5.78	11	1
Mr. Marshall.....	3	6	61	27	10.16	3	1

AVERAGES OF THE BOWLERS.

Bowlers.	No. of Matches.	No. of Balls.	Caught from, &c.	Caught.	Average.	Over.
Lord H. Paget.....	8	23	13	15	6	4
Lord A. Paget.....	1	2	13	3	7	1
C. Beanecker, Esq.,.....	7	31	0	4	6	2
C. Plumer, Esq.,.....	1	3	4	2	0	1
T. Haynes, Esq.,.....	2	4	2	3	5	1
T. Agar, Esq.,.....	6	24	5	2	5	1
H. Fenell, Esq.,.....	3	6	10	3	5	1
B. Melville, Esq.,.....	3	6	10	3	5	1
J. Smith, Esq.,.....	4	12	8	1	4	3
A. Watson, Esq.,.....	4	10	7	2	4	3
Mr. Gray.....	8	20	11	11	5	2

VALE OF AYLESBURY v. BIERTON.

VALE OF AYLESBURY.

R. C. Gurney c Major, b Hart.....	21	not out.....	14
R. Fowler b D. Elliott.....	0
H. Gurney b P. Hart.....	0	b P. Hart.....	0
B. Poulton b P. Hart.....	1
E. Davill b P. Hart.....	10	b P. Hart.....	0
E. Dickens, run out.....	3
F. Thorp, not out.....	0
T. Wotton, jun., b D. Elliott.....	5
T. Thorp, run out.....	0	not out.....	3
W. Gurney b D. Elliott.....	2
J. White b D. Elliott.....	0
Byes, 6—wides, 1.....	7	Byes.....	4
Total.....	49	Total.....	21

BIERTON.

W. Eustace b Poulton.....	4	b Davill.....	0
J. Elliott b Poulton.....	0	b Davill.....	12
D. Elliott b Davill.....	10	b Davill.....	1
Lucas, run out.....	2	run out.....	0
E. Major, run out.....	1	b Poulton.....	2
W. Holland b Poulton.....	4	c Poulton, b Poulton.....	1
C. Elliott b Davill.....	0	not out.....	1
P. Hart b Poulton.....	3	b Poulton.....	3
E. Eustace b Poulton.....	2	b Poulton.....	0
A. Scapions c Poulton, b Davill.....	1	hit wicket, b Poulton.....	0
J. Scapions, not out.....	0	b Davill.....	2
Byes.....	2	Byes.....	1
Total.....	38	Total.....	31

GOSSIP.

PRACTICAL angling may be considered virtually at a stand, for there are but very few who will venture "in quest of their sport," while the weather is so uncongenial to our nature. Still there are some of the truly weather-beaten disciples of the "quaint Old Izaak," taking the "fair and foul," of angler's luck, who sally out, manfully breasting the wind and rain, to their accustomed sport. To such, the jack falls a rather easy prey, if in still waters, but in running streams the "river shark" is wary, coy, and difficult to take, though "tied by the most tempting bait." The perch, too, may be taken, spite of the cold and sunless sky, even in this dreary month; and apropos of the perch, there is a most famous store of them easy of access to the Londoner, by the South Western Railway, on which, if you travel to Farnham Station and there alight, a walk of four miles to the south, across some wild and picturesque country, will bring you on to Frensham Common, where are situated Frensham Great and Little Ponds. The former of these is stored to overflowing with perch of very heavy weight, and with excellent eels. Mine host of the inn, on the side of the pond, is a kind of conservator of the water, and if you make the house your resting-place you can enjoy your fish "done to a turn," and at a reasonable cost.

Taking a leap from Surrey into Middlesex, we arrive on the River Colne, near Rickmansworth, and here we are gratified by finding that trout-breeding is carried to great perfection, many boxes having been carefully constructed and tended, and the result being a large increase of this delicious fish during the last two seasons, and which promises fair to be as effective in the next. Carried on still further, we next alight on the banks of the Severn, and there again the improved system is making its appearance in reference to the artificial production of salmon, for which that river used to be famous. Progressing yet further, we come to the lovely river Wye, amid the rich red mountain land of Hereford, Shropshire, and Brecon; but, alas! the Wye is not so strictly preserved as it should be: poachers of every kind infest its banks, and the most destructive of these are the amateur fly-fishers who reside for a month or so on its lovely banks in the spawning season. These tyros may be seen wandering along the river-side, having just learned to whip for lace, with a rod and perhaps some twelve to twenty flies, pendant from their lines; there they wander intent upon wholesale destruction, casting this sweeping cargo over the stream in search of what they call lastsprings—i.e. the fry of salmon, trout, or grayling, as the case may be—and bagging all, even the smallest fish of either kind, regardless of aught else but adding one to their nefarious amount. The same line of proceeding is also practised in the Teme, the Monnow, the Lugg, and the Clun, and on the latter pleasant stream, between Leintwardine and Downton, one of the best parts of the river, we have repeatedly seen both the professed fisherman and the amateur whip, fleeing the waters of all the fry they meet with under the guise of lastsprings. To such an evil we call the attention of every lover of the gentle craft residing in the vicinity of the parts described, and we hope that a more manly feeling will be manifested towards the rising stock of fish which may grace next season's advent. At any rate the followers of the angle—and they are neither few nor powerless in the district alluded to—should steadily refuse to employ any fisherman that habitually adopts the practice, and to exclude from their company, and from their lands, all those who may be known to them as using such an objectionable system. Returning once more to the vicinity of London, we stop, on our way, at Clewer Point, about two miles from Bray, on the banks of the Thames, and we hear of large quantities of barbel that have been captured there during the late summer, as well as some very fine Thames trout, which latter are a great rarity, if running large. Again turning eastward we come down the river until we arrive at Richmond, and there, even in the present week, we saw a rich man in a cockleshell boat, of his own construction, and with a black gun, striped with gold round the head, alixed on single hair, taking the lace as fast as he could cast his line. Having discoursed of what we felt would be interesting to our readers, and wishing them to follow our own notable example, when inactive, or weather unpropitious, we put our tackle into order, either dressing a few new favourite flies, splicing a joint, varnishing a float, or re-ringing our

Old Hickory.

THE TWEED ROD FISHING.—The rod fishing closed on Tuesday. The flooded state of the river about fourteen days ago brought a considerable run of fish upwards, a great proportion of which were of large size, and in better condition than usual at the closing of the river. Rod fishing has consequently been eagerly pursued by a number of noblemen and gentlemen at all the fishings during the last ten days, with very fair success.

SALMON FISHING ON THE FORTH.—The fishings belonging to the town of Stirling were let by public auction, on Saturday last, for a term of five years, at £1,200 a year, being an increase of £320 on last year's rental.

GRAND TOURNAMENT AT LOUISVILLE, KENTUCKY.

Ten Gallant Knights in the Arena—Ten Thousand Spectators in the Amphitheatre—Results of the Tiltings—Knight of Virginia Victorious—The Queen of Beauty and Maids of Honour.

YESTERDAY was a triumphal occasion. It witnessed the inauguration in our midst of a species of amusement long popular among the brave men and women of the middle ages. The sports of yesterday were of thrilling interest, and have revived a taste for the sports of the olden time that must continue to strengthen as our people becomes more cognizant of the delights of these ennobling and healthful recreations.

The spacious amphitheatre of the Agricultural Association was densely filled at an early hour, and the vast crowd continued to receive accessions until after the noon hour. Never within the history of Kentucky has there been gathered together so great a body of spectators, nor so formidable an array of beauty. Our own city was brilliantly represented, and so likewise the county and those adjoining. There were many also from every section of the State and from our sister States. The novelty of a tournament west of the Alleghanies, on land where not more than a half century ago Indian fights formed the chief species of amusement, drew together a vast concourse.

The sports of the day were introduced by the trumpeter, who proclaimed from afar the opening ceremonies, the clear notes of his instrument ringing through the air with beautiful effect. Then, preceded by the herald, the procession of knights entered the arena. Each was clad in costly costume, thus designating the character intended to be represented. Owing to the limited time in which the arrangements were made, the number engaged in the tournament was not so great as expected. Only ten knights entered on the first list. In the afternoon trial there were three others. The following list comprises the knights engaged in the first and second tilts:—

- Knight of Virginia, represented by Mr. Edward Crockwell.
- Knight of Jefferson, represented by K. Carter.
- Knight of Berkeley, represented by Mr. Tabb.
- Knight of the Plain, represented by Mr. Phillips.
- Knight of the Leopard Couchant, represented by Mr. Harlin.
- Rhoderic Dhu, represented by Mr. Berry, of Millham county.
- Knight of Beargrass, represented by Mr. John Jones.
- Young America, represented by Thomas V. Brent, jun.
- Knight of Kentucky, represented by John B. Brent.
- Knight of Bourbon, represented by John Brent.

These gallant gentlemen were all handsomely attired, and presented a brilliant spectacle. Having been ranged about the central stand, the president, John B. Tapscott, Esq., delivered the following charge to the Knights:—

"Gallant Sir Knights—I welcome you here, and tender you in behalf of 'the beautiful' around us, the sincerest congratulations. You appear upon this occasion as the representatives of an age which will ever present the deepest interest to every lover of romance. The genius of chivalry has twined the tightest wreaths that grace the poet's lyre, and the muse of history has recorded on her immortal pages the gallant deeds of the knights of old. They, like you, were worshippers at the altar of beauty. They ever bowed in obedience to her will. The wild enthusiasm and noble in the daring actions which characterized their tournament, should animate you upon this occasion. Thousands of joyful eyes are beaming upon you, like rays of heavenly light, and morn ne'er painted with lovelier blushes the orient sky than those which mantle the cheeks of 'the fair' around you. In the midst of this magnificent and imposing pageant the Queen of Love and Beauty will be crowned in the name of the victor. This should inspire each of you with the determination to win the honour of choosing the peerless one. The successful champion will be rewarded with her sweetest smiles, and the richest treasure of her heart. I charge you now, nerve yourselves for action. The path to victory runs not through sunny plains or verdant lawns. No flowery meads, from which the zephyrs waft delicious fragrance, are seen along its course, no beams of radiant light o'erhurl from the clouded sky above it: but he not discouraged. Hope will cheer you onward, and a thousand love-wreaths will fall upon the gallant knight who shall win the prize of glory. Then on to the contest, and remember that "Faith heart never woo'd fair lady."

Immediately afterwards the contest commenced. Each knight made the circuit of the arena at full speed, with lance aimed at the suspended rings. There were three tilts, and he who succeeded in taking the largest number of rings was declared victor, having liberty to make choice of the Queen of Love and Beauty. Subjoined is the result of the three tilts, the number of rings taken each time being given:—

	First.	Second.	Third.	Total.
Knight of Virginia.....	5	5	3	13
Knight of Jefferson.....	4	1	3	8
Knight of Berkeley.....	3	4	3	10
Knight of the Plain.....	3	3	3	9
Knight of the Leopard.....	0	0	3	3
Rhoderic Dhu.....	3	3	4	10
Knight of Beargrass.....	5	3	2	10
Black Knight.....	2	3	3	8
Young America.....	1	1	0	2
Dontherist Knight.....	1	0	0	1

There being a tie between the Knight of the Plain and Rhoderic Dhu, they engaged in another contest, in which the latter was successful. The Queen of Love and Beauty was then chosen by the Knight of Virginia, who was victor in the lists, and a Maid of Honour by Rhoderic Dhu. These two ladies (Miss Julia Chamberlain as Queen and Miss Molly Brent as Maid,) were introduced into the arena and crowned. Thos. S. Phillips, of this city, then delivered the coronation speech as follows:—

"Lady—The pleasing duty devolves upon me to place upon your brow this graceful emblem of love's devotion to beauty. Each laughing bud and blown flower speaks, in silent eloquence, the glowing language of the heart. Beauty has ever reigned supreme. The tones of her lyre echo in every heart, and words of enchanting sweetness ever fall from her lips. The days of chivalry are fraught with evidence of her power, and we have now before us a most brilliant illustration of the homage which is due to her supremacy. The most touching passages in our histories carry us back to the times and manners of chivalry. Everything connected with that age awakens our sensibility. All the graceful and noble virtues of chivalry are reflected in the tournament, and the warriors who had displayed them in the list could not but feel their mild and beneficent influence. Even in the battle-field skill and address inseparably softened the ferocity of the mere soldier, and he soon came to consider war itself a great tournament. Thus the tourneying lists were schools of chivalric virtue as well as of chivalric prowess, while the splendor and joyousness of the show brought society into kind and merry intercourse. In Western Europe the tournament survived chivalry, whose image it had reflected and brightened, and the world long clung with fondness to those splendid and graceful shows which had thrown light and elegance over the warriors and dames of yore. Today it has been revived in all its pristine brilliancy, and made brighter by the intelligence and beauty which now surrounds you. Love and beauty have ever been the reward of chivalric deeds. The gallant knight who has so proudly won the honours to-day has selected you as most worthy to wear this beauteous wreath; and now, in the name and by the authority of the Knight of Virginia, I crown you Queen of Love and Beauty."

After a recess for dinner there was a second series of tilts, in which the Knight of Beargrass was declared victor, the palm being strongly contested by the Black Knight. A second maid of honour was then chosen in the person of Miss Emmeline Fontaine.

During the progress of the contest the most intense feeling of sympathy for the various knights pervaded the large assemblage. We have never seen such manifestations of enthusiasm by any gathering as on yesterday. All seemed absorbed in the spectacle before them, to the utter exclusion of other thoughts. We but utter the common public sentiment when we express a desire for perseverance on the part of the young gentlemen engaged in this gallant undertaking. A year hence we may expect a contest excelling anything of a similar nature even seen in the old dominion. The daughter State surely has more of genuine chivalry than her mother.—Louisville Courier, Oct. 17.

At a shooting-match which came off near Harborough a few days since for a fat pig, nine of the sportsmen missed both pigmies, and the remaining three killed but one each.

NUBNESS OF THE DOG.—The nervous system in this creature is largely developed, and, exerting an influence over all its actions, gives character to the beast. The brain of the dog is seldom in repose; for even when asleep, the twitching of the legs, and the suppressed sounds which it emits, inform us that it is dreaming. No animal is more actuated by the power of imagination. Who is there that has not seen the dog mistake objects during the dusk of the evening? Delirium usually precedes its death, and nervous excitability is the common accompaniment of most of its disorders. To diseases of a cerebral or spinal character it is more liable than any other domesticated animal. Its very bark is symbolical of its temperament, and its mode of attack energetically declares the excitability of its nature. The most fearful of all the diseases to which it is exposed (rabies) is essentially of a nervous character, and there are few of its disorders which do not terminate with symptoms indicative of cerebral disturbance.—Mayhew's Dogs.

A MISTAKE.—A gentleman meeting one of his friends who was insolvent, expressed great concern for his embarrassment. "You are mistaken, my dear sir," was the reply; "it is not I, it is the creditors, who are embarrassed."

AN AMERICAN WILL.—The following is the copy of a will left by a man who chose to be his own lawyer:—"This is the last will and testament of me, John Thomas. I give all my things to my relations, to be divided amongst them the best way they can. N.B. If anybody kicks up a row, or makes any fuss about it, he isn't to have anything.—Signed by me, John Thomas."

THE SPORTSMAN'S LIBRARY.

Wild Sports in the Far West. By FREDERICK GERSTAECKER. Translated from the German. Loudon: Routledge and Co.

A German sportsman, having exhausted the excitements of German sport, satiated with wild boars, roebucks, a fox or two, and possibly a wolf in very hard weather, bethought him of trying his trusty rifle and finding a new sensation among the more savage inhabitants of the forests and prairies of the Far West. Herr Gerstaecker assures us that he went and returned without the slightest intention of writing a book, but was persuaded by friends—as friends somehow always do persuade modest men—to correct his notes and give them to the press. This volume is the result of their entreaties, published first in Germany, thence translated, and presented to the English public by Messrs. Routledge, in a very handsome shape, illustrated with many engravings by Harrison Weir, beautifully bound, and, let us add, wonderfully cheap.

The author avows in his preface that he has mingled with his narratives of sporting adventure sketches of the social condition of the Americans; that section of his work, however, we shall pass over, as not belonging to this department of THE FIELD, and we purpose to direct attention exclusively to those portions of it describing the sports in which Herr Gerstaecker performed such prowess, according to his own story, and which will have a special interest for our readers, who will by their comfortable firesides sympathise with the toils and dangers of their brother sportsman from Germany.

And, while reading, let them be thankful that the sport they are partaking is enjoyed only in imagination, and not endured in the reality, for, according to our author, hunting in the forests of the Far West is a very different thing from hunting in the Black Forest. Hearken to his warning:—

But should any inveterate sportsman, with an imagination heated by the description of these scenes, excited by the dangers and difficulties of the enterprise, depart to the Far West, to experience similar adventures, let him remember, when wet, hungry, alone, and a prey to mosquitoes, he lies stretched in the untrodden forest, longing in vain for a fire, and for the society of men; or when he has been following the tracks of the deer for days together, without the chance of a single shot, until he can almost persuade himself that the tales he has read of wild sports in the West are but myths existing only in the brains of the Indians; let him, I say, remember that I have, so far as in me lay, painted all this in its true colours, and that many an adventure which reads admirably on paper, is in reality the reverse of romantic.

Here is an affecting story:—

THE FAWNS.

Towards noon I came to the little river Sulphurfork, which I was obliged to wade through, after many vain attempts to find a shallow place, the water coming up to my chest. I began to despair of getting anything to eat, and, being thoroughly wet, I resolved to come soon to a halt, and dry myself by a fire, when all at once I saw about fifty deer within shot, all quietly feeding, and taking no notice of me. For an instant I stood petrified; then every fibre in my body heat and trembled with delight. The suddenness of the sight had so excited me that I could not take aim, and I was obliged to wait to collect myself. It was a glorious sight, such a number of these noble animals together; I counted fifty-seven, and derived particular pleasure from the antics of two fawns, which made the most comical bounds, and came very near me without any suspicion. Regret to kill such a beautiful innocent creature withheld my hand for some time, but hunger was not to beajoiled—I fired, and one of them fell without a cry. The effect of the report upon the herd was quite ludicrous—each of the hitherto unsuspecting animals became an image of attention, then fled with immense bounds towards the thicket. As I did not move they stopped again, and began to feed, but not without frequently raising their heads to listen. The impression which the fall of his playfellow had produced on the other fawn was very different. Far from flying he came nearer, snuited the poor animal as if he thought it was play, setting his fore-foot several times on the body of his comrade as if to induce him to get up. I had the other barrel still loaded, but thought it would be like murder to injure a hair of the little creature.

As I stepped out from the bushes, the fawn stared at me with astonishment in his large clear eyes; probably he had never seen a man before. He then flew like the wind towards his dam, but stopping now and then as if he expected his comrade. I quickly made a fire on the spot to roast my game, putting the greater part of the buck and the briquet on sticks before the fire with bellow bark underneath to catch the dripping for basting; and a delicious meal was very soon the result of this simple proceeding.

On one occasion Herr Gerstaecker narrowly escaped the fate of Acteon—being made a dinner for his own dogs. He had A SWIMMING RACE WITH THE DOGS.

After an hour or two the dogs started a young bear, and followed him in full cry, but had not gone far when they were stopped by the river l'Anguille, or, as they call it here, the Lauge; neither coaxing nor threats could induce them to take to the water, and Saint thought that if one of us swam over the dogs would follow, and that we should find the trail again on the other side. Saint could not swim, Uhl could not: so I threw off my clothes, and plunged in. The river, which in summer is very shallow, and hardly seems to flow, was now much swollen, and had overflowed its banks. As soon as I had swum some distance, Saint began to cheer on the dogs, and I soon heard them spring into the water, one after the other, and follow me. I was swimming slowly with long strokes, and had reached about the middle of the river, when I heard two of the dogs close behind me, while Saint was still cheering them on from the bank, as if to attack a bear. The two near me were barking furiously, and the thought flashed upon me: suppose they were to seize me? If only one had attacked me, all the rest would have joined, and as they were strangers to me, if they had fallen upon me I should have had no chance: so I began to strike out as hard and as fast as I could to reach the shore. Exerting myself for my life, I came nearer and nearer the bank, but the excited dogs swam faster still, and I heard the snorting of one of them close to me when I felt the ground: in an instant I and the dogs were both on shore. The danger was over now.

Let us turn now to a very different adventure:—

BEAR-SHOOTING.

Bear-shooting in America differs according to the time of the year, and the habits of the animal. It was now late in the autumn, almost winter, so that they could be hunted with dogs. Well mounted, with not less than from four to about eight or ten dogs, the hunters seek in the thickest and most unfrequented parts of the forest the favourite haunts of the bear. The men ride slowly through the thorns and creepers, the dogs seeking in all directions till they find a fresh trail, or a bear breaks cover, when they follow up in full cry. If the bear is fat he seldom runs far, but takes to a tree, or shows fight; if there are not dogs enough to master him, he knocks them over and continues his flight. If he takes to a tree, his fate is soon sealed by the rifle.

We had ridden along quietly for about an hour, when the dogs gave tongue, and started off, we after them as well as we could. My horse was an old hand at it, and I had nothing to do but to sit fast as he leaped the fallen trees, and try to avoid the creepers, which, however, often checked and sometimes threw us.

Keeping up with the dogs was out of the question. I had long lost sight of my companion; I listened, and it appeared that the bear had turned to the left, towards the river; could he reach it, he was safe; it was too cold for the dogs; besides, they would hardly venture to swim, and we also must have remained on the bank.

I changed my course to cut him off, and luckily hit upon one of the cattle tracks that cross the wood in all directions. Once clear of the thorns, we went at a good pace, and soon heard the pack approaching. Suddenly the horse swerved to one side with a snort, and the bear burst out of the thicket. The moment he saw the horse, he stopped short and gave a deep growl. I had sprung off, and the bear had hardly stopped, when my ball was in his shoulder. The pack was close upon him, and he summoned all his strength to escape from the dogs; but the wounded shoulder checked his pace, the dogs attacked him, and he rose on his hind legs to oppose them. I could not venture a second shot for fear of injuring some of them, so charged him with my knife, and plunged it from behind the shoulder into his heart; this, with the furious bites of the dogs, soon ended his life.

Here is a sport the pleasures of which are known in England only to the poacher:—

SHOOTING BY NIGHT.

I was again passionately fond of shooting, and had capital sport. As my days were generally occupied, it was carried out at night, as follows: the handle of a frying-pan is lengthened to about four feet by means of a narrow board; the pan is filled with kindlers and set alight—then taking it on your shoulder, and your rifle in your hand, you are ready for sport. If alone, you must take a store of kindlers to replenish the fire. For the sake of a better aim, a small crutch is put in the end of the wooden handle, to rest the rifle. The fire being kept behind your head, the eyes of the game will glow like balls of fire: the deer, accustomed to the frequent fires in the forest, are not alarmed. When first discovered, if at about 100 paces, the eyes will look like a single ball, but the two become distinct on a nearer approach, which the sportsman must make with as little noise as possible, and, if possible, against the wind. When near enough, he lays his rifle in rest, and aims between the eyes, or, if he can distinguish the outline of the form, at the heart; and he is generally sure of his game.

The variety of game is astonishing; it ranges from bees to buffaloes and bears. We present a lively picture of

BEE-HUNTING.

As the weather turned out fine and warm in the afternoon, we determined to hunt in the wood for a swarm of wild bees, which we had sought for in vain about six months before. We took some bait with us, and went to a spot about half a mile off.

To induce bees to take bait in the fall of the year, the hunter looks out for a small open space in their neighbourhood, and if he cannot find one he must make a clearance with his knife and tomahawk, stick a branch upright in the ground, and lay some leaves on it spread with a little thinned honey. The bees soon discover it, and when they have got as much of the honey as they can carry, they rise in circles, which become larger and larger, till they attain a certain height; then they dash off direct for their own tree, to deposit their store in the general warehouse. The bee-hunter must take particular notice of the line of their flight, which requires a good eye; and then carry his bait some two hundred yards further in that direction, when the bees will soon flock round it again. If when loaded they keep the same course, it is a sign that the tree is still in that direction, and the bait must be carried further, until they fly the other way. Then the bee-hunter will know that he has passed the tree, and that it must be between his present and his last station, and he is not long in finding it. When he comes near the tree, and the bees are at work, their unsteady zigzag flight will betray its proximity.

The first time we moved our bait, the bees flew backward, so we knew we could not be more than a hundred yards from their tree; but the approaching night prevented our discovering it. Next morning, about ten o'clock, as it began to get warm, we returned to our hunt, and in less than half an hour found the hole where the little labourers were passing in and out. It was in a nearly decayed, not very large post-oak, a tree that prefers moist soils, though it also grows on hills. It bears small and rather sweet acorns; its wood is very durable, and will remain long in the ground without rotting. I rode hastily back to the house, for we had taken a horse with us for the chase, and returned with a pail, an axe, a knife, and a spoon. The tree soon fell under our blows—smoke was made—the bees stupefied—an opening cut—and a most beautiful sight for a bee-hunter presented itself, in a number of well-filled cells. We filled the pail with the best, ate as much as our stomachs would bear, set the tree on fire, that the bees might not lead us astray on our next hunt, and returned to the house.

We conclude with a sketch of

ALLIGATOR HUNTING.

The heat in May, especially in the middle of the day, was oppressive; but when the other whites had retired to take their siesta, I went with my rifle and harpoon to the swamps, at a short distance from the river, to shoot alligators, which are to be found in incredible numbers in the warm standing pools. What dreadful statements have been written about the formidable nature of these animals, and their fierce attacks on man! I have always found them gentle, harmless creatures, and was very active in shooting them. However, as I lost those I had shot, by their swimming a little way and then sinking, I took a harpoon with a twenty-foot line, and, going up to the waist in water, I placed myself under one of the many cypresses standing in the swamps, and awaited their approach, as they swam about slowly in the glowing mid-day heat, or sunned themselves on the bank. If one came within twelve or fifteen yards, I was sure of him. The best sport was when he was a great powerful fellow, and I pulled one way as he pulled the other. But as standing in the terrible heat of the sun did not suit me, I resolved to try torchlight, particularly as many of the Crookes told me that no one had ever attempted to shoot them by the light of a fire, it being supposed that the alligator was bolder and more dangerous at night. So, on the next evening, I went to the place with rifle, fire-pan, harpoon, and kindlers. The sight from the banks of the swamp was enchanting, and made me endure even mosquito bites with patience. The dark surface of the water, the immense cypresses standing in it, their moss waving in the night wind, the dark surrounding forest, the hooting of the owls, the melancholy croak of the bull-frog, I had long been accustomed to; but all in the water was wild commotion, and when holding the flame behind me, the shadow of my head was cast upon the flood, hundreds of glowing eyes shone from all parts of it like balls of red-hot iron. As I had only one hund free, I could not hold the rifle and harpoon at the same time; so I fired at the head of the nearest, dropped the rifle, seized the harpoon, darted it into the animal at the distance of six or seven yards, and drew it by the line to the bank. I had secured two in this way, when I saw a pair of larger eyes coming straight towards me; I fired as before, and darted the harpoon into the wounded animal, as he turned and showed the white of his belly. At the instant of darting the harpoon, I was standing close to the edge of the water, with the end of the line fastened to my right wrist. The alligator had hardly felt the barbed iron, when he darted off and dived, jerking me into the water before I had time to hold back. The pan fell out of my hand, and the fire was extinguished with a loud hiss. The line was too securely fastened for me to free myself, and I was twice dragged under water before I felt firm bottom, when, holding back with all my might, I succeeded in stopping him, he being somewhat exhausted by his exertions and loss of blood; then pulling slowly and cautiously towards the bank, gradually increasing the strain, he collected his remaining strength, and darted off, dragging me head under again; but the water was not more than four feet deep, and this time I had less trouble in hauling the weakened animal to the shore.

Wet through and through, and in total darkness, I had fortunately left my matches, with the split wood, at the foot of a tree. I groped for and found my pan, and in a few minutes another bright flame rose flickering to the sky. The large alligator was about ten feet long, and I could make no use of him; for although the planters use the fat for their cotton machinery, for which it is well adapted, it was too old to be eatable: the two first caught were three and four feet long; I cut off their tails, and carried them home to eat.

These are but fragments of the exciting sporting adventures in this volume, which we recommend to the regards of every sportsman.

THE GARDEN.

TO THE READERS OF "THE FIELD."

As we propose for the future to devote a distinct department of THE FIELD to this subject, a few words by way of introduction will be necessary.

First, let us explain the design. It is our purpose to provide information that will be useful to the amateur gardener. We shall not, therefore, occupy our columns with treatises on vegetable physiology and scientific botany, essays on the Woods and Forests' Commissioners, and such-like topics, which appropriately fill a large space in the Gardeners' Chronicle; but we shall limit our Garden Intelligence to what may be termed practical gardening; that is to say, the information required by every person having a garden, however small, in whose cultivation he takes an interest. Thus we shall make known to our country readers new plants, new modes of training, new practices in the garden, the times and seasons for the various operations, and how they may be conducted most efficiently and economically.

We hope to receive in this department very extensive contributions from our readers having any experience of their own which might be usefully communicated to others. For this purpose, we shall open to them a column of Notes and Queries, where they may ask questions on topics upon which they desire information from practical experienced readers, who will doubtless readily oblige them and ourselves by assisting the inquirer with a reply, which will be communicated through our columns. The judgment of the Editor of this department will also be readily given to bond fide correspondents, sending their names as guarantees for that bond fide, but not for publication, and he will help them with explanations as to any flowers or fruits whose identity they may desire to ascertain. By omitting the matters not of real utility to the owner of a garden, we hope to be enabled to convey to our readers, every week, quite as much practical information as they could obtain in the journals professing to be wholly devoted to horticulture, but of which the greater portion consists of subjects having no worth or interest for the practical gardener, whether professional or amateur, but only for a few men of science.

This, as well as some others of the departments about to be introduced in THE FIELD, will necessarily take some time to be brought into full working; but we have explained the ultimate design towards which we shall steadily advance, and we ask our readers to promote it, by freely communicating with us upon all the subjects comprised within the department of THE GARDEN.

GARDENING FOR THE WEEK.

As some of our readers may feel desirous of knowing the scope and design of the Horticultural Department of THE FIELD, which we this week commence, a little explanation will be necessary. We need offer little apology, perhaps, for the endeavour to place sound Horticultural information in the hands of our country friends weekly, conceiving such to be one of the requisites of a country life; especially as not every gardener in the country is thorough master of his profession. We shall, therefore, so handle gardening affairs as to make our Horticultural advice eminently practical, and divested as much as possible of all technicalities; qualified not only to assist, but to teach where requisite; and, above all, to be in general, specially adapted to the period at which it appears in print. On the soundness of the advice which will be contained therein, we beg to recommend much reliance; as far as experience goes, we may observe, that an equally close practice and observation of at least thirty years will be brought to bear on this interesting subject.

PRESENT POSITION OF GARDENING.

To affirm that the present position of Horticulture in Great Britain is such as to excite the admiration, if not envy, of all civilised nations, is almost needless; it is well-known to every one in the least conversant with such affairs. Of course our mild climate has much to do with our position in this respect; but more still is due to what is more familiarly called pluck, which is ever manifest in every thing British: in the court, the senate, the camp, the garden, and last, but not least, the field.

Whatever we attempt to do we do well; and, scarcely content with that, we are ever on the alert to advance. In casting a retrospective glance over the last score years in the gardening world, what has not been effected? About that period the subject of gardening structures began to attract a most extensive investigation; and we all know the throes the question endured until brought to a somewhat satisfactory basis. The efficient erection and economical heating of such structures were alike investigated, and the result has been much greater simplicity of structure and increased economy in the use of fuel. But more rapid advances still were in store, and speedily to be realised. The removal of the duty from glass gave a new impulse to the question, and people soon began to talk of covering acres, an idea which has since been realised, and to the extension of which we can scarcely assign limits.

Of course, coincident with the advance in gardening structures, was the advance in plant culture, and, by consequence, an impulsive movement to our Exhibitions, which soon began to feel that a new era in their history was about to commence.

But, to examine out-door gardening; here what shall we say—great advances still. Whether we turn to landscape gardening, ornamental gardening, or vegetable and fruit culture, we shall, on a proper examination, find ample cause for exultation. In the tribe called Conifers; or, in other words, the Fir family, what advances, not in kinds alone, but the vast extension of those already introduced! Their effect in the landscape is already beginning to be felt in various parts of the kingdom; and before many years have passed, we shall find in our grounds winter scenery, at least, of a very different character from that of former days, which as far as trees were concerned, but too often consisted of haggard stems and branches, mean and common place individually, and tame as to their general outline. Shrubs, evergreen and deciduous, have received great accessions, and our new Deutzias, Weigelas, Forsythias, and such like, bid fair not only to enrich our grounds, but to increase the spring beauty of our plant-houses, being, many of them, well adapted for forcing purposes.

Vegetable culture has also progressed very considerably, and here we may fairly own our obligations to our country Horticultural Societies, which have given a very considerable impulse to kitchen gardening.

We may scarcely speak in so sanguine a way of fruits, which assuredly have not kept pace with other gardening matters; for we still have the same peaches, nectarines, and apricots as were in culture fifty years since, and we are not aware that they are either finer or higher flavoured than in those days. To be sure, we have a great influx of French pears, with high sounding names, but many of them are unknown, and as to relying on the authority of individuals whose recommendation of them is based principally on interest, that will not do for the majority of our country gentlemen, with whom in the main, one fact is worth a dozen speculations.

But of these things we shall in due time speak more fully, and more in detail; in the meantime, let us observe that there is every reason, in gardening affairs, to take heart, or rather to renew and to quicken our courage. We may feel assured that a far richer harvest lies ahead than any we have reaped; and as "none but the brave deserve the fair," so none but men of determination deserve success; such alone, aided by skill, can possibly command it in this kingdom, and receive that meed of praise, from an anxious and discriminating public, which every ingenious and emulous character strives to attain.

BUSINESS PECULIAR TO THE SEASON.

First, Protection. Remember the ice-king is at hand, or may be expected. Those who possess half-hardy plants should see to providing covers for them forthwith. Whatever mode of protection our friends may adopt, we may remind them that the covering should not, if possible, touch the plant or shrub. The interior should be a hollow chamber, which is well known to be a better non-conductor than when bodies are in contact. Roses, too, of the Tea, China, and tender Bourbon kinds, must be looked to; those on their own roots and in a dwarf state, should first have something to preserve the root, happen what may. We have found sawdust a capital thing, but cinder ashes are also good, using cinders and all, or half decayed tan, with the finer portion riddled out; and, to come to littery materials, fern, old thatch, or moss, may do very well. These things should be at hand, but not introduced until the necessity arises, for under ordinary circumstances the plants will have to be covered rather longer than is entirely congenial to their habits.

As to Standard or Tree Roses of tender kinds, we generally use fresh straw to protect them. Our practice is this:—Suppose a tree of Souvenir de Malmaison—the period, last week of November, and a keen frost just commencing. We trim off all the leaves, then take two long wisps of new straw from the bundle; each as much as can be grasped by both hands. These are placed beneath the head crossing each other at right angles in the centre. They are then tied, to retain that position, and this done, the ends are turned upwards, and being divided slightly, they embrace the whole head and heart in an apex tied over the head of the rose? Fern fronds of the common brake are used by some, and capital covering too; but, of whatever kind, it should be slightly porous, in order that winds may dispel the damps which are sure to lodge in the interior, and which afford a ready vehicle for frost.

PLANT STRUCTURES.—In the first place, let us ask, are your flues, pipes, boilers, &c. in working trim? If not, lose not a day; every fire should be proved directly, to see whether it is in a position to work up to the full powers accorded it in its original construction. Every flue should be thoroughly cleaned before hard frosts occur. Of course every re-arrangement in houses will have been completed long since.

FLOWER FORCING.—Those who desire a constant succession of flowers through the winter, must at once provide some situation for those classes of plants which are really eligible. Roses of various kinds,—the Chinese Azalias, Deutzias, the Persian Lilac, many of our American shrubs, not forgetting Rhododendrons—both species and varieties; American Azalias, the Lily of the Valley Violets, and our Dutch bulbs, as Ilyarinds, Narcissi, Early Tulips, Crocuses, &c. These we have adverted to as qualified to form a nucleus around which numerous other nice things may rally.

These will not, of course, all class so well together as could be wished in regard of forcing practice; we may, therefore, observe that a structure of any kind which can equally command a moist and a dry heat, with a guaranteed temperature of 60 degrees by day, in any weather, and at night 55 degrees, together with a light roof, is the best qualified to carry out miscellaneous forcing. We strongly recommend what is called a bottom heat; gardeners frequently use tan, but it matters not what, so long as the roots of the plant can be situated in a medium always five degrees in advance of the average of day and night temperatures.

PRUNING.—Those who can spare time, should proceed with pruning immediately, commencing with the bush fruit, and proceeding with plums, cherries, and apples. Apricots should not be pruned until the bud begins to swell, in February; and pears similar. Peaches and nectarines may be pruned at any time through the winter, but they should not be trained until the bud begins to swell, unless protection can be afforded them from the moment they are pruned, or, indeed, the process will be one of retardation, for it is good policy to cover in the end of January, to ward off sunshine, in order that they be made to blossom as late as possible.

PLANTING.—In our opinion, there is no period equal to October for planting, whether evergreens or deciduous trees. However, when there is much to do, the planter may continue until frosts impede his progress. Ornamental planting may be deferred until the end of March, especially if well situated as to water, and a timely application of it. Spring-planted things are sure to need this attention.

THE FLOWER GARDEN.

PRESERVATION OF DAHLIA ROOTS.—The following is good advice concerning the Dahlia, from the Agricultural Gazette, of November 18th:—

Being fond of good Dahlias, and grieved at the frequent losses that come under my notice, I beg to commend to the attention of those who too often have to lament the loss of their favourites, the following effective method of preserving their roots. The tops being killed by the autumn frosts, and thus become nuisances, must be cut away, leaving the roots undisturbed for several weeks in order to feed the nascent buds destined to break the following spring. For, if at the time of removing the plants from the ground these buds are immature, there is great probability that the tubers will perish before the spring; or should their vitality remain, there will be found a difficulty, if not an impossibility of getting them to "break." The next business is to lift the plants from the ground; and in doing this the greatest care should be taken to preserve their fibrous roots, for the plants require constant nourishment. A number of these rootlets will, however, under the most careful handling be broken off, and the supply of sap interrupted until new roots are made; but with those plants that have well-swollen buds their reproduction is soon effected. When the tubers are raised from the ground they should immediately be transferred to their winter quarters, where their fibrous roots must be carefully spread upon a thin layer of sand or earth, and at once covered with about an inch of the same, leaving the greater portion of the tuber bare. During winter they should be kept slightly moistened. For wintering these tubers there is perhaps (unless an especial place is provided for them), no better place than under the stage of a cool greenhouse; but, whatever place may be assigned them it is indispensable that it admits a moderate amount of light; is kept cool, but above the freezing point, and that the atmosphere is such as suits growing plants generally; alike free from both saturation and dryness, which will with equal certainty engender putrefaction. W.

THE FRUIT GARDEN.

STRAWBERRIES.—The Strawberry is everybody's favourite, and as new kinds perpetually crowd themselves on our attention, and some discrimination is necessary, we shall feel it a duty to give a prominent place to notices concerning them, when really deserving it. We might, however, have said the same as to all our fruits. The following is extracted from the Gardeners' Chronicle of November 18th, and appears to deserve notice:—

We have just received, through Messrs. Low and Co., from M. Jacob Makoy, of Liège, some runners of a New Strawberry called the Duchesse d'Angoulême, produced in the open ground, and we think so highly of the variety as to judge it worthy very special notice. It is said to have been raised from a kind of Alpine without runners, known among the French by the name of the Perpetuelle rouge sans coulers, crossed with the British Queen. Its scapes are tall, somewhat hairy, but much less than those of the British Queen. Its fruit is most abundant, middle-sized, ovate, red, with the grains prominent, or but slightly embedded; the calyx is rather small. The flesh is solid throughout, juicy, and as rich as that of the male parent, but more acid. The truss has more of the habit of growth of the Alpine varieties of Strawberry than of the British Queen. M. Makoy states that he saw, on the 6th of November, old plants of the above, in the open ground, as usual covered with flowers and fruit as if it had been the month of June, although the weather had been previously very cold. In September and October the fruit was much better, larger, and more coloured. The plants, though very productive in fruit, are said to make but few runners, as might have been anticipated from the nature of the mother of the Strawberry. There is no doubt that we have in this case an entirely new variety, with new habits and of sterling merit. The fruit which reached us wanted colour, and was scarcely ripe; nevertheless, it contained abundant evidence that it possesses quality of the highest order. That it should have been acid was inevitable in the case of fruit ripened in the open air in the month of November. A very fine dish of Prince of Wales strawberries was exhibited to the Horticultural Society a fortnight ago, beautifully coloured, but we apprehend they would have had no chance with the new Belgian variety, had Mr. Ingram had it under his care. We believe there is no record of the Alpine having been previously employed as a breeder. Now that Mr. Makoy has shown the way, we shall say many other growers will endeavour to imitate his example; and it would not at all surprise us to see that fruit like the British Queen and Kent's Seedling were as common in October as in July.

KITCHEN GARDEN.

AMERICAN PLAN OF CULTIVATING ASPARAGUS.—About the 1st of November—or as soon as the frost has well blackened the asparagus tops—take the scythe and mow all down close to the surface of the bed; let it lie a day or two, then set fire to the heap of stalks, burn it to ashes, and spread the ashes over the bed. Take a load of clean, fresh, stable manure, and add thereto half a bushel of hen-lung; turning over and mixing the whole together throughout. This makes a pretty powerful compost. Apply one such load to every twenty feet in length of asparagus beds, which should be six feet wide. With a strong three-pronged spud, or fork, dig this dressing under. The whole is now left for the winter. In the spring, as early as possible, turn the top of the bed over lightly once more. Cover the surface of the bed about a quarter of an inch thick with fine pecking salt; it is not too much. As the spring rains come down, it gradually dissolves. Everything else, pigweed, pavalia, will refuse to grow on the top of such asparagus beds.

THE GARDENER.

LIQUID MANURE.—We consider the question of liquid manure so important, although in its infancy, that we shall seize every occasion of exhibiting its powers, having ourselves handled it in various ways far more than twenty years. The following is from the Agricultural Gazette of November 18th:—

Although I am no farmer, I have watched with considerable interest the discussion which has been carried on in the pages of the Agricultural Gazette, relative to the merits of liquid manure as a fertiliser, and am somewhat surprised at the amount of ignorance and obstinacy evinced by those who refuse to believe that liquid manure possesses such wonderful powers as their more scientific friends have proved it to possess. Now I have seen several experiments tried with liquid manure, and, although I cannot furnish you with any minute particulars, I can safely say that every experiment has proved more or less its value and importance. I have seen it used to asparagus, celery, gooseberries, currants, and the whole of the cabbage tribe, with astonishing success; and, in one instance, where a portion of a meadow was measured out and watered with the drainings from a cowshed, the piece of ground so manured showed it not only in the five or six cuttings obtained that season, but also in the hay crop of the succeeding year, the grass being of a darker colour, and standing much thicker on the ground. If those gentlemen who have no belief in sixty-five tons of grass to the acre will just pay a visit to any nursery where florist flowers are grown, they will there see that the liquid manure pot is considered quite indispensable, and they will need to keep their eyes open lest they should fall into one of the numerous tanks for the manufacture of that useful article.—A Gardener.

THE WATER-WEED "ANACHARIS ALBINASTRUM." It has at various times been stated that this plant first appeared in the loch of Dunro Castle, Berwickshire, and was detected by Dr. Johnston, of Berwick, in 1812. It has now entirely disappeared. The progress of its growth was not watched particularly at the time, but in 1847 the loch was so completely filled with this plant that it became impossible to pull a boat through the water without the greatest exertion. At this time there were a few swans upon the loch. Indeed, these birds were accused of having first introduced it. The swans lived entirely upon this plant, and began to increase in the most unusually rapid manner. In 1848 one pair of birds raised a brood of seven young. Three pair raised broods of five each, besides several pairs which reared respectively three and two young. By the year 1851 the lake was entirely, or, at least, nearly so, cleared of every appearance of anacharis albinastrium, and then the swans began to die. Mr. Hay had them fed with corn and vegetables, but nothing seemed to save them; they gradually began to pine, and are now reduced to the original number of a few pairs. But for the last three years there has not been a single leaf of the weed seen in the loch, so completely have the swans eradicated it from the water. They follow the small burns down to the Whitadder in search of it, and appear to be its most relentless persecutors.—Berwick Ward.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

Some of the branches of an aruncaria imbricata have turned yellow, and appear to be dying. It is planted on a mound, so that its roots are not wet. Can any reader favour me with instructions what to do to save it?—READER.

I am pestered with mice that eat my crocus roots as fast as they are planted. Can any person inform me of a remedy?—A WORCESTERSHIRE GENTLEMAN.

MR. SAMUEL BROOKS, banker, of Manchester, has offered to place at the disposal of the corporation of that city the sum of £1,000, to be expended in preliminary inquiries, premiums for plans, and experiments as to the value of the night soil for agricultural purposes.

THE FARM.

The Farm is an essential part of the country gentleman's occupations, therefore a proper part of "the country gentleman's newspaper." We introduce it into the new plan of THE FIELD, believing that it will be found an attractive as well as a useful feature of it. But it is necessary to explain at the beginning what it is that we contemplate.

We purpose then to limit this department of THE FIELD to "the Home Farm"—just so much of farming as the gentleman, or the man having other pursuits, engages in, more for amusement than for profit. The Professional Farmers have journals of their own to supply their wants. The Amateur Farmer has none. This defect THE FIELD will endeavour to supply. It will collect, for the information of its readers, instructions and intelligence relating to the management of a homestead—the keeping of the cow, the horse, the sheep, the pig, the poultry; draining of land, manuring and cultivation of crops; treating these topics in familiar, unscientific language, and with an endeavour to be as practical as possible. Here, as with other departments of THE FIELD, a column will be opened for Notes and Queries, wherein any reader may ask of other readers the assistance of their experience, on any topic on which he requires information; and we invite communications from all quarters on every subject comprised within the range of the Home Farm.

Here, again, we must ask the reader's patience and forbearance, while we mature the scheme of which we have given only an outline. It must be a work of time, but we hope every week will advance us in it. Certainly it will, if it should meet with the approbation of the reader, and if he will aid it by communicating whatever knowledge he has, which may be interesting to other readers.

TILLAGE.

DOVER AND DEAL AGRICULTURAL ASSOCIATION.

On Tuesday week the annual meeting of the Dover and Deal Association for the Encouragement of Ploughing and Agricultural Labourers took place. The ploughing match took place in a field belonging to Mr. G. H. Loud, jun., at St. Margaret's Parsonage.

The members and friends of the association afterwards dined together at the Swingate Inn, West Cliffe. The chair was taken by George Loud, Esq., and the vice-chair by Mr. Gilbee Eastes.

After the usual loyal toasts, Mr. Alderman Marsh gave "Success to the Dover and Deal Agricultural Association." He stated he believed it was the first established in that neighbourhood, and had been fraught with great benefit both to master and labourer.

Mr. Rutledge gave, in a speech of great ability, "Success to British agriculture and the application of science to agricultural pursuits," which was received with great applause.

Mr. S. Court gave "The health of Mr. Gilbee Eastes, the Vice-chairman and Secretary to the Association," who returned thanks in appropriate terms, expressing a desire, after fifteen years' servitude as their secretary, that some younger member should relieve him. He had ever anxiously laboured for the improvement of the society; and he believed his efforts had not been fruitless. He adverted to the ploughing match which had taken place some time since to test the respective merits of the Bedford and Kent ploughs. He then read a list of the prizes as follows:—

The Champion Prize was awarded to W. Powl, Ploughman to Messrs. G. and W. Eastes, Bere farm.

Ploughmen.—1st Class, with 4 horses.—1st prize, to R. Young, in the employ of G. and W. Eastes, Bere farm. 2nd, to G. Chapman, in the employ of Mr. G. Loud, jun., St. Margaret's. 3rd, to J. Wood, in the employ of Mr. B. Taylor, Langdon Court. 4th, to H. Hopper, in the employ of Mr. J. Taylor, Frith farm.

2nd Class with 3 horses.—1st prize to T. Ainos, in the employ of Mr. W. Piller, St. Margaret's. 2nd, to Stephen Fay, in the employ of Messrs. H. and J. Elwin, Wainston. 3rd, to W. Kittams, in the employ of Mr. J. Jeken, Marten. 4th, to W. Hopper, in the employ of Mr. B. Taylor, Langdon Court.

Shepherds.—Prize to A. Manser, shepherd to R. Marsh, Sandwich, for rearing 293 lambs from 241 ewes. To E. Newing, shepherd to Mr. S. Prescott, West Cliffe, for rearing 100 lambs from 90 ewes. To J. Gower, shepherd to Mr. G. Potter, for rearing 137 lambs, and lost none. To C. Soles, shepherd to Mr. James Jeken, Marten, for rearing 99 lambs, and lost none.

Labourers.—Prizes to T. Paramor, having worked 50 years on Winkland farm. To E. Bastes, having worked 41 years on Guston Court farm. To S. Fay, yearly servant to the late Mr. J. Elwin and successor, from 1835. To W. Elgar, 10 years with Mr. Mark Sandford.

Female Servants.—Prizes to Harriot Ann Foreman, from 5th July, 1851, with Mr. J. Jeken. To Eliza Friend, 18 months with Mr. J. Taylor, Sutton Court.

"The health of the Treasurer" was then given. Mr. John Taylor responded. He had about £10 in hand, £30 of which would be required for the expenses of the day. He considered the society highly prosperous.

ROMNEY MARSH AGRICULTURAL ASSOCIATION.

The annual ploughing match of this association took place on Monday, in a field belonging to Mr. Stephen Burgess, at West Brook, near Lydd, and was attended by a numerous party of agriculturists from the neighbourhood. The judges of ploughing were—Messrs. Thomas Walker, Francis Finn, and Thomas Daddon; of stacking, thatching, and drilling—Messrs. Henry Pahnor, Frederick Green, and Richard Sanky.

After the premiums were awarded, the parties adjourned to the George Inn, where an excellent dinner was served by Mr. James Bass. Mr. Stephen Burgess presided. After the cloth was removed, the customary loyal and convivial toasts were drunk; also "the health of Mr. Albert Cook, and success to the Romney Marsh harriers." The following is a list of the awards:—

Ploughmen.—1st, prize to W. Bourn, ploughman to T. Cobb, Esq.; R. Edwards, driver. 2nd, to Peter Tribe, ploughman to T. Cobb, Esq.; E. Ramsay, driver. 3rd, to W. Carpenter, ploughman, to D. Denne, Esq.; G. Hatch, driver. The prize for bullock ploughs, awarded to G. Balcomb, employed by W. D. Walker, Esq.; J. Page, driver.

Drilling.—1st, prize to H. Elac, employed by W. D. Walker, Esq.; 2nd, to H. Divers, employed by Mr. T. Hills. 3rd, to J. Tomsett, employed by A. Stokes, Esq.

Stacking.—1st, prize to H. Divers, employed by Mr. T. Hills. 2nd, to R. Glazier, employed by Mr. T. Blake.

Thatching.—Prize to W. Worrell, servant to Mr. T. Hills. Labourers.—Premium to G. Spicer, who has worked 38 years on Mr. R. Sankey's farm, Burmarsh. To Walter Orenden, employed by Mr. Matthew Butler, of Gammon's Farm, for bringing up the largest family, without relief.

The prize to the married waggoner, who has lived the greatest number of years on the same farm or in the same family, was awarded to J. Peckham, employed by Mr. M. Butler of Gammon's farm. The prize for the single waggoner, ditto, to J. Avery, employed by O. Coates, Esq., Now Romney.

Shepherds.—1st prize to J. Orenden, shepherd to Mr. M. Butler, having reared 330 lambs from 230 ewes. 2nd, to W. Balkham, shepherd to Messrs. T. T. Blake and J. Holmes.

DISCOVERY OF AMMONIA.—The Progreso of Guayaquil states that in the search for guano at the Gallapagos Islands an abundant deposit of ammonia has been discovered, which is likely to prove a valuable fertiliser. If this be true, it is worth while examining into more carefully. The high price of guano would render any substitute very valuable to the agriculturist.

USEFUL APPLICATION OF SEWAGE.—At a meeting of the Manchester Town Council, a day or two ago, a lecture was read from Mr. Samuel Brooks, in which that gentleman made the handsome offer of placing £1,000 at the disposal of the council, to be expended in preliminary inquiries, and premiums for plans and experiments, as to the value of the night-soil of the town. Mr. Brooks estimated the annual value of the sewage of the town of Manchester at £100,000 a year, and his letter referred to the importance not only of properly disposing of it for agricultural purposes, but of rendering it subservient to other useful objects. The thanks of the council were unanimously voted to Mr. Brooks for his offer.

AGRICULTURAL EXPORTS AND IMPORTS.—The accounts of Trade and Navigation recently issued show a decline of £751,952 in the declared value of the exports for the month ending October 10, 1854 (£8,074,048), as compared with the same month of 1853 (£8,829,000). The greatest decrease is shown in the items of haberdashery, hardwares, gloves, machinery, bar iron, tin plates, silks, and woollens. The imports exhibit the noticeable feature of a greatly increased arrival of provisions, live and dead, and a great falling-off in the cereals:—

	1853.	1854.
Oxen and Bulls..... (number).	8,750	11,440
Sheep	28,570	40,815
Pigs	2,076	3,723
Bacon	21,873	41,635
Beef, salted	3,098	7,703
Pork, salted	2,956	20,809
Lard	4,410	15,061
Wheat	463,768	91,247
Barley	56,472	38,385
Oats	158,031	61,031
Indian Corn	125,412	44,275
Flour	303,510	90,187

There is a considerable falling-off in the importation of the raw material of our textile manufactures. For the month the relative quantities stand as follows:—

	1853.	1854.	Decrease.
Flax, undressed	253,926	89,173	173,753
Flax Tow	64,819	40,424	24,416
Hemp, undressed	278,032	17,394	260,638
Sheep and Lambs' Wool lb.	14,934,871	7,960,012	6,968,859

MANGOLD WURZEL.—The practical lecturer will doubtless be acceptable to our readers:—"Considering as I do, that anything which tends to throw a light on the nature of the crops grown by farmers will be of interest to that class, I beg to give a short account of some experiments made with a view of determining the propriety of stripping off the leaves of mangold wurzel during the progress of the growth of the plant. When this root was first introduced, it was said to be doubly valuable, as its leaves could be stripped off when the plant had attained some size, and given as green food to cattle, and a good weight of roots obtained also. This has been practised in some parts of England, and is at present done on the continent. Feeling assured that if the leaves were stripped off it must be to the detriment of the crop of roots, the following experiments were made in the Botanical Garden of the Royal Agricultural College, at Cirencester. Two rows of each of the following sorts, viz.: red globe, yellow globe, long red, long yellow, and long white were sown, without manure, on a soil very unfavourable for their growth, being a thin bed of cold clay land on a brashy subsoil; one row was stripped once of its leaves and the other left untouched. The following were the results:—

	Not stripped.	Stripped.	Loss.
Red Globe	31lbs.	21lbs.	10lbs.
Yellow Globe	45	18	27
Long Red	49	18	31
Long Yellow	35	13	22
Long White	32	19	13

By this statement we see that the largest loss on stripping off was borne by the Long Red and Yellow Globe: the two sorts mostly grown by the farmers. In the Long Red we have a loss of no less than 31lbs., and on the Yellow Globe 26lbs. The others also show the impropriety of stripping, although in a less degree, and I think these experiments will suffice to show the impropriety of stripping the leaves. I will now shortly give the reason. To those unacquainted with the physiology of plants, I must say that leaves fulfil most important functions; they are just as much the organs for promoting the growth of the plant as the roots, and this applies equally to all plants. It is by means of the leaves that the carbonic in the air, which is the aerial food of plants, is decomposed, the carbon being retained to form the structure of the plant, whilst the oxygen is again given off to be breathed by animals who return it to the air as carbonic acid. Thus this mutual interchange takes place: plants breathing carbonic acid and giving off oxygen, whilst animals breathe the oxygen and give off carbonic acid. Now it must be very evident to all that, if the leaves are taken away, the plant has only its roots to depend upon for nourishment, and these are inadequate by themselves to supply the wants of the plant; and also when the leaves are off the plant is not benefitted by the refreshing dew. I also think that, as the leaves are the means by which the plant gets rid of the superfluous water in its organisation, by the process of exhalation, the per centage of water in those roots which were stripped of leaves, will be greater than in the others: thus again lessening the real value, and making the difference more evident. I propose making analyses of the roots, both stripped and not, in order to determine the per centage of water, and I shall be happy to lay the results before the readers of the Exeter Gazette.—W. ROYSTON WHITEWAT, Jun.

From a single grain of black oats, grown this year in the garden of Mr. John Gibb, in Frieckheim, no less than twenty-one heads were produced, attached to twelve of which, and perfectly ripe, were nineteen hundred and twenty pickles, giving an average of one hundred and sixty to each. Independent of the twelve mentioned, there were found proceeding from the same grain of seed, nine additional heads, partially ripe, bearing one thousand and thirty-five pickles, giving an average of 115 to each pickle. Still more extraordinary, three-fourths of the heads bore double seeds. So that in reality the single seed may be said, with perfect truth, to have produced upwards of 5,000 grains, a circumstance which, we are inclined to think, has no parallel in the history of agriculture. This seed, we are told, was dropped in the garden ground accidentally. The height of the stalks varied from four to five feet each.—Arbroath Guide.

CATTLE.

CROSS-BRED SHEEP.—A friend of mine purchased twelve months back a number of Welsh mountain ewes, the average price being about 13s. each. They were immediately put to a strong Southdown ram, and produced in due season some very strong and fine lambs. These being kept well, were soon fit for market, and when slaughtered weighed from 7 to 10lbs. a quarter, and sold at an average price of 20s. each. Some of the ewes have been killed off this autumn, and realised about the same amount. This I think is not a bad speculation, and one which may be copied with advantage, especially by those who have hilly, poor land to manage. To see the lambs, especially the single ones after they were six weeks or two months old, was quite laughable, for some of them were larger than the dam, and, as is too frequently the case with overgrown children of the genus homo, looked like sucking the parent in good earnest. That the breed of small sheep should be much improved in size by crossing with larger rams is quite in the nature of things, for we see the same effect from similar causes throughout the animal kingdom. An increase of size is certain, and I should imagine a cross of the Southdown and Welsh mountain breeds could not be bad in quality—at least of the lamb I can speak from a "knife and fork" experiment, and it was excellent; and perhaps in the spring of next year I may be able to give a similar opinion upon the mutton.—W. P. Ayres, South Wales.

THE DAIRY.

The New England Farmer says, that at the Farmers' Club in Boston, there was exhibited lately an artificial cow, constructed for the purpose of weaning the calf!—a sham bundle, with sham teats, yielding milk and water! But what's to be done in the matter of weaning the cow herself, who mourns the loss of her darling as if she was gifted with reason? The invention, it is almost superfluous to add, came from Connecticut.

THE STABLE.

CARROTS FOR HORSES.—The stable-keepers are beginning to find that these vegetables form a cheap and nutritious food to mix with grain for their horses. It is better to give a working horse a peck of carrots and four quarts of oats or corn-meal a day, than to give him six quarts of meal.

THE POULTRY YARD.

DERBY POULTRY SHOW.—Those who remember the gay appearance which Derby presented on the occasion of the poultry show of 1853, will be glad to learn that the same fete which attracted so many visitors is about to be repeated this year with still brighter prospects of success. The entries to the exhibition are not only more numerous, but of a higher character. The winners of last year must look well to their laurels. The Cottage Gardener has intimated that success at Derby will point strongly to the prize at Birmingham, which prize, as our readers are aware, is regarded as the "blue ribbon" of the poultry world. The journals devoted to poultry matters have awarded the very highest praise to the Dorkings of Derbyshire, and to this class of birds great attention is now directed. Again, amateurs from all parts of the kingdom look to the Midland Counties for first-rate game fowls, and in these two fine classes of poultry great and close competition may be anticipated. Captain Moraby, of Knowsley, who has for successive seasons borne off the highest prizes at Birmingham, has sold his birds, and is prevented, by the conditions of sale, from exhibiting for some time to come; but our readers will be glad to learn that in this county his stock of Dorkings is represented, and that in the Spanish classes he has found a rival in the magnificent birds belonging to Mr. Harrison, of Snelston-hall. The entries for the forthcoming show in the Dorking class, are no less than sixty-eight pens as contrasted with forty-three pens for last year, and in the game class we have fifty-eight entries, as compared with forty of last year, and they embrace birds belonging to some of the most distinguished breeders in the kingdom. It is quite a mistake to suppose that the interest in these exhibitions has passed away. Good fowls still fetch very high prices; and such is the improvement that has been effected by competition, that birds which, in 1850, obtained prizes, would not at the present day succeed in obtaining even a commendation. The Rev. Saul Dixon, in his very learned and very charming book on "Domestic Poultry," published in 1850, stated that a fowl of any breed, weighing seven pound and a half, "must be an unusually fine bird." Now, without referring to the gigantic Malay fowl, or to the heavy Cochins, it is no uncommon thing to meet with Dorking fowls of a year old, that will weigh eight pounds; and we know of several that far exceed this amount. The prizes offered at our exhibition this year are liberal and well-arranged. We also perceive that silver medals for first prizes may be had in lieu of money; these will be more acceptable than money to many competitors, and especially to the ladies. We hope to see the brilliant prize sparkling in the possession of some beautiful belle of this county; for, although we welcome strangers to a trial of strength, and will heartily yield to them the palm of victory, if merited, yet we confess to a yearning pride in behalf of this our noble county, and should rejoice to see the awards honourably won by Derbyshire competitors, even as we glow with triumphant feelings on reading the daring exploits of the Derbyshire regiment on the heights of Alma, or before the gory trenches of Sebastopol. The exhibition will come off in the County Hall, on Thursday, November 30th, and the Friday following; and all who feel an interest (and who does not?) in improvement, all who rejoice to see the seal of successful exertion, who love beauty of form and richness of colour, and can derive pleasure from the manifestation of man's "dominion" and his power, in directing and modifying the organisation of the "fowls of the air," may expect to realise a great treat upon the occasion.

SALISBURY POULTRY SHOW.—The Salisbury and South-western Counties' Fourth Annual Exhibition of Domestic Poultry was held in the Council-chamber, in that city, on Tuesday and Wednesday last, and was exceedingly well attended, nearly £60 being taken in shillings at the door on the first day. The second day's exhibition was almost as successful, the weather proving fine, thus enabling the country visitors to flock in in considerable numbers. The stock exhibited was of a first-class but varied description, and a large number of pens were eagerly purchased. The Dorkings were unusually fine, and came in for a full share of attraction. Next to these the game and fancy sorts seemed to rivet attention, more particularly the pouter, of which there were six or seven pens. The Cochins were quite neglected. A pen of hybrids—a cross between a common bantam and a pheasant—reared by Edward Twynam, Esq. of Allington, near Bishopstoke, were much noticed for their singularity. Messrs. Hinman, Higgs, and Andrews, acted as judges, and gave great satisfaction.

GREAT POULTRY SHOW.—The Third Annual Exhibition of Domestic Poultry, confined to the three counties of Kent, Surrey, and Sussex, was opened on Tuesday in the riding-school of the Pavilion, around the interior of which were placed numerous pens containing some of the finest specimens of poultry that were ever seen—the Coochin-china, the Dorking, and the Spanish breeds, being most conspicuous. The utility of these shows, like those of fat and lean stock exhibitions generally, may be described briefly to consist in this, that they afford the means of judging of the merits of the different breeds; and such result we are told is already visible, and chiefly at the cottages in the neighbourhood where the former shows were held, namely, Reigate and Dorking. Dorking fowls are proverbial for their excellent quality. There are 73 pens of Dorking fowls, 60 pens of Coochin-china, 20 of Spanish, 14 of game, 9 of Polands, 16 of bantams, and 11 of other breeds; 16 pens of ducks, 32 of pigeons, 5 of turkeys, and three of geese; so that our readers may judge of the value and extent of the exhibition, each pen containing three fowls.

TO MAKE HENS LAY PERPETUALLY.—Keep no roosters; give the hens fresh meat, chopped up like sausage-meat, once a day—a very small portion, say half an ounce a day, to each hen—in winter, or from the time insects disappear in the fall till they appear again in the spring. Never allow any eggs to remain in the nest for what are called nest-eggs. When the roosters do not run with the hens, and no nest-eggs are left in the nest, the hens will not cease laying after the production of twelve or fifteen eggs, as they always do when roosters and nest-eggs are allowed, but continue laying perpetually. If the above plan were generally adopted, eggs would be as plentiful in winter as in summer. One reason why hens do not lay in winter as freely as in summer, is the want of animal food, which they get in summer in abundance in the form of insects.

THE POULTRY MARKETS OF LONDON are Newgate and Leadenhall, the latter being the largest in the world, and about two-thirds of the whole number of fowls sold in London are vendred there.

AROUND AYLESBURY the annual return for ducks is £10,000. One man has had 1,000 to 2,000 ducks, and paid £50 at a time for barley meal.

EGGS.—The largest supplies to the English markets are obtained from Ireland, from which country the annual exports of eggs, according to official returns, amounted in 1835, to seventy-two millions; but now it is estimated that we yearly receive one hundred and fifty millions. Of this number London and Liverpool respectively consume twenty-five millions each.

NEW YORK STATE POULTRY SOCIETY.—This Society will hold its next annual poultry fair in Utica, on the 28th, 29th, and 30th of November inst. The premiums are liberal and extensive. No breed can be shown that will fail to come under some classification for which premiums will be awarded.

GOLD AND SILVER SPANGLED POLANDS.

To the Editor of THE FIELD.

Sir,—In the reports on (I think) the Cambridge Exhibition, referring to the Gold and Silver Spangled Poland, it is stated "that lacing should be carefully avoided." Now, if this is allowed to pass unnoted, it will be the means of detracting much from their beauty. I have paid a good deal of attention to this class of fowl, have been where they are extensively bred, and had opportunities beyond most people of learning their properties. I have no hesitation in saying that they should be "laced," most especially they should be so; in fact, I believe they are the only pure and original "laced" breed of fowls that we possess. Many persons may not be aware that the "laced" bantam—the beautiful edging of the feather—was obtained, in the first instance, from the Spangled Poland; an additional proof of what I assert. If the statement I complain of be the opinion of the judges, I hope they will reconsider and revise it; and, before laying down arbitrary rules for this marking or that marking, they should look a little beyond their own ideas of beauty, and learn instead the natural and peculiar characteristics of the class; which, had they done so in this instance, they would have come to a different conclusion.

The Pheasantry, I am Sir, yours &c.,
Nov. 24, 1854. S. C. BAKER.

NEW AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS.

A NEW THRASHING MACHINE is now at work in this neighbourhood, which promises to be of great benefit to farmers. The makers are Messrs. Cambridge and Co., of Bristol, and this machine, the third that was made, has been brought in this county by Mr. Henry Seaman, of Gersten, near Totnes. It is worked by a steam engine of six-horse power, and thrashes from 40 to 60 bushels of wheat per hour. There is a straw bolting machine attached to it, and also a barley aweller. The grain is delivered into the sack by means of cups, and afterwards requires only one winnowing to fit it for the market. The engine consumes about four hundred of coal per day, and the charge, including one man for working the engine and another for feeding the machine, is four shillings per hour.—Exeter Flying Post.

NEW BOOKS ON FARMING.

The Scottish Agricultural Almanac and Year Book of Progress for 1854. By JOHN LOCKHART MORTON, Civil and Agricultural Engineer, Edinburgh.—This is something more than a mere almanac; it is a record of the past, and a guide for the future. The Calendar of the Month is followed by a page ruled for memoranda of farm sales and engagements, to which is appended a mass of practical instructions for farming, and useful agricultural intelligence. Tables of divers kinds required for ready reference by persons engaged in agricultural pursuits occupy a large portion of an annual which will be as welcome in England as in Scotland.

PARISH MATTERS.

IMPORTANT TO POOR-LAW UNION AUTHORITIES.—We recommend to all whom it may concern the following paragraph, which we take from the Chelmsford Chronicle's report of the local County Court proceedings:—"Suing paupers for maintenance in the Union-house:—The Guardians of the Witham Union v. J. Sigers.—This was an action by order of the guardians, to recover £2. 16s. 6d. from the defendant, a labourer, for the maintenance of himself and family in the Union-house, having been sent there from the parish of Terling. The defendant did not appear, but the relieving-officer stated that he earned a great deal of money at draining, and spent it as quickly; he had seven children, but three of them were earning money. The Court made an order for 11s. a month.—In another case, the Guardians of Witham Union v. J. B. Edwards, for £1. 12s. 6d., also for maintenance of defendant, his wife, and two children, in the house; it appeared he was a bricklayer, and an order was made for monthly payments.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SMALL FARMS.—If you want a continuous supply of green food throughout the year, then, after having put half an acre in lucerne, of your remaining five acres let one-sixth be in vetches, sown in May; one-sixth in rape, sown in May; one-fourth in turnips, sown in June; one-sixth in Swedes, sown in June; one-fourth in mangold wurzel, transplanted in June after; one-fourth rye, sown in September; one-fourth in vetches, sown in September, before the turnips; one-sixth Italian rye-grass, sown in September, before Swedes; besides this, you will have half an acre, which may be in early cabbage, transplanted in September, and late cabbage to follow.

AGRICULTURAL GAZETTE.
BATH AND WEST OF ENGLAND AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.—The committee appointed to carry out the preliminary arrangements of the forthcoming year are indefatigable in their exertions to procure the necessary funds. Upwards of £400 have already been received; and on Wednesday last, Lord Palmerston, the hon. M.P. for the borough, forwarded them his subscription of £40. This is his lordship's third liberal contribution to the good of the town within a very short period.

THE AGRICULTURAL STATISTICS OF THE WEST RIDING.—No better proof could be afforded that the farmers' minds are becoming awake to the value of correct agricultural statistics, than the fact that no refusals of occupiers of land in the West Riding to fill up the schedules forwarded to them have been reported to the poor-law inspector. There is, we fear, every reason to believe that the whole of the returns will be made up and placed in Mr. Farnall's hands by the 30th inst.—Leeds Mercury.

ENGLISH OAK, when it is used for church or other external doors, should be felled in winter, when the sap is concentrated. When the sap is flowing through the tree, it injures the timber, and leaves a vacuum in the pores, which, being exposed to the atmosphere, imbibes the wet, and mixes with the acid and stringy quality of the sap, causing the discolouration of the wood.—The Builder.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

POULTRY.—I have a quantity of Coochin-china fowls who peck off the feathers from one another, and swallow them greedily. They are almost bare. What is the cause of this, and how can I prevent it?—A LADY.

THE MARKETS.

SMITHFIELD.

MONDAY.—We had a much shorter supply of beasts; the weather being favourable, the trade consequently was active, and prices were better. The number of sheep was also smaller, but trade was not so brisk in this department; however, prices had rather an upward tendency. Good calves were still scarce and rather dearer. From Germany and Holland there were 1,279 beasts, 1,940 sheep, and 85 calves. Scotland, 150 beasts; 2,000 from the Northern and Midland Counties, and 150 from Ireland.

Per stone of 14 lbs.	s. d.	s. d.	Per stone of 14 lbs.	s. d.	s. d.
Best Scotch, Herefords	5	0-5	4	0-0	0
Best Short Horns	4	8-5	0	0-0	0
Second quality beasts	3	6-4	4	8-4	10
Calves	4	4-5	4	0-0	0
Pigs	3	8-5	0	0-0	0
Best Dns. & Half-Breds	3	0-3	2	0-0	0

Beasts at market, 4,388; sheep and lambs, 24,730; calves, 121; pigs, 310.

FRIDAY.—The number of beasts has rather increased, and trade is scarcely as active as on Monday; but we cannot quote lower for the choicest qualities. The supply of sheep is also larger. Prices are about the same as on Monday, with a slow trade. Good calves are by no means plentiful, and there is very little reduction in price.

COUNTRY CATTLE.

DERBY SMITHFIELD, Tuesday.—There was a short supply of fat beasts to-day, high prices were asked, and a clearance was effected. The number of sheep was less than it has been for some time, and better sold. Fat calves also a less supply. Pigs were very plentiful, both English and Irish, and were sold at a reduction in price of about 6d. per score. Beef made 6d. to 6½d.; mutton, 6½d. to 7d.; veal, 7d. per lb.; pigs, 3s. 6d. to 10d. per score; rough fat, 6s. 6d. per stone, commencing 23rd of October; hides, young, 8s. and above, 3½d. per lb.; ditto, young, under 8s. 3½d.; old cows, all weights, 3d.; cut hides, 2½d.; calf skins, 10lb. 1s. and under, 4d.; above 10 and under 16, 4½d.; above 16, 3½d.; all cut calf skins, 3d. less.

DUBLIN SMITHFIELD CATTLE MARKET.

TUESDAY, November 23.—There was a large supply of both beef and mutton at market to-day; the demand was, however, dull. Mutton may be noted a shade lower, and hard to sell. Beef rated from 18s. to 60s. per cwt.; mutton, 5d. to 6½d. per lb.; veal, 7½d. to 8d. per lb. Pigs: a small market, and little doing. Stores sold from 46s. to 48s.

MARK LANE.

MONDAY.—The supplies of foreign wheat and flour continue short; but the tone of the country markets coming lower towards the close of the last week, trade in Mark-lane this morning was dull for white wheat at last Monday's currency, and 1s. to 2s. per quarter lower for red. Flour was unchanged in value. Barley was more plentiful than of late, and prices gave way 1s. to 2s. per quarter. Oats also were easier to purchase, and 6d. to 1s. cheaper. Beans and peas maintained firmer prices with a steady demand.

ARRIVALS TO LONDON FROM NOV. 13 TO NOV. 13.

Quarters.	English.	Scotch.	Irish.	Foreign.
Wheat	3555	2194
Barley	4390	500	130
Oats	85	1672	33912	6865
Malt	4028	20	121

Flour, 2,018 sacks, and 300 barrels.

FRIDAY.—There was not much wheat fresh up for this morning's market; the demand was trifling in the extreme, nevertheless holders were firm, and buyers had to pay former prices. Flour was unchanged in value. Transactions in barley were not so numerous as on Wednesday; its value, however, was maintained. Old oats scarce, and fully as dear; new, with a good foreign supply, gave way 6d. per quarter. Beans and peas firm.

COUNTRY GRAIN.

FRIDAY, Tuesday.—The supply of wheat is not large; there is a slight check, both on demand and the upward movement; but whilst choice samples command about the same rates as before quoted, anything below the best condition and best quality we call 1s. to 2s. per quarter cheaper. Barley is fair supply. Buyers did not appear quite so eager as last week; but a free sale existed at 1s. to 2s. per quarter statement on prices of last market day. We saw no beans or peas. We quote prices to the growers: Wheat, red, 71s. to 78s.; ditto, white, 76s. to 82s. per quarter; barley, malting, 33s. to 38s.; ditto, grinding, 33s. to 31s. per quarter; beans, 48s. to 50s. per quarter; peas, 16s. to 47s. per quarter. Averages for the week ending November 18: Wheat, 1,957 quarters, at 73s. 11d.; barley, 2,456 quarters, at 31s. 6d.; beans, 68 quarters, at 55s. 9d.; peas, 32 quarters, at 41s. 8d.

SCOTLAND, Saturday.—There was a good supply of grain offered for sale this day, and all was disposed of previous to closing the market. Barley begins to be inquired after; but there was not much offering. Flour meets with a dull sale. Quotations: Wheat, white, 76s. to 80s.; very fine ditto, 84s.; ditto, red, 76s. to 78s. per quarter; barley, 31s. to 36s. per quarter; peas, 31s. per quarter; flour, white, 55s.

BOROUGH HOP MARKET.

MONDAY.—A good demand for hops of all sorts at improving prices.

THURSDAY.—There has been a fair trade doing in all choice hops, and the late advance is fully maintained. Good new Belgians also command more money.

HAY AND STRAW.

SMITHFIELD, Monday.—Meadow hay, £2 12s. to £1 15s.; clover ditto, £4 to £5 15s.; straw, £1 5s. to £1 10s. per load. Trade heavy. WHITECHURCH, Monday.—Meadow hay, £2 15s. to £1 15s.; clover ditto, £4 to £5; straw, £1 5s. to £1 10s. per load. Trade steady. PORTLAND, Monday.—Meadow hay, £2 15s. to £1 17s.; clover ditto, £1 to £5 15s.; straw, £1 6s. to £1 12s. per load. Market rather dull.

SALISBURY AND WESTERN COUNTIES' CATTLESHOW.

The Annual Exhibition of Fat and Breeding Stock in connection with this society took place on Monday and Tuesday, within the temporary erection used for the cheese market, and whether as regards the number of animals entered to complete the previous prizes, or the arrangements made for their accommodation, a great improvement was manifest. Occupying, as it does, an important position in one of the most influential agricultural districts in the kingdom, there is no reason why Salisbury should not boast of an association for improving the breed of all kinds of stock, second to none of the societies established for a similar purpose either in far or neighbouring counties. By the adoption of judicious and well-timed regulations—by the exercise of unceasing activity and unremitting diligence on the part of those entrusted with the management—and by an equal and impartial distribution of its patronage, the society before us may be brought to occupy this position, and to command the undivided support of the majority of the influential agriculturists by whom we are surrounded; but without these highly essential requisites an unabated degree of success cannot be expected. Although the exhibition of fat stock on Monday was not extensive in point of numbers, the general quality of the animals was superior. The most deserving bore away the prizes, but there were many others shown eminently calculated to reflect credit upon the grazier, as well as to delight the eye of the butcher. A more spirited competition could have been desired in several of the classes, but, taken as a whole, the exhibition may be said to have been satisfactory. In stock sheep there was a more spirited competition, and the judges experienced some little difficulty in making their award. For the names of the successful competitors the reader is referred to the subjoined list of prizes. There were some good specimens of swinish obesity exhibited by Mr. H. Smith, and the pigs belonging to the labourers attracted a considerable share of attention. The show was only thinly attended on Monday, in consequence of the late hour at which the judges completed their award. Messrs. Duckworth and Oliver, two of the gentlemen who had consented to act as umpires, did not arrive, in consequence, it is supposed, of their having mistaken the day. Mr. Wyatt, the other umpire, was in attendance, and during the afternoon, at the solicitation of the committee, Messrs. Atkins and Burgh kindly consented to supply the places of the gentlemen who were absent, in deciding on the claims of the stock. They completed their task about four o'clock, and their decisions appeared to afford general satisfaction. The annual dinner of the society took place on Tuesday evening, at the White Hart Hotel, under the presidency of the most noble the Marquis of Bath. The following is the LIST OF PRIZES.

Class A.—For the best Fat Devon Ox or Steer, a prize of £10, to Mr. Gearing, Bishopstoke.
Second ditto, a prize of £5, to Mr. J. King, Nursling.
Class B.—For the best Fat Hereford Ox or Steer, a prize of £10. There was no competition in this class, but the Committee recommended the award of a prize of £5, to Mr. Ford, Rushton.
Class C.—For the best Fat Short-horn Ox or Steer, a prize of £10, to Mr. J. Fitcher, jun., Fovant.
Second ditto, a prize of £5, to Mr. J. Stratton, Manningford Bruce.
Class D.—For the best Fat Cow, a prize of £5, to Mr. Frampton, Blandford.
Second ditto, a prize of £2, to Stephen Mills, Esq., Elston.
Class E.—For the best Fat Heifer, having a sucking tooth, a prize of £5, to Mr. P. King.
Second ditto, a prize of £2, to Mr. James Fitcher, jun., Fovant.
Class F.—For the best Pen of five Fat Southdown two-teeth Wethers, a prize of £5.—No competition.
Class G.—For the best Pen of five Fat Southdown Ewes, a prize of £5. No competition.—Highly commended, Mr. J. Moore, Littlecot.
Class H.—For the best Pen of five Fat Hampshire two-teeth Wethers, a prize of £5, to Mr. J. Fitcher, jun., Fovant.—There were five competitors.
Class I.—For the best Pen of five Fat Hampshire Ewes, a prize of £5, to Mr. H. Pain, Houghton.
Class J.—Fat Pigs.
For the best Pen of three Fat Pigs, bred and fed by the Exhibitor (a member), and under twenty-six weeks' old, a prize of £3. No competition.—Commended, Mr. Smith, Baverstock.
Class K.—For the best Pen of three Fat Pigs, fed by the Exhibitor, and above twenty-six weeks' old, a prize of £3. No competition.—Commended, Mr. Smith, Baverstock.
Labourers' Prizes.
For the best Fat Pig, a prize of £3, to Bryant North, a shepherd in the employ of Mr. J. Fitcher, jun., Fovant.

THE COUNTRY HOUSE.

Second ditto, a prize of £2, to Wm. Blake, shepherd to Mr. Ford, Wishford.

Third ditto, a prize of £1, to Charles Plowden, shepherd to Mr. E. Waters, Stratford-sub-Castle.

LEAN AND BREEDING STOCK.

Class 1.—A Premium given by the Right Hon. Sidney Herbert, M.P., to the owner (a member) who shall produce the best Bull, of any Pure Breed, and which must have been in his possession above nine months, a piece of Plate, value £5, to Mr. Warren, Shillington, Bedford.

Class 2.—A Premium given by the Right Hon. Sidney Herbert, M.P., to the owner (a member) who shall produce the best Dairy Cow, to have been milked during the summer and now in calf, and has been in his possession nine months, a piece of Plate, value £5, to Mr. E. Waters, Stratford-sub-Castle.

Class 3.—A Premium given by Lord Folkestone, to the owner (a member) who shall produce the best Bull, Cow, and Offspring, all from the same dairy, a piece of Plate, value £5, to Stephen Mills, Esq., Elston.

Class 4.—A Premium given by John Grove, Esq., for the best pair of Stock Heifers in Calf, bred by the Exhibitor (a member), not to exceed three years old, a piece of Plate, value £5. No competition.—Mr. J. Taunton, commended.

Class 5.—A Premium given by Sir E. Antrobus, Bart., to the owner (a member), for the best pair of Stock Heifers, under one year old, a piece of Plate, value £5.—Not sufficient merit.

Class 6.—A premium given by T. Assheton Smith, Esq., to the owner being the breeder of the best Eighteen Southdown Ewes, in Lamb, to consist of six 2-teeth, six 4-teeth, and six 6-teeth, from a breeding flock exceeding 300 Ewes, the whole to be kept in on Stock, a piece of Plate, of the value of £5. No competition.—Mr. J. Moore, Littlecot commended.

Class 7.—A Premium given by Major-General Buckley, M.P., to the owner (a member), being the breeder of the Eighteen best Southdown Ewes in Lamb (consisting of six 2-teeth, six 4-teeth, and six 6-teeth), from a breeding flock that does not exceed 300 Ewes, the whole to be kept for Stock, a piece of Plate value £5, to Mr. E. Waters, Stratford-sub-Castle.

Class 8.—A Premium given by Mr. Bennett, to the owner (a member), being the breeder of the best Eighteen Hampshire Down Ewes, in Lamb (consisting of six 2-teeth, six 4-teeth, and six 6-teeth), from a breeding flock exceeding 300 Ewes, the whole to be kept for Stock, a piece of Plate value £5, to Mr. E. Waters, Stratford-sub-Castle.—The Judges disqualified a pen belonging to Mr. J. Patcher, jun., of Fovant, on the ground of the animals being in too good a condition.

Class 9.—A Premium given by Sir C. Hulse, Bart., to the owner (a member), being the breeder of the Eighteen best Hampshire Down Ewes in Lamb (consisting of six 2-teeth, six 4-teeth, and six 6-teeth), from a breeding flock not exceeding 300 Ewes, the whole to be kept for Stock, a piece of Plate value £5, to Mr. George Sutton, Winterbourne.

Class 10.—A Premium given by Mr. Bennett to the owner (a member), being the breeder of the Twenty best Down Chiltern Tegs, from a flock above 300 breeding Ewes, a piece of Plate value £10, to Mr. S. Dear, Dursford.

Class 11.—A Premium given by Mr. Bennett to the owner (a member), being the breeder of the Twenty best Down Chiltern Tegs, from a flock under 300 Ewes, a piece of Plate, value £5, to Mr. Henry Bennett, Cherriton Farm, near Winchester.

Class 12.—A Premium given by Sir F. H. Bathurst, Bart., to the owner (a member), being the breeder of the best Southdown Ram above one year old, a piece of Plate £5. No competition.—Highly commended, Mr. J. Moore, Littlecot.

Class 13.—A Premium given by H. Dabry Seymour, Esq., M.P., to the owner (a member), being the breeder of the best Southdown Ram, under one year old; £5. No competition.—Commended, Mr. J. Moore, Littlecot.

Class 14.—A Premium given by Lord Folkestone to the owner (a member), being the breeder of the best Hampshire Down Ram, above one year old, a piece of Plate value £5, to Mr. J. Moore, Littlecot.

Class 15.—A Premium given by T. Baring, Esq., M.P., to the owner (a member), being the breeder of the best Hampshire Down Ram under one year, a piece of Plate value £5, to Mr. W. Taunton, Redlynch.

Class 16.—A Premium given by F. J. E. Jervoise, Esq., to the owner (a member) of the best Boar, kept for Stock and the use of the Public at 10s. per Sow, a piece of Plate, value £3, to Mr. Harris, Telford.

Class 17.—A Premium given by A. Morrison, Esq., to the owner (a member) of the best Sow, which has produced one or more litters and kept on for breeding, a piece of Plate, value £5, to Mr. Freemantle, Houghton.

Class 18.—A Premium given by J. H. Campbell Wyndham, Esq., to the owner (a member) of the best Mare for Agricultural Purposes, and which has been in possession of the owner, nine months, a piece of Plate, value £5, to Stephen Mills, Esq., Elston.

Class 19.—A Premium given by W. J. Chaplin, Esq., M.P., for the best Stallion for Agricultural Purposes, which shall be kept by the owner (a member) for Stock, and shall be at the use of the members of this Society at 21s. per Mare and 2s. 6d. the groom, a piece of Plate, value £5, to Mr. Budd, Stenham Farm.

EXTRA STOCK.

Commended—Mr. Pain, Houghton, three fine wether sheep.

THE GAMES OF THE NEW ZEALANDERS.—Young persons have a great variety of games, some of them not unlike those of European children. I may mention one in which a string, tied together at both ends, is passed over the hands and fingers in a way to form a variety of intricate figures, anglice "cats'-cradles." Paroteteke is the name of a game in which boys are the actors. Several having arranged themselves in a row, suddenly, at a given signal, stand on their heads, and then move their legs about in the air, kicking the heels against a buttock to the time of a song, in which they all join. It is a sort of war dance on the head, and has so ludicrous an appearance, that no one who saw it performed could refrain from laughing. Their other favourite pastimes are flying kites, throwing reed spears, running races, walking on stilts, wrestling, and mimic contests. In these contests, however, they never strike a blow with the hand or fist, but leaping at their opponent, kick at him with the sole of the foot. In this mode of assault they are very expert, dealing knock-down blows with the heel about the stomach and chest which might astonish a member of the prize-ring.—Shortland's Traditions and Superstitions of the New Zealanders.

In this department we propose to arrange the in-door amusements and occupations of the country; and we hope that we shall have in this the encouragement, and even the assistance, of the ladies. Necessarily, the greater portion of this department will have reference and be interesting to them; and we know that there are not a few who would give a great amount of useful information on many of the topics that will here find a place. We, therefore, ask the ladies of the country-house to become our correspondents, and through this medium to communicate to one another the information they have acquired upon all household matters, in which they feel that they can teach or be taught.

THE LIBRARY.

To know the true value of books, a man must live out of town. The library is the most luxurious room in the country house. Everything within it has an aspect of peace, and subdues the mind to calmness and contemplation. The light of the clear blue sky, stealing in at the windows, is toned down to a soft grey by the sober brown of the ranks of books upon which it rests—and is not reflected. The footstep is not heard upon the thick carpet that tells of warmth and comfort. The volumes that clothe the walls are silent friends, whose affection never fails, and for whom our love grows with our years. Then the rich odour of old bindings and leaves that time has tarnished, but cannot destroy; the broad massive table, strewn disorderly, but not untidily, with a miscellaneous gathering of intellectual attractions; the last Quarterly Review, the new magazine, with its leaves partially cut, the literary journal, the newspaper, interspersed among books open and closed, which, if the visitor will inspect, he will find to be as various as the topics of the Review; the new novel, the latest history, the travels that are talked about, the book of the season or of the day. To tempt him to read, there is a luxuriously easy chair, before a fire bright with a flaming log, and maps offering ready references to the student, and perhaps, a few—very few—busts of the favourite authors of the owner standing upon pedestals in nooks and corners. In town, people have too many occupations to permit them to read much: they only talk about books, they do not peruse them. But in the country the parcel that brings the latest issues from the bookseller is eagerly opened, its contents are curiously examined, whatever is attractive is seized upon and really read. It is one of the many mistakes made by publishers, in common with most dwellers in the metropolis, to contemplate London as if it were the world: to assume that "the season" there is the only time when there are book buyers and book readers, and, therefore, to produce their best works just when, in truth, they are not likely to be read, because there are no firesides, no evenings, and the world of London is plunged into a whirl of pleasure by day and by night, that leaves no time for any other occupation, and especially unfits the excited mind for reading. But, in the country house, reading is one of the amusements; everybody reads more or less. Nor is this all; it is by the country houses that books are bought. In towns, everybody borrows his books, and one copy supplies the needs of fifty readers. In the country, it is difficult to borrow, and the book desired is bought. Hence, the best patrons of the publishers are the country houses. Besides, almost every person living in the country is a member of a book-club, and in this shape also a considerable book buyer.

Now we, who have spent a great portion of our lives in the country, and know its needs, remember well how welcome to us would have been a short but faithful guide to our library: how acceptable a journal, such as THE FIELD is to us, which should not only collect for us every kind of information relating to country life, its pursuits and pleasures, but should honestly tell us, week by week, what new books appear, which it would advise us to buy, or to order in our book-club. And the ladies of the family, in the country, are especially desirous of being informed what new novels they might place upon the list, to be applied for at the circulating library.

It is the design of THE FIELD to devote a portion of the department which it purposes to term the COUNTRY HOUSE, to that most pleasant room in it, the LIBRARY, and to supply to its readers the impartial intelligence required there; not by long reviews of books, except on rare and special occasions, but in the shape of a short article of news, briefly informing them, as a matter of intelligence, what new books have made their appearance, what they are about, what is their value, and if they are worth buying or borrowing. This will be done in a familiar manner, as a friend in London would answer the enquiry of a friend in the country; and we trust that this, among other matters in which they are interested, and which we purpose to cater for them in this department, will recommend THE FIELD to the regards of its readers, and make it the favourite of the country ladies as well as of the country gentlemen.

The war has so absorbed the public mind that prudent publishers are withholding the issue of their new books until the present excitement has somewhat subsided. Hence there is very little to report for the library and the book-club. The works that do make their appearance have reference chiefly to the war, or to subjects connected with it. We are deluged with descriptions of Russia and Turkey, by travellers who furnish up their memories of visits paid long ago, in hope to supply the present demand. But we suspect that the market is already overstocked, and that publishers are already tired both of the numbers of the "War Books," as they are called, and at the worthlessness of most of them. Lord Carlisle's "Tour" is the best of the books of this class which has lately made its appearance, and it is well worthy of a place in the library, for his lordship had unusual opportunities for observation. He is an observant man, and upon the whole, impartial—his failing, if it be one, being to lean too much to the bright side of things and persons. But it is a charming volume, nevertheless. Novels have shared in the general depression, and very few have been sent forth of late. The best of the recent ones comes from America—Mrs. Stephens's "Fashion and Famine," which those who have not yet read ought to read, and it can be bought for a shilling. "The Curate of Overton" has attracted some attention; perhaps, because it is violently controversial, being throughout an attack upon the Roman Catholics. We cannot but regret that fiction should thus be made the medium for sectarian strife and bitterness. Argument is the proper weapon for disputants. One of the most amusing books of travel we have read for a long time has just been published by Mr. B. St. John. It is an abridged translation of the "Travels of an Arab Merchant in London," and contains some extremely curious accounts of the manners and customs of the people of Durrur, a country in the interior of Africa, which has been visited by only one European as a traveller. We recommend this volume as an acceptable one to the book-club. This is all to be reported of the present week; but, as Christmas approaches, there will doubtless be a larger issue of new books to engage our attention.

HOUSEHOLD MATTERS.

COLLEGE OF DOMESTIC ECONOMY.—A new description of college, under this designation, has been opened in Devonshire-street, Portland-place. On Thursday a series of lectures was commenced by Mr. G. Read, who took for his subject "the general usefulness and application of cooking to our physical necessities and domestic enjoyments." The lecturer in his address showed that the knowledge of the culinary art by a woman was indispensable to the happiness of the home where she presided, and that it was no degradation for a wife, however high her station, to know how to manage her own household. The audience was composed almost entirely of ladies.

MANNERS AND CUSTOMS IN THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY.—Some ladies took their footmen with them into their box at the play; others married actors, and their noble fathers declared they would have more willingly pardoned their daughters had they married laqueys rather than players. A daughter of the Earl of Abingdon married Gallini the ballet-master, of whom George III. made a "Sir John"; and Lady Harriet Wentworth did actually commit the madness of marrying her footman, a madness that had much method in it. This lady, the daughter of Lord Rockingham, transacted this matter in the most business-like way imaginable. She settled a hundred a year for life on her husband, but directed her whole fortune besides to pass to her children, should she have any; otherwise, to her own family. She moreover "provided for a separation, and ensured the same pin-money to Damon, in case they part." She gave away all her fine clothes, and surrendered her titles: "linen and gowns," she said, "were properest for a footman's wife;" and she went to her husband's family in Ireland as plain "Mrs. Henrietta Sturgeon." The Duchess of Douglas, in 1765, having lost a favourite footman rather suddenly in Paris, she had him embalmed, and went to England, with the body of "James" tied on in front of her chair. "A droll way of being chief mourner," says Walpole, who adds some droll things upon the English whom he encountered in journeying through France. When half a mile from Amiens, he met a coach and four with an equipage of French, and a lady in peagreen and silver, a smart hat and feather, and two valets.—Dr. Dorian's Habits.

SOMETHING FOR WINTER.—Nettles are an excellent vegetable. This extraordinary spring vegetable production, of which few know the value, is at once pleasing to the sight, easy of digestion, and at a time of the year when greens are not to be obtained, invaluable as a purifier of the blood; the only fault is, they are to be had for nothing; it is a pity that children are not employed to pick them, and sell them in market towns. The way to cook nettles is thus given:—Wash them well, drain, put them into plenty of boiling water with a little salt, boil for twenty minutes or a little longer, drain them, put them on a board and chop them up; and either serve plain, or put them in the pan with a little salt, pepper, or a bit of butter, or a little fat and gravy from a roast; or add to a pound two teaspoonfuls of flour, a gill of skim milk, a teaspoonful of sugar, and serve them with or without poached eggs. This dish may be had during five months in the year, for even when the plant grows rank the tops are tender. Nettles may also be used for making a kind of tea, which, we are informed, is very refreshing and wholesome. Mangel-wurzel is another neglected vegetable; its young leaves, dressed like nettles, are extremely good. The common weed, too, called the sweet dock, makes a capital dish when it is boiled with one third of nettles and a little carbonate of soda. When done, strain them, and about one pint-bason full, and one onion sliced and fried, a sprig of parsley, a little butter, pepper, and salt; put into a stew-pan on the fire, stir, and gradually add a handful of oatmeal; when you think the meal has been sufficiently boiled, dish up, and serve as a vegetable.—Chambers's Journal.

CONTRIVANCES FOR WINDOW FLOWER-BEDS.—The thing really required has not yet been invented, at least I have not seen any advertisements on the subject. The object to be attained is to provide space for a little flower-bed extending all along the outside of the window, and projecting as far out as the taste of the amateur gardener may suggest. This bed should be filled with fine leaf mould, and, if planted with bulbs in the winter months, and geraniums in the summer, would become a very pretty object, affording a constant subject of interest and employment to the ladies of the family. A large slab of stone, or slate, should first be firmly set, and on this a bed might be formed of tiles of earthenware or terra cotta expressly made for the purpose. The tiles might be made in pieces, so as to be capable of fitting to window-sills of any size: some should be flat, others at right angles to form the sides, and the outside tiles should have holes, or a gutter terminating in a hole, conveniently placed, to allow of the surplus water draining off. Iron castings should be adapted to the support of these tiles, so that when all were laid there should be a firm flower-bed of not less than six inches in depth. Might not a thriving branch of industry spring up in the supply of those flower beds, to assist in gratifying so universal a taste as a fondness for flowers?—Correspondent of the Builder.

"I SAY, FRANK," said a fast guardsman to another at Alma, "this is something! A Russian is a better mark than a partridge!" "Yes, that's all very true—but a partridge doesn't shoot at you again!"

A DUTCHER in Queen-street, Limerick, has a musical pig which rushes out in its style every time it hears the band of the American Circus, and follows it through the streets. On Tuesday evening last it followed the band of the 72nd Highlanders from Queen-street to George-street. If the door should be closed against it when it hears the music it makes violent efforts to burst through it and get out.

THE FIELD NATURALIST.

The design of this department of THE FIELD is to encourage a taste for observation of Natural History, animal and vegetable, by providing a column to which its readers may contribute their observations and experiences, and where these may be preserved for future use. Gilbert White has shown, in his delightful volume, how much of the most curious interest can be gleaned by a dweller in the country, and even within the range of a single small parish. How much might not be collected, then, with the help of the readers of THE FIELD, spread over the whole of the United Kingdom, who are continually in contact with Nature, and only need to keep their eyes open and their pens might record, for the advantage of the public, a multitude of anecdotes and incidents of animal and vegetable life, and other facts in Natural History, which would form not the least attractive feature in THE FIELD.

We invite the communications of all such observations.

We also ask THE FIELD NATURALIST CLUBS, of whom there are many now, to send us regular reports of their proceedings, to which a place will readily be given in our columns.

THE SERPENTS IN CEYLON.—The eye-snake, so called from a supposed habit it has of striking cattle in the eye when grazing, is without exception the most beautiful and least repulsive of all snakes. It is about four feet long, of the brightest grass green—the intense green of an English meadow in early summer. It is very thin, and graceful in its movements; and although very rapid when moving, is so instantaneously rigid when alarmed, and adapts itself so wonderfully to the shape and hue of the grass or reeds amongst which it moves, that although watching one intently at your very feet, it is most difficult to discriminate between it and the vegetation with which it mingles. One day, walking at Kandy, I saw what I thought was a large reed, or grass of a most beautiful colour, standing erect on the road some two or three feet from the bank, and it was not till I could have touched it with my hand that I saw it was an eye-snake coiled up in the road, its head and neck raised about twelve inches from the ground, and as rigid and immovable as if formed of malacite.—The Cobra.—Of all the snakes the cobra is the most beautiful, and when erect, with its hood expanded, gracefully moving in time to the music, it is certainly a most striking and fascinating object; its eye, which is in general leaden and heavy, becomes, under the influence of music, intensely bright and glittering. This effect is heightened by the fact of snakes having no eyelids; the eye, although so beautiful, is not strong, and cannot bear any strong glare; this was well known to the ancients, who had an idea that the flash of an emerald deprived them of sight. The poison from the fang of a cobra is like one or two drops of laudanum.—Sullivan's Bangalore and Teut.

THE STATISTICS OF DEATHS FROM LIGHTNING IN FRANCE.—The French Academy of Sciences have received some interesting observations on the effects of the lightning-stroke upon human beings. The following facts are the result of patient observations made by M. Baudin, chief surgeon of the Hôpital du Roule:—The number of people yearly struck by lightning in France averages 200. The number of people killed by lightning between the years 1835 and 1852 was no less than 1,308; the number struck, but not fatally, was about three to one of the number killed. Of the number struck there were nearly three men to one woman. The region where the lightning had been most fatal is the central plateau of France, comprising the compartments of Cantal, Puy-de-Dôme, and other departments which are mountainous or present elevated ground. The months during which people are the least exposed to the fatal effects of lightning are the coldest months of the year, viz.—November, December, January, and February. Out of 103 people struck, 4 were struck in March, 6 in April, 8 in May, 22 in June, 13 in July, 19 in August, 14 in September, and 15 in October. One-fourth of the people who have been struck may trace the misfortune to their own imprudence, in taking shelter under trees, which attract the electric fluid. The greatest number of people killed by a single flash of lightning does not exceed eight or nine. M. Boudin called attention to two curious facts in connection with this subject. The first was, that dead men, struck by lightning, had been found in exactly the upright position they held when killed; the second was, that other bodies bore upon them faint impressions of outward objects, probably somewhat resembling photographic shadows. Animals, however, are much more exposed to the influences of lightning than man, and suffer more from its destructive properties. More than once a single flash of lightning has destroyed an entire flock of sheep, and, according to M. D'Abbadie, flocks of 2,000 in Ethiopia. The fires occasioned by lightning have amounted to eight in one week in the departments of La Moine, Moselle, Meurthe, and Vosges. The little kingdom of Wurtemberg suffered by 117 fires in nine years, so caused. Before the application of lightning-conductors, English ships experienced losses annually by the electric fluid estimated at from £1,000 to £1,400, but since their application, such losses are no longer heard of, although some pretend to deny the efficacy of the lightning-rod.—Athenæum.

SUSSEX GEOLOGY.—THE ANCIENT MONSTER: THE MEGALOSAURUS.—I have lately discovered in this neighbourhood (West Hoothly), a fossil portion, not only of the osseous framework of that ancient monster of the Weald, the Megalosaurus, but of its almost impenetrable covering, or skin, which, from its thickness, gives to the animal itself a title to rank among the prehistoric animals of extinct creations. The external surface consists of what may be termed scales, varying in their size according to the different degrees of thickness of the skin itself, being greater in their area where the skin is thick, and less where it becomes thinner, or in those parts less exposed to assault. This, of course, agrees with what is observable in the scaly integuments of existing forms of the saurian species. These scales are about the sixteenth part of an inch in thickness in their present petrified state, but probably were much thicker when covering the living animal, as they must have undergone contraction in the metamorphosis, which has throughout so many ages preserved them for our inspection. The shape of them is that of the rhombus, and they vary in their areas from one quarter of an inch to an inch square. From the specimen lying before me, I am inclined to believe that the natural coat of mail worn by this formidable monster, must have been, in its most exposed or useable parts, from one to two inches thick. Although laminated in its structure, it is spongy or porous in its texture, and, on being rubbed with a file, emits a strongly resinous and offensive odour. Unmistakable evidences are in this fossil given that the creature's death must have been in its character no less violent than sudden, but this is a feature generally distinguishable as regards the extinction of life among prehistoric or preadamite animals. The portion of the integument in my possession serves to confirm the correctness of the restored figure of this gigantic reptile seen within the precincts of the British Museum, at Sydenham.—Correspondent of the Brighton Examiner.

AT THE EXTENSIVE WAREHOUSES IN REGENT-STREET AND CORNHILL,

BELONGING TO

H. J. and D. NICOLL,

MERCHANT TAILORS AND PALETOT PATENTEES.

THE best Materials, Talent, and Workmanship are employed, and the principle of a combination of economy and excellence maintained. Here also the Dress Buttons and Colours of every Yacht Club or Hunt are always ready for inspection.

FOR HUNTING.

The Scarlet, Brown, Olive, or Mixed Cloths, are both fine and strong, the dye cannot even be moved by acids, and in the course of manufacture they are prepared by a peculiar process to resist a very heavy shower of rain.

FOR YACHTING.

Every description of Pilot and Pea Jackets, with prepared India Rubber and other Waterproofed clothing, may also be seen.

For Shooting, Fishing, Rowing, or Cricketing, all suitable materials are provided.

Nicoll's Dry-seat Coat

Is useful to all, whether Sportsman or Traveller, as it is well known that rheumatism and colds, with the thousand and one other ills that flesh is heir to, are chiefly caught through damp seats.

114, 116, 118, 120, Regent-street, and 22, Cornhill.

A GREAT VARIETY OF NEW AND SECOND-HAND

SANDWICH BOXES, HUNTING FLASKS, DRAM BOTTLES, IN SIZES, AND BEAKERS IN NESTS, IN ELECTRO-PLATE OR SILVER,

At THOMAS'S, Silversmiths and Platers, 153, New Bond-street, London.

MANGER, RACK, AND WATER-TROUGH, AS ONE FIXTURE.

IMPROVED AND NEWLY PATENTED.

COTTAM and HALLEN, the original inventors, obtained the Great Exhibition Prize Medal for this arrangement, to which all the latest improvements are adapted, secured by Patent, including a method entirely new of attaching the litter-weight and rein from the back of the manger to the under front of the plate, allowing the horse greater freedom, and being noiseless in operation, add much to its comfort whilst feeding and convenience when at rest, as likewise, from their position, avoiding the liability of the most restive horse getting cast. No well-managed stable should be without these fittings.

COTTAM'S ENAMELLED MANGERS are constructed in the best possible manner, both as to form and utility; are closely in appearance, durable, and impervious to infection; manufactured Plain, Galvanized, and Enamelled. Improved Surface Drain, with Safety Covers, Sanitary Traps, Stable Pumps, Loose Box, Fittings, Gutter, Gutta Percha Preserving Saddle and Harness Brackets, and every article in Stable Furniture, in stock. An extensive assortment of Patterns for both Plain and Ornamental Castings, and every description of Wrought and Cast Iron Work for building and other purposes. Agricultural and Horticultural Implements, Iron Gales, both plain and ornamental, Hurdles, Strain Fencing, &c.

Estimates and Catalogues on application to COTTAM and HALLEN, 2, WINSLEY-STREET, OXFORD-STREET.

SLACKS' NICKEL SILVER

Is the hardest and most perfect white metal ever invented, and equals Silver in durability and colour. Made into every article for the Table, as Tea and Coffee-pots, Cruet-frames, Candle-sticks, Waiters, &c.

A Sample Tea-spoon will be sent Free on receipt of Ten Postage Stamps.

	Fiddle Pat.	Strong Fiddle.	Three Pat.	King's Pat.
Table-spoons and Forks, per dozen	12s. & 15s.	19s.	24s.	30s.
Desert ditto	10s. & 12s.	16s.	21s.	25s.
Tea-spoons	5s. & 6s.	8s.	11s.	12s.

SLACKS'

NICKEL ELECTRO-PLATED.

R. and J. S. call attention to their NICKEL SILVER ELECTRO-PLATED, which cannot be distinguished from Sterling Silver.

	2nd Quality.	1st Quality.
Table-spoons and Forks, per dozen	30s.	40s.
Desert ditto	20s.	30s.
Tea-spoons, per dozen	12s.	18s.

Also, every article for the Table, as in Silver.

SLACKS' TABLE CUTLERY AND FURNISHING WAREHOUSE

Has been celebrated for 50 years for quality and cheapness; and contains all the newest patterns in Fenders, Fire-irons, Tea-trays, Dish-covers, and every article in Furnishing Ironmongery. Iron Fenders, from 3s. 6d.; Bronzed ditto, from 5s.; Fire-irons, 2s. 6d.; small set of Kitchen Furniture, £3; and every requisite in Furnishing Ironmongery, which, from their simple but satisfactory plan of marking each article in plain figures, at the Lowest Possible Prices consistent with quality, will at once prove the advantage of purchasing at their Establishment. Orders above £2 delivered carriage free, per rail. Their Book, containing upwards of 200 Engravings, may be had gratis, or sent to any part, post free.

RICHARD and JOHN SLACK, 336, STRAND (opposite Somerset House).

ALLEN'S

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE,

CONTAINING SIZE, PRICE, AND DESCRIPTION OF UPWARDS OF 100 ARTICLES.

CONSISTING OF PORTMANTEAUS, TRAVELLING BAGS, LADIES' PORTMANTEAUS, DESPATCH BOXES, WRITING DESKS, DRESSING CASES, and other Travelling Requisites, forwarded on receipt of two stamps.

ALLEN'S Travelling Bag (patented) has the opening as large as the bag itself, and therefore possesses an immense advantage over all others.

ALLEN'S Registered Despatch Box and Writing Desk, and their New Quadruple Portmanteau (containing four compartments), are the best articles of the kind ever produced.

J. W. & T. ALLEN,

MANUFACTURERS OF PORTABLE BARRACK-ROOM FURNITURE, AND MILITARY OUTFITTERS (see separate Catalogue),

18 & 22, WEST STRAND.

THE FIELD SUPPLEMENT

VOL. IV.—No. 100.]

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1854.

[GRATIS.]

THE NEWSPAPER.

THE FIELD OF WAR.

THE ALLIED POSITION.

The allied armies are encamped upon a plat of above four miles in length and six in breadth, but the ground is so high above the neighbouring valleys that a large force on these heights could resist ten times its number. Towards Balaklava the ascent from the plain below is, generally speaking, very abrupt, so that from the sea to the Inkerman Valley—i.e., the valley by the side of which an important part of the harbour of Sebastopol runs—is easily defended. The French have raised a breastwork along the whole line, batteries are placed in well-selected positions, redoubts and redans command certain roads and passes, and where the smallest chance offered for a cavalry passage due protection has been applied; so that as long as we have an army of the present strength, no enemy need be feared in this direction. The plateau on which we rest is not square, but bounded by three curves—one on the coast line; the second, or Balaklava line, from the sea to the point whence you look down into the Inkerman Valley; the third running from that point towards the sea, parallel with the town, and dipping towards the coast, until at last it is about level with the highest part of the arsenal side of Sebastopol. Along this last line, upon spurs of hills running out towards the fortress, our batteries are placed; the French, on the left attack, occupying the broad slip spoken of above as level with a part of the town. Of course, between these spurs there are gorges, and these run down and meet the plain, which narrows as you draw from Inkerman seaward. The only assailable part of our position is that towards the fortress; but even that may be set down as perfectly secure, considering the force we always have at hand, provided ordinary watchfulness be exercised. We have on the right attack four batteries, named as follows:—Right Lancaster, Left Lancaster, Green-hill, and Four-gun Battery, mounting about 30 guns; and on the left the large Green-hill Battery, with 36 guns, our nearest gun being at least 1,200 yards from Sebastopol. In advance we have run an approach which is within 600 yards of the enemy; but this is not intended to aid a battery so much as to form a cover for the storming parties in an attack. In rear of these batteries, beginning from our extreme right, lie the 2nd, 1st Light, 3rd, and 4th Divisions, ready at a moment's notice to repel any sortie, should the covering parties find themselves unable to hold their own. The great difficulty on the English side consists in the rocky nature of the ground, which quite prevents sapping close up to the walls, and terribly increases the labour for the poor men. Between us and the French there is a long and deep ravine, beyond which are the French batteries, finely placed on a level with the high ground of the town; and, as the soil is comparatively deep, the engineer has a better chance. General Bizot is one of the Vauban school, and is quietly, but confidently, approaching the walls. The batteries defending Sebastopol are five in front and two in the town, all mud works, and apparently well constructed. As to the number of guns it is impossible to speak accurately. There are probably not less than 150 in position, and the injury received from the allies during the day is repaired from the arsenal during the night.

THE QUEEN AND THE ARMY.

The following General Order, conveying the Queen's approbation of the conduct of the British army on the memorable occasion of the battle of the Alma, has been issued to the troops:—

"GENERAL ORDER.

"Head Quarters before Sebastopol, Oct. 27, 1854.

"The Commander of the Forces has much pleasure in publishing the copy of a despatch received from the Minister at War, conveying her Majesty's gracious approbation of the gallant conduct of the army at the battle of the Alma.

"Lord Raglan feels it to be his duty to draw the attention of the troops to the sorrow her Majesty expresses for the loss of so many valuable officers and men, as well as the gracious manner in which her Majesty is pleased to sympathise in the sufferings of the wounded, and in the grief of those whose relatives fell upon this occasion.

"War Department, Oct. 10, 1854.

"My LORD,—Major Lord Burghersh arrived here early in the morning of the 8th inst., and delivered to me your lordship's despatch of the 23rd ult., communicating the details of the glorious and important victory on the banks of the Alma, which your telegraphic despatch, received on the 1st of this month, had already led me to anticipate.

"I lost no time in submitting to her Majesty your lordship's able and interesting description of this great conflict, and it is now my gratifying duty to express to your lordship the sense which the Queen entertains of the valuable service which you have rendered to this country, and to the cause of the allies, and the high approbation which her Majesty has been pleased to express of the brilliant gallantry of the forces under your command, their discipline—worthy of veteran soldiers—and their irresistible resolution, which no disadvantages of position could subdue.

"The Queen commands me to convey through your lordship her Majesty's commendation and thanks to Lieut.-General Sir George Brown, the other generals of divisions, and to all the officers, non-commissioned officers, and privates of the army, who have on this occasion revived the recollection of the ancient glories of British arms, and added fresh lustre to the military fame of England.

"Her Majesty feels additional pleasure in thus recognising the noble daring of her soldiers, and sympathising in their victory, when she reflects that that courage has been evinced and those triumphs won side by side with the troops the Crimea, has elicited her Majesty's warmest sympathy and approval. Their sufferings from disease before that time were such as might have subdued the valour of less gallant troops, but have in their case only proved that, in the hour of battle, they remember nothing but the call of duty.

"Your lordship's cordial acknowledgment of the invaluable service rendered by Sir Edmund Lyons and the officers and seamen of the Royal Navy will be as highly appreciated as it is justly deserved by those gallant men. Deprived of an opportunity of vindicating their ancient prowess against a fleet which refuses to take the sea, they have rendered every assistance in their power to the operations of the army; and their noble conduct on the field of battle, where they soothed the sufferings of the wounded, and performed the last sad offices to the dead, will ever be remembered to their honour, and bind still more indissolubly the bonds which have long united the military and naval services of the Queen.—I have the honour to be, my Lord, your lordship's most obedient humble servant,

"General the Lord Raglan, G.C.B. &c. &c. &c.

"By order, (Signed) "J. B. B. ESTCOURT, Adj.-Gen."

POSITION OF THE ALLIES BETWEEN THE ACTIONS OF BALAKLAVA AND INKERMAN.

of a nation whose valour the British army has in former times admired and respected in hostile combat, but which it has now for the first time tested in the generous rivalry of an intimate brotherhood in arms. Her Majesty trusts that the blood of the two nations so profusely shed on the banks of the Alma—a subject of deep regret to herself and her people—may consecrate an alliance which shall endure for the benefit of future generations when the remembrance of this battle-field is hallowed by gratitude for the consequences, as well as the glories, of victory.

"Within the compass of a despatch, your lordship has comprehended every detail which is necessary to render intelligible the plan of operations agreed upon by Marshal St. Arnaud and yourself, and the mode in which that plan was carried out by the ability of the officers and the bravery of the men of the allied armies. On one subject alone you are silent—your own distinguished service. To this, however, others have borne witness, and her Majesty is profoundly sensible, that, if her army has shown itself worthy of its ancient renown, its Commander has proved himself able to uphold it, and has fulfilled the prediction written forty years ago, by him, under whom he learned the art of war, and whose loss we still mourn, that he would "become an honour to his country."

"I am instructed by her Majesty to express to your lordship the very sincere sorrow which she has experienced from the perusal of the long list of gallant officers and men who have been either killed or severely wounded in this memorable engagement. Such a victory could not be attained without a heavy loss, and there is every reason to believe that no disposition of your forces would have entailed a less sacrifice, and at the same time obtained a result so decisive, that it may be hoped much future bloodshed will be prevented. Her Majesty trusts that such of her subjects as have been plunged in grief by the loss of relatives and friends, will find some consolation in the reflection that those who have not survived to share the triumph of their comrades have fallen in a just cause, and that their names will henceforth be inscribed in the annals of their country's glory.

"The Queen will be most anxious to receive such further despatches from your lordship as may tend to relieve the affectionate anxiety of the friends of the wounded, and her Majesty trusts that a very large proportion of these brave men may before long be restored to the ranks of your army, and may enjoy in future times of peace the well-earned honours of their gallant exertions.

"The patience with which the regimental officers and men bore, without a murmur, the unusual privations to which they were necessarily subjected after they landed in two several occasions persons of distinguished rank were observed to have joined the Russian camp.

I have subsequently learnt that the 4th corps d'armee, conveyed in carriages of the country, and in the lightest possible order, had been brought from Moldavia, and were to be immediately followed by the 3rd corps.

It was therefore to be expected that an extensive movement would not be long deferred.

Accordingly, shortly before daylight, on the 5th, strong columns of the enemy came upon the advanced pickets covering the right of the position. These pickets behaved with admirable gallantry, defending the ground foot by foot against the overwhelming numbers of the enemy, until the 2nd Division, under Major-General Pouchkoff, with its field guns, which had immediately been got under arms, was placed in position.

The Light Division, under Lieutenant-General Sir George Brown, was also brought to the front without loss of time; the 1st Brigade, under Major-General Codrington, occupying the long slopes to the left towards Sebastopol, and protecting our right battery, and guarding against attack on that side, and the 2nd Brigade, under Brigadier-General Buller, forming on the left of the 2nd Division, with the 88th Regiment, under Lieutenant-Colonel Jeffreys, thrown in advance.

The brigade of Guards, under his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge and Major-General Bentinck, proceeded likewise to the front, and took up most important ground to the extreme right on the alignment of the 2nd Division, but separated from it by a deep and precipitous ravine, and posting its guns with those of the 2nd Division.

The 4th Division, under Lieutenant-General Sir George Cathcart, having been brought from their encampment advanced to the front and right of the attack; the 1st Brigade, under Brigadier-General Goldie, proceeded to the left of the Inkerman-road; the 2nd Brigade, under Brigadier-General Torrens, to the right of it, and on the ridge overhanging the valley of the Tchernaya.

The 3rd Division, under Lieutenant-General Sir Richard England, occupied in part the ground vacated by the 4th Division, and supported the Light Division by two regiments under Brigadier-General Sir John Campbell, while Brigadier-General Kyrle held the command of the troops in the trenches.

The morning was extremely dark, with a drizzling rain, rendering it almost impossible to discover anything beyond the flash and smoke of artillery and heavy musketry fire.

It, however, soon became evident that the enemy, under cover of a vast cloud of skirmishers, supported by dense columns of infantry, had advanced numerous batteries of large calibre to the high ground to the left and front of the BATTLE OF INKERMAN.

(From the "Extraordinary Gazette" of Wednesday.)

WAR DEPARTMENT,

Nov. 22, 1854, 9½ a.m.

His Grace the Duke of Newcastle has this day received a despatch, of which the following is a copy, addressed to his Grace, by Field Marshal the Lord Raglan, G.C.B.

Before Sebastopol, Nov. 8, 1854.

MY LORD DUKE,—I have the honour to report to your Grace that the army under my command, powerfully aided by the corps of observation of the French army, under the command of that distinguished officer, General Bosquet, effectually repulsed and defeated a most vigorous and determined attack of the enemy on our position overlooking the ruins of Inkerman, on the morning of the 5th instant.

In my letter to your Grace of the 3rd, I informed you that the enemy had considerably increased their force in the valley of the Tchernaya. The following day this augmentation was still further apparent, and large masses of troops had evidently arrived from the northward, and on 2nd Division, while powerful columns of infantry attacked with great vigour the brigade of Guards.

Additional batteries of heavy artillery were also placed by the enemy on the slopes to our left; the guns in the field mounting in the whole to ninety pieces, independently, however, of the ship guns, and those in the works of Sebastopol.

Protected by a tremendous fire of shot, shell, and grape, the Russian columns advanced in great force, requiring every effort of gallantry on the part of our troops to resist them.

At this time two battalions of French infantry, which had on the first notice been sent by General Bosquet, joined our right, and very materially contributed to the successful resistance to the attack, cheering with our men, and charging the enemy down the hill with great loss.

About the same time a determined assault was made on our extreme left, and for a moment the enemy possessed themselves of four of our guns, three of which were retaken by the 88th, while the fourth was speedily re-captured by the 77th Regiment, under Lieutenant-Colonel Egerton.

In the opposite direction the brigade of Guards, under his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, was engaged in a severe conflict.

The enemy, under the cover of thick brushwood, advanced in two heavy bodies, and assaulted with great determination a small redoubt which had been constructed for two guns, but was not armed. The combat was most arduous; and the brigade, after displaying the utmost steadiness and gallantry, was obliged to retire before very superior numbers, until supported by a wing of the 20th Regiment of the 4th Division, when they again advanced and retook the redoubt.

This ground was afterwards occupied in gallant style by French troops; and the Guards speedily re-formed in rear of the right flank of the Second Division.

In the meanwhile, Lieutenant-General the Hon. Sir George Cathcart, with a few companies of the 68th Regiment, considering that he might make a strong impression by descending into the valley, and taking the enemy in flank, moved rapidly forward; but finding the heights above him in full occupation of the Russians, he suddenly discovered that he was entangled with a superior force, and while attempting to withdraw his men, he received a mortal wound; shortly previously to which Brigadier-General Torrens, when leading the 68th, was likewise severely wounded.

Subsequently to this, the battle continued with unabated vigour and with no positive result, the enemy bringing upon our line not only the fire of all their field-batteries, but those in front of the works of the place, and the ship guns, till the afternoon, when the symptoms of giving way first became apparent; and shortly after, although the fire did not cease, the retreat became general, and heavy masses were observed retiring over the bridge of the Inkerman, and ascending the opposite heights, abandoning on the field of battle five or six thousand dead and wounded, multitudes of the latter having already been carried off by them. I never before witnessed such a spectacle as the field presented, but upon this I will not dwell.

Having submitted to your Grace this imperfect description of this most severe battle, I have still two duties to discharge, the one most gratifying, the last most painful to my feelings.

I have the greatest satisfaction in drawing your Grace's attention to the brilliant conduct of the allied troops. French and English vied with each other in displaying their gallantry and manifesting their zealous devotion to duty, notwithstanding that they had to contend against an infinitely superior force, and were exposed for many hours to a most galling fire.

It should be borne in mind that they have daily for several weeks undergone the most constant labour, and that many of them passed the previous night in the trenches.

I will not attempt to enter into the details of the movements of the French troops, lest I should not state them correctly, but I am proud of the opportunity of bearing testimony to their valour and energetic services, and of paying a tribute of admiration to the distinguished conduct of their immediate Commander, General Bosquet, while it is in the highest degree pleasing to me to place upon record my deep sense of the valuable assistance I received from the Commander-in-Chief, General Canrobert, who was himself on the ground and in constant communication with me, and whose cordial co-operation on all occasions I cannot too highly extol.

Your Grace will recollect that he was wounded at the Alma. He was again wounded on the 5th, but I should hope that he will not long feel the effects of it.

I will in a subsequent despatch lay before your Grace the name of the officers whose services have been brought to my notice. I will not detain the mail for that purpose now, but I cannot delay to report the admirable behaviour of Lieutenant-General Sir George Brown, who was unfortunately shot through the arm, but is doing well; of Lieutenant-General his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, who particularly distinguished himself; and of Major-General Pennefather, in command of the Second Division, which received the first attack, and gallantly maintained itself under the greatest difficulties throughout this protracted conflict; of Major-General Bentinck, who is severely wounded; Major-General Codrington, Brigadier-General Adams, and Brigadier-General Torrens, who are severely wounded; and Brigadier-General Buller, who is also wounded, but not so seriously.

I must likewise express my obligations to Lieutenant-General Sir Richard England for the excellent disposition he made of his division, and the assistance he rendered to the left of the Light Division, where Brigadier-General Sir John Campbell was judiciously placed, and effectively supported Major-General Codrington; and I have great pleasure in stating that Brigadier-General Eyre was employed in the important duty of guarding the trenches from any assault from the town.

Lieutenant-General Sir De Lacy Evans, who had been obliged, by severe indisposition, to go on board ship a few days previously, left his bed as soon as he received intelligence of the attack, and was promptly at his post, and though he did not feel well enough to take the command of the division out of the hands of Major-General Pennefather, he did not fail to give him his best advice and assistance.

It is deeply distressing to me to have to submit to your Grace the list of the killed and wounded and missing on this memorable occasion. It is indeed heavy, and very many valuable officers and men have been lost to her Majesty's service.

Among the killed your Grace will find the names of Lieutenant-General the Honourable Sir G. Cathcart, Brigadier-General Strangways, and Brigadier-General Goldie.

Of the services of the first it is almost unnecessary to speak. They are known throughout the British empire, and have within a short space of time been brought conspicuously before the country by his achievements at the Cape of Good Hope, whence he had only just returned when he was ordered to this army.

By his death her Majesty has been deprived of a most devoted servant, an officer of the highest merit, while I personally have to deplore the loss of an attached and faithful friend.

Brigadier-General Strangways was known to have distinguished himself in early life, and in mature age throughout a long service, he maintained the same character.

The mode in which he had conducted the command of the Artillery, since it was placed in his hands by the departure through illness of Major-General Cator, is entitled to my entire approbation, and was equally agreeable to those who were confided to his care.

Brigadier-General Goldie was an officer of considerable promise, and gave great satisfaction to all under whom he has served.

It is difficult to arrive at any positive conclusion as to the actual numbers brought into the field by the enemy. The configuration of the ground did not admit of any great development of their force, the attack consisting of a system of repeated assaults in heavy masses of columns; but judging from the numbers that were seen in the plains after they had withdrawn in retreat, I am led to suppose that they could not have been less than sixty thousand men. Their loss was excessive, and it is calculated that they left on the field nearly five thousand dead, and that their casualties amount in the whole, in killed, wounded, and prisoners, to not less than 15,000.

Your Grace will be surprised to learn that the number of British troops actually engaged little exceeded 8,000 men, whilst those of General Bosquet's division only amounted to 6,000, the remaining available French troops on the spot having been kept in reserve.

I ought to mention, that while the enemy were attacking our right, they assailed the left of the French trenches, and actually got into two of their batteries; but they were quickly driven out in the most gallant manner, with considerable loss, and hotly pursued to the very walls of Sebastopol.—I have &c.,

His Grace the Duke of Newcastle, &c., &c.

KILLED AND WOUNDED.

Return of Casualties on November 5, 1854.

Staff—5 officers, killed; 12 officers, wounded.
4th Light Dragoons—2 rank and file, wounded.
11th Hussars—1 rank and file, wounded.
17th Lancers—1 officer, killed; 1 rank and file, wounded.
Artillery—2 officers, 3 sergeants, 10 rank and file, killed; 4 officers, 5 sergeants, 71 rank and file, wounded.
2nd Battalion Grenadier Guards—3 officers, 3 sergeants, 1 drummer, 21 rank and file, killed; 6 officers, 6 sergeants, 1 drummer, 144 rank and file, wounded; 30 rank and file, missing.
1st Battalion Coldstream Guards—8 officers, 3 sergeants, 9 rank and file, killed; 5 officers, 6 sergeants, 110 rank and file, wounded; 53 rank and file, missing.
1st Battalion of Scots Fusilier Guards—1 officer, 2 sergeants, 21 rank and file, killed; 8 officers, 8 sergeants, 2 drummers, 103 rank and file, wounded, 16 rank and file, missing.
1st Regiment of Foot—1 rank and file, killed.
7th Regiment—5 rank and file, killed; 5 officers, 2 sergeants, 1 drummer, 46 rank and file, wounded; 8 rank and file, missing.
19th Regiment—1 officer, 1 rank and file, killed; 3 rank and file, wounded.
20th Regiment—1 officer, 2 sergeants, 10 rank and file, killed; 8 officers, 17 sergeants, 1 drummer, 104 rank and file, wounded; 28 rank and file, missing.
21st Regiment—1 officer, 13 rank and file, killed; 6 officers, 11 sergeants, 79 rank and file, wounded; 11 rank and file, missing.
23rd Regiment—7 rank and file, killed; 1 officer, 2 sergeants, 18 rank and file, wounded; 1 officer, 1 sergeant, 11 rank and file, missing.
30th Regiment—2 officers, 27 rank and file, killed; 5 officers, 4 sergeants, 97 rank and file, wounded.
23rd Regiment—1 officer, 6 rank and file, killed; 2 officers, 3 sergeants, 52 rank and file, wounded.
41st Regiment—5 officers, 2 sergeants, 53 rank and file, killed; 6 officers, 4 sergeants, 2 drummers, 95 rank and file, wounded.
46th Regiment—2 officers, 2 sergeants, 24 rank and file, wounded; 12 rank and file, missing.
47th Regiment—19 rank and file, killed; 2 officers, 2 sergeants, 43 rank and file, wounded.
49th Regiment—2 officers, 1 sergeant, 1 drummer, 37 rank and file, killed; 11 sergeants, 1 drummer, 107 rank and file, wounded.
50th Regiment—1 officer, 8 rank and file, killed; 1 officer, 1 drummer, 20 rank and file, wounded.
55th Regiment—18 rank and file, killed; 5 officers, 4 sergeants, 54 rank and file, wounded.
57th Regiment—1 officer, 3 sergeants, 1 drummer, 9 rank and file, killed; 3 officers, 5 sergeants, 1 drummer, 69 rank and file, wounded.
63rd Regiment—3 officers, 17 rank and file, killed; 7 officers, 7 sergeants, 2 drummers, 82 rank and file, wounded.
64th Regiment—2 officers, 1 rank and file, killed; 2 officers, 2 sergeants, 2 drummers, 29 rank and file, wounded; 2 sergeants, 12 rank and file, missing.
77th Regiment—1 officer, 2 sergeants, 17 rank and file, killed; 2 sergeants, 1 drummer, 34 rank and file, wounded; 1 rank and file, missing.
88th Regiment—4 sergeants, 18 rank and file, killed; 2 officers, 9 sergeants, 71 rank and file, wounded.
95th Regiment—2 sergeants, 25 rank and file, killed; 4 officers, 3 sergeants, 101 rank and file, wounded.
1st Battalion Rifle Brigade—1 officer, 4 sergeants, 11 rank and file, killed, 3 officers, 5 sergeants, 1 drummer, 77 rank and file, wounded; 3 sergeants, 9 rank and file, missing.
2nd Battalion Rifle Brigade—1 officer, 8 rank and file, killed; 1 officer, 1 drummer, 25 rank and file, wounded.
Total—43 officers, 81 sergeants, 4 drummers, 376 rank and file, killed; 100 officers, 120 sergeants, 17 drummers, 1,668 rank and file, wounded; 1 officer, 6 sergeants, 191 rank and file, missing.
Ambulance—1 rank and file, killed.
Royal Marines—1 sergeant, 4 rank and file, killed; 1 officer, 1 sergeant, 25 rank and file, wounded.
Grand Total—43 officers, 39 sergeants, 4 drummers, 380 rank and file, killed; 101 officers, 121 sergeants, 17 drummers, 1,694 rank and file, wounded; 1 officer, 6 sergeants, 191 rank and file, missing.
J. B. BUCKNALL ESTCOURT, Adjutant-General.

Nominal Return of Officers Killed at the Battle of Inkerman, November 5, 1854.

CAVALRY DIVISION.

17th Lancers—Cornet Avelid, Cleceland.
Royal Artillery—Brigadier-General T. Fox Strangways; Major P. Towseand.
1st DIVISION
Staff—Captain H. T. Butler, Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General.
3rd Battalion Grenadier Guards—Lieutenant-Colonel E. W. Pakenham; Captain Sir R. L. Newman, Bart.; Captain Hon. H. A. Neville.
1st Battalion Coldstream Guards—Lieutenant-Colonel Hon. T. C. Dawson; Lieutenant-Colonel J. C. Cochrane; Captain Hon. G. C. Elliot; Captain F. H. Ramsden; Captain L. D. Mackinnon; Captain H. M. Bouverie; Lieutenant C. H. Greville; Lieutenant E. A. Diabrowe.
1st Battalion Scots Fusilier Guards—Lieutenant-Colonel J. H. Blair.

2ND DIVISION.

Staff—Captain W. K. Allix.
30th Regiment—Captain A. Conolly; Lieutenant A. Gibson.
41st Regiment—Lieutenant-Colonel G. Carpenter; Captain E. Richards; Lieutenant A. Taylor; Lieutenant J. W. Swaby; Lieutenant J. Stirling.
49th Regiment—Major T. N. Dalton; Lieutenant A. S. Armstrong.

3RD DIVISION.

50th Regiment—Lieutenant W. G. Dashwood.
4th DIVISION
Staff—Lieutenant-General Sir George Cathcart, K.C.B.; Brigadier-General T. L. Goldie; Lieutenant-Colonel C. T. Seymour, Assistant Adjutant-General.
20th Regiment—Lieutenant W. H. Dowling.
21st Regiment—Lieutenant H. F. E. Hurt.
51st Regiment—Captain E. Stanley.
63rd Regiment—Lieutenant-Colonel E. S. T. Swyny; Lieutenant G. C. W. Cartols; Ensign J. H. Clatterback.
65th Regiment—Major H. G. Wynne; Lieutenant F. G. Barker.
1st Battalion Rifle Brigade—Captain A. A. Cartwright.

LIGHT DIVISION.

33rd Regiment—Lieutenant Henry Thorold.
19th Regiment—Captain James Ker.
77th Regiment—Captain J. Nicholson.
2nd Battalion Rifle Brigade—Lieutenant L. W. Malcolm.
J. B. BUCKNALL ESTCOURT, Adjutant-General.

Nominal Return of Officers Wounded at the Battle of Inkerman.

November 5, 1854.

Royal Artillery—Lieutenant-Colonel G. Gambier, slightly; Captain and Adjutant J. F. L. Baldeley, severely; Captain G. Tupper, slightly; Captain C. H. Ingilly, severely.

1st DIVISION.

Staff—Major-General H. J. W. Bentinck, slightly; Captain T. H. Clifton, A.D.C., slightly.
3rd Battalion Grenadier Guards—Colonel F. W. Hamilton, slightly; Lieutenant-Colonel R. Bradford, slightly; Lieutenant-Colonel Hon. H. Percy, slightly; Captain A. Tipping, severely; Lieutenant Sir J. Ferguson, Bart., slightly; Lieutenant C. N. Sturt, severely.
1st Battalion Coldstream Guards—Lieutenant-Colonel J. Halkett, severely; Lieutenant-Colonel Lord A. C. L. Fitzroy, severely; Colonel Hon. G. Upton, slightly; Captain Hon. P. Fielding, severely; Lieutenant Hon. W. A. Amherst, severely.
3rd Battalion Scots Fusilier Guards—Colonel E. W. F. Walker, severely; Lieutenant-Colonel Francis Seymour, slightly; Captain G. T. F. Shackburgh, severely; Captain R. Gipsy, severely; Captain F. Baring, slightly; Lieutenant S. J. Blane, slightly; Captain and Adjutant H. Drummond, severely; Assistant-Surgeon A. G. Ellington, slightly.

2ND DIVISION.

Staff—Brigadier-General H. W. Adams, severely; Captain S. Gubbins, A.D.C., severely; Captain C. Adams, A.D.C., slightly; Captain A. McDonald, A.D.C., slightly; Captain F. P. Harding, A.D.C., severely.

30th Regiment—Major J. T. Mauleverer, severely; Captain J. Rose, severely; Captain G. Dickson, slightly; Captain P. Bayley, severely; Lieutenant J. D. Ross Lewin, dangerously.
41st Regiment—Captain H. W. Meredith, slightly; Captain Hugh Rowlands, slightly; Captain F. C. Bligh, slightly; Lieutenant H. S. Bush, severely; Lieutenant G. R. Fitzroy, severely; Lieutenant and Adjutant W. Johnston, slightly.
47th Regiment—Lieutenant-Colonel W. O'G. Haly, severely; Ensign G. Waddilove, slightly.

55th Regiment—Lieutenant-Colonel C. Warren, C.R., severely; Brevet-Colonel H. C. B. Daubeny, slightly; Lieutenant J. R. Hume, severely; Lieutenant W. Barston, severely; Lieutenant G. A. Morgan, slightly.

95th Regiment—Major J. G. Champion, dangerously; Major H. Hume, slightly; Captain G. C. Vials, slightly; Lieutenant A. J. J. McDonald, dangerously.

3RD DIVISION.

50th Regiment—Captain H. J. Frumpton, slightly.

4th DIVISION.

Staff—Brigadier-General H. W. Torrens, severely; Brevet-Major C. L. B. Maitland, D.A.A.G., severely; Lieut. H. D. Torrens, A.D.C., slightly.

20th Regiment—Colonel P. Horn, slightly; Brevet-Lieutenant-Colonel H. D. Crofton, severely; Brevet-Major J. B. Sharpe, severely; Captain W. T. Wood, slightly; Captain C. R. Butler, severely; Lieutenant G. Bennett, severely; Lieutenant and Adjutant F. Paddfield, slightly; Ensign L. Kekelick, slightly.

21st Regiment—Lieutenant-Colonel F. G. Ainslie, severely; Captain G. W. Boldero, severely; Lieutenant A. Templeman, slightly; Lieutenant H. King, severely; Lieutenant R. Killeen, slightly; Lieutenant R. Stephens, severely.

57th Regiment—Captain J. F. Bland, dangerously (since dead); Lieutenant G. W. Hague, dangerously; Lieutenant C. Venables, slightly.

63rd Regiment—Captain T. Harries, slightly; Captain C. Fairclough, slightly; Lieutenant T. Johns, slightly; Lieutenant W. H. Newhenham, slightly; Ensign H. T. Tysden, severely; Ensign T. K. Morgan, severely; Lieutenant and Adjutant R. Bennett, severely.

68th Regiment—Lieutenant-Colonel Harry Smith, dangerously; Lieutenant J. Cator, dangerously.

46th Regiment—Captain W. Hardy, severely; Ensign E. H. Heller, slightly.

1st Battalion Rifle Brigade—Major E. Rooper, severely; Lieutenant Coote Buller, slightly; Lieutenant C. S. Flower, slightly.

LIGHT DIVISION.

Staff—Lieutenant-General Sir George Brown, K.C.B., severely.

7th Regiment—Major Sir T. Troubridge, Bart., severely; Captain R. Y. Shipley, severely; Lieutenant H. W. P. Butler, severely; Captain E. H. Rose, slightly; Ensign L. J. F. Jones, slightly.

23rd Regiment—Lieutenant T. F. Vane, slightly; Lieutenant J. Duff, missing.

33rd Regiment—Lieutenant F. Corbett, slightly; Ensign J. Owens, dangerously.

88th Regiment—Captain J. G. Crosse, slightly; Lieutenant H. J. Baynes, severely; Lieutenant-Colonel E. R. Jeffreys, slightly.

2nd Battalion Rifle Brigade—Captain E. Newbridge, slightly.

Royal Marines—Captain W. H. March.

J. B. BUCKNALL ESTCOURT, Adjutant-General.

Return of Casualties from 2nd to 6th November, inclusive.

Royal Artillery—2 rank and file killed; 1 officer, Lieutenant Adams (slightly); 2 rank and file wounded.

4th Regiment—1 rank and file wounded.

28th Regiment—1 rank and file wounded.

23rd Regiment—1 rank and file wounded.

33rd Regiment—3 rank and file wounded.

38th Regiment—4 rank and file wounded.

41st Regiment—1 rank and file wounded.

2nd Battalion Rifle Brigade—1 rank and file killed; 1 sergeant, 3 rank and file wounded.

Total Casualties on the 5th—Separate Return.

43 officers, 32 sergeants, 1 drummer, 380 rank and file, killed; 102 officers, 121 sergeants, 17 drummers, 1,694 rank and file, wounded; 1 officer, 6 sergeants, 191 rank and file, missing.

Total—43 officers, 32 sergeants, 4 drummers, 383 rank and file, killed; 103 officers, 122 sergeants, 17 drummers, 1,710 rank and file, wounded; 1 officer, 6 sergeants, 191 rank and file, missing.

Killed 462

Wounded 1652

Missing 191

Total 2619

J. B. BUCKNALL ESTCOURT, Adjutant-General.

A Return of the Wounded in the Naval Brigade on the 2nd and 3rd of November, 1854.

November 2, 1854.

Richard Webb, ordinary, Trafalgar, slightly 1
 November 3, 1854.
 Mr. Philip Brock, mate, Britannia, slightly; Mr. Spalding, mate, London, slightly; Thomas Wraai, A.B., Britannia, severely; William Glass, captain forecastle, Athlon, slightly 4
 Total, November 2 and 3, 1854 5
STEPHEN LUSHINGTON,
 Captain Commanding Naval Brigade.
 To the Military Secretary to H. E. Lord Raglan,
 Commander-in-Chief of the Army.

A Return of the Killed and Wounded in the Naval Brigade on the 4th and 5th of November, 1854.

November 4, 1854.

Wounded—John Lloyd, A.B., Vengeance, severely; Mr. Wilson, mate, Vengeance, slightly 1
 Total Wounded 2
 November 5.
 Killed—John Wood, A.B., Athlon 1
 Wounded—Joseph Herd, 2nd mate, Britannia, slightly; James Galloway, A.B., Bolney, severely; William Trout, A.B., Vengeance, dangerously; Frederick Mackie, ordinary, London, dangerously; James Brien, A.B., Bodney, slightly 5
 Total killed, November 1 and 5, 1854 7
STEPHEN LUSHINGTON,
 Captain Commanding Naval Brigade.
 The Military Secretary to H. E. Lord Raglan,
 Commander-in-Chief of the Army.

A Return of the Wounded in the Naval Brigade on the 6th of November, 1854.

Mr. Selby, mate, Diamond, slightly; James Berry, A.B., Trafalgar, slightly 2
 Total Wounded 2
STEPHEN LUSHINGTON,
 Captain Commanding Naval Brigade.
 To the Military Secretary to H. E. Lord Raglan,
 Commander-in-Chief of the Army.

THE LOSS OF THE GUARDS AT THE BATTLE OF INKERMEN.

The following list of the killed and wounded of the 3rd battalion of Grenadier Guards, and the 1st battalion of the Scots Fusiliers, at the battle of Inkerman, on the 5th inst., has been forwarded by the commanding officers:—
THIRD BATTALION GRENADIER GUARDS.

OFFICERS.

Killed—Lieutenant-Colonel Edward Pakenham, Captain the Hon. H. Neville, and Captain Sir Robert Newman, Bart.
 Wounded—Colonel Frederick Hamilton, Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. H. Percy, Lieutenant-Colonel R. Bradford, Captain A. Tipping, Lieutenant Sir James Ferguson, Bart., and Lieutenant Cameron N. Sturt.

SEMGANTS.

Killed—John Algar, Reuben Cook, Richard Paridinson, and John Cowell.

Wounded—Richard Minor, James Hughes, Thomas Dawson, William Walker, James Keeling, and Thomas Rushent.

COMPORALS.

Killed—George Barton, Peter Medlicott, Henry Lomax, and John B. Davey.

Wounded—James Lee, Alfred Evans, Robert Cowen, James Clark, Frederick Yates, William Bowers, John Wadsworth, Thomas Horsman, John Swinburn, John Horspool, and Benjamin Owen.

FIRST BATTALION SCOTS FUSILIER GUARDS.

Colonel E. W. F. Walker, slightly wounded; gunshot wound in chin, confusion of foot, and horse shot under him.
 Lieutenant-Colonel J. H. Blair, mortally wounded; gunshot wound of abdomen; dead.
 Lieutenant-Colonel Francis Seymour, slightly wounded; gunshot wound of hand.
 Captain Reginald Gipps, severely wounded; gunshot wound of neck.
 Captain Francis Baring, slightly wounded; confusion of head and arm.

Captain G. T. F. Shuckburgh, severely wounded; gunshot wound of leg.
 Lieutenant S. J. Blane, slightly wounded; confusion of chest and arm.
 Adjutant and Captain H. F. Drummond, severely wounded; gunshot wound through breast.

Assistant-Surgeon A. G. Elkington, slightly wounded; confusion of leg.
 The Royal Albert, 121, Captain Sir Thomas Pasley, had her crew completed to working complement by a heavy draught from the Prince Regent at Portsmouth on Thursday, and the crew received advance wages. Yesterday (Friday) she embarked 730 officers and men of the several battalions of Guards, 488 officers and men of the 77th Regiment, 8 officers of Royal Engineers, and 120 Sappers and Miners, making a total of 1,346 troops, with whom she will leave on Sunday for the Crimea.

PRIVATE ACCOUNTS OF THE BATTLE OF INKERMEN.

THE NIGHT BEFORE THE ATTACK.

Does any one at home know the misery of trying to write in a windy tent, with the thermometer at thirty-six degrees, and a tallow candle, with the dust flying in clouds and the canvass flapping about like the sails of a ship, no fire, and no chance of one? If so, he at least will excuse a little gloominess in the tone of one's correspondence under such circumstances. On "Guy Fawkes' Day" the fog and vapours of drifting rain were so thick as morning broke that one could scarcely see two yards before him. At four o'clock the bells of the churches in Sebastopol were heard ringing drearily through the cold night air, but the occurrence has been so usual it excited no particular attention. During the night, however, a sharp-eyed sergeant on an outlying picket of the Light Division heard the sound of wheels in the valley below, as though they were approaching the position up the hill. He reported the circumstance to Major Bannbury, but it was supposed that the sound arose from ammunition-carts or arabas going into Sebastopol by the Inkerman road. No one suspected for a moment that enormous masses of Russians were creeping up the rugged sides of the heights over the valley of Inkerman, on the undefended flank of the Second Division. There all was security and repose. Little did the slumbering troops in camp imagine that a subtle and indefatigable enemy were bringing into position an overwhelming artillery, ready to play upon their tents at the first glimpse of daylight on the 5th.

THE ATTACK.

It was a little after five o'clock, on the morning of the 5th, when Brigadier-General Codrington, in accordance with his usual habit, visited the outlying pickets of his own brigade of the Light Division. It was reported to him that "all was well," and the general entered into some conversation with Captain Pretynna, of the 33rd Regiment, who was on duty on the ground; in the course of which it was remarked that it would not be at all surprising if the Russians avoided themselves of the gloom of the morning to make an attack on our position, calculating on the effects of the rain in diminishing our vigilance and spoiling our weapons. The brigadier, who has proved a most excellent, cool, and brave officer, turned his pony round at last, and retraced his steps through the brushwood towards his lines. He had only proceeded a few paces when a sharp rattle of musketry was heard down the hill and on the left of the pickets of the Light Division. It was here that the pickets of the Second Division were stationed. General Codrington at once turned his horse's head in the direction of the firing, and in a few moments galloped back to turn out his division. The Russians were advancing in force upon us! Their gray grenadiers rendered them almost invisible, even when close at hand. The pickets of the Second Division had scarcely made out the advancing lines of infantry, who were clambering up the steep sides of the hill through a drizzling shower of rain, ere they were forced to retreat by a close sharp volley of musketry, and were driven up towards the brow of the hill, contesting every step of it, and firing as long as they had a round of ammunition, on the Russian advance. The pickets of the Light Division were assailed soon afterwards, and were also obliged to retreat and fall back on their main body, and it was evident that a very strong sortie had been made upon the right of the position of the allied armies, with the object of forcing them to raise the siege, and, if possible, of driving them into the sea.

CHARACTER OF THE STRUGGLE.

And now commenced the bloodiest struggle ever witnessed since war cursed the earth. It has been doubted by military historians if any enemy have ever stood a charge with the bayonet, but here the bayonet was often the only weapon employed in conflicts of the most obstinate and deadly character. We have been prone to believe that no foe could ever withstand the British soldier wielding his favourite weapon, and that at Malta alone did the enemy ever cross bayonets with him; but at the battle of Inkerman not only did we charge in vain—not only were desperate encounters between masses of men maintained with the bayonet alone—but we were obliged to resist, bayonet to bayonet, the Russian infantry again and again, as they charged us with incredible fury and determination. The Battle of Inkerman admits of no description. It was a series of dreadful deeds of daring, of sanguinary hand-to-hand fights, of despairing rallies, of desperate assaults—in gullies and valleys, in brushwood glades and remote dells, hidden from all human eyes, and from which the conquerors, Russian or British, issued only to engage fresh foes, till our old supremacy, so rudely assailed, was triumphantly asserted, and the battalions of the Czar gave way before our steady courage, and the chivalrous fire of France. No one, however placed, could have witnessed even a small portion of the doings of this eventful day—for the vapours, fog, and drizzling mist, obscured the ground where the struggle took place to such an extent as to render it impossible to see what was going on at the distance of a few yards. Besides this, the irregular nature of the ground, the rapid fall of the hill towards Inkerman, where the deadliest fight took place, would have prevented one under the most formidable circumstances seeing more than a very insignificant and detailed piece of the terrible work below.

LORD RAGLAN'S ARRIVAL.

It was six o'clock when all the head-quarter camp was roused by roll after roll of musketry on the right, and by the sharp report of field-guns. Lord Raglan was informed that the enemy were advancing in force, and soon after seven o'clock he rode towards the scene of action, followed by his staff, and accompanied by Sir George Burgynne, Brigadier-General Strangways, R.A., and several aides-de-camp. As they approached, the volume of sound—the steady, unceasing thunder of gun, and rifle, and musket—told that the engagement was at its height. The shells of the Russians, thrown with great precision, burst so thickly among the troops, that the noise resembled continuous discharges of cannon, and the massive fragments inflicted death on every side. One of the first things the Russians did, when a break in the fog enabled them to see the camp of the Second Division, was to open fire on the tents with round shot and large shell; and tent after tent was blown down, torn to pieces, or sent into the air, while the men engaged in camp duties, and the unhappy horses tethered up in the lines, were killed or mutilated. Colonel Gambier was at once ordered to get up two heavy guns (18-pounders) on the rising ground, and to reply to a fire which our light guns were utterly inadequate to meet. As he was engaged in this duty, and was exerting himself with Captain Daguiar to urge them forward, Colonel Gambier was severely but not dangerously wounded, and was obliged to retire. His place was taken by Lieutenant-Colonel Dickson; and the conduct of this officer in directing the fire of those two pieces, which had the most marked effect in deciding the fate of the day, was such as to elicit the admiration of the army, and to deserve the thanks of every man engaged in the bloody fray. But long ere these guns had been brought up there had been a great slaughter of the enemy, and a heavy loss of our own men. Our generals could not see where to go. They could not tell where the enemy were—from what side they were coming, and where going to. In darkness, gloom, and rain, they had to lead our lines through thick scrubby bushes and thorny brakes, which broke our ranks and irritated our men, while every pace was marked by a corpse or man wounded from an enemy whose position was only indicated by the rattle of musketry and the rush of ball and shell.

DEATH OF SIR GEORGE CATHCART.

Sir George Cathcart, seeing his men disordered by the fire of a large column of Russian infantry which was outflanking them, while portions of the various regiments composing his division were maintaining an unequal struggle with an overwhelming force, rode down into the ravine in which they are engaged, to rally them. He perceived at the same time that the Russians had actually gained possession of a portion of the hill in rear of one flank of his division; but still his stout heart never failed him for a moment. He rode at their head, encouraging them; and when a cry arose that the ammunition was failing, he said coolly, "Have you not got your bayonets?" As he led on his men it was observed that another body of men had gained the top of the hill behind them on the right, but it was impossible to tell whether they were friends or foes. A deadly volley was poured into our scattered regiments. Sir George cheered them and led them back up the hill, but a flight of bullets passed where he rode, and he fell from his horse close to the Russian columns. The men had to fight their way through a host of enemies, and lost fearfully. They were surrounded and bayoneted on all sides, and won their desperate way up the hill, with diminished ranks, and the loss of near 500 men. Sir George Cathcart's body was afterwards recovered, with a bullet wound in the head and three bayonet wounds in the body. In this struggle, where the Russians fought with the greatest ferocity, and bayoneted the wounded as they fell, Colonel Swyny, of the 63d, a most gallant officer; Lieutenant Dowling, 20th; Major Wynne, 68th; and other officers whose names will be found in the Gazette, met their death; and Brigadier Goldie (of the 57th Regiment) received the wounds of which he has since died. The conflict on the right was equally uncertain and equally bloody. In the Light Division, the 88th got so far into the front that they were surrounded and put into utter confusion; when four companies of the 77th, under Major Stratton, charged the Russians, broke them, and relieved their comrades.

EXTRAORDINARY "PLUCK" OF THE GUARDS.

The fight had not long commenced ere it was evident that the Russians had received orders to fire at all mounted officers. Sir George Brown was struck by a shot, which went through his arm and struck his side. I saw with regret his pale and sternly-composed face, as his body was borne by me on a litter early in the day, his white hair flickering in the breeze, for I knew we had lost the services of a good soldier that day. Further to the right a contest, the like of which, perhaps, never took place before, was going on between the Guards and dense columns of Russian infantry of five times their number. The Guards had charged them, and driven them back, when they perceived that the Russians had outflanked them. They were out of ammunition, too. They were uncertain whether there were friends or foes in the rear. They had no support, no reserve, and they were fighting with the bayonet, against an enemy who stoutly contested every inch of ground, when the corps of another Russian column appeared on their right, far in their rear. Then a fearful mitraille was poured into them, and volleys of rifle and musketry. The Guards were broken; they had left twelve officers dead in the field; they had left one-half of their number upon the ground, and they retired along the lower road of the valley. But they were soon reinforced, and they speedily avenged their loss.

HEROIC DEATH OF GENERAL STRANGWAYS.

About half-past nine o'clock Lord Raglan and his staff were assembled on a knoll, in the vain hope of getting a glimpse of the battle which was raging below them. Here General Strangways was mortally wounded, and I am told that he met his death in the following way:—A shell came right in among the staff; it exploded in Captain Somerset's horse, ripping him open; a portion of the shell tore off the leather overalls of Captain Somerset's trousers, it then struck down Captain Gordon's horse and killed him at once, and then blew away General Strangways's leg, so that it hung by a shred of flesh and a bit of cloth from the skin. The poor old general never moved a muscle of his face. He said merely, in a gentle voice, "Will any one be kind enough to lift me off my horse?" He was taken down and laid on the ground, while his life blood ebbed fast, and at last he was carried to the rear. But the gallant old man had not sufficient strength to undergo an operation, and in two hours he had sunk to rest, leaving behind him a memory which will ever be held dear by every officer and man of the army.

THE RENEWED ASSAULT.

The Russians left mounds of dead behind them. Long ere they had the Chasseurs d'Afrique charged them most bravely over the ground, difficult and broken as it was, and inflicted great loss on them, while the effect of this rapid attack, aided by the advance of our troops, secured our guns, which were only spiked with wood, and were soon rendered fit for service. Our own cavalry, the remnant of the Light Brigade, were moved into a position where it was hoped they might be of service; but they were too few to attempt anything, and while they were drawn up they lost several horses and some men. One officer, Cornet Cleveland, was struck by a piece of shell in the side, and has since expired. There are now only two officers left with the fragment of the 17th Lancers—Captain Geoffrey Morgan and Cornet George Wambwell. At twelve o'clock the battle of Inkerman seemed to have been won; but the day, which had cleared up for an hour previously so as to enable us to see the enemy and meet him, again became obscured. Rain and fog set in; and as we could not pursue the Russians, who were retiring under the shelter of their artillery, we had formed in front of our lines and were holding the battle-field so stoutly contested, when the enemy, taking advantage of our quietude, again advanced, while their guns pushed forward and opened a tremendous fire upon us. General Canrobert, who never quitted Lord Raglan for much of the early part of the day, at once directed the French to advance and outflank the enemy. In his efforts he was most ably seconded by General Barquet, whose devotion was noble. Nearly all his mounted escort were down beside and behind him. General Canrobert was slightly wounded. His immediate attendants suffered severely. The renewed assault was so admirably repulsed that the Russians utterly retired, still protected by their crushing artillery.

A SORTIE.

At one o'clock the Russians were again retiring. At 1.40 Dickson's two guns smashed their artillery, and they limbered up, leaving five tumbrils and one gun-carriage on the field.

The Russians, about ten, made a sortie on the French lines, and traversed two parallels before they could be resisted. They were driven back at last with great loss; and as they retired they blew up some mines inside the Flagstaff Fort, evidently afraid that the French would enter pell-mell after them.

COUNCIL OF WAR.

Nov. 6.—Two hundred Russian prisoners were brought in last night to head-quarters camp. They were badly wounded many of them, and several died during the night. A council was held to-day at Lord Raglan's, where General Canrobert, General Barquet, and Sir E. Lyons assisted, which lasted several hours. At four o'clock Lord Raglan attended the funeral of General Sir G. Cathcart, of Brigadier Goldie, and of General Strangways. They were buried, with eleven other officers, on Cathcart's hill. At the same time fourteen officers of the Guards were buried together near the windmill. The work of burying the dead and carrying the wounded to Balaklava occupied the day. The Russians are quiet. We hear they have lost 10,000 men and three generals.

Another council of war was held to-day, November 7, at the close of which the Duke of Cambridge left for Balaklava, and went on board the Camden. His Royal Highness is, it is said, going to Constantinople. It is said we wait here all the winter. The 46th Regiment have arrived here, also 1,700 Turks from Volo, and 2,800 French. The Russians fired on our landing parties. There was an alarm last night. The Fourth Division were under arms all night, and a portion of the Second Division.

BARBAROUS CRUELTY OF THE RUSSIANS.

The enemy behaved with barbarous cruelty to our wounded; every fallen man was bayoneted. One English officer was wounded slightly, but unable to leave the spot with his men, they retired for a while overwhelmed. When our troops recovered the ground, they found the poor fellow stabbed all over and strangled! One Russian officer was seen to halt and limp about the field; he had been wounded, but he, too, was stabbing the fallen with his sword. An orderly of the Duke of Cambridge went up to him and took him prisoner, and his Royal Highness was heard to promise the wretch that he would do his best to have him shot for his inhumanity. It is to be feared that this Russian barbarity provoked our men to give no quarter. The enemy would throw down their arms, and, calling themselves Christians, beg for mercy; and if they were spared, they would yet take their muskets and shoot the man who had saved them. Therefore, the French Zouaves took no prisoners. A French officer was told that the conduct of his men was the theme of our soldiers' enthusiastic praises. They had not only been signalling themselves, on the 5th, by their gallantry in the field, and by the admirable manner in which they had been handled, but they had outshone all by the kindness, courtesy, and attention to our wounded in the evening. The French officer's reply was, "Ah, but your men stood like a wall;" and, turning to his neighbour, he paid us the compliment, "It was, perhaps, as well that the English had to bear the first shock."

A FRIEND IN NEED.

One gallant incident needs a record in the description of this day. A sergeant of our 33d or 30th Regiment was left alone for a short while in advance somehow. Colonel Herbert had noticed his daring, and told him to come to him in the evening. He was alone, and five Russians were on him. He shot one, bayoneted another, and fell before the attack of the other three. They had given him five wounds, when he felt a horse's hoof near his head. The Russians fled; he jumped up as he could, and in a moment found himself dragged up on the horse, and being carried to the rear for some 200 yards. When in safety, the officer took hold of the sergeant's hand and kissed it, left him, and returned to the front. That sergeant would give a great deal to know who that general officer was. With such incidents, can you be surprised at our men being in enthusiasm about the French?

DARING OF A RUSSIAN SPY.

A strange incident is said to have taken place in our lines, which, if true, shows the astuteness of the enemy, and the want of presence of mind on the part of some of our officers. A man in the uniform of a French officer sauntered coolly through our lines to-day; was civil and polite to all he met, entered into conversation with those who were walking about; smoked, and chatted, and laughed; and at last got into a sort of discussion respecting the strength and weakness of our position in the rear towards Balaklava. Nothing doubting, our officers expressed their opinions freely, pointed out our weak points, and spoke plainly of the difficulties of our position. At length an officer of the 79th, who had a more practised ear than his comrades, was struck by the strange accent and curious idiom of the soi-disant Frenchman, which in any one but a Frenchman would have excited no suspicion; but still he was afraid of making a mistake, and had no device ready at hand to test the truth. However, he sent off to Sir Colin Campbell to say he suspected there was a Russian spy among them. The supposed Frenchman was not to be caught so easily. His quick eye detected the despatch of the messenger, and so he gradually drew off from our lines towards the valley, but in a manner so natural as to perplex those to whom the officer had communicated his misgivings; and when he had gained a good offing, he quickened his pace into a run, and got right away into the Russian lines, leaving his late comrades gazing open-mouthed after him! It argued no common coolness and audacity to undertake such a mission; for had the gentleman in question been captured, he would assuredly have been hanged as a spy. The French executed speedily justice the other day on a spy whom they found disguised as a Tartar arabjee within their lines, and shot him as soon as they had found out all they could from him. But these Russians are very rascals. The sentinel before the house of the Post-Marshal in Balaklava was astonished to see a horse, with a sack of corn on its back, deliberately walking past him in the moonlight the other night. He went over to seize the animal, when the sack of corn suddenly became changed into a full-grown Cossack, who drove the spurs into his steed, and had vanquished ere the sentry had recovered his speech.

REINFORCEMENTS AND STORES FOR LORD RAGLAN.

It would appear that it has been resolved that the troops in the Crimea shall winter there, as wooden barracks for 20,000 men are ordered to be constructed and sent out, like the parts of a steam-engine, all numbered, jointed, and ready for erection. A builder at Portsmouth has contracted for the erection of these barracks, and has engaged to complete them ready for shipment by about the end of next week.

FOUR MILLIONS of Minié rifle ball-cartridges were forwarded from the Royal Arsenal, Woolwich, yesterday week for use in the Crimea.

THERE are now four companies of Royal Artillery under orders to embark immediately for the Crimea.

THE MANILLA screw steam-transport has arrived at Woolwich, to take on board a large supply of powder, shot, and shell, and is ordered to proceed with the least possible delay to the seat of war in the Crimea.

THE HOLYROOD, No. 77, screw-steam transport, is also ordered to have her cargo put on board for the same destination.

THE CHARITY screw steam-transport is ordered to be fitted at Deptford for the conveyance of troops to the Crimea.

ON MONDAY a detachment of the Royal Artillery, escorting four gunbatteries, arrived at the Tower to receive stores for the companies of artillery and field batteries from Norwich and Ipswich under orders for the Crimea. They took away tents, canteens, and other essentials necessary for field service; the novelty attracted a numerous assemblage of the populace, who greeted the escort most enthusiastically as it passed over Tower-hill on its return to Woolwich.

LIVERPOOL.—On Friday morning, the 17th inst., a company of the Royal Artillery (150 rank and file, with five officers), under the command of Captain Broughton, arrived in Liverpool from Woolwich. They were billeted in the town during the night, and on Saturday morning they paraded on the Exchange area, previously to embarking in the British and North American mail steam-ship Europa, then lying in the Huskisson dock. On Saturday afternoon a detachment of infantry, consisting of about 100 men, arrived at Liverpool from London. They proceeded immediately to the Europa, which took her departure the same evening for Kingstown, where she embarked the 90th Regiment, 850 strong, and detachments from other regiments. The Europa will thus convey about 1,080 troops to the Crimea in the best possible condition. The large paddlewheel steamer Niagara, also belonging to the Cunard line, and which conveyed the Connaught Rangers to the seat of war, has been again taken up by Government for the conveyance of troops to the Crimea.

DUBLIN BAY.—At half-past six o'clock on Sunday morning the Europa steamer arrived quite unexpectedly in Kingstown harbour for the conveyance to the seat of war of the 90th (Perthshire) Light Infantry, which has been stationed in Dublin for the last two years. Orders were immediately forwarded to the regiment to parade at half-past ten, and to be in readiness to march at twelve o'clock. Shortly before that hour the regiment was drawn up in line, when Colonel Eld, the veteran commander of the regiment, came in front, and was received with due military honours. At this moment the troops of the Cambridgeshire Militia, now in garrison, under the command of the Hon. Colonel Duncan, passed through the Barrack-yard on their way back from divine service. When the militia troops came in front of the gallant 90th they halted and formed into line, when they gave three hearty cheers for the brave defenders of their country. The cheers were returned in right hearty style by the men of the 90th, and echoed by the dense crowds outside. Precisely as the clock struck twelve the 90th left the Royal Barracks, and proceeded along the north side of the quays, accompanied, as would have been imagined, by the whole of the working population of the Irish capital. Being a holiday, the enthusiastic mob determined to do full honour to the gallant fellows who are about to share in the dangers and glories of their comrades in the East, and certainly they kept their word, for rarely, if ever, did the streets of Dublin, on a Sunday at least, resound with such tumultuous cheers as those which bade farewell to the last infantry corps of the line but one that remained of the once formidable "Irish Establishment," amounting occasionally to one-third of the whole disposable land force of Great Britain. A special train was in readiness at Westmoreland-row station, consisting of thirty-one carriages, drawn by two engines, in which the troops were conveyed to Kingstown. The steam transport was hauled alongside the Wolf bulk in waiting to receive them, and a large assemblage of spectators was collected. Everything being embarked, the Europa was hauled off from the bulk to an anchor a short distance out, amid renewed cheers, mingled with the lamentations of many poor women who could not restrain their grief at their parting with husbands, sons, or brothers in the ranks. The 90th embarked 860 bayonets. A detachment of about 150 of the regiment remain in the barracks under the command of Captains Grove, Vaughan, Furlong, Lieutenant Close, and Ensign Raitt.

CORK HARBOUR.—The Cleopatra transport, which left Queenstown on Saturday, bound for the Crimea, carried two bales of old linen, the donation of the ladies of Cork and its vicinity, for the use of the wounded in the Crimea. This is in addition to four bales already dispatched by the Jura. It was Ensign Francis Sanderson who embarked in the Cleopatra in charge of the draught of the 68th Light Infantry and not Lieutenant Trent, as has been stated.

MISCELLANEOUS ANECDOTES, INCIDENTS, AND MEMORANDA.

MANY A LIFE which fell a sacrifice to Russian brutality during the hard-fought field of Inkerman would have been saved had they been taken off the ground when they fell, or soon after. One officer had his leg dreadfully shattered by a shell. The surgeon had time only to put on a tourniquet, to prevent his bleeding to death, and left him to attend to others. Another had his arm badly wounded, but not seriously. The Russians shortly after drove the Allies back, and on regaining the ground the one had the tourniquet taken off, and bled to death; the other was covered with bayonet wounds, and quite dead. These might have been saved had the ambulance corps done their duty.

THE PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY'S ship Nubia, Captain H. Harris, Hon. Company's service, arrived at Southampton on Thursday morning, bringing the East India, China, and Mediterranean mails. Among the eighty-one passengers brought by the Nubia are his Serene Highness Prince Leiningen, Major Steward, Major Briggs, Captain Bernard, Captain Burgoyne (wounded in the Crimea), Dr. Fleming, &c. The Nubia saw a large steam-ship approaching Malta harbour from the eastward, supposed to be the Orinoco. The Nubia is to be immediately prepared for the transport service, and will leave for Toulon as soon as she can be got ready for sea.

THE RUSSIANS were 60,000 strong at Inkerman. As our brave fellows pushed on, one man told us, "Why, every bush seemed alive with them; they was as thick as the leaves on 'em." But when the mist cleared off, and our men could better see their own and the enemy's position, it was evident the Allies were but a handful of men keeping thousands at bay at the point of the bayonet. Staff-officers were seen galloping about for assistance. The Guards early threw themselves upon the advancing columns, and helped to stem the torrent manfully, with the Duke of Cambridge at their head, but they lost an untold number; how great their loss was may be gathered from their burying eight officers (the Coldstreamers) in one grave; and the same number wounded of the Fusiliers. The sergeant who gave the names of the killed could not keep from tears. The 58th Regiment sent out five companies in advance, and are said to have come back with but seventy untouched, out of 350 men. Inquiries after particular regiments, of the wounded belonging to them, and how they came off, especially in the Second and First Divisions, were only met with the answers, "No one knows the exact numbers," "We are fearfully cut up," "We have suffered dreadfully," "There has been an awful loss." There can be no doubt that the Russians poured three torrents of men upon us, and that it was a desperate attempt by the army which had reached there but the day before from Odessa or the Danube, and commanded by the Grand Duke Nicholas, to raise the siege. Lord Raglan is said to have considered himself attacked by fully 60,000 men.

NOTHING HAS BEEN HEARD of the two assistant-storekeepers of the commissariat department, supposed to have been taken prisoners. The wounded officers of the Heavy Brigade are all doing well. They are the Hon. Colonel Neville, 5th Dragoon Guards, lance wound; Colonel Yorke, 1st Royals, fractured leg; Cornet D. Prendergast (slightly), Scots Greys; Captain Campbell, slightly. The officers wounded in the affair of the 26th, were—Captains Acherley and Bayly, 30th; Lieut. J. A. Conolly (severely), 49th Ensign Cahill (slightly), 49th; Lieutenant Harriot, 41st. The pickets which were so well handled that day were under the command of Major Eman, 41st Regiment. Many bottles full of spirits were picked up on the ground which had been occupied by the Russians.

AT INKERMEN the mist prevented our men, who, of course, had no time to take off the grey great-coats in which they had been surprised in the morning, from easily distinguishing friend from foe, and the ammunition of some regiments was so reduced in the course of the contest that latterly some of the Grenadiers were seen hurling stones at their antagonists.

GENERAL CANROBERT estimates the total loss of the enemy in killed, wounded, and prisoners, at 10,000. There could not have been less than 4,000 killed, and we took a very large number of prisoners. The prisoners all agree in making out that their force outside the walls of Sebastopol numbered from 50,000 to 60,000; and this force is said to have been part of the army of Silistria, which had arrived only the day before. The English available force amounted to about 11,000, though the numbers actually engaged did not exceed 8,000. The French, who supported us, may have brought 6,000. They came up most gallantly, and at a very opportune moment. Our loss was very heavy, greatly exceeding that at the Alma; indeed, there is no comparison between the two battles, one having barely lasted three hours; the other a good nine hours, without intermission.

THE STATEMENT OF A DESERTER from the 19th Regiment having gone over to the enemy is true; and, further, two men have deserted from the Royal Artillery. It must be added, as giving some colourable pretext for such baseness, that all these men had been flogged the day before for various offences. Their subsequent conduct shows they deserved the punishment. Indeed, there is a good deal of punishment inflicted, but it is principally for the grave offence of being asleep when on duty.

THERE IS A GREAT DEMAND FOR WINTER CLOTHING just now. The sales of the deceased officers' effects are scenes of warm competition for old rugs, greatcoats, cloaks, and horse-clothing. A tattered rug fetches 45s. or 50s., a pot of meat 15s., an india-rubber tub £5., a sponge £1. 5s., a half-worn-out old curriecomb and brush may be seen handed over, after a warm contest for 20s. Officers perhaps do not know what to do with their money.

IT IS BELIEVED that the allied troops will winter in the Crimea. Every preparation is making for keeping them housed as comfortably as possible under the circumstances. Wooden huts are to be sent out, and everything done to enable them to keep out the cold. Stone is in such plenty on the ground occupied by the troops that they can easily construct small huts of stone, with the tents they now use for roofs, and so constructed, fires can be made, and heat kept up to any degree they may want.

NOVEMBER 7TH.—The remainder of the wounded Russians are being fast brought in, and the dead buried. The dead horses are being dragged to a distance from the camp, for there are neither hands nor time to bury them. The dead men are being piled up in arabas and drawn down to the valleys, where great holes are being dug to receive them.

GENERAL STRANGWAYS was struck in the leg by a round shot, and not, as reported, by a piece of shell. The leg was completely crushed, and the poor old General expired under the shock. His last words were, "I die at least a soldier's death." His remains lie next to those of Sir G. Cathcart. Poor General Fox Strangways was killed by a cannon ball, which, after passing through the horse of Captain Paulet Somerset, carried off his leg. He was at the time close behind Lord Raglan, and fell from his horse into the arms of General Estcourt, who had accompanied Lord Raglan to the field. General Strangways was immediately removed to the hospital tent near Balaklava. On the way to the rear the gallant officer was perfectly calm, and did not appear to suffer much. He seemed to think more of the feelings of his family than of his own state, and he requested one of his aides-de-camp, who had kindly accompanied him, to write to Mrs. Strangways to say that he was only slightly wounded. The Duke of Cambridge, his aide-de-camp, Major Macdonald, and Lord Balgownie, aide-de-camp to General Bentinck, had horses shot under them.—Globe.

SIR GEORGE BROWN is recovering. There is no truth in the report that the gallant general has had his arm amputated. He was struck on the breast by a musket-ball, which glanced off and passed through his arm. Fortunately, the bone of the arm was not touched, and the wound itself is so slight that the brave old general flattered himself that within a fortnight he would be able once more to resume the command of his beloved Light Division.—Globe.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

FRANCE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, Thursday, Nov. 23.

Feeling on the War.—Lord Palmerston in Paris.—The Fund for the Wounded.—disgraceful meanness of the English Residents.—Example for Lord Cowley.—Mr. Bernal Osborne, M.P.—Remains of Besset.—American Plan: a Floating Island in the Channel.—Retreat of Mdlle. Cruwell.—Raid in the New Piece at the Français.

LORD PALMERSTON has arrived in Paris in a season of unwounded gloom. The loss of life before Sebastopol already known, and, still more, the apprehensions of the greater fatalities which may follow before the fall of the town and its terrible fortress, keep every family in a state of sadness; and the Emperor, with much good feeling, avoids all display of an opposite nature. In the meantime, nothing is left undone to show the estimation in which his Lordship is held by his Majesty and every leading member of the Government. Soon after his arrival on Friday evening, the first visitor announced was the Emperor himself, who came in his private brougham, without attendance or ceremony of any kind, and remained with the noble lord a considerable time. Though the hospitalities due to so eminent a visitor have less of a public character than would have been the case at a more auspicious moment, the personal attentions of their Majesties are unremitting both to his Lordship and Lady Palmerston. Those who have had the honour of approaching him speak in the highest terms of his manner and conversation. Among other qualifications—the highest in the eyes of every Frenchman—his Lordship possesses that of speaking the French language with the most perfect facility; in fact, like a native, an accomplishment, be it remarked, not so common among English statesmen as might be imagined from the now almost universal use of the language. As for the political object of the noble lord's visit, it is supposed, or guessed —(for the knowledge of the public, and even some of the Ministers here, goes no further)—to be, to come to a perfect understanding upon the measures to be taken with regard to the further progress of the war, and the arrangements for carrying it out next year, for which period it is thought that a most important and unexpected blow is contemplated against the heart of the Russian empire—St. Petersburg. Of course this is to be taken only for what it is worth; but the gigantic preparations, silently carried on in all the arsenals of France, lead the observant military men to the positive conclusion that some blow is meditated in that direction.

The English subscription in Paris for the sufferers in the war, and the relatives of the brave men who have fallen, is simply disgraceful. All honour and thanks to the generous few who have subscribed; but the utter heartlessness, and absence of everything like English feeling by the general mass, who are now crowding our hotels, and living in wasteful luxury, and by titled lordlings, wasting their means upon the fantastic extravagances of their mistresses, generally subaltern actresses or figurantes of the Opera, ought to call down public reprobation at home. Some of our countrymen, great sticklers for the "quite correct" system, excuse themselves from coming forward, because the name of the British Ambassador does not appear among the subscribers, forgetting that Lord Cowley has subscribed in England. To put an end to this paltry excuse, and for the benefit of the example, his Excellency might however have added some further donation to aid the cause, like Mr. Bernal Osborne, M.P., the Secretary of the Admiralty, who, with a liberality, impossible to admire, subscribed £25 to this fund in Ireland, explaining that the sum would have been larger, but from his having already paid his subscription to the Patriotic Fund in England; an act of liberality which, en passant, will make many forget Captain Osborne's smart speeches, so full of party spite and party spirit, in the House of Commons, before the awful responsibilities of office imposed silence upon his indiscreet loquacity. Lord Cowley might safely and creditably follow the example of the Hon. Secretary.

In some repairs lately making in the Cathedral of Meaux, the leaden coffin was discovered containing the remains of the celebrated Bossuet, who was bishop of that see. The body of the great French prelate having been embalmed at the period of his death, now a century and a-half ago, much interest was expressed to learn if that operation had sufficed to preserve the remains from the usual ravages of death and time, and the coffin was opened last week, in the presence of a number of the clergy and savants from Paris. The body was found still perfect, and the face so well preserved as to give a striking resemblance to the published portraits. The head leaning a little to the right, with the eyes closed, and the lips a little open, presented the appearance of tranquil sleep. A photographic portrait of the features were taken, by an artist from town, by a process which may perhaps give further progress to the photographic art—the light of the sun, impossible in the gloom of a church, being replaced by the electric light with the most perfect success. After being visited by several hundreds, the coffin was again closed, and, after a solemn mass, the remains were replaced in their resting-place. These funeral honours have not, however, prevented very severe remonstrances being addressed to the present Bishop of Meaux, for having permitted the sanctity of the grave to be thus violated, for the gratification of what must be regarded by many, a vain and idle curiosity.

An extraordinary American invention is just now being submitted to the French Government by two gentlemen from New York, the trial of which, whether it succeed or not, will certainly create much curiosity and interest, both in England and France. It is intended specially for the service of voyageurs between the two countries, which it proposes to unite by a kind of floating bridge, or sea-way, by which the voyageurs may cross the Channel literally upon land, at least, it is so stated by the prospectus. The plan consists in the construction of a gigantic raft, of half a mile in length, and nearly the same in breadth, the foundations being made of the trunks of oak-trees, strongly bound together. The surface is to be covered with earth, and laid out in grounds like a nobleman's park. It is to be provided with a hotel, cafés, billiard-rooms, a library, and, in fine, all kinds of accommodation. The colossal mass is to be moved by steam, and the passenger walks from the shore into splendid grounds laid out with trees, roads, and promenades, the large extent of which will prevent the motion of the water being felt, even in the roughest weather. The travellers may amuse themselves, read, walk, or even ride, if so disposed, precisely as upon land. The great object of the inventor is to get rid of sea-sickness—that fearful enemy of most travellers, of even the shortest distance, by sea. According to the programme, the plan has been tried in severe storms on two of the great American lakes, on a scale little less than that now proposed, and with so much success, that a large capital was at once advanced to carry it into execution on this side of the Atlantic; the principal places at present in view are between Dover and Calais and between England and Ireland, in St. George's Channel. The inventor of this extraordinary plan is provided with ample funds to carry it into effect. The great difficulty which presents itself is the finding of a locus in quo sufficiently extensive to try the experiment. It is hoped, however, by the sanguine speculators, that the "floating-island-bridge" will be constructed and put to the test early in the ensuing spring.

Crivelli's first appearance at the Grand Opera, on Monday night, after her late escapade, attracted a tremendously crowded assemblage, doubtless in the anticipation of a "row." In this the public were disappointed. Her entrée took place without any manifestation more significant than a profound silence. The piece was Les Huguenots, and one of the first phrases addressed to Valentine (Crivelli) by the Queen is—"Potre voyage a-t-il été agréable?" at which there was a general titter, in which the fair fugitive herself could not help joining. She never sang better than on this evening, and the audience, though cold at first, afterwards became enthusiastic in their applause. At this there was some attempt to express dissent; but it was instantly drowned in the redoubled manifestations of the spectators. Strange to say, the opposition was made by hissing, and not by whistling, the French mode of theatrical condemnation—which led to an idea that the malecontents were Englishmen. Be this as it may, the effect was to restore the fair delinquent entirely to the good graces of the public.

The Français has given us Rachel in a new character, this week, in a little one-act sketch of a tragedy, called Rosemonde. The action is laid in the time of the fall of the Roman Empire. The heroine is the Queen of the Gepidae, whose kingdom is ravaged, her husband slain, and herself taken prisoner by Alboin, King of the Lombards. This monster at a great orgie in honour of the victory forces the wretched captive to drink wine out of her own father's skull, which he had had fashioned into a drinking-cup. She drinks, but resolves on vengeance, and incites a conspirator, by promises of her hand and kingdom, to put him to death. The traitor consents. The tyrant reels in, wounded and dying, and, on the threshold, encounters Rosemonde; and here, Rachel's standing with a hump in her hand to watch his agonies and exult over his fall was probably as fine a performance as she has given to the stage. She looked the very demon of vengeance and hate. At his death she swallows poison; but, keeping her promise to the assassin, proceeds with him to the altar, knowing that immediate death will force her from all human vows. This sketch, by M. St. Ybara, author of Virginie, was well received, but is too slight to add either to the reputation of the actress or the author.

HOME NEWS.

THE COURT.

Her Majesty and the other members of the Royal Family are still sojourning at Windsor Castle, which has during the week been visited by a number of distinguished guests, honoured with her Majesty's invitations. Among these have been the Princess Ganymede of Coorg, the Duchess of Kent, the Countess of Gainsborough, Lady Frances Bruce, Lady Caroline Barrington, Baroness de Speth, Sir Charles Wood, Major-General the Hon. Charles Grey, the Hon. Charles Gore, Colonel the Hon. C. B. Phipps, Lieut.-Colonel the Hon. N. and Lady Mary Hood, Sir James Clark, Sir George Couper, Mr. Drummond, and Mr. Glover.

On Monday his Royal Highness Prince Albert went out shooting, attended by Major-General the Hon. Charles Grey, Mr. F. Cavendish, and Captain Du Plat. In the afternoon Lieutenant John O'Reilly (B.) R.N., had the honour of submitting to her Majesty a panoramic sketch of the combined fleets attacking Sebastopol on the 17th ult., and other drawings connected therewith, made by his son, Lieutenant Montagu O'Reilly, of the Retribution steam-frigate.

The Deputy-Judge Advocate-General has had an audience of her Majesty to submit the proceedings of some courts-martial.

On Tuesday the Princess Royal completed her fourteenth year, having been born on the 21st November, 1840. The auspicious event was celebrated with the customary rejoicings. At seven o'clock in the morning the fine band of the Royal Horse Guards marched from the barracks at Spital to the east terrace of Windsor Castle, where they played a serenade under the windows of the private apartments. The bells of the Chapel Royal, St. George, and St. John's Churches, sent forth merry peals early in the morning, and at intervals throughout the day. At noon a royal salute was fired from Belvedere Fort, and was answered from the Royal Adelaide frigate on Virginia Water. At one o'clock, a royal salute was also fired from the Bachelor's Acre by Mr. Pond, the town bombardier, from the corporation ordnance, and in the evening several of the royal tradespeople's houses were illuminated.

Mr. S. C. Hall had the honour on Thursday of submitting to his Royal Highness Prince Albert several fine engravings from pictures at Windsor Castle, Buckingham Palace, and Osborne, about to be published in the "Royal Gallery of Art."

The Countess of Gainsborough and the Hon. Charles Gore have taken their departure.

Lady Churchill has succeeded the Countess of Gainsborough as Lady in Waiting.

The Earl of Listowel and General Sir Frederick Stovin have succeeded Lord Byron and Mr. F. Cavendish as Lord and Groom in Waiting.

FASHIONABLE WORLD.

His Serene Highness Prince Ernest of Leiningen, arrived in London on Thursday afternoon, from Constantinople, and immediately proceeded to Windsor.

The Duke and Duchess of Brabant have left Inspruck to travel in Italy.

Their Excellencies the Duke and Duchess de Guiche, family, and suite, have arrived at Byham House, West Cliff, Brighton, on a visit to Mr. Mackinnon, M.P.

The Duke of Argyll has left London for Roseneath Castle, where the Duchess and her youthful family are at present staying.

The Duke and Duchess of Buccleuch and the Ladies Montagu Scott have left town for Bowhill, his Grace's seat in Selkirkshire, whence they will proceed to Dalkeith Palace for the winter.

The Duke and Duchess of Norfolk remain at Arundel Castle, surrounded by a select family circle.

The Marquis of Granby left town on Saturday, on a continental tour, until Parliament assembles.

The Marquis of Salisbury arrived in town, yesterday, from Hatfield House, Herts.

The Countess (Dowager) of Erroll, and Lady Alice Hay, have arrived at the Countess's apartments, at St. James's Palace, for the winter. The Earl has also arrived in Loudoun, from the Crimea. His Lordship's wounds are progressing favourably.

The Earl and Countess of Derby, and family, are passing the season at Knowsley.

The Earl of Ellesmere has arrived in London, from Worsley Hall, near Manchester.

The Earl of Ellenborough has arrived in London, from Southam House, Gloucestershire.

The Earl of Eglintoun, who arrived in town last week, from Eglintoun Castle, Ayrshire, has left St. James's square, for Paris, in which capital the noble earl purposes to sojourn, until the week before the meeting of Parliament.

Viscount and Viscountess Falkland have left the Clarendon for Skutterskelfe, near Yarm, Yorkshire.

Lady Peel and Miss Peel have returned to Whitehall-gardens, from Captain William Peel's seat in Herts.

Lord Brougham has arrived at his chateau at Cannes, in the south of France, where the noble and learned lord will remain until the meeting of Parliament. Lady Brougham has returned to town, accompanied by Lady Alexander Malet and Miss Malet, from Brougham Hall.

Lady Molesworth left London on Thursday, on a visit to Lord and Lady Ashburton, at the Grange. Sir W. Molesworth remains in town.

Madame Van de Weyer, the wife of the Belgian Minister, gave birth to a daughter on Wednesday, at the residence of the Legation in Portland-place.

Lord Stanley of Alderly arrived in town, on Thursday, from the Grange.

AMUSEMENTS.

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET.—Under the Management of Mr. HUCKSTONE. Great success of the new comedy, THE BALANCE OF COMFORT, which will be performed every evening. Mr. Hudson, the Irish Comedian, also every night.

MONDAY, November 27, ST. PATRICK'S EVE. Characters by Messrs. Hudson, Chippendale, W. Farron, Tibbary, Rogers, Miss Martindale, Mrs. Poynter, With THE BALANCE OF COMFORT. Mrs. Torrington, Miss Reynolds, Mary, Mrs. E. Chaplin; Torrington, Mr. Howe; Pollard, Mr. Rogers; Shee-Cox, Mr. Clark. After which, for this night only, BOX AND CON. Box (his original character) Mr. Huckstone; Cox, Mr. Compton. To conclude with FISH OUT OF WATER.

TUESDAY, PRESENTED AT COURT. Mr. Huckstone, Rochester, Mr. Howe; Charles II. Mr. W. Farron; Montague, Mr. E. Villiers; Alice Franklin, Mrs. Reynolds; Lady Castlemaine, Miss E. Chaplin. Mrs. Myddelton, Miss Martindale. With THE BALANCE OF COMFORT; THE IRISH AMBASSADOR; Sir Patrick O'Leary, Mr. Hudson; and POPPING THE QUESTION.

WEDNESDAY and FRIDAY, ST. PATRICK'S EVE, THE BALANCE OF COMFORT, a farce in which Mr. Huckstone will appear, and FAMILY JARS.

THURSDAY and SATURDAY, PRESENTED AT COURT. THE BALANCE OF COMFORT; REVIEW OF MORE BLUNDERS THAN ONE; Lory, Mr. Hudson; and other Entertainments. Stage Manager, Mr. CHIPPENDALE.

THEATRE ROYAL, ADELPHI.—Under the Management of Mr. R. WEBSTER, Director, Madame CELESTE. Great Success of the Three New Farces—First Appearance this Season of Madame CELESTE and Mr. R. WEBSTER—Last Three Nights of THE SERIOUS FAMILY.

MONDAY 27th, TUESDAY 28th, WEDNESDAY 29th, the celebrated Comedy of THE SERIOUS FAMILY, supported by Messrs. Keeley, Leigh Murray, C. Selby, Parselle, Waye, Mesdames Keeley, Woodgar, Leigh Murray, and Wyndham.

THURSDAY and SATURDAY, MASKS AND FACES, in which Mr. R. Webster and Madame Celeste will make their first Appearance this Season.

FRIDAY, THE GREEN HUSBAND, Maud, Madame Celeste. After the first piece every evening, the New and Original Farce called THE SLOW MAN, in which Messrs. Keeley, Parselle, R. Rouer, G. Lee, Garden, &c.; Mesdames Wyndham, Culbert, and Garden, will appear. To be followed by HONA FIDE TRAVELLERS, by Messrs. Keeley, Paul Bedford, R. Rouer, C. J. Smith, Mesdames Keeley, Garden, Thompson, and Laidlaw. To conclude with the RAILWAY HELL, by Messrs. James Rogers, C. Selby, Garden; Mesdames Wyndham, Stoker, and C. J. Leachner. Stage Manager, Mr. LEIGH MURRAY.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—Under the Management of Madame VESTRIS.

Sole Lessee, Mr. CHARLES MATHEWS, Old Bromley. MONDAY, Nov. 27th, the performance will commence with the comedy, in three acts, by Stingsby Lawrence, Esq., entitled THE GAME OF SPECULATION, in which Mr. Charles Mathews will appear. After which (first time) a new comic drama, entitled A COMICAL COUNTERS. Principal characters by Mr. Charles Mathews, Mr. Basil Baker, and Miss Talbot. To conclude with (first time at this Theatre) the farce, by John Oxenford, Esq., entitled MY FELLOW CLERK.

Box, 5s.; Pit, 2s. 6d. Gallery, 1s. The Box Office, adjoining the Theatre in Wellington-street, open daily from ten till six. Stage Manager, Mr. ROBERT ROXBY.

ROYAL OLYMPIC THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. ALFRED WIGAN.

On Monday and during the Week will be performed the Huplita of THE BRILLIANT SPA. Characters by Messrs. A. Wigan, Emery, F. Robson, Danvers, Clifton, White, Rivers, H. Cooper, Miss Julia St. George, Miss Marston, Mrs. Fitzgibbon, and Mrs. A. Wigan. After which, the Comic Drama of THE FIRST NIGHT. Characters by Messrs. A. Wigan, Leslie, Glanville, H. Cooper; Miss Julia St. George, and Miss E. Ormonde. To conclude with A BLIGHTED BEING. Characters by Messrs. Leslie, H. Cooper, Danvers, F. Robson, and Miss E. Turner.

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. WILLIAM COOKE.

Miraculous Excitement and Unrivalled Attraction! The immense numbers who through this Theatre remain undiminished. The reflection, as to a glass, of EVENTS IN THE CRIMEA, now absorbing the feelings, the interests, the very heart's pulsations of the United Kingdom, produces an effect so electric, that description were vain. The evolutions of 400 auxiliaries, actually engaged on ONE VAST ARENA, all the audience with surprise, wonder, and astonishment.

MONDAY, Nov. 27, and all the week, a Grand Military Spectacle, in twenty acts, by T. H. Storqueler, Esq., called THE BATTLE OF THE ALMA; after which, the celebrated and unique SCENES IN THE ARENA invented and conducted by Mr. William Cooke; to conclude with a grand Entrée, the WILD INDIANS ON THEIR FLEET HORSES, &c. &c. &c.

ROYAL SOHO THEATRE.—An AMATEUR PERFORMANCE, in aid of the PATRIOTIC FUND, will be given at this Theatre on FRIDAY evening, December 1.

The Entertainment will commence with PERFECTION, or THE LADY OF MUNSTER; an ADDRESS, by Mr. Shirley Brooks; followed by THE VINCELLA, to conclude with THE WANDERING MINSTREL. Jean Hugs (with a song, "William and his Dinah") by a well-known Amateur. To commence at eight o'clock. Tickets may be had at Andrews's Library, New Bond-street; and at Limmer's Hotel, corner of Conduit-street. The whole of the proceeds, without any deduction whatever, will go the Patriotic Fund.

PATRON: H. R. H. PRINCE ALBERT.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—Mrs. GLYN will READ the MECHANIC OF VENICE on Tuesday Evening the 27th inst. at Eight, and Macbeth on Thursday Evening the 30th inst. at Eight.

The Celebrated Tyndale Minstrels on Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday Evening at Eight.

Lectures by J. H. Pepper, Esq., on Chemistry.

The next Monday Evening Lecture to the Industrial Classes will be by Mr. Johns, on Applied Mechanics.

Lectures by Dr. Bachofner, on the Polytechnic Gas Fire and Electricity, illustrated by the Hydro-Electric Machine, the most successful Apparatus in the World.

A Splendid Series of Forty-five Cosmographic Views of Italy, and the Costumes of the Inhabitants.

New Dissolving Views of Sebastopol, &c.

On Saturday Evenings the Tyndale Minstrels, and an American Entertainment, illustrated with Dissolving Views by G. Harvey, Esq.

THE DRAMA.

HAYMARKET.

A new petite comedy, from the skilful pen of Mr. Bayle Bernard, was presented at this theatre on Thursday evening, and met with the most complete success. The title of the novelty is the "Balance of Comfort," and the story may be thus related. Mr. and Mrs. Torrington are a young couple who, belonging to neighbouring families, and brought up together from childhood, have married very much as a matter of course, and without any violent passion on either side. They are of opposite tempers; the gentleman is fond of excitement, the lady of quiet; and so, after he has dragged her over half of Europe in search of variety, they agree to separate and live according to their different inclinations. The husband continues his wandering life, while the wife retires to a pretty place in the country to spend her time among her books, her birds, and flowers. At length Torrington returns to England; and his wife's residence being in his way to town, he comes to pay her a passing visit. By this time both, though unconsciously, have begun to tire of their chosen ways of life; she has become weary of her soli-inde, and when her husband arrives has her house full of company, and a couple of admirers to boot—as she has, in order to enjoy freedom and independence, passed for a widow. She introduces him to her guests as her brother; and the situation naturally gives rise to a variety of mistakes and cross purposes. The lady's swains, each of them an oddity in his way, endeavour to get the brother to favour their addresses. His jealousy is excited, and he retaliates by flirting with a young lady of the party. To try his wife, he pretends to have got wounded in a quarrel with one of the gentlemen; his danger revives all her old tenderness, and she passionately declares that she is his wife, to the astonishment of the company and the discomfiture of the innamorato. The conclusion is, that the pair resolve to begin a new and better course of life, and by mutual concession to find the balance of comfort. The effect of the piece was considerably enhanced by the spirited acting of Miss Reynolds and Mr. Howe, who were ably assisted by Miss Chaplin and Messrs. Rogers and Clarke in the less important characters.

ADELPHI.

On Monday evening another new farce, the "Railway Belle" by Mr. Mark Lemon, was presented at this theatre. The heroine is one of the pretty dandies who preside over the refreshment-room of a railway station. Her attractions have not only smitten the heart of the gruff widower, her master, and driven a despairing waiter nearly out of his senses, but have also seduced from his affianced bride the errant attachment of one Sauvel Greenhorne, whose name is the best description of his character. The affections of the young lady incline to John Quick, but interest induces her to listen to the proposals of the station-master. Hence she is cruelly obliterated to the distresses of the frantic waiter, whose absurd extravagances betray his secret and procure his discharge. His place is supplied by Mr. Greenhorn, whose custom it is to hang about the refreshment-room for hours at a time, gazing at the bewitching Julia, and consuming an unlimited number of plates of soup, which, however, he deposits not in his stomach, but in his travelling-bag. Having vainly attempted to screw up his courage to a declaration of love, he eagerly accepts the vacant waiter's place, in order that he may be constantly near the object of his idolatry. Quick returns as a customer, accuses himself by embarrassing the new waiter with contradictory orders, and makes love to the Hebe behind the counter, in spite of all his efforts to the contrary. But Mr. Greenhorn's great trial consists in the arrival of his father-in-law and bride—that is to be. Terrified out of his wits lest he should be discovered in so equivocal a position, he makes the most awkward attempts to wait upon them without showing his face; his clumsy maladroitness being amusingly contrasted with the practised address of John Quick, who has joined the party, but who continually forgets that he is a "gentleman," and impulsively breaks out into little bits of waiting. Having sufficiently terrified his rival by arousing the suspicions of Mr. and Miss Pallone, the clever ex-waiter as successfully allays them—for a consideration; and the only difficulty being thus removed, he is rewarded with Miss Spruce, and Mr. Greenhorne returns to his legitimate flame, Miss Pallone. Miss Wyndham was a captivating Miss Spruce, the railway belle, and sustained the farce throughout with admirable spirit and vivacity. Selby and Rogers were equally humorous in the characters of Greenhorne and Quick, their different styles of acting contrasting strongly, and ensuring the success of the farce.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COURT OF CHANCERY.—NOV. 20.

THORNHILL v. THORNHILL.—DANGER OF COURTING A WARD IN CHANCERY.—In this case the Lord Chancellor said—The question comes before me on motion and a petition. The motion is that George Augustus Hamilton Chichester and Augusta Arabella Countess of Ferrers do stand committed to the Queen's Prison for contempt of the High Court of Chancery, in endeavouring to induce the plaintiff to contract a marriage with Mr. Chichester without the sanction of the court, and as far as relates to Mr. Chichester, in his having clandestinely attempted to remove her from the custody of her guardian. Then there is a petition from Mr. Chichester in the nature of a cross application, in which he prays that the injunction may be dissolved, and a reference to inquire whether any proposed marriage between the petitioner and the plaintiff is a proper marriage, and that he may be at liberty to make proposals for a settlement on that marriage. The result which I have arrived at is, that beyond all possible doubt the charge on which the motion was made to commit Mr. Chichester is established—that he did endeavour, in the first instance, to persuade the young lady to form an attachment for him; and secondly, that he did endeavour, in a most unjustifiable manner, to induce her to elope with him, in order to avoid the objections which he was well aware must be raised to such a connection, both on the part of the guardians and on the part of the court. I do not think I am called upon to make any order to commit Lady Ferrers. The circumstances, as far as Lady Ferrers is concerned, are these—Mr. and Mrs. Hungerford (Mrs. Hungerford being the guardian of a ward of the court, a young lady of eighteen years of age, with a very large fortune) paid a visit to Lord and Lady Ferrers in the last week of May last year, and Mr. Chichester was on a visit there at that time. Mrs. Hungerford positively declares that she saw nothing whatever to lead her to suppose that any sort of intercourse whatever had passed between Mr. Chichester and the young lady, more than the exchange of common civilities. Mr. Chichester and Lady Ferrers, on the contrary, say that which either expresses or implies that there were marked attentions on the part of Mr. Chichester towards the young lady. The guardian, Mrs. Hungerford, says that just in the evening before their departure (they staid there a week or eight days), Mr. Chichester, in a joking manner, alluding to his own great pecuniary embarrassments, and the difficulty he might have in obtaining the sanction of the court, said to her that he thought he should be a suitor for the young lady's hand, and that she turned it off, supposing it to be a mere joke. He, on the contrary, says that he understood from what passed, that he would have the deliberate sanction of Mrs. Hungerford, or that there would be no opposition on her part. They quitted the next morning, and Mrs. Hungerford says not only was there no marked attention on the part of Mr. Chichester, but that he studiously abstained from handing the lady to her carriage, and they went away. Shortly after they got home the young lady desired to make a little present of a purse to Lady Ferrers. That was very natural; and letters passed. Those letters were seen by the guardian; there was nothing whatever improper in them, nothing that a married lady, a peers, in the high rank of Lady Ferrers, might not write to a young lady who was the ward of a neighbour in the country. About a fortnight afterwards, Mr. and Mrs. Hungerford, with the young lady, were going on a visit to somewhere near Ascot, for they were going to be at the Ascot or some other races; and on the morning after their arrival there, Mrs. Hungerford discovered what astonished her—some fragments of a letter, which turned out, or which was suspected at that time, I believe, to be from Lady Ferrers, that had crossed bars in a different ink, of a different writing, and being a different matter that was written. It turned out to be written with lemon juice, which, it seems, when held to the fire, comes out in the form of a pale red writing; and Mrs. Hungerford discovered what led her to believe that, whoever was writing these letters, was writing an apparently open correspondence in black ink, and a concealed correspondence in this different ink, or lemon juice. Not to hold out any longer the mystery, it turned out afterwards that there was a letter from Lady Ferrers, which in the black ink writing had been shown, but which contained the clandestine writing in the lemon juice, the clandestine writing being more or less an encouragement it on the part of Lady Ferrers to the young lady to give countenance to the suit of Mr. Chichester, Lady Ferrers' brother. Exactly what it was we do not know, but that that was the substance of it is manifest. Lady Ferrers had desired that she might be at liberty to send to the young lady a little basket in return for the purse. That was very natural, and Mrs. Hungerford did not object to that; but she said it would be better if it should come through her, and that she would present it in Lady Ferrers' name. She did so, and that seemed all right; but, to the disgrace of Lady Ferrers—and I cannot attempt to qualify the expression, for it was most disgraceful, and it must for ever lower her in the society of her equals—in that basket was concealed in the lining, a letter, written not on paper, which would have made a crackling noise, and have excited attention, but written on linen, a secret encouragement to the ward, against the consent, or without the consent of her guardian, to give countenance to the suit of her brother, whom she admits and whom all admit to be a man in deep embarrassment. Having said this much, it may be asked, am I not flinching in the discharge of my duty if I abstain from committing Lady Ferrers? Well, I think I am not, and for this reason. The contempt of court, on which I am to act, is an attempt to induce the young lady to elope with Mr. Chichester without the consent of the guardians or of this court. Now, although Lady Ferrers, in this clandestine and discreditable manner, encouraged the intercourse between the young lady and her embarrassed brother. I cannot see any thing that leads me necessarily to the conclusion that she meant that this should be done without first endeavouring, at all events, to obtain the sanction of the court; very soon afterwards Mrs. Hungerford, having discovered what she thought was the whole, but which turned out not to be the whole, of these letters, immediately wrote to Lady Ferrers and to Mr. Chichester, and immediately forbade all intercourse, and said the thing was impossible. Lady Ferrers on that made a promise that she would not write any more. Mr. Chichester being thus rejected was forbidden to visit her at all; but the course he took was this—Mr. and Mrs. Hungerford and the young lady lived at Dingley-park, in Northamptonshire, which I collect is only a mile or two from the town of Market Harborough. It seems that some time in August Mr. Chichester, with another gentleman who passed by the name of George Ramsden, with a third (who probably was a younger brother of Mr. Chichester), and a fourth person, who was, I suppose, a servant, went and took up their quarters at this inn at Market Harborough, and Mr. Chichester thought it consistent with his duty towards this court and his obligations as a gentleman, to go in the middle of the night, from time to time, attended sometimes by two, sometimes by three of these persons, in order to hold in the middle of the night a clandestine communication orally, and by letter, with this ward of the court, with whom he had been forbidden to have any intercourse. He goes night after night, attended by two or three persons, and has these communications with the young lady, either at the window of her bed-room, or some other window, whereby arrangement they were to meet. To suppose that one can have any doubt about what his object was is absurd. His motive could be no other than to induce her to elope. Still it was put forward so strongly here by his counsel (of course by his instructions) that he had no other object than to have intercourse with her, which was forbidden by the guardians. Among the letters which the young lady gave up from Mr. Chichester, are two from Lady Ferrers to him (Mr. Chichester), and one in which there is this expression—"I only wish she was my little sister (speaking of the ward of the court); and no matter how you marry her so long as it is properly performed. I will only be too glad to receive her with my open arms, as I feel I could love her so much." * * * * * "If dear Clara would leave them, and go with you to be married, I need not repeat that she will always find me ready to receive her." One cannot, after all that has passed, but have a strong suspicion that Lady Ferrers wrote it in order that it might be shown to the young lady, and that she might thus be assured that she would be well received by the relations of her suitor. There is another letter much to the same effect, dated later in September; I cannot, therefore, but think that Lady Ferrers must have been cognisant of what was going on, and that she meant to encourage it. Now, with regard to Mr. Chichester. At the same time that he put these letters into the young lady's hand, he wrote or sent her other letters, and in those letters I find these passages—(one is a whole letter, the other two are fragments of letters):—"Clara, is it just towards me this treatment? Am I to go about, afraid of seeing any one here, skulking about? There is a great deal of difference between"—I will not mention the name; he mentions a gentleman who was well known in society to have eloped two years ago with a lady of rank—"There is a great difference between" that gentleman "and G. A. H. C."—that is, George Augustus Hamilton Chichester. "He married my cousin, and we were all very much annoyed." What do I infer from that? Why, that he had proposed to the young lady to run away from the house of her guardian, but that she had remonstrated, and had pointed out how ill that lady stood in society, and that he endeavours to get over scruples by pointing out—there is a great difference between that person, who was not quite on equal in rank, and by G. A. H. C., that is to say, the ill that have attended that lady in her after life, from having run away, will not attend you, because I am of high and noble family, and he was not. That is the inference which I cannot but deduce from it. Then there is another fragment of a letter in which this occurs, "To-morrow night what you ought to do, dearest Clara, is to say or write when you are ready—that will be now or to-morrow night, whichever you like—so, dearest Clara, adieu." Who can doubt, when he was coming in the middle of the night with two or three men attending him, that the object was to run off with the young lady. Then there is a letter in which this passage occurs:—"Do you think, Clara, that I for one moment would wish you to leave your guardians if I was not certain, if I had not had the first legal opinions on the matter, that everything could be done legally and for ever binding? Do you suppose my family would"—then there is something torn. "The law is, that if a ward in court marries against the Chancellor's consent, and that she is over eighteen years of age, her husband can be imprisoned till she comes of age, for contempt of court, provided they catch him within the jurisdiction of the court, which extends to Great Britain." Now, this gentleman's property, or his connections, at least, are in Ireland. Whether he thought he should escape by going to Ireland I do not know, but one cannot feel seeing that he meant to say the jurisdiction of the court only extended to Great Britain, if it caught the person. "Now (he continues) this is the law; and never mind what others have told you to frighten you—this is the law. Besides there are plenty of instances; and they have never imprisoned the husband beyond six or seven months, and that only in the case of an improper marriage, such as a ward running away with a tutor or servant &c., &c. In our case it would be quite different; in fact, the world and the Lord Chancellor would wonder what we run away for. I am merely telling you now what two of the first chancery men have told me; they laughed at me and said—'Why, a man in your position, if you did do such a thing—I should do it,' then it is torn. Now, I have adverted to that in order to show the object Mr. Chichester had in view. It is extremely painful to drag the name of a ward of the court before the public; but it is a happiness for me to be able to say to-day that, having had several private interviews with her, quite away from her guardians, I am quite convinced that when Mr. Chichester says she consented to his application for leave to make proposals, he says that which nothing which she ever said warranted. She did not consent, and I believe she never had the least wish to consent. She has sworn contrary to what Mr. Chichester states, and, from my conversation with her, I implicitly believe what she says. She has now put every scrap of paper into the hands of her guardian. That she acted imprudently no one can deny; but she was led on to it by others that ought to have known better. I allude particularly to Lady Ferrers and Mr. Chichester. I feel it to be my duty, in pursuance of the notice of motion, now to make an order (prefacing that order with referring to the affidavits, and a statement that I am satisfied on those affidavits that Mr. Chichester did endeavour to induce the plaintiff, Clara Thornhill, to contract a marriage with him, without the sanction of the court, and that he did endeavour clandestinely to remove her from the custody of her guardian) that for that contempt of the court he be committed to the Queen's Prison. The tipstaff will now immediately take Mr. Chichester into custody. I shall also make an order that he pay the costs of this motion, and that his own petition, that he be allowed to make proposals, be dismissed with costs. The tipstaff will now take him into custody, and the order will be drawn up in the course of the morning. Mr. Bailly—This is a motion against Lady Ferrers and Mr. Chichester. The Lord Chancellor—I make no order with respect to Lady Ferrers, except that I give her no costs. Mr. Bailly—But then there will be no division of costs. Mr. Chichester will pay the costs of the guardians. The Lord Chancellor—Mr. Chichester will pay the costs of the motion, and his own petition is dismissed with costs, and he is committed to the Queen's Prison. Mr. Chichester (who was present in court) was then taken into custody by the tipstaff of the court, and shortly afterwards conveyed to the Queen's Prison.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

BOW-STREET.

THE "MATRIMONIAL ALLIANCE" DODGE.—A few days since, Mr. Edwards, landlord of a private hotel in Norfolk-street, Strand, obtained a warrant against Laurence Cuthbert, the secretary of a "Matrimonial Alliance Association," purporting to carry on its business in Jobn-street, Adelphi, charging him with a violent assault, under the following circumstances:—A young gentleman was tempted to call at the offices of the association, where he was shown into a well-furnished apartment, and was informed that the sum of £10 must be paid down, as a guarantee of good faith, before an interview with any of the young ladies on the books of the establishment—embracing beauties of all ages, and heiresses of every degree of fortune—could be granted. The money was at once advanced, and the unsuspecting youth awaited with some anxiety the first introduction. He was at length directed to take up a position near the Duke of York's monument, St. James's Park, on a given morning, at twelve o'clock, where a lady would meet him, and wave a white handkerchief as a "signal of recognition." The morning was extremely favourable for such an interview, and the appointment was faithfully kept by a nicely-dressed and tolerably good-looking lady, with whom he was soon on terms of affectionate regard. Having exhausted the usual common-place phrases of endearment, and satisfied themselves that their union would be mutually agreeable, the young man began to descend upon the liberality of the association in demanding so large a fee as £10, upon which the lady complained still more bitterly of her having to pay a much larger sum—no less than £25—and assured him that he had been let off very lightly. As the afternoon advanced they agreed to part, the lady consenting to another interview, to be arranged—as usual—through the secretary. When the young gentleman called again at the office a further sum was demanded, before a second interview could be arranged; and then, suspecting that he had been imposed upon, he resolved to confess everything to Mr. Edwards, who at once determined to inquire into the matter, and see his young guest righted. The result of his calling on this mission was a violent personal attack upon him by one of the "officials," but, on a warrant being granted, the matter was arranged by the repayment of the £10.

ACCIDENTS AND OFFENCES.

BRADLEY.—An accident with a steam-thrashing machine occurred last week at Bradley, Yorkshire. The boiler exploded, and a piece of the iron struck the fireman, George Wooler, on the arm, nearly severing it, and then lodged in his side, from the effects of which he died in an hour and a-half. One of the labourers was forced to a considerable distance, severely scalded and otherwise injured, but is likely to recover. Another was passing the machine at the time with a sack of corn, and had it completely taken off his back; he himself escaped uninjured. The owner had the repairing of the machine under consideration, but having many engagements to fulfil, had delayed it; hence the explosion.

THE SHENLY POISONINGS.—On Tuesday an adjourned inquest was held at the Black Lion Inn, at Shenly, to inquire into the manner of the death of John Newton, labourer, whose widow has been committed to Hertford gaol, on a charge of wilfully poisoning her son, a boy about seven years old. After hearing the evidence of the medical gentlemen who had been present at the post mortem examination of the body of John Newton, and the statement of Professor Taylor, by whom the contents of the stomach and intestines of the deceased had been analysed, and of other witnesses, the jury returned a verdict that he had been wilfully murdered, on the 27th of May last, by his wife, Sarah Newton. The coroner immediately issued his warrant for the commitment of the accused—a strong masculine woman, about thirty years of age.

EXTRAORDINARY STRANGULATION OF A CHILD BY ITS MOTHER WHILE IN A DREAM.—On Wednesday Mr. William Payne held an inquest at St. George's workhouse, Mint-street, Southwark, on the body of Henry Rushton, infant son of Mr. James Rushton, of Little Rodney-street, Suffolk-street. James Rushton, father of the child, said that he went to bed between one and two o'clock on Sunday morning last. The deceased child slept in the same bed with its mother, who, at the time he went to bed, had it in her arms. He heard nothing of the child during the night; but about seven o'clock in the morning he was awakened by his wife, who, in alarm, called him by his name. He inquired what was the matter? and she said that the child was quite cold. He immediately got a light, and then saw that the child was black all over the face. Soon afterwards he went for Mr. Llewellyn, the surgeon, who came directly, and he said that the child was dead. His wife told him that she had had a fearful dream. Mr. William Llewellyn, of No. 12, Great Suffolk-street, said he was called on Sunday morning to the house in question, and found the child dead. It had been so for some time. The tongue protruded, and the face was very livid. It had all the appearance of having been strangled. He questioned the mother, and she told him she had dreamt that a mad bull was attacking her, and had squeezed up the child to protect it; and when she awoke, as she found the child cold, she called her husband. The child had been properly taken care of. The parents had three other children, were very industrious people, and kind to their children. The child was lying on her arm, and its death might, very probably, have occurred as she described it. The Jury returned a verdict of "Accidental death."

MASONIC INTELLIGENCE.

MEETINGS.

MONDAY, Nov. 27.—Br. G. F. Taylor's Masonic Concert, George and Blue Bear, Holborn, commencing at eight o'clock; Somerset House Lodge, No. 4, Freemasons' Tavern; Pythagorean Lodge, No. 91, Globe Tavern, Greenwich; Lodge of Unity, No. 216, George and Vulture; Old King's Arms Lodge, No. 30, Freemasons' Tavern; Chapter 169, Mount Zion, George and Vulture.

TUESDAY, Nov. 28.—Board of Gen. Pur. at three, Tuscan Lodge, No. 14, Freemasons' Tavern; Moira Lodge, No. 109, London Tavern; Lodge of Faith, No. 165, Gun Tavern, Pimlico; Lodge of Prudent Brethren, No. 169, Freemasons' Tavern; Lodge of Industry, No. 119, Swan Tavern, Hungerford Market; Prince of Wales' Lodge, No. 321, Thatched House Tavern, St. James's; Chapter 21, Cyrus, London Coffee-house.

WEDNESDAY, Nov. 29.—Gen. Com. of Grand Lodge, and Lodge of Benevolence.

THURSDAY, Nov. 30.—Gen. Com. fem. school, Freemasons' Tavern; at twelve, Castle Lodge, No. 36, Raddle's Hotel.

FRIDAY, Dec. 1.—Chapter 8, British, Freemasons' Tavern; Chapter 324, Prince of Wales's, St. George's-street.

SATURDAY, Dec. 2.—Com. boys' school at four, London, No. 124, and St. Thomas, No. 166, Freemasons' Tavern.

GEORGE AND BLUE BEAR, HIGH HOLBORN.—Mr. G. F. Taylor intends holding, for his benefit, a Madrigal and Glee Concert, of a comical character, among gentlemen only, at the above tavern, on the evening of Monday, November the 27th, to commence at eight o'clock precisely. Tickets, two shillings and sixpence each, to be had of Mr. G. Taylor, 21, Robert-street, Hampstead-road; at the Freemasons' Tavern; and at the George and Blue Bear, Holborn.

DEATH OF LORD DUDLEY STUART.—We have a very painful duty to perform in recording the death of Lord Dudley Stuart, which and event took place at Stockholm, on the 17th instant. His health, it is true, had been failing latterly, but so sudden a termination to his short but memorable career could not have been anticipated—one that had identified him with every institution for the amelioration—moral, social, and political—of his fellow-creatures. There are few places in society where his loss will not be deeply felt. The literary circle, the fashionable salon, the public meeting, the House of Commons itself, will each and all look with sorrow upon his vacant niche; but, above all, his loss is felt by that ill-used and suffering nation which he especially took under his protection. What Byron, as a poet-warrior, did for the Greek, Lord Dudley Stuart, as a man of the world and statesman, attempted for the Pole. And, in his character of an English gentleman, and representative of one of our largest boroughs, he specially devoted his time, his talents, his means, and his health, to anything that could promote the improvement of the condition of our poorer fellow-countrymen. He also entered, though late, another field for the exercise of good and kindly feeling, and practical charity, for we find that he enrolled himself among the ranks of Freemasonry, joining a lodge particularly attractive in its name to his national sympathies. The zeal with which he pursued his masonic labours is amply shown by the rapid progress he made in them, and the share he reaped of the only reward Masonry has to bestow, namely, honours in the craft, and in the personal esteem, if not love, of the brethren. Requiescat in pace!

LODGE OF TRANQUILLITY, No. 218.—This numerous lodge met for the second time this season, on Monday last. Br. Herrmann, the W.M., presiding with his well-known ability. He initiated Mr. Louis Lipman and Mr. Alexander Pyke into the mysteries of the order, and passed Brs. Salaman and Weinman to the second degree in Masonry. After several matters advantageous to this lodge being discussed, the Brethren adjourned from labour to refreshment, which was followed by the usual toasts applicable to the occasion. Br. Peter Mathews proposed "the health of the W.M.," and took the opportunity of observing that he had had the honor of being elected three different times to the office of W.M. of this lodge, which office he had duly filled, and, as he had understood, to the satisfaction of the members. After a few further remarks, complimentary to the working of the lodge, &c., he precluded by wishing "prosperity to the Master of the lodge, Br. Herrmann." The toast being responded to by the Brethren, the W.M. returned thanks in an appropriate speech, in which he drew attention to the Benevolent Fund. He urged the necessity of continued exertions to render that fund worthy the object in view—that of relieving the distressed Mason, and the widows and orphans of deceased Brethren. It was intended to hold a ball, in January next, in aid of this fund; and from the excellent names proposed to form the committee, he anticipated a large return. It was to be hoped that the Brethren would use every exertion to carry out this laudable undertaking, which would confer amusement upon the wives, daughters, and sweethearts of the Brethren, and, at the same time, increase their Benevolent Fund. The W.M. concluded by proposing the health of the P.M.'s, and thanked P.M. Br. Alexander Levy for the honour he had done the lodge in presenting them that evening with a most elegant P.M.'s jewel. The lodge was particularly indebted to Br. Levy, for much of the best furniture of the lodge was the gift of that excellent Brother. The W.M. called upon the Brethren to do honour to the toast, which was received with the greatest enthusiasm, and was acknowledged in a most peculiarly by the P.M. already alluded to, Br. Lyons, S.W. of the Lodge of Joppa, returned thanks in an admirable speech, for the visitors, in which he adverted to that delightful spirit of emulation which existed in the Lodges of Tranquillity and Joppa; for soon after the Lodge of Joppa had founded a Benevolent Fund, the Lodge of Tranquillity likewise raised one, and now that that lodge intended having a ball for the purpose of endeavouring to improve the fund, he begged to say that the Lodge of Joppa would not be long in following so excellent an example. After a few more toasts and speeches, which prolonged the evening to a late hour, the company separated in peace and harmony. The visitors were Br. Peter Mathews, P.M. of this and several other lodges; Br. Henry Lyons, S.W., 223; Br. Alexander, S.D., 203; Br. Marcus, 32, (Waterford); Br. Isaacs, 812; Br. Gabriel, 223; Br. G. F. Taylor, 201; and Br. Bin, St. John's, Scotland.

CADOGAN LODGE, No. 188.—This admirable lodge resumed its masonic avocations on Friday last, Br. Malkin, the W.M., presiding with his usual ability. The business of the lodge consisted of an initiation, passing, and raising. These ceremonies being satisfactorily concluded, the Brethren sat down to a splendid banquet, provided by the proprietors of the Freemasons' Tavern, in their usual excellent style.

St. Andrews Lodge, No. 281.—The members of this excellent lodge assembled upon an emergency, at the Freemasons' Tavern, on Thursday evening, for the purpose of initiating two gentlemen into the order, they being Mr. Charles G. Ivo, and Mr. John Thomas Burrow; which ceremony was admirably performed by the W.M. Br. Mills, who, in an excellent address upon Masonry, complimented the Brethren upon the improved working of the lodge. The visitors were Br. G. F. Taylor, 201, and Br. W. Knight, 23.

DOMATIC LODGE, No. 206.—This excellent working lodge held its usual monthly meeting on Monday, at the Falcon Tavern, Fetter-lane, the chair being most ably filled by Brother J. Smith, P.M., in the absence of W.M.; the business of the evening being the initiation of Mr. W. Lloyd, and election of W.M. for the ensuing year. We are pleased to say that the election unanimously fell upon Brother Thomas Adams, J.W. of this Lodge and P.M. of 196. From the excellence of Br. Adams's masonic principles and talent, we augur one of the most successful seasons for the Domatic. That and other business being satisfactorily arranged, the Brothers adjourned until the second Monday in January.

THE HISTORY OF FREEMASONRY.

(Continued.)

The only British monarch who ever attempted to suppress the order of Freemasonry was Queen Elizabeth, whose jealousy of her cousin's beauty, and imaginary suspicion of all around and about her, proved a severe drawback upon that happiness she might have enjoyed, surrounded as she was by a galaxy of learning and talent unprecedented in the annals of history.

Elizabeth, having resolved on the annihilation of the craft, sent an armed force from the Tower of London to break up the annual meeting of the Grand Lodge of England, assembled at York, on St. John's day, 27th of December, 1561; but Sir Thomas Sackville (Grand Master) took special care to make her chief emissaries Freemasons, sending them back, after their initiation, to justify the institution of Masonry. The Queen was satisfied, and not long after, out of compliment to Masonry, she ordered the Exchange built by Sir Thomas Gresham to be called her Royal Exchange.

In after times we find that nearly all the Stuarts were Freemasons, and that James the Second, William the Third, the Duke of Norfolk, the Emperor of Germany, Frederick Prince of Wales, the Duke of Gloucester, Henry Frederick Duke of Cumberland, the King of Prussia, were all Grand Masters. Their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales (George the Fourth), Prince William Henry (William the Fourth), and the Duke of York, were initiated in 1787; on the death of the Duke of Cumberland, in 1790, the Prince of Wales was Grand Master, and in that capacity laid the foundation-stone of Covent-garden Theatre, in 1808. The Duke of Kent, about this time, was also initiated into the mysteries of Freemasonry.

The Grand Mastership continued to be vested in one of the male branches of the Royal family until the death of the Duke of Sussex. The Queen (God bless her), is a Mason's daughter, and will, no doubt, be a Mason's mother when the Prince of Wales shall become of age to fill the chair of his forefathers.

OUR LETTER BAG.

WHIP AND SPUR.

MR. EDITOR.—It would be a good rule for your correspondents on the Whip and Spur question not to repeat themselves, or say over again what some one else has said before. Allow me to set before them, briefly, the reasons for which spurs are worn by men:—

1. To punish a refractory horse, where both hands might be occupied with the reins.
2. For any sudden and momentary exertion made necessary by accident.
3. To get a horse well together in heavy ground, or over an awkward fence; which spurs it balf the labour, and in the latter case perhaps a sprain.
4. In all cases of unsteadiness or swerving in going through gales, gaps, or in crowded streets. A sharp cut with a whip on the right makes a horse bound to the left; a touch with both spurs sends him on. The left spur and whip on the right is the only resource for a lady who wishes to accomplish the same thing.

5. When nothing else will get a horse on which is more or less "dead beaten." And I may remark, that only in case of life or death, or the sternest necessity, will any right feeling man, much less woman, use either spur or whip under those circumstances.

Now, I believe I have fairly enumerated the reasons which support the spur question for men. Of these five, numbers two, three, and four apply equally for ladies, number one sometimes, and number five scarcely ever.

Respecting number four, I will instance.—Suppose a lady riding sharply through a gate. Her horse swerves to the left, let her whip it on the right, and she stands the best chance in the world of having one of her knee-caps knocked off against the gate-post on the left; whereas, a touch with the left spur, and tightening of the left rein, turns the horse from what alarms him, and protects herself on the left: in short, carries them both through safely and expeditiously. Of number five I can only remark, that I think, with "Harry Hieover," when distress comes on, pleasure goes off. In this view I feel sure most of the readers of THE FIELD will agree.

I remain, Mr. Editor,

(A genuine signature) AMY.

CAN A HORSE DREAM?

Sir,—In "The Danbrian Principality, the Frontier Limits of the Christian and Turk," by a British Resident of Twenty Years in the East, third edition, 1854, vol. ii., page 333, I find the following statement, viz:—"I went to the stable, and found my young Arabian fast asleep on his side; he was dreaming, apparently, of his native desert, for he twitched his feet, as if he were galloping, switched his tail, snorted, and neighed in a low tone, which died away in a faint manner, like the wail of a sleeping child." This is the first time I ever heard of a horse dreaming, can any of your correspondents give any information on this subject? Nov. 20th, 1854.

AN ORIGINAL SUBSCRIBER.

DOG-BREAKING.

MR. EDITOR.—Some weeks ago one of your correspondents inquired the name of a good book on dog-breaking, price, &c. I would recommend to his attention that by Lieut.-Col. W. W. Hutchinson, published by Murray. I have used it for some years, have always broke my own dogs, and have been tolerably successful. The price is, I believe, 6s. York, Nov. 21st, 1851.

J. V. Y.

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

Tuesday, Nov. 21.

WAR OFFICE, Nov. 21.

Her Majesty has been graciously pleased to appoint General the Right Hon. Fitz-Roy James Henry, Lord Raglan, G.C.B., to be a Field-Marshal in the Army, and the commission to bear date the 5th of November, 1854.

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 20.

Corps of Royal Marines—Lieutenant Colonel Thomas Fyrmore, and Lieutenant Colonel James Buchanan, to full pay retirement of that rank, with the rank of Colonel, under the provision of her Majesty's Order in Council, 15th September, 1851; Brevet Major Thomas Holbrow to be Lieutenant Colonel, vice Fyrmore, to retired full pay; Brevet Major John Charles Grey Courts to be Lieutenant Colonel, vice Buchanan, retired full pay; First Lieutenant Henry John Trille to be Captain, vice Holbrow, promoted; First Lieutenant and Quartermaster John William Colman Williams to be Captain, vice Courts, promoted; Second Lieutenant Richard Augustus Fitz Gerald Standlett to be First Lieutenant, vice Trille, promoted; Second Lieutenant Harry Boscawen Savage to be First Lieutenant, vice Williams, promoted.

BANKRUPTS.

William Weston, Chiswell-street, Fishery, boot and shoe agent—Henry Broome, Portman-street, licensed victualler—Benjamin Workman Pearce, Bayham-terrace, Camden-town, builder—Henry Johns, Hatfield, and Grange-terrace, Brompton, distiller—Robert Gray, Bishop's Walkham and Southamton, corn merchant—Thomas Gray, Lambour, coal, Southwark, and Wisbeach, Cambridgehire, miller—Joshua Clements, Mill-street, Hammer-square, wooden draper—Hindley Woolger, Junr., Beeding, Sussex, wheelwright—Theophilus Hethell, Riley-street, Brompton, Remond, Jeweller—Anthony Maddison Todd, Clement-street, City, merchant—William Faxon, Queen's-road, Bayswater, corn dealer—George Basckie, St. George's-place, Knights-bridge, tobaccoist—Thomas Nightingale, Broad-chalk, Wiltshire, innkeeper—Frederick Carson, St. Helen's-place, City, and West Ham, Essex, merchant—John Clay, Wednesfield, Staffordshire, bricklayer—John Brown, West Bromwich, Staffordshire, corn factor—Joseph Ellis, Bishopthorpe, Yorkshire, farmer, boot and shoe maker—Roger Duxbury, Orr Darrore, Lancashire, innkeeper.

Friday, Nov. 21.

WAR OFFICE, Nov. 21.

5th Regiment of Dragoon Guards—Major Thomas Westropp McMahon, from half-pay unattached, to be Major.

1st Dragoons—Thomas Price Greaves, gent., to be Cornet; Cornet Thomas Price Greaves, to be Adjutant.

14th Light Dragoons—Edward Lavallin Paxley, gent., to be Cornet.

6th Dragoons—Cornet William Sawrey Rawlinson to be Lieutenant, Oct. 6; Cornet Nicholas De Jersey Lovell to be Lieutenant; Captain Arthur Fitch Dawson, from the 7th Foot, to be Cornet; Joseph Thomas Wetherall, gent., to be Cornet.

12th Light Dragoons—Lieutenant Charles Steel, from the 15th Light Dragoons, to be Lieutenant.

13th Light Dragoons—Lieutenant Lord Walter Scott, from the 32nd Foot, to be Lieutenant, vice Steel, appointed to the 12th Light Dragoons; Edwin Walker, gent., to be Cornet.

17th Light Dragoons—Assistant-Surgeon St. John Stanley, from the 33rd Foot, to be Assistant-Surgeon.

Grenadier Guards—Assistant-Surgeon George Eleazar Mendins to be Battalion-Surgeon, Oct. 1; Gilbert Prout Gidwood, gent., to be Assistant-Surgeon.

Coldstream Guards—The Hon. William Edwards to be Ensign and Lieutenant, by purchase.

3rd Regiment of Foot—Acting Assistant-Surgeon William Henry Day, to be Assistant-Surgeon.

19th Foot—To be Ensigns without purchase—Henry John Brown, gent., Richard Milesworth, gent., James Robert Dalton, gent., Nov. 21.

23rd Foot—Ensign Frederick William Jobb to be Lieutenant; Honourable Nathaniel Plemms to be Ensign.

26th Foot—Lieutenant William Macdonald Mill, from the Cape Mounted Riflemen, to be Lieutenant.

80th Foot—Edward St. George Smyth, gent., to be Ensign.

33rd Foot—Acting Assistant-Surgeon John Vernon Seddall, M.D., to be Assistant-Surgeon.

35th Foot—Captain Richard Pretymann Apthorp, from half-pay unattached, to be Captain; Lieutenant Henry Edward Moore to be Captain; Ensign Thomas Lloyd to be Lieutenant; Mrs. Moulter Poble, gent., to be Ensign.

38th Foot—Walter Douglas Day, gent., to be Ensign.

41st Foot—Lieutenant Henry Simon Bush to be Captain; Ensign James Alexander Hamilton to be Lieutenant; Walter John Johnson, gent., to be Ensign.

47th Foot—Lieutenant Nathaniel George Phillips to be Captain; Officer Gaspard De Lancy, gent., to be Ensign.

52nd Foot—Lieutenant George Thorne Ricketts, from the 12th, Light Dragoons, to be Lieutenant.

VOL. IV.—No. 101.]

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1854.

[WITH SUPPLEMENT, PRICE 6d.

TO ADVERTISERS.

EVERY SATURDAY, PRICE SIXPENCE, STAMPED.

THE FIELD:

The Country Gentleman's Newspaper.

A first-class Journal, devoted to every kind of information interesting to persons "Out of Town," as Hunting, Shooting, Racing, Angling, Coursing, Yachting, Boating, Archery.

The Garden; | The Farm; | The Household.

It is expressly designed for Families.

The official Stamp Returns for the quarter ending June, 1853, give it a circulation of

3,872 Copies Weekly.

Great improvements are now being made in it, and its circulation is rapidly extending.

The following is the

SCALE OF CHARGES FOR ADVERTISING:

Twenty words and under, £. s. d.

Each additional ten words, 0 2 6

A half Column, 0 6 6

A Column, 1 5 0

A Column, 3 0 0

A Page, 8 8 0

For three insertions a reduction of one-eighth; and for six insertions a reduction of one-fourth will be made.

Field Office, 408, Strand.

AGRICULTURE, &c.

PRIZE CATTLE SHOW OF THE SMITH-FIELD CLUB.

THE ANNUAL EXHIBITION OF PRIZE CATTLE, SEEDS, ROOTS, IMPLEMENTS, &c., will open to the Public on TUESDAY MORNING, and close on FRIDAY EVENING, 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th DECEMBER.

BAZAAR, KING-STREET and BAKER-STREET. Open from Daylight till Nine in the Evening.—Admission, 1s.

THE BIRMINGHAM CATTLE AND POULTRY SHOW, 1854.

THE SIXTH GREAT ANNUAL EXHIBITION OF STOCK AND DOMESTIC POULTRY will be held in BINGLEY HALL, on TUESDAY, WEDNESDAY, THURSDAY, and FRIDAY, the 12th, 13th, 14th, and 15th of DECEMBER next.

THE PRIVATE VIEW AND ANNUAL DINNER on TUESDAY, December 12th.

There will be Special Trains on all the principal Railways, full particulars of which will be announced in the Advertisements and Bills of the several Companies.

A LAND AGENT in SUFFOLK has a

VACANCY for a YOUNG GENTLEMAN desirous of learning agriculture. He would have the opportunity of seeing practical farming at home, the advantage of taking the tillage account, and seeing everything connected with the general management of an estate of 11,000 acres in extent. May be instructed in land surveying, mapping, and levelling. Terms 100 guineas per annum. Apply to Mr. HUNTER, 12, Tavern-street, Ipswich.

THE FLUKE KIDNEY POTATO.—

This excellent variety is now planted here on the principal crop, being more free from disease and more prolific than any other in cultivation. It was raised in Middleton, and may be had genuine in any quantity at 5s. per bushel of 56 lbs.—Apply to JOHN HOLLAND, BRADSHAW GARDENS, MIDDLETON, near Manchester.

SEWAGE CHARCOAL MANURE.

THIS highly fertilising MANURE, which is Peat Charcoal, completely saturated with London Sewage, will be found most efficient for every species of crop, more especially for Peas, Beans, Turnips, Mangold Wurzel, and other root crops. It will produce a greater return for the outlay than Guano or any other manure at an equivalent value; it also possesses the property of retaining its fertilising power longer than other Manures now in use. It may be obtained at the SEWAGE MANURE WORKS, Stanley-bridge, Fulham, at £4 per ton, and, in quantities less than half a ton, at 5s. per cwt., for ready money only; and in quantities not less than a ton will be delivered at the London Termini of the Railroads free of charge for carriage. It may also be had from Messrs. G. GIBBS and Co., No. 28, Down-street, Piccadilly, Agricultural Seedsmen, Agents for London; and from all the other Agents of the Company.

HORTICULTURE, &c.

WEEDS ON WALKS.

MR. FLEMING'S WEEDING or SALING MACHINE for Gravel Walks, Court Yards, &c., manufactured and sold by ALEXANDER SHANKS and SON, ALBION, FORFARSHIRE, from whom particulars, with prices, may be had.

NEW CRIMSON DAHLIA "INCOMPARABLE."

MR. E. ABLITT begs most respectfully to announce to the Dahlia Trade that he purposes disposing of the above-named splendid Seedling Dahlia in ground roots. Colour rich ruby crimson, fine shape, with great depth of well-arranged petals, and good centre; it has been shown at most of the exhibitions in the neighbourhood, and greatly admired. Mr. Glenn also speaks of it in very high terms as one of the best in the crimson class.

See Glenn's Almanack for this year, and Lloyd's Weekly Newspaper for Oct. 29th, initials E. A., and Nov. 11th.

Terms, 5 Guineas each root. Onchouse, Stowmarket, Suffolk.

THE LARGEST and CHEAPEST NURSERY in ENGLAND for Geraniums

(show and fancy), French Geraniums, Fuchsias, Verbenas, Fairy Roses, Chrysanthemums, Helio tropes, Cinerarias, Calceolarias, Primulas, and other soft-wooded plants, is the FLORAL NURSERY, ACTON ROAD, TUCKHAM GREEN, near London. More than 250,000 plants are there cultivated annually.

The stock of show Geraniums exceeds 50,000, and comprises upwards of 750 varieties, amongst which almost every known kind will be found. The newest sorts, such as Carlos, Virginia Rosa (Foster's), Leah, Picta, Marginata, Empress, Neatness, &c., can be had at 3s. each, or 3s. per dozen. The older varieties from 9s. to 25s. per dozen.

The selection of FRENCH GERANIUMS consists of 40 distinct sorts, at 2s. 6d. each, or 25s. per dozen.

SEEDLING CINERARIAS (10,000), from seed of first-rate flowers, at 4s. per dozen, in 60-sized pots.

20,000 really good SEEDLING HERBACEOUS CALCEOLARIAS now on hand at 4s. per dozen, in 60-sized pots.

30,000 VERBENAS.—Those let out in 1854 by Smith, Mockett, Turner, Chauviere, Bragg, and others, 8s. per dozen; all the older varieties, 6s. and 4s. per dozen.

An immense quantity of good fluted PRIMULAS at 4s. per dozen in 60-sized pots, and 6s. per dozen in 48s.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS (Lilliputian and large flowering) at 6s. and 8s. per dozen, all the best sorts.

20,000 SCARLET GERANIUMS, including all the new kinds, at prices remarkably low.

The foregoing have been selected as examples only, it being impossible, within the limits of an advertisement, to afford particulars of a stock so extensive. Catalogues will, however, be forwarded to all parts gratis.

Every possible exertion will be made to give the most perfect satisfaction to all who may favour this Establishment with their patronage. None but thoroughly established Plants will be sent out, and full reliance may be placed on prompt attention and fair dealing.

The Trade will be liberally dealt with. Provincial Nurserymen and Florists will do well to try this Establishment.

Terms cash, or a satisfactory reference

JOHN WESTWOOD, Proprietor.

HYACINTHS, TULIPS, &c.

WILLIAM E. RENDLE and Co., SEED MERCHANTS, PLYMOUTH, have still on hand a large assortment of all the best Hyacinths, Tulips, Anemones, Ranunculus, Gladiolus, Spionis, Lilium, Crocus, Iris, Johnquills, Snowdrops, Amaryllis, and other kinds of Bulbous Roots.

The present is an excellent time for planting them either in pots or in the ground, but the sooner the better. All orders will be properly attended to.

RENDLE'S CATALOGUE of BULBOUS ROOTS can be had in exchange for two penny stamps, on application to WILLIAM E. RENDLE and Co., Seed Merchants, Plymouth.

LARGE SURPLUS STOCK OF TREES, SHRUBS, &c., NOW ON SALE AT

MESSRS. WILLIAM E. RENDLE and Co.'s NURSERY, PLYMOUTH.—The Proprietors, having a large surplus Stock of the following, can offer them at greatly reduced prices; and all Orders above £10 will be delivered free of carriage to any Station on the Broad Gauge Railways, and to Cork, Dublin, and Liverpool by Steamers.

400,000 Seedling Scotch Fir.

500,000 " Larch Fir.

200,000 " Pines austriaca.

200,000 " Turkish and English Oak.

10,000 " Cedrus Decidua, from 6 in. to 3 ft. in height.

10,000 fine Laurels of various sizes.

20,000 all the best varieties of Strawberries.

10,000 of the best Rhubarb Roots in cultivation.

With a large and general assortment of Nursery Stock, including Forest Trees, Shrubs, and Fruit Trees, such as are generally found in a large Provincial Nursery.

All who intend to plant, either in the Forest, the Strawberry, or the Garden, during the present Autumn, should procure their New Autumn Descriptive Catalogue, which can be had in exchange for one penny stamp, on application to WILLIAM E. RENDLE and Co., Nurserymen and Seed Merchants, Plymouth. Established 1776.

THE FOREST, the PARK, the SHRUB-BERY, and the GARDEN—Noblemen and Gentlemen requiring Trees, Shrubs, or Fruit Trees, during the present Autumn should obtain RENDLE'S NEW AUTUMNAL DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE which can be had on application from WILLIAM E. RENDLE and Co., Nurserymen and Foresters, Plymouth. Established 1786.

New Seeds, growth of 1854. Arrangements are now being made at this Establishment for a large supply of genuine and good Seeds for the coming season.

TO BE LET, SOLD, &c.

FIRST CLASS HOTEL TO LET.

TO BE LET, and entered upon on 25th March next, the WHITE HART HOTEL, in the City of Bath.

The WHITE HART is an old-established first-class Family House, belonging to the Charity Trustees and the Corporation of Bath. It is the oldest and one of the principal Hotels in that City.

It has about fifty Bed-rooms, a proportionate number of Sitting-rooms, Coffee-room, P. and numerous Coach-houses, Stabling, &c. Most of the coaches now leaving Bath start from this house.

It is to be let in consequence of the decease of the late tenant.

The rent of the house, and some portion of the stabling, is £240 per annum; other stabling and coach-houses, which may or may not be taken with the hotel, are let for £51. 4s. per annum.

The coming-in is estimated at from £1,500 to £2,000, half of which money may remain on good security.

References to be made to Messrs. COTTERELL and SPACKMAN, or Messrs. MANNERS and GILL, BATH, of whom tickets to view the premises may be obtained.

SALMON FISHERIES IN THE TWEED TO LET.

TO BE LET, on LEASE, for such a term of years as may be agreed on, with entry at 26th May next, the FISHERIES and FERRY OF EDENMOUTH. The Fisheries being about a mile below the Town of Kelso, extend to nearly three miles in length on the north side of the River, comprehending the whole Tweed Salmon Fishing within the Barony of Edinham, and embrace some of the best Angling Casts in that River.

Also, TO LET, with entry now or at Whit-Sunday next, the Desirable VILLA of SHAKPILLAW HOUSE, situated within the Polley Grounds of Hendersyde Park, and containing Dining-room, Drawing-room, Five Bed-rooms, Kitchen, Servants' Apartments, and Conveniences.

The House is within a mile of Kelso, and is in the immediate vicinity of Edinmouth Fisheries, and will be let either separately from, or in connection with these, as may be desired.

Apply to SMITHS and ROBSON, Solicitors, Kelso.

FANCY POULTRY.—PERIODICAL SALE.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL by AUCTION, at his GREAT ROOM, 38, KING-STREET, COVENT-GARDEN, on TUESDAY, DECEMBER 5, at Twelve o'clock, a SELECTION of very CHOICE BIRDS, from the yards of Mrs. Fookes, Rev. J. Hutchinson, and others, including Dorkings, Cochins, Brahmas, Spanish, and Sebright Bantams, from Mr. M. Leno's yard.

Catalogues by enclosing a stamped directed envelope to Mr. J. C. Stevens, 38, King-street, Covent-garden.

EXTENSIVE and IMPORTANT ANNUAL SALE OF FAT STOCK.

J. HOLLAND, jun., respectfully announces that he is honoured with instructions from the Right Hon. Lord BELMONT to SELL by AUCTION, on TUESDAY, the 5th Day of DECEMBER, 1854, on the FARM PREMISES at TUGBY, in the COUNTY OF LEICESTER, 65 very superior fat REASTS; consisting of 22 very prime fat Scotch bullocks of unusually good quality, 37 superior fat short-horn and bone-fed bullocks, 5 fat Ayrshire cows and heifers, and 1 fat Scotch calf; 40 very excellent fat SHEEP, consisting of 22 half-bred Leicester and Down fat sheep (very superior), 25 Leicester fat shearlings, 15 half-bred fat Scotch, and 45 thorough-bred fat Southdowns; 50 fat and porker PIGS; and 1 Draught HORSE.

Catalogues will be ready fourteen days previous to the sale, and may be had at the principal inns in the neighbourhood; of Mr. Wellman, Tugby Farm; and at the Auctioneer's Office, 20, Market-street, Leicester.

Refreshments as usual at Eleven o'clock, and the sale will commence at Twelve prompt.

CARRIAGES FOR SALE.

A Light BROUGHAM, suitable for one or a pair of Horses, with Pole and Shafts complete. Also a Cab-bodied PLETON for one Horse, with Head and Turnover Seat behind, nearly new.

For further particulars apply to Messrs W. and C. J. ROBERTSON'S CARRIAGE and HARNESS MANUFACTORY, ST. MARTIN'S, STAMFORD.

FOR SALE.

AN excellent PILETON, in condition equal to new, Morocco Lining, Collage's Patent Axles, and Fittings for one Horse or a pair. Will be sold a bargain.

Apply to Mr. GEORGE HURST, LITTLE GONERBY, GRANTHAM.

REAR'S CENTRAL HORSE AND CARRIAGE REPOSITORY.

St. George's-road, Southwark (within a mile of the London bridges).

TO be SOLD by AUCTION, on TUESDAY, December 5, at Twelve o'clock precisely, upwards of

ONE HUNDRED AND TEN HORSES, (on Commission).

A number of Carriages, &c., of various descriptions, for unreserved sale; several pairs of Holstein Carriage and Brougham Horses, Hunters (some of which are direct from Ireland), Weight-carrying Cobs, Lutes' Hacks, &c. Also Twenty-five new and sound Cart and Van Horses, Carriages and Harness, particulars of which may be found in Catalogue on the morning of sale.

PRIVATE COMMISSION DEPARTMENT.

From Eighty to One Hundred Horses, and several Hundred Carriages and Vehicles, on Sale daily by Private Treaty.

Keep, 3s. per day and Night.

Horses taken from the London Termini without charge to the owners.

N.B.—Near the Elephant and Castle.

R D REA, Proprietor.

EIGHTY to ONE HUNDRED HORSES on SALE at REAR'S CENTRAL REPOSITORY, consisting of Hunters of known character; several pairs of Match Horses, suitable for Carriage and Brougham purposes, and for Driving; also, Cab Hacks, &c. Farmers will find a variety of Horses suitable for wagons, and to work on the land. Every horse may be tried for their different uses on the premises, one mile from all the London bridges, at REAR'S CENTRAL HORSE REPOSITORY, near the Elephant and Castle, Newington.

IMPORTANT SALE of WEIGHT-CARRYING HUNTERS.—Mr. DYER has received instructions from Richard W. Reynolds, Esq., who has given up hunting, to SELL by AUCTION, at his REPOSITORY, STEPHEN'S-GREEN, DUBLIN, on THURSDAY, DECEMBER 7, 1854, at Half-past Two o'clock, sharp, the following Weight carrying Hunters:—

Lot 1.—The KAFFIR QUEEN, brown mare, 6 years old, by Brown Moltun, by Inheritor, dam by Cupbearer. She is own sister to the celebrated steppelchase horse the Tanager, up to 16 stone, and well known in the Meath and Westmeath Hunt. There is no better weight-carrying hunter in any county.

Lot 2.—The EMERALD, dark chestnut gelding, 6 years old, by Blackout, dam by Cockshoop, grand-dam by Milesius, grand-dam-dam by Muelcan, up to 15 stone. A first rate performer, and likely, from his great speed, to make a first-rate steppelchase horse. Well known in the above-mentioned hunt.

Lot 3.—PRINCE PATRICK, grey gelding, 5 years old, by Brown Moltun, dam Victoria, by Sir Edward, grand-dam by Master Robert, up to 15 stone. No better hunter, and well-known in the above-mentioned hunt.

Lot 4.—PRINCESS LOUISA, brown mare, 4 years old, own sister to Lot 3. Has been ridden, but not hunted. She is a first-rate mare.

Lot 5.—HIPPITY WITCHETT, blood bay mare, 5 years old, thor'-bred, by Verulam, a capital hunter up to 12 stone. A good road mare, and perfectly trained to carry a lady.

The above horses are in first-rate condition, and well worthy the attention of noblemen and gentlemen in want of weight carrying Hunters. They will be on view, at the Repository, the day previous to the Auction, and are subject to the opinion of any Veterinary Surgeon before the sale.

AUGUSTUS BRYANT, Auctioneer.

ROSES.

MR. JOHN ABBOTT has received instructions to SELL by AUCTION, without the least reserve, in the MARKET-PLACE, CHURCH-LANE, DUNDEE, on MONDAY, DECEMBER 11, 1854, NINE powerful DRAUGHT HORSES, from 5 years old, belonging to her Majesty's Royal Horse Artillery. They are all staunch and free from vice, but "cast" in consequence of not being equal to the great speed required in their military evolutions. They may be seen at the stables of the George Inn from Twelve to Two o'clock, at which time the sale will commence.

At the same time will be sold, the property of a Gentleman who has bred them, an exceeding handsome THORN HILLY, rising 4 years old, and upwards of 15 hands high; and a handsome BAY FILLY, sister to the above, 3 years old. They are both by the same sire, which is three-parts bred, and the dam is half Arab and half English racer. They are animals of great promise.

Auction Office, Bridge street, Churchward, 20th November, 1854.

KNOW THYSELF!—The secret of DISCOVERING the TRUE CHARACTER of INDIVIDUALS from the peculiarities of their HANDWRITING, has long been practiced by ELLEN GRAHAM with astonishing success. Her startling delineations are both full and faithful, differing from anything hitherto attempted. All persons wishing to "know themselves," or friends in whom they are interested, must send specimen of their writing, stating sex and enclosing three recent penny stamps, to E. GRAHAM, 3, NEWROAD, HORNSEY, MIDDLESEX, and they will receive in a few days a minute detail of the mental and moral qualities, inclinations, affections, virtues, failings, &c., of the writer, with many other things hitherto unsuspected.

"Miss Graham is a most successful graphologist."—Family Herald.

NOTICE.

With the first number of the new volume of THE FIELD, and the new year, there will be presented to the Subscribers

THE SPORTSMAN'S ALMANAC,

AND

Country Gentleman's Calendar;

THE FIELD, THE GARDEN, THE FARM,
For the Year 1855.

This Almanack will contain superb Engravings, from designs by ANSBELL, WILSON, and others, with all the information useful for reference in the country house.

N.B.—This will be given to all who are Subscribers to THE FIELD for the year 1855.

ADVERTISEMENTS for "The Sportsman's Almanack" should be sent to THE FIELD Office without delay to secure insertion.

CONTENTS.

Chronicle of the Week	1,131
Sport and Sportsmen	1,132
Racing	1,133
Hunting	1,134
Shooting and Cricket	1,135
Yachting	1,136
Rowing and Angling	1,137
Sportsman's Library	1,137
Gardening	1,138
The Farm and Markets	1,139
Poultry	1,140
Amusements	1,141
Feuilleton	1,142

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

RACING.

- J. L. D.*—You are entitled to half the stakes.
Nim Shiek.—The portrait you refer to appeared in No. 31 of THE FIELD.
Houghton.—Yes; 7st 2lb.
A. Z.—The horse you refer to started at 5 to 1, but did not win.
Dick.—Horses shoes are not allowed in the weight.
Howard.—As the horse did not start, the bet is void.
C. C.—Horses not known must have their pedigree fully stated.

HUNTING.

- B.*—Your fixtures were received, but not in time for our edition sent by the early morning train of Saturday.
Hawdon.—Should the promised letter from your son arrive, as expected, we shall be happy to insert it in THE FIELD. The whole regiment ought to be proud of him.
Whisperer.—The cards must not reach our office later than the post arriving in London on Friday afternoons, or the fixtures cannot appear.
Hodkeway was replied to last week. See page 1106.

COURSING.

- Long Slip*.—Breed early in the season.

SHOOTING.

- L. S.*—You must "look alive" to make "a double" at partridges this time of the year. If the birds will not lie, you had better carry half barrels on full cock, for if your birds rise at a distance of forty yards, and go with the wind, and you have your gun to cock after they get up, you will have but a poor chance of bagging a brace.
A. Vance.—The best shot at pigeons from a trap, with a fair sporting gun, we ever saw, was a person who shot in the name of Masters. His proper name was Cox—formerly a gamekeeper to Sir Thomas Wicheote, Bart.

AQUATIC.

- N. N.*—The London Model Yacht Club dinner will come off at Anlerton's, in Fleet-street, on Tuesday next, December 5. Tickets, 3s. 6d. The dinner-list is now open at the bar. Call and add your name.

ANGLING.

- G. W.*—The salmon never breeds in lochs, pools, or lakes, but in fords and shallows. It breeds and remains in fresh water the first year of its existence, and after then it passes at least two-thirds of its time in fresh water; therefore it is, to all intents and purposes, a fresh water fish. We would advise you to read Mr. Shaw's work.
S. T.—The annual supper of the Piscatorial Society will be held at the Yorkshire Grey, Piccadilly, on Tuesday next, Dec. 5.

POULTRY.

- Havesh*.—By all means send your notes, however rough they may be. We frequently gain more valuable practical information from rough memoranda than studied correspondence.
Charles T.—When space is so limited, we are often compelled to omit reports and prize lists, some of which, as may be seen from our pages this week, are of great length.
S. N.—Try the gold spangled Bantams; you cannot do better.
Morris.—You are wrong; they did not get a prize, but were highly commended.
H. M.—They are very good layers, but the egg is small.

GARDEN.

- Prod.*—We are much obliged, and will see that it shall be attended to.
Penny.—The next Chiswick J.C. will be held on the following days—May 16, June 20, and July 11.

MISCELLANEOUS.

- Z.*—Sentari is on the A-Asia side of the Bosphorus.
Tyrol.—A mate in the Royal Navy holds rank between a shipman and a lieutenant. He is not, as in the merchant service, next to a "captain," and the "captain" therein is strictly but a "master," captain being confined to her Majesty's service.
K.—At Queen's College.
Fides.—We have stated over and over again that the yachting editor of THE FIELD has no connection whatever with the "Yachtsman's Gazette" or with "Hunt's Magazine." Heavily edited and contributed to the very first volume of the latter.
A Country Newsman.—The report is quite true, and on Tuesday afternoon a deputation waited on the Chancellor of the Exchequer to complain of the conduct of the Board of Inland Revenue in issuing the notice to the newspaper trade. We here submit it—"Inland Revenue, Somerset-house, London, 17th November, 1854.—Sir,—I am directed by the Commissioners of Inland Revenue to call your attention to the provisions of the 17th, 18th, 22nd, and 23rd sections of the Act 6 and 7 William IV., c. 76, and to inform you that it is their intention to put in force the summary powers contained in those enactments against the publication of unstamped newspapers containing news and intelligence of universal interest.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, THOMAS KLOON, Secretary." The Chancellor of the Exchequer is said to have justified the conduct of the Board, and consequently the deputation retired without their request having been granted.
A Sailor's Wife.—The total number of officers and crew on board the Prince, when she foundered in the Black Sea, is believed to have been between 130 and 140.
F. J.—We have repeatedly explained that the right bank of a river, in military phrase, is that which is on the right hand when you back to the source of the river; therefore Gravesend is on the right bank of the Thames, and Tilbury Port on the left.
S.—A snow resembles a brig nearer than a schooner, she carries a small mast immediately abaft the mainmast, on which the sail is set, instead of on the mainmast itself.
P. P. (Leds).—You must consult a solicitor.
J. Johns.—Call upon us on Tuesday at two p.m.

SEEDLING FLOWERS.

[We shall be happy to receive blooms of any choice seedlings of florist flowers, and will give our opinion candidly as to their merits. They should be packed in boxes, and surrounded by crumpled thin brown paper. The boxes should be stout, so as not to be crushed in transit through the Post-office. The postage must be paid, and packets should be addressed to the office, 409, Strand, London.—EDITORS.]

TRADE CATALOGUES.

[We shall be happy to receive catalogues from the trade, and they shall be noticed in our columns, and extracts will be made if deserving the attention of the general reader.—EDITORS.]

The Field.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1854.

CHRONICLE OF THE WEEK.

THE news from the Crimea is decidedly depressing in its character. The elements have declared themselves in favour of the Czar, and the storms of the Euxine prove more formidable enemies than the battalions of Menschikoff. On the 14th a storm occurred which occasioned a fearful list of casualties among the allied marine. Thirty-two English transports are reported to have been wrecked; the magnificent screw-steamer Prince, and the Sea Nymph, are reported to have foundered with all their crews on board; three lesser steamers were stranded; the Sanspareil (screw) went on shore, the engines of the Samson were damaged; even Sir Edmund Lyons's splendid ship, the Agamemnon, did not escape without injury; and Admiral Dundas's flag-ship, the Britannia, had five feet of water in her. The French fleet also sustained great damage, and the Henri IV. (line-of-battle ship), with its attendant steamer, the Pluton, were lost. We have no intelligence that any soldiers were lost. Meanwhile the Russians are bringing up fresh reinforcements, and the siege operations of the Allies—whether from the loss at Inkerman, or the failure of ammunition—are well nigh at a standstill. What renders the loss of the Prince particularly inauspicious, is the fact that she had on board large stores of medical and general comforts assigned to the army—comforts of which our brave fellows stand in grievous need.

Parliament is suddenly summoned for the 12th, and that may be taken for a significant indication that the ministers are in a difficulty. Both money and men are wanted, and an Act of Parliament is required to enable the militia to be embodied and ordered out on active service, so that all the regiments of the line now in garrison may be free to proceed without delay to the Crimea. Those difficulties must, indeed, be urgent, which compel the ministry to face the country with Sebastopol untaken, and a host of blunders to explain. It seems certain that Mr. Gladstone will dismiss at once the idea of paying for the war as we go on, and that a loan will be applied for: it seems also certain, that the country will submit to this, if not cheerfully, at least not grudgingly.

The attitude of Austria excites alarm. She occupies the Principalities, and, by paralysing the Turks (who fought so bravely at Silistria), enables the troops upon the Pruth to march northward into Sebastopol. Meantime, it is by no means certain whether she will side with Russia or the Allies. The probability is, that she is waiting for a result. In the present aspect of affairs, the criticisms of M. Kossuth (in his speech at St. Martin's Hall on Wednesday night), are awkward—because they are unfortunately unanswerable:—

"England has bent her mind on bringing Austria over to herself; she has sacrificed to this one aim everything—numerous millions spent in vain, the life-blood of the flower of England spilt in vain; principles, political reputation, the liberal character of the war, and the very issue of the war—everything. And has your Government gained Austria? Go and read the well-founded lamentations in the organs—even the ministerial organs—of publicity about the treacherous attitude, and the overbearing insolence of that Austria which your Government persisted in courting with so much submission, and which in return facilitates the enterprises of Russia, insults your Allies, and counteracts your combinations. It is not only that you have not gained over Austria, but you have the Turks arrested in the midst of their victorious course; and the fruit of their heroic struggle, poor Wallachia, played over into the treacherous hands of despotic Austria. There is the Turkish army paralysed on the one hand, and there is on the other hand the Czar made and left free to throw overpowering numbers upon the flank and the rear of your gallant ranks in the Crimea."

Kossuth urges England to depend upon herself, and to rouse those oppressed nationalities who are the sincerest enemies of despotism.

It is reported in some quarters that Admiral Dundas has been recalled, and that Sir Edmund Lyons is to have command of the fleet—a report almost too good to be true.

With all our boast about civilisation and the improvement of those arts and sciences in which we are notoriously so superior to the enemy, it is an undoubted fact that we are carrying on this war in almost utter neglect of those advantages. The machinery of war with which our armies are now besieging Sebastopol is very little better than that used by the Duke of Wellington at the time of the Peninsular campaign. Where are the enormous natural forces, and still more wonderful machinery, which scientific men have discovered during the last forty years? There was Perkins's steam-gun, for instance, capable of throwing four hundred bullets into an advancing column in one minute, with all the force and precision of a rifle. What, too, has become of Captain Warner's invention? James Nasmyth, the inventor of the steam-hammer, and one of the greatest mechanics in the country, declares that he can make a gun capable of carrying a ball weighing three hundred-weight three miles, and offers to do it. Mr. Perkins, son to the inventor of the steam-gun, offers to project by steam a ball weighing a ton to a distance of five miles. Conceive the effect of such ammunition against the strongest walls—even those of Sebastopol! A correspondent of the Times, signing himself "Scientia," adopts the suggestion hinted at by us last week, that the best plan of taking a place by storm would be to do it by contract. Compare the modus operandi of a contractor with that of a scientific tactician. A tram-road would have lightened the labour of draught, in bringing up the heavy guns and material from Balaklava to the trenches. The American boring-machine would have been brought to bear upon the solid rock with ten times the speed and efficiency of the finest Sappers and Miners. Corrugated iron houses would have protected the workmen from the climate, and science would have been pressed to supply her most skilful sons to watch over and preserve their health. Engines of destruction, far exceeding those now in use, would have been provided, and, long ere this, Sebastopol could have fallen. The deficiencies of the old system cannot be better expressed than by quoting Mr. Nasmyth's remarks bearing upon the superiority of wrought over cast iron ordnance:—

"Why, then, do we continue to use cast iron for our great ordnance, which are naturally subjected to vastly more severe shocks and strains than anchors or railway axles, and, in so doing, limit our destructive power to its very limited capabilities, to accommodate which we are obliged to come to such close quarters and discharge such comparatively ineffective shot, that we sacrifice in consequence thousands of lives of our bravest men, and spend millions of money in our endeavour to accomplish, by throwing a vast number of small pieces of iron, that which we might to a certainty accomplish by massive shot and shell discharged from our wrought-iron ordnance at distances quite out of reach of the enemy; for nothing but such massive missiles as I refer to—namely, shot of two and three hundred-weight—will ever effectually destroy the tremendous forts in question."

The Central Association for the Relief of Orphans and Widows has at last yielded to the pressure of public opinion, now that it has effectually damaged itself in the opinion of the public. The obnoxious Rule 14 is repealed; but the stream of public bounty has ceased to flow in that direction. The Patriotic Fund is progressing gloriously, and promises to reach a total of at least half-a-million. Nor is the private liberality now exercised in aid of our brave defenders less worthy of the nation. Mr. Kingscote volunteers to load a yacht with comforts for the army in the Crimea, and the Duke of Marlborough has sent him a hundred head of deer to be preserved and taken out. Contributions of game are earnestly solicited from country gentlemen for this purpose, and if immediately consigned to the care of Mr. Gunter they will be available for immediate exportation. A lady writes that she has parted with a diamond ring, worth £25, in order to send out some comforts to the army, and urges all ladies possessed of jewels to follow her example. Prince Albert even does something in this way, for he is sending out seal-skin coats as a personal present to the leading officers in the Crimea.

Mr. W. S. O'Brien, now in Paris, has written a letter to Galignani's Messenger, declaring that "sound policy, as well as generous feeling, dictates the promulgation by the British Government of a complete and general amnesty with regard to the proceedings of all those who were compromised in the insurrectionary movement of the year 1818." The term insurrectionary seems to indicate that Mr. O'Brien has at length arrived at a due appreciation of his conduct, and, if he and his fellow exiles really be sincere, Government will do well to consider the value that those really earnest souls, if impelled in the right direction, would now be in arousing the patriotic feeling of Ireland. Always impulsive and always warm, the desire to forget present differences is not confined to the politicians of Ireland; it extends even to the clergy.

While Catholic and Protestant priests are vying with each other in the duties of consolation at the East, a better and kinder spirit is arising between them, even in Ireland. The Dean of Down, in a letter addressed to the Rev. Dr. Tighe Gregory, refers to the Church Service used on the 5th of November, in the following terms:—

"I am happy to say that, in my parish church, I was not reading a service which Roman Catholics regard as offensive on a day, and at the very hour, when so many of our Roman Catholic soldiers were fighting gallantly and nobly for the glory of England, and in opposition to 'Russian tyranny and arbitrary power;' and you will, I am confident, agree with me in thinking that now would be a happy opportunity, for those who have the authority, to prohibit all future use of the service referred to, and remove it from our Prayer-book in order that there may be no obstacle, on all future Fifth of November, to Protestants and Roman Catholics harmoniously and cordially uniting to commemorate the splendid victory of Inkerman."

There are few who will not subscribe to this sentiment.

The flax harvest in Ireland has proved a failure, compared with that of 1853. At the fourteenth annual meeting of the Royal Flax Society, held at Belfast, it was demonstrated very clearly that the trade cannot get on without Russian flax. Fears were expressed lest the Government should put a stop to the under-hand trade via Prussia. Out of 80,000 tons hitherto imported, we have taken 60,000 from Russia. So we are driven to encourage in secret, the trade of an enemy whom we are fighting openly.

Mr. Perry's case grows worse instead of better, and we fear that it is now almost beyond the reach of explanation. His assertion that he wanted to draw the money for investment in an American line, is rendered dubious by the fact that the line named is not in existence. The Mayor of Windsor has been provoked into publishing a letter from Mr. Perry, dated from Paris, the 10th of November, in which he makes the following extraordinary statement—

"I have certainly been the most lucky man possible. A gentleman here, an American, who is enormously rich, has signed an agreement, which is also signed by the American Embassy, giving me one-half of all he possesses,—viz., land to a very large extent, containing mines of gold and copper, besides timber, with which he has taken an agreement to supply the Emperor for the French navy. I now keep my carriage with him, and am going to take a fine hotel, private, in Paris with him."

The subscribers to the Defence and Testimonial Fund will now probably direct that their money be paid to the Patriotic Fund, and all the more readily that it is quite clear Mr. Perry can be in no need of it.

War and natural causes of mortality have vacated some seven or eight seats in the House of Commons, which have now to be filled up. Sir Hamilton Seymour declines Marylebone, and the reason is obvious. Sir Hamilton is a diplomatist, and to go into Parliament now would necessitate strong pledges; those pledges might be on the wrong side. Sir Hamilton, therefore, wisely prefers waiting for the next embassy. Meantime the electors of Marylebone are about to hold a meeting to select the best man—a mode of proceeding greatly to be preferred to the ordinary form of electioneering.

Intelligence from America announces that the autumn elections have exhibited an overwhelming strength on the part of the "Know-nothing" party. This will have the inevitable effect of diverting the stream of our emigration from America towards Australia.

In Spain, the tumult thickens. Espartero and the Ministers have perfected their resignations. The poor Queen is lost upon the stormy sea of politics, and sadly wants a pilot. Some people expected that Espartero would put himself at the head of the National Guard, and march upon Arragon to quell the rising tumult there. The peaceably-disposed of the nation look to him for security.

The obituary of the week includes Mr. Lockhart, formerly editor of the "Quarterly Review;" he died at Abbot'sford. As the son-in-law of Scott, and the occupant of the highest critical chair in the kingdom, Mr. Lockhart was a notable man. Would that we could add that the manner in which he fulfilled his office excited admiration of him when he was alive, or regret for his memory now that he is dead.

GOOD GHEER.

THE army is to pass the winter in the Crimea. It will probably be a winter of inaction, for the same cold that will benumb them will freeze the Russians. The country is now considering how it can make the gallant men, who have fought so bravely, as comfortable in their winter quarters as the position will permit. It is a noble effort, and all should help it who can. A Mr. Kingscote has suggested that yachtsmen should betake themselves to the Black Sea, boarded with comforts, and such luxuries as can be easily conveyed, and that the country gentlemen should give some of their game, which Messrs. Gunter have undertaken to preserve in their delicious fashion, in cans for transmission; and that with interchanges of good offices they should spend a cheerful winter with the troops, keeping up a continual communication between the yachts and the camp. The idea is admirable; it has been eagerly seized. The Duke of Marlborough has presented 100 head of his fallow deer, and game is pouring in. We make known the movement here, because our readers are the very men who can most aid it; for all have their preserves, which might be thinned a little without detriment; or, if not game, a poultry-yard or a piggery; and from them a welcome contribution might be made, which will cheer many a brave heart during the Christmas days and January frosts on the heights of Balaklava.

THE WINTER SESSION.

What does it mean? Militia—Loans—or Taxes? The ministerial papers say militia only. The militia cannot be sent to Malta or Gibraltar without an Act of Parliament, even though they go of their own free will. The Times at first said that money was wanted to carry on the war, and that a loan was in the wind. But "undoubted authority" next day meets this with a flat contradiction, and says that no money is wanted; and that, if there was, there would be no loan. Mr. Gladstone adheres absolutely to his scheme for making the country pay the price of the war year by year. But will Mr. Gladstone be supported in this by a majority of the Parliament? We doubt it. The country could not endure more income-tax, while there is a manifest want of more money; and there remains only the old system of borrowing, which, after all, is more justifiable in present circumstances than was any war-loan ever before contracted.

SPORT AND SPORTSMEN.

[It is necessary to explain that under this title it is designed to present a weekly summary or sketch of the sayings and doings of the sporting world generally, the various divisions of which are embraced in the subsequent departments. This will enable the reader, who does not care for the minutest details, to obtain a general knowledge of what is going on in the sporting world, without the trouble of exploring each of its records.]

HAVING bid adieu to flat-racing—inasmuch as the season is now over—we find ourselves amidst hunting, shooting, and coursing. In these sports is engaged the genuine sportsman. There is, however, a great difference between a sportsman and a sporting-man—the former cares for nothing in the shape of getting, whilst the latter could almost live on the excitement attending the rise and fall of the horses engaged in their respective races. It is this excitement, in many instances, coupled with the love of "filthy lucre," that causes many very questionable movements to be recorded in connection with racing. The genuine sportsman, on the contrary—we mean that class of the community who are accustomed to range hill and dell with their pointers, to sound a whoop with the greyhounds, and who ride hard and well to the hounds—delights to witness a struggle with the thorough-breds, regardless of the result in a pecuniary sense of the word. We are sorry to state—and there can be no disputing the fact—that we are gradually losing some of the best patrons of the turf. This is to be regretted, as the sport of racing, unconnected with the disgraceful movements alluded to, is a noble pastime, and does much to encourage the breed of the horse.

Touching the question of breeding and the encouragement given to breeders, we will briefly revert to the order recently issued by the Inspector General of Cavalry to officers having authority to purchase and supply cavalry-horses for the Government. The order instructs the authorities to endeavour to purchase four-yr-olds for £25. 5s. each. This price, in our opinion, is not sufficient for such a four-yr-old as would be found good enough for the wear and tear of active service. In fact, neither the farmers nor breeders can afford to sell their animals at this price. The Secretary at War has also sanctioned the purchase of five-yr-olds at £32, and seven and eight-yr-olds at £40. This figure is somewhat nearer the mark; but a good four-yr-old is surely worth more than £25. 5s. Let our Government calculate the expense, trouble, and risk of rearing and feeding a horse, and we think they will be induced to offer higher sums; that is, if the object to be attained is "to procure a really constitutionally-sound horse, fit for immediate service." Officers in command and in search of horses are to report on the first of every month what progress they have made in procuring them. We sincerely trust they will meet with sufficient numbers; but we fear they will be obliged to improve their prices. If a seven or eight-yr-old is worth £40, surely a four-yr-old is worth more than £25.

The breeders of the north complain sadly of the few demands they have had this season for their hunters, owing to the absence of several of their best customers, the officers in the Crimea. Some, alas! poor fellows, will never ride across country again. Let us, however, hope for the safe return of others, still in existence, to grace the hunting-field.

There is an abundance of foxes this season in all parts of the country; and several extraordinary good runs have already been recorded. As will be seen by THE FIELD of last week, the long-disputed question between the Essex and Herts hunts has at length been ably settled by Lords Yarborough and Redesdale; than whom two better sportsmen never crossed the country. The fall which Sir Richard Sutton experienced last week in the field was not, we are happy to say, of a very serious nature, and he is now at work again. Sir Richard is something like "the old Squire,"—he is not easily deterred from following his favourite sport. Our Melton Mowbray correspondent speaks highly of the superior turn-out of the Quorn this season, the stud consisting of seventy first-class horses. The worthy Baronet, we understand, is better satisfied with this country than he was with the Gottesmore, where he frequently drew the covers blank. Sir Richard then wished himself back again to the Burton Hunt, where he never had to complain of the want of foxes. The miscreants of Gotesmore have again been destroying the foxes by wholesale; the present excellent master is therefore always likely to draw the covers blank.

The late grouse season did not produce so much game as did that of the preceding year; in fact, it is some time since the moors swarmed with all kinds of moor game to the extent they did in 1853, consequently the returns of the "great days" of this season have not equalled those of last year. The disease by which vast quantities of grouse were destroyed, has again shown itself. The proprietors of the moors, however, obtained a considerable rise in their rentals, in consequence of the great demands for shooting-ground by sportsmen who had given up visiting Scotland. The complaints previous to the memorable year 1853, of the gradual decrease of moor game, coupled with the fact that the proprietors would not lower their rentals for the right of sporting, caused a remarkable falling-off in the number of those gentlemen who were accustomed to rent their sport from year to year. This season, however, several veterans again revisited the Scotch grounds; but have returned, in many instances, disappointed with their sport, and the high figure at which it was purchased. Lovers of grouse do not object to give large sums for first-rate shooting, but they do object to pay exorbitant prices for the right of traversing the Highlands in search of a scanty supply of game. The salmon rivers are also failing in their supply; nor will this be wondered at, so long as such foul modes of capture are allowed to be resorted to by cowardly fellows, who, we are sorry to state, are scattered near every favourite water—not only in Scotland, but in England, Ireland, and Wales. The breeding season for home game (pheasants and partridges) was most prolific; but the broods were thinned by the heat of the weather and dryness of the soil. Moreover, the harvest was late; and, such being the case, the birds became wild and strong before the gunners could get at them. These circumstances have operated against the filling of large bags. Hares were scarce, but the sportsmen (not the pot-hunter) cares but little for the rolling over of "puss" when he can get a shot.

The lovers of the rod will be glad to learn there is at length a probability of the fishery laws being amended, as Mr. Henry Marshall has published a letter in a portion of the daily papers to the effect that a friend of his has promised to introduce a Bill in the House of Commons with a view to the restoration of the salmon fisheries of Great Britain. This is a subject of great importance, not only to naturalists, but to all classes of the community, and our only surprise is that the subject upon which the author treats has not received that attention from our Government which its importance demands. By wise and just legislation this beautiful fresh-water fish may again grace the vast extent of barren rivers in all parts of Great Britain, and may be rendered cheap, and brought within the reach of the poorest artisan. Mr. Marshall says, "Parliament should declare cruives, stake, and bag-nets illegal, and salmon-fry catching, spearing fish preparing to spawn, and kelt-killing, highly penal;" and that "there should be only two lawful modes of taking salmon—the rod and the drag-net." He also states "that salmon should not be captured after the latter end of August, in order that they may have the proper feeding and breeding time destined for them by Nature." There are several river proprietors who are at considerable expense in preserving their waters, but derive no return for their trouble and expenditure. These rivers are fearfully poached; the present law does not give the salmon a fair opportunity to multiply, and it is utterly impossible to calculate how many millions of young salmon are untimely destroyed by such destructive inventions as are allowed by Act of Parliament. Mr. Robert Ramshotom has already published some valuable communications on the salmon question. His remedy consists of an enactment to the effect, "that the mesh of every salmon-net shall be of such a size (hereafter to be determined), as to permit the escape of all salmon of seven pounds weight and under." The reader is probably aware that a two-and-a-half inch mesh is the least by which salmon may legally be captured, and that the employment of a smaller mesh subjects the offender to a penalty. The intention, in prohibiting the use of diminutive meshes, was highly commendable, but, unfortunately, the statute did not answer the end for which it was originally designed. At the date of its enactment but little was known of the natural history of the salmon. At that time, and indeed up to a very recent period, it was generally thought that the sprod and mort (sea-trout) were the young of the salmon. Acting under this impression, the Legislature adopted a two-and-a-half-inch mesh, in the belief that such a size would be large enough to allow young salmon to pass through, and ascend the rivers for the purpose of spawning. Later researches have shown that the mort and sprod are an entirely distinct species, and that grilse, or young salmon, are of such average dimensions, that by far the greater number has no chance of escape from the statute net. It is therefore evident that, if the fishery laws are not amended, salmon will soon be double the price it now is, and that all the artificial breeding, and other arts of man, can never make it cheap and abundant, unaided by suitable and natural laws. We sincerely hope the proposed Bill will become law, not because it interests our readers—the aristocracy and monied circles—but because its effects would prove highly beneficial to the salmon-loving public.

The steeple-chases at Harrow, on Thursday last, were remarkably well attended. The Grand Annual Chase of 5 sovs each, with 50 added, was won easily by Mr. Mills's Janus, carrying 9st 4lb. Nom-de-Guerre ran second, giving the winner nearly two stone. Some spectators were of opinion that, had he kept on the right side of the post, he must have won. Janus, however, won cleverly. The steeple-chasers that have already shown in public this season are a sorry lot, with the exception of the Haylake winner (Needwood), who goes remarkably straight and well. As the season advances another Switcher or Pioneer may make his appearance. Last season showed evident symptoms of a filling-off in the number of competitors. When this sport first became general, the farmers took a delight in preparing, and entering their own cracks to compete for the prizes. The present handicaps—favouring, as they do, the flat-racers—entirely exclude even the chance of a perfect hunter carrying off the stakes. Several of the winners last year only carried from 8st to 10st. If a horse cannot win with 10st 7lb, he ought to be weeded from the stud of steeplechasers.

A Mr. W. Barton, of Hatfield, Yorkshire, met with a fatal accident, on Saturday last, by the explosion of his gun when in the field; thereby adding another to the long list of victims who have met with untimely deaths, entirely through their own carelessness.

LAST WEEK Mr. R. Stevens, the veterinary surgeon of Park-lane, operated very successfully upon Pantomime.

RACING.

REVIEW OF THE RACING SEASON, 1854.

No. II.

LIVERPOOL, independent of its "Grand National Steeplechase," gave us half-a-dozen flat-race items, but the fields were small, and the results unimportant. St. Clare won the Spring Cup of £290 with consummate ease; and the five-yr-old Jullien, entered for 20 sovs, winning the Optional Selling Stakes, was sold for 38 gs, being three more than he fetched at Nottingham in the preceding week; Mr. Topham benefitting £19. 18s. DONCASTER was fraught with interest. Pomiceston's journey to the moor was avowedly to claim subsequent allowances; Ptolemy won his maiden race, and is reputed to be the embryo Cestrian champion of the coming season; and Alonzo placed the Doncaster Handicap of £482 to his lucky owner's credit, wresting the spoils from a fair squadron of fifteen. The Hopeful Stakes of £350 had a brilliant array of twenty juvenile disputants, for which the crack Oaks filly for Malton, Cypriana, the half-sister to Songstress, was backed for an immense stake, but was unplaced in the tussle, the weedy Lady Palmerston winning two clean lengths from Flatterer (whom they fancy as an outsider for the Derby) and Clotilda. A brace of sales were effected, by which £246. 15s. found its way into the official exchequer, Penitent, 3 yrs (£30), being bought in for 155 gs, and Cimicina, 2 yrs (£40), sold for 80 gs. The first of the Queen's Plates for the season was competed for at SALISBURY, where Oulston, the Alice Hawthorn son—and looking particularly "jolly"—made his successful bow; and Defiance redeemed the Newton mistake, by severely vanquishing Orestes and Cineas. Trifle floored the Pantomime adherents for the Wiltshire Stakes of £570; and the three-yr-old Hermitage, receiving but 12lbs. from Old Rowley, landed the fielders for the Handicap Plate, easily. Donna, 3 yrs (£30), fetched 42 gs at the BRISTOL HUNT meeting, where she won a couplet of stakes. COVENTRY, under the merry dynasty, was the avant courier to the Warwickshire campaign; but, with the exception of the half-bred Wellesbourne, succumbing to Battery by a head only, after a most splendid race for the Coventry Handicap of £161, and Bull's Eye (20 sovs) being bought in for 105 gs, after winning the Optional Selling Stakes, nothing transpired in the ribbon locality to require more than a passing comment from us. At WARWICK there were three days of exciting sport. The more noticeable features, however, were the defeat of Rataplan, for the Trial Stakes of £140, by Orestes, the easy triumph of Border Chief in the T.Y.O. Stakes, and the disqualification of the first and second horses (Squire of Malton and Kennington) in the Dehdale event. Census, a good descendant of the lost Lanercost, won a trio of Selling Stakes, for which he was entered to be sold for 20 sovs, and was successively bought in at 85 gs, 120 gs, and 170 gs; thus bringing £333. 15s. to the fund. In the following week came what we consider to be the first of the principal assemblies of the season, viz., the NORTHAMPTON. Orestes followed up his Warwick success by howling Filbert and the Reiver over, in the Trial essay—rather a puzzling affair, at the time, when we called to mind the stone given by the latter to the present victim in the preceding autumn. The Great Northamptonshire Stakes of £965 was not only a complete chapter of accidents, but fell short in the numerical strength of the field. The triumphant landing of the Bretby colours, by the aid of the home-bred Jacqueline, gave the fielders a rare coup; the mare, under the steerage of the promising young Ashmall, clearing the goal a short length from little Braeken and the favoured, but queer-tempered, Defiance. Tom Dawson's stout couplet, Red Lion and Chief Justice, were placed hors-de-combat by misfortune, the former by a fall, and the latter by a break down, which finished his unfortunate career. Veteran, Ptolemy, and Mr. Sykes, too, also fell; and Swiftsure narrowly escaped floundering. The leviathan string of twenty-eight showed for the Spencer Plate of £785 on the five furlongs course, but there was a very indifferent start, in which Prime Minister and Pelion figured conspicuously. Welham compensated the Maltou division for their miss on the previous day, by pulling through from the speedy Koh-i-Noor, who, but for the 7lb. penalty for his Warwick win, might have reversed the judge's fiat. Hex was claimed for 500 sovs immediately after his Cup victory; and Flatterer justified the confidence of the ring in his début for the Althorp Park Stakes of £360 for two-yr-olds; his eleven opponents, as subsequent running proved, being of a very inferior grade. The committee received £272. 17s. clear, from two sales, Census (30 sovs) being bought-in for 250 gs, and Prevarication (30 sovs) sold for 67 gs. The month's business may be thus briefly summed up:—

Meeting.	Days.	Stakes.	Horses.	Money.
Liverpool.....	1	6	25	£ 275
Doncaster.....	2	9	75	1,314
Salisbury.....	2	9	43	1,305
Brighton.....	1	4	22	162
Coventry.....	1	4	25	298
Doncaster.....	1	1	6	45
Kiplin, Coates.....	1	1	3	13
St. Ivo's.....	1	3	24	66
Reverley.....	1	2	11	97
Warwick.....	3	19	107	1,800
Newcastle.....	1	4	23	195
Northampton.....	2	12	112	3,151
				17 74 486 £9,051

The April events were ushered in by the aristocratic meet at CROXTON PARK, where the steeple-chaser Bourton won the Granby Handicap of £370, and Leybourne was claimed for £50. CURLEWHAM was merely a gathering for hunters; Westwood came in first for one event, but was disqualified for having been in a trainer's stable. The spring tryst at EPSOM was particularly interesting; but it was the last poor Sam Beeton was doomed to officiate at. Orinoco was at home on the six furlong course for the Railway Plate, though he had a tight squeeze at the finish from Index, of his own year, to whom he was conceding 18lbs. Virago's double triumph for the City and Suburban Handicap of £1,100, and the Great Metropolitan Stakes of £1,600, though not unexpected, was a wonderful performance, pleasing and creditable to owner and trainer, and a happy lift for the stock-aspiring Pyrrhus the First. Mirabeau (30 sovs.) fetched 90 gs. after the Selling Stakes essay, Mr. Dorling thereby netting £64. 10s. At NEWTON, Jullien won a brace of heats races, for each of which he was entered to be sold for a ten-pound-note, and, having fetched 70 and 50 gs. respectively, placed £111. 5s. in Mr. Topham's coffers. The NEWMARKET CRAVEN scarcely maintained its average. The unsupported Coup d'Etat surprised us by winning the Newmarket Handicap of £85 easily; but, with the exception of Boiardo's canter for the Buckhurst Stakes of £625, and Orestes upsetting the Sittingbourne "pot" in the Port Stakes of £450, there was nothing further of moment to require special notice here, unless it be the couplet of victories gained by the then Derby and St. Leger outsiders, the Trapper and Calamus, the latter of whom was claimed for 600 sovs. CATTERICK BRIDGE looked up this spring, and we hope will thrive under the fresh infusion. It was cheering to see the blue and white stripes of Mr. Meiklam, now gone to his last home, flutter victoriously in the Sixth Eastby Triennial and Catterick Stakes, and Templeman secured more than usually rejoiced at the result of his efforts; no man was more attached to a master than Sim was to the departed Scot. General Breeze came in first for the Brough Handicap of £207, but, having gone on the wrong side of a post, the race was awarded to Middlesboro. Johnny Taft, a two-yr-old Chanticleer off-shoot, was sold for 75 gs after the Scramble Stakes, realising £27. 14s. to the fund. The YORK SPRING was a most successful gathering; but the Great Northern Handicap of £2,180, and the Flying Dutchman's Handicap of £555, was somewhat diminished in interest by the accredited superiority of Virago, who achieved both without the semblance of an effort. The little Hospodar carried the Zetland spots and Job in triumph for the Spring St. Leger of £240 and the Eglington Stakes of £175; and Helena agreeably surprised the fielders by cleverly winning the Lonsdale Cup of £345. We had a couple of Selling Stakes, the winners of which brought £335. 15s. to the fund, the Usurer (£30) selling for 205 gs, and Mirabeau for 170 gs. MALTON, considering its resources, and that the meeting immediately succeeded the Knavesmire one, did not flourish so well as might have been expected. Captain Cornish swept the principal events—the Malton Handicap of £319, and the Convivial Handicap of £227. The committee cleared £33 by the sale of Dinah, the Farewell Stakes victrix. Our summary for the month stands thus:—

Meeting.	Days.	Stakes.	Horses.	Money.
Croxton Park.....	2	9	46	£1,125
Cheltenham.....	2	6	35	287
Epsom.....	2	10	93	3,534
Harrow S. S.....	2	5	18	325
Newton S. S.....	2	7	43	412
Newmarket C.....	5	37	143	9,205
Catterick Bridge..	2	10	70	868
Abergavenny.....	2	5	29	271
Shoredham.....	1	3	10	62
The Hoo.....	1	5	29	395
York.....	2	11	96	4,259
Morpeth.....	1	1	6	15
Malton.....	2	13	58	1,171
Total.....	26	122	681	£21,920

We must defer the May, June, and July review for "No. III."

CHANGE OF NAME.—In consequence of there being another Schamyl in the field, Mr. John Scott has abandoned the appellation for his colt foal by the Cossack, out of Factory Girl, and assumed that of Inkerman.

J. M. STANLEY and Rowland Hunt, Esqrs., have accepted the Stewardship of the Shrewsbury May meeting.

DATES OF RACES.

FEBRUARY.—Nottingham...	29	Nottingham	19
Liverpool Spring	28	Goodwood	31
MARCH.—Doncaster	6	AUGUST.—Brighton	8
Salisbury	8	Richmond Club	10
Warwick Spring	9	Wolverhampton	13
APRIL.—Newmarket Caven	9	Reading	13
York Spring	17	Leamington	16
Malton	19	York	22
Newmarket First Spring	23	Exham	23
MAY.—Chester Spring	1	Derby	23
Newmarket Second Spring	8	SEPTEMBER.—Warwick	4
Shrewsbury	10	Doncaster	11
Bath	15	Bedford	18
Epsom	22	Liverpool	19
Manchester	30	Newmarket First October	25
JUNE.—Ascot	5	Northampton	27
Hampton	13	OCTOBER.—Chester	2
Ilbury	20	Wrexham	4
Stockbridge	21	Newmarket Second October	8
Winchester	22	Warwick Autumn	16
Worcester	26	Richmond	17
JULY.—Newmarket	3	Newmarket Houghton	22
Worcester	3	Worcester	30
Leicester	5	NOVEMBER.—Epsom	1
Liverpool	11	Liverpool	6
Stanford	17	Shrewsbury	13

TATTERSALL'S.—MONDAY.

A scanty attendance, and very little betting.

9 to 1 agst Greenhit	Esuriens	33 to 1 agst Colt by Catherstone	out of Polydora (33 to 1 to some money)
15 to 1 — Onston (t to £175)		1000 to 15 — Rumbling Katie (t)
15 to 1 — Wild Dayrell (t)

THURSDAY.

3900 to 100 agst colt, by Catherstone	3200 to 200 agst Onston (t)
stone out of Polydora (t)	1000 to 15 — Rumbling Katie (t)

MANCHESTER.—TUESDAY.

There was a good muster of subscribers.

Evans agst The Three-yr-olds, (off, t 6 to 4)
50 to 1 — Anything (off)
10 to 1 agst Graculus	Esuriens
10 to 1 — Declare (off)
11 to 1 — Lord of the Isles (t 100 to 8)
25 to 1 agst Dirk Hatterick (off)
30 to 1 — Polydora (offered, t 35 to 1)
40 to 1 — Frederick (t 50 to 1)

HARROW STEEPLECHASES.—THURSDAY.

Selling Hurdle Race of 5 sovs each, with 25 added. For three-yr-olds and upwards. Optional selling weights, &c. Two miles, over five flights of hurdles. 9 sals.

Major Brighurst's The Hero, aged, 10st 8lb, £30	Mr. Cameron	1
Mr. Barling's Bullfinch, aged, 10st 8lb, £30	G. Eastwell	2
Mr. Brown's Salopian, 5 yrs, 10st 8lb, £30	Bailey	3
Mr. Jackson's Maid of Kildare (late The Lark), aged, 10st 8lb, £30	Owner	4
Mr. Seale's Bevenno, 3 yrs, 10st 13lb, £30	Hackett	5
Mr. A. B. Freni's The Hawk, aged, 10st 8lb, £30	Witherton	6
Mr. D. Land's Massarouli, 4 yrs, 9st 11lb, £30	Green fell
Mr. Hill's Firebrand, 3 yrs, 9st 10lb, £30	W. White fell
Mr. Henry's Phorold, 4 yrs, 10st 2lb, £30	A. Sant	halted

Betting—2 to 1 agst Bullfinch, 4 to 1 agst The Hero, 5 to 1 agst Firebrand.

Won by two lengths; same distance between the second and third; bad fourth; Bevenno walked in fifth. Firebrand fell at the second flight of hurdle after passing the Stand. In the bottom, at the far turn, Massarouli and The Hawk slipped up, and came heavily to the ground. Both riders were much injured. Phorold bolted on the wrong side of the post, and was no longer seen in the race.

On returning to scale, an objection was made against The Hero, on the ground that he had gone the wrong side of the flags in turning into the straight the second time round. After hearing evidence, however, the Stewards decided that The Hero was entitled to the stakes. He was afterwards bought in for 70 guineas.

Grand Annual Steeplechase of 5 sovs each, with 30 added. About four miles. 11 sals.

Mr. Mills's Janus, aged, 9st 8lb	W. White	1
Mr. W. C. Clifton's Nom-de-guerre, aged, 11st 2lb	A. Sant	2
Mr. Tibbury's Taffy, aged, 11st	J. Davall	3
Mr. Darby's Sandhurst, 4 yrs, 10st 8lb (carried 10st 13lb)	Owner	4

Betting—Even on Janus, 2 to 1 agst Nom-de-guerre, 5 to 1 agst any other. Nom-de-guerre led up the hill, Janus and Taffy, close together, being second and third; Sandhurst some lengths behind. On quitting the wood Taffy was seen in front, with Sandhurst second, Janus third, and Nom-de-guerre last, but when near the foot of the hill Nom-de-guerre went up to Taffy, and soon afterwards took the lead. Sandhurst refused at the fence behind the Farm, and Nom-de-guerre went on the wrong side of the next post, followed by Sandhurst. Nom-de-guerre retraced his way, and, on returning into sight after leaving the Plantation, he again showed in front, and was first over the Brook; soon afterwards, however, Janus passed him, and won easily by two lengths; the second beating the third four lengths; Sandhurst was far astern.

Selling Steeplechase of 5 sovs each, with 25 added. For three-yr-olds and upwards. Optional selling weights. Two miles and a half. 6 sals.

Mr. R. Sworler's Little John, aged, 10st 7lb, £25	Nightingall	1
Mr. B. Land's Blue Stockings, 11st, £50	W. White	2
Capt. Monart's Baronet, aged, 10st 7lb, £25	Bailey	3
Mr. C. Clapham's Sunbird, aged, 10st 7lb, £25	Norman
Mr. Barber's Potter, 5 yrs, 10st 10lb, £30	W. Archer

Betting—2 to 1 on Blue Stockings, 1 to 1 agst any other. Won by three lengths; bad third. Potter and Sunbird fell at the Brook going out; both were quickly remounted, but Potter was not persevered with. Snowdrift was pulled up at the Brook on returning to the winning field.

The winner was sold for 60 guineas. The weather was clear and healthy, and the show of general company somewhat numerous.

TURFIANA.

TROTTER MATCH.—On Monday a trotting-match of two miles took place on the Colchester-road between a bay horse belonging to Mr. G. Poulton, and a brown horse belonging to Mr. Patten. The former was the winner; stakes £5.

COUNTY CASTLE STEEPLECHASES, Dec. 4.—Entries for the Railway Plate—Abul-el-Kader, aged (£100); Honest Tom, aged (£50); Thrush (late Matilda), five years (£50); Postillion, aged (£50); and Bon-jour (£30). Entries for the Whip—Capt. Hill's Lady-in-Waiting, Capt. Watkins's Moonbeam, Capt. Smith's Eugénie, Capt. Andrew's Despard, Mr. Lovell's Topsy, and Mr. Wake's Miss Reynolds. The match between Mrs. A. McDonogh and the Knight of Glynn, to which we alluded at some length in our last, will come off the same day, as also a Scurry Stake, post entrance.

AN ACTION was brought in the Exchequer Nisi Prius Court, Dublin, on Tuesday last, by Robert English, a farmer and forage contractor, against Nicholas Balfe, Esq., of Southpark, Co. Roscommon, a gentleman well known on the Irish turf, to recover the sum of £111. 4s. 6d. being for "servants' extra expenses, in journeying from Southpark to Athlone (plaintiff's residence), deterioration in the value of two mares, sent to be covered by defendant's celebrated stallion The Dean, and for overcharges for service." The evidence was of a most conflicting character, the witnesses for the prosecution swearing that the pasture for brood mares was "not fit for a goose to pick at," while those for the defence asserted that all the mares sent to Mr. Balfe's breeding establishment had returned in better order than when sent. The jury found for the defendant, on all the issues, with costs.

THE EMPEROR, by Blackfoot; the Kaffir Queen, own sister to the Tanager; Prince Patrick, by Brown Molton; Tippity Witchet, by Verulam; and Princess Louisa—all the property of Richard W. Reynell, Esq.—are to be sold by auction at Dyer's on Thursday next.

ON DEC. that Mr. Allan McDonogh has backed his "better half" in the match against the Knight of Glynn, on Monday next, for over £2,000.

MACROOM (CO. CORK) RACES, AND PATRIOTIC FUND.—At a meeting of the committee of the Macroom Patriotic Fund, on the 23rd ult., the following resolution was adopted:—"That having seen the letter signed 'W.' in last Tuesday's Cork Constitution, relative to the intended Macroom Races, we cordially agree in the admirable suggestions pointed out by the writer, and strongly recommend them to the consideration of the Stewards, and other promoters of these ill-timed sports; and we hope they will, as far as they have the power, hand over the whole, or any part, of the money subscribed, to the Macroom Patriotic Fund."

HUNTING.

APPOINTMENTS FOR THE WEEK.

THE QUEEN'S HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Uxbridge Common; Friday, Bedford Toll Gate, at eleven.

THE TIVERTON FOX-HOUNDS.—Saturday, Spurway Mills; Monday, Pound-Down, Silverton; Thursday, Leigh Wood.

YORK AND AINSLEY FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Shelton; Tuesday, Rufforth; Thursday, Goldsbow; Saturday, Shipwith Bridge, at half-past ten.

THE OLD BERSHIRE FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Hatford; Tuesday, Curbridge; Thursday, Foxcombe Hill; Friday, Sparshot, at half-past ten.

THE EARL OF PORTSMOUTH'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, West Sherbourne; Tuesday, Woodcot; Thursday, Stype; Friday, Crown, Highclere; Saturday, Clerken Green, at eleven.

THE DUKE OF RUCCELEUCH'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Newton Don; Tuesday, Jod Waterfoot; Thursday, Blakelaw; Saturday, Blainslie, at half-past ten.

THE EARL OF YARBOROUGH'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Tallow Cross Roads; Wednesday, Wootton House; Friday, Utterby Green, at eleven.

THE EARL OF WEMYSS'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Polwarth; Tuesday, Longridge; Wednesday, Longformacus; Friday, New Etal; Saturday, Printonnan, at half-past ten.

MR. DRACON'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Callington New Bridge; Thursday, Brenton, at half-past ten.

MR. TRELAWEY'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Carew Arms; Saturday, Radford, at half-past ten.

MR. LUMLEY'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, North Wheatley; Tuesday, Rossington Village; Thursday, Sandbeck Park; Friday, Grove, at half-past ten.

THE BRAMHAM MOOR FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Statton Mill; Wednesday, Gateforth; Friday, the Wild Man; Saturday, Low Harrogate, at half-past ten.

THE RUFFORD FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Kirklington; Tuesday, North Gate, Oxtan Warren; Thursday, Debdale Toll Bar; Saturday, Park Hall, at half-past ten.

LORD H. BENTINCK'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Gotha Hall; Wednesday, Stourton Hall; Thursday, Wellingsore; Friday, Gate Burton; Saturday, Cainby Village, at eleven.

MR. M. INGRAM'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Kedleston Inn; Thursday, Radbourn; Saturday, Elvaston Castle, at a quarter before eleven.

THE SOUTHDOWN FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Clapham; Wednesday, Laughton Pound; Friday, Piecombe; Monday week, Bourne Hill, at a quarter before eleven.

THE WEST KENT FOX-HOUNDS (MR. WALDOS).—Tuesday, Fordome Green; Friday, Four Elms, at half-past ten.

THE CRAWLEY AND HORSHAM FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, the Fox, Three Bridges; Wednesday, Rusper Village; Friday, Paxhill Park Gate (North), at a quarter before eleven.

COLONEL WYNDHAM'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Saturday, Laurington House, at half-past eleven.

THE BADSWORTH FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Barnsdale Bar; Thursday, Fenwick; Saturday, Darton Inn, at half-past ten.

THE F. B. FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, the Wild Duck; Thursday, Ladeok; Saturday, Trewhitham Cross, at half-past ten.

THE NORTH WARWICKSHIRE HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Hay Wood; Thursday, Princethorpe; Saturday, Kenilworth Castle, at eleven.

THE EARL OF LONSDALE'S HARRIERS.—Friday, Badgrove, at twelve.

MR. ASHETON SMITH'S HOUNDS.—Monday, Collingborne Shears; Tuesday, Manningford; Wednesday, Fancome; Thursday, Conholt Park; Friday, Everleigh; Saturday, Clarendon Park, at eleven.

THE SURREY UNION HOUNDS.—Monday, Chantry Down; Thursday, Hand-post on Frimly Ridges; Saturday, Leigh Village, at half-past ten.

THE ALBRIGHTON HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Enville Village; Thursday, Tuck Hill; Saturday, Sutton, at a quarter before eleven.

BARON ROTHSCHILD'S HOUNDS.—Monday, Pitcher-street; Thursday, Wiig.

THE HALSDON HOUNDS.—Monday, Ruckland Filleigh; Friday, Buckland Brewer, at half-past ten.

THE E. E. F. H.—Tuesday, Sturmer Sion; Saturday, Gosfield, King's Head.

THE DUMFRIESSHIRE FOX-HOUNDS (LORD DRUMLANRIGG).—Tuesday, Hoddan Bridge; Thursday, Dalton Village; Saturday, Castlenilk, at half-past ten.

THE RABY HOUNDS.—Monday, Walworth Castle; Wednesday, the Kennels; Friday, Middleton Tyas, at half-past ten.

THE ESSEX (MR. HENLEY GREAVES'S) HOUNDS.—Monday, Takeley Gate; Thursday, Margeroting-street; Saturday, Willingale, at eleven.

MR. GARTHE'S HOUNDS.—Monday, Hare Hatch; Wednesday, Stag and Hounds, Binfeld; Friday, Hartford Bridge Flat, at half-past ten.

THE PITCHLEY HOUNDS.—Monday, Sywell Wood; Tuesday, Nobottle Wood; Wednesday, Mistortor; Friday, Zampart Inn; Saturday, Sibbortoft, at a quarter before eleven.

THE CARLISLE HARRIERS.—Tuesday, Carden; Friday, Laversdale, at ten.

MR. WHEBLE'S HOUNDS.—Monday, Cain End, Oxon;

Tuesday, Iuglefold; Thursday, Aldermaston; Friday, Three Crowns, Buckelbury, at eleven.

EARL FITZWILLIAM'S HOUNDS.—Monday, Ashton Wold; Wednesday, Barnwell Castle; Friday, Orton Long Ville, at eleven.

THE PUCKERIDGE HOUNDS.—Monday, Thorley; Thursday, Chrishall Grange; Saturday, Cumberlow Green, at half-past ten.

THE H. H.—Monday, Lasham Village, Tuesday, Hinton House; Thursday, Canlover Village; Saturday, Upton Gray, at a quarter before eleven.

CAPTAIN HAMPTON LEWIS'S HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Pen-treath; Saturday, Llanfyllan Mile.

THE HEYTHROP HOUNDS.—Monday, Butler's Barn; Wednesday, Bradwell Grove; Friday, Bledington Mill; Saturday, Dean Cross Roads, at half-past ten.

THE CHESHIRE HOUNDS.—Monday, Dutton Hall; Tuesday, Calveley; Thursday, Saughton; Friday, Tarporley, at half-past ten.

MR. DRAKE'S HOUNDS.—Monday, Horton Common; Tuesday, Middleton Toll Bar; Thursday, Edgecot Village; Saturday, Fringford Bridge, at a quarter before eleven.

THE NORTH STAFFORDSHIRE HOUNDS.—Monday, Stal-lington; Wednesday, Woore; Friday, Stoko Heath, at half-past ten.

THE COTTESMORE HOUNDS.—Monday, Steam Plough, Little Bytham; Tuesday, Ayston; Thursday, Black Bull, Witham Common; Saturday, Tilton Wood.

THE WORCESTERSHIRE HOUNDS.—Monday, Copent Elm; Wednesday, Cliffe; Friday, Bredon Hill, at half-past ten.

THE WARWICKSHIRE HOUNDS.—Monday, Wimpston Bridge; Tuesday, Mitford Bridge; Thursday, Snitterfield; Friday, Gaydon Inn, at a quarter before eleven.

H. C. MEYNELL INGRAM'S HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Kedleston Inn; Thursday, Radbourne; Saturday, Elvaston.

THE ATHERSTONE HOUNDS.—Monday, Barton in the Beans; Wednesday, Harris Bridge; Friday, Westhorpe Station; Saturday, Arbury, at eleven.

THE BROOKSIDE HARRIERS.—Mondays, Newmarket Hill; Thursdays, Tolssomb Tyre, at half-past ten.

THE BRIGHTON HARRIERS.—Mondays, Patelham; Wednesdays, Race Course; Thursdays, Barrow, alternately; Saturdays, the Dyke, at a quarter before eleven.

THE WORTHING HARRIERS.—Saturday, Toddington; Tuesday, Chantrey Post; Saturday week, the Kennel, at eleven.

THE EAMONT HARRIERS.—Monday, Park House, Plumpton; Wednesday, Kirkby Thore; Saturday, Barton Fell, at half-past ten.

IRELAND.

MR. GODFREY BALDWIN'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Mount Bernard; Thursday, Garramena, at ten.

THE CARLOW AND ISLAND FOX-HOUNDS.—Saturday (this day), Aghade Bridge; Monday, Mount Nebo; Wednesday, Rathmore Bridge; Friday, Oulart Village, at eleven.

MR. DENNIS'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Saturday (this day), Carratrilla, at eleven.

THE KILDARE FOX-HOUNDS.—Saturday (this day), Martins-town.

THE KILKENNY FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Kilkenny Barracks; Thursday, Freshford, at eleven.

MR. LONGWORTH'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Saturday (this day), Streamstown; Wednesday, Mount Equity; Friday, Moate Wood, at eleven.

THE QUEEN'S COUNTY FOX-HOUNDS.—Saturday (this day) Derryfore, at eleven.

THE ROUTE FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Croagh; Friday, Dunboe.

THE TIPPERARY FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Kilcooly; Friday, Drangan, at eleven.

THE WESTMEATH FOX-HOUNDS.—Saturday (this day), Killereau; Wednesday, Glencarna; Saturday, Drumcree, at eleven.

THE TYNAN HARRIERS.—Monday, Norton's Cross Roads; Thursday, Aughenis, at eleven. Should the weather prove unfavourable, the hounds will meet next day at the kennel.

THE WEXFORD AND KILLINICK HARRIERS.—Monday, Taggart; Thursday, Lightwater, at half-past ten. Should the weather prove unfavourable, the hounds will meet next day at same place.

THE WICKLOW HARRIERS.—Monday, Castletimon, at eleven.

THE HON. FREDERICK PETRE'S STAG-HOUNDS.—These hounds met last week at Good Easter, and had an extraordinary fine run. An untired hind was unseated, and started off in gallop style towards High Easter, thence on to Old Park, when turning short to the right, went straight to Pleshey, on through Waltham Bury Mill, and round to Felsted, over as fine a country as ever was crossed. The pack had now been going about forty minutes, at a capital pace, without a check. The deer then went on to Porter's Hall, sailing back again nearly to Porter's Hall, and on to Great Bardfield, and passing between Pinchingfold and Wethersfield on to Stambourn, where she was taken safely after a very hard day, the run occupying three hours and ten minutes, and the distance from point to point by the Ordnance map eighteen miles.

WARWICKSHIRE HUNT CLUB.—The following notice has been issued by this club:—"Under the existing circumstances of the war, and from the fact of so many members being deeply interested in the fate of our arms in the Crimea, it has been considered advisable by the committee that no Hunt Ball should take place this winter; instead of which a donation in the name of the club will be presented to the Patriotic Fund." The correspondent who sends us the above intimation says:—"Our Hunt Ball usually costs about £250. If all other hunt clubs would do this, what a large sum might be collected!"—Times.

SHREWSBURY HUNT BALL.—At this ball there was a large attendance of the nobility and gentry of the county. The ball was opened by Edward Corbett, Esq., president of the Hunt, with the Countess Fane. Among those present were Earl Powis, Earl Fane, Viscount Newport, M.P., Lord Forester, Sir W. W. Wynne, Bart., J. C. Burton Borough, Esq., R. M. Leake, Esq., Mr. and Mrs. J. Loxdale, Lady Lucy Bridgeman, Sir Thomas, Lady, and Miss Bonghey, Lady Hester Leake, Mr. and Mrs. C. Phillips, Mr. C. Morris, Mr. C. Morris, jun., and Mr. and Mrs. S. Burne.

MR. ROPE'S HARRIERS have returned home, after having had some of the finest sport that has been known in the island for several seasons.

THE TIPPERARY HUNT.—This justly celebrated club had a splendid day's sport on Tuesday. Having met at High Park, they went across the country to Prout's Furze, which, however, proved blank. From there they adjourned to the cover of Garranacole, where the hounds ate one fox and started another, which took a circuitous route over a stiff country to Prout's Furze. After some little delay he was again found, when he bent his course through Wilford, Wilmount, along the tops of the Crohane hills, through Ballynisk, and finally earthed in an unknown shore at Kilbenny bog. This run was a distance of at least ten Irish miles, during which both hounds and horsemen went in that true "go-ahead" style which has always distinguished the gallant "Tipps."

NOTES AND QUERIES.

SIR.—Is it etiquette to ride in scarlet when out with the harriers? If not, what colour?—Is Kent a good county for shooting? Yours, &c., Bob.

COURSING.

APPOINTMENTS.
DECEMBER.

Bigger Club (Lanark).....	5	Mr. Tibbett
Renfrewth.....	5 and 6
Idigway (Lancashire).....	7 and 8	Mr. Lawrence
Spelthorne (Middlesex).....	7 and 8
Caledonian (Lanark).....	14

JANUARY, 1855.

Bigger Club (Lanark).....	23
The renewed trial between North-Western and South-Western Coursers, at Lytham (Lancashire).....	29 and fol. days

FEBRUARY.

Spelthorne (Wills).....	7, 8, and 9	Mr. Lawrence
Newmarket Open.....	12
Bigger Club (Lanark).....	13
Baron Hill, Beaumaris (Anglesea).....

MARCH.

Caledonian Open (Lanark) ..	15
Bigger Open (Lanark).....	27
Idigway (Lancashire).....

LIMERICK COURSING CLUB.—Nov. 22, 23, and 24.

Stewards: W. H. Harrington, Thos. Fosherry, John Bayly, jun., James Spaight, and P. G. Barron, Esqs. Hon. Sec. and Treasurer: James Marshall, Esq. Judge: William Owens, Esq. Slipper: Tom Saunders.

The second meeting for the season of the above club took place at Clorane, on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday week; on each of which days the sport was excellent, the hares being plentiful and exceedingly stout. The weather throughout was most favourable; and it affords as much satisfaction to speak of the prosperous state of this club, which at present ranks second to none in the kingdom. The impartial decisions of Mr. Owens, the judge, are also worthy of notice. Appended is a return:—

THE DICKSON CUP. For sixteen puppies of 1853. £2. 10s. each, p.p. Shillings towards expenses.

Dr. O'Neill's r d Galtymore beat Mr. Murray's bk b Waterhen
Mr. Payne's w and f d King Cob the 2nd beat Mr. Spaight's f d Highlander

Mr. R. Westrop's bd b Wild Irish Girl ran a bye
Mr. Clifton's rd Chummock beat Col. Dickson's bd d Tempest
Mr. Murray's bk d Woodcock beat Mr. Harrington's bk and w d Sultan
Mr. R. Westrop's r and w d Why Not (late Harry Hotspur) beat Mr. Harrington's bd d Alma

Mr. Fosherry's r b Henne beat Dr. O'Neill's r d Peel
Mr. Fosherry's b d Humphrey May beat Mr. Spaight's f b Honeymoon

King Cob the 2nd beat Galtymore | Henne beat Woodcock
Wild Irish Girl beat Chummock | Humphrey May beat Why Not

King Cob the 2nd beat Henne | Humphrey May beat Wild Irish Girl

Humphrey May (by Landgrave out of Hill of Faughan) beat King Cob the 2nd, by Neilson's Jester (out of Edleston's Lady Mary), and won the cup.

THE CHALLENGE CUP. For sixteen dogs, the property of members. £2. 10s. each, p.p. Shillings towards expenses.

Mr. Fosherry's bk d African beat Mr. Roberts's r and w d Waddy (late Wornwood)

Mr. Spaight's bk d d Pounce beat Mr. Roberts's f d Ned Hanigan
Mr. Bayly's r d Bosphorus (late Mehmet Ali) beat Mr. Spaight's y d b Puss

Mr. Bayly's r d d Bright May (late Woe Wonder) beat Mr. Payne's r d Mortar

Mr. James's f b Little Grace beat Col. Dickson's bd d Herman
Mr. Fosherry's bk b Harpin beat Mr. Payne's bk and w h Pretty Polly
Mr. James's r d Norwester beat Mr. Daniel's r b Beilamite

Mr. Whitehead's be b Blymer beat Mr. Curley's bk b Swift

Pounce beat African | Harpin beat Bright May
Little Grace beat Bosphorus | Moorbeat beat Norwester

Pounce beat Little Grace | Harpin beat Bloomer

Pounce (by True Blue, out of Burr-r-r) beat Harpin (by Landgrave, out of Hill of Faughan), and won the cup.

THE CLORANE CONSOLATION STAKES. £1. 5s. each, p.p. Shillings towards expenses.

Mr. Spaight's y d b Puss beat Mr. Roberts's r and w d Waddy, late Wornwood

Mr. Roberts's f d Ned Hanigan beat Mr. Payne's r d Mortar
Mr. Payne's bk and w b Pretty Polly beat Colonel Dickson's bd d Herman
Mr. Daniel's r b Beilamite beat Mr. Curley's bk b Swift

Ned Hanigan beat Puss
Beilamite ran a bye (Pretty Polly being dr)

Beilamite (by Orphan Boy, out of Empress) beat Ned Hanigan (by Westwind, out of Shaw)

MATCH. £25 each.
Colonel Dickson's bd d Herman beat Mr. R. Ivers's w and r d Ivanhoe

This was a most exciting match; both first ran an undecided course; in the second attempt both dogs were blinked, but Ivanhoe again sighted the hare and caught her, after a most punishing course; and on the third occasion the result was as above stated.

THE CORK SOUTHERN COURSING MEETING will take place on the 5th, 6th, and 7th of December; and the Mountains-town Meeting, at Castletown Cross, on the 12th and 13th.

The Newcastle West (Co. Limerick) Coursing Club will meet on Tuesday and Wednesday, in the second week of January.

COURSING.—Edw. Lloyd, Esq., of Rhagatt, one of the best breeders of greyhounds in the Principality, gave a day's coursing to a party of gentlemen from Ruthin on his lands, in the parish of Brynaglwys, on Tuesday last, and showed them most excellent sport; 113 hares were started, a fair number of which succumbed to the speed of the dogs.

Mr. and Miss Lloyd were both upon the ground, and, by their kindness and attention to the party, added much to the pleasure of the day's sport.

SHOOTING.

To the Editor of THE FIELD.

SIR.—Having been a subscriber to your paper from its commencement, and being fond of the amusement of shooting, I have often felt disappointed that none of your subscribers give us occasionally some of their good days' sport, with an account of rare shots, rare birds, or any other interesting particulars they may meet with during their shooting excursions. I was last week among the hogs in Hampshire and Surrey snipe-shooting, but was much disappointed in finding so few snipes. I can only account for it from the extreme dry autumn we have had; the hogs require more rain to get into good order for the long beaks. I had only six shots, killing four. I killed (dead) a brace of pheasants with No. 8 shot, and a brace of birds. There is nothing like No. 8 for snipe; but it is somewhat extraordinary to kill larger game with such small shot: and to do it, the gun must be first-rate. Talking of extraordinary shots: I recollect being in Essex one October with a friend. Birds were very scarce and wild. We had walked nearly all the day without getting a shot; when, on coming into a stubble, the dog stood, three birds got up wild, and, although some distance apart, they crossed me in a line. I fired at the first, which I killed, bringing down the other two at the same moment; the last bird must have been nearly twenty yards off from the first. My friend, who was waiting for a shot, appeared much annoyed, and grumbled at my luck. I hope, when I next visit the hogs, to be able to give you a more killing account.—Yours, &c., Percussion.

A ROOK OR A RUSSIAN?

[From the Times.]

SIR.—Even the Russian General admits the irresistibility of good riflemen. Arguments to prove it are unnecessary. The only question is how to increase their number on the side of the Allies in the East? Allow me to raise this branch question.—Could not the "gentlemen of England," who are notoriously good shots, and their gamekeepers, who are usually "better shots," because in more constant practice, form a corps of "preservers," or the like, just for this war season? One "good shot" would thus preserve whole regiments, and from behind a few bushes half-a-dozen gamekeepers would soon thin the Russian ranks of those who are the chief agents in prolonging this sad suspension of peace. There would soon come forward a numerous body of poachers to join in this enterprise; for, had as poaching is, and had as they may be who follow it, yet it is notorious to all who are conversant with the first temptation to it, that being a "good shot" often has drawn many aside from the lawful way of proving and exercising their skill; and it may be that in these, as in every other line of life, the opening of opportunity to exchange honourably into public usefulness would result in the double good—diminishing crime at home and saving the brave defenders of right and liberty abroad. At all events, I cast the thought upon the waters, believing that many would do what I, for one, would have done many years ago, but am now disqualified for, like heaps of others, who yet still feel the natural impulse of "having been."

NOT A BAD SHOT.

THE MINIE RIFLE.—A BOLD CHALLENGE.

Mr. George Beedle, the well known gunner of H.M.S. Excellent, having lately observed in a local paper that a practised shot was under a wager to hit a mark, man size, four times out of five, at a distance of 900 yards, has handed the following challenge to a provincial contemporary, with permission to make it public:—

"H.M.S. Excellent, Portsmouth, Nov. 13th, 1854.

"SIR.—In reference to the paragraph to which I have drawn your attention, I beg to state that I am willing to come down to Exeter and fire the regular service rifle, distance 900 or 1,000 yards, for £20, my own money, against any person who will fire from the same ordnance—length of barrel, 2ft. 6 in.; weight of piece, 12lbs.; charge, 4½dra.; ball, conical. I will venture to say, that at 800 yards I will have ten successive hits, and at 1,000 yards nine hits out of ten shots; the only conditions being that the breeze be moderate and the atmosphere clear.—I am, &c., GEORGE BEEDLE."

PROVIDENTIAL ESCAPE.—A few days ago a party of gentlemen were engaged in the sport of pheasant shooting in the preserves belonging to T. B. Western, Esq., of Felix Hall, Kelydon, when a rabbit darted suddenly across the path; Henry Bullock, Esq., fired at it, when Mr. W. P. Honeywood, whose near neighbourhood to the quarry had not been observed, received some of the scattered shot in his leg, the main charge passing within an inch or two of the joint. The shots were skillfully extracted by Mr. J. S. Nott, surgeon, of Coggeshall, and we are happy to add that the worthy gentleman has not suffered any considerable inconvenience except a slight lameness.

CRICKET.

The arrangements of the new proprietor of THE FIELD afford an opportunity to the original "Cricket" contributor to its columns once more to resume his pen in behalf of the favourite pastime of his own mind, as well as a numerous body of the readers of its pages. This department of the paper, consequently, will be carried out with the same spirit of impartiality as in former days, combined with vigour and energy and an amount of information not possessed by the masses of the present age.

The period of the year at which the change of proprietorship has come to pass, will render it necessary that we should fall back a month or so in the opening of our retrospect of the "Doings of the Year," and therefore under the subjoined heading we shall take

OUR GLANCE AT THE SEASON 1854—No. I.

As heretofore, the close of the month of October brings us to that period of the year when heavy dews, interspersed with rains, compel the follower of our sport to withdraw from the field and to lay up his bat till nearly four months of another year shall have passed away. And this result calls upon our pen to direct attention to the leading and most interesting features of the year that is now drawing towards its close.

Various and sad are the remembrances of some of our readers as to the occurrences of the past summer; for whilst the war in the East has enlisted the services of many, so there have not been a few whose names were familiar in the cricket world as successful partakers in the game who have fallen victims to cholera. Nevertheless, there has been no year in which there has been so much of cricket-playing; and if there has not been so large an amount of what are termed exciting matches in and around the metropolis, there has been a vast increase of such contests throughout the provinces.

It is utterly impossible to enumerate the legion of new clubs that have been formed, the members of which have not only held their almost daily practice, but have engaged in many matches. As in 1853 so in 1854, much of the early play of the year was prevented or interfered with by the cold and wet, and even up to well in June, there was an absence of genial weather. Indeed, we may proceed almost up to St. Swithin's-day, ere the atmosphere became so settled as that a cricketer could say, when he quitted home to participate in one of those annual matches which bring so many friends together in each year, that it promised to be a cricket-day. From a few days after the "day of tears" there has not been many seasons during the writer's long cricket life, now upwards of forty years, in which there has been such a lengthened continuance of beautiful weather, as in that of which we are about to recount the doings. In 1853 there were many men who played a great deal, but who, even at the end of the season, failed to exhibit the fine bronze skin which is usually the result of much practice in the healthy and athletic exercise of cricket; whilst in the present year there were endless brown faces and hands, and other external appearances, which indicate the beneficial consequences of this most healthful out-of-door recreation. The unfavourable weather in the earlier half of the season in this, as in the preceding summer, prevented many old and middle-aged amateurs from disporting in their flannels. Their absence, however, was abundantly supplied, in respect of numbers, by a large influx of younger men. Then the matches of the All-England Eleven, in twenty-three different places, and those of the United Eleven, fifteen in number, all but one played in the provinces, have as heretofore tended to the spreading of the game. Several of these matches were played in districts were cricket was previously but imperfectly known, but their effect has been to render it ever since the most popular source of amusement of the inhabitants. And so it should, and doubtless will become, in every corner of the United Kingdom as years roll on. As one indication of its increase we may mention that already the All-England Eleven have received no fewer than twenty-nine applications for matches for next year, in addition to the various county matches in which its respective members are engaged. Of these, ten are from new districts, and by the arrangements which the Eleven have made, they will be enabled to accomplish the whole of these proposals. Then there will be the contests wherein the United Eleven will be concerned, some of which no doubt will be in new districts. So that in 1855 it may be anticipated that there will be a considerable addition to the enormous cricket force already existing.

CRICKETING STAKES.—At the Court at Bicester, before J. W. Wing, Esq., on Monday last, Thomas Rogers, publican and dealer, of Kirtlington, was, by Samuel Needle, stone-quarryman, of Gibraltar, Bletchington, summoned for ten shillings, which it was alleged were due to the plaintiff on contract. Mr. H. E. Massey, solicitor, conducted the plaintiff's case. The defendant appeared in person. He denied the liability. It appeared that the plaintiff and one John Cato agreed to play a game at cricket for five shillings each; the cash was posted, the game played, and the stake given up by the defendant, as it was alleged by the plaintiff, wrongfully. The plaintiff said he won the game, and that he ought to have had the money. Defendant said the cash was placed in and taken out of his hands by Robert Rogers. It transpired that the wager had been made at defendant's house. He intimated that Needle had had his five shillings back. His Honour was of opinion, that under the 18th section of the 8th and 9th Vic., cap. 109, the transaction was illegal, and that as it was a bet the action could not be sustained. The defendant applied for costs. His Honour refused to allow them as it appeared he allowed betting at his house. The judge intimated that, although cricketing was good, betting was bad. Plaintiff had a summons against Robert Rogers, referred to above, for a wager on the game. In consequence of his Honour's decision in the previous case, it was not proceeded with.

A CORRESPONDENT informs us that a mare in the possession of Ethelston Peel, Esq., has been rendered quite sound, after a severe lameness, by Mr. J. Major's system of treatment.

The Mentor steamer, belonging to the Messageries Impériales, which has just arrived at Marseilles from Alexandria, had on board four magnificent Arab horses, taken for the King of Sardinia. They belong to some of the finest breeds in the East, and come from Bombay by Suez and Alexandria. They are all stallions, and are intended to improve the breed of horses in Piedmont.

YACHTING.

HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE.

DATE	TIME	DATE	TIME
Dec. 2, Saturday	0.11	Dec. 17, Sunday	11.50
3, Sunday	0.51	18, Monday	0.15
4, Monday	1.30	19, Tuesday	1.15
5, Tuesday	2.10	20, Wednesday	1.45
6, Wednesday	2.50	21, Thursday	2.25
7, Thursday	3.30	22, Friday	3.05
8, Friday	4.10	23, Saturday	3.45
9, Saturday	4.50	24, Sunday	4.25
10, Sunday	5.30	25, Monday	5.05
11, Monday	6.10	26, Tuesday	5.45
12, Tuesday	6.50	27, Wednesday	6.25
13, Wednesday	7.30	28, Thursday	7.05
14, Thursday	8.10	29, Friday	7.45
15, Friday	8.50	30, Saturday	8.25
16, Saturday	9.30	31, Sunday	9.05

To find High Water at the subjoined places, take the above time at London Bridge, and add or subtract the time in the following Table.

SUBTRACT FROM LONDON BRIDGE.		ADD TO LONDON BRIDGE.
PLACES	TIME	PLACES	TIME
Brighton	0.30	Harwich	0.27
Boston	0.40	Ipswich	0.27
Calais	0.39	Lowestoft	0.27
Cherbourg	0.37	Marazion	0.27
Cowes	0.31	Needles	0.27
Dublin	0.35	Norwich	0.27
Dover	0.35	Orford	0.27
Edinburgh	0.31	Portsmouth	0.27
Greenock	0.37	Ramsgate	0.27
Greenwich	0.37	Southampton	0.27
Hazre	0.45	Spilhead	0.27

CLUB MEETINGS, 1854.

- December 2.—Monthly Meeting of the Royal Harwich Yacht Club.
 December 4.—Annual Ball of the Royal Mersey Yacht Club. Proceeds go to the Patriotic Fund.
 December 5.—Annual Dinner of the London Model Yacht Club, at Anderson's Hotel.
 December 5.—Monthly Meeting of the Royal Mersey Yacht Club.
 December 5.—Monthly Meeting of the London Model Yacht Club, at Anderson's.
 December 6.—Weekly Meeting of the Liffey Club, at the Nell Gwynne, at 8 p.m.
 December 6.—Monthly Meeting of the Royal Thames Yacht Club, at the Bedford Hotel, Covent-garden.
 December 12.—Meeting of the Anglesey Club, at Ashley's Hotel, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden.
 December 13.—Meeting of the Liffey Club.
 December 18.—Monthly Meeting of the Royal London Yacht Club.
 December 20.—Meeting of the Liffey Club.
 December 27 (We last day).—Full Meeting of the Liffey Club, being the last for the year 1854.

NEXT YACHT FOR THE CRIMEA.

[From the Times.]

Sir,—I have to-day been offered £100, or £200 if necessary, to commence a subscription to send out some comforts to the army in the Crimea. I have also the offer of all the available space in a yacht, about to sail on Monday, Dec. 4, for such goods as might be ready. Contributions have been, and are, pouring in to meet the sad requirements of death, disease, and suffering, and it may be that many would rejoice in being permitted to testify their deep sympathy with the privations and sufferings of that gallant band, who, in God's merciful providence, are kept and preserved, and who are so heroically maintaining their ground under every disadvantage, by contributing in some slight degree to their comfort. May I, then, ask for your valuable aid in bringing before the public the following proposal?

That a committee be formed to receive subscriptions for the purpose of forwarding such articles of provisions, warm clothing, and comforts as may be deemed advisable to Balaklava.

If the resident owners of landed property would forward contributions of game, Mr. Gunter informs me that he will be able to make immediate arrangements for putting and preserving any quantity; and it could hardly be possible to suggest a more appropriate use than this to which the well-stocked preserves of this country might be applied. Meat, venison, and poultry might also find numerous donors, and would form excellent contributions for the same purpose. As I have said, immediate transit is offered, and the first cargo may be dispatched in the course of a few days, and reach its destination as a New-Year's gift. The value of our offering may be small, but, coming from warm sympathizing hearts, it will be received as some slight acknowledgment of the debt we owe to those whose sufferings and privations are continually before our minds, and for whose preservation and success our humble prayers are constantly offered up before the Throne of Grace. I shall be happy to receive any communications on the subject at 23, Hill-street, Berkeley-square.—I remain, Sir, your very obedient servant,

Nov. 25.

HENRY KINGSCOTE.

Sir,—Might I trespass on your kindness to acknowledge the many liberal and encouraging communications I have received respecting the formation of the "Crimean Army Fund."

I would beg to state that the committee is being formed, and the names will appear in a day or two. The stores are ordered to go out in the Fairy yacht, Captain Lyon, which sails on Monday next for Balaklava. A gentleman has offered another yacht to follow the Fairy.

The Duke of Marlborough has presented 100 head of deer, and most liberal offers have been made of various other goods.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient servant,

HENRY KINGSCOTE.

23, Hill-street, Berkeley-square, Nov. 23.

ROYAL YACHT SQUADRON SUBSCRIPTION FOR THE CRIMEA.

Sir,—Having long felt anxious to do something towards alleviating the privations of our gallant countrymen in the Crimea, it appears to me that this object could not be better accomplished than by fitting out a large yacht and filling her with those comforts and luxuries which we have reason to believe would be most appreciated by them. I cannot but hope that a plan of this sort would be extremely popular in our club, which contains so many members connected with the army by the closest ties of relationship and old-fellowship. The plan I venture to propose is to obtain the loan of one of the largest yachts, to fit her out and freight her by means of a subscription of twenty sovereigns each, and that a supercargo be appointed to accompany this vessel, in order to insure the proper disposal of the freight, which I suggest should be sold at cost price.

I should be obliged to you to transmit a copy of this letter to every member of the club, and to request them to be good enough to return an answer at their earliest convenience, addressed to me at Egerton Lodge, Melton Mowbray, in order that no time may be lost in carrying the design into execution, should it meet with general approval.—I remain, yours very truly,

Heaton, Nov. 28, 1854. (Signed) WILTON.

P.S. Active measures are already being made to procure the loan of a yacht, and Messrs. Drummond, Charing-cross, have kindly consented to receive subscriptions under the name of the Crimea Fund of the R.Y.S.

YACHTING TO THE CRIMEA.

[From the Morning Post.]

Sir,—The valuable suggestion to owners of "yachts" or private steam-vessels to take trips immediately to the Crimea, which, by carrying comforts to our suffering officers and soldiers at Sebastopol, would materially aid them to endure the terrible cold and discomforts they are undergoing, induces me to give a LIST of MOST USEFUL ARTICLES; and which, if sent and put up into reasonable weights, so that the whole of them could be carried on men's shoulders from Balaklava to the camp, would prevent delay for want of arabs, &c. The whole of these valuable comforts would not cost more than £100 to £150; and, if only six proprietors of yachts would agree to take each one a regiment under his charge to supply with these articles, independent of the Government, much good would result. A relation of mine at the Crimea gave a list of most of these articles some time ago, and I send them for the information of those who would send useful articles to the camp. Provision merchants might be induced to send over these goods at a cheap rate, providing owners of yachts would take them out free of cost.

"LIST OF USEFUL ARTICLES FOR THE CRIMEA.—150 to 200 sheep-skins, rabbit, and hare-skins, for the officers to make into such clothing as they most require in a hurry. If 500 or 1,000 sheep-skins could be sent out, so much the better. All wool skins will be invaluable to officers and men, whether soldiers or sailors. Some dozens of dead boards, cut into seven or eight feet lengths, to lie on the damp ground in the tents, &c.; some dozens of wash-leather waistcoats, drawers, socks, and night-caps; ditto of woollen gloves and mitts; some dozens of pea-coats, lined with flannel or sheep-skins; a piece of coarse flannel, 100 yards; India-rubber sheets; coarse Scotch blankets, and coverlets and hosiery; Tartan boots, if they can be got, or substitutes for them. Three bags of oatmeal, either for porridge or oatmeal cake, each bag divided into three small ones, for better carriage by men, &c.; and iron girdles to make the oatmeal cakes. Three bags of peasemeal—three or four spoonful and a little salt will make a basinful, with the addition of a little hot water: a capital winter breakfast with a biscuit. A box of good ground coffee; several pounds of tea and prepared cocoa; a box of hiccups; 12 FAT hams; three sides of FAT bacon—the FATTER it is the better for a cold climate; two gallons of lemon juice; a barrel of fat pork; three barrels of butter; a few preserved meats; brandy, rum, whisky; paper, pens, ink; and as much wood and coal as can be carried for ballast, as they want fuel for fires. The FELT-roofing for inside of tents would be invaluable, to keep out cold, &c."

Such articles as these, taken by friends in their yachts, would, as I say, enable the officers and men to exist with more comfort during the winter, as most of these articles are only to be got at enormous prices at the Crimea.

A PROVISION MERCHANT OF GLASGOW.

[We have received a communication from two ladies (C. G. and E. K.), suggesting that the female branches of families should at once make plum-puddings by the dozen, and send them out as Christmas-boxes to our soldiers. Will any yachtsman, outward bound, give C. G. and E. K.'s puddings a passage to Balaklava?—Ed. FIELD.]

ROYAL THAMES YACHT CLUB.

The monthly meeting of the club will be held at the Bedford Hotel, Covent-garden, on Wednesday evening, the 6th of December, instant, at half-past eight o'clock precisely. The following gentlemen will be ballotted for:—

John Lawrence Kirby, Esq., St. Oystin, Essex.
 Alexander Ridgway, Esq., Royal Exchange buildings.
 Lieut. George Ledger 18th (Bedford Light Infantry) Militia.
 The Rev. Heathcote A. Wake, Lockerley, near Southampton.
 James Flowers, Esq., 64, Wigmore-street, Cavendish-square.
 William Mavor, Esq., Crouch End, Hornsey—cutter yacht Loftus, 25 tons.

The Sailing Committee having met to consider Mr. Harrison Chilton's motion, brought forward at the last general meeting, are unanimously of opinion, "That, in future, no shifting hallast, or sliding keels, be allowed to be used in the club matches."

Members and their friends who intend to dine at the monthly club dinner, on Wednesday, the 6th instant, should enter their names in the house book on or before two o'clock on that day. Each member may introduce one friend. Dinner at six o'clock precisely.

The following resolution was unanimously carried at the general meeting, on the 1st of November:—"That the posting of the names of members indebted to the club for subscriptions or other sums, which by resolution of the club, on the 5th of July last, was to be carried into effect after this meeting, be postponed until after the December meeting."

The following yachts have entered the club since the 30th of June last:—

Name and Rig.	Tons.	Owners' Names.
Irene, schooner	95	Joseph Reynolds, Esq.
Therese, schooner	121	Fraser and Marshall, Esq.
Petrel, cutter	15	Dugald Stuart, Esq.
Flirt, cutter and yawl	5	Richard Marsh Dunn, Esq.
Grand Turk, cutter	23	Frederick Macginnis, Esq.
Idas, cutter	7	Thos. T. Wall, Esq.
Fawn, cutter	35	Captain W. J. Downes.
Mischief, cutter	13	John Kirby, Esq.
Hope, yawl	15	Com. Lord Alfred Paget, M.P.
Adante, cutter	22	William Jas. Patterson, Esq.
Gulnare, cutter	24	Henry Knight Funnell, Esq.
Alma, yawl	66	Com. Lord Alfred Paget, M.P.

The Secretary has the following yachts for sale:—

Name and Rig.	Tons.	Name and Rig.	Tons.
Zephyretta, schooner	180	Simenon, cutter	18
Lily of the Text, schooner	91	Diavolo, cutter	15
Vestal, schooner	75	Waterwitch, cutter	15
Intrepid, cutter	60	Carlew, yawl, for gunning	10
Guerilla, cutter	45	Falcon, schooner	14
Cygnet, cutter	35	Capella, cutter	50
Loring, cutter	31	Vesper, cutter	15
Secret, cutter	25	Fawn, cutter	0
Daisy, cutter	18

Applications to be addressed to the Secretary, Bedford Hotel, Covent-garden.

ANGLESEY YACHT CLUB.

The next meeting of this club will be held on Tuesday, the 12th instant, at Ashley's Hotel, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, at eight o'clock. It has been found desirable, to suit the convenience of many members, to have a winter club house in a more central situation. Ashley's Hotel will most probably become the winter, whilst the Pier Hotel, Chelsea, will continue the summer rendezvous, of this club. At the last meeting Commodore Chubb announced to the members that Admiral the Right Hon. the Earl of Cadogan and Commodore Lord Alfred Paget had kindly become patrons of the club.

RANELAGH CLUB.

We have received several letters during the week inquiring, when this club will meet next, but we cannot name the exact date.

THE GALLANT LORD CARDIGAN was for many years commodore of the Royal Southern Yacht Club (Southampton), and so many other yachtsmen are now in the Crimea that the following will prove a useful hint to their club-friends still at home:—"The subjoined official notification has been issued: 'The Right Hon. the Secretary of War, being desirous that the officers of her Majesty's army employed in the East should not be subject to the inconvenience which has attended the transmission of small packages containing their personal effects, has been pleased to direct the allotment of a small quantity of tonnage in the various steamers proceeding to the Black Sea for this service; and Messrs. Hayter and Howell, army packers, 52, Mark-lane, have been instructed to receive the packages for shipment, which will be subject to a small charge for shipping and insurance when required. It is expressly understood that the packages are only to contain articles of necessity, and that they are not to be large or heavy.'—London, Nov. 17, 1854.

ANOTHER YACHT FOR THE BLACK SEA.—The Earl of Ellesmere is about to send out his capacious and swift-sailing yacht to the Crimea, filled with provisions and clothing for the Army.—Morning Herald.

PRINCE OF WALES YACHT CLUB.—The annual ball will take place on Thursday, the 11th of January, 1855, at nine o'clock, at the Great Hall, Freemasons' Tavern. Tickets for the ball, including refreshments, ices, and supper, gentleman, 10s. 6d., lady 8s. 6d., can be had at the club meetings, or on application to any of the following stewards:—F. Bourne, Esq., 3, Rose Terrace, Queen's Arms, Brompton; T. Brooks, jun., Esq., 189, High-street, Borough; N. Campbell, Esq., 29 Pinsbury-circus; C. F. Chubb, Esq., Myrtle Villa, Battersea; H. C. Coote, Esq., Great Knight Rider-street, Doctors' Commons; J. Gent, Esq., 3, Pinsbury-place, South; T. Harrison, Esq., 8, Bolton-place, Brompton; R. Hewett, Esq., Barking, Essex; E. Knibbs, Esq., Cooper's Row, Crutched Friars; W. Oman, jun., Esq., St. Katherine's Dock; J. G. Robinson, Esq., 18, Gunter-grove, Brompton; R. Sadler, Esq., 68, Coleman-street, Bank; J. E. Spratt, Esq., 3, Little Argyle-street; P. Turner, Esq., Orchard-place, Blackwall; A. Turner, Esq., 6, Billiter-street; J. Webber, Esq., 13, Warwick-crescent, Harrow-road. The monthly meeting of the club was held last evening (Friday).

THE VOYAGE TO AUSTRALIA IN A MACKEREL BOAT.—The fishing boat, intended for the voyage to Australia, has sailed for her destination. She is named the Mystery, and is only twenty-two tons. Her crew, on leaving Mount's Bay, in Cornwall, were in the best health and spirits, and appeared sanguine of a safe and speedy voyage. The wind at the time blew from the north-east, the sails were set by friends of the voyagers, who accompanied them on board, and the Mystery started gallantly with the best wishes of all for her success. The voyage to the West Indies has been made by a yacht of half the above tonnage, called the Teazer.

ROYAL DEE YACHT CLUB.—We regret to have to announce that we have been informed that the Royal Dee Yacht Club is no longer in existence. We presume its late members will join the rising Royal Welsh Yacht Club, at Carnarvon.

NEW YACHT.—Hatchery, of Southampton, is planning, for T. Bartlett, esq. (late owner of Sverige), a new yacht, already in frame, of thirty-five tons. She appears likely to prove a clipper, and the on dit is, will be christened Eupatoria or Inkerman. Lord Alfred Paget's new yacht will be called the Alma.

ROYAL MERSEY YACHT CLUB PATRIOTIC FUND BALL.—The Royal Mersey Yacht Club, which is under the patronage of her most gracious Majesty, and has, as its vice-patron, the Earl of Ellesmere—Thomas Littledale, esq., being its commodore, B. H. Jones, esq., vice-commodore, and Jonathan Grindrod, esq., rear-commodore—intends holding a ball, for the benefit of the Patriotic Fund, on Wednesday evening, the 6th of December, at the Town Hall, Liverpool. The lady-patronesses are the Countess of Sefton, Mrs. B. Heywood Jones, and Mrs. J. A. Tobin; and the patrons, the Earl of Sefton, Lord-Lieutenant of the County; and his worship the Mayor. The post of stewards will be filled by the Officers and Committee of the Royal Mersey Yacht Club. Among the generous incidents attending the coming ball, we may mention, that Mr. Lynn (Waterloo Hotel) has generously offered to supply the refreshments gratuitously, and that Mr. Gribbin has very handsomely volunteered his services and two bands for the occasion. Those yachtsmen who are desirous of being present at this very interesting re-union, can procure tickets of the secretary (10s. 6d. each), at the club-house, 82, Duke-street, Liverpool, and at the other usual places in that town.

ROYAL MERSEY YACHT CLUB.—The monthly meeting of the club will take place on Tuesday evening, the 5th of December, at eight o'clock precisely, when the following gentleman will be ballotted for:—Mr. Alexander Tinlay, Canining-place, Glasgow; Leda yacht, 9 tons; proposed by Mr. R. M. Grinnell, seconded by Mr. H. G. Russell. The usual annual club ball will this year be called "The Patriotic Fund Ball," and be held for the benefit of the Patriotic Fund.

RARE BIRDS.—A few days ago, while some lads were casting out nets to catch garvies, which are at present abundant in the Moray Firth, they observed, near Kessock Ferry, a flock of small birds not unlike swallows. They proved to be stormy petrels, or, as sailors name them, "Mother Carey's Chickens." Some of them were caught by the fishermen, who say that they had only once before, in the last twenty years, seen the same kind of birds near Inverness. They are the smallest of the ocean birds, web-footed, and although less than an ounce in weight, are often found tripping along on the waves, generally in the wake of ships.

THE Stamford Mercury mentions that a man who was beating the bush a few days ago, at Norton Place, for Sir J. Cholmley, having sprung a hare from a thicket, failed to get out of the way of the sportsman, and received a charge of shot in his legs and thighs, which sustained injuries that have proved fatal.

ROWING.

* * We shall feel obliged by the Secretaries of "Rowing Clubs," and others, forwarding their Appointments of Matches or Notices of Meetings to come, at their early convenience.

ROWING AT CAMBRIDGE.

THE COLQUHOUN SILVER SCULLS.

On Friday, November 24th, the deciding heat or Time-race was rowed between Mr. J. Wright, of St. John's College, and Mr. H. Blake, of Corpus, the "stroke" and "seven" of the last University crew. Mr. Wright started second, and, though he lost slightly at first, his good steering and superior style enabled him to win a very well-contested race by two seconds. His time was nine minutes sixteen seconds. This is the first time the sculls have been won by a member of the Lady Margaret since they have been rowed for at Cambridge. We give a list of the previous winners, extracted from a little book* which has already been favourably noticed by us.

ON THE THAMES.

1837—Berney, St. John's 1839—Vincent, St. John's
1838—Antrobus, St. John's 1840—Shadwell, St. John's

ON THE CAM.

1842—Denman, 1st Trinity 1849—Miller, 3rd Trinity 1843—Thomson, Petrichouse 1850—Hudson, St. John's Dead
1844—Miles, 3rd Trinity 1851—Cowie, 1st Trinity Heat
1845—Gloves, 1st Trinity 1851—Maenaghten, 1st Trinity 1846—Maule, 1st Trinity 1852—Courage, 1st Trinity 1847—Bagshawe, 3rd Trinity 1853—Gallon, 1st Trinity 1848—Bagat, 2nd Trinity 1854—Wright, St. John's

* "Aquatic Notes; or, Sketches of the Rise and Progress of Rowing at Cambridge."—London, G. Bell; Cambridge, Deighton.

CAPTAINS v. UNIVERSITY.

On Tuesday, the 28th, a Scratch Race was rowed between two eights selected from the Captains of the College crews and the rest of the University. It was won easily by the University crew, most of whom had rowed together for three or four days previously. The following were the crews:—

University.	Captains
1. Wood, 1st Trinity	1. Wright, St. John's
2. Alderson, 3rd Trinity	2. Nairne, Emmanuel
3. Reynolds, Emmanuel	3. Bott, 2nd Trinity
4. Fairrie, Trinity Hall	4. Agnew, 1st Trinity
5. Pearson, St. John's	5. Schriber, Trinity Hall
6. Graham, 1st Trinity	6. Treanlett, King's
7. Blake, Corpus	7. Stephenson, Caius
Jones, 3rd Trinity (stroke)	Johnson, 3rd Trin. (stroke)
Green (cox)	Wingfield (cox)

UNIVERSITY SCRATCH FOURS.—These races commenced on Wednesday. Forty-four crews started, in two divisions. We will give the result in our next.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PAIR-OAR RACES.

These races were appointed to take place on Monday last, but, owing to the severity of the weather, which had impeded the river with a good deal of floating ice, did not take place till Tuesday.

Only one boat appeared to contest the prize (silver goblets for the first boat and medals for the second) with Messrs. Short and Cadogan, who held the challenge-oars, and who, it will be remembered, were the winners of the pair-oars at Henley. What was the cause of so great a deficiency in the number of entries we cannot explain, as we cannot think the well-known proficiency of the holders of the challenge-oars a sufficient reason for none of the Oxford eight, or other members of the University, venturing to compete with them. The two crews were—W. F. Short, New College (stroke), E. Cadogan, Christ Church (bow); A. O. Lloyd (stroke), W. M. Wollaston (bow)—both of Trinity. The race was to be a time race, and Lloyd and Wollaston having won the toss, chose the upper place. From the start at Ifley, as far as the Gut, the boats almost kept their distance, Lloyd and Wollaston, if anything, gaining. In the Gut, Cadogan's oar got entangled in the weeds, which enabled their opponents to improve their distance a little; but the same accident shortly after happening to Wollaston, again placed the boats at about their former distance. There, however, the race began to assume a very different appearance, and it became evident that want of proper training was beginning to tell on Lloyd and Wollaston; for it should be stated that these gentlemen had only practised together for three days, Lloyd having previously intended to row with another partner, who was prevented by illness from doing so. From this point, then, Short and Cadogan rapidly gained on them, and between the two winning flags (where had steering had brought the others too near the shore) they had come up beside them, and while in this position their pistol fired. Time of the winners, 9 minutes 45 seconds.

LINCOLN COLLEGE CHALLENGE PAIR-OARS.

The annual race for the Lincoln College Challenge Pair-oars was decided on Tuesday last; it had previously been rowed on Saturday, 25th ult., but owing to a dispute that arose at the termination a second trial was determined on for Tuesday, the 28th ult. As it was to be a time race, the boats started at four o'clock from Ifley, in the following order:—

1st.—E. B. Kay (stroke); W. Marriner (bow).
2nd.—R. B. Wormald (stroke); S. H. Overton (bow).
3rd.—H. M. Tuckwell (stroke); G. E. O. Watts (bow).

At the start Mr. Wormald gradually drew away from Mr. Tuckwell, after which a most exciting contest took place between the two first boats, who maintained their respective distances as far as Saunderson's Bridge, where Mr. Wormald and Mr. Overton by a plucky spurt gained visibly on their opponents, and won finally by about seven seconds. Mr. Tuckwell unfortunately ran into a bank on the Oxford shore, and was thus deprived of all chance of victory.

PUNT RACE FOR £20.—The long-talked-of punt race at Oxford, between Sampson Beesley and John Bosson, both of Oxford, for £10 a side, came off on the morning of Monday last, and attracted an immense number of spectators, including a good sprinkling of the patrons of aquatic sports belonging to the University. The distance was upwards of two miles, viz., from King's Barge to opposite the Isis Tavern, and back. Beesley was the favourite—6 to 4 was freely offered on him, with but few takers. According to the articles of agreement, fouling was disallowed. As soon as the necessary arrangements of choosing umpires and a referee (the latter a member of the University Boat Club), the men came to the scratch, Bosson taking the Berkshire and Beesley the Oxfordshire side. At starting the pace was a clipping one. Bosson, on the Shallows, took the lead, and maintained it to the Free Water Stone, which, after passing, he was compelled, owing to the ice, to verge into the deep water. Unfortunately he was retarded in changing his punt pole, and Beesley, who had been about three boats' lengths behind, came up, and fouled Bosson; the latter being in his own water, thought he had won the race, and jumped from his punt to the Towing-path, but, to his great surprise and mortification, the referee, without any consultation with the umpire, gave his decision in favour of Beesley. The announcement that Beesley had won caused the greatest astonishment to those who saw the foul, all persisting in saying that Bosson being fouled in his own water was fairly entitled to the stakes. The referee once having given his decision could not be prevailed upon to alter it, and consequently the money (we think most unjustly) has been handed over to Beesley. The referee was evidently premature in giving his decision; he ought, no doubt, to have consulted both umpires before doing so. Bosson's umpire was on the river watching the race when the referee decided.

ANGLING.

ANGLING EXTRAORDINARY.—That well known disciple of old Isaac Walton, Mr. Daniel Gatey, of Keswick, made a somewhat novel capture in the river Derwent a few days ago, near the head of Bassenthwaite Lake. Mr. Gatey is a celebrated "bottom fisher," and on the occasion in question, when plying his art, felt that he had made a prize of no ordinary customer, and on drawing his line found appended to the end of it a huge horse-mussel. This crustaceous tenant of the waters, it appears, had sucked in the bait, and having forthwith closed its shells, secured the precious morsel, but by that act was itself made captive. The mussel is still alive, and in the custody of Mr. G. In times long since gone by, we are told, this species of shell-fish was very numerous in the Derwent in the locality where the capture was made.—Cumberland Pacquet.

THE PISCATORIAL SOCIETY.—The meetings of this celebrated society are held at the Yorkshire Grey Tavern, 189, Piccadilly, every Tuesday evening, at half-past eight precisely. The club was first established on the 16th of December, 1837; for promoting friendly intercourse and mutual information among the lovers of the art of angling. With regard to its Prizes for the sixteenth season, we may subjoin the following:—The First Prize, of £3 value, to be won by the member who takes the heaviest weight of fish during the whole season; such weight to include all and any kind of fresh water fish (except Stone, Loach, and Minnows); the whole taken during the season to make the total weight at the termination. Not less than 100lbs. to win. This was not won.—The Second Prize, of £1. 10s. value, to be won by the member who takes the heaviest weight of fish during the season, by Trolling, Spinning, or Live bait Fishing. Not less than 25lbs. weight to win. Won by Mr. Murray.—The Third Prize, of £1. 10s. value, to be won by the member who takes the heaviest weight during the season, by Fly Fishing. Not less than 15lbs. to win. Won by Mr. Marsh.—The Fourth Prize, of £1. 10s. value, to be won by the member who takes the heaviest single fish, of or above the following weight: Pike, 7lbs.; Barbel, 3lbs.; Thames Trout, 3lbs.; River Trout, 1lb.; Carp, 2½lbs.; Bream, 2lbs.; Chub, 1½lbs.; Tench, 12oz.; Perch, 12oz.; Roach, 1lb.; Dace, 6oz. Won by Mr. Jones.—The Fifth Prize, of 10s. value, for the heaviest weight of fish taken in one day during the season. The winner of this prize shall not be debarred from taking any other prize. Won by Mr. Dean.—When several members take various eligible fish, the winner is decided by ballot.—No member is allowed to take two of the society's prizes (except the fifth prize); but should it occur that he wins two, then the next eligible member takes his place on the prizes being awarded, or in the ballot, if any be held.—The amounts of the various prizes are expended in tackle, according to the direction of the winners, and presented to them by the chairman of the anniversary supper; and if the said weights are not shown, the various sums merge into the funds of the club.—Fish can be weighed and registered at all times by the secretary, landlord, or his agent.—The annual supper will be held at the Yorkshire Grey, Piccadilly, on Tuesday evening next, December 5th, at eight o'clock, Mr. John Shenton in the chair, Mr. Edward Grant in the vice-chair.—G. S. CHAPMAN, Hon. Sec.

SALMON PROPAGATION.—The fishermen employed at present in re-stocking the boxes at Stornoway, with ova for next year's fry have been pretty successful, as upwards of a hundred thousand have already been safely deposited. The fishermen report that a considerable number of the fish taken in their net have spawned, which is considered very early in the season, and at no previous time have the fords been so full of spawning fish. The fry in the experimental pond are still progressing as favourably as could be wished, and are rather in advance of the fry of the same age which we have seen taken out of the river.—North British Daily Mail.

EXE FISHING ASSOCIATION.—The annual dinner of the association took place at Dowdney's, Stoke Canon Inn, on Wednesday last, Thomas Porter, Esq., of Thorverton, in the chair. In the course of the evening many excellent speeches were delivered, in which the past history and future prospects of the fishery were dealt with. It appears that the river has been well stocked, to prevent the depredations of poachers, and that during the forthcoming season a vigilant surveillance will be kept up, so as to prevent any but authorised persons from sporting. Most favourable accounts were given of the existence of fine fish in the river, and if the expectations of some of the more sanguine speakers be realised, next season will be remarkable for the abundance of fish, and consequent excellence of sport. Some lucky Zebodee during the past season landed a fish nearly 4lbs. weight, which was presented to Sir Stafford Northcote. The indefatigable Hon. Secretary to the Association thinks that there are numbers of fish of the same weight now in the river, and that they must increase rather than diminish in number, by reason of the precautions that are taken for their preservation.

SALMON FISHING ON THE FORTH.—The fishing belonging to the town of Stirling has been let by public auction for a term of five years, at £1,200 a year, being an increase of £320 on last year's rental.

CAPTURE OF A SHARK.—One of these animals was brought ashore at Putney-town harbour on Friday morning, being the second within a fortnight. This fish had become entangled in some nets. It measured six feet in length, had two rows of large teeth in the upper and three in the lower jaw, the third row being only partly developed, as a portion was still under the skin. The shark had a large iron hoop round its neck, just over the bronchial opening. The hoop appeared to have been on the animal's neck for some time, as the neck and throat were chafed by the incumbrance, round which the flesh was beginning to swell. The shark which was caught at Stonehaven a few weeks ago had a similar decoration round its body, but how either of them came there it is difficult to imagine.—Glasgow Mail.

THE SPORTSMAN'S LIBRARY.

Dogs; their Management. Being a new plan of treating the animal, based upon a consideration of his natural treatment. By EDWARD MAYHEW, M.R.C.V.S. London, Routledge and Co.

EVERYBODY keeps a dog, and nobody knows how to treat him. This is a truth of which we had not felt the force until we read Mr. Mayhew's admirable exposition of the maladies to which this faithful friend of man is liable; of their symptoms, of their remedies, and of the general management by which the fine qualities of the animal, both bodily and mentally, are to be trained to their utmost efficiency for the assistance and for the admiration of his owner. All who have dogs are indebted to Mr. Mayhew for the instruction he has so frankly communicated; and we, who review him critically, have also to express the surprise and pleasure with which we have read pages that have a claim to more than mere professional merit, that add the graces of a singularly lucid and graphic style to substantial knowledge.

The subject has so great an interest for our readers, that we shall make no apology for bringing this volume under their notice at more than usual length, and we believe there are few who will read the passages we have inserted, who will not desire to make further acquaintance with the book in which they appear. Without further preface we proceed to its pages.

Mr. Mayhew argues with an emphatic vindication of the originality of the dog as a distinct race. He denies the dogmas put forth by some naturalists, that he is the descendant of the wolf, or of the jackal. His argument is conclusive.

Beyond the circumstance of the habitats of the animal being distinct, is the well-known fact that all domesticated animals have a disposition to return to their original formation; but who ever heard of a dog, however neglected, or however wild, becoming either a wolf or a jackal? The dog is spread all over the world, and not only is the animal thus widely distributed over the face of the earth, but there is no creature that is permitted with such perfect safety to the human race to have such continual and intimate intercourse with mankind. It is found in every abode: the palace, the warehouse, the mansion, and the cottage, equally afford it shelter. No condition of life is there with which the dog is not connected. The playmate of the infant, the favourite of the woman, the servant of the man, and the companion of the aged, it is seen in and around every home.

The dog is spread everywhere, all the world over, and found in every abode, from the palace to the cottage. But though there is possessed of no other animal such opportunities for knowledge, of none does more ignorance prevail. Mr. Mayhew truly says of

THE ILL-TREATED DOG.

There is no quadruped which is more abused; whether treated kindly or otherwise the dog is equally made to suffer; and probably the consequences of over-indulgence are more cruel in their result than is the opposite course of treatment. The health of the beast is perhaps best preserved when neglect deprives it of man's attention; then it may suffer from want, but it escapes many of the diseases which caprice or ignorance entail upon the generality of the tribe. There exists no creature more liable to disorder, and in which disease is prone to assume a more violent or more complicated form. To minister to its afflictions, therefore, demands no inconsiderable skill; and it becomes the more difficult to alleviate them, since canine pathology is not fully comprehended, nor the action of the various medicines upon the poor beast clearly understood; yet there are few persons who in their own estimation are not able to vanquish the many diseases to which the dog is liable. About every stable are to be met crowds of uneducated loiterers, possessors of recipes and owners of specifics, eager to advise and confident of success. I seldom send a diseased dog into the Park for exercise, that my servant does not return to me with messages which strangers have volunteered how to cure the animal. I hear of medicines that never fail, and of processes that always afford relief. Persons often of the upper rank honour me with secret communications which in their opinions are of inestimable value; ladies frequently entreat me to try particular nostrums, and sportsmen not seldom command me to do things which I am obliged to decline. In fact, the man who shall attempt to treat the diseases of the dog will have no little annoyance to surmount. He will soon discover that science unfortunately can afford him but partial help, while prejudice on every side increases the difficulties with which he will have to contend.

Happily, however, the majority of pretended cures are harmless. A roll of sulphur in the animal's water may be permitted, since it amuses the proprietor while it does not injure his dog. Some of these domestic recipes, nevertheless, are far from harmless, and they are the more to be deprecated, because those which most people would imagine to be safe are the very ones which are attended with the greatest danger. Common salt is a poison to the dog; tobacco is the source of many a death in the kennel; castor-oil often does the ill which months of care are needed to efface, even if the life be not destroyed. In the majority of cases vomits are far from beneficial; bleeding is very seldom required, and the warm bath has sealed the doom of innumerable animals.

Mr. Mayhew frankly acknowledges his obligations to his predecessors Blaine and Youatt. He can well afford to do so, for he has given us abundance of original observations and suggestions of his own.

Before he proceeds to describe the diseases, he deems it necessary to take some notice of

THE TEMPERAMENT OF THE DOG.

Any one who will observe the animal will soon be made aware of its excessive irritability. The nervous system in this creature is largely developed, and, exerting an influence over all its actions, gives character to the beast. The brain of the dog is seldom in repose, for even when asleep the twitching of the legs and the suppressed sounds which it emits inform us that it is dreaming. No animal is more actuated by the power of imagination. Who is there that has not seen the dog mistake objects during the dusk of the evening? Delirium usually precedes its death, and nervous excitability is the common accompaniment of most of its disorders. To diseases of a cerebral or spinal character it is more liable than is any other domesticated animal. Its very bark is symbolical of its temperament, and its mode of attack energetically declares the excitability of its nature. The most fearful of all the diseases to which it is exposed (rabies) is essentially of a nervous character, and there are few of its disorders which do not terminate with symptoms indicative of cranial disturbance.

Such being the character of the dog, it is not difficult to discern the nature of the treatment required. Gentleness is the golden rule of his management, but gentleness mingled with firmness. The attendant upon the dog must be able to command himself. He must exhibit no fear. "The hand slowly and cautiously advanced, to be hastily retracted, is nearly certain to be bitten." There must at least be the appearance of confidence. There must be no wrestling or fighting. This is curious, on

DOCTRINING DOGS.

Strange dogs are not easily examined in their own homes, especially if they be favourites and their indulgent owners are present. Like spoiled children, the beasts seem to be aware of all the advantages which the affections of their master give to their humours. They will assume so much, and play such antics, as renders it impossible to arrive at any just conclusion as to the actual state of their health. Dogs in fact are great impostors, and he who has had much to do with them soon learns how cunningly the pampered "toy" of the drawing-room can "sham." For deception, consequently, it is necessary to be prepared, and practice quickly teaches us to distinguish between what is real and that which is assumed. The exertion, however, required to feign disturbs the system, and the struggle which always accompanies the act renders it frequently impossible to make the necessary observation with requisite nicety. Petted dogs are, therefore, best examined away from their homes, and in the absence of any one who has been in the habit of caressing them. Frequently I have found it of no avail to attempt the examination of these creatures at the residences of their owners; but the same animals brought to my surgery have, without a struggle, allowed me to take what liberties I pleased.

How wondrously does the dog resemble his master in his character! Thus he is

AN HONOURABLE DOG.

Dogs are intelligent and honourable creatures, and no man will have reason to regret who teaches himself to trust in their better qualities. I have hitherto, in a great measure, escaped their teeth, and being slow and infirm, my good fortune certainly cannot be attributed to my activity. Kindness and consideration works upon animals; nor do I believe there are many of the lower creatures that will not appreciate such appeals. It is better, therefore, to work upon the sympathetic nature of the brute than to compete with it in strength, or endeavour to outvie it in agility. Manual dexterity will often fail, and is seldom employed save when danger is present. Mental supremacy appealing to the source of action ensures safety, by subduing, not the resistance, but the desire to resist.

It may be known when the dog is irritated by the dilation of the pupil of the eye—it is an unfailing sign. But when the dog is ill he is very manageable.

THE SICK DOG.

When, however, really sick, there are few dogs which may not be approached. Under such circumstances, the utmost gentleness should be employed. The stranger should advance quietly, and not bustle rudely up to the animal. He should speak to it in accents of commiseration, which will be better comprehended than the majority of reasonable beings may be willing to admit.

The hand after a little while should be quietly offered to the dog to smell, and that ceremony being ended, the pulse may be taken, or any other necessary observation made, without dread of danger. Every consideration, however, ought to be given to the condition of the beast. No violence on any account should be indulged; it is better to be ignorant of symptoms than to aggravate the disorder by attempting to ascertain their existence. If the brain should be affected, or the nervous system sympathetically involved, silence is absolutely imperative. No chirping or loud talking ought under such circumstances to be allowed, and the animal should not be carried into the light for the purpose of inspecting it.

At this point we pause; but we shall certainly return to this volume, and perhaps more than once.

QUILL-PEN MAKING EXTRAORDINARY.—Mr. John Ward, of Whithy-grove, Manchester, undertook to make 2,000 quill pens, with a knife, in ten hours, for a wager. At the end of five hours he had succeeded in making 1,120, and at the end of nine hours and a-half he had made 2,030, being thirty over his task, with half an hour to spare. The conditions of the match were that they should be all fit for commercial use.

CONSULAR APPOINTMENTS.—The Queen has been graciously pleased to appoint Keith Edward Abbott, Esq., now her Majesty's Consul at Tehran, to be her Majesty's Consul at Tabreez; and Richard Stevens, Esq., now her Majesty's Consul at Tabreez, to be her Majesty's Consul at Tehran; Rutherford Alcock, Esq., now her Majesty's Consul at Shanghai, to be her Majesty's Consul at Canton; Daniel Brooke Robertson, Esq., now her Majesty's Consul at Amoy, to be her Majesty's Consul at Shanghai; and Harry S. Parkes, Esq., now Acting British Vice-Consul at Canton, to be her Majesty's Consul at Amoy.

THE GARDEN.

ALTERATIONS IN PLEASURE GROUNDS.

Few seasons pass, but the owners of the pleasure grounds of country seats, villas, &c., however small, desire to make some improvements; and, as we have had no lack of practice in our day, it will be well occasionally to offer a little advice to those who may happen to need it. As to style in laying out gardens, it of necessity varies with the local conditions of the grounds; and it is well that it should be so, otherwise we should have a kind of mannerism which would become excessively insipid; landscape gardening would lose half its zest, and speedily cease to create that interest which is felt in it wherever a high order of civilisation prevails. Those parts in the immediate vicinity of the mansion or villa may, in nearly all cases, be considered mere appurtenances of the house itself, and of course partake of the style or impress peculiar to it; and, as this adaptation must cease at some point, the management of such requires in general some nicety.

Pleasure grounds in general are composed, as everybody knows, of belts, screens, shrubberies, masses, groups, &c.; and in the grounds pertaining to larger demesnes, episodal plots frequently occur, such as a Rosary, American garden, Dutch garden, &c. &c. A proper understanding of each of those points, individually, and the art of combining them so as to produce the highest degree of effect, constitutes what is termed landscape gardening, which, of course, in its scope, embraces territorial improvements, the disposition of buildings, &c.

We have only space here to offer a little practical advice on these heads; and first we may observe, that belts, screens and shrubberies, are not particularly definite in their character, but frequently merge into each other. Belts seen at a distance frequently constitute one portion of the sky-line in the landscape, and where heavy in outline, much improvement may at times be effected by felling a tree or two, here and there, in order to give indentation in the general outline.

Screens are frequently used in the grounds attached to suburban villas, in order to shut out incongruous objects, and to assist in giving an air of privacy and seclusion. Shrubberies may be defined as ornamental accompaniments of the walk or drive, and are much more dressy than the preceding, and subordinate as to height or breadth. Masses, it is not so easy to define; and we do not often meet with them in pleasure grounds or applied to shrubs or trees. It requires considerable extent to carry out the massing system amongst larger trees or shrubs; few gardens can afford room for some scores of beech, larch, birch, &c., each in an unmixed condition, we therefore pass by them to groups, and these concern almost every person possessing regular gardens. Natural groups impart a considerable degree of consequence to grounds, and serve in part to remove the idea of a mere town garden. Such groups as we are now pointing to are with difficulty created by art; they are in general the work of time, and, we may add, of accident. The fact is, our best groups are generally the selection of a mind imbued with principles of taste. On a good eye of course much depends, and when plantations, masses, or groups are broken up, those interested should be keenly alive to any adventitious associations of forms, which, through their hold or elegant contour, conspire to form what the painter would term a group. We think it was the clever Loudon who, in his usual way, attempting to give every thing a definitive aspect, affirmed, as a principle, that it required at least three objects to constitute what he termed "a whole." And indeed it will be found in landscape gardening that this is about the minimum point, if such matters of art may bear a definition.

However, our business here is to point to more salient matters. A dry detail is in this place unnecessary; we therefore pass on to matters having a practical bearing on the business of the day.

To those who are laying out new gardens we would say, beware of after-thoughts, which are at once annoying, rehuking, and costly. Lay down your scheme boldly, but warily; strive to attain a good aim, based of course on what is desired and what is attainable. Having done this, let congruity of parts give the whole a consistency which may cause no regret. Do not war too much against the native character of the spot; do not attempt to carry prim and formal avenues or lines over deeply undulating surfaces. One of the first points for consideration, after fixing the sites of all structures—well considering their dependency on each other—is to plan a main perambulatory walk; and this, in small places, should be carried as near to the exterior generally as is compatible with the due preservation of privacy and the avoiding disagreeable objects.

Walks of this kind in grounds of considerable extent may be seven feet in width, but in small gardens five feet is as much as can be well spared; and the more such walks pursue a serpentine course, in general, the better chance will there be for the planter to give variety and to convey an idea of extent. But it is necessary to have two distinct widths of walk at least; the one marking the chief line for the perambulator, the other walks, which by their narrowness, as compared with the other, plainly show that they lead to subordinate affairs, or digressive matters. Such an arrangement is, we think, important; and were such a principle more steadily adhered to, the disappointment which sometimes occurs to the perambulator would be avoided.

We observed, that walks chalked out with hold curves enable the planter to give a high degree of effect, if he possesses taste sufficient to avail himself of the advantages offered. One of our poets, of no mean celebrity, has well said,—

"Let not each beauty every where be spied,
Where half the skill is decently to hide."

This couplet points with some ingenuity to the very matter we are now discussing. The fact is, these bold curves afford bold planting; a bold style of planting assists in surprising the perambulator, and in keeping his imagination and fancy in full play at every turn.

This it is that so highly gratifies persons of taste, and surely in our enlightened days such are scarcely a minority. Of course the schemer, who plans the walks, will so conduct them as to embrace the best features of the exterior landscape, equally avoiding or receding from those which are discordant or disagreeable. About planting or other matters we will chat shortly; and after having briefly handled, practically, the subject of "laying out" new grounds, we may turn our attention a little to the renovation of old ones, and thus endeavour to please each class of readers; and we do hope, that even the true sportsman who honours "THE FIELD" with his patronage may be occasionally gratified.

(To be continued.)

GARDENING FOR THE WEEK.

BUSINESS PECULIAR TO THE SEASON.

In the last "FIELD" we broke the ice as to pruning, and some protective matters, and as every week in horticultural affairs has its duties, some of a peculiar character, we must beg to remind our country friends of things which we shall all have to take especial care to remember and to practice. It has been much the fashion with gardening periodicals to give "cut and dry" calendars at stated times, and certainly they are not without their use. They are, however, dry affairs, and constantly seem to require some complementary matter to render them as useful as both the reader and writer very naturally desire.

Such being the case, we hope so to shape our advice as to produce at once a calendar of really important matters, and a running commentary; thus, we trust, removing the tedium of a mere calendar, and putting our readers on the right scent at once.

THE FLOWER GARDEN.

MR. SALTER'S NURSERY, HAMMERSMITH.—The name of Salter has been so long identified with chrysanthemum culture, that the following notice of good kinds in blossom there will, doubtless, interest those who cultivate this charming indispensable of the winter plant-house or drawing-room. We rejoice to see that a class is coming to hand, about intermediate between the Pompones and old kinds: these will be useful adjuncts to a stage, as forming a connecting link between the large and small kinds. It will be noticed, too, by our country friends, how many shades of colour may be had in this most important family.

Those who are interested about new chrysanthemums cannot do better than pay a visit to this nursery at the present time, while Mr. Salter's fine collection is in bloom. It contains all the novelties of importance both of last year and this, and will be found well worth inspection. The following are a few of the best of such as were in blossom on Monday last. Large flowered kinds; Anguste Mie, reddish salmon; L'Ingot d'Or, yellow; Albin, dark claret; Trilby, bluish; Chevalier Dunage, golden yellow, large and showy; Cassy, red and orange; Triomphe du Nord, reddish chestnut; Bossuet, rose shaded with violet; Rolla, rosy purple, tipped and mottled with silvery markings; Conspicuum, shaded rose; Madame Lebois, delicate peach; Phare de Messine, dark chestnut; Hermine, bluish tipped with rose, and one of the most beautiful of this year's flowers; Le Prophète, yellowish buff; Prince Jerome, yellow and brown; Duo de Rohan, light crimson; and Eclipse, straw-coloured. Pompones: Riquiqui, deep plum colour; Pluie d'Or, dwarf yellow; Hélène, rosy purple; Doctor Duval, reddish chestnut; La Vague, yellow with a brown centre; Madame Rousselon, delicate peach; Hector, dark orange buff; Comte Vigier, pale buff; Mille, Elkington, fine white; Rose pompon, quilled pale lilac; Reine des Anémones, fine white; Consolida, yellow; Berrol, sulphur, suffused with rose; John Salter, dark reddish orange; Brilliant, reddish scarlet; Bayardiers, buff, suffused with silvery markings; Rosita, bluish lilac; Precoce, deep rose; and Mon Bijou, pale fawn, shaded with lilac; Hybrids, i.e. crosses between the Pompones and large-flowered kinds: Marabout, fringed white; Cedo Nulli, white, with brown centre, a pretty kind; Marceau, lilac-tipped white; Bernard de Rennes, dark fawn; Golden Drop, yellow anemone-flowered sort; La Radiuse, rose, with white centre; Madame Passy, rose, shaded with lilac; Aurore Boreale, yellowish buff; Berthille, lilac bordered white. These in general have larger flowers than the Pompones.

Among other plants, Manula oppositifolia was still covered with multitudes of stary white flowers, which last long in perfection. This was stated to make a good bedding plant. Chrysanthemum frutescens luteum and album are also reported to form dense masses of blossom in the flower-garden in summer, and if lifted and potted before the frost injures them they make good winter flowering greenhouse plants. We also remarked several handsome Veronias in the way of Andersoni in bloom. When well grown these make pretty objects at this season of the year.

THE CONSERVATORY AND PLANT HOUSES.

At this period structures of this kind, which assume various forms and titles, will have doffed their summer and autumn attire, and be gay with what are termed winter flowers. Chrysanthemums, Camellias, Sulvias, Begonias, Lachenalias, Acacias, Jinums, Kennedias, and many more which we have not space to name, will now rush in to supply the blank. Such, of course, must have the attention which they so richly merit; liquid manure, weak and clear, will be found of immense benefit. The climbers in such houses must be trimmed and tied in neatly, and everything made to carry as gay an appearance as possible. Fire heat will now have to be used, both on the score of keeping out frost, and in order to dispel unnecessary moisture in the air; in the latter case rather using fire liberally in the day than the night, and taking care to use as free a ventilation as possible. Of course, these things will depend on the out-door temperature. In all cases it is better to be content with a moderated temperature, than, by adopting a high standard, to excite by fits, extreme alternations of moisture and aridity. As a general winter temperature for conservatories and plant houses, if we were to assume a point, we may advise from forty to fifty degrees by day, and from thirty-five to forty degrees by night, artificial warmth; during sunshine, an advance of ten degrees may be allowed, if accompanied by a wholesome degree of ventilation. What are called cold pits, and such structures, must be well protected on the roof when necessary, and every means daily taken to dispel the accumulating damp in the interior.

FORCING.

The early forcer will now be stirring; the preliminary steps, such as closing vineries and peach-houses, and reversing the atmospheric conditions therein, must commence. Such preparations consist in applying fomenting materials to outside borders, in completing all training and pruning, and in dressing the wood of vines, peaches, &c. The following dressing may be used to all: in one gallon of warm water whisk up three ounces of soft soap, add one quart of lime and three handfuls of sulphur; these ingredients thoroughly mixed may be applied over every particle of the wood of vines, peaches, figs, &c.

THE KITCHEN GARDEN.

The kitchen garden business will be confined chiefly to protection matters, and to trenching, digging, pruning, &c. Salads must be well looked to, and cauliflowers in heat housed, or otherwise secured, in order to enjoy them as long as possible.

In order to economise labour, and to command culinary vegetables in a moment, get a stock of celery, leeks, horse-radish, Jerusalem artichokes, turnips, &c., secured in one spot, burying the min soil; much waste time is thus prevented. Some parsley may be covered for fear of snowy weather. Let the asparagus, where shallow, have a coating of manure spread over the surface.

MISCELLANEOUS.

EUROPEAN VINEYARDS.—That terrible pest of the vine, called Oidium Tuckeri, or, commonly, vine mildew, has made such advances during the last two or three years, that doubtless many cultivators have been utterly ruined. As it has also found its way so extensively into British hot-houses, we beg to give the following extract:—

The fate of European vineyards may be regarded as sealed, for the present. The ruin of the grapes in Portugal, France, Italy, Germany, and the Balearic Islands, appears to be so extensive that the price of wine must rise considerably, unless its consumption should much diminish. And this becomes the more certain when it is remembered that Madeira is in the same predicament, and when we add, as we can upon good authority, that mildew has begun to show itself in Sicily, whither it seems to have travelled from the kingdom of Naples, where the grapes are in the same state as in France. How far Spain is exempt we are as yet uninformed; but we know that mildew prevailed largely in Grenada last year, and we have reason to believe that the mischief has this year been much greater.—Gardener's Chronicle.

THE SUNFLOWER.—The following notice concerning the sunflower may just serve to raise the question about its profitable culture on lands possessing moderate qualifications, or as forming occasionally a part in a rotation system. This question was a good deal handled some years since; but scarcely sufficient consideration appears to have been given to it:—

In No. 37 of the current year, "B." recommends the cultivation of this plant, particularly on newly-cleared woodlands. Now, being about to cut five acres of coppice of seventeen years' growth, I should like to try a cheap experiment as to the growth and profit, by planting a part, or the whole, with sunflower seed. Will "B." therefore kindly tell me how to proceed, and inform me of any simple machine by which I can get the fibre from the stalk, or one to obtain oil from the seed, or how I can dispose of my crop when grown?—J. B. N., Liverpool.

Among the emigrants to Melbourne during the past week, we have to notice Mr. Smith, well known in Scotland by his works on landscape gardening.

THE GARDENER.

BOTANICAL SOCIETY OF LONDON.—The 15th anniversary meeting of this society was held last evening at the society's rooms, 20, Bedford Street, Strand; Dr. J. B. Gray, F.R.S., President, in the chair. From the report of the council, it appeared that the society consisted of 250 members; that many thousand specimens of British and foreign plants had been received for distribution among the members in January next; the donations to the library had been considerable, and comprised many valuable botanical works. The report was unanimously adopted, after which a ballot took place for the council for the ensuing year, when the chairman was re-elected president, and he nominated J. Miers, Esq., F.R.S., and A. Henfrey, F.R.S., vice-presidents, and Mr. J. Reynolds, treasurer.

CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editor of THE FIELD.

SIR,—I see that the proprietors of THE FIELD have placed it on a new foundation, and that you intend devoting some space for notes and queries on gardening and farming subjects. I think this will prove very useful, and I venture to avail myself of the privilege, as it very frequently happens that I want to have a few hints; and I feel persuaded that if this department is well looked after, and properly attended to, a great many subscribers will also solicit the assistance you offer. I have enclosed a few queries, and shall feel much obliged if you would kindly submit them in your next impression.

B. O. X.

To the Editor of THE FIELD.

SIR,—As a country gentleman I am much pleased with the alterations you propose in THE FIELD; and, as I am very fond of my garden, and do a little in amateur farming, I shall look forward with much pleasure to its weekly appearance. My wife, too, says that it will just suit her; whereas she never looked at it. She is also very fond of her garden, and if your horticultural editor will occasionally give some good practical information on the culture of popular flowers, I am sure that the ladies, as well as the gentlemen, will be pleased. THE FIELD was a selfish paper, merely for the sterner sex, but now I see clearly that you intend the fairer sex to be pleased also.—Wishing you every success,

I remain, Sir, yours truly, W. F. C.

To the Editor of THE FIELD.

SIR,—I find that alterations are to be made in conducting THE FIELD, and consider the plan you have laid down will give the greatest satisfaction to our country gentlemen especially, and will also be much sought after by the City merchant, and others having occupation in the vast metropolis, who retire into the country after the business of the day has been transacted. I have hitherto taken in the Gardener's Chronicle, but that is too learned and too scientific for me. It is a very clever paper, no doubt, and edited by the most eminent men in their profession, and evidently suits a large majority of its readers; but what I want is a good practical paper, one that will teach me a few little wrinkles in cultivating my suburban garden. Yours truly,

ALMA.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

HYACINTH ROOTS.—A friend of mine has given me a quantity of hyacinth roots, and I should like to grow some in glasses. Would you have the kindness to ask some of your correspondents to give me a little practical advice how to proceed?—J. F.

HEATING A GERANIUM HOUSE.—I am about building a small house for geraniums, and should like to know the best plan of heating it. I should like it to be done by hot water, but I fear this will be too expensive. Can any practical reader advise me?—A. NEW SUBSCRIBER.

PEARS.—I send you a few pears, and I should esteem it a favour if you will tell me the name of it.—A. (The fruit shall be submitted to our Horticultural Editor.—Ed.)

FRUIT TREES.—I saw some time ago in a paper, (I think the Cottage Gardener) a new method of producing fruit trees, by inserting the scion into a potato instead of an ordinary stock. Can any of your readers give me any information on the subject, as to the time of planting and mode of preparing, both of scion and stock, and whether it will answer for wall fruit, as well as the more hardy sorts?—GRAVE.

THE CLIMATE OF THE CRIMEA.—A gentleman, writing in one of our contemporaries, lately informed the world that the climate of the Crimea was so cold that the fingers of our brave warriors would be benumbed, so that it would be impossible for them to fire their guns; and that, if perchance they slept in their boots, and got frost-bitten, they would, on pulling them off, find their feet left in them. The writer of this article says he knows all about it, because he lived for some time in the North of Russia. Now it so happens that a great many trees and plants thrive in the Crimea that would not grow there if the cold was so severe. A Russian botanist, called Palha, who lived in the neighbourhood of Simferopol, a few miles from Sebastopol, says, that "the climate is little different from Australia and Asia Minor; that the winter is hardly felt, and the primroses and crocuses appear above the ground in the month of January, and the oak retains its green foliage throughout the year. The olive, the pomegranate, the fig, and the date-tree thrive alongside the ever-verdant laurel, and the caper bush is scattered along the coast. The wild vine reaches to the top of the highest tree." Now, it is not very likely that the plants enumerated by this Russian botanist would luxuriate in such a climate as denoted by the gentleman who resided a long time in the North of Russia; and we sincerely trust, before the primroses appear again in the Crimea, that the noble band of warriors who are now so bravely fighting for us, will deal such a blow to the haughty autocrat, as to bring him as humble as the lowly crocus.—A. GARDENER.

THE FARM.

It must be understood that this department of THE FIELD does not profess to be the Farmer's Journal, but only to communicate so much about farming matters as is calculated to be interesting and useful to the class by whom THE FIELD is read—the gentlemen in the country who farm a little for their own amusement, and who do not follow agriculture as a calling. For the farmer, there is already an ample supply of journals, entirely devoted to his service, and having no other departments. But in THE FIELD, which embraces the entire range of country sports and occupations, it would be impossible to make provision for more than the requirements of those who read it for portions of its other intelligence, and their farming topics are limited to what may be termed the Home Farm. The country gentleman farms a few acres for his amusement; he keeps some cows, a few sheep, some pigs; besides his meadows, perhaps he may indulge himself with the luxury of a few acres of arable, whereon to try experiments that are usually more pleasing than profitable. This is, or ought to be, the limit of the country gentleman's farm—sufficient for an agreeable occupation, not sufficient to inconvenience him by its demands upon his time or his pocket.

Now this it is, and this only, that we contemplate in the department of THE FIELD, that will be devoted to the farm. We shall make no endeavour to treat of agriculture in general, or to record agricultural meetings, speeches, or prizes in particular. Such details must be sought in journals to which they properly belong. We do not purpose to smother our readers in a heap of market statistics; we shall not overwhelm them with columns of reports on prospects and yields; but, instead of these, it is our intention to present them a succinct review of as much of the farming intelligence of the time as every gentleman needs to know, collected in the form of a narrative, which shall save the reader the trouble of toiling through columns of figures, and dull reports and speeches, to find them for himself. We shall not only collect from all sources useful information relating to the different departments of the Home Farm, which may help him in the management of it; more especially is it our hope to encourage communication between our readers on the topics embraced within the range of the Home Farm. They would give to one another a great deal more practical information than we could obtain for them; and we are quite sure, that if the system of mutual inquiry and reply were to be generally adopted by them—that is to say, if any reader who wants to be informed on any subject would ask through these columns, an answer from the experience of other readers, replies would be readily given, and thus would a vast amount of knowledge be elicited and circulated, which would otherwise be lost to the public.

The department of The Farm admits of convenient subdivision, and its information will be arranged accordingly:—1st. The Land; 2nd. The Live Stock; these embrace the whole. The land will be arranged under arable, the meadow, the orchard. The live stock into the cow and the pig. The horse is so important a personage in the country farm, that we purpose to devote to him a distinct department; and the poultry yard is rather within the province of the ladies than of the gentlemen, and that therefore will be treated of in the division which will belong almost entirely to the country ladies, and which we have termed "The Country House."

This explanation of the design was necessary, because some had concluded, from the title of "The Farm," that it was intended to devote that section of THE FIELD to the farmers exclusively. The plan being thus described explicitly, we have only to add that, as yet, it is but a plan. The arrangements for carrying it out completely are not completed as yet, for it is not easy to find a fit man for the work. Until such an one is procured, we can proceed with it but imperfectly; and even when it is fairly begun, some time must necessarily elapse before we can venture to hope for the thorough accomplishment of a scheme so novel.

THE LAND.

AVERAGE PRICE OF WHEAT.

The following valuable communication has been published by Mr. C. Willich:—

SIR,—The present state of the corn-market, and the great interest which is universally felt as to the probable supply and price of wheat during the coming year, induce me to transmit to you the annexed table of the average price of wheat for each quarter from Michaelmas, 1815, also the annual average price to each Michaelmas day, being the termination of what is usually called the "farmers' year." I have added the date and amount of the highest and lowest weekly average price during each of the respective years, in order that the extent of fluctuation may be seen.

At present I merely wish to furnish you with the facts, and to point out some of the many causes, without reference

POULTRY.

GLOUCESTERSHIRE AGRICULTURAL ASSOCIATION
POULTRY SHOW.

This society, whose operations were last year suspended in consequence of the visit of the Royal Agricultural Society to this city, in order that the efforts of its members might be concentrated on the more national undertaking, has, last week, celebrated its twenty-first annual meeting, which has passed off with complete success. This fortunate result is chiefly attributable to the admirable show of poultry, which certainly surpassed all expectation. This was a new feature in the exhibitions of the society, but it proved a most attractive one, and induced crowds of ladies, who have hitherto abstained from patronising the exhibitions of the society, to become interested spectators.

The poultry were exhibited in a commodious building, erected for the purpose. The birds were placed in neat wicker baskets, ranged on tables, and thus an excellent opportunity for inspecting them was afforded. The building was decorated with evergreens, and, in order to afford the public the advantages of an evening's entertainment, the interior was fitted up with gas. This department of the show was first opened on Wednesday morning, at a charge of half a crown, and a large and fashionable attendance soon mustered. At five o'clock in the evening, the price of admission was reduced to a shilling. Considering that on no other occasion has a poultry exhibition ever been attempted in Gloucester, the first experiment of the kind must be considered in the highest degree satisfactory. The birds exhibited were in the highest condition, and fowls generally were much better represented than at the last exhibition of the Royal Agricultural Society. Though the show was on a less extended scale, yet, in point of excellence, it would equal the great Birmingham exhibitions.

In nearly all classes, the competition was brisk, and the judges must, in many instances, have had a most laborious and difficult task in giving their decisions. The Dorkings were in great force and variety, and the prize birds of this class embodied every point of gallinaceous excellence. The Spanish and Cochins-Chinas were also well represented, and in the latter class were several valuable specimens of great bulk. There were also some members of the Bramah Pouter family, which, in point of size and elegance of shape, out rival their brethren, the Cochins. The game fowls were exceedingly numerous, and comprised many birds of splendid plumage and comely appearance, and attracted much notice. The Hamburgs were equally interesting; and the Polands, whose top-knots gave them a sort of military aspect, looked like very grenadiers amongst their fellow crows. The prizes for bantams were well competed for and we have seldom observed a more interesting array of this class of bird. Geese, ducks, and turkeys aided well to sustain the high character of the show; and, for plumpness and high condition, we question whether some of these birds could have been excelled in any show in England. Below we subjoin the prize list, which points out, more fairly than we could ourselves, such birds as were most deserving of notice; we may mention, however, that Mr. Churchill, of the King's Head, showed some very rare and curious birds; and Mr. T. Morris, of Maisemore, likewise exhibited some very creditable specimens. Mrs. Herbert, of Powick, was a very extensive and successful contributor.

Price List of Poultry.

Dorking.—Cock and two hens, hatched before 1854.—1st prize, £2, R. Branwell, Holsworthly, 1 hen, 1853, others not known; 2nd prize, £1, Miss Steele Perkins, Sutton Colefield, cock about 1½ years, hens 1 year 5 months; 3rd prize, 10s., John Thompson, Woolvers, Reigate, Surrey, 1853. Highly commended: Charles Edwards, Bristol, over 1 year; John Thompson, Woolvers, Reigate, Surrey, 1853. Commended: Col. Clowes, cock 1 year 5 months 3 weeks, hens 1 year, 5 months, 1 week.

Dorking.—Cockerel and two pullets, hatched in 1854.—1st prize, £2, George McCann, Malvern, 8 months; 2nd prize, £1, Col. Clowes, cockerel 10 months, pullets 7 months; 3rd prize, 10s., R. Branwell, Holsworthly, cockerel 17th April, pullets 17th February. Highly commended: G. McCann, Malvern, about 8 months; Rev. H. G. Baily, Swindon, Wilts, 8 months. Commended: Thomas Morris, Maisemore, cockerel 32 weeks, pullets 22 weeks.

Spanish.—Cock and two hens, hatched before 1854.—1st prize, £2, Mrs. Lydia C. Stow, Bredon, 17 months; 2nd prize, £1, William Plummer, Bristol, upwards of a year; 3rd prize, 10s., Charles Thomas Nelson, the Lozells, near Birmingham, cock 17 months, hens 2 years each. Commended: Richard Branwell, Holsworthly, cock 15th May, 1853, hens May, 1853.

Spanish.—Cockerel and two pullets, hatched in 1854.—1st prize, £2, Daniel Parsley, Rock Cottage, Stapleton-road, Bristol, May 20th, 1854; 2nd prize, £1, W. Plummer, Bristol, 2nd March; 3rd prize, 10s., Charles Edwards, Bristol, cockerel March, pullets May.

Cochin-china.—(Cinnamon and Buff.)—Cock and two hens, hatched before 1854.—1st prize, £2, Rev. D. Capper, Huntley Rectory, 2 years. The only birds shown in this class.

Cochin-china.—(Cinnamon and Buff.)—Cockerel and two pullets, hatched in 1854.—1st prize, £2, Mrs. S. R. Herbert, Powick, Worcestershire, 10 months; 2nd prize, £1, John Taylor, jun., Spring Grove, Honnslow, 10 months; 3rd prize, 10s., Mrs. R. H. Herbert, Powick, 7 months. Commended: Captain W. H. Snell, London, 7½ months.

Cochin-china.—(White.)—Cock and two hens, hatched before 1851.—1st prize, £2, Mrs. S. R. Herbert, Powick, cock 2 years 5 months, hen 2½ years, 2nd hen 18 months. The only birds shown in this class.

Cochin-china.—(White.)—Cockerel and two pullets, hatched in 1854.—1st prize, £2, Mrs. S. R. Herbert, Powick, cockerel 7 months, pullets 6 months; 2nd prize, £1, James Turner, Northbrook, Exeter, 8 months; 3rd prize, 10s., ditto, ditto, cockerel 9 months, pullets 8 months. Highly commended: Mrs. S. R. Herbert, Powick, cockerel 8 months, pullets 7 months. Commended: a meritorious class.

Cochin-china.—(Other varieties.)—Cock and two hens, the Lozells, Birmingham, 20 months; 2nd and 3rd prizes not hatched before 1854.—1st prize, £2, Charles Thomas Nelson, awarded.

Cochin-china.—(Other varieties.)—Cockerel and two pullets, hatched in 1854.—1st prize, £2, Captain W. H. Snell, St. Swithin's-lane, London, cockerel 6½ months, pullets 7 months; 2nd prize, £1, Rev. Grenville F. Hodson, Banwell, Somersetshire, last week of March; 3rd prize, 10s., John Barnett, Wribben Hall, near Bewdley, 5 months and 3 weeks.

Bramha Pouter.—Cock and two hens.—1st prize not awarded; 2nd prize, £1, Joseph Hinton, Blaina Iron Works, near Newport, Monmouthshire, 21 weeks; 3rd prize, 10s., John Henry Cliffe, Twigworth Villa, May 29th, 1854.

to scarcity, which are constantly coming into operation, and which affect the price of grain, without attempting to account for the great fluctuations in price which occasionally have occurred. Among some of the more permanent causes I may draw attention to the vast amount of gold which has been, and still continues to be, thrown into the world's treasury. Its effects will be slow, but very sure. The gradual enhancement of the market value of landed property which has been remarked from time to time, although the rents may not have increased, shows that the rate of interest on money invested in the purchase of land is gradually decreasing, while the number of years' purchase of the net income is increasing. Although this may, perhaps, not be admitted as leading to the same result, I consider that such will be the case, notwithstanding the increased produce which may be obtained by the liberal employment of capital.

To what extent the effects produced by these and other causes acting in the same direction may be neutralised, is a question of difficult solution. It may, however, be expected that the English market, now open to all the world, will induce those countries capable of increasing their produce to avail themselves of the advantage thus afforded to them, and it is not unlikely that ultimately the average price in England will be influenced and guided by the average market price of corn-exporting countries, increased by the expenses of transit and the profit which the importer will add to the cost at the port of shipment.—I remain, Sir, your obedient servant, CHARLES M. WILKIN, Actuary, University Life Office.

25, Suffolk-street, Pall-mall, Nov. 29.

Quarterly and Yearly Average Price of Wheat from Michaelmas, 1845, to Michaelmas, 1854; together with the Highest and Lowest Weekly Average in each of the respective Years ending Michaelmas-day:—

	Highest price, week ending	Lowest price, week ending
Quarter to	s. d. s. d.
Christmas, 1845	67 9
Ladyday, " 1846	55 0
Midsummer, " 1847	51 7
Michaelmas, " 1848	49 3
Year to Michaelmas, 1849	54 1
Quarter to
Christmas, 1849	50 9
Ladyday, " 1850	72 8
Midsummer, " 1851	85 10
Michaelmas, " 1852	67 1
Year to Michaelmas, 1853	71 3
Quarter to
Christmas, 1853	53 0
Ladyday, " 1854	51 7
Midsummer, " 1855	45 11
Michaelmas, " 1856	61 3
Year to Michaelmas, 1857	51 3
Quarter to
Christmas, 1857	50 1
Ladyday, " 1858	45 5
Midsummer, " 1859	44 10
Michaelmas, " 1860	45 9
Year to Michaelmas, 1861	46 7
Quarter to
Christmas, 1861	40 5
Ladyday, " 1862	38 11
Midsummer, " 1863	39 0
Michaelmas, " 1864	43 10
Year to Michaelmas, 1865	40 3
Quarter to
Christmas, 1865	40 2
Ladyday, " 1866	37 7
Midsummer, " 1867	39 4
Michaelmas, " 1868	40 7
Year to Michaelmas, 1869	39 5
Quarter to
Christmas, 1869	36 7
Ladyday, " 1870	40 10
Midsummer, " 1871	40 10
Michaelmas, " 1872	41 2
Year to Michaelmas, 1873	39 10
Quarter to
Christmas, 1873	40 5
Ladyday, " 1874	45 7
Midsummer, " 1875	44 8
Michaelmas, " 1876	61 0
Year to Michaelmas, 1877	45 7
Quarter to
Christmas, 1877	69 10
Ladyday, " 1878	79 6
Midsummer, " 1879	73 4
Michaelmas, " 1880	63 10
Year to Michaelmas, 1881	72 10

NOTES AND QUERIES.

MILK HOUSE.—"Will any reader furnish the most approved plan of a building for a milk-house, and not connected with an ice-house?"

THOROUGHPIN IN HORSES.—"Dear Sir,—I have a horse which I highly prize, but he has what is called 'thoroughpin'—and although they do not make him lame, yet they give to his joints opposite the points of the hocks a bulky appearance. Will any of your numerous subscribers inform me, through THE FIELD, of a cure for it?"—D. L. P.

PUMPS.—"Is there any pump now in use that will bring spring water ten rods from my house, and ten feet below it?"—A SUBSCRIBER.

THE MARKETS.

SMITHFIELD.

MONDAY.—The number of beasts was again small, and prices were well maintained. The supply of sheep was larger, and trade for them slow; prices on the average were lower, and a clearance could not be effected. Best calves could not be quoted lower; but, on the average, trade was scarcely as good. From Germany and Holland there were 1,374 beasts, 3,610 sheep, and 134 calves; Spain, 60 beasts; Scotland, 150; Ireland, 200; and 7,200 from the Northern and Midland Counties.

Per stone of 14 lbs.	s. d. s. d.	Per stone of 14 lbs.	s. d. s. d.
Best Scotch, Herefords	6 0-5 4	Best Dns. & Half-breds	Sh. 0-0 0
Best Short Horns	4 8-5 0	Best Long Wools	4 6-4 8
Second quality beasts	3 4-4 4	Dns. & Shorn	0 0-0 0
Calves	4 0-5 2	Rwes and second quality	3 6-4 2
Pigs	3 8-4 8	Dns. & Shorn	0 0-0 0
Best Dns. & Half-breds	4 10-5 0	Lambs	0 0-0 0

Beasts at market, 4,566; sheep and lambs, 27,240; calves, 132; pigs, 310.

FRIDAY.—We had a fair average supply of beasts on offer; trade is scarcely as brisk as on Monday, but we cannot quote lower prices. Trade is exceedingly dull for sheep, especially for middling descriptions and ewes. Although the supply is not very large, a clearance cannot be effected. Good calves are readily disposed of at late rates. From Germany and Holland there are 256 beasts and 490 sheep; Ireland, 90 beasts; Northern and Midland Counties, 250 beasts; and from the Home Counties, 85 milch cows.

COUNTRY CATTLE.

DEBT SMITHFIELD, Tuesday.—The supply of fat beasts to-day was again deficient to meet the wants of the buyers, the demand for beef being again good, was readily disposed of. The sheep pens were well filled, without any alteration of price. Fat calves were more plentiful. Fat pigs a large supply. Beef made 6d. to 6½d.; mutton, 6½d. to 7d.; veal, 7d. per lb.; pigs, 9s. 6d. per score; rough fat, 6s. 5d. per stone, commencing 23rd of October; hides, young, 8s. and above, 3½d. per lb.; ditto, young, under 8s. 3½d.; old cows, all weights, 3d.; cut hides, 2½d.; calf skins, 10b. and under, 4d.; above 10 and under 16, 4½d.; above 16, 3½d.; all cut calf skins 3½d. less.

EXETER.—A moderate supply of prime beef, and a fair average amount of business. Prices still evince an upward tendency, and the prices of last week were firmly sustained, and the quotation ranged at from 10s. to 10s. 9d. per score, and in some few instances we heard that a somewhat higher rate had been given. An average supply of barreners, with a tolerable business done, at just the prices of the previous market: prime quality 6s., and inferior ditto at 5s. Butcher's calves were in small supply, and the whole was soon disposed of at strong 6½d. per lb. The supply of cows and calves was moderate, with an average sale, at from £10 to £17. The supply of sheep was larger than last week; business rather dull. Large wethers, 6d.; small ditto, 6½d.; ewes, 6½d. to 6d. per lb. Pigs: a good supply, with a slack sale. Large pigs, 50s. to 60s.; large slips, 25s. to 35s.; small ditto, 16s. to 18s.; suckers, 8s. each.

LEDS, Thursday.—At the week's cattle fair there were offered for sale 560 beasts and 3,000 sheep. Buyers were pretty numerous, and a clearance was effected. Beasts sold at from 8s. to 8s. 8d. per stone of 16 lbs., and sheep at 6½d. to 6½d. per lb.

DUBLIN SMITHFIELD CATTLE MARKET.

THURSDAY.—We had a large market to-day, and an excellent demand for prime meat. Beef sold from 46s. to 52s.; middling, 53s. to 56s.; good, 59s. to 63s.; and even, 65s. per cwt., in sink. Sheep were more difficult to sell at 2d. to 3d. per pound reduction in prices; prices, 5d. to 6½d. per lb.; veal, 7d. to 8d. per lb. Pork, a large market, at 45s. to 48s. per cwt. The demand, for the present, from England for live pigs has ceased.

MARK LANE.

MONDAY.—The supply of English wheat at market this morning from Essex and Kent was not large; the condition of many of the samples was indifferent. Fine white wheat brought much the same price as last Monday; but red must be noted 1s. to 2s. cheaper. Foreign wheat was in limited request, and unchanged in value. Barley was more plentiful than of late, and former prices were barely maintained. Oats, with increased foreign supplies, gave way in value 6d. to 1s. per quarter for any but choice qualities of old corn. Beans and peas sold on much the same terms as before.

ARRIVALS INTO LONDON FROM NOV. 20 TO NOV. 25.

Quarters.	English.	Scotch.	Irish.	Foreign.
Wheat	2538	174	4764	9379
Barley	5315	174	4764	889
Oats	58	55	4764	24193
Malt	2487	96

Flour, 1,516 sacks, and 216 barrels.

FRIDAY.—The arrivals of both wheat and flour continue moderate. Our millers, however, in the anticipation of enhanced foreign supplies, limit their purchases as much as possible, and trade in Mark-lane this morning ruled dull, at Monday's rates. Barley hung heavily on hand, although freely offered at the decline noted earlier in the week. Oats were also difficult of disposal at former prices. Beans and peas unchanged in value.

COUNTRY GRAIN.

IREWEN, Tuesday.—We notice again a falling-off in the supply of wheat. The condition is now interfered with by this dull weather, and we must note a slight alteration in price in favour of the buyer, say 1s. a quarter. White wheat maintains its price. The quality of barley offered to-day was below what we have had for some weeks past; a shilling per quarter cheaper may be written generally. Some choice samples of malting quality, however, commanded, 38s. We quote prices to the growers: Wheat, red, 72s. to 76s.; ditto, white, 78s. to 82s. per quarter; barley, malting, 35s. to 38s.; ditto, grinding, 32s. to 34s. 6d. per quarter; beans, 50s. to 51s. per quarter; peas, 48s. per quarter. Averages for the week ending 24th November: Wheat, 1,471 quarters, at 71s. 10d.; barley, 3,729 quarters, at 36s. 2d.; oats, 10 quarters, at 32s.; beans, 25 quarters, at 49s. 5d.; peas, 35 quarters, at 45s. 6d.

SUNDERLAND, Saturday.—The price of grain being high, it now leaves our farmers a good profit; and they continue to bring forward their crops plentifully, fearing the market should fall. Most of the supply this day was soon cleared off at a slight reduction from last week's prices.

DUBLIN CORN MARKET.

TUESDAY.—There was a moderate supply and a quiet market at the Corn Exchange to-day, and scarcely any difference in price since Friday last. White wheat, 41s. to 43s.; red ditto, 36s. to 42s. per quarter; barley, 17s. to 20s. 6d.; bere, 15s. 6d. to 16s. 9d. per quarter; new oats, 16s. to 17s. per quarter; oatmeal, per cwt, 16s. to 17s.; rapeseed, 27s. to 28s. 6d.; baker's flour, 24s. to 28s.; Indian corn, per 480 lb, 40s. to 47s. For the week ending November 24 the following is the official return of the number of barrels of wheat, oats, and barley sold in Dublin at public market: Wheat, 8,033; oats, 2,178; barley, 1,365. No return for other description of corn.

BREAD.

FALL IN PRICE.—On Thursday the bakers generally throughout the metropolis reduced the price of bread a halfpenny the 4lb loaf; the price now is 8½d. and 9d. for seconds, and from 2d. to 11d. for best bread.

BOROUGH HOP MARKET.

THURSDAY.—A quiet and steady trade has been going on during the past week, and prices remain unaltered. The market is very bare of fine hops.

FRIDAY.—Messrs. Patten and Smith report that the demand for hops continues steady at late prices, supply fast diminishing; fully three-fourths of the growth already gone into consumption.

THE COUNTRY HOUSE.

BONNETS FOR DECEMBER.—The return of the fashionables to Paris offers an opportunity for the display of many very pretty costumes for visiting. This kind of toilette unites the newest manteaux and materials. In speaking of bonnets, we notice first one of white imperial velvet, the front and crown quite plain; on one side of the front is placed a branch of mulberries with grape leaves, which, reaching quite to the edge, joins a branch of the same fruit placed inside; on the other side is a bow formed of a magnificent barbe of blonde, the two ends of which, curling over the edge, mingle with the cerise velvet leaves, and tulle houllonnées, which ornament the inside of the front. Quite a new style of bonnet has lately appeared, formed of taffetas, the front of which is indented at equal distances and trimmed with double ruches of narrow blonde; the curtain is trimmed in the same manner. Upon one side of the front is placed a rose composed of velvet, blonde, and feather, accompanied by leaves of grape worked with velvet inside; the front is trimmed with the same flowers of a smaller size, and mixed with rose-buds placed high up and ruches of tulle below. These ruches may be very well replaced by blonde and very small flowers. Fruits in general, and particularly those in velvet, will be much worn this winter as bonnet-trimmings.—Le Follet.

Malay.—Cock and two hens.—1st prize, £2, Jas. Leighton, Cheltenham, 18 months; 2nd prize, £1, Charles Ballance Taunton, Somerset, cock and one hen 17 months, one hen over 2 years; 3rd prize, 10s., John Gay Attwater, Colerley, 18 months.

Game Fowl.—(Black breasted and other reds.)—Cock and two hens, hatched before 1854.—1st prize, £2, N. N. Dyer, Bredon, 16 months; 2nd prize, £1, N. N. Dyer, Bredon, 16 months; 3rd prize, 10s., Edward Farmer, Birmingham, 2 years. Commended: John Powell, the Rylands, Teynton, 1 year 8 months.

Game Fowl.—(Black breasted and other reds.)—Cockerel and two pullets, hatched in 1854.—1st prize, £2, Pearce T. Williams, Bedford, 1 months; 2nd prize, £1, N. N. Dyer, Bredon, 6 months 20 days; 3rd prize, 10s., Pearce T. Williams, Bedford, 1 month. Highly commended: N. N. Dyer, Tewkesbury, 5 months; George Ellis, Bury Saint Edmunds, March, 1854. Commended: a very excellent class.

Game Fowl.—(Duck wings and other greys and blues.)—Cock and two hens, hatched before 1854.—1st prize, £2, T. W. Pearce, Bedford, 1853; 2nd prize, £1, J. R. Rodbard, Lanford, near Bristol, 2 years 6 months; 3rd prize, 10s., George Ellis, Bury Saint Edmunds, 1 year 5 months.

Game Fowl.—(Duck wings and other greys and blues.)—Cockerel and two pullets, hatched in 1854.—1st prize, £2, J. R. Rodbard, Langford, near Bristol, 7 months; 2nd prize, £1, William Cannan, Eccleshill, near Bradford, 6 months; 3rd prize not awarded.

Hamburgh.—(Golden pencilled.)—Cock and two hens.—1st prize, £2, William Cannan, Eccleshill, near Bradford, Yorkshire, 1 year; 2nd prize, £1, Charles Edwards, Brington, Bristol, May, 1854.

Hamburgh.—(Golden spangled.)—Cock and two hens.—1st prize, £2, William Cannan, Eccleshill, near Bradford, Yorkshire, 1 year; 2nd prize, £1, James Blackburn, Thorne Hill Farm, Handsworth, near Birmingham, 5 months.

Hamburgh.—(Silver pencilled.)—Cock and two hens.—1st prize, £2, Edward Archer, Malvern, about 7 months; 2nd prize, £1, Richard Branwell, Holsworthy, Devon, ages unknown.

Hamburgh.—(Silver spangled.)—Cock and two hens.—1st prize, £2, Rev. H. K. Venn, Iloniton, Devon, 6 months; 2nd prize, £1, Col. Clowes, Frowmer Court, Worcestershire, 6 months 3 weeks.

Poland.—(Black, with white crests.)—Cock and two hens.—1st prize, £2, Miss Mary Bury, Drayton Villa, Belbroughton, near Stourbridge, 6 months; 2nd prize, £1, ditto, ditto.

Poland.—(Any other variety.)—Cock and two hens.—1st prize, £2, W. Graham Vivian, Singleton, near Swansea, 5 months; 2nd prize, £1, Col. Clowes, Frowmer Court, 6 months 1 week. Highly commended: Colonel Clowes, Frowmer Court, 7 months 1 week; W. Graham Vivian, Singleton, 5 months.

Commended: Charles Edwards, Brington, Bristol, April, 1854; Lady Georgiana Codrington, Dordington Park, near Chippenham, various. An unusually good class.

Any other Distinct Breed, not mentioned in this list.—Cock and two hens.—Three prizes of £1 each, Jessop Brothers, Cheltenham, 1853, (Indian game: Col. Clowes, Frowmer Court, 3 years 6 months, (Andalusian); Jacob Thornton, Heckmondwike, near Leeds, aged, (black Hamburgh).

Bantams.—(Gold laced.)—Cock and two hens.—1st prize, £1, T. B. Lloyd Baker, Hardwick Court, cock and 1 hen, 2 years 5 months, 1 hen 5 months; 2nd prize, 10s., Thomas Blanchard, Great Malvern, 9 months.

Bantams.—(Silver laced.)—Cock and two hens.—1st prize, £1, Thomas Blanchard, Great Malvern, unknown; 2nd prize, 10s., Rev. Grenville F. Hodson, Banwell, Somerset, 1½ years.

Bantams.—(Black.)—Cock and two hens.—1st prize, £1, the prize not awarded; 2nd prize, 10s., Rev. Grenville F. Hodson, Banwell, Somerset, 3 years.

Bantams.—(White.)—Cock and two hens.—1st prize, £1, Rev. Grenville F. Hodson, Banwell, Somerset, 2 years; 2nd prize, 10s., Colonel Clowes, Frowmer Court, 10 months.

Ten Prizes given by the Rt. Hon. the Earl Ducie.—Turkeys—Cock and two hens.—1st prize, £2, John R. Rodbard, Aldwick Court, Langford, near Bristol, 7 months 2 weeks (Cambridge). 2nd prize, £1, Miss Julia Millward, Newton St. Loe, near Bath, cock, June 3rd, 1851, 1 hen, June 12, 1853, 1 hen, unknown (French). Highly commended.—Rev. Grenville F. Hodson, Banwell, Somerset, May; Charles Edwards, Brington, Bristol, over 1 year. Commended.—Mrs. Harriet Hill, New House, Stretton Grandison, near Ledbury, 1 year 5 months (Norfolk and American); Hon. Mrs. Percy Moreton, The Old Court, Tortworth, Wootton-Under-edge, cock, 1852, hens, June, 1853 (American); Mrs. Jones, Waterloo Villa, Spa, Gloucester, late in 1853.

Geese.—Gander and two Geese.—1st prize, £2, Mrs. Harriet Hill, New House, Stretton Grandison, near Ledbury, 1 year 4 months (Irish and Toulouse). 2nd prize, £1, Mrs. Harriet Hill, New House, 1 year 4 months (Irish and Toulouse). Commended: Hon. Mrs. Percy Moreton, Tortworth, gander and 1 goose, 1853, 1 goose, May, 1854 (Toulouse).

Ducks.—(Aylesbury.)—Drake and 2 ducks.—1st prize, £2, Bratton Ford, Ide, near Exeter, 6 months; 2nd prize, £1, Mrs. Lydia C. Stow, Bredon, drake, 6 months, ducks, 20 weeks. Highly commended: J. R. Rodbard, Langford, Bristol, 6 months and 2 weeks; Hon. Greville Howard, Swindon, about 6 months; George McCann, Malvern, 8 months; Charles Edwards, Bristol, May, 1854. Commended.—All in this class meritorious; pens 200 and 205 disqualified only on account of their bills being naturally discoloured.

Ducks.—(Rouen.)—Drake and 2 ducks.—1st prize, £2, Charles Ballance, Taunton, drake and 1 duck over 2 years, 1 duck over 1 year; 2nd prize, £1, T. William Pearce, Bedford, drake unknown, ducks 7 months 14 days.

Ducks.—(Any other variety.)—Drake and 2 ducks.—1st prize, £2, Mrs. Harriet Hill, Stretton Grandison, about 1 year 3 months; 2nd prize, Charles Edwards, Brington, Bristol, May, 1851. Highly commended: Edward Archer, Malvern, about 5 months (Buenos Ayres); and Miss S. Perkins, Sutton Coldfield, near Birmingham, unknown (ditto).

Extra Stock.—Commended: Henry Churchill, King's Head Hotel, Gloucester, silver-pencilled Hamburgh, 8½ months; and Thomas Morris, Maisemore, near Gloucester, Dorking cock, 5 months.

SUSSEX, KENT, AND SURREY POULTRY SHOW.

We last week gave a short report of this society's annual exhibition of poultry for this year. Want of space prevented the insertion of the list of prizes; they were awarded as follows:—

Spanish.—Best cock and two hens of any age.—£2 to Benjamin Brown, Wortley-house, Worthing. 15s. to John Farncombe, Bishopstone. 5s. to Caleb Carey, Malling-street, Lewes.

Spanish.—Best cock and two pullets, chickens of 1854.—£2 to Henry Coulstock, Mertsam. 15s. to James Jenner, 4, East-street, Lewes. 5s. to John Porter, jun., 8, East-street, Lewes.

Dorking (irrespective of comb).—Best cock and two hens of any age.—£2 to the Rev. James Boys, Biddenden, Cranbrook. Commended ditto: 15s. to Samuel Bothwell, Dorking. 5s. to Richard Wallaston, Dovers-green, Reigate.

Dorking (irrespective of comb).—Best cock and two pullets, chickens of 1854.—£2 to the Rev. James Boys, Biddenden, Cranbrook. 15s. to Robert Loder, High Beeches, Crawley. 5s. to E. Heuden, Beehive, Dorking. Highly commended: Samuel Bothwell, Dorking. Commended: John Venues, Herstmonceux; Albert Way, Wotton, Reigate; Elizabeth George, Chaldon; Croydon.

Blue Mottled Dorking.—Best cock and two hens of any age.—£2 to E. Heuden, Beehive, Dorking.

Blue Mottled Dorking.—Best cock and two pullets, chickens of 1854.—£2 to C. C. Elgar, Reigate. 15s. to ditto. 5s. to E. Heuden, Beehive, Dorking.

White Dorking.—Best cock and two hens of any age.—£2 to Albert Way, Wotton, Reigate. £2 to Charles Dorrien, Ashdean Tower, Chichester. 5s. to Joseph Clift, Dorking. Commended: Joseph Clift, Dorking.

White Dorking.—Best cock and two pullets, chickens of 1854.—£2 to Elizabeth Forman, Pipbrook House, Dorking. 15s. to ditto. Highly commended: Joseph Clift, Dorking. Best cock. £2 to Elizabeth George, Chaldon, Croydon. Highly commended: Robert Boys, Eastbourne.

Light Cuckoo-china.—Best cock and two hens of any age.—£2 to Mary E. Bennett, Brookham Lodge, Betchworth. 15s. to Geo. Gibbs, Henfield. 5s. to George Baker, Reigate. Commended: John Eason, Montpelier House, Lambeth.

Light Cuckoo-china.—Best cock and two pullets, chickens of 1854.—£2 to Elizabeth George, Chaldon, Croydon. 15s. to George Gibbs, Henfield. 5s. to E. Vernon Harcourt, Sheffield Park, Lewes. Commended: E. N. Harper, Reigate; W. Brough, Caterham; H. W. Collinson, St. James's-road, Croydon; John Eason, Montpelier House, South Lambeth; and George Baker, Reigate.

Cuckoo-china (dark).—Best cock and two hens of any age.—£2 to James Ormiston, Shabden. 5s. to Thomas Bridges, Croydon.

Cuckoo-china (dark).—Best cock and two pullets, chickens of 1854.—£2 to Thomas Bridges, Croydon. 15s. to ditto. 5s. to John Farncombe, Bishopstone.

Cuckoo-china (white).—Best cock and two hens of any age.—£2 to C. Rawson, Walton-on-Thames.

Cuckoo-china (white).—Best cock and two pullets, chickens of 1851.—£2 to John Farncombe, Bishopstone.

Cuckoo-china (white).—£2 to Elizabeth George, Chaldon, Croydon.

Game Fowl.—Best cock and two hens of any age. £2 to Robert Clutton, Hartswood, Reigate.

Game Fowl.—Best cock and two pullets, chickens of 1851.—£2 to the Rev. J. N. Harrison, Reigate.—15s. to ditto. 5s. to ditto.

Golden Pencilled Hamburgh.—Best cock and two hens of any age.—£1 to James Fisher, Reigate. 10s. to J. A. Briggs, Bessels Green, Sevenoaks.

Golden Pencilled Hamburgh.—Best cock and two pullets, chickens of 1854.—£1 to J. A. Briggs, Bessels Green, Sevenoaks. 10s. to James Fisher, Reigate.

Golden Spangled Hamburgh.—Best cock and two hens of any age.—10s. to Henry Taylor, Godalming.

Golden Spangled Hamburgh.—Best cock and two pullets, chickens of 1854.—10s. to James Fisher, Reigate.

Silver Pencilled Hamburgh.—Best cock and two hens of any age.—£1 to Caleb Carey, Malling-street, Lewes.

Silver Pencilled Hamburgh.—Best cock and two pullets, chickens of 1854.—£1 to Mary E. Bennett, Brookham-lodge, Betchworth; 10s. to Albert Way, Wotton, Reigate. Highly recommended: Frederick Ford, Sompting. Commended: William Copp, Shoreham.

Silver Spangled Hamburgh.—Best cock and two hens of any age.—£1 to C. Rawson, Walton-on-Thames.

Silver Spangled Hamburgh.—Best cock and two pullets—chickens of 1851.—10s. to James Edwards, Reigate.

Poland Fowl.—Best cock and two hens of any age.—£1 to Isaac Funnell, Malling-street, Lewes; 10s. to Joseph Clift, Dorking (white crested).

Poland Fowl.—Best cock and two pullets—chickens of 1854.—£1 to James Ivory, Reigate; 10s. to John Field, Dornden, Tunbridge Wells.

For any other Distinct Breed.—£1 to R. Lewis Browne, Beeding Priory; 10s. to L. W. Scudamore, Rose Hill, Brighton.

Bantams.—Best cock and two hens.—15s. to William Dray, Farningham, James Ivory, Reigate, Robert Loder, High Beeches, Crawley, Thomas Ade, Seaford, and Francis May, Reigate Hill; 10s. to William Dray, Farningham, Samuel Ridley, jun., Clayton, and Alice Brand, Glynde, Lewes.

Ducks.—Best drake and two ducks.—£1 to Robert Clutton, Hartswood, and C. Rawson, the Hurst, Walton-on-Thames; 10s. to James Ormiston, Shabden, and Elizabeth Forman, Pipbrook House, Dorking.

Geese.—Best gander and two geese, hatched in 1854.—£1 to William Headland, Redhill; 10s. to Samuel Peter, Hassock's Inn, Keymer.

Turkeys.—Best turkey cock and two hens, hatched in 1854.—£1 to Wm. Headland, Redhill; 10s. to do.

Pigeons.—Best pair, 10s. each to Jones Percival, Queen's-row, Walworth (white owls); George Bond, 34, Cheltenham-place (black tumbler); James Fisher, Reigate (fantails); Harrison Weir, Lyndhurst-road, Peckham (blue turbita); Henry Stone, 102, Western-road (fantails); Charles Hodson, Dyke-road (Victorias); Thomas Bridges, Croydon (silver runs). Highly commended: Charles Hodson, Dyke-road.

ESSEX POULTRY SHOW.—Entries of poultry intended to be shown at the approaching exhibition can only be made up to Saturday, the 9th instant.

SINGULAR INCIDENT.—A singular circumstance occurred a few days ago at Salcombe, Devonshire. A large cornorant was observed to pitch into the water, and, after swimming and struggling severely, to disappear. A ferryman rowed to the spot, and found one of the wings and part of the body above water, the remaining part being swallowed up by a large monk-fish. The fish and bird were immediately captured by the boatmen, who, to save the bird's life, cut open the fish, but without avail, for it died shortly after. The bird weighed 8 lbs., and the fish 10 lbs.

CAPTURE OF A FOWL STEALER.—On Thursday evening, as two policemen, Nos. 51 and 125, were on duty in the parish of Belchamp St. Paul's, they met a notorious character, named Joseph Cranfield, with three live Cuckoo-china fowls in his possession. After a stout resistance he was secured and taken to the police-station at Castle Medingham; and on Friday it was discovered that the fowls belonged to Mr. Samuel Pannell, farmer and miller, at Otten Belchamp. On Saturday Cranfield was taken before A. Majendie, Esq., and the Rev. J. C. Gooch, and committed for trial at the adjourned session.

FOWL STEALING.—On Thursday, Nov. 16, some game fowl, sixteen in number, were stolen from the farm of Mr. Bennett, of Chaddlesworth; the greater part were of the Poland breed.

MASONIC INTELLIGENCE.

MEETINGS.

Monday, Dec. 11th.—Robert Burns, No. 25, Freemasons' Tavern; Lodge of Unity, No. 82, London Tavern; Royal Jubilee Lodge, No. 85, Anderson's Hotel, Fleet-street; St. John's Lodge, No. 107, Railway Hotel; St. Luke's Lodge, No. 168, Builder's Arms, Chelsea; Lodge of Joppa, No. 223, White Hart, Bishopsgate; Rapiers Lodge, No. 257, George and Vulture; Lodge of Lions, No. 318, Freemasons' Tavern.

Tuesday, Dec. 11th.—Albion Lodge, No. 9, Freemasons' Tavern; Old Dundee, No. 18, London Tavern; United Marines Lodge, No. 33, Chequer's Tavern, Proclamation-road, Finsbury; United Lodge of Prudence, No. 93, Aldon Tavern, Aldersgate; Temple Lodge, No. 118, Ship and Turtle, Leadenhall-street; Old Concord, No. 201, Freemasons' Tavern; Lodge of Stability, No. 261, George and Vulture; La Tolerance Lodge, No. 781, Freemasons' Tavern.

Wednesday, Dec. 11th.—Quarterly Communication at seven for eight, p.m.; Jerusalem Lodge, No. 233, Freemasons' Tavern.

Thursday, Dec. 11th.—Egyptian Lodge, No. 22, George and Blue Boar, Holborn; Strong Mao Lodge, No. 53, Falcon Tavern, Fetter-lane; Lion and Lamb Lodge, No. 227, George and Vulture; Jodel Lodge, No. 275 (rescued from King's Head), George and Vulture; St. Andrew's Lodge, No. 281, Freemasons' Tavern; Yarborough Lodge, No. 812, George Tavern, Commercial-road, east; Chapter, No. 2, St. James's, Freemasons' Tavern; Chapter, No. 9, Moriah, Freemasons' Tavern.

Friday, Dec. 8th.—Bedford Lodge, No. 183, Freemasons' Tavern; Lodge of Union, No. 135, London Tavern.

OLD KING'S ARMS LODGE, No. 30.—The members of this lodge met at the Freemasons' Tavern on Monday last, for the purpose of passing Br. Phillips to the second degree, which was most ably performed by the W.M. Br. Burnidge; the other business of the evening being the election of W.M. and Treasurer for the ensuing year. Br. Warwick the S.W. was unanimously elected to the office of W.M., and the Treasurer, Br. Barnes, re-elected.

LODGE OF PRUDENT BRETHREN, No. 169.—The members of this excellent lodge again assembled on Tuesday last, at the Freemasons' Tavern, the lodge business being one initiation—which was most ably performed by the W.M. Br. Kirby—the election of W.M., and the Treasurer for the year ensuing. Br. J. W. Adams, P.M., was again chosen for the important office of Treasurer; and Br. Hewlett, who had served the several offices leading to the chair in a most praiseworthy manner—which example it would be as well for all aspirants for office to follow—was unanimously elected W.M. These and other lodge matters being satisfactorily arranged, the Brethren adjourned to an elegant banquet, to which ample justice was done. After which the health of the Queen was proposed, and received with that enthusiasm which is so characteristic of the Brethren—for gallantry and loyalty. The national anthem was then sung by Miss Marian Taylor, Mrs. J. W. Adams and G. P. Taylor in admirable style, and was greeted with almost acclamatory applause. The Earls of Zetland and Yarborough having been toasted as W.G.M., and D.G.M., the W.M. proposed the health of the Initiate, who returned thanks in an able speech. The visitors' health followed, they being Brs. Thomas Bohm, P.M., 201, Wm. Goodyear, 227, T. A. Brouley, 276, W. S. Adams, and Banks, of the Freemasons' Tavern, for which honour they severally returned thanks. Br. Temple, P.M., having solicited the use of the hammer, proposed the health of the W.M., and paid him a justly-deserved compliment, for the urbanity and kindness he had shown the Brethren during his year of office; Br. Kirby was well known in Masonry, and he (Br. Temple) was free to confess that no Brother ever carried out the duties of the chair more zealously, with more talent, or with greater good feeling than the W.M. whose health he had the honour of proposing. The toast having been received most cordially, and feelingly responded to, Mr. Kirby proposed the health of the W.M. elect, and took the opportunity of congratulating the Brethren upon the very flattering prospect before them, in having elected Br. Hewlett to preside over them for the ensuing year. Br. Hewlett was about to quit the chair of the Globe lodge, the Brethren of which would bear a noble testimony to the valuable services, both Masonic and otherwise, he had rendered that lodge; therefore, again he congratulated them, predicting that the year 1855 would be a glorious epoch in the annals of the "Lodge of Prudent Brethren." This being briefly replied to by the W.M. elect, the next toast was that of the P.M.'s. Br. W. Watson being particularly mentioned, it was remarked that Br. Watson had done "aunt and service" to the cause of this Lodge, for some few years since it was quite in abeyance, and it was only through the strenuous exertions of Br. Watson, Br. Adams (the worthy Treasurer), and one or two others, that this lodge was saved from being buried in oblivion; this was not the only lodge, similarly placed, to which Br. Watson had given the helping hand. He might well be compared to "Atlas," for he had certainly borne the weight of the "Globe" for some time, before sufficient strength was gathered in the lodge bearing that name to save it from being disfranchised. Br. Watson acknowledged the compliment, and returned thanks for the P.M.'s in his usual eloquent style. The Brethren soon afterwards separated, delighted with their entertainment, which was considerably enhanced by the vocal exertions of Miss Marian Taylor (who sang "Wapping Old Stairs" in a manner scarcely to be equalled, and certainly not to be surpassed). Br. Hart (who, by-the-by, is quite a John Parry), Brs. Temple, Adams, Fielding, and Lowick (whose style of singing "My Pretty Jane" was equal to the early days of the once celebrated Geo. Robinson). Br. G. F. Taylor presided at the pianoforte, and conducted the musical arrangements.

PROVINCIAL.

NEWCASTLE-UNDER-LYNE Chapter of Perseverance, No. 674, attached to the Sutherland Lodge of that number.—At a meeting of this Chapter on Wednesday last, it was proposed by P.Z. and D.P.G.M. Warl, that ten guineas should be handed over to the Patriotic Fund, which was seconded by Companion Dutton, and carried unanimously.

An encampment of Knights Templars was held at the New Inn, Handsworth, when it was proposed by Lieut.-Colonel Vernon, P.Z. and P.G.M. for the county of Stafford, that the sum of five guineas should be given to the Patriotic Fund. It was seconded and unanimously carried.

NORTHAMPTON, CHAPTER 463.—A convocation of this Chapter was held at the Assembly Rooms, Northampton, on Wednesday last, the business of the evening being the installation of Principals and one exaltation. Companion Charles Elkington had been again elected Z., having already served that responsible office the preceding year; therefore, he was a second time installed as first Principal; Companion George Worley as second Principal, or H.; and the most noble the Marquis of Huntley was installed third Principal, or J.; Companions Welchman and Roberts being appointed E. and N., and Companion Smith P.S. The exaltation was that of Br. Perkins. The visitors were Companions Boughton, Leigh, Machin (from Birmingham), W. Watson and John Savage (of London), who jointly performed the ceremonies in a manner to excite the admiration of the assembled Companions, and reflect credit on the London Chapters, to which Companions Watson and Savage belonged.

STURMIDRUG.—Lodge of Stability, 821. This lodge held its monthly meeting at Br. Brook's Talbot Hotel, on Tuesday last. Mr. Felix Grainger was initiated; and, after other business, the brethren retired from labour to refreshments, and spent a most agreeable evening.

AMUSEMENTS.

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET.—Under the Management of Mr. BUCKSTONE.

Last engagement of the renowned SENSITA PEREA NENA and her SPANISH DANCERS, who will appear for a few nights, previous to their departure for Madrid. The successful new comedy of THE BALANCE OF COMFORT for evening. Its appearance of Mr. BUCKSTONE, who, with Mr. HUDSON, will perform every night this week.

MONDAY, December 4, PRESENTED AT COURT. Geoffrey Wedderburne, Mr. Buckstone, Rochester, Mr. Howe; Charles H. Mr. W. Farren; Anne Franklin, Miss Reynolds; Lady Castlemaize, Miss E. Chalmers; Lady Farnington, Mrs. Foynter. After which SENSITA PEREA NENA and her SPANISH DANCERS, previous to their departure for Madrid. THE BALANCE OF COMFORT. Torrington, Mr. Howe; Pollard, Mr. Rogers; Sheepshanks, Mr. Clark; Mrs. Torrington, Miss Reynolds; Mary, Miss E. Chalmers. MORE BLUNDERS THAN ONE. Lory, Mr. Hudson. And concluding BALLET.

TUESDAY, THE NERVOUS MAN. Aspin, Mr. Chippendale; M. Shan, Mr. Hudson. With MAKE YOUR WILLS. Joseph Brough, Mr. Buckstone. The SPANISH DANCERS, THE BALANCE OF COMFORT, and concluding BALLET.

WEDNESDAY, PRESENTED AT COURT. SPANISH DANCERS; BALANCE OF COMFORT; MORE BLUNDERS THAN ONE; and the SPANISH DANCERS.

THURSDAY, ST. PATRICK'S EVE, the SPANISH DANCERS; THE BALANCE OF COMFORT; MAKE YOUR WILLS; and concluding BALLET.

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY, PRESENTED AT COURT; the SPANISH DANCERS, THE BALANCE OF COMFORT; and other Entertainments. Stage Manager, Mr. CHIPPENDALE.

THEATRE ROYAL, ADELPHI.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. B. WEBSTER. Directress, Madame CELESTE.

Great success of the revival of THE GREEN BUSHES. Hours of laughter at the New Farces.

MONDAY, Dec 4, and during the Week will be presented (in consequence of its enthusiastic reception on Wednesday and Friday last) the celebrated Drama of THE GREEN BUSHES. Principal characters by Messrs. Paul Bedford, James Rogers, Parselle, Garden, C. J. Smith, R. Broun, Saunders, Le Barr, Wray, Woolgar, Hildway, &c. &c.; Mesdames Celeste, Woolgar, Leigh Murray, Stoker, Laidlaw, &c. After which (31, 32, 33, 34, 35, and 36 times) the highly successful Farce called BONA FIDE TRAVELLERS, supported by Messrs. Keedy, Paul Bedford, R. Broun, C. J. Smith, Saunders, Hastings, Wray, &c.; Mesdames Keedy, Laidlaw, Garden, and Thoinson. To conclude with (13, 14, 15, 16, 17, and 18 times) THE RAILWAY BELLE, in which Messrs. J. Rogers, C. Selby, R. Broun, &c.; Mesdames Wyndham, Stoker, and C. Lecheur, will appear.

An entirely New Rustic Drama, to be called PIERRE THE FOUNDLING, will be produced on Monday next, Dec. 11, in which Messrs. B. Webster and Keedy, Mesdames Celeste, Keedy, Woolgar, and Cuthbert, will appear.

Stage Manager, Mr. LEIGH MURRAY.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—Under the Management of Madame VESTRIS.

Sole Lessee, Mr. CHARLES MATHEWS.

MONDAY, December 4, the performances will commence with the Comedy entitled THE GAME OF SPECULATION. Mr. Affable Hawke, Mr. Charles Mathews; Sir Henry Lester, Mr. R. Roxby; Bartholomew, Mr. J. Matthews; Prospector, Mr. B. Baker; Mrs. Hawke, Mrs. Hughes; Julia, Miss M. Oliver. After which, a new Comic Drama entitled A COMICAL COUNTESS. The Chevalier de Vilbrac, Mr. C. Mathews; the Countess de Le-palier, Miss Talbot. To conclude with the Farce entitled MY FELLOW CLERK. Tactio, Mr. R. Roxby; Victim, Mr. Templeton; Fanny, Miss Wadhams; Juliet Snooks, Miss M. Oliver.

The Scenery by Mr. W. BEVERLY. Stage Manager, Mr. R. ROXBY.

Mr. ALCKOFF, 15, New Bond street, is appointed sole agent for the Private Boxes, to whom all applications must be made.

ROYAL OLYMPIC THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. ALFRED WIGAN.

On Monday and during the Week will be performed the Burletta of THE BEULAH SPA. Characters by Messrs. A. Wigan, Emery, F. Robson, Danvers, Clifton, White, Rivers, H. Cooper; Miss Julia St. George, Miss Morton, Mrs. Fitzgerald, and Mrs. A. Wigan. After which, the Comic Drama of THE FIRST NIGHT. Characters by Messrs. A. Wigan, Leslie, Gladstone, H. Cooper; Miss Julia St. George, and Miss E. Gracioso. To conclude with A BLIGHTY BING. Characters by Messrs. Leslie, H. Cooper, Danvers, F. Robson, and Miss E. Turner.

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. WILLIAM COOKE.

Never did the events of warfare create such an enthusiasm as those progressing in the ALMA—never did the pages of dramatic history record such an effect as that produced by the Spectacle, THE BATTLE OF THE ALMA now acting at this Theatre. Crowds nightly testify their surprise and admiration by the most tumultuous applause.

MONDAY, Dec. 4, and all the week, THE BATTLE OF THE ALMA, by J. H. Stoquer, Esq. The Stage and the Ring in ONE VAST ARENA, with 400 Auxiliaries! After which the CIRCLE will display the perfection of Equestrian. The SCENES invented, and the Horses trained, by Mr. William Cooke. To conclude with a FARCE.

PATRON: H. R. H. PRINCE ALBERT.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—Continued improvements. Increased attractions. Fresh decorations.—Re-lighted under the Patents of John Leslie, Esq.

Mrs. GLYN will read ROMEO AND JULIET on the 5th inst., at Eight, and BALLET on Thursday, the 7th inst., at Eight.

The next Monday Evening Lecture will be by Dr. Carpenter, on Drink, Blood, and Circulation.

Mr. Cooper, the artist and companion of Layard, will give two Lectures on Nineveh, illustrated by Panoramic Views taken by himself.

Opening of the new Hall, with Lectures by Dr. Bachhoffner, illustrated by the Hydro-Electric Machine, the most splendid and successful Electrical Apparatus in the world, on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, at Three.

Lectures on Chemistry by J. H. Pepper, Esq.

A beautiful Series of Forty-five Cosmographic Views of Russia, and the Costumes of the Inhabitants.

The Dissolving Views maintain their old reputation, with Scenes of the War, Sebastopol, &c. The Day-Hydrogen Microscope as usual.

Open on Saturday Evenings, with the American Entertainment and Mr. Waul's Band.

Admission 1s.; Stalls, 2s. and 3s.; Schools and Children (under ten years of age), half price.

FEUILLETON.

THE THEATRES.

It was a saying when the present generation of play-goers were in their "green, unpractised youth," that war times were the best for theatres; and that people, to relieve their anxiety concerning affairs abroad, turned their attention to amusements at home. There is, however, no rule without an exception, and the present war times form the exception to the axiom alluded to; certainly, the constantly-arriving news of victory, purchased with the dearest blood of the land, is not now an incentive to pastime; nor are cold and wet, both of which have lately prevailed, very powerful tempters to quit a snug fireside. From these reasons, we may opine, has arisen the falling-off observable in the attendance at our various theatres during the week. Novelties are still put forward by managers in as glowing terms as heretofore, but the public do not seem to give them much heed. However, amid this depression in the dramatic market, Julien appears to go on at DUKE LANE with his concerts, unaffected by the pressure from without. It is hard to determine whether the improving taste for music among us, or the tact with which Julien makes his selections, or the fact of the entertainment being cheap and good, cause the nightly crowded assemblage to gather within those walls, where but very recently the soul-stirring poetry of one William Shakespeare was almost sans a hearer. Perhaps a combination of the causes we have mentioned may have tended to produce to Julien the very pleasing and deservedly profitable result. Among the later musical novelties introduced by the incomparable chef is the "Allied Armies' Quadrille," a loud bouncing composition, full of strong contrasts, and affording capital opportunity for the display of ability on the part of the blowers of sonorous brass. The quadrille has been hailed with warm applause every evening. On Monday week the Bal Masqué is to be given, and with it Julien's season here will terminate. As two years have slipped away since Julien last gave one of these fetes, the forthcoming one will no doubt be a most brilliant affair. They are certainly the best of this style of entertainment given in this country, and may vie with—in point of splendour, though perhaps not in wit and drollery—the "Bal de l'Opera" of our hardy and courageous allies. The dramatic season will commence here about Boxing-night; the pantomime is by Mr. E. L. Blanchard, and has been in course of preparation for a length of time. Smith's piece de resistance, however, is to be a drama, or spectacle, or—we beg pardon—a spectacular tragedy, by Fitzball, founded upon an Egyptian story. This is, and has been, a nest-egg with the lessee, who has passed whole days at the Crystal Palace, studying the Egyptian Court and the inscription on the Rosetta-stone. He has expended a large sum of money on the scenery and dresses, but, we believe, does not see his way clear to the cast of characters. Although the drama is not in so flourishing a condition as when, in the days of Roscius, each actor was able to sport his own particular animal for his locomotive purposes, its members are as exorbitant in their demands for salaries as ever. Of this Smith complains, and not unjustly. It is stated he applied to a lady of undoubted talent and great histrionic reputation, to sustain the principal character in Fitzball's Egyptian piece, and after a great deal of argument and haggling back, the lady in question kindly condescended to agree to play the part, provided she had a salary of £70 per week! Smith was rather dumfounded, and almost resolved he would play the character himself, rather than give all to one member of the company, to the prejudice of the rest.

At the HAYMARKET, Buckstone has re-appeared, and "The Sentinel of the Alma" has disappeared, de mortuis, &c. The comedian was received with enthusiasm when he made his first appearance after his provincial (?) tour, on Saturday night, in Stirling Coyne's comedy, "Presented at Court." Bayle Bernard's elegant comedietta, "The Balance of Comfort," grows in our favour as we become better acquainted with it.

On Monday night Charles Mathews commenced another managerial career—may it conduct him, as he deserves, to an end more advantageous than those of former days. The versatile actor's legal studies and experiences seem somewhat to have tamed him down, if we may judge by the modest and unpretending programme he put forth to open his new campaign. "The Game of Speculation," a new piece, by W. Brough, called "The Comical Countess;" and Oxenford's farce, "My Fellow Clerk," have formed the bill of fare during the week. The first and last of these pieces are familiar to all playgoers; suffice it of them to say, that they were given with that spirit and finish which previously distinguished this house under the Vestris dynasty. Of the novelty it behoves us to speak more at length. Adapted from an old French vaudeville, "A Comical Countess" is one of those light and harmless bagatelles which wile away an hour pleasantly enough, and are just the thing for those who do not wish to go mentally floundering through intricate plots, or to have their tympana distressed by the monotonous droning of blank verse, literally "meaning nothing." The principal incidents of the piece may be thus briefly related:—

A Chevalier de Vilbrac has offended one of the Regent Orleans favorites, and, to avoid the Bastille, he assumes a livery, and obtains a situation in the household of the Comtesse de l'Espadon, a youthful widow, formerly a cook, but raised to the dignity of countess by a union with the old count, whose affections she had won by her culinary cleverness. Vilbrac at once recognises her as a former sweetheart, and the old story ensues. The valet makes love to his mistress, who is at first indignant, but who in her turn becomes smitten; and then arrives the éclaircissement and the union of the Chevalier and the Comtesse. Miss Talbot—a lady who created a sensation here towards the close of last season, by her charming appearance and finished acting—assumed the character of the Comical Countess, which had all the grace about it of one born to aristocratic salons; and one could hardly believe the lady, although she said so herself, that she had formerly officiated in the cuisine. Charles Mathews was the Chevalier, replete with spirit and vivacity. At the fall of the curtain, the applause was unanimous; the usual call for the author resounded, and Mr. Mathews announced the name of Mr. Brough, whom we congratulate on another success.

The houses at the ST. JAMES'S have been considerably improved by the production of "Gaiety, the Slave of Love," one of the burlesques written by Frank Talfourd, Esq., for Farren, when manager of the Olympic. Abounding with wit—as do all the productions of this author, who seems to revel in burlesque-writing—"Gaiety" is a capital application to drive away the "blues." Mr. Talfourd is retained to write the Christmas burlesque for this theatre, and we are to have, it is rumoured, something that will eclipse his former efforts. Remembering his "Macbeth" and "Shylock," all we can say is "What next?"

Madlle. Celeste made her re-appearance at the ADELPHI on Wednesday evening, in the time honoured drama, "The Green Bushes;" indeed the title of this drama, and the re-appearance of the talented actress, are synonymous terms. She was warmly greeted, and went through the drama with her accustomed intensity and striking effect.

ASTLEY'S, with its "Battle of the Alma," and its battle at the doors between the crowds anxious to gain admission, is doing a roaring trade. All that well-trained horses, well-drilled men, and gunpowder, can do, is done in the mimic representation of one of the most glorious, but, alas! most costly victories, that Britain can ever have to record. In this cursory glance at Astley's, it would be unfair not to say a word in praise of Mr. Stonette's performing dogs; they are all sagacity, and go through their various acts like regular old stagers.

THE PRINCESS'S and OLYMPIC keep on "the even tenor of their way" with their old pieces, and with the revival of still older ones. "The Rivals" at the one house, and "Beulah Spa" at the other, being among the latest novelties.

THE CZAR AND HIS CAPITAL.—A Paris paper, the Constitutionnel, extracts from a letter from St. Petersburg, the correctness of which the Constitutionnel can guarantee, the following details as to the state of affairs in that capital:—"The Emperor Nicholas, notwithstanding the pre-occupations of the war, still keeps to his usual habit of taking solitary walks. He may frequently be met in the streets on foot, protected, however, against the indiscretions of curiosity by the police regulations, which forbid any one to speak to him. Although his face has long since contracted a character of impassability, it is readily seen that terrible storms have assailed his mind and reacted on his physical strength. He has got much thinner, and his hair is almost white. We have already spoken of the honourable treatment given to two of our officers, M.M. de Dumipierre and Lagondie. The two following anecdotes may serve as a pendant to that trait of character. A Frenchman having been insulted by a tradesman in a large way of business, the Emperor was informed of it. He sent for the tradesman, and demanded the reason of his conduct. 'Because I detest their nation,' was the reply. 'You have no other motive, and it is from hatred of the French that you have acted so?' 'Yes, Sire.' 'Well, then, I will give you an opportunity of gratifying that resentment, you shall be sent to the army in the Crimea.' On another occasion, the Czar was informed that some nobles refused to pay a debt they owed to a French tradesman. He sent orders to them to settle their accounts immediately. It may be remarked that, of all foreigners, Frenchmen are regarded with the least dislike by the Russians. The English are not so well treated, but the Austrians are the object of general animadversion. Every kind of vexation is heaped on them. The consequences of the war are severely felt in the capital. With the exception of bread, the price of which is moderate, in consequence of the abundance of the late harvest, everything is excessively dear. A bottle of champagne costs from 20f. to 25f.; sugar is 1f. 50c. a pound; salad oil, 5f. a bottle; a glass of brandy 60c.; and other things in the same way. The supply of coal is completely exhausted. The gas works are suspended, and it is found necessary to light the capital with oil, which is very expensive and insufficient. The steamboat which runs to Cronstadt, as well as the locomotives on the railways, are compelled to heat their boilers with wood. The aspect of the city is very gloomy. At the first commencement of the war the lower classes were rather enthusiastic, while the upper classes, whose fortunes were effected, were morose and desperate. Popular demonstrations were organised in honour of the Czar and of holy Russia. The processions of the monks called to mind the manifestations which with us followed the revolution of February. But this effervescence subsided by degrees, and, moreover, the Government began to get uneasy at those patriotic fetes, which brought into the streets idle workmen heated by copious libations. Since then a veil of melancholy has hung over the city. The nobility, who are much in debt, can no longer get credit; trade is at a stand, and the people are suffering. A number of the largest establishments are closed, and the manufactures which still remain at work have dismissed the half or two-thirds of their hands. The principal hotels are going to ruin. The price of rent has considerably diminished. The people hear little or nothing of what is going on at the seat of war. The foreign journals arrive in a very lacerated state, the police cutting out everything that displeases them. The news of the battle of the Alma was not known to the public until four days after the intelligence of it had reached the authorities. The only troops left at St. Petersburg are the 45,000 men of the Guard. Last month there were several reviews, at one of which thirty-six standards taken from the Circassians were presented to the Emperor. Only one of those standards was, however, genuine, the remainder were of Russian manufacture. The exhibition produced a very bad effect on the enlightened part of the public."

FACTS IN HUMAN LIFE.—The number of languages spoken in the world amounts to 3,064. The inhabitants of the globe profess more than 1,000 different religions. The number of men is about equal to the number of women. The average of human life is about thirty-three years. One-quarter die previous to the age of seven years; one-half before reaching seventeen; and those who pass this age enjoy a felicity refused to one-half the human species. To every 1,000 persons only one reaches 100 years of life; to every 100, only six reaches the age of sixty-five; and not more than one in 500 lives to eighty years of age. There are on the earth 1,000,000,000 inhabitants; and of these 33,333,333 die every year, 91,822 every day, 3,730 every hour, and sixty every minute, or one every second. These losses are about balanced by an equal number of births. The married are longer lived than the single, and, above all, those who observe a sober and industrious conduct. Tall men live longer than short ones. Women have more chances of life in their favour previous to being fifty years of age than men, but fewer afterwards. The number of marriages is in the proportion of seventy-five to every 100 individuals. Marriages are most frequent after the equinoxes; that is, during the months of June and December. Those born in the spring are generally more robust than others. Births and deaths are more frequent by night than by day. The number of men capable of bearing arms is calculated at one-fourth of the population.

A FEMALE HORSE-TRAINER.—In consequence of the success obtained by Madame Isabelle in breaking in horses for the army, the Minister of War lately authorised her to proceed officially before a commission composed of general and superior officers of cavalry, with General Rognaud de St. Jean d'Angely at their head, to a practical demonstration of her method on a certain number of young cavalry horses. After twenty days' training, the horses were so perfectly broken in, that the Minister no longer hesitated to enter into an arrangement with Madame Isabelle to introduce her system into all the imperial schools of cavalry, beginning with that of Saumur. The advantages of this system appear to be these—in train the horses without fatiguing them; to diminish greatly the number of restive horses; to lessen the number of accidents; to train any number of horses at the same time; and to lessen considerably the expense.—Galopant.

IRISH EQUIVOCATION.—An Irish peasant never answers any question directly. In some districts, if you ask him where such a gentleman's house is, he will point and reply—"Does your honour see that large house there, all among the trees with a green field before it?" You answer "Well," says he, "plaze your honour, that's not it. But do you see the big brick house with the cow-houses by the side of that same, and a pond of water?" "Yes." "Well, plaze your honour, that's not it. But if you plaze look quite to the right of that same, and you'll see the top of a castle among the trees there, with a rovel goin' down to it, be-tune the bushes." "Yes." "Well, plaze your honour, that's not it, neither; but if your honour will come down this bit of a road a couple of miles, I'll show it you, sure enough—and if your honour's in a hurry, I can run on hot foot [a figurative expression for 'all possible speed,' used by the Irish peasants—by taking short cuts and fairly hopping along, a young peasant would beat any good traveller], and tell the squire your honour's galloping after me. Ah! who shall I tell the squire, plaze your honour, is coming to see him? He's my own landlord, God save his honour day and night."—Barrington's Sketches.

THE SCHOOLMASTER ABROAD.—The following curious specimen of orthography has lately been received by a young person in this town from a Cockney painter of Dawlish:—"Dear Eliza,—i now take thup My Pain to reight to yon thause fue leins Hoping it will find you in God Edth And in brater tamper With meo than you ware vin i loved you as it leves me at Present. Dear Eliza lat me hask you to take no Nodise of the tiels of the reached Papell of Tiver-ton, I now there is many a Party Pontingo you a Gance me, but let me hask you to Take no notice, there is one thingo i ham lappy to say that the cannot hurt me With Hall, there striving so to do. Dear Eliza i ham Working at dawlish at one of the largest carts in the West of Englund, our robust novimus Mamood house, there is so many Windows in it as there is days in the year 365, i take my saray on the buich to vew the roring waves, it is butful and plesant, but it would be much plaseater hif you My Dear ware near with me though not seen yeat not for Gotteny Will you plase to give my bast respect to your dear sister Annay and hall the little ones. My Dear Eliza i must say alue, but i hope not for Herer, i will say as the soning say there is a God time coming boys wite a lattle lounger. Plase to send me on a fue lions quickley. My address is —Dawlish. God by at present."

TALKS.—"My dear, don't say tale, say narrative," said a modest lady to her little son, who was relating a very interesting tale he had just read in the newspaper. While the little fellow was thinking of his mistake, the old house dog walked in, shaking his tail, and looking quite familiarly at the boy; when he exclaimed, "Ma, make Saicho quit shaking his narrative."

AT THE EXTENSIVE WAREHOUSES IN REGENT-STREET AND CORNHILL,

BELONGING TO

H. J. and D. NICOLL,

MERCHANT TAILORS AND PALETOT PATENTEES.

THE best Materials, Talent, and Workmanship are employed, and the principle of a combination of economy and excellence maintained. Here also the Dress Buttons and Colours of every Yacht Club or Hunt are always ready for inspection.

FOR HUNTING.

The Scarlet, Brown, Olive, or Mixed Cloths, are both fine and strong, the dye cannot even be moved by acids, and in the course of manufacture they are prepared by a peculiar process to resist a very heavy shower of rain.

FOR YACHTING.

Every description of Pilot and Pea Jackets, with prepared India Rubber and other Waterproofed clothing, may also be seen.

For Shooting, Fishing, Rowing, or Cricketing, all suitable materials are provided.

Nicoll's Dry-seat Coat

Is useful to all, whether Sportsman or Traveller, as it is well known that rheumatism and colds, with the thousand and one other ills that flesh is heir to, are chiefly caught through damp seats.

114, 116, 118, 120, Regent-street, and 22, Cornhill.

IF YOU REQUIRE FAMILY ARMS,

Send NAME and COUNTY to the HERALDIC OFFICE. Fee for Search and Sketch of Arms, 3s. 6d., or Postage Stamps. Crest Engraved on Seal, Signet Ring, &c., 8s. 6d. Arms, with Name on Plate, for Books, &c., 1s. Club Dics, Seals, &c. Testimonials, Memorials, Votes of Thanks, &c., Written, Illuminated, and Embellished.

Arms Painted, Empaled, Quartered, for Banners, Flags, &c.

H. SALT, Lincoln's Inn Heraldic Office,

GREAT TURNSTILE, LINCOLN'S INN FIELDS.

BILLIARD TABLES.

MESSRS. THURSTON AND CO.,

MANUFACTURERS by appointment to her Majesty, 14, Catherine-street, Strand. London, caution their friends and the public against spurious imitations of their Tables, lately advertised by men professing to have left their Establishment. They beg to say that they have not parted with any of their workmen whose services were worth retaining.—N.B. 14, Catherine-street, Strand, is the only house where the THURSTON TABLE can be obtained. Messrs. Thurston and Co. are the patentees of the improved vulcanised Cushions, which retain their elasticity in the coldest climate. Also Manufacturers of the Central Revolving Lamp, the best light ever constructed for Billiard Tables.

SLACKS' NICKEL SILVER

Is the hardest and most perfect white metal ever invented, and equals Silver in durability and colour. Made into every article for the Table, as Tea and Coffee-pots, Cruet-frames, Candle-sticks, Waiters, &c.

A Sample Tea-spoon will be sent Free on receipt of Ten Postage Stamps.

	Folded Pai.	Strong Folded Pai.	Thread Pai.	King's Pai.
Table-spoons and Forks, per dozen	12s. & 15s.	10s	24s.	30s.
Dessert ditto	10s. & 13s.	16s.	21s.	25s.
Tea-spoons	5s. & 6s.	8s.	11s.	12s.

SLACK'S

NICKEL ELECTRO-PLATED.

R. and J. S. call attention to their NICKEL SILVER ELECTRO-PLATED, which cannot be distinguished from Sterling Silver.

	2nd Quality.	1st Quality.
Table-spoons and Forks, per dozen	30s.	40s.
Dessert ditto	20s.	30s.
Tea-spoons, per dozen	12s.	18s.

Also, every article for the Table, as in Silver.

'SLACKS' TABLE CUTLERY AND FURNISHING WAREHOUSE

Has been celebrated for 40 years for quality and cheapness; and contains all the newest patterns in Fenders, Fire-irons, Tea-trays, Dish-covers, and every article in Furnishing Ironmongery. Iron Fenders, from 3s. 6d.; Branded ditto, from 5s.; Fire-irons, 2s. 6d.; small set of Kitchen Furniture, £3; and every requisite in Furnishing Ironmongery, which, from their simple but satisfactory plan of marking each article in plain figures, at the lowest possible prices, consistent with quality, will at once prove the advantage of purchasing at their Establishment. Orders above £2 delivered carriage free, per rail. Their Book, containing upwards of 200 Engravings, may be had gratis, or sent to any part, post free.

RICHARD and JOHN SLACK, 336, STRAND (opposite Somerset House).

MANGER, RACK, AND WATER-TROUGH, AS ONE FIXTURE, IMPROVED AND NEWLY PATENTED.

COTTAM and HALLEN, the Original Inventors, obtained the Great Exhibition Prize Medal for this arrangement, to which all the latest improvements are adapted, secured by Patent, including a method entirely new of attaching the halter-weight and rein from the back of the manger to the under freedom, and being movable in operation, and much to its comfort while feeding, and convenience when at rest, as likewise, from their position, avoiding the liability of the most restive horse getting cast. No well-managed stable should be without these fittings.

COTTAM'S ENAMELLED MANGERS are constructed in the best possible manner, both as to form and utility; are cleanly in appearance, durable, and impervious to infection; manufactured Plain, Galvanized, and Enamelled. Improved Surface Drain, with Safety Covers, Sanitary Traps, Stable Pumps, Loose Box, Fittings, Gutta Percha Preserving Saddle and Harness Brackets, and every article in Stable Furniture, in stock. An extensive assortment of Patterns for both Plain and Ornamental Castings, and every description of Wrought and Cast Iron Work for building and other purposes. Agricultural and Horticultural Implements, Iron Gates, both plain and ornamental, Hurdles, Strain Fencing, &c.

Estimates and Catalogues on application to COTTAM and HALLEN,
2, WINSLEY-STREET, OXFORD-STREET.

ALLEN'S
ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE,
CONTAINING SIZE, PRICE, AND DESCRIPTION
OF UPWARDS OF 100 ARTICLES.

CONSISTING OF PORTMANTEAUS, TRAVELLING BAGS, LADIES' PORTMANTEAUS, DESPATCH BOXES, WRITING DESKS, DRESSING CASES, and other Travelling Requisites, forwarded on receipt of two shillings.

ALLEN'S Travelling Bag (patented) has the opening as large as the Bag itself, and therefore possesses an immense advantage over all others.

ALLEN'S Registered Despatch Box and Writing Desk, and their New Quadruple Portmanteau (containing four compartments), are the best articles of the kind ever produced.

J. W. & T. ALLEN,

MANUFACTURERS OF PORTABLE BARRACK-ROOM FURNITURE, AND MILITARY OUTFITTERS (see separate Catalogue),
18 & 22, WEST STRAND.

WATER POISONED

BY LEADEN
PIPES.

"The above engraving represents accurately a section of a leaden pipe, which was employed for a short time in conveying water from a well on the grounds of Mr. Duck, of Bonchurch, Isle of Wight. The original section of pipe is 84 in. long, 24 in. diameter, and 5-16 in. thick. A great part of the internal surface is corroded by the action of the water, but, as shown in the drawing, four deep excavations have been made, and another is slanted out of view by the manner in which the section of the pipe has been cut. The water has cut these deep pits almost through the pipe, and not only upon the portion which we have illustrated, but have formed similar channels throughout the entire length."—Expositor.

N.B.—The corrosive water of the Isle of Wight has no effect on Gutta Percha Tubing. See Testimonial below.

DURABILITY OF GUTTA PERCHA TUBING.

Many inquiries having been made as to the durability of Gutta Percha Tubing, the Gutta Percha Company have pleasure in giving publicity to the following letter from Sir RAYMOND JARVIS, Ventnor, Isle of Wight.

(Second Testimonial)

March 10, 1875.

"In reply to your letter received this morning, respecting the Gutta Percha Tubing for pump service, I can state, with much satisfaction, it answers perfectly. Many builders and other persons have lately examined it, and there is not the least apparent difference since the first laying down, now several years; and I am informed that it is to be adopted generally in the houses that are being erected here."

THE GUTTA PERCHA COMPANY, PATENTEES,
18, WHITEFORD, CITY-ROAD, LONDON.

MESSRS. THURPP

INVITE attention to their improved Four-wheeled DOG-CART PHAETONS, now now in so much request, from the superior safety and capacity of a vehicle on four wheels. The prices will be found moderate for Dog-Carts, built to order, or selected from the superior stock, in different sizes and colours, kept at 20, OXFORD STREET; where may also be seen Messrs. Thurpp's newly-invented SHAMROCK DOG-CART, for small horses in England, India, or Australia.

TO BE SOLD.

FOR SALE.

PAIR OF PLETON PONIES.
14 hands high, with their harness, which is in excellent condition. They are high carriage, and step remarkably well; they are from grass. Price £10. Apply at the GARDENERS' COTTAGE, GUILFORD'S OAK, MIDHURST.

TO BE SOLD BY AUCTION.
WOLVERHAMPTON STEEL-CASTING SALE OF BLOODSTOCK.—Mr R. S. WALKER will sell, without reserve, upon the premises belonging to Mr Cartwright, V.S. MARKET STREET, WOLVERHAMPTON, on TUESDAY, DECEMBER 5th, the following horses in training, the property of a gentleman:—

SYRREN, brown mare, 4 years old, by St. Leon, out of Thulia.
LULL'S EYE, brown horse, 5 years old, by Don John, out of Lolly Pop.
TULIP, chestnut gelding, aged.
ROSA, chestnut mare, aged. Winner of the Liverpool Steeplechase.
CINCINN, bay filly, 2 years old, by Palegon, out of the Flea. Winner of many races.
SHOCKING EVENTS, bay yearling filly, by Alarm.
INDIAN QUEEN, brown yearling filly, by Annapaula, out of Chicchee.
Sale to commence at Eleven o'clock.

PLACES.

AS GARDENER.

WANTED employment, by a steady industrious Man, who understands the business perfectly; has a family; would engage by day, week, or year.—Enquire of Mr. RAYLEE, Carving Works, Cambridge.

WANTED, a situation as GAME-KEEPER, by a young married Man, age 37 years, who has had good practice in breeding and rearing both Pheasants and Partridges, and well understands the management of dogs, and all other branches of his business; can have four years' excellent character from the noblemen whom he has just left, and who has given up preserving.—Address, G. K. Mr. BARTON'S, Saddler, Hadlow, Kent.

WANTED, as HOUSEKEEPER, in a farm house, to a single gentleman, a respectable middle-aged woman, who has been used to the duties of such a house. Unfailing reference expected, with salary stated.—Direct S. E., "Sussex Express" Office, Lewes, Sussex.

ROYAL ASYLUM OF ST. ANN'S SOCIETY, Streatham, Surrey, and Aldersgate, London.—This Institution, by Voluntary Contributions, provides a home, education, clothing, and maintenance, for Orphans and other Children of those once in prosperity.

Subscriptions and Donations gratefully received by Messrs. SPOONER and Co., 27, Gracechurch-street, and by EDWARD FREDERICK LEES, Sec.
Executors of Benefactors by Will have certain privileges.
Office, 2, Charlotte-row, Mansion-house.

SWINESHEAD ASSOCIATION for the PROSECUTION OF FELONS, and for the Mutual Protection of Property.—NOTICE is HEREBY GIVEN, that the Annual Meeting of the Members of the Association will be held at the GRIFFIN INN, in SWINESHEAD, on THURSDAY, the 30th day of NOVEMBER, 1854.—The Directors will meet at Eleven o'clock for receiving Subscriptions, Auditing Accounts, &c. Dinner at Two.

Also, that the Directors will meet at the GRIFFIN INN at Six o'clock on TUESDAY Evening, the 28th of NOVEMBER instant, when all Persons having any Claim on the Association are requested to present the same.
W. D. REDDISH, Treasurer.
Swineshead, Nov. 10, 1854.

PROVISION AGAINST DISABILITY by Sickness or Accident, effected with the LAW PROPERTY and LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, 30, Essex-street, Strand.

Example: A person aged 30, may secure an Annuity of £100 a year in case of permanent disability, by payment of only 3s. per annum.
Forms and particulars forwarded to any applicant, by
E. BARNES, Secretary.

REDEMPTION OF MORTGAGES and LOANS secured by a Policy which guarantees the repayment of Loans at a fixed period, or earlier in case of death, so that the Property may pass unincumbered to the family, by the LAW PROPERTY and LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, 30, Essex-street, Strand. Apply to E. BARNES, Secretary.

LOANS.—Persons desirous of obtaining ADVANCES from £50 to £250, upon improved personal security, repayable by easy instalments, extending over a long period, are invited to examine the principles of the MUTUAL SUBSCRIPTION LOAN ASSURANCE CLASSES. Prospectuses, Reports, and every information, may be obtained on application at the British Mutual Life Office, 17, New Bridge-street, Blackfriars. Rules 6d. each copy, or 1s. per post.
CHARLES JAMES THICK, Resident Secretary.

MONEY.—ESTABLISHED 1849.
LOANS from £5 to £500 on the Personal Security of the Borrower, to be repaid by small Weekly, Monthly, or Quarterly instalments, as may suit the convenience of the borrower. A Form of Application and particulars sent to any part, on receipt of four postage stamps and a stamped directed envelope. Office (private), 16, PENTON-STREET, PENNYVILLE, London.
T. SHORT, Secretary.

BANK OF DEPOSIT, NATIONAL ASSURANCE AND INVESTMENT ASSOCIATION.
No. 3, FILL MALL EAST, LONDON.
Established A.D. 1844.
Empowered by Special Act of Parliament.

Parties desirous of INVESTING MONEY are requested to examine the Plan of this Institution, by which a high rate of Interest may be obtained with perfect security.

The Interest is payable in January and July at the Head Office in London; and may also be received at the various Branches, or through Country Bankers, without delay or expense.

THOMAS MORRISON, Managing Director.
Prospectuses and Forms for opening accounts sent free on application.

RIMMEL'S TOILET VINEGAR,
(As exhibited in the Fountains at the Crystal Palace).
Is far superior to Eau de Cologne, as a Tonic and refreshing Lotion, for the Toilet or Bath, a reviving Perfume, and a powerful Disinfectant for apartments or sick rooms. Its numerous useful and sanitary properties render it an indispensable family requisite. Price 2s. 6d. and 5s.

Just out, price 6d.

RIMMEL'S PERFUMED MINIATURE ALMANACK,
For imparting a delightful and lasting scent to Pocket-books, Caricases, Desks, Work-boxes, &c. It is beautifully illustrated, and forms a most acceptable Christmas Present to friends at home or abroad. Sent by post for seven stamps.

Sold by E. RIMMEL, Perfumer to her Majesty, 33, GERRARD-STREET, SOHO, London; and by all Booksellers, Perfumers, and Chemists.

PARLOUR LIBRARY,

Vol. 119, pp. 493, price 2s.

MAURICE TIERNAY, the SOLDIER OF FORTUNE.
By the Author of "Sir Jasper Crew," &c. &c.

•• This work, by one of the most popular serial writers of the present day, is now first published in a collected form.

"The strangeness of some of the incidents, and the rapidity with which events so remarkable succeeded each other, almost deterred the writer from ever committing them to the press."—"That the chief events related in these pages—such, for instance, as every detail of the French invasion, the capture of Wolfe Tone, and the attack on Monte di Facio—are rigidly exact, the writer is most sincere in the expression of his conviction."—Author's Preface.

On the 1st of January, Vol. 120, price 1s. 6d.

THE HUNTER'S FEAST; or, Conversations around the Camp Fire.
By Captain MAYNE REID.
Author of "The Rival Bangers," "Scalp Hunters," &c. &c.

London: THOMAS HODGSON, 13, Paternoster-row.

FREEMASONRY!

PEOPLE'S EDITION.—Seventh Thousand, 1s. 6d., cloth 2s.

A RITUAL and ILLUSTRATIONS of FREEMASONRY, &c. Numerous Woodcuts.

All who have read Lord Methuen's Address to the Ladies, on the occasion of laying the foundation-stone of a building at New Swindon, as reported in the "Wills and Gloucestershire Standard" of May 27th, 1854, should read this work, containing the Oaths taken by the Members of this Fraternity. Sent post free by W. R. THORNE, SHEBBEAR, DEVON, on the receipt of twenty-one, or in cloth of twenty-seven, postage stamps. Prospectus and Notices of the work for two shillings.

London: PARTRIDGE and OAKLEY.

NEW JOURNAL OF FREEMASONRY.
Now ready, Price 6d., 1d. Stamped, No. 2 of THE MASONIC MIRROR:
a Monthly Journal of Freemasonry, Literature, and News.

CONTENTS:—The Craft and the War—Freemasonry in England—Brotherly Love (continued)—The Heir of Beaulieu—The Freemason's Promise (Part II.)—and all the Masonic Intelligence of the Month, &c., &c.

Published by Mr. BARTON, 11, Wellington-street North, Strand; and sold by Mr. CLEMENTS, 21, Little Pulteney-street; and all Booksellers.

Now Publishing, price 3d.,
YE EMPEROR'S DREAM: a right merrie Legend of St. Nicholas; with a Moral, addressed to Readers in general, and the Czar in particular, which shows—

First—"If you at Christmas should go out to dine, Where good cheer's abundant, as well as good wine, Be sure and behave yourselves just as you ought; Don't take too much Turkey, or punish the Port, Or you, like the Czar, may discover his true, That Turkey may rise, and the Port punish you."

To which is added the BATTLE of ALMA.
London: SHERMAN and MARSHALL, Stationers' Hall-court, W. LONDON, 32, Goswell-street; W. LEARD, Market Harborough; and by all Booksellers.

Just Published, New and Improved Edition, price 1s.

THE CURABILITY OF CONSUMPTION. Being a Series of Papers, presenting the most prominent and important Practical Points in the Treatment of the Disease. By F. H. RAMADGE, M.D., Fellow of the College of Physicians, late Senior Physician to the Royal Infirmary for Diseases of the Chest, &c.

Also, by the same Author, A TREATISE ON ASTHMA and DISEASES of the HEART. Price 10s. 6d.

London: LONGMAN, BROWN, GREEN, and LONGMANS.

WORD-BOOK FOR THE CRIMEA AND SCUTARI HOSPITAL.

Now Ready, Price One Shilling.

Knight's Pocket Vocabulary IN ENGLISH AND TURKISH By Wm. KNIGHT, Esq., Barrister-at-Law.

"Mr. Knight passed three years in Turkey. In a letter which appeared in the daily newspapers, evidently from an intelligent correspondent, the writer said that, by the aid of this Vocabulary, he had got on famously with the Turks—had succeeded in making himself understood, and in getting all his wants supplied, which may be considered the best compliment that could be paid to the work."—Britannia, September 16, 1854.

Published by BARNETT and EVANS. Sold by all Booksellers; and at The Field Office, 408, Strand, opposite Adam-street, Adelphi.

Officers at Southampton can procure their copies at Daniel's Victoria Hotel.

NOW PUBLISHING BY TALLANT AND ALLEN.

I. TRUE STORIES FOR CHILDREN, from ANCIENT HISTORY. 16mo. With Frontispiece, 1s. cloth extra; by post, 1s. 6d. (Ready.)

II. PEN and PENCIL VIEWS OF REMARKABLE PLACES and OBJECTS. Containing Forty-eight elaborate Steel Engravings and Explanatory Letter-press. Oblong 10, cloth extra, gilt edges, 12s. 6d. (Just ready.)

III. CONFESSIONS of an ENGLISH OPTUMETER. New edition, handsomely printed, fcap. 8vo, 2s. 6d. cloth. (Ready.)

London: TALLANT and ALLEN, 21, Warwick-square, Paternoster-row.

Just Published, price, in cloth, 2s. 6d.; by post, 3s.; as a pocket-book, with metallic paper and pencil, 4s. 6d.; by post, 5s.

RUFF'S GUIDE to the TURF; or, POCKET RACING COMPANION for 1855.—Contents: The Nominations for Great Britain and Ireland for 1855, and the Great Stakes for 1856; a Complete Calendar of the Races in Great Britain and Ireland for 1855; the Horses Indexed, with their Pedigrees; Laws of Racing, Lengths of Courses; Revised and Enlarged Lists of the Trainers; Winners of the Great Races from their Commencement; Races to Come, Derby Lot, &c. &c.

London: TRED, STEPHENSON, and SENCE, 23, Paternoster-row. Sold by all Booksellers, and at all Railway Stations.

BUILDING SOCIETIES.—The Important Judgment of the Lord Chancellor in "Fleming v. Self," involving the Rights and Liabilities of Building Societies, will appear verbatim in a Double Number of THE LAW TIMES of this Day. A copy sent to any person enclosing 18 postage stamps to the LAW TIMES OFFICE, 29, Essex-street, Strand.

THE NEW MILITIA LAW, as altered by the Acts of last Session, and all the new Orders and Regulations, as supplied for this Work by the War Office. By THOS. W. SAUNDERS, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Price 3s. 6d., cloth. Crookford, 29, Essex-street, Strand.

PRESENTS AND PRIZES.

The Second Series of
BEAUTIFUL POETRY, a Selection of the Choicest in the Language, now ready, superbly bound in green and gold, or purple and gold, price 7s. 6d. A copy sent by post to any person enclosing 1s. 6d. to the Publisher, Crookford, 29, Essex-street, Strand.

NEW PIANOFORTE MUSIC, by ALPHONSE LEDUC.—Partout Pour la Syrie, elegant Fantasia, 2s. 6d.; La Motte Anglo-Française Quadrille, Maritime, Solo, 3s., Duet, 4s.; Marche Turque, 2s. 6d.; Le Chateau de Compigne, Quadrille, Solo, 3s., Duet, 4s.; La Petite Cendrillon Quadrille, Solo, 3s., Duet, 4s.; L'Illustration Musicale, 12 Operatic Fantasias, ou Motivos from—No. 1. I Puritani; No. 2. La Siege de Corinthe; No. 3. L'Imila di Chantouvi; No. 4. Don Pasquale; No. 5. Les Diamants de la Couronne; No. 6. Ernani; No. 7. Robert le Diable; No. 8. Lucia di Lammermoor; No. 9. La Tete de Bronze; No. 10. Guillaume Tell; No. 11. La Sonnambula; No. 12. Les Huguenots—each number 2s.

London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

OPERA QUADRILLES, by STEPHEN GLOVER.—The Huguenots, Rigoletto, Sonnambula, Don Pasquale; each set—Solo, 3s., Duet, 4s. Also, by Stephen Glover, The Eugenie Quadrilles and The Parrot Quadrilles (Le Ferret); each set—Solo, 3s., Duet, 4s.

London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

"LIGHT in the EAST is GLOWING." Duet. Words by J. E. CARPENTER. Music by STEPHEN GLOVER. Finely Illustrated. 3s.

London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

BY THEODORE OESTEN—MOMENTS DE LOUIS. 12 rondinos elegants, for the piano, on movements from modern operas. No. 1. L'Elisir d'Amore; No. 2. Il Tirato—each 2s. 6d. By the same, Selam, huit themes variés, for piano. No. 1. La Rose; No. 2. L'Hortense—each 2s. 6d. Also by the same, Les Delices Germaniques, 12 easy fantasias, and Clout Pictures, 34 recreative pieces for piano, composed for small hands, each 2s. Also, by CHARLES VOSS—Extase, gründe étude de concert, for the piano, 2s. 6d.

London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street, Music Publishers to the Queen.

CHEAP MUSIC.

MESSRS. BOOSEY and SONS have reduced the price of a greater part of the most popular Vocal and Pianoforte Music of the day. Applications should state "Boosey and Sons' Special Cheap Editions."

The EUROPEAN MUSICAL LIBRARY is the title of a cheap series of popular Pianoforte Music, by Osborne, Ascher, Weley, Meyer, Oesten, Quilant, Herz, Dohler, Wallace, Voss, Rosellu, Goria, Talcay, Struel, &c. &c.

BOOSEY'S OPERA JOURNALS: PIANOFORTE SOLOS, and FOUR HANDS.—This is the title of a cheap series of the best Operas, reduced in price in consequence of the decision of the House of Lords. It includes Rigoletto, Ernani, Trovatore, Sonnambula, Linda, Fille du Regiment, Lucrèce Borgia, &c. A list of Contents gratis of Boosey and Sons, 28, Holles street, London.

THE WIFE OF OMAR PASHA.

Just Published.
THE PASHA'S GRAND MARCH, composed for the Turkish Army by her Excellency the Wife of Omar Pasha. This extremely interesting piece was received in MS. by the Publishers, and may be relied on as the authentic composition of the distinguished lady. Price 2s. 6d.

Boosey and Sons, 28, Holles street, London.

LES HUGUENOTS.—A cheap and magnificent Edition of MEYERBEER'S GREAT OPERA is published this day, for Piano-forte Solo, in the most complete and perfect form ever attempted. This edition is beautifully engraved, and printed in a large vol. (140 pages), price 7s. 6d. cloth lettered, forming one of Boosey and Sons' Standard Pianoforte Operas.
28, Holles street, London.

ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

THE YEAR 1855 bids fair to be one of the most important and eventful of modern history. On the 6th of JANUARY, 1855, will be issued the FIRST NUMBER of a New Volume of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, and not only of a New Volume, but of a New Year—each volume being perfect and complete in itself—containing, for the time, a faithful record, pictorial and descriptive, of all events of interest in every part of the world. To that limited portion of the public who do not subscribe to this Journal, it may be stated that no period could be selected more opportune for commencing the whole enterprise, than the present year, which, in its nature, is one of Double Numbers, which are issued on rare occasions, when it would be impossible to crowd the important events and Engravings into a single Number; for this small sum the Subscriber will receive Twenty-four large Pages—Seventy-two Columns—of the most interesting information, carefully selected from the News of the Week, interspersed with a variety of charming Articles on the chief topics of the day.

The ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS has, by its impartial and consistent advocacy of the welfare of the public, secured for itself a political influence scarcely second to any Newspaper in the Empire, and reference can, with some pride, be made to the support afforded to all beneficial measures proposed and adopted by the English Parliament.

Foreign Politics will ever command the attention which ought to be devoted to so important a feature of a Newspaper. On the question of the Russian War, during the year 1854, ONE THOUSAND ENGRAVINGS appeared in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS. Extensive arrangements, calculated to improve this popular Journal, and engagements, such as will greatly enrich its Literary, Scientific, and other departments, have been made, and will thus combine on this Paper the greatest talent of the day.

The ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS has been established thirteen years, during which period it has received a greater degree of encouragement and approbation than any Journal ever published. This is proved by the returns of Stamps issued from time to time by order of Parliament. The Stamps applied for the first six months of 1854 were upwards of 2,734,000, showing a WEEKLY CIRCULATION of UPWARDS of ONE HUNDRED and THIRTY THOUSAND COPIES!

Terms, for payment in advance—Half-year, 12s. 6d.; Year, 25s.

Any of the Volumes of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, from the commencement to the present time, may now be had, in paper or cloth. Covers for Binding the Volumes, 2s. 6d. each.

All Numbers may be sent free by Post to any part of the Kingdom and the Colonies.

Give an order for Six Months, to ensure all the necessary Prints and Supplements. Supplied by all Booksellers and Newsmen.

The ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS is published in London every Saturday, Stamped, to go free by Post, Sixpence per Copy.
Office, 198, Strand, London.

Bound in cloth, and interleaved, price 1s.

THE SCOTISH AGRICULTURISTS' ALMANAC, and Year-book of Progress for 1855. By JOHN LOCKHART MORTON.

"It needs only to be known to be valued as the work of a man who knows thoroughly what he has in hand."—Pertshire Advertiser.

Publishing Office, 9, Pitt-street, Edinburgh. Sold by all Booksellers.

MONEY.

MONEY to any amount ADVANCED upon Household Furniture, Stocks in Trade, Farming Stock, Linen and Woollen Drapery Goods, and every description of Property, by Bill of Sale, for long or short periods, repayable by instalments.

Apply to Messrs. SMITH and THOMAS'S Monetary Office, 29A, BROOK-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE (corner of Gilbert-street), London.

THE ROYAL CHESS CLUB of ENGLAND.—This Club is open to all England, and this year intends playing some very fine Matches.—Subscriptions: Playing Members, 10s. 6d.; Honorary Members, £1. 1s., which are received by the Secretary, Post-office, Aylesbury, T. GURNEY, Junr.

CHEAP WIRE GAME and POULTRY NETTING.

24 inches wide, 2-inch mesh, 3d. to 4d. per yard plain; galvanised, 6d. per yard.

36 inches wide, 2-inch mesh, 6d. per yard plain; galvanised, 9d. per yard.

48 inches wide, 2-inch mesh, 9d. per yard plain; galvanised, 1s. 2d. per yard.

Sparrow Proof Netting, galvanised, 3d. per square foot, made to any size. This article is shown at the Sydenham Exhibition, where it is much admired.

W. CULLINGFORD, 1, EDMUND-TERRACE, BALL'S POND-ROAD, near the Gate, Kingsland, London.

THE MOST APPROVED STOVES.

The demand for the CHUNK and VESTA STOVES (separately patented) still continuing unabated, and numbers having been sold last season in all upwards of 14,000, through the patronage of families who have had experience of their pre-eminently useful qualities, WILLIAM S. BURTON has renewed confidence in recommending them for their cleanliness, economy, and safety. During the last thirteen years they have been found sources of great comfort in the bedroom of the invalid, affording an uniform temperature throughout the day and night, with one supply of fuel, without attention. Particulars sent postage free. Chunk, 30s. to 50s.; Vesta, from 35s.; Stoves for Warehouses, &c., from 10s. each. Joyce's Patent Fuel, 4s. 6d. per sealed bag.

WILLIAM S. BURTON has ten large Show Rooms (all communicating), exclusive of the shop, devoted solely to the show of GENERAL FURNISHING IRONMONGERY (including cutlery, nickel silver, plated and japanned wares, iron and brass bedsteads) so arranged and classified that purchasers may easily and at once make their selections.

Catalogues with engravings sent (per post) free. The money returned for every article not approved of.

39, OXFORD-STREET (corner of Newman-street), 2 and 3, NEWMAN-STREET; and 1 and 5, PERCY'S-PLACE.

Printed by THOMAS AGNEW, of No. 24, Robert street, Fleet-street, in the County of Middlesex, at the Printing Office of TAYLOR and GRAYSON, No. 1 and 3, Great Britain Street, London; and published by him at No. 408, Strand, opposite Adam street, in the said County, on December 2, 1854.

VOL. IV.—No. 101.]

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1854.

[GRATIS.]

THE NEWSPAPER.

THE FIELD OF WAR.

TURKISH ACCOUNT OF THE BATTLE OF INKERMAN.

The following Turkish bulletin was published at Constantinople on the 11th ult., and is said to be a tolerably exact account of the battle:—

The Archdukes Michael and Nicholas had arrived at Sebastopol, and nearly at the same time the army from the Principalities, composed of the 10th and 11th divisions, including infantry, cavalry, and artillery, each 14,000 strong, and under the command of General Dannenberg. This force having traversed the isthmus, advanced in forced marches to a forest within about two hours distance from Sebastopol, to join the army of Prince Menschikoff. There a council of war was held, under the presidency of the Imperial Dukes, and the following resolutions adopted in reference to the plan of operations to be directed against the positions of the allies.

1. To attack the works on the route and summit of Inkerman, near the extremity of the port.

2. To destroy the French batteries in the second plain of Balaklava.

3. To raze the defences on the seaside fronting the quarantine, by means of a sally from the town.

It was thus in pursuance of these resolutions, that on Sunday, Sefer 14 (Nov. 5), the Russians opened fire at day-break on the two French divisions stationed to the south of Balaklava. The commanders of the allied forces, Lord Raglan and General Canrobert, hastened at once to the spot, accompanied by their staffs and several other officers, and after having reconnoitred the force and position of the enemy, devised in council the measures requisite in this emergency.

The Russian army, meantime, within the walls of the city, commanded by General Gortschakoff, sallied forth to unite with the other force assembled at Inkerman, and having reached that point, the whole army, amounting to 50,000, with eighty pieces of ordnance, commenced the action at two o'clock, (about seven a.m., Frank time), and took two British batteries, each mounting two heavy guns, and manned by about 100 men, who were all cut to pieces. These were replaced by the Russian gunners, and thence their forces repaired to the forest of Bair, and approaching within a thousand paces of a body of the British army—in all not more than 2,000 men—this heroic little band sustained with valour and intrepidity for more than a couple of hours the terrible onslaught of overwhelming numbers. His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, Generals Cathcart and Brown, at the head of about 7,000 men, dashed on to the rescue, and after a volley of musketry, attacked with charged bayonets this formidable force during a couple of hours, until they were at last completely surrounded, and in imminent danger of being totally exterminated. At length, fortunately, about five o'clock (ten a.m.), General Bosquet came up with a reinforcement of four regiments; but our troops were in such close conflict with the enemy, the mêlée so confused and awful, that the bayonet was the only available arm in this exigency. The French, as ever, behaved admirably, and seconded with equal heroism by British troops, a frightful combat and massacre ensued, which ended in the total rout of the enemy, who fled precipitately towards the forest, leaving the plain literally impassable, and strewn with countless masses of his slain. The crews of the fleets anchored in the bay of Balaklava repaired to the field after the battle, and collected above 20,000 muskets with arms and various equipments of all sorts. Wood is scarce in those parts, and the broken butts served, it is understood, to light the camp fires for a couple of days and cook the provisions of the army.

The British retook the battery which they had lost at the outset, but it fell again into the hands of the enemy. Lastly, the Zouaves and other regiments came up, and, joining in the combat, the rout of the enemy was complete, and, throwing away arms, knapsacks, and accoutrements, his remaining force took refuge within the walls.

The British casualties amount to 2,400, with about 150 officers killed and wounded.

The Russian loss amounts in killed and wounded to 8,000 men found on the field of battle and 850 besides were taken prisoners. The French loss is stated to have been less severe. On that same day another encounter took place close to the walls of Sebastopol. A Russian force of 6,000 men, during a thick fog, sallied forth from within the walls, silenced the French batteries, 1, 2, and spiked five guns. General de Lourmel, with two regiments and some skirmishers, attacked the enemy on this point, and fell, unfortunately, mortally wounded in the action. A murderous conflict ensued close to the ramparts, wherein the enemy was again repulsed, and retreated whence he came, after a loss of 3,000 men hors de combat, besides 800 prisoners captured. In this encounter the French have to deplore the loss of 700 men, with their heroic general.

The commanders of the allied forces despatched a herald offering every facility to the enemy for the burial of his dead; but no advantage having been taken of this proposal, the necessary measures were adopted in consequence for the performance of this humane duty.

The almost incredible bravery and heroism displayed by 7,000 British troops, in resisting single-handed such a formidable array of the Russian forces, at a moment when the rest of the army was entirely occupied with the operations of the siege, is above all praise.

Constantinople, Sefer 20, 1270.

"SOFT SOAP" FOR THE RUSSIAN ARMY AT INKERMAN.

A correspondent of La Presse communicates the following curious information respecting the proceedings in Sebastopol and the Russian camp, from the arrival of the reinforcements under General Dannenberg till the battle of Inkerman:—

The new reinforcements which have come to the assistance of the Russians had been already announced to the Commander-in-Chief from Perekop. It was known that this army, commanded by General Dannenberg—the most able, we are assured, of all the Russian Generals—and by the two Archdukes Michael and Nicholas, was composed of the 10th, 11th, and 12th divisions. Each of these corps consists of sixteen battalions of infantry, of two batteries of artillery, and of a force of cavalry, the number of which is not accurately known. Altogether 30,000 men have arrived at Sebastopol, post haste, having left their baggage behind at Nicolouiff.

Having reached a forest, two leagues to the north-east of Sebastopol, the army halted, and the two archdukes put themselves in communication with Prince Menschikoff, who paid them a visit. A council of war was held on the 3rd, at which the two archdukes, Prince Menschikoff, and General Gortschakoff, were the only persons present. It was decided at the council that an attack should be made upon the allied forces two days afterwards. The army was to advance towards Inkerman, to take possession of the fortified works which crown the heights and surround the plain of Inkerman. After having accomplished this, the army was to attack the eastern side of the French works towards Balaklava.

At the same time a vigorous sortie was to be made to help these operations. The point chosen was a spot between the Fort Quarantine and the Southern Fort. A portion of the garrison of the city and of the Southern Fort was to attack and destroy the first and second French batteries, which are causing considerable damage in the town.

Matters being thus arranged, Prince Menschikoff reserved to himself the command of the town and the disposition of the columns which were to make the sortie. The army and the reinforcements which had come up were placed under the command of General Gortschakoff. The army of operation was to receive also draughts of troops from the garrison of Sebastopol. The archdukes were placed on the staff.

Measures were immediately taken to ensure the due execution of these plans.

On the 4th a solemn celebration took place. A mass was chanted with all solemnity by bishops who had come with the archdukes. At the end of the mass the troops were assembled, and one of the prelates addressed them. I should have been incredulous as to the details which I am about to communicate, had I not received them from a Russian officer, at present a prisoner at Balaklava, and if they had not been confirmed by special investigations which I have made for the purpose of ascertaining their truth.

The bishop began by reminding the soldiers of their duty to the Czar and their country, and drew their attention to the two archdukes, who had come to share their dangers. He then spoke of their enemies, and gave an explanation of the battle of Alma calculated to flatter the self-love and to elevate the courage of the imperial army. The English came under the special notice of the bishop. He said they were poor soldiers, destitute of all energy, and hostile to the cause of God. His allusions to the French were a mere echo of the proclamation of the Czar at Moscow in the year 1812.

The most remarkable point, however, was the strange conclusion of the address:—

"If you are conquerors," cried the bishop, "great joy is in preparation for you. We know from unimpeachable sources that these English heretics have in their camp an enormous sum, which God will give into your hands. This sum amounts to 30,000,000 roubles. The Emperor makes you a present of the third part of this tremendous sum. The second third is reserved for the purpose of the re-building of Sebastopol, which you are on the point of relieving. The remainder will be divided amongst the princes and officers who will to-morrow be your commanders in the battle. Every one of you soldiers will receive 550 roubles. To the wounded the Emperor promises a month's pay and rations. As to those of you chosen by God for a glorious death, your Emperor will permit you to dispose of your share in the booty by will. Whatever may be the wishes of any one of you, they will be respected solemnly."

The speech was terminated by an appeal to the God of armies to bless the soldiers of Russia. A distribution of medals and coronets followed.

The officer who has given me these curious details is a person of high family, with a spice of Voltairianism in his composition; but he assures me that the scene was almost sublime. It was calculated to make a great impression on the soldiers, on whom the recollection of the battle of Alma had operated most prejudicially. Whatever may have been the cause, whether it was the exhortation of the bishops, the presence of the princes, greed for gold, or any other reason, there is no doubt that the Russians fought most admirably on the morrow.

REINFORCEMENTS AND STORES FOR LORD RAGLAN.

VARNA, Nov. 16.—Transports have been leaving this place for Balaklava without intermission. English and French horses for the cavalry and artillery are also being shipped from Kustendje and Burgas for the Crimea in sea-boats fitted up expressly for their conveyance. Some magazines and warehouses that were being built here are finished and ready for receiving the stores of provisions and fodder, which are now arriving from Adrianople and Filibeh. Other buildings for the same purpose are in course of erection, and they are also constructing barracks where the reserve troops are to be quartered for the winter. Many of the poorer classes, not belonging to the military, are engaged as labourers and help the troops. Even the Greeks, who formerly could not be induced to lend a hand, have now joined the rest of their own accord, their object being to avert any suspicion of their having a good understanding with the Russians.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 13.—To-day the wounded are being conveyed to Sentari hospital, from the transports which arrived the day before yesterday. Nearly 13,000 men have been added to the allied army within ten days. The French receive 400 or 500 men by every mail-steamer, and their total addition to their forces during the present month cannot be short of 10,000 men. The British have received the 16th and 62nd regiments, which, with draughts from various depôts, make a total of 2,800 men. The Queen of the South is expected daily with 1,200 more, including about 200 of the Guards. But if the campaign is to last through the winter, a supply like this must not be occasional, but constant. We occupy the post of honour, every attack is directed against us, our line of communications is most extended, and may be every day attacked. A determined and fanatical enemy is on our flank and rear, and our loss must be great even in the most decided victory.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 15.—The steam-frigate, Tanger, arrived late last night with news from the Crimea of the 12th instant. The last battle, it now appears, has been more disastrous than at first supposed in reference to the murderous slaughter in the ranks of the enemy. Their wounded are countless, and 5,000 of their dead have been buried by the Allies within these last few days. On the 12th instant a reinforcement of 1,500 French troops, with 1,500 British, and the 45th regiment of the line, had arrived in the Crimea. Omar Pasla had also dispatched seventeen battalions of his army on the Danube, destined to be transferred to Sebastopol.

WANT OF POWDER AT SEBASTOPOL.—An occasional correspondent at Constantinople encloses a communication from an English gentleman at Balaklava, which may possibly explain the slackness which the Russian despatches allege has lately characterised our firing against Sebastopol. The writer at Balaklava states that "the army was in want of ammunition, that in consequence of this want powder was very sparingly allowed to the men, and, farther, that our artillery could only fire ten rounds during the day and none during the night, all for want of powder." A deficiency of powder would not be without precedent in this siege. The Constantinople correspondent before-mentioned says:—"One of our largest transport steamers, the Golden Fleece, with from 500 to 800 barrels of gunpowder on board, repeatedly applied to know what was to be done with it both at Balaklava and at Constantinople. In the end this vessel was sent to Malta, and actually took the 500 to 800 barrels on board to that island, when the army was almost at a stand-still for want of it." Our correspondent naturally infers that some men of business and practical knowledge are required on the staff of the army—men who do not scorn to know how to keep accounts.—Daily News.

DUBLIN, Nov. 28.—Yesterday morning more than sixty men of the different Militia regiments now stationed in Dublin marched in a body to College-street Police-office, and presented themselves before the magistrates to be attested and sworn as recruits, to be drafted into regiments of the line now serving in the Crimea. The men, who had each received a bounty of £7 on joining, were accompanied by the sergeant-major and sergeants of the recruiting staff. They were principally fine stalwart looking fellows, and well-trained soldiers, and as they left the office and marched towards the Royal Barracks they were loudly cheered by a large assemblage of persons collected on the occasion. The Limerick Chronicle says:—"This morning (Saturday) the 72nd Highlanders received an order from the Horse Guards, through Lieutenant-General Fleming, C.B., to hold themselves in immediate readiness to embark for Malta, to relieve the 11th, ordered to the Crimea. The 91st, at Cork, received a similar order for Malta, to replace the 9th there, which is also ordered to the Crimea. Lieutenant-Colonel Fraser, 72nd, retires from the command, and Major Sharp succeeds him by purchase. Captain Parke obtains the majority. The 72nd leave for Cork to embark."

VOLUNTEERS FOR THE 18th REGIMENT.—Instructions having been received from the Horse Guards a few days ago at Salford, that the 18th Regiment was to be immediately made up to its full complement, and that volunteers from other regiments of the line would be accepted for that purpose, no less than eighty men of the 61st Regiment lying in Salford barracks at once volunteered for service. It is gratifying to know that these men will be valuable soldiers in the Crimea, all of them being veterans who have seen service in India.

MALTA, Nov. 22.—Annexed is a list of the arrivals of troops at Malta, en route to the East. The 9th left that garrison on the 19th:—

ARRIVAL OF TROOPS.

Per the Odessa, Nov. 17.

7th Fusiliers—51 rank and file.
23rd Regiment—102 rank and file.
77th—Ensign Knight, Ensign Long, 102 rank and file.
87th—Lieutenant Ware, Ensign Goodenough, 102 rank and file.
Rifle Brigade, 1st Battalion—Lieutenant Drummond, Ensign Talbot, Ensign Freemantle, 51 rank and file.
2nd Battalion—51 rank and file.
1st Dragoon Guards—Paymaster Shearnan.
Surgeons—Messrs. Owens, Cay, Biles, Fair, Edwards, Acton, Stewart, and Phillips.
The Rev. Mr. Parker, the Rev. Mr. Freeman, and the Rev. Mr. Eade.

Per the Arctura, Nov. 20.

Lieutenant G. B. Gorrard, 95th Regiment; four naval officers, 41 seamen, marines, and boys, and 116 non-commissioned officers and men of different regiments, all, or the greater part wounded.
Assistant-Surgeon Carmelo Ellul, Royal Malta Fencible Regiment and Dr. Arpa, in charge of the sick and wounded.

Per the Cleopatra.

21st Foot—Staff-Surgeon Donnell, 2 sergeants, and 120 rank and file.
30th—Captain Dillon, Ensign Austin, and 51 rank and file.
33rd—Ensign Heyland, and 61 rank and file.
42nd—Ensign Dunbar, Ensign Whigham, and 51 rank and file.

41th—1 sergeant, and 53 rank and file.
50th—Ensign Lee, and 74 rank and file.
55th—Lieutenant Behalaz, and 127 rank and file.
68th—Ensign Sanderson, and 26 rank and file.
93rd—Lieutenant Ball, Ensign Kirby, and 41 rank and file.
Lord Paget, Colonel of the 4th Light Dragoons, is on board the French steamer. He left the Crimea on the 11th, to which day no Russians had been seen. They are evidently much cowed.

GENERAL ORDER.

Lord Raglan has issued the following General Order:—
"Head-quarters before Sebastopol, Nov. 9.

"The Commander of the Forces returns his thanks to the officers and troops for their conduct in the Battle of Inkerman, on the 5th inst., in which, aided by their gallant Allies, they succeeded in completely repulsing and defeating the enemy, by whom they were attacked, in very superior numbers, with masses of artillery, both of field and position, as well as of ship guns.

"The army have thus taken advantage of another opportunity of distinguishing themselves, and of showing that, under all circumstances, and in presence of every difficulty, their determination to devote their best energies to the service of their country is still the same.

"On this occasion the troops had the good fortune to be associated with and supported by a division of the French army, and they will join in the expression of gratitude and admiration for their splendid advance at a most critical moment.

"The loss sustained both by the French and English armies on this trying day cannot be too strongly deplored; and, while he deeply regrets having been deprived of the services of so many valuable officers and men, it is particularly painful to Lord Raglan to announce that among those who fell, nobly discharging their duty, were Lieutenant-General the Hon. Sir George Cathcart, Brigadier-General Goldie, Brigadier-General Strangways (all officers of distinction—Sir George Cathcart especially being one whose conduct elsewhere had particularly attracted the gracious notice of her Majesty, and the attention of the country).

"By order,

"J. B. B. ESCOURT, Adjutant-General."

HOSPITAL AT SCUTARI.

NAMES OF OFFICERS WHO DIED AT SCUTARI FROM WOUNDS RECEIVED IN ACTION, FROM NOV. 8 TO NOV. 14.

Lieutenant the Hon. G. Neville, 5th Dragoon Guards, November 11.
Lieutenant and Adjutant Maule, 88th Regiment, November 14.
Lieutenant-Colonel Ainslie, 21st Regiment, November 14. (In harbour, on board the Andes.)

RETURN OF DEATHS AT SCUTARI HOSPITALS, AS REPORTED AT THE COMMANDANT'S OFFICE BY THE MEDICAL AUTHORITIES.

Private Joseph Ross, 6th Hussars, wounds, November 8.
Private James Millard, Scotch Fusilier Guards, wounds, November 8.
Private Frederick Campbell, 2nd Dragoons, wounds, November 8.
Private W. Toptam, 5th Regiment, diarrhoea, November 8.
Private George Hewdley, Coldstream Guards, diarrhoea, November 8.
Private John Eyres, 2nd battalion Rifle Brigade, diarrhoea, November 8.
Private George Goldsmith, 38th Regiment, dysentery, November 8.
Private Maurice Scanlan, 28th Regiment, diarrhoea, November 8.
Private William C. M'Beath, 2nd Dragoons, vulnus, November 8.
Private James Watt, 30th Regiment, diarrhoea, November 9.
Sergeant James Buck, 28th Regiment, vulnus, November 9.
Private James Newton, 33rd Regiment, vulnus, Nov. 9.
Private John M'Namara, R.A., ascites, November 9.
Private William Barrett, 49th Regiment, diarrhoea, November 9.
Private Thomas Westlake, R.A., jaundice, November 10.
Private Edward Fox, 19th Regiment, dysentery, November 10.
Private John Gaffrey, 20th Regiment, diarrhoea, November 10.
Private Patrick M'Carthy, 71st Regiment, diarrhoea, November 10.
Private Daniel Miller, 93rd Regiment, diarrhoea, November 10.
Private James Lacey, 33rd Regiment, wounds, November 10.
Private James Thompson, 79th Regiment, diarrhoea, November 10.
Private William Couch, 19th Regiment, amputation, November 10.
Private Robert M'Leeran, 79th Regiment, paralysis, November 10.
Private Thomas Stapleton, 44th Regiment, diarrhoea, November 11.
Private William Lloyd, 7th Regiment, diarrhoea, November 11.
Private William Checkley, 6th Dragoons, diarrhoea, November 11.
Sergeant Thomas Rich, Coldstream Guards, diarrhoea, November 11.
Private Henry Wood, Scotch Fusilier Guards, wounds, November 11.
Private James Long, 77th Regiment, wounds, November 12.
Private James Taylor, 95th Regiment, vulnus, November 12.
Private Stephen Brant, 33rd Regiment, diarrhoea, November 12.
Private James Ainsbury, 28th Regiment, pneumonia, November 12.
Private Richard Burns, 1st Foot, diarrhoea, November 12.
Private Thomas Taylor, 23rd Regiment, contusion, November 12.
Corporal John Davidson, 49th Regiment, wounds, November 12.
Private Robert Quilly, Coldstream Guards, wounds, November 12.
Private James Currier (supposed to be) 95th Regiment, wounds, November 12.
Private James Price, Grenadier Guards, wounds, November 12.
Private Thomas Thompson, 33rd Regiment, diarrhoea, November 12.
Private Thomas Whitmore, 33rd Regiment, diarrhoea, November 12.
Corporal George Ford, Scotch Fusilier Guards, diarrhoea, November 12.
Private William Middelton, 19th Regiment, diarrhoea, November 12.
Private Richard Bervay, 1st Foot, choleraic dysentery, November 12.
Private William M'Intosh, 93rd Regiment, diarrhoea, November 12.
Private Jeremiah Burns, 33rd Regiment, wounds, November 13.
Private John J. Monger, 94th Regiment, wounds, November 13.
Private Thomas Lovren, 95th Regiment, syncope, November 13.
Private William Reynolds, R.A., diarrhoea, November 13.
Private William Dunn, 57th Regiment, wounds, November 13.
Private Elijah Townsend, 19th Regiment, diarrhoea, November 13.
Private Joseph Blison, 2nd battalion Rifle Brigade, amputation, November 14.
Private William Hill, Coldstream Guards, wounds, November 14.
Private Peter Donnelly, 30th Regiment, diarrhoea, November 14.
Private David Patrick, 1st battalion Rifle Brigade, diarrhoea, November 14.
Colour-Sergeant Garrett Woods, Ambulance Corps, diarrhoea, November 14.
Private Henry Palmer, Coldstream Guards, diarrhoea, November 14.

The Caledonian Mercury has the following extract from a letter by a surgeon who arrived at Scutari with the Vectis on the 5th instant, to his friends in Edinburgh:—

"Scutari Barracks, Nov. 9, 1854.

"I am sorry I cannot write you a long letter just now; but as the mail is going off to-morrow, I will tell you how I am quartered here, and what I have been doing. As soon as we were landed, three of us were bundled into a room, with whitewashed walls, containing two iron bedsteads and nothing else. No food was to be had, and I don't know what we would have done if we had not fortunately been recognised by several old college companions, who very kindly shared their rations with us for three days, when we thought it necessary to look out for ourselves. So the third day I mounted a haversack and went a foraging. I went to the village and bought stewpans, pots, plates, teapots, &c., including butter, tea, and sugar. I put them all in my bag, and, with a bunch of candles in my hand, I walked into the hospital quite proud of my expedition. Next morning we got a servant, and by sending him to forage for us, were relieved of that work. We made fire with some wood, which we made into a table and two chairs; and now we are as comfortable as any of the others here. Just as I had finished my forenoon work, a vessel arrived from the Crimea with 500 of the wounded at the battle which took place on Sunday (5th). I happened to be orderly officer for that day, and it was my duty to see them carried on shore and taken to the hospital. It was a melancholy sight, and such as I can't describe. The poor fellows were either carried to the hospital on stretchers, or staggered to their quarters unassisted. Almost the whole of them had lost their fire-arms, and great portions of their clothes, except their great-coats, which formed their principal covering. As they passed up I could see distinctly where the bullets had penetrated their great-coats, for they fought in these, and I knew from this circumstance where they had been wounded. Officers came hurrying up in the same way, their once brilliant uniforms all in rags. In fact, you can form no idea of the mess every one was in. I got this duty finished, and then set off to dress as fast as I could. I do not know how many I dressed, but I was occupied until six p.m. The wounds were all gun-shot wounds, some of them very serious. The shot generally passed through, but I had to extract one Minié bullet from a poor fellow's back, which I have kept as a memento. From another I got a splendid revolver, which he told me he had taken from a Russian soldier, who was in the act of running away with a horse which he had captured. In the encounter for its recovery, the Russian was about to make use of his pistol, when he was shot by his antagonist, who carried it off as a trophy, and, as I have said, gave it to me for dressing his wounds. It is still loaded just as he took it. I could fill a whole letter with tales of the battle, but I am sorry there is no time at present. The next mail is on the 15th, and I will try and write again before it leaves. I cannot promise, however, as we expect more wounded men every day for some time. * * * The men are all as plucky as possible, and since they are made comfortable, many of them feel proud of their wounds—their only wish being to get soon well, and have a rap at the— for this yet." The barracks and hospital are splendid buildings. The former is quite full, and we are filling the latter, where I am stationed. Taking all, I think we have 2,000 patients and upwards. I have been talking of the wounded only, but one-half of the inmates have diarrhoea, dysentery, &c. These are all brought from the Crimea; if cured, they are sent back; if not, they are sent home or die. You will think this a hasty letter, but you must excuse me, as I have had so much to do."

THE HOSPITALS IN TURKEY—SCUTARI, NOV. 10.—Most gladly did we welcome good Miss Nightingale and her party, and before evening they were all comfortably lodged and provided for. They will be invaluable in severe cases of illness, and in any emergency. Our surgeons last night one and all confessed that they were of the greatest use in attending to 600 wounded who came in during the afternoon. These were the wounded of the 5th, when the Russians gave us a hard day's fighting; but we held our own, and they lost, it is said, 10,000 men. Miss Nightingale appears eminently qualified for the noble work she has undertaken, and I trust she may have strength to carry it out. Her labours will spare the clergy many a sad sight of men sinking for want of proper nursing, and because food cannot be administered often enough. This is impossible with only hospital orderlies; but, with the nurses, all who need will be supplied. Mrs. and Mr. Bracebridge are most active, and to day I may say all are in full work. Mr. S. G. Osborne has arrived here offering his services, and bearing credentials from Sidney Herbert. I have put into his care half of the Barrack Hospital, which to-day numbers 2,300 patients, and will have another 600 added during the day. The hospital proper numbers still 1,000 patients. Mr. Wright has sent for Mr. Gilburne, so that I have only Mr. Lewis here, who takes the hospital. I am, therefore, most thankful for Mr. Osborne's help. Two Roman Catholic priests are here, Messrs. Cuffe and Butt. Mr. Hallett went up to the Crimea on Sunday in the Prince, but did not come to me, or I should have detained him; but Mr. Osborne in some sort supplies his place. We require another chaplain here yet, as I have not been able to get to the hulk for a fortnight past, and there are 500 men on board her. Mr. A. Stafford, M.P. for Northamptonshire, is here, and has volunteered to write letters for the men. They are very glad of his services, and I have seen him sitting hour after hour on the beds, most patiently writing the words which will cheer many hearts at home. Mr. Osborne's son is also engaged in the same work. The gentlemen who are sent by the Times to dispose of the fund are also here, and anxious to spend the fund in the best manner. I have suggested several things to them, and will give them every assistance in helping our men. Mr. Osborne has some funds, and generally adds one or two pounds to Mr. Stafford's letter, where the wives or families at home are in need. Lady Stratford comes and sends frequently, and has made me her almoner for jellies, pies, and soups for the officers. Miss Nightingale only takes care of the men, so Lady Stratford sends for the officers. We much need religious books and small Common Prayer-books. My stock is exhausted, but I have Testaments still. I have distributed 1,100, and more are needed. The Bible Society in Stambul send me any quantity of Testaments. Devotional books are much needed. The Bishop of London's Private Devotion is much prized; but 1,000 Prayer-books would be the best gift. There must now be immense numbers here all the winter, since we now number so many, and Sebastopol not yet attacked, so no books sent out will be in time. Captain Webb, 17th Lancers, died here on Monday after amputation of the leg. Our soldiers are delighted with the nurses. One poor fellow burst into tears and exclaimed to me, "I can't help crying when I see them. Only think of Englishwomen coming out here to nurse us; it is so homelike and comfortable."

The number of Sisters of Charity sent to the East to tend the sick and wounded of the French army amounts to sixty-two. They are attached to the ambulances and hospitals. Some of them have to bear the hard life of the camp, without any other shelter than a tent. The Russian prisoners are attended by Polish sisters of the same order. The Ottoman Government lately applied for a certain number to take charge of the Turkish hospital at Constantinople, where they are paid the greatest respect, and are perfectly independent.

The Cork Reporter contains the following:—"On Saturday evening a telegraphic despatch was received at the Convent of the Sisters of Mercy, Baggot-street, Dublin, requesting that eight nuns and a chaplain should at once proceed by the first conveyance to London, their final destination being the Crimea, before Sebastopol. Among those who are to accompany these nuns are the sisters who left Kinale Convent for Dublin, on an application for their services at the seat of war. Nothing could exceed the enthusiastic joy of the good sisters on the intelligence reaching them that they were without further delay to proceed on their mission of mercy, although well aware of the hardships and privations they will have to endure."

THE 68TH REGIMENT.—(To the Editor of the Times).—Sir,—A mis-statement affecting a regiment in which I feel a deep interest has appeared in several of the papers lately, and is repeated in the Times, in which we read that six additional regiments are to be sent to the Crimea, and in the list of these is "the 68th, from Gallipoli." The 68th, Sir, are not, nor have ever been, at Gallipoli. They were sent on from Malta, where they were stationed, to join the expedition at Varna. They landed with it at Eupatoria, were present at the battle of the Alma, marched with the army to Balaklava, have been engaged there ever since in the operations of the siege, and bore a distinguished part, under the leadership of Sir George Cathcart, in the battle of Inkerman, where, as you will see in the Gazette, two of their officers—one of whom was a brother of my own—were killed, and two others wounded. Trusting to your sense of justice to correct, by the insertion of this, the error which you have unintentionally been led to commit, I am, Sir, your obedient servant, CHARLES WYNNE.—39, Portman-square, Nov. 29.

LETTERS ABOUT THE CRIMEA.

FROM AN ARTILLERY OFFICER.

Sebastopol, Nov. 6.

"You will all in Old England hear of the desperate battle fought before Sebastopol yesterday. Lord Raglan ordered the siege train off duty in the trenches to bring up and place in position two heavy 18-pounders; this we did, and worked them all day with excellent effect. We contrived to bring most of the lire of the Russian artillery upon us, and lost many men at our guns. The enemy were repulsed again and again, and at length retired into Sebastopol. Their loss must be awful; such a sight as their killed and wounded I never saw, lying so thick I could hardly steer my horse through them. I rode for an hour among the dead and wounded Russians; we have not yet had time to remove those of the enemy's wounded who are unable to walk. I did not go from any vain curiosity, but to take my canteen full of good rum and water, and a haversack full of biscuit, to the poor suffering wretches. It would break your heart to see or think of half what I have seen yesterday and to-day. I held my wooden canteen to the lips of Russians wounded and dying, in every stage of pitiable human suffering. Some tried to kiss my feet, and, crossing themselves, took off their caps, pointed to Heaven, and blessed me in their uncouth tongue. I responded by also looking upwards, and pronouncing the only words I found we had in common, 'Christian,' and the name of our blessed Saviour. My eyes fill with tears as I write. I am sorry to say they give no quarter to our wounded; such are their orders. Poor ignorant fanatics! their leaders tell them we are devils in human shape, that on our side we give no quarter, and are fighting against God and the Emperor."

The following is a copy of a letter received from an officer in the Second Division:—

Camp before Sebastopol, No. 7.

"The word was passed on the 5th, to 'Stand to our arms, for the enemy were coming in force.' I was sent on to support the advance, and on trying the muskets, to my horror, I found that only about fifteen out of the company would go off, and out of those fifteen only about six men would follow me to the front. However, there was nothing to be done but push to the front, and I soon joined the advanced picket, which I found in much the same state, with regard to the arms, as my own. We retired gradually before them, as they were coming on in masses of columns, supported with a very powerful artillery, and soon had most desperate work, almost hand to hand, in the thick brushwood, with their guns playing on us in a most fearful way, and ours answering them over our heads, while we were firing musketry into each other at between fifteen and thirty paces distance, now and then charging and driving them back, and then driven back by superior numbers again. The French and nearly every regiment of English got all mixed up in one mass, which kept on advancing and retiring as we gained or lost the advantage. We had luckily built a loose stone wall along the front of our position, which we could manage to hold against an enormous force. The allies were five times driven back quite to the crest of our position; but we every time drove the enemy back and followed them up. After a long time our people got some 18-lb. battery guns into position, by which we were enabled to knock about their artillery a good deal, and at last they were everywhere driven back. Our poor division, as usual, bore the brunt of it, and our loss was 720 odd killed and wounded. The enemy are said to have brought 52,000 men, according to the prisoners, and something frightful in artillery. The shot, shell, and bullets were coming about us like hail, and I certainly thought my time was come, but, thank God, I escaped without a scratch. The battle lasted from about half-past five or six a.m. till four p.m., and was a constant succession of reverse and success on both sides. The brigades of the division are so much cut up that they talk of making regiments of them. Our brigade would not make more than a strong regiment, it is so much reduced."

Another officer of artillery says:—"The crest of the hill was covered with smoke, and the entire ground there thickly clothed with brushwood, through which we with the greatest difficulty moved the guns. Suddenly, the smoke cleared away, and we discovered the Russian infantry in great force within ten yards of us. I shall never forget the aspect of those fellows, dressed in their long grey-coats and flat glazed caps, firing most deliberately at our poor gunners and picking them down like so many crows. We at this time were under a very heavy fire of shot and shell. Major Townsend saw at once the critical position of the guns, and most wisely gave the order to retire as we were quite unsupported—but too late; the enemy's skirmishers had come up to the guns. However, five out of the six escaped; and one of our men, seeing the last, as was then supposed, certain to be taken, judiciously spiked it. The gun belonged to a division of our battery, to which was attached young Miller, one of our lieutenants; and poor Major Townsend, turning round his horse, seeing what was likely to occur, cried out, 'You won't disgrace me.' The words were hardly out of his mouth when a shell burst in among us, and one unfortunate fragment struck him on the head, and literally crushed it to pieces, of course killing him immediately. Miller drew his sword, and single-handed galloped his horse towards the gun, riding down one and cutting down a second Russian. He alone turned aside a dozen of the enemy, and we recovered the gun. Was not this a most plucky thing to do? He returned with his gun, without having received even a scratch. Our poor fellows were dreadfully knocked about above referred to was written partly in ink and partly in black lead. The ink portion was as follows:—"Mr. Parker,—Dear Sir,—I beg to remind you that Moulay next will be the 27th. Yours respectfully, R. H. FOSTER, for W. Brown. Birmingham, November, 22, 1854." Upon that, in black lead pencil, was written, "I have not written to my sister tell Mr. Powell to write. She must support my family. Good bye, God bless you all, not forgetting my poor dear wife; I hope the Lord will help her. Get the property in Bull-street sold all together, it will fetch more money. Oh, my poor dear children, what will become of them? Oh! to the Lord I could face it out; but I cannot. I have only £11 in money with me. I regret most about M. Deakins, Backs, and C. Armstrong as regards my creditors. Good bye, and I hope the Lord will have mercy upon my soul, and preserve my dear wife and family.—HENRY SAMUEL PARKER. Do not let me be taken to Birmingham."—M. David Grant Macpherson, surgeon, deposed that he saw the deceased on Tuesday afternoon, the body presenting the appearance that death had not been natural, but the result of poison. On the dressing-table he found a glass, with a small portion of water in it and some crystals at the bottom, which, on tasting, he found to be intensely bitter. He took it home with a paper he found, attached to which was a small portion of powder, and on testing it by the bichromate of potash found it to be strychnine. In testing it a few drops of sulphuric acid were put in, which turns the liquid, if strychnine, a beautiful purple colour—that was a recent and most delicate test for strychnine. He afterwards made a post mortem examination of the body, and in the stomach he found some fluid, with some grains of crystalised strychnine in it. From the symptoms presented witness was able to say that deceased died from pulmonary apoplexy, caused by spasm of the larynx, which he believed was occasioned by the operation of strychnine. Poisoning by strychnine was very rare; there were two or three cases in the books. Strychnine is a powerful poison, occasioning death within two hours by spasms.—The coroner having summed up the evidence, the jury returned as the verdict, "That deceased took the poison during a period of temporary insanity."

DARING BURGLARY AND ATTEMPTED MURDER.—SOUTHAMPTON, Wednesday.—This morning one of the most cool and deliberate burglaries was perpetrated in this neighbourhood which has occurred for many years past. The scene was Yew Cottage, Bitterne, about three miles from this town, and inhabited by an elderly maiden lady, named Hoyes, together with three female servants. No male domestic was connected with the establishment. It appears that between three and four o'clock this morning, four fellows with masks over their faces effected an entrance at the rear of the premises, by removing a pane of glass from one of the windows, through which a lad was thrust who opened the door, thereby giving the burglars an easy ingress. As soon as they had furnished themselves with lights they separated to different parts of the premises, one entering the bedroom of Miss Hoyes, whilst the others betook themselves to the sleeping apartments of the servants. Miss Hoyes was immediately disturbed upon the entrance of the villain, who seemed perfectly careless as to the quantity of noise he made, and she, being alarmed, commenced shrieking loudly. The man no sooner heard the cries of the lady, than he walked to the bedside, dealt her two heavy blows with a bludgeon, and threatened to do for her if she repeated the alarm. He then told her that as she was awake she could tell him where to find the money, &c., and it would save him the trouble of a search. Upon receiving further threats from the villain, Miss Hoyes directed his attention to a drawer, in which the burglar discovered £13 in cash, which he took, and not feeling satisfied that this was all the money, he commenced to tear and wrench open everything which was possessed of a fastening. Whilst this was going on in the bedroom of Miss Hoyes, the other three fellows were busy amongst the servants. One of the villains, on hearing Miss Hoyes scream, remarked to his victim that she had better "fork up" what she had, as he (his companion) was doing for the — in the other room, and she would be finished too if his request were not granted, at the same time holding a pistol to her head. After ransacking every part of the premises, the burglars decamped, taking with them a gold watch, a quantity of plate, and, with what they had from the servants, about £15 in cash, which is all there was in the house. The villain who visited Miss Hoyes' bedroom, previous to leaving, lighted a large newspaper, which he thrust under the bed, evidently with a view of burning the house and its inmates. Fortunately it became extinguished without doing any damage. A large quantity of pilfered articles were left behind. The police, we understand, have been furnished with every particular in reference to the burglary, and are on the alert. One fact, which no doubt will materially assist them, is, that amongst the stolen cash is a £5 Bank of England note, the number of which is known.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

A YORKSHIRE SQUIRE.

BROWN v. SINGLETON.—This action, which was tried before Lord Campbell on Wednesday, in the Court of Queen's Bench, was brought to recover the difference between the amount paid for a mare, which had been warranted sound by the defendant, and the price at which she had subsequently been sold. The defendant did not deny that the mare was unsound, or the warranty, but simply paid £10 into court as compensation for the plaintiff's loss. The case for the plaintiff, who is a horse-dealer, carrying on business in Oxford-street, was, that he had, on the 15th of July last, bought the mare in question, at Pocklington, in Yorkshire, from the defendant, a gentleman residing in that locality, for £100, and the defendant warranted the animal as sound, except as to a blow on the hock. When she was trotted up and down the yard, it was found she was lame in the fore feet. The defendant came to the plaintiff's yard, and said, that, "If he might the mare was lame, he could have back his cheque." The plaintiff said that was not his mode of transacting business, and suggested that the animal should be examined by a veterinary surgeon. She was accordingly taken to Mr. Mavor, who said she was infamously shod, and ordered her to be re-shod. She then went better, and the defendant again offered to take her back, which the defendant, still believing her to be sound, declined. On the 31st of July the plaintiff sold the mare to Mr. Kench, of Dunchurch, in Warwickshire, who, on the 8th of August, returned her as unsound. On the 9th she was shown to Mr. Field, the veterinary surgeon, who pronounced her to be lame in both fore legs from lamivular disease. She was then offered back to the defendant, but he declined to take her.

She was sold at Aldridge's Repository for £40. 8s. 6d., the purchaser being the defendant's solicitor, who, it was assumed, had bought her on behalf of the defendant, as he had hunted her last season.—Lord Campbell, in summing up, said this was one of the most extraordinary horse cases he had ever heard. Generally, in such cases, there was a denial of the warranty, or an affirmation of the soundness of the horse; but here it was acknowledged that the defendant had warranted the horse, and that it was not sound, and the jury were merely asked to say what damage the plaintiff had sustained. The plaintiff claimed £70, which sum he had actually lost by the transaction; the defendant offered £10, and said the plaintiff was not entitled to more. The Yorkshire squire would be better off than the London horse-dealer if the damages are to be placed on this footing. London horse-dealers are said to be very sharp, and Yorkshire squires very knowing.—(laughter)—but if this view of the damages were to prevail, the Yorkshire squire would certainly have had the better of it.—The jury then returned a verdict for the plaintiff for the amount claimed, being £70, including the £10 paid into court.—Lord Campbell said he wished it to be distinctly understood that his view of the law was, that such an action could be maintained where the horse was unsound, without any offer of returning him. An offer to return the horse was by no means necessary to maintain such an action.

MILITARY AMUSEMENTS.

COPLEY v. TUBBS.—This was an action (tried in the Common Pleas, on Tuesday) by the plaintiff, who was recently an ensign in the 88th Regiment, against the defendant, a horse-trainer, at Winchester, to recover £25, lent by the plaintiff to the defendant. The defendant pleaded the general issue. It appeared from the plaintiff's evidence that whilst he was stationed with his regiment at Winchester, he met the defendant at Twyford races. The next day defendant called upon him, and said there was a horse to be sold cheap at Newmarket, and asked him if he would "go halves" in that. Plaintiff said he would not. Defendant then asked him to lend him £25 to buy the horse, and plaintiff drew a cheque on his agents and got it cashed at the bank at Winchester, and gave him the money. Defendant afterwards told him that the horse had been sold, but that he had purchased another. About six weeks after plaintiff applied to him for repayment of the loan. He first asked a Mr. Russell to apply for it, and then he wrote to defendant, saying, "unless you repay me the £25 borrowed of me on or before Saturday next, I shall cause proceedings to be taken against you." Defendant replied, "I am going to London the first thing in the morning, and will call upon you on Monday, upon my return." Defendant did not call, and had not paid him the money. On cross-examination, plaintiff stated that he sold out of the 88th in September last. He knew defendant through Lieutenant Poole, of the 88th, who had "gone halves" with defendant in a mare called Kiss-me-Quick. Plaintiff had no interest in that mare at all. Whilst at Twyford races defendant proposed to "go halves" with plaintiff in Michaelmas Maid, and he consented, but they could not have her. Defendant afterwards asked him to go halves in a horse at Newmarket, and bought a Racing Calendar to show his pedigree. Plaintiff refused. Was not obliged to sell out because he had killed a dog in the mess-room. Had killed a retriever there because it had bitten a brother-officer, and had attempted to bite him. Had not fought cats in the mess-room, but had obtained cats for fighting elsewhere. Had seen cats killed by dogs. The other officers had remonstrated with him about killing the dog in the mess-room, but not because he fought cats. It had nothing to do whatever with his selling out, and he was still a member of the mess. The defendant, who, after giving a similar account to the plaintiff about the meeting at Twyford races, said that plaintiff and he went into a booth together, and had some wine. Plaintiff said, "Never mind Michaelmas Maid, we will have a better one, and beat her, and I will go halves with you." Plaintiff got drunk, and witness saw him home. Defendant had a letter in his pocket from Newmarket about three horses, and the next morning he took the letter to the plaintiff, and also the Racing Calendar, containing an account of the performances of the horses. Plaintiff decided to advance £25 to buy a horse. He said he would "go halves" in it, as Mr. Poole had done in Kiss-me-Quick, and he came and lunched at defendant's house, and drew a cheque there, and they went together to the bank and got the money. He then went to Newmarket and bought a horse, and after he had brought him to Winchester plaintiff came and examined him. Plaintiff advised him to run the horse at Ohlham races, and he did, but the horse did not win. The next time plaintiff came to the stable he named Jersey to him. Plaintiff said, "Very well; let him go, but don't lose him." The horse went to Jersey, and ran there, and won at a sale stakes, and they were obliged to give between £20 and £30 to prevent his being sold. He told plaintiff of this, and plaintiff observed there would not be much profit left. He remembered seeing Russell. Russell said to him, "I want your IOU for the £25 Mr. Copley lent you." Witness replied, "I certainly shall not give it, for I don't owe him £25; we have had horse transactions together, but that is between ourselves and no one else." Russell then said he should not lend plaintiff any more money, and that was all that passed. On cross-examination, defendant stated that Mr. Penn, of Basingstoke, was present at the conversation at Twyford races. He had made a claim against plaintiff for expenses concerning the horse. The first time he did so was about two months back. He had not made the claim before Russell asked him for his acceptance. He was in business as a linen-draper thirteen years ago, but became bankrupt, and had not got his certificate. His debts might have been between £2,000 and £3,000. Thought he had paid 1s. 6d. in the pound, but could not swear he had paid 2s. in the pound. Would not swear he had paid 1d. in the pound. Thought he had paid more. After that he commenced his present business, but got unfortunately into the hands of a racing man, and had been obliged to go through the Insolvent Court and make a clean sweep of it. That was six years ago. He had sufficient now to pay all his debts.—Mr. Justice Cresswell summed up, telling the jury it was impossible to come to any other conclusion upon the evidence, than that either the plaintiff or the defendant had committed the most abominable perjury.—The jury, after some deliberation, returned a verdict for the plaintiff, and the foreman added, "There has been considerable difference of opinion amongst the jury, but we have endeavoured to arrive at a satisfactory conclusion."—Mr. Justice Cresswell: "The verdict is entirely in accordance with my opinion, and but for the hesitation of some of the jury upon the subject, I should have ordered a prosecution against the defendant for perjury." Verdict for plaintiff, £25.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

A MOTHER'S RIGHT TO HER CHILD.

At the Lambeth Police Court a middle-aged woman of decent appearance stated to Mr. Elliott, that some time ago her child, a girl aged fourteen, was placed at the Nunnery, near Norwood, by a gentleman who was a subscriber to that establishment, and having recently heard that she was about to be removed to a similar establishment in France, without her (the mother's) sanction, she applied to the Principal to have her child delivered up. The answer was, that the child could not be given up; that they had consulted the solicitor to the establishment, and his opinion was, that the girl being fourteen years old, she (the mother) had lost all right to exercise control over her. The child herself, from all she could hear of her, was willing to go abroad, and her (the applicant's) feeling was, that she should never see her again. She (witness) had been to the Rev. Mr. Cotter, Roman Catholic clergyman at St. George's, and he told her he could not interfere. Mr. Elliott: The persons at the Nunnery have no right whatever to deprive you of your child, as you are her proper guardian. I have no power to assist you, as the case is not within my jurisdiction; but if you attend at Westminster Hall, and mention the case to Lord Campbell, or any of the judges, I doubt not that his lordship will at once order the child to be brought before the Court and delivered up to you. The applicant thanked his worship for his advice, and said she would act upon it.

ADULTERATION OF COFFEE.

At the Marylebone Court, James Debus, a grocer and tea-dealer, carrying on a large business at No. 55, New Church-street, Portman-market, appeared on an information laid by Mr. J. Latten, supervisor of the Inland Revenue Department, for selling a mixture of chicory and coffee without the printed statement required by the law. After a long inquiry, the defendant admitted that he was wrong in not having a label on the package, setting forth that it was "sold as a mixture of chicory and coffee." Mr. Broughton said he had no alternative, but must inflict a mitigated penalty of £25. Had he the power he would have reduced it to £5.—Two other summonses were taken out against Mr. Davies, grocer, Princess-street, Portman-market, and against Mr. Williams, Salisbury-street, in the same locality; but no evidence was gone into with respect to either of them, arrangements having been previously entered into by them with the Excise.

SERIOUS CHARGE AGAINST A MILLER.

At the Stockport Borough Police Court, before the mayor and other magistrates, Mr. Thomas Wilson, a miller, carrying on an extensive business at the Old Mill, Lancashire-lane, Heaton Norris, was charged under the 6th and 7th William IV., cap. 37, and sections 11 and 12, with having in his possession a large quantity of mineral white, or sulphate of lime, and other ingredients for the adulteration of flour, whereby he had rendered himself liable to a penalty not exceeding 10l. Mr. Edward Reddish, solicitor, appeared in support of the information, and Mr. Wheeler, barrister, of Manchester, for the defendant, and the hearing of the case, which excited great interest, occupied upwards of five hours. Mr. Brown, superintendent of the borough police, said, he received a warrant to search the premises on the 21st Nov., and told Mr. William Wilson, the defendant's son, whom he saw at the mill, that he had come to search for mineral white, which he understood they were in the habit of mixing with flour. Defendant's son showed him a sackfull of mineral white, but remarked that all the flour which contained mineral white had been sent away that morning; and he afterwards showed witness some other full sacks, which he said contained China clay, observing that it had been purchased to mix with flour, but was found to be of too soft and oily a nature. Witness brought away samples of these ingredients. John Joseph Heaton, who had left the defendant's employment two months ago, was the next witness, and stated that he had received instructions from Mr. Wilson to mix mineral white with flour, in the proportion of one sack of mineral to nine of flour. About the end of September, some wheat belonging to Mr. Henry Marsland, which had been sent to this mill to be ground, was treated in this way, and a portion of the genuine flour kept back. Witness had also taken two sacks of flour to Mr. Hayes, a provision-dealer, and with this he had mixed mineral white, by defendant's orders. A great portion of it was afterwards returned, having been found so bad that it could not be used. On a severe cross-examination, witness admitted that the present information was laid by him, but denied that he had done so out of revenge, or at the instigation of his present employer. Mr. Wheeler, for the defence, admitted the nature of the ingredients found upon the defendant's premises, but characterised the whole proceeding as the result of a paltry revenge on the part of a dishonest and diseased servant, backed up by his present employer, between whom and Mr. Wilson was pending a lawsuit for a large sum of money. He argued that the defendant was not a miller within the meaning of the Act, as he did not grind wheat for human consumption; and he called Mr. W. O. Wilson, defendant's son and manager, to show that the wheat ground was of an inferior description, and the flour was manufactured for sizing and oiling purposes. The mineral white was used to improve the colour; but the only flour defendant ever sold for human consumption was the two sacks to Hayes, and neither these nor those belonging to Mr. Marsland contained a particle of mineral. Mrs. Hayes had requested them as a favour to send her the flour, which she thought would do for brown bread; but as it was found not to answer the purpose required, a portion was sent back. The witness Eaton had threatened to make them repent it when he was discharged. Witness was not aware that the mineral white would injure machinery. The magistrates, after retiring to consult, said they were of opinion that the defendant was a miller within the meaning of the Act, and therefore had no right to have such ingredients on his premises; but, as they believed he was not aware he was acting contrary to law, they would inflict the mitigated penalty of £5 and costs. The counsel for the defendant gave notice of appeal at the next quarter sessions.

METROPOLIS.

THE SMITHFIELD CLUB CATTLE SHOW.

Yesterday was the last day for the reception of the agricultural implements to be exhibited at the ensuing show of the Smithfield Club, appointed to take place on the 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th inst. It is understood that Prince Albert will be a competitor in the pig and cattle classes, and also in the classes of short-wooled sheep, of which esteemed class the entries greatly exceed those of any former year. Amongst the other contributors are his Grace the Duke of Richmond,

The Lords of the Admiralty have also been pleased to place a commission for the promotion of a lieutenant to be a commander at the disposal of Vice-Admiral Dundas and of Rear-Admiral Sir Edmund Lyons respectively. In addition to these promotions the Board have directed commissions in blank to be transmitted to Vice-Admiral Dundas to be filled up by the promotion of officers, according to the following directions, provided that during the action the conduct of the officers to be selected was to the satisfaction of the several captains, but otherwise to be filled up with the names of any officers of the rank most distinguished in action. The senior commander of the ship-of-the-line on board during the action; the senior commander of a sloop engaged; the four senior lieutenants actually engaged; the eight senior mates; the two senior assistant-surgeons on board and engaged; the two senior second masters actually engaged; the three senior clerks actually engaged; three chief engineers of the second and third class, provided they were actually engaged, will be advanced one grade each and three assistant-engineers of each class will also be advanced one grade provided they were in the action; the three senior gunners, boatswains, and carpenters of the second class will be advanced to the first class, and the three seniors of the third will be advanced to the second. The promotion of those officers selected by their lordships who have not served the required period at sea, or who may not have passed their examinations, is contingent on their subsequently qualifying themselves according to existing regulations. The Royal Marines of the fleet having been employed at the time of the action with the besieging army, these naval promotions have necessarily been made without reference to that branch of the service or to the Naval Brigade similarly employed on shore.

MILITARY.

THE ARMY IN INDIA.—Casualties by Death since the Departure of the Mail on the 14th October.—Bombay: Assistant-Surgeon John Crawford, at Gogo, on the 4th October. Madras: Captain George Simpson, 22nd Regiment, N.I., on board the steamer Sir F. Currie, on the 6th October. Bengal: Surgeon Elderton, at Murree, on the 3rd October. Superintending-Surgeon Charles Bransby Francis, at Calcutta, on the 25th September. Lieutenant John Brown, 27th Regiment, N.I., at Agra, on the 27th September.

ARRIVAL OF WOUNDED OFFICERS.—The following wounded officers have arrived at Liverpool by the screw steamer Belbek:—Lieutenant-Colonel W. Smith, 95th Regiment, wounded severely; Major Lindsey, 63rd Regiment, wounded severely; Captain Creagh, 41st Regiment, ill; Captain Pakenham, 30th Regiment, wounded severely; Captain Fitzgerald, 33rd Regiment, wounded severely; Lieutenant Phillips, Royal Artillery, ill; Lieutenant Knight, 17th Lancers, ill; Lieutenant Light, 68th Regiment, ill; Assistant-Surgeon Elkins, 4th Regiment, ill; Lieutenant Perse, 7th Regiment, wounded severely; and Lieutenant Braybrooke, 95th Regiment, wounded severely. Left at Malta: Colonel Laurens, 17th Lancers, ill; Captain Wethered, 95th Regiment, ill; Captain Fitzgerald, 7th Regiment, wounded severely; Lieutenant Lane, 50th Regiment, wounded; Lieutenant Unett, 19th Regiment, ill; Lieutenant Purcell, 13th Light Dragoons, wounded; and Lieutenant Phillips, 47th Regiment, wounded severely. Left at Smyrna: Assistant-Commissary-General Strickland, ill; and five officers' servants, ill and wounded. Left at Gibraltar: Lieutenant Bazalgette, 95th Regiment, wounded severely.

MEDALS.—The following General Order has been issued from the Horse Guards, dated November 22:—"The Queen having been pleased to command that a medal shall be prepared to commemorate the success of her Majesty's forces in the wars in which they were engaged against the Caffres in the years 1834-5, 1846-7, and in the course of the period between the 24th of December, 1850, and the 6th of February, 1853; and to direct that one of the said medals shall be conferred on every surviving officer, non-commissioned officer, and soldier of the regular forces, including the officers of the staff, and the officers and men of the Royal Artillery, and Royal Engineers, and Sappers and Miners, who actually served in the field against the enemy in South Africa at the periods alluded to, excluding all who have been dismissed for subsequent misconduct, or who have deserted and are absent; the General Commanding-in-Chief desires that all claims for the medal in question may be addressed to the Secretary to the Board of General Officers, Whitehall-yard, London. Officers who served on the staff of the army, as well as those now on half-pay, or who may have retired from the service by the sale of their commissions, are to address their applications direct to the Board. The claims of regimental officers, non-commissioned officers, and soldiers now serving, are to be forwarded through their respective commanding officers; and pensioners and men who have purchased their discharge are to transmit their applications to the board (the former through the staff-officers of pensioners), duly certified according to the annexed form. By command of the Right Hon. General Viscount Hardinge, Commanding-in-Chief, G. A. WETHERALL, Deputy-Adjutant-General."

THE WHOLE OF THE TROOPS now proceeding to the seat of war are to be armed with the Minié rifle. During their passage out to the Crimea, those unaccustomed to the weapon will be instructed in its management, and, whenever practicable, be exercised at firing at a target, to be hoisted at the foretop-gallant-mast.

THE CONTEMPLATED AUGMENTATION OF THE ARMY, which is expected to take place immediately after the assembling of Parliament, will, it is stated, embrace the whole of the infantry regiments of the line. The manner in which the increase is to be effected is stated to be as follows, viz:—The regiments of infantry serving in the East, Gibraltar, Malta, and the Ionian Islands, will have additional battalions of 800 rank and file respectively, to be termed 2nd or 3rd battalions, as in the case of the 1st Royal and Rifle Brigades; those regiments in the colonies and East Indies to have each a reserve battalion of 500 bayonets; and the regiments on home service to be placed, as regards their numerical strength, on the war establishment. The regiments to have additional battalions of 800 men are the 1st Royals, 3rd Buffs, 4th Regiment of Foot, 7th Fusiliers, 9th Foot, 13th ditto, 14th ditto, 17th ditto, 18th Royal Irish, 19th Foot, 20th ditto, 21st ditto, 23rd Fusiliers, 26th Foot, 30th ditto, 31st ditto, 33rd ditto, 34th ditto, 36th ditto, 41st ditto, 42nd Highlanders, 44th Foot, 46th ditto, 47th ditto, 48th ditto, 49th ditto, 50th ditto, 55th ditto, 62nd ditto, 63rd ditto, 68th Light Infantry, 71st Highland Light Infantry, 72nd Highlanders, 77th Foot, 79th ditto, 88th Connaught Rangers, 89th Foot, 90th ditto, 92nd ditto, 93rd Highlanders, 95th Foot, 97th ditto, and the Rifle Brigade. The remaining regiments will be augmented as stated above. An additional battalion of Royal Artillery, and eight companies of Royal Marines, are also to be raised.

SOLDIERS' WIVES.—"Sir, I am desired by the Committee of the Central Association, which was specially summoned this day for the purpose of reconsidering their rule No. 14, (which enacts—"That no woman married before her husband enlisted, unless afterwards placed on the strength of the regiment, can be allowed relief,") to state, that it was resolved that the rule No. 14 be expunged from the standing orders of the association.—By order of the committee, H. L. POWERS, Major, Hon. Secretary.

YEOMANRY AND MILITIA.

MATRIMONY & THE MILITIA.—A priest in a neighbouring parish has fallen on a singular, and, as it would seem, successful device, for replenishing his pocket at the expense of her Majesty's service. He has announced from the altar that no unmarried man will be taken in the militia, while all bachelors are liable to be balloted for, or even impressed. Acting on this hint, backed by his strongest recommendation to do so, the eligible bachelors of his flock have very extensively entered into the matrimonial state. As each marriage secures a handsome fee to his reverence, his advice was not very disinterested.—Connaught Watchman.

ETON AND THE ARMY.—It is a frequent subject of remark among Etonians how large a proportion of the officers who have fallen in the Crimea were educated at Eton. Lord Carington acknowledged this fact on Tuesday by a very graceful compliment to the school, which will not soon be forgotten. In the course of their morning's march he led his regiment (the Royal Bucks Militia, now quartered in Windsor) into the Eton playing-fields. The boys soon collected there in great numbers, much struck by the fine appearance of the regiment. In the meantime Lord Carington went to the head master's house to ask, in the name of the regiment, for a holiday for the school. On his return, being surrounded by the boys, he told them so, and added a few words something to the following effect:—"Boys, I cannot see what a large proportion of the officers who have fallen in the war are Etonians, without feeling how much the country owes to this school. At all times Eton has been foremost in giving her sons to the service of their country, both in the army and navy, but never more than in the present war; and I am sure that you who are before me now are of the same stamp as those who are so nobly maintaining the honour of their country, or have fallen cheering their men on to victory; and Eton will, I am persuaded, continue to send forth those who will be the honour and boast of their country. To testify how much I think is owed to Eton, I will order my men to present arms to you." Upon this, he advanced to the front of his regiment, which was drawn up in line, and, giving the preparatory words of command, he added, "Royal Bucks Militia, present arms to the Eton boys." So novel and unexpected a compliment, mingling as it did with the recollection of those—fathers, brothers, or former companions—to whose gallantry Lord Carington had alluded, affected very deeply all that were present. As if by one impulse, every hat was taken off, and, after a moment's deep silence, a cheer burst forth, deep, prolonged, and ringing, such as Eton boys give when they feel deeply. When the cheer had at length subsided, Mr. Buckle, captain of the school, called on his companions to give another cheer for Lord Carington, after which they accompanied the regiment as it marched through and out of the playing-fields. The parents and friends of the officers here alluded to will not read without emotion of this exceedingly well-timed and graceful act of homage paid by Lord Carington and his regiment to the heroic conduct of those still engaged, as well as to the memory of those for whose loss they are now mourning.

SCOTLAND.

CABS ON SUNDAY.—As we anticipated, the rigid rule laid down by the cab-owners and drivers, that there should be no public vehicular conveyance in our city on the Sabbath, has only held good for one day, simply because the public would not tolerate the inconvenience to which it led. Calmen are now to be allowed every alternate Sunday as a day of rest.—North British Daily Mail.

MURDER AT MARYHILL.—Information was, on Monday, communicated to the authorities that a brutal and unaccountable murder had been perpetrated at Maryhill, in the neighbourhood of Glasgow, on the previous evening, the victim being a man about fifty years of age, named John Welsh. It appears that Welsh had been employed in watching the surface works at Kelvin-side ironstone pit, Jean's Bridge, near to Maryhill, on Sunday last, and not arriving at home for supper in the evening, as he was accustomed to do, his family sought him at the works, where they found him lying in a state of insensibility, from various recent and severe wounds about the head. He was immediately conveyed home, where consciousness gradually returned, but upon medical examination, his wounds were found to be of a fatal character; and, as he appeared to be fast sinking, his dying deposition was taken, which is said to amount in substance to the following:—"He was watching at the works at eight o'clock on Sunday evening, when a young man, a coal-drawer, named Alexander Stewart, came to him and asked for a light of his pipe. He gave him a light, and they talked together for some time, when Stewart lifted one of the workmen's picks from among a number, and, in a half-jesting mood, said, 'John, would that kill a man?' Welsh answered, 'Yes, and it would kill a horse.' Scarcely had the words been uttered, when Stewart struck Welsh four severe blows on the head, face, and neck, with the pick, levelling him to the ground in a state of insensibility, and thus was he found as already described. The poor man died from the wounds about four o'clock on Monday morning. It is difficult to guess at the motive which led to the barbarous act, unless it was plunder. A strict search has since been making for Stewart, who is said to have been last seen near Sheepshead, coming in the direction of Glasgow, at six o'clock on Monday morning. He is described as about eighteen to twenty years of age, Irish accent, dark hair, prominent mouth, and wore a pilot-cloth jacket, with large wooden buttons, moleskin trousers, and small cloth cap with skip. He passed by the cognomen of 'Collier Stewart,' and worked occasionally at one of the contiguous pits belonging to the same proprietor, but was of loose habits, and very often lounged over night about the pit-heads. The unfortunate man Welsh has left a widow and a family.—North British Daily Mail.

IRELAND.

A GOOD RIDDANCE.—One of the members of the Cork Chamber of Commerce, a Mr. Thomas Mason Jones, was publicly expelled on Monday last, for having treasonably expressed in the Chamber his wish for the success of the Russians in the Crimea. A general meeting of the directors and subscribers was summoned on the occasion, and an inquiry having been instituted into the charge of the alleged disreputable and disloyal language, Mr. J. B. Perrier, the secretary, entered the great room, and said:—"Gentlemen, I am instructed by the directors to report to you, that they have taken your requisition into consideration, and having heard evidence on the subject, have unanimously resolved to expunge the name of Thomas Jones from the list of subscribers to the Commercial Buildings—(loud cheering)—and he is hereby expelled, and no longer to be admitted a member. (Great cheering.) I am further instructed to return him his subscription-money." (Increased cheering and waving of hats.) It is understood that the name of the expelled is Thomas Mason Jones, by trade a baker. He is not a native of Cork. He was not in attendance, nor was any explanation required in his behalf.

THE LATE CAPT. STANLEY, 57TH REGIMENT.—The Kilkenny Moderator, of Saturday last, relates the following interesting anecdote, relative to the above gallant officer, who was mortally wounded on the 6th ult., at the battle of Inkerman:—"Captain Stanley was a native of Dublin, and was connected with the family of the late Sir Edward Stanley. When very young, being fond of a military life, he entered the service of the Queen of Portugal, and distinguished himself in action at Oporto, in July, 1833, where he received a severe wound in the arm. He continued to serve in Portugal and Spain until 1835, when the order of the Tower and Sword (of Portugal) was conferred on him as a reward for his gallantry. The following anecdote connected with his appointment to the British army is authentic:—Prince William Henry, when a midshipman, was present at a ball at Halifax, Nova Scotia, and being struck with the charms of a young lady present, selected her for his partner in a country-dance, at the conclusion of which he laughingly told her that if he should ever attain power, she need only send him a copy of the music of that dance, accompanied by a request, and that he would, if possible, attend to any demand so authenticated. Years rolled on; the lady married, became a widow, and a grandmother. Prince William Henry became King William IV.; and on the return of Mr. Stanley from Spain in 1835, he expressed a wish to enter the British army, on which his grandmother forwarded a copy of the music to his Majesty, accompanied by a letter reminding him of his promise, and concluding by asking for an ensigncy, without purchase, for her grandson. In a very few days she was honoured with an autograph letter from the king, stating his perfect remembrance of the dance and the promise referred to, and his intention to accede to her wish with respect to the nomination of her grandson to an ensigncy, which accordingly took place in May, 1835. Captain Stanley joined the 57th Regiment at Madras that same year, and served with it ever since. Had he survived this battle, he would have succeeded to a majority without purchase. A man of refined tastes and elevating pursuits, he became a member of the Kilkenny Archaeological Society, whilst amongst us, and took a deep interest in that institution up to the period of his untimely death."

ACCIDENTS AND OFFENCES.

SUICIDE BY STRYCHNINE.—On Tuesday afternoon a gentleman destroyed himself at the Bell Hotel, Thomas-street, Bristol, by taking strychnine. Upon inquiries being made, it was found that the deceased was Mr. Henry Samuel Parker, innkeeper, of Lucy-street, Birmingham, a gentleman well-known on the turf and in betting-circles, but who, being much embarrassed, had come to Bristol, according to his statement to the landlord of the Bell, to have a little quietness. An inquest was held before Mr. J. B. Grindon, coroner for the city of Bristol, and a respectable jury, at which the following evidence was adduced:—James Collins, of the Bell Hotel, deposed that the deceased came to his house on Saturday evening last, the porter of the hotel fetching from the railway station his box, which had no direction on it. Deceased did not say when he came he was a commercial traveller, but that he had been recommended to witness's house, where he should stay probably for a week. He complained of distress in money matters, and said it was no joke to be so pressed as to be obliged to be continually signing his name for £500, £300, and £200, and that he had come to Bristol to be quiet. He dined and slept at witness's house on Saturday and Sunday, leaving for Birmingham in the evening saying that he had been telegraphed to appear at the Birmingham Bankruptcy Court and receive his protection. He returned on Monday evening and showed witness his protection-paper from the Court. He appeared then much more cheerful, and took tea and a mutton-chop, and one glassful of spirit and water. He told witness he was married, and had a family of sons and daughters. He appeared to court conversation, and retired to bed about twelve o'clock. Prior to his retiring for the night, he asked witness what time he breakfasted in the morning, and, on being told nine o'clock, said, "Oh, well, don't call me," and, as he did not rise on the Sunday morning until between twelve and one o'clock, they were not uneasy at his not making his appearance on Tuesday, until about two o'clock, when the waiter went to his room. Witness was absent at the time; he, however, was sent for, and on his coming home he went to the room and found deceased lying dead, but still warm. Witness immediately sent for a surgeon and the police authorities, the latter taking charge of the room. William Turner, one of the waiters at the hotel, went to the bedroom in which deceased was about half-past two o'clock on Tuesday. Not obtaining an answer to his knocks at the door, he effected an entrance by the window, and found deceased dead. Witness called the ostler, and immediately sent for his master. There was nothing in deceased's conduct the previous night which led to any suspicion that he was about to destroy himself. Silas Perratt, police-constable, 199, searched the room, and in deceased's box he found a letter. The box was unlocked by keys taken from the pocket of the deceased. In deceased's cigar-case he found a paper marked "Poison, strychnine, ten grains;" a gold watch with silver chain, and one silver watch with a gold chain, a £5 Bank of England note, £3 in gold, and 18s. 8d. in silver and copper, three American dollars, ten pieces of foreign silver coins, and sundry letters making application for money from creditors, a bankruptcy protection paper, a silver snuff-box, two purses, and other articles. The letter

Henry Clements, 16th Foot
 Peter John Willats, 18th Foot
 William Cox, 54th Foot
 Richard Hancock, 46th Foot
 Peter Sutherland, 72nd Foot
 John Bonamy, 6th Foot
 John Marshall, 91st Foot
 Richard Mannors, 69th Foot
 James Thomas Moore, 87th Foot
 Ambrose Spang, 40th Foot
 John Clarke, 66th Foot
 Isaac Richards, 11th Foot
 Robert Browne, 16th Foot
 Richard Tatton, 77th Foot
 James Jackson, 57th Foot
 Alexander Sharrcock, 29th Foot
 William Raban, 22nd Foot
 Thomas Hinton Hemmings, 78th Foot
 William Warburton, 61th Foot
 Martin Cream Lench, 14th Foot
 Edward Boyd, 29th Foot
 Joseph Smith, 14th Foot

To be MAJORS in the Army.

Captain:—
 Sir William Wynn, Invalids
 Marcus Louis, 6th Veteran Battalion
 George St. John Gifford, 11th
 Veteran Battalion
 Leonard Kilham Willard, 11th
 Veteran Battalion
 Thomas Leret Metcalfe, 6th Veteran Battalion
 Archibald Macneil, 3rd Veteran
 Battalion
 William Mackay, 9th Veteran
 Battalion
 Judge Thomas d'Arcy, 1th Veteran Battalion
 Robert Gray, 6th Veteran Battalion
 Josiah George Hart, 13th Veteran
 Battalion
 William Kelly, 2nd Veteran Battalion
 Joseph Roche, 3rd Veteran Battalion
 Charles Kingsley, 9th Veteran
 Battalion
 Archibald Fullarton, 6th Veteran
 Battalion
 Richard Woods, 8th Veteran Battalion
 Daniel M'Pherson, 2nd Veteran
 Battalion
 Timothy Dillon, 2nd Veteran Battalion
 Alexander Skene, 4th Veteran
 Battalion
 The commissions to bear date the 28th of November, 1854.

NOVEMBER 28.

The undermentioned officers, having completed three years' actual service as Regimental Lieutenants-Colonels, or in other appointments equivalent to those situations, to be promoted to the rank of Colonel in the Army, in accordance with the provisions of her Majesty's Royal Warrant of the 6th of October, 1854.

BREVET.

To be COLONELS in the Army.
Lieutenant-Colonels:—
 Edward Rowley Hill, 1st West India Regiment
 George Wm. Key, 15th Light Dragoons
 Fred. Geo. Shewell, 8th Light Dragoons
 Edward Pole, 12th Light Dragoons
 Arthur Shirley, half-pay, Unattached
 Fred. Holt Robe, C.B., Deputy Quartermaster-General, Mauritius
 Robert Walpole, Deputy Quartermaster-General, Ionian Islands
 Arthur Johnstone Lawrence, Rifle Brigade
 Hon. George Cadogan, Grenadier Guards
 John Henegave Grubbe, 66th Foot
 William Blackburn, half-pay, 69th Foot
 Francis Skelly, 37th Foot
 Charles P. Ansell, 7th Dragoon Guards
 Henry Daniell, Coldstream Guards
 Freeman Murray, half-pay, 63rd Foot
 Hon. Alexander Nelson Hood, half-pay, 13th Foot
 David Russell, 84th Foot
 Richard William Hucy, 1st Foot
 Horatio Shirley, 88th Foot
 William Samuel Newton, Coldstream Guards
 Robert Hughes, 1st West India Regiment
 Henry George Conroy, Grenadier Guards
 Nicholas R. Brown, 31th Foot
 Hugh Andrew Robert Mitchell, Grenadier Guards
 E. C. Miles Milman, 7th Foot
 Spencer Percival, Coldstream Guards
 Edward Gomburn, Grenadier Guards
 Henry Cooper, 15th Foot
 Randal Rumley, Depot Battalion at Parkhurst
 William Sutton, Cape Mounted Riflemen
 Hon. G. C. Weld Forester, Royal Horse Guards
 Edward C. Hodge, 4th Dragoon Guards
 Frederick Rodolph Blake, 33rd Foot
 C. Cooke Yarborough, C.B., 91st Foot
 William Henry Charles Wesley, 10th Foot
 The commissions to bear date the 28th of November, 1854.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

BREVET.

To be GENERALS in the Army.
 Lieut.-Gen. Sir Hew Dalrymple Ross, K.C.B.
 Sir Robert William Gardiner, K.C.B., &c., &c.

John Thomas Griffiths, 25th Foot
 Robert Alexander Andrews, 30th Foot
 Tenot Bender, 82nd Foot
 William Atkin, Canadian Rifles
 Abraham Spilaine, 81st Foot
 James Ward, 81st Foot
 John Numan, 54th Foot
 Angus William Mackay, 21st Foot
 John Bolton, 75th Foot
 William Barnes, 17th Foot
 Daniel Riley, 24th Foot
 Henry Alexander Kerr, 1st Foot
 William Beales, Staff Officer of Pensioners
 William Newhouse, 5th Foot
 Henry Francis Stokes, 39th Foot
 Charles Irvine, 35th Foot
 John Gage Lecky, 38th Foot
 Frederick Tudor, 35th Foot
 George Adams Barnes, St. Helena Regiment

To be LIEUTENANT-GENERALS in the Army.

Major-General:
 Frederick Campbell
 George Turner, C.B.
 Peter Marjorison Wallace
 Richard Jones
 John Mitchell, C.R.

To be MAJOR-GENERALS in the Army.

Colonel:
 Adam Fife Crawford
 William Rolhen Douglas, C.B.
 Henry William Gordon

To be COLONELS in the Army.

Lieutenant-Colonels:—
 William Batis Ingilby
 Thomas Orlando Cater
 Henry Pester
 Robert William Story, Retired List
 William Fenwick Williams, C.B.
 Archibald Macbean, Retired List
 George Jamies, Retired List
 Henry Falliser
 Robert Longmore Garstin, Retired List
 John Alexander Wilson
 Richard Goodwin Bowen Wilson
 Burke Cuppage
 Robert Burn
 Richard Beaumont Burnaby, Retired List
 Thomas Arscott Lethbridge, Retired List
 Daniel Thorndike
 Harry Stow, Retired List
 William Fraser
 Charles Costling
 Charles Henry Mee, Retired List
 Theophilus Drabinsky, Retired List
 Charles Bertie Symonds
 William Wallace d'Arcy, Retired List
 Edmund Neal Wilford
 John Tylden, Retired List
 William Henry Pickering

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

To be COLONELS in the Army.

Lieutenant-Colonels:—
 Charles Wright
 Francis Ringler Thomson
 Charles Ogilvie Streetfield
 Joseph Ellison Portlock
 Henry Sandham
 Frederick Henry Baddeley

The commissions to bear date the 28th of November, 1854.

The following promotions are to take place consequent upon the decease of the following officers, viz:—
 General Sir Gordon Drummond, G.C.B., died 10th October, 1854.
 Lieutenant-General J. F. Ewart, C.B., died 23rd October, 1854.
 Major-General Charles Middleton, died 22nd October, 1854.

BREVET.

Colonel Frederick Maricham, C.B., 33rd Foot, Adjutant-General in the East Indies, to be Major-General.
 Lieutenant-Colonel John Charles Hope Gibson, Cavalry Depot at Newbridge, to be Colonel in the Army.

Major Rodolph de Sais, 8th Light Dragoons, to be Lieutenant-Colonel in the Army.

Captain James Speedy, 8th Regiment of Foot, to be Major in the Army.

The commissions to bear date, 28th November, 1854.
 2nd Regiment of Dragoons—Francis Beaumont Maconochie, gent., to be Cornet, without purchase.
 23rd Regiment of Foot—Ensign John Lawrence, from the Royal Moumouth Militia, to be Ensign, without purchase.

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 24.

The following promotions have this day taken place, consequent on the death, on the 31st of August last, of Rear-Admiral of the White David Price:—

Rear-Admiral of the Blue George Frederick Richt to be Rear-Admiral of the White.

Captain George William Conway Courtenay to be Rear-Admiral of the Blue.

COMMISSIONS SIGNED BY LORDS-LIEUTENANT.

Queen's Own Regiment of Yeomanry Cavalry—Charles Joseph Theophilus Hambro, gent., to be Cornet, vice Parke, promoted.
 1st or Royal East Middlesex Regiment of Militia—Matthew Copplestone, gent., to be Ensign, vice Crowe, resigned.

2nd or Edmonton Royal Rifle Regiment of Middlesex Militia—Charles Rivers Wilson, gent., to be Ensign.

4th or Royal South Middlesex Regiment of Militia—Bathurst Charles Baynton, gent., late Royal Sussex Light Infantry Militia, to be Ensign; Nelson Hooper, gent., to be Ensign.

5th or Royal Elthorne Light Infantry Regiment of Middlesex Militia—Ensign Edward Benbow to be Lieutenant, vice Townsend, resigned; George Lane, gent., to be Ensign, vice Benbow, promoted.

Hampshire Regiment of Militia Artillery—Second Lieutenant Albert Newby Clay to be First Lieutenant, vice Morgan; Second Lieutenant Richard Clay to be First Lieutenant, vice Goble.

2nd Regiment of Devon Militia—William Humphrey Staddy to be Ensign; Charles Augustus Coles to be Captain; Richard Halliday Archer to be Lieutenant.

1st Regiment of King's Own Staffordshire Militia—John Ley Hichens, gent., to be Surgeon, vice Woolhouse, resigned.

1st Regiment of Warwickshire Militia—William Horatio Harfield, gent., to be Lieutenant.

Dumfriesshire, Roxburghshire, and Selkirkshire Militia—James Beudall, Jun., Esq., to be Ensign; Andrew Mercer Adam, Esq., to be Assistant-Surgeon.

Memorandum—City of Edinburgh Artillery Regiment of Militia—The second Christian name of Lieutenant Hughes, is "Jones," not "John," as previously stated.

DOWNING-STREET, Nov. 27.

The Queen has been pleased to constitute the Island of Mauritius, and its dependencies to be a Bishop's See and Diocese, to be called the "Bishopric of Mauritius," and to appoint the Rev. Vincent William Ryan, D.D., to be ordained and consecrated Bishop of the said See.

BANKRUPTCY ANNULLED.

Thomas Houghton, Manchester, ironmonger.

BANKRUPTS.

Richard Waistell, Noble-street, warehouseman—Henry Markinfeld Adley, Old Road-street, bookseller—George Day, Providence-buildings, New Kent-road, builder—William Peacecock, Budge-row, wholesale clothier—James Scott, Trinity-square, Tower-hill, ship chandler—John Tallock Fisher, Plaistow, Essex, auctioneer—James Johnson, Wimbledon, Surrey, builder—George Parry, Jun., Willenhall, Staffordshire, ironmonger—Joseph Partridge, Tipton, corn factor—Henry Samuel Parker, Birmingham, licensed victualler—Joseph Feeny, Birkenhead, eating-house keeper—Alexander Hilbery, Liverpool, ale merchant—John Foden, Liverpool, grocer—Wright Bentley, Oldham, ironfounder—John Entwistle, Carlisle, builder.

FRIDAY, Dec. 1.

WAR-OFFICE, Dec. 1.

2nd Regiment of Foot—Captain Demetrius Wynnham Grevis James to be Major, without purchase; Lieutenant James Harwood Rocks to be Captain, without purchase.

18th Foot—Brevet Major John Clark Kennedy to be Major, without purchase; Lieutenant Henry Allam Ward to be Captain, without purchase; Ensign John Richard Wolsey to be Lieutenant, without purchase.

51st Foot—Captain William H. H. Anderson to be Major, without purchase; Lieutenant John George Doh Marshall to be Captain, without purchase; Ensign Percy Mitford to be Lieutenant, without purchase.

34th Foot—Lieutenant William F. Freeman O'Brien to be Captain, without purchase; Ensign Henry John Fane to be Lieutenant, without purchase.

60th Foot—Lieutenant Charles Perrin to be Captain, without purchase; Ensign Charles James Thornton Duesbury to be Lieutenant, without purchase.

88th Foot—Lieutenant Charles Ughtred Shuttleworth to be Captain, without purchase; Ensign Edward Richard Fox Vicars to be Lieutenant, without purchase.

72nd Foot—Lieut. T. Charles Hardinge Best to be Captain, without purchase; Ensign Edward James Upton to be Lieutenant, without purchase.

79th Foot—Lieutenant William Scott to be Captain, without purchase; Ensign Donald McDonald to be Lieutenant, without purchase.

80th Foot—Lieutenant Frederick Miller to be Captain, without purchase; Ensign Henry Hungerford St. Leger to be Lieutenant, without purchase.

81st Foot—Lieutenant Frederick Sidney de Vyre Lane to be Captain, without purchase; Ensign Henry Ridout Floyd to be Lieutenant, without purchase.

3rd West India Regiment—Lieutenant Henry Charles Watson to be Captain, without purchase; Ensign Edward Armstrong to be Lieutenant, without purchase.

BREVET.

Brevet Lieutenant-Colonels to be Colonels in the Army—Oliver Robinson, retired full-pay, 2nd Foot; Augustus Thomas Rire, retired full-pay, 51st Foot; Francis Wigston, retired full-pay, 18th Foot; William Henry Gillman, retired full-pay, 6th Foot; Isaac Foster, retired full-pay, 3rd West India Regiment, Dec. 1st.

Brevet Majors to be Lieutenant-Colonels in the Army—George Gratian Hisee, retired full-pay, 60th Foot; Hugh Thomas Bowen, retired full-pay, 72nd Foot, Dec. 1st.

Captains to be Majors in the Army—Laurel Edward Wood, retired full-pay, 51th Foot; John Oldright, retired full-pay, 81st Foot; Charles Duperier, retired full-pay, 80th Foot; Henry Mackay, retired full-pay, 79th Foot; Dec. 1.

WAR-OFFICE, Dec. 1.

1st Regiment of Life Guards—Lieutenant Henry Viscount Elnley to be Captain, by purchase; Cornet and Sub-Lieutenant Frederick Doreen Magnus to be Lieutenant, by purchase; Merwyn Wingfield Viscount Pourscourt to be Cornet and Sub-Lieutenant, by purchase.

2nd Life Guards—Veterinary-Surgeon John Ligrow, from the Staff in Turkey, to be Veterinary-Surgeon.

3rd Light Dragoons—Lieutenant James Macnean, from half-pay 15th Light Dragoons, to be Paymaster.

1th Light Dragoons—Brevet-Major Alexander Low to be Major, without purchase; Lieutenant Harry Smith Allington to be Captain, without purchase; Cornet Finnes Wykeham Martin to be Lieutenant, without purchase; Cornet Charles Augustus Gunter Brown to be Lieutenant, without purchase.

8th Light Dragoons—Lieutenant and Adjutant Richard Swager to be Captain, without purchase; Cornet Riverdale Richard Glynn to be Lieutenant, without purchase; Regimental-Sergeant-Major Robert Harding to be Cornet, without purchase; Cornet Robert Harding to be Adjutant.

9th Light Dragoons—Cornet William Craycroft Gordon to be Lieutenant, by purchase.

13th Light Dragoons—Lieutenant Percy Shane Smith to be Captain, without purchase; Cornet Fitzroy Donald Maclean to be Lieutenant, without purchase.

14th Light Dragoons—Lieutenant and Adjutant Henry Elmhorst Rymer to be Captain, by purchase; Cornet Edward Orlando V. Haldane to be Lieutenant, by purchase; William Henry Slingsby Branish, Gent., to be Cornet, by purchase; Lieutenant Henry Topham Clements to be Adjutant.

17th Light Dragoons—Lieutenant Sir William Gordon, Bart., to be Captain, without purchase; Cornet and Adjutant John Chudwick to have the rank of Lieutenant; Cornet Sir George Hector Leith, Bart., to be Lieutenant, without purchase; Cornet George Orby Wainwright to be Lieutenant, without purchase; George Hrbithway Luton Boynton, Gent., to be Cornet, without purchase; William Dray Nathaniel Love, Gent., to be Cornet, without purchase.

Grenadier Regiment of Foot Guards—Lieutenant and Captain Henry Edward Montessor to be Captain and Lieutenant-Colonel, without purchase.

To be Lieutenants and Captains without purchase—Ensign and Lieutenant Alexander Viscount Balgony; Ensign and Lieutenant Charles Napier Sturt; Ensign and Lieutenant Sir James Ferguson, Bart.

To be Ensign and Lieutenant without purchase—William Lewis Sturley Buck, Gent.

Coldstream Regiment of Foot Guards—To be Captains and Lieutenant-Colonels without purchase—Lieutenant and Captain William Gregory Dawkins, Lieutenant and Captain Clement William Strong.

To be Lieutenant and Captain without purchase—Ensign and Lieutenant Arthur James Fremantle.

9th Foot—Acting Assistant-Surgeon James Crosse Johnston, to be Assistant-Surgeon.

14th Foot—Acting Assistant-Surgeon John Martin Hyde to be Assistant-Surgeon.

26th Foot—Morris Robinson, Gent., to be Ensign, without purchase.

30th Foot—Lieutenant John O'Brien to be Captain, without purchase; Ensign John Penneck Campbell to be Lieutenant, without purchase; Ensign Alfred John Austin to be Lieutenant, without purchase.

34th Foot—Acting Assistant Surgeon Edward Mison Wrench to be Assistant Surgeon.

39th Foot—Acting Assistant Surgeon George Whitefield Sparkle to be Assistant Surgeon.

10th Foot—Acting Assistant Surgeon Richard Willcocks Macanlay to be Assistant Surgeon.

49th Foot—Brevet-Major John Thornton Grant to be Major, without purchase. Captain William Henry Clinton Habbieley to be Major, without purchase.

To be Captains without purchase—Lieut. John Mason; Lieut. James William Dewar.

To be Lieutenants without purchase—Ensign Charles Fitz-Gerald; Ensign George Kemp Chastell.

To be Ensign without purchase—Henry Gordon Rogers, Gent.

54th Foot—Lieut. Henry Elliott Bayly to be Captain, by purchase; Ensign Dillon Beetham to be Lieutenant, by purchase; Joseph William Hughes, Gent., to be Ensign, by purchase.

62nd Foot—Acting Assistant-Surgeon Sydney Alder to be Assistant-Surgeon.

68th Foot—Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel George Macbrath to be Major, without purchase; Lieutenant John Cassidy to be Captain, without purchase; Ensign Aubrey Harvey Tucker to be Lieutenant, without purchase; Ensign James Marshall to be Lieutenant, without purchase.

72nd Foot—Major Richard Palmer Sharp to be Lieutenant-Colonel, by purchase; Captain William Purke to be Major, by purchase.

To be Captains by purchase—Lieutenant Cecil Price; Lieutenant Richard Drumstoun Buchanan.

77th Foot—To be Lieutenants without purchase—Ensign Charles Ernst Knight; Ensign Edward Morton Long.

To be Ensigns without purchase—Arthur Charles Croker, Gent.; Hubert Frederic Lewis Browne, Gent.

82nd Foot—Lieutenant Robert Maulo to be Adjutant; Acting Assistant-Surgeon Frederick George Poulton to be Assistant-Surgeon.

90th Foot—Ensign Robert Henry Evans to be Lieutenant, by purchase.

Rifle Brigade—Lieutenant Michael William Lade Coast, from the 94th Foot, to be Paymaster.

Gold Coast Corps—Ensign George Clarke to be Lieutenant, without purchase; James Trevor White Andrews, Gent., to be Ensign, without purchase.

Staff—Major-General George Augustus Wetherall, C.B., to be Adjutant-General to the Forces, vice Major-General the Honourable Sir George Cathcart, K.C.B., deceased; Major-General James Simpson, from the South West District, to be Deputy Adjutant-General to the Forces, vice Wetherall; Captain Robert Abraham Logan, of the 57th Foot, to be Assistant-Adjutant of a Depot Battalion; Veterinary Surgeon Alfred Henry Cherry, from the 7th Dragoon Guards, to be Veterinary Surgeon on the Staff of the Army serving under the command of Field-Marshal Lord Raglan, vice Legree, appointed to the 2nd Life Guards; Dec. 1st.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE, Nov. 29.

Royal Regiment of Artillery—First Lieutenant William Dalrymple

the Duke of Rutland, the Earl of Hardwicke, Earl Spencer, the Earl of Leicester, Earl Radnor, Earl Fitzwilliam, and Sir J. V. Shelley, M.P. The actual amount of prizes to be awarded by the club, exclusive of the gold and silver medals, distributed for those animals which exhibit more than ordinary merit, is £680. The judges are enjoined, in making their awards, to keep strictly in view the object for which the Smithfield Club was originally instituted, viz. "The supply of the cattle markets of Smithfield and other places, with the cheapest and best meat." The show of implements will be twice as large as that of last year, whilst the entries of live stock amount to nearly one-third more. The whole of the latter specimens must be in the show-yard before ten o'clock on Saturday night. The judges will make their awards on Monday, and the private view will take place on Monday evening. There are vast improvements in every part of the spacious building, and especially as regards its ventilation.

MONUMENT TO WORDSWORTH.—A statue of white marble, from the chisel of Mr. Thrupp, has just been erected in Westminster Abbey, to perpetuate the memory of Wordsworth. It represents the poet sitting in the open air, in a contemplative mood. He is resting on a moss-covered knoll, with the green sward at his feet variegated with flowers; the legs are crossed; his right hand and arm are round one knee; the left hand, with the fore finger slightly uplifted, is laid upon an open book, which the poet has just been reading; the eyes are bent. The statue has been placed in a niche of the Baptistry, immediately on the right on entering by the great western door.

GOOD MATERIAL WASTE.—On Wednesday night, at the usual meeting of the Society of Arts, W. Hawes, Esq., in the chair, a paper was read by Mr. P. L. Simmonds, "On Undeveloped and Unappreciated Articles of Raw Produce from different parts of the World," comprising notices of the various productions of the earth, the seas, the tenants of the air, and the insect tribe. Referring to cotton, hemp, and paper, the author said that we last year received from Russia no less than 41,819 tons of hemp, and 64,000 tons of flax, the whole or a greater part of which could, he believed, with attention and enterprise, be obtained from Ireland, Canada, India, and other foreign possessions, while the cotton obtained from America we had every facility of soil and climate for producing in our own dependencies of Africa and Australia. Good paper also might be manufactured from kelp, plant of Ceylon (Zansieria Zeylanica), the Muddar (Calotropis gigantea), the Ceylon sack tree, the Picus pappifera (used by the Kandians), and from the Guidia cricocephala. Professor Owen, Messrs. Farley, Wilson, Sharpe, Bennock, Rowbotham, Stuart, and others, expressed their gratification at the paper read, and offered some remarks upon the various subjects mentioned in it, after which thanks were voted to the author.

THE STAMP LAW.—A variety of communications continue to be received regarding the new Stamp Act, for which space cannot be afforded, but the subjoined correspondence refers to points of importance to all employers engaged in manufactures of trade:—

"10, St. Mary-axe, Leadenhall-street, Nov. 27.

"Sir,—Might I request your answer to the following questions relating to the new Stamp Act?

"1. My smith's account is kept in two books—one for him, one for me. On this latter he gives me each week a receipt for money paid him.

"2. My foreman carpenter, who works solely by contract for me on my premises, enters also in a book all the work done and sums paid him.

"Can, in either case, the penny stamp be dispensed with, or does the Act make the use of it obligatory?

"Thanking you beforehand for the favour of a reply, I beg to subscribe myself,

"Your obedient servant,

"AUBIN CHAPPELIS.

"Thomas Keogh, Esq., Inland Revenue, Somerset-house."

"Inland Revenue, Somerset-house, London, Nov. 29.

"Sir,—The Board having had before them your letter of the 27th inst., I am directed to acquaint you that they are of opinion that receipt stamps are required in both cases therein submitted."

"I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

"THOMAS KEOGH.

"Mr. Aubin Chappuis."

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

FRANCE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Paris, Thursday, Nov. 30.

Lord Palmerston—The Review: Popularity of the English.—The Losses at Inkerman.—English and French Soldiers.—Mr. Perry and his Eldorado "in prospect."—The late Charles Kemble.—The writers of Levisac's Grammar.—M. de Loëne Weimars.—Robbery of a Theatrical Critic.—An old Proverb proved False.—A Word for Despotism.

THE visit, or mission, of Lord Palmerston to Paris—for it is absurd to suppose that in the daily long interviews which take place between his Majesty and the English minister, politics are eschewed, as at a charity dinner—will, it is considered positive, lead to a closer and satisfactory alliance between the two nations. Without attempting to describe the nature of the understanding come to—of which accounts are given, with amusing precision, by the myriads of "know-nothings," who run about this city with news—there is no doubt that arrangements have been concluded for the prosecution of the war, with the precise nature of the mode in which each country is to contribute its assistance—in broad terms, money on one side, and soldiers on the other; England, deficient in troops, to pay for the increase of the army which the war imposes on France.

Lord and Lady Palmerston were, with the Emperor and Empress, at the balcony of the Tuileries on Monday, when the Imperial Guard filed off before their Majesties. His lordship wears well, and looked as observant and animated as he did a quarter of a century ago. He was, of course, the "observed of all observers;" for, since the days of Canning, no Englishman has occupied so large a share of attention in France as Lord Palmerston, where, en passant, his name was not always so popular as it is at present. Among the military who accompanied the Emperor at the review, was an officer of the Guards,—name unfortunately unknown. A finer representative of the English army it would be impossible to behold; his large stature, gallant courser, brilliant uniform, and noble appearance, won universal compliments, particularly among the ladies, who were loud in their praise of "le magnifique soldat Anglais." After the review, he rode down the Rue de la Paix, towards his hotel, and was met at every step by marks of popularity which, a very few years ago, would have been set down as an impossibility for an English soldier to elicit.

The last week has been not only dull, but sad in Paris. The melancholy, though glorious news from Sebastopol, notwithstanding the telegraph had forwarded accounts of the great loss of life, yet when fully known it fell upon the public here with a shock of surprise, and many scenes of sadness and lamentation have taken place among the English residents. The wives of many of the officers on service came over here, on the departure of their husbands, with a view of being some few hundred miles nearer to them, in case they might, perchance, be allowed to rejoin them in the East. Galvani had been crowded for days previous with sad and eager inquirers, among them being several ladies, for the lists of killed and wounded. In one instance, it is stated, that a lady, whose son is high in the service, was so agitated on at length receiving the paper containing the list of casualties, that, unable to open the paper, she experienced a succession of nervous attacks, from which she did not recover for some hours, and was conveyed to her hotel in a state of insensibility. It was afterwards satisfactory to learn that the object of so much deep solicitude was not in the dreaded list, being one of the few who escaped wholly unscathed in the bloody conflicts of the day.

If any further proof were required of the genuine military spirit of the French, it would be found in the eagerness now evinced by every regiment in the service to be allowed to join the reinforcements now dispatching to the East. One would imagine that the terrible details of the late battle, the inclemency of the weather, and the harassing fatigues of a winter campaign, would cause some little hesitation; but no—the toil, danger, hardships to be encountered weigh as nothing against the glory of distinguishing themselves against the enemy, and perchance winning the cross of the Legion of Honour. Not only do the privates thus press forward by hundreds, but the War Office is inundated with letters from officers to the same effect; and the cadre of non-commissioned officers being complete, corporals and sergeants have actually laid down their rank in order to be allowed to join as common soldiers. Honour to France! This is indeed the stuff of which fine armies are created. Still, the French themselves acknowledge, that once in presence of the enemy, and in a crisis, no man on earth equals the English soldier. If victory smile upon them, Frenchmen will march, run, climb, and overcome obstacles which probably no other soldier of any nation could do; but set him unsupported, an enemy seven to one against him, and he would never stand his ground like the gallant band of English in the battle of Inkerman on the 5th. The French are brave and noble soldiers; but no other troops in the world would fight for four hours as the English engaged in that fatal, but glorious day. A French officer of high reputation, after reading the description of the battle (translated, by the way, from the London papers), declared publicly, that such a feat of arms against such an enemy, was without a parallel in the military annals of Europe. Put these together—the chivalrous enthusiasm of the one, and the unflinching firmness of the other, and you have a whole which may bid defiance to the world in arms. But this all-absorbing subject is running away with my pen, let us descend—"pauvre minor canemus."

Taking of descents, the strange exposé, with the adventures and escapes of Mr. Perry, late of the 46th, have created much amusement in Paris; and remarks rather the reverse of complimentary to the absolute wisdom of that "fortunate" youth. His discovery of the American Eldorado, which is to give him £50,000 before the end of the year, his "disinterested friend," with his carriage and private hotel, as related in the London papers, was a complete surprise, and certainly give an impression of simplicity on the part of the ex-penitent, not far removed from lunacy. The idea here is, that he is, indeed, as he describes himself, "a most fortunate man;" chiefly, however, in finding a friend, like Mr. Bessborough, to protect him against the effects of his own egregious folly; and to save the little property contributed for him by the public, from the ruin which must inevitably have followed his insane speculation.

The death of Charles Kemble was received here with regret, not confined to his countrymen, for he was for many years in the habit of spending his summer vacations in Paris, where being, independent of the celebrity of his name, well known to the élite of society, he enjoyed himself very much, and used to say he came here to learn the art of growing young. He was a perfect French scholar—having been brought up at the Jesuits' College at Douai, but never spoke with a good accent, although a perfect master of the language, a circumstance proved by a fact, not so well known in England as here, and which merits mention, in justice to his kindly nature, and also that of his brother John, the great tragedian—he who bore to the stage

"The courtier's scholar's, hero's, poet's mind."

Within the nobles' form of man enshrined."

The well-known grammar of Levisac, so familiar to English learners, and one of the best, or, at least, the most intelligible that was ever published, was, as is known, nearly all written by the two brothers. M. Levisac, who had been their tutor, died while the work was in progress, leaving his widow in great distress. On learning this, the two brothers undertook to complete it, set to work, finished, and prepared it for the press. The sale was great, and they had the satisfaction of having made a handsome competence for their friend's widow. The fact was not publicly mentioned in London, as it might have injured the sale, but it was well-known in Paris, where this act of genuine disinterested kindness, always mentioned with gratitude by the friends of the deceased M. Levisac, won them both golden opinions; but the frank gaiety and pleasant manner of Charles rendered him much the favourite in society until that most social of human maladies, extreme deafness, rendered him almost a recluse in the midst of company. He was a good comedian, sometimes most admirable—in Benedict, Mirabel, &c., his acting was if he had never lived on anything but champagne. These displays were unfortunately rather the exception than the rule; but he was always easy and gentlemanlike, and made a few characters completely his own. His Cassio was inimitable, but his high tragedy was execrable; and yet, strange to say, he read and felt poetry better than all his greater contemporaries—

Κίρρα εν ερίφνι

Fiorentino, the rather well-known theatrical critic of the Constitutionnel and, under a borrowed name, of the official Moniteur, has had the misfortune this week to have his apartment broken open and stripped of its most valuable effects by robbers.—"Thus," remarked a noted Parisian wag, "giving the lie to the old and time-honoured proverb, Les loupes ne se mangent pas entre eux;"—vulgo, "Wolves don't feed upon each other."

M. de Loëne Weimars, whom the obituary terms an "ancien diplomate," died in Paris a few days ago. Though he filled some diplomatic functions towards the close of his career, M. de Loëne Weimars, like the late Mr. Southern, was essentially a man of letters. He wrote in many influential little papers under the restoration, and afterwards in the "Revue de Paris." Some remarkable political papers in the "Revue des Deux Mondes" brought him under the notice of M. Thiers, who nominated him to be consul at Bagdad. Subsequent administrations, pleased with the tact displayed by the new diplomat, employed him in other capacities, and at his death M. de Loëne Weimars was at the head of a fortune of nearly a million of francs. His haughty overbearing temper made him many enemies. In early life he fought a duel with M. Cane, also a well-known personage, in which, however, only the hat of one of the seconds sustained any damage, that useful habilliment having been shot through.

Fortune has some extraordinary freaks. A private in the Sappers and Miners, in garrison at Lyons, now undergoing his imprisonment for some serious breach of military discipline, has most unexpectedly come into a fortune of 3,500,000 francs (£140,000). Almost at the same moment a literary man, once possessed of a certain reputation, M. E., committed suicide to avoid the tortures of a lingering death by starvation.

One little fact in conclusion, to show the rapidity with which building is carried on in Paris. Your bridge at Westminster will probably not be replaced for years. Three months ago the suspension-bridge near the Invalides, over the Seine, was deemed unsafe. The next day a swarm of workmen were occupied upon it, and the river could only be crossed at that point in a ferry. As I write, all vestige of the pont suspendu has long disappeared, and a handsome stone bridge is being completed, and about to be thrown open to the public. Really, these things make one almost like despotism. But, then, to catch a decent one—"Aye! there's the rub."

FROM PARIS WE LEARN that a decree in the Moniteur convokes the Senate and the Legislative Body for the 26th of December.

BY ADVICES DATED THE HAGUE, NOV. 28, it appears that the Second Chamber objects to the Budget. Under the head of Foreign Affairs, a demand was made for a reduction in the expenses of the diplomacy of the country, but the motion was rejected. The question relating to the debt of the former Kingdom of the Netherlands is likely to be settled.

A TELEGRAPHIC DESPATCH FROM MADRID of the 28th announces that Marshal Espartero had been named President of the Cortes, and General O'Donnell First Vice-President.

LETTERS FROM ODESSA of the 15th, state that the rains had rendered travelling in the south of Russia so difficult, that the couriers who not long since performed the journey from Sebastopol to Moscow in five days now consume eight or nine on the road. It is thought that St. Petersburg will cease for a time to be the source of the earliest news from the Crimea. The same letters speak of the difficulties which, from the same cause, impede the march of the few Russian troops still on their way to the Crimea.

A CONSTANTINOPLE LETTER of Nov. 15th, in the Presse of Vienna, accuses the Russians of having crucified an English wounded officer.

DUCHY OF TUSCANY.—Official notice has been given that travellers leaving Paris for the Grand Duchy of Tuscany must have on their passports the visa of the Tuscan Legation.

COLONIAL.

THE "ENTENTE CORDIALE" AT GEELONG.—A French phalanx marched in the procession of the inhabitants of Geelong, when, on the 15th of August last, they went out to meet Sir Charles Hotham, the new Lieutenant-Governor of Victoria. M. Præschel, a leading French resident, in an address issued a few days before the event, had requested the attendance of his compatriots in order that the French flag "may on this occasion float by the side of the British banner, as it does at this moment in other lands, and thus, in good and sincere friendship, unite in saluting the representative of her Majesty the Queen of Great Britain."

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

Tuesday, Nov. 28.

THE BREVET.

WAR OFFICE, Nov. 28.

The undermentioned officers, who were placed upon retired full pay previously to her Majesty's Royal warrant of the 6th of October, 1854, to be each promoted to a step of Brevet rank, in order to place them in as favourable a position as those who may prospectively obtain retirement under the provisions of the said warrant, the rank in both cases being only honorary:—

BREVET.

To be COLONELS in the Army.

Lieutenant-Colonels.

Henry Le Blanc, 5th Royal Viceron Battalion	Philip Dundas, 47th Foot
James Lewes Basden, C.B. 89th Foot	Richard Willington, 84th Foot
William Sall, Royal Newfoundland Companies	Richard Westmore, 33rd Foot
Robert Terry, 31st Foot	Robert Pattison, 13th Foot
James W. Fairclough, 63rd Foot	John Poole, C.B., 22nd Foot
Henry C. Streetfield, 87th Foot	Edward James White, 70th Foot
Henry Senior, 65th Foot	Robert Hunt, 49th Foot
Charles Hughes, 24th Foot	Edward William Bray, C.B., 30th Foot
Joseph Kelsall, 70th Foot	Armand Temmar, 35th Foot
William Blois, 52nd Foot	Robert Luxmoore, 16th Foot
Edward T. Ironson, 13th Foot	Nicholas Palmer, 56th Foot
John Singleton, 30th Foot	Joseph Swinburne, 83rd Foot
Joseph Mark Harly, 33rd Foot	Daniel Fraser, 42nd Foot
Eyre John Crabbe, 71th Foot	Charles Highmore Potts, 19th Foot
William Barney, Cape Corps	Henry Edmund de Burgh Sidley, 50th Foot
Gerald Rochford, 3rd Foot	Heider Mendis, 2nd West India Regiment

To be LIEUTENANT-COLONELS in the Army.

Majors.

George Esdaile Eliington, 6th Royal Veteran Battalion	Ewan McPherson, 99th Foot
William Milne, 2nd Royal Veteran Battalion	William Dempster, 41st Foot
John Field Oldham, 8th Royal Veteran Battalion	Charles Rayner Newman, 14th Foot
George Lovell Spilhoff, Royal Veteran Company	Charles O'Neill, 95th Foot
Edward Goss, 35th Foot	John Joseph Grier, 23rd Foot
Stephen Noel, 22nd Foot	Alexander Campbell, 35th Foot
George Pinckney, 82nd Foot	Henry Dixon, 81st Foot
Philip Aubin, 57th Foot	James Poyntz, 30th Foot
Samuel George Carter, 16th Foot	Charles Donald Campbell, 39th Foot
George Fitzgerald Stack, 21th Foot	Edward Kenny, 89th Foot
	John O'Grady, 17th Foot
	Anthony Robert L'Estrange, 71st Foot

Henry Clements, 16th Foot
 Peter John Willats, 48th Foot
 William Cox, 54th Foot
 Richard Handcock, 46th Foot
 Peter Sutherland, 72nd Foot
 John Romany, 6th Foot
 John Marshall, 91st Foot
 Richard Manners, 69th Foot
 James Thomas Moore, 87th Foot
 Ambrose Spang, 60th Foot
 John Clarke, 66th Foot
 Isaac Richards, 11th Foot
 Robert Browne, 16th Foot
 Richard Tatton, 77th Foot
 James Jackson, 57th Foot
 Alexander Sharrock, 29th Foot
 William Raban, 22nd Foot
 Thomas Hinton Hemmings, 78th Foot
 William Warburton, 67th Foot
 Martin Cren Lench, 14th Foot
 Edward Boyd, 29th Foot
 Joseph Smith, 14th Foot

To be MAJORS in the Army.

Captains:—

Sir William Wynd, Invalids
 Marcus Louis, 6th Veteran Battalion
 George St. John Gifford, 11th
 Veteran Battalion
 Leonard Kilham Willard, 11th
 Veteran Battalion
 Thomas Levett Metcalfe, 6th Veteran Battalion
 Archibald Macneil, 3rd Veteran
 Battalion
 William Mackay, 9th Veteran
 Battalion
 Judge Thomas d'Arcy, 4th Veteran Battalion
 Robert Gray, 6th Veteran Battalion
 Josiah George Hart, 12th Veteran
 Battalion
 William Kelly, 2nd Veteran Battalion
 Joseph Roche, 3rd Veteran Battalion
 Charles Kingsley, 9th Veteran
 Battalion
 Archibald Fullarton, 6th Veteran
 Battalion
 Richard Woods, 8th Veteran Battalion
 Daniel M'Pherson, 2nd Veteran
 Battalion
 Timothy Dillon, 2nd Veteran Battalion
 Alexander Skene, 4th Veteran
 Battalion
 The commissions to bear date the 28th of November, 1854.

NOVEMBER 28.

The undermentioned officers, having completed three years' actual service as Regimental Lieutenant-Colonels, or in other appointments equivalent to those situations, to be promoted to the rank of Colonel in the Army, in accordance with the provisions of her Majesty's Royal Warrant of the 6th of October, 1854.

BREVET.

To be COLONELS in the Army.

Lieutenant-Colonels:—

Edward Rowley Hill, 1st West
 India Regiment
 George Wm. Key, 15th Light
 Dragoons
 Fred. Geo. Shewell, 8th Light
 Dragoons
 Edward Pole, 12th Light Dragoons
 Arthur Shirley, half-pay, Unattached
 Fred. Holt Robe, C.B., Deputy Quartermaster-General, Mauritius
 Robert Walpole, Deputy Quartermaster-General, Ionian Islands
 Arthur Johnstone Lawrence, Rifle Brigade
 Hon. George Cadogan, Grenadier
 Guards
 John Henneage Grubbe, 66th Foot
 William Blackburn, half-pay, 69th
 Foot
 Francis Skelly, 37th Foot
 Charles P. Ainslie, 7th Dragoon
 Guards
 Henry Daniell, Coldstream Guards
 Freeman Murray, half-pay, 63rd
 Foot
 Hon. Alexander Nelson Hood, half-pay, 13th Foot
 David Russell, 84th Foot
 Richard William Huey, 1st Foot
 Horatio Shirley, 88th Foot
 William Samuel Newton, Coldstream Guards
 Robert Hughes, 1st West India
 Regiment
 Henry George Conroy, Grenadier
 Guards
 Nicholas R. Brown, 31th Foot
 Hugh Andrew Robert Mitchell,
 Grenadier Guards
 E. C. Miles Milman, 7th Foot
 Spencer Perceval, Coldstream
 Guards
 Edward Goulburn, Grenadier
 Guards
 Henry Cooper, 15th Foot
 Randal Runley, Depot Battalion at Parkhurst
 William Sutton, Cape Mounted
 Riflemen
 Hon. G. C. Weld Foster, Royal
 Horse Guards
 Edward C. Hodge, 4th Dragoon
 Guards
 Frederick Ralph Blake, 33rd
 Foot
 C. Cooke Yarborough, C.B., 91st
 Foot
 William Henry Charles Wellesley,
 10th Foot
 The commissions to bear date the 28th of November, 1854.

ROYAL ARTILLERY

BREVET.

To be GENERALS in the Army.

Lieut.-Gen. Sir Hew Dalrymple Ross, K.C.B.
 Sir Robert William Gardiner, K.C.B., F.R.S.

To be LIEUTENANT-GENERALS in the Army.

Major-Gen. Frederick Campbell

George Turner, C.B.
 Peter Margeson Wallace
 Richard Jones
 John Mitchell, C.B.

To be MAJOR-GENERALS in the Army.

Colonel Adam Fife Crawford

William Rudden Dundas, C.R.
 Henry William Gordon

To be COLONELS in the Army.

Lieutenant-Colonels:—

William Rates Ingilby
 Thomas Orlando Cater
 Henry Foster
 Robert William Story, Retired
 List
 William Fenwick Williams, C.B.
 Archibald Maclean, Retired List
 George James, Retired List
 Henry Faliser
 Robert Lougmore Garstin, Retired
 List
 John Alexander Wilson
 Richard Goodwin Bowen Wilson
 Burke Cuyper
 Robert Burn
 Richard Beaumont Burnaby, Retired List
 Thomas Arscott Lethbridge, Retired List
 Daniel Thorndike
 Harry Stow, Retired List
 William Fraser
 Charles Gostling
 Charles Henry Mee, Retired List
 Theophilus Desbriais, Retired List
 Charles Bertie Synnott
 William Wallace d'Arcy, Retired
 List
 Edmund Neal Wilford
 John Tylden, Retired List
 William Henry Fiecklering

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

To be COLONELS in the Army.

Lieutenant-Colonels:—

Charles Wright
 Francis Ringler Thomson
 Charles Ogle Streetfield
 Joseph Ellison Portlock
 Henry Sandham
 Frederick Henry Baddeley
 The commissions to bear date the 25th of November, 1854.
 The following promotions are to take place consequent upon the decease of the following officers, viz:—
 General Sir Gordon Drummond, G.C.R., died 10th October, 1854.
 Lieutenant-General J. F. Ewart, C.B., died 23rd October, 1854.
 Major-General Charles Middleton, died 22nd October, 1854.

BREVET.

Colonel Frederick Markham, C.B., 32nd Foot, Adjutant-General in the East Indies, to be Major-General.

Lieutenant-Colonel John Charles Hope Gibsons, Cavalry Depot at Newbridge, to be Colonel in the Army.

Major Rodolph de Salis, 8th Light Dragoons, to be Lieutenant-Colonel in the Army.

Captain James Speedy, 8th Regiment of Foot, to be Major in the Army.

The commissions to bear date, 28th November, 1854.

2nd Regiment of Dragoons—Francis Beaumont Maconochie, gent, to be Cornet, without purchase.

23rd Regiment of Foot—Ensign John Lawrence, from the Royal Newfoundland Militia, to be Ensign, without purchase.

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 24.

The following promotions have this day taken place, consequent on the death, on the 31st of August last, of Rear-Admiral of the White David Price:—

Rear-Admiral of the Blue George Frederick Rich to be Rear-Admiral of the White.

Captain George William Conway Courtenay to be Rear-Admiral of the Blue.

COMMISSIONS SIGNED BY LORDS-LIEUTENANT

Queen's Own Regiment of Yeomanry Cavalry—Charles Joseph
 Theophilus Hambro, gent., to be Cornet, vice Parke, promoted.

1st or Royal East Middlesex Regiment of Militia—Matthew Copplestone, gent., to be Ensign, vice Crose, resigned.

2nd or Edmonton Royal Rifle Regiment of Middlesex Militia—
 Charles Rivers Wilson, gent., to be Ensign.

4th or Royal South Middlesex Regiment of Militia—Rathurst Charles Baynton, gent., late Royal Sussex Light Infantry Militia, to be Ensign;
 Nelson Hooper, gent., to be Ensign.

5th or Royal Elthorne Light Infantry Regiment of Middlesex Militia—Ensign Edward Benbow to be Lieutenant, vice Townsend, resigned; George Lane, gent., to be Ensign, vice Benbow, promoted.

Hampshire Regiment of Militia Artillery—Second Lieutenant
 Albert Newby Clay to be First Lieutenant, vice Morgan; Second Lieutenant Richard Clay to be First Lieutenant, vice Goble.

2nd Regiment of Devon Militia—William Humphrey Studdy to be Ensign; Charles Augustus Coles to be Captain; Richard Halliday
 Archer to be Lieutenant.

1st Regiment of King's Own Staffordshire Militia—John Ley
 Hehens, gent., to be Surgeon, vice Woolhouse, resigned.

1st Regiment of Warwickshire Militia—William Horatio Harfield, gent., to be Lieutenant.

Dumfriesshire, Roxburghshire, and Selkirkshire Militia—James Bendall, jun., Esq., to be Ensign; Andrew Mercer Adam, Esq., to be Assistant-Surgeon.

Memorandum—City of Edinburgh Artillery Regiment of Militia—
 The second Christian name of Lieutenant Hughes, is "Jones," not
 "John," as previously stated.

DOWNING-STREET, Nov. 27.

The Queen has been pleased to constitute the Island of Mauritius, and its dependencies to be a Bishop's See and Diocese, to be called the "Bishopric of Mauritius," and to appoint the Rev. Vincent William Ryan, D.D., to be ordained and consecrated Bishop of the said See.

BANKRUPTCY ANNULLED.

Thomas Houghton, Manchester, ironmonger.

BANKRUPTS.

Richard Walstell, Noble-street, warehouseman—Henry Markfield
 Adley, Old Bond-street, bookseller—George Day, Providence-buildings, New Kent-road, builder—William Peacock, Budge-row, wholesale clothier—James Scott, Trinity-square, Tower-hill, ship chandler—John Tullock Fisher, Plaistow, Essex, auctioneer—James Johnson, Winchedon, surveyor, builder—George Parry, jun., Willenhall, Staffordshire, ironmonger—Joseph Partridge, Tipton, corn factor—Henry Samuel Parker, Birmingham, licensed victualler—Joseph Feeny, Birkenhead, eating-house keeper—Alexander Hilbard, Liverpool, ale merchant—
 John Foden, Liverpool, grocer—Wright Bentley, Oldham, ironfounder —John Entwistle, Carlisle, builder.

Friday, Dec. 1.

WAR-OFFICE, Dec. 1.

2nd Regiment of Foot—Captain Demetrius Wyndham Greis James to be Major, without purchase; Lieutenant James Harwood Rooke to be Captain, without purchase.

18th Foot—Brevet Major John Clark Kennedy to be Major, without purchase; Lieutenant Henry Allport Ward to be Captain, without purchase; Ensign John Richard Wolsey to be Lieutenant, without purchase.

51st Foot—Captain William H. H. Anderson to be Major, without purchase; Lieutenant John George Don Marshall to be Captain, without purchase; Ensign Percy Mitford to be Lieutenant, without purchase.

54th Foot—Lieutenant William E. Freeman O'Brien to be Captain, without purchase; Ensign Henry John Fane to be Lieutenant, without purchase.

60th Foot—Lieutenant Charles Perrin to be Captain, without purchase; Ensign Charles James Thornton Duesbury to be Lieutenant, without purchase.

68th Foot—Lieutenant Charles Lighted Shuttleworth to be Captain, without purchase; Ensign Edward Richard Fox Vicars to be Lieutenant, without purchase.

72nd Foot—Lieut. T. Charles Hardinge Best to be Captain, without purchase; Ensign Edward James Upton to be Lieutenant, without purchase.

79th Foot—Lieutenant William Scott to be Captain, without purchase; Ensign Donald M'Donald to be Lieutenant, without purchase.

80th Foot—Lieutenant Frederick Miller to be Captain, without purchase; Ensign Henry Hungerford St. Ledger to be Lieutenant, without purchase.

81st Foot—Lieutenant Frederick Sidney de Vere Lane to be Captain, without purchase; Ensign Henry Ridout Floyd to be Lieutenant, without purchase.

3rd West India Regiment—Lieutenant Henry Charles Watson to be Captain, without purchase; Ensign Edward Armstrong to be Lieutenant, without purchase.

BREVET.

Three Lieutenant-Colonels to be Colonels in the Army—Oliver Robison, retired full-pay, 2nd Foot; Augustus Thomas Rice, retired full-pay, 51st Foot; Francis Wigston, retired full-pay, 18th Foot; Wil-ham Henry Gillman, retired full-pay, 85th Foot; Isaac Foster, retired full-pay, 3rd West India Regiment; Dec. 1st.

Brevet Majors to be Lieutenant-Colonels in the Army—George Gratian Bircoe, retired full-pay, 66th Foot; Hugh Thomas Bowen, retired full-pay, 72nd Foot; Dec. 1st.

Captains to be Majors in the Army—Launcelet Edward Wood, retired full-pay, 5th Foot; John Oldright, retired full-pay, 81st Foot; Charles Dupreier, retired full pay, 80th Foot; Henry Mackay, retired full-pay, 79th Foot; Dec. 1.

WAR-OFFICE, Dec. 1.

1st Regiment of Life Guards—Lieutenant Henry Viscount Elnley to be Captain, by purchase; Cornet and Sub-Lieutenant Frederick Dorrien Magers to be Lieutenant, by purchase; Mervyn Wingfield Viscount Powerscourt to be Cornet and Sub-Lieutenant, by purchase.

2nd Life Guards—Veterinary-Surgeon John Legrew, from the Staff in Turkey, to be Veterinary-Surgeon.

3rd Light Dragoons—Lieutenant James Macquenn, from half-pay 15th Light Dragoons, to be Paymaster.

4th Light Dragoons—Brevet Major Alexander Low to be Major, without purchase; Lieutenant Harry Smith Adlington to be Captain, without purchase; Cornet Fleuries Wykeham Martin to be Lieutenant, without purchase; Cornet Charles Augustus Gunter Browne to be Lieutenant, without purchase.

8th Light Dragoons—Lieutenant and Adjutant Edward Seager to be Captain, without purchase; Cornet Riverdale Richard Glyn to be Lieutenant, without purchase; Regimental-Sergeant-Major Robert Harding to be Cornet, without purchase; Cornet Robert Harding to be Adjutant.

9th Light Dragoons—Cornet William Craycroft Gordon to be Lieutenant, by purchase.

13th Light Dragoons—Lieutenant Percy Shaw Smith to be Captain, without purchase; Cornet Fitzroy Donald Maclean to be Lieutenant,
 without purchase.

14th Light Dragoons—Lieutenant and Adjutant Henry Elmshurst Reader to be Captain, by purchase; Cornet Edward Orlando V. Hal-dans to be Lieutenant, by purchase; William Henry Slingby Heamish, Gent., to be Cornet, by purchase; Lieutenant Henry Poplam Clements to be Adjutant.

17th Light Dragoons—Lieutenant Sir William Gordon, Bart., to be Captain, without purchase; Cornet and Adjutant John Chadwick to have the rank of Lieutenant; Cornet Sir George Hector Leitch, Bart., to be Lieutenant, without purchase; Cornet George Orby Wombell to be Lieutenant, without purchase; George Hellethway Linton Baynton, Gent., to be Cornet, without purchase; William Drury Nathaniel Lowe, Gent., to be Cornet, without purchase.

Grenadier Regiment of Foot Guards—Lieutenant and Captain Henry Edward Montessor to be Captain and Lieutenant-Colonel, without purchase.

To be Lieutenants and Captains without purchase—Ensign and Lieutenant Alexander Viscount Balgoule; Ensign and Lieutenant
 Charles Napier Sturt; Ensign and Lieutenant Sir James Ferguson, Bart.

To be Ensign and Lieutenant without purchase—William Lewis
 Stanley Buck, Gent.

Coldstream Regiment of Foot Guards—To be Captains and Lieutenant-Colonels without purchase—Lieutenant and Captain William Gregory Dackins, Lieutenant and Captain Clement William Strong.

To be Lieutenant and Captain without purchase—Ensign and Lieutenant Arthur James Fremantle.

9th Foot—Acting Assistant-Surgeon James Crose Johnston, to be Assistant-Surgeon.

14th Foot—Acting Assistant-Surgeon John Martin Hyde to be Assistant-Surgeon.

26th Foot—Morris Robinson, Gent., to be Ensign, without purchase.

30th Foot—Lieutenant John O'Brien to be Captain, without purchase; Ensign John Pennock Campbell to be Lieutenant, without purchase; Ensign Alfred John Austin to be Lieutenant, without purchase.

34th Foot—Acting Assistant Surgeon Edward Mason Wrench to be Assistant Surgeon.

38th Foot—Acting Assistant Surgeon George Whitefield Sparke to be Assistant Surgeon.

10th Foot—Acting Assistant Surgeon Richard Wittebeck Macaulay to be Assistant Surgeon.

49th Foot—Brevet-Major John Thornton Grant to be Major, without purchase; Captain William Henry Clinton Baddeley to be Major,
 without purchase.

To be Captains without purchase—Lieut. John Mason; Lieut. James William Dewar.

To be Lieutenants without purchase—Ensign Charles Fitz-Gerald, Ensign George Kemp Chaffield.

To be Ensign without purchase—Henry Gordon Rogers, Gent.

61th Foot—Lieut. Henry Elliott Bayly to be Captain, by purchase; Ensign Dillon Beetham to be Lieutenant, by purchase; Joseph Wil-ham Hughes, Gent., to be Ensign, by purchase.

62nd Foot—Acting Assistant Surgeon Sydney Alder to be Assistant-Surgeon.

68th Foot—Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel George Macbeth to be Major, without purchase; Lieutenant John Cassidy to be Captain, without purchase; Ensign Aubrey Harley Tucker to be Lieutenant, without purchase; Ensign James Marshall to be Lieutenant, without purchase.

72nd Foot—Major Richard Palmer Sharp to be Lieutenant-Colonel, by purchase; Captain William Parko to be Major, by purchase.

To be Captains by purchase—Lieutenant Cecil Price; Lieutenant Richard Dennistown Buchanan.

77th Foot—To be Lieutenants without purchase—Ensign Charles Ernest Knight; Ensign Edward Morton Long.

To be Ensigns without purchase—Arthur Charles Croker, Gent.;
 Hubert Frederic Lewis Browne, Gent.

82nd Foot—Lieutenant Robert Maule to be Adjutant; Acting Assistant-Surgeon Frederick George Poulton to be Assistant-Surgeon.

90th Foot—Ensign Robert Henry Evans to be Lieutenant, by purchase.

Rifle Brigade—Lieutenant Michael William Lade Coast, from the 94th Foot, to be Paymaster.

Gold Coast Corps—Ensign George Clarke to be Lieutenant, without purchase; James Trevor White Andrews, Gent., to be Ensign, without purchase.

Staff—Major-General George Augustus Wetherall, C.B., to be Adjutant-General to the Forces, vice Major-General the Honourable Sir George Cathcart, K.C.B., deceased; Major-General James Simpson, from the South West District, to be Deputy Adjutant-General to the Forces, vice Wetherall; Captain Robert Abraham Logan, of the 57th Forces, to be Assistant-Adjutant of a Depot Battalion; Veterinary Surgeon, to be Assistant-Adjutant of a Depot Battalion; Veterinary Surgeon on the Staff of the Army serving under the command of Field-Marshal Lord Raglan, vice Legrew, appointed to the 2nd Life Guards; Dec. 1st.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE, Nov. 29.

Royal Regiment of Artillery—First Lieutenant William Dalgleish

Gulle to be Second Captain; Second Lieutenant Noel Hamlyn Harris to be First Lieutenant; First Lieutenant Charles Edward Oldershaw to be Second Captain; Second Lieutenant Oswald Carr to be First Lieutenant; Lieut.-Colonel William Bates Inglyby to be Colonel; Lieut.-Colonel Edward Walter Crofton to be Lieut.-Colonel; Second Captain Joseph Clarke Chubb to be Captain; First Lieutenant Nathaniel Octavius Simpson Turner to be Second Captain; Second Lieutenant Henry Whitty Briscoe to be First Lieutenant; Second Captain George Vandenheyden Johnson to be Captain; First Lieutenant Augustus Young Earle to be Second Captain; Second Lieutenant William George Martin to be First Lieutenant; Second Captain Adolphus Frederick Connel to be Captain; First Lieutenant the Hon. Leonard Allen Addington to be Second Captain; Second Lieutenant Philip Henry Sandilands to be First Lieutenant.

BANKRUPTS.

William Watts, East Cowes, Isle of Wight, chemist, druggist, grocer, and meatman—James Bach, Lindlow, Shropshire, auctioneer and seedsmen—Betty Baron, Henry William Knowles, and James Heyworth, Bacup, Lancashire—Robert Jackson, Lombard-street, City, ship owner and merchant—William Hazle, late of Foster-lane, City, and now of Pownall-road, Dalston, lace dealer—Joseph Whitehead, Bradford, Yorkshire, coach-builder—William Bartholomew, late of Chichester, cabinet maker—Charles Parker and Edwin Parker, Northampton, boot and shoe manufacturer—Robert Adams, Liverpool, merchant—James Thomas Snow, Pollen-street, Maddox-street, Hanover-square, butcher—James Balding, King's Arms-place, Old Kent-road, hat manufacturer—James Gankroger, Titus Gankroger, and William Slater, Halifax, cotton spinners—John Upton, Boxley Heath, Kent, boot and shoe maker—William Finch, formerly of Crutched-friars, City, afterwards of Woburn-place, Russell-square, Middlesex, and of Bartholomew-lane, City, wine merchant—Edward Jones, Chester, timber merchant—John Taylor and James Barton, Stockport, power-loom cloth manufacturers—William Littlejohn Dowie, Manchester, tailor and draper—Robert Robinson, Manchester, provision dealer—Titus Gankroger and James Gankroger, New Bridge and Lord Holme Mills, Yorkshire, cotton spinners.

MONEY MARKET.

MONDAY.—The announcement that Parliament is to meet on the 12th instant had an unfavourable influence on the English funds, since it is assumed that questions of increased expenditure will occupy attention at an early date. Consols for money, which left off after regular hours on Saturday evening at 98½, opened this morning at 92 to 1, and, although several further speculative purchases were made throughout the day by those who still retain a belief that Austria is about to declare against Russia, the market continued to show weakness; at one time there was a decline to 91½, and the final price was 91½ to 92. Bank Stock left off at 209½ to 211; Reduced, 90½ to 91; New Three per Cents, 90½ to 91; Long Annuities, 4½; India Stock, 230 to 233; India Bonds, 8s. to 10s. premium; Exchequer Bills, 3s. to 6s. premium; and Exchequer Bonds, 99½ to 100. The next account-day is appointed for the 10th of January; and Consols for that period were last quoted, 92½ to 93. The January account has usually been fixed for the opening of the transfer-books, after the dividends; but that practice has now been departed from. The opening day is the 17th of January.

TUESDAY.—In consequence of the anticipations expressed, that proposals for a loan may probably be submitted to Parliament at an early date, the English funds opened at a decline of ¼ per cent. Consols for money, which left off on Monday at 91½ to 92, were first quoted 91 to 92, whence, after some fluctuations, they advanced to 91½ to 92, at which they remained up to the termination of business. For the January account, the last price was 91½ to 92. Bank Stock closed at 209 to 211; Reduced, 89½ to 90; New Three per Cents, 89½ to 90. Long Annuities, 4½; India Stock, 230 to 233; India Bonds, 8s. to 11s. premium; Exchequer Bills, 3s. to 6s. premium.

WEDNESDAY.—The authorised statement to the effect that there is no immediate intention of applying to Parliament for a loan, caused the English funds to open at an advance; but the subsequent intelligence of the disasters in the Black Sea, during the gale of the 14th ult., led to a reaction, and the market closed with dulness. Consols for money, which left off last evening at 91½ to 92, were first quoted 91½ to 92, after which they ranged for some time between 91½ and 91¾. They then declined to 91½, and remained without recovery up to the termination of business. For the January account the last price was 91½. Bank Stock left off at 209 to 210; Reduced, 89½ to 90; New Three per Cents, 89½ to 90; Long Annuities, 4½; India Stock, 230 to 233; India Bonds, 8s. to 11s. premium; Exchequer Bills, 3s. to 6s. premium. It is stated, in explanation of the next account-day having been fixed for the 10th of January, instead of for the 17th, the day for the opening of the transfer-books, that the committee of the Stock Exchange are desirous that the Consol settlement should on all occasions take place as nearly as possible at intervals of a month, and that also it should fall between the 5th and the 10th, so as not to clash with the share settlement at the middle and end of each month. Although the books will not be generally open on the 10th, they will be so for what are called private transfers, which merely involve an extra payment of 2s. 6d.; and the inconvenience was therefore considered less than would have arisen from suffering the account to extend, as it would otherwise have done, over a period of six weeks.

THURSDAY.—The tone of the English Stock market was firmer, but business ruled rather dull than otherwise. The period approaches when the transfer-books of Consols will be shut, and, as usual on such occasions, Consols for a few days previously became rather buoyant, because the public are anxious to secure an early dividend on their investment. The market is now under the influence of this circumstance. Consols have been operated in to-day at from 91½ to 91¾, and left off firmly at 91½ to 92. The Reduced Three per Cents. have varied from 89½ to 90½; and the New Three per Cents. between 89½ to 90½; Exchequer-bills, 3s. to 6s. prem.; Bank Stock has further declined 1 per cent., and is now 208 to 210; India Stock, 230 to 232; India Bonds, 8s. to 11s. prem.

FRIDAY.—The funds are supported with tolerable firmness up to the close of official business, and Consols were last quoted at 91½ to 91¾ for both money and time. Reduced Three per Cents. and the New Three per Cents. remain at 89½; Bank Stock dull at 209; India Stock, 233. Exchequer Bills unchanged; ditto Bonds needed to 99½. There has been little doing in Foreign Stocks, and prices are but little altered. Dutch Four per Cents., Certificates, have been dealt in up to 90½. Turkish Scrip is slightly better at 8 to 7½ dis.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS.

BIRTHS.

On the 25th ult., Mrs. Charles Cotton, Philharmonic Rooms, Newman-street, of a son—On the 27th ult., the wife of the Rev. William Somerset, of a daughter—On the 27th ult., the wife of the Rev. G. W. Darby, rector of Fersfield, of a son—On the 28th ult., at the Lawn, Briston, Norfolk, the wife of the Rev. James Waller Bird, of a daughter—On the 28th ult., at 12, Avenue-road, Regent's-park, the wife of Mr. Geo. Gilbert Scott, of a son—On the 28th ult., at the Rectory, Barnes, Surrey, the wife of the Rev. R. E. Copleston, of a son—On the 28th ult., at Shepton Mallet, Somersetshire, the wife of John Speppings Harrison, Esq., of a daughter—On the 29th ult., at Grosvenor House, Blackheath, the lady of W. Gray, Esq., of a son.

MARRIAGES.

On the 28th ult., at St. John's Church, Cardiff, by the Rev. Cyril Stacey, the Rev. Charles Rumsey Knight, of Tythegston Court, Vicar of St. Bride's Major, in the county of Glamorgan, to Mary Anne Elizabeth, only daughter of the Rev. Thomas Stacey, Precentor of Landaff and Rector of Gelligiff, in the same county—On the 23rd ult., at the parish church of Hyton, Herefordshire, by the Rev. Alfred James Lowth, incumbent of Brinsford, Dorset, the Rev. Arthur Lowth, son of the late Rev. Robert Lowth, and grandson of the Right Rev. Robert Lowth, D.D., formerly Bishop of London, to Jane Spencer Percival, third daughter of Thomas Bourke Ricketts, Esq., Coombe House, Herefordshire—On the 28th ult., at St. Peter's Church, Bedford, by the Rev. Richard Garde, M.A., rector of Harrold, Beds, cousin of the bride, Henry Piers, Esq., surgeon R.N., late of H.M.S. Investigator, and second son of the late Rev. Octavius Piers, vicar of Preston, near Weymouth, to Ellen Sarah, youngest daughter of the late John Colburn, of Cork—On the 28th ult., at the Abbey Church, Malvern, by the Rev. F. F. Close, of Cheltenham, uncle of the bride, George Darison, Esq., Bombay Army, eldest son of the late Daniel Wilson Darison, Esq., of the Brand Hall, near Market Drayton, Shropshire, to Constance Louisa, second daughter of the late Major Close, H. M.'s 9th Lancers—On the 28th ult., at St. George's Church, Hanover-square, George Marwood, Esq., of Bushy Hall, in the North Riding of Yorkshire, to Frances Anne, youngest daughter of the Rev. Frederick Peel, prebend of Lincoln.

DEATHS.

On the 5th ult., killed at the battle of Inkerman, Lieutenant-Colonel Charles Francis Seymour, Scots Fusilier Guards, Assistant-Adjutant-General 4th Division, aged 35, eldest son of the late Colonel Sir Horace Seymour, M.P.—On the 5th ult., at the battle of Inkerman, Heneage G. Wynne, Major, 68th Light Infantry, second son of Charles W. G. Wynne, Esq., of Voclas, Denbighshire—On the 5th ult., killed in action at the battle of Inkerman, Captain Sir Robert Lydston Newman, Bart., Grenadier Guards, of Mamhead, Devon, in the 31th year of his age—On the 6th ult., from a wound received at the battle of Inkerman, in the Crimea, Archibald Cleveland, Esq., of Tapley Park, in the county of Devon, aged 21, Cornet in the 17th Lancers. He was present at the battle of Balaklava, and joined with his regiment in the ever-memorable and glorious charge of the British light cavalry. He was pursued on his retreat by three Cossacks: he wounded one; the other ran his lance right through his pouch-box—it was made of silver, and thus his life was saved; and the third, whose lance was blunted, only bruised his side. He arrived safe to camp, on his wounded and disabled charger, but was soon afterwards killed by a piece of a shell, which struck his side. He survived till the morning after the battle, and then expired, leaving a widowed mother to bewail the loss of her only son, and many sorrowing friends the fate of this gallant young soldier—On the 24th ult., at Aliphington, near Exeter, in his 68th year, Charles Lewis, Esq., for forty-five years the respected Secretary of the West of England Insurance Company—On the 26th ult., at 35, Richmond-terrace, Clifton, in the 86th year of her age, Mary Bright, daughter of the late Lieutenant-General Bright, of the same place—On the 27th ult., at Hertford, very suddenly, of disease of the heart, Captain Frederick Carter, the Royal Regiment, second son of J. M. Carter, Esq., of Northcourt, Abingdon, in the 33rd year of his age, deeply regretted by all who knew him.

SMALL TALK.

It may be useful in reading details of the siege of Sebastopol, to know that 300 metres are a shade more than 323 English yards, and 400 metres 437½ yards, very nearly; also that 1,000 metres are 1,093 yards and very near two feet.

CONSIDERABLE quantities of gold continue to be sent to Spain and Portugal. The Iberia has just taken out £52,000, all in gold, to be landed in Lisbon and Cadiz.

ROYAL COLLEGE OF SURGEONS.—The following gentlemen having undergone the necessary examinations for the diploma, were admitted members of the college at a special meeting of the court of examiners on the 28th ult.—Messrs. Charles Beaufoy, of Oxford, and Edward Willis Campbell, of Woolwich.

THE Saxon Chambers have just reintroduced flogging in gaols, and extended it to the female sex—perhaps a considerable arrangement, to prepare the bodies of the Saxon lieges for the coming events, which, as is known, cast their shadows before.

THE English residents in Dresden have subscribed about £50 to the Patriotic Fund.

THE Sydney journals of September 20 are mostly taken up with the proceedings in the Legislature. One of the most prominent topics of discussion was the new constitution bill, and the establishment of a mint. The revenue of the year was computed at £26,000, and the expenditure £34,000. The colonists were contributing liberally to the war defence fund. Several very large nuggets have recently been discovered. One was found at Maryborough, weighing 500 ounces, and a quartz specimen found at Ballarat, containing a large proportion of gold, weighed 98 pounds.

Two pieces of wreck have been washed on shore at Moelfre, on the Welsh coast—one with the name of "Nottingham" in gilt letters, and the other with "Mary Ann, of Liverpool," on it. Several other pieces of wreck have come on shore between Bull Bay and Red Wharf, and a dead body has been washed ashore in the latter place.—Liverpool, Nov. 28.

TENDERS are to be sent in to the Admiralty on the 6th Dec. for the supply of 30,000 gallons of rum; also, on the 1st for the supply of 200,000 lbs. of suet, and 20,000 gallons vinegar.

GENERAL BROWN's grey charger received eleven bullets at the battle of the Alma; he was sent to Constantinople, where the bullets were extracted, and he is now fit for duty.

MR. ROBERTS, a surgeon of Holywell, whose chiffonière was frequently robbed by his servants at night, arranged galvanic wires in such a way, that when the servant opened the chiffonière, a pistol, filled with powder only, exploded in Mr. Robert's bedroom, and awoke him without alarming the thief. He hurried out of bed, and caught his maid in flagrant delicto.

PRESENT FROM PRINCE ALBERT TO THE OFFICERS OF THE GRENADEER GUARDS.—H.R.H. Prince Albert a day or two since commanded Mr. Hebbert, of the firm of Hebbert and Co., army contractors, Pall-mall East, to attend at the Castle, when the Prince gave him instructions to have made a number of seal-skin coats, lined throughout with fur, one of which his Royal Highness, as Colonel of the Grenadier Guards, intends to present to every officer of this regiment previous to his leaving for the seat of war. The Prince at the same time gave Mr. Hebbert his own coat as a pattern, after which these coats, about seventy in number, are to be made, directing that they should be completed in the course of a week.

IT is stated that the Government have purchased 18,000 buffalo robes from the Hudson's Bay Company for the use of the army in the Crimea.

A DEFENDABLE datum for the rigour of a Crimean winter is to be found in the fact that the strait between the European and Asiatic coast is not unfrequently frozen across; so that loaded wagons cross from shore to shore. In the year 1,065 the distance from Kertsch to Tmutarakan was measured on the ice by Prince Gleb, son of St. Vladimir, and found to be 30,054 fathoms. If the present winter should be a severe one, no doubt a large portion of the army of the Caucasus will be moved by the same route.

THE GERMAN COINAGE.—A congress of several Governments of Germany, and particularly Austria, Prussia, and Bavaria, is now assembled at Vienna, to consult on the means of creating a uniform gold coinage for all the states of the Germanic Confederation. M. Brentano, an Aulic councillor, connected with the Austrian Mint, presides over this meeting.

PROFESSOR WILSON, F.R.S.E., succeeds to the Chair of Agriculture in the University of Edinburgh, vacant by the retirement of Professor Low.

A LETTER from St. Petersburg received at Berlin states that, on Nov. 6, 15,000 Russians were missing at roll-call at Sebastopol.

THE first cargo of salt, the produce of Irish mines, left Belfast on Monday for Rotterdam. The circumstance gave rise to a great deal of local satisfaction.

CHINESE PIRATES.—Mr. Henry Gibbs, captain of the brig Grecian Queen, of London, writes his owners, from Hong Kong, dated September 27 last, giving an account of having had some sharp fighting with piratical vessels when on his passage up to Whampoa Roads to load. His ship being tolerably well armed with handy carronades and small arms, he succeeded in beating them off, killing fifteen of the pirates, and wounding several others. An English schooner was in company at the time, which he took in tow for the night. The owner, Mr. Wadman, who was on board at the time, was seriously wounded in the side.

A DAUGHTER OF THE REGIMENT.—A letter from the French camp before Sebastopol says:—"Recently, in a house to which some Cossacks had set fire, we found in a room, and on the point of being suffocated with the smoke, a child of about eighteen months old, elegantly dressed, and having a gold cross suspended from its neck. The poor infant smiled upon our Grenadiers, who removed it and have adopted it until the family to whom it belongs shall be discovered. It is curious to see the Grenadiers fondling the baby, and treating it with as much tenderness as it could receive from its mother."

A TELEGRAPHIC despatch from Trieste, of the 28th ult. states that, from the 10th to the 20th, 15,000 soldiers of the three allied powers started from or passed through the Bosporus for the Crimea.

SUICIDE FROM LOVE.—On Tuesday Mr. Payne held an inquest, at the Albert Tavern, Loudon-road, Southwark, on the body of Mary Ann Banham, a fine young woman, twenty years of age, who committed suicide on Monday morning last. It appeared from the evidence that the deceased had a cousin, who was a soldier, to whom she was greatly attached, and who had been sent out to the Crimea, and she was greatly grieved about him. The jury returned a verdict of temporary insanity.

PIRATES IN THE MEDITERRANEAN.—The Minister of Marine at Turin, has informed the Chamber of Commerce, at Genoa, that the waters of Samos are infested by three bands of pirates, under the command of three chiefs named Moro, Niveiani, and Carajini.

DEATH OF THE "OLDEST INHABITANT."—Eliz. Curry died at her residence in Duckfield-street, last week, after attaining the age of 109 years, eight months, and seven days. She remained in possession of all her faculties, slightly impaired, up to the hour of her death.—Liverpool Standard.

GENERAL CATHART AT INKERMEN.—When at the battle of Inkerman, General Bosquet sent to Sir George Cathart to inquire whether he wanted reinforcements, the latter, being at the moment hemmed in by an immense Russian force, is said to have replied, "Yes; but don't hurry yourself."—French Paper.

DESPATCHES for Lord Raglan, in the Crimea, were sent by a messenger from the Foreign-Office on Wednesday evening.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

FIELD OFFICE, Saturday, 4 a.m.

FRENCH REINFORCEMENTS FOR THE CRIMEA.

There are at this moment at Toulon three ships of the line and eight frigates, filled with troops for the Crimea.

At the iron-works of Conches, in the department of the Eure, an order for 10,000 shells and 50,000 small cannon-balls is being executed with the greatest activity.

The private telegraphic despatches received at Paris, giving accounts of terrible losses in the Black Sea, have caused a mournful sensation there. One of the despatches, stating that the allied army before Sebastopol is in great want of powder, has created much alarm, for their is a rumour current that the Emperor of Russia has sent orders to Prince Menschikoff to make another attack coute qui coute. There is probably no foundation for this rumour; but, in the present depressed state of the public mind, the more gloomy a report is the more readily it finds credit.

A letter from Vienna, written by a person connected with the war department to a friend in Paris, says—"You would scarcely credit me if I were to tell you what it has cost us to send an army to the Principalities at this season of the year. The carriage of every heavy piece of artillery from the frontier to Bucharest has cost us 1,000 florins (nearly a hundred pounds sterling)."

THE KING OF PRUSSIA'S SPEECH.

BERLIN.—The fresh additional article, agreed upon by Austria and Prussia on the 26th ult., contains the adoption of the four points, and undertakes to procure their acceptance.

Prussia also promises her assistance to Austria if attacked in the Principalities.

The King's speech upon the opening of the Prussian Chambers, on Thursday, contains the following passages:—

"A bloody conflict has broken out between three powerful members of the family of European states.

"Our fatherland is not yet affected. I have fresh occasion to hope that the basis of a further understanding will soon, perhaps, be obtained.

"Closely united with Austria and the rest of Germany, I shall continue to look upon it as my task to plead for peace, the recognition of the independence of foreign States, and moderation.

"Should I subsequently be compelled to add force to this attitude, Prussia's and my faithful people will bear their inevitable burdens with resignation, and know how to meet such eventualities.

"The army shall be made ready for war."

"MARSEILLES.

"The Nil steamer, which has been due for three days, with the mail from Constantinople of the 20th, was forced to put into Antibes.

"A Queen's messenger, bearing despatches, who came by her, has left by the 1 p.m. train."

Printed by BERNARD LINTON, of No. 24, Robert-street, Horton, Parish of Shorelith, in the County of Middlesex, at the Printing-office of TAYLOR and GARRISON, No. 4 and 5, Gray's-inn-place, Fetter-lane, and published by him at No. 403, Strand, opposite Admiralty-street, Adelphi, in County.—DECEMBER 3, 1854.

VOL. IV.—No. 102.]

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1854.

[WITH SUPPLEMENT, PRICE 6d.]

TO ADVERTISERS.

EVERY SATURDAY, PRICE SIXPENCE, STAMPED.

THE FIELD:

The Country Gentleman's Newspaper.

A first class Journal, devoted to every kind of information interesting to persons "Out of Town," as Hunting, | Racing, | Coursing, | Bunting, | Shooting, | Angling, | Yachting, | Archery.

AND
The Garden; | The Farm; | The Household.

It is expressly designed for Families.

The official Stamp Returns for the quarter ending June, 1853, give it a circulation of

3,872 Copies Weekly.

Great improvements are now being made in it, and its circulation is rapidly extending.

The following is the SCALE OF CHARGES FOR ADVERTISING:

	£.	s.	d.
Twenty words and under.....	0	2	6
Each additional ten words.....	0	0	6
A half Column.....	1	5	0
A Column.....	3	0	0
A Page.....	8	8	0

For three insertions a reduction of one-eighth; and for six insertions a reduction of one-fourth will be made.

Field Office, 408, Strand.

AGRICULTURE, &c.

THE BIRMINGHAM CATTLE AND POULTRY SHOW, 1854.

THE SIXTH GREAT ANNUAL EXHIBITION OF STOCK AND DOMESTIC POULTRY will be held in BINGLEY HALL, on THURSDAY, WEDNESDAY, THURSDAY, and FRIDAY, the 12th, 13th, 14th, and 15th of DECEMBER next.

The PRIVATE VIEW and ANNUAL DINNER on TUESDAY, December 12th.

There will be Special Trains on all the principal Railways, full particulars of which will be announced in the Advertisements and Bills of the several Companies.

SEED WHEAT.—Samples and Prices of RED HYBRID, NURSERY, and other kinds of Wheat, suitable for late sowing after Turnips, will be sent on application to Mr. H. RAYNBIRD, Basingstoke.

THE FLUKE KIDNEY POTATO.—This excellent variety is now planted here as the principal crop, being free from disease and more prolific than any other in cultivation. It was raised in Middleton, and may be had genuine in any quantity at 5s. per bushel of 56lbs.—Apply to JOHN HOLLAND, BRADSHAW GARDENS, MIDDLETON, near Manchester.

NONPAREIL PEAS.

WILLIAM FAIRBEARD begs to inform the trade that he is now ready to execute any orders he may be favoured with. This Pen W. F. is confident will become a general favourite both for Garden and Field culture. Price can be had on application. MOUNT PLEASANT NURSERY, GREEN-STREET, SITTING BOURNE, KENT.

SEWAGE CHARCOAL MANURE.

THIS highly fertilising MANURE, which is Peat Charcoal, completely saturated with London Sewage, will be found most efficient for every species of crop, more especially for Peas, Beans, Turnips, Mangold Wurzel, and other root crops. It will produce a greater return for the outlay than Guano or any other manure at an equivalent value; it also possesses the property of retaining its fertilising power longer than other Manures now in use. It may be obtained at the SEWAGE MANURE WORKS, Stanley-bridge, Fulham, at £4 per ton, and, in quantities less than half a ton, at 5s. per cwt., for ready money only; and in quantities not less than a ton will be delivered at the London Terminal of the Railroads free of charge for carriage. It may also be had from Messrs. G. GIBBS and Co., No. 26, Down-street, Piccadilly, Agricultural Seedsmen, Agents for London; and from all the other Agents of the Company.

HORTICULTURE, &c.

WEEDS ON WALKS.

MR. FLEMING'S WEEDING or SALTING MACHINE for Gravel Walks, Court Yards, &c., manufactured and sold by ALEXANDER SHANKS and SON, ARBROATH, FORFAKSHIRE, from whom particulars, with prices, may be had.

NEW CRIMSON DAHLIA "INCOMPARABLE."

MR. E. ABLITT begs most respectfully to announce to the Dahlia Trade that the purposes disposing of the above-named splendid Seedling Dahlia in ground roots. Colour rich ruby crimson, fine shape, with great depth of well-arranged petals, and good centre; it has been shown at most of the exhibitions in the neighbourhood, and greatly admired. Mr. Glenn also speaks of it in very high terms as one of the best in the crimson class.

See Glenn's Almanack for this year, and Lloyd's Weekly Newspaper for Oct. 29th, initials E. A., and Nov. 11th.

Terms, 5 Guineas each root. Onehouse, Stowmarket, Suffolk.

THE LARGEST and CHEAPEST NURSERY in ENGLAND for Geraniums (show and fancy), French Geraniums, Fuchsias, Verbenas, Fairy Roses, Chrysanthemums, Heliotropes, Cinerarias, Calceolarias, Primulas, and other soft-wooded plants, is the FLORAL NURSERY, ACTON-ROAD, TURNHAM GREEN, near London. More than 250,000 plants are there cultivated annually.

The stock of show Geraniums exceeds 50,000, and comprises upwards of 750 varieties, amongst which almost every known kind will be found. The newest sorts, such as Carlos, Virginia Rosa (Foster's), Leah, Pieta, Marginata, Empress, Neatness, &c., can be had at 3s. each, or 3s. per dozen. The other varieties from 1s. to 2s. per dozen.

The selection of FRENCH GERANIUMS consists of 40 distinct sorts, at 2s. 6d. each, or 25s. per dozen.

SEEDLING CINERARIAS (10,000), from seed of first-rate flowers, at 4s. per dozen, in 60-sized pots. 20,000 really good SEEDLING HERBACEOUS CALCEOLARIAS now on hand at 4s. per dozen, in 60-sized pots.

30,000 VERBENAS.—These let out in 1854 by Smith, Mockett, Turner, Chaplin, Bragg, and others, 8s. per dozen; all the other varieties, 6s. and 4s. per dozen.

An immense quantity of good embossed PRIMULAS at 4s. per dozen in 60-sized pots, and 6s. per dozen in 48s.

CHRYSTANTHEMUMS (Liliputian and large flowering) at 6s. and 8s. per dozen, all the best sorts.

50,000 SCARLET GERANIUMS, including all the new kinds, at prices remarkably low.

The foregoing have been selected as examples only, it being impossible, within the limits of an advertisement, to afford particulars of a stock so extensive. Catalogues will, however, be forwarded to all parts gratis.

Every possible exertion will be made to give the most perfect satisfaction to all who may favour this Establishment with their patronage. None but thoroughly established plants will be sent out, and full reliance may be placed on prompt attention and fair dealing.

The Trade will be liberally dealt with. Provincial Nurserymen and Florists will do well to try this Establishment.

Terms cash, or a satisfactory reference.

JOHN WESTWOOD, Proprietor.

HYACINTHS, TULIPS, &c.
WILLIAM E. RENDLE and Co., SEED MERCHANTS, PLYMOUTH, have still on hand a fine assortment of all the best Hyacinths, Tulips, Anemones, Ranunculus Glabellus, Sparaxels, Lilium, Crocus, Iris, Johnquille, Snowdrops, Amaryllis, and other kinds of Bulbous Roots.

The present is an excellent time for planting them either in pots or in the ground, but the sooner the better. All orders will be properly attended to.

RENDLE'S CATALOGUE OF BULBOUS ROOTS can be had in exchange for two penny stamps, on application to WILLIAM E. RENDLE and Co., Seed Merchants, Plymouth.

LARGE SURPLUS STOCK OF TREES, SHRUBS, &c.; NOW ON SALE AT

MESSRS. WILLIAM E. RENDLE and Co.'s NURSERY, PLYMOUTH.—The Proprietors, having a large surplus stock of the following, can offer them at greatly reduced prices; and all orders above £10 will be delivered free of carriage to any station on the Broad Gauge Railways, and to Cork, Dublin, and Liverpool by Steamers.

400,000 Seedling Scotch Fir.
500,000 " Larch Fir.
200,000 " Pinus austriaca.
2,000,000 " Turkish and English Oak.
10,000 " Cedrus Deodara, from 6 in. to 3 ft. in height.

10,000 fine Laurels of various sizes.

20,000 of the best Rhubarb Roots in cultivation. With a large and general assortment of Nursery Stock, including Forest Trees, Shrubs, and Fruit Trees, such as are generally found in a large Provincial Nursery.

All who intend to plant, either in the Forest, the Shrubbery, or the Garden, during the present Autumn, should procure their New Autumn Descriptive Catalogue, which can be had in exchange for two penny stamps, on application to WILLIAM E. RENDLE and Co., Nurserymen and Seed Merchants, Plymouth. Established 1766.

FRUIT TREES, FOREST TREES, EVERGREENS, SHRUBS, &c.

Catalogues of the above may be had on application to WILLIAM HARRATT, WAKEFIELD.

* A quantity of fine Transplanted White Thorns.

THE FOREST, the PARK, the SHRUBBERY, and the GARDEN.—Noblemen and Gentlemen requiring Trees, Shrubs, or Fruit Trees, during the present Autumn should obtain RENDLE'S NEW AUTUMNAL DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE, which can be had on application from WILLIAM E. RENDLE and Co., Nurserymen and Foresters, Plymouth. Established 1766. New Seed, growth of 1854. Arrangements are now being made at this Establishment for a large supply of genuine and good seeds for the coming season.

TO BE LET, SOLD, &c.

SALMON FISHERIES IN THE TWEED TO LET.

TO BE LET, on LEASE, for such a term of years as may be agreed on, with entry at 25th May next, the FISHERIES and FRIBY OF EDENMOOTH. The Fisheries being about a mile below the Town of Kelso, extend to nearly three miles in length on the north side of the River, comprehend the whole Tweed Salmon Fishery within the Hamlet of Ednam, and embrace some of the best Angling Co-Is in that River.

Also, TO LET, with entry now or at Whit-Sunday next, the Desirable VILLA of SHARFELLAW HOUSE, situated within the Policy Grounds of Heideveld Park, and containing Dining-room, Drawing room, Five Bed-rooms, Kitchen, Servants' Apartments, and Conveniences. The House is within a mile of Kelso, and is in the immediate vicinity of Ednammouth Fisheries, and will be let either separately from, or in connection with these, as may be desired.

Apply to SMITHS and ROBSON, Solicitors, Kelso.

REAR-CENTRAL HORSE AND CARRIAGE REPOSITORY.

St. George's-road, Southwark (within a mile of the London bridges).

TO BE SOLD BY AUCTION, on TUESDAY, December 12th, 1854, at Twelve o'clock precisely, upwards of

ONE HUNDRED AND TEN HORSES, (on Commission). A number of Carriages, &c., of various descriptions, for unserved sale; several pairs of Holstein Carriage and Brougham Horses, Hunters (some of which are direct from Ireland), Weight-carrying Cobs, Ladies' Hacks, &c. Also Thirty powerful, sound Cart and Van Horses, Carriages and Harness, particulars of which may be had in Catalogue on the morning of sale.

PRIVATE COMMISSION DEPARTMENT.

From Eighty to One Hundred Horses, and several Hundred Carriages and Vehicles, always on Sale daily by Private Treaty.

Keep, 3s. per Day and Night.

Horses taken from the London Railway Terminal without charge to the owners.

N.B.—Near the Elephant and Castle.

HORSES.

MR. JOHN ABBOTT has received instructions to SELL, by AUCTION, without the least reserve, in the MARKET-PLACE, CHRISTCHURCH, HANTS, on TUESDAY, DECEMBER 12, 1854, NINE powerful DRAUGHT HORSES, from 5 years old, belonging to her Majesty's Royal Horse Artillery. They are all staunch and free from vice, but "cast" in consequence of not being equal to the great speed required in their military evolutions. They may be seen at the stables of the George Inn from Twelve to Two o'clock, at which time the sale will commence.

At the same time will be SOLD, the property of a Gentleman who has bred them, an exceeding handsome BROWN FILLY, rising 4 years old, and upwards of 15 hands high; and a handsome BAY FILLY, sister to the above, 3 years old. They are both by the same sire, which is three-parts bred, and the dam is half Arab and half English racer. They are animals of great promise.

Auction Offices, Bridge-street, Christchurch, 20th November, 1854.

FOR SALE.

A PAIR OF PILETON PONIES, 14 hands high, with their Harness, which is in excellent condition. They are high-carried, and step remarkably well; they are from grass. Price £10. Apply at the GARDENERS' COTTAGE, GULLAND'S OAK, MIDHURST.

CARRIAGES FOR SALE.

A Light BROUGHAM, suitable for one or a pair of Horses, with Pole and Shafts complete. Also a Cab-bodied PILETON for one Horse, with Head and Turnover Seat behind, nearly new.

For further particulars apply at Messrs W. and C. J. ROBERTSON'S CARRIAGE and HARNESS MANUFACTORY, ST. MARTIN'S, STAMFORD.

FOR SALE.

AN excellent PILETON, in condition equal to new, Morocco Lining, Collage's Patent Axles, and Fittings for one Horse or a pair. Will be sold a bargain.

Apply to Mr. GEORGE HURST, LITTLE GONERBY, GRANTHAM.

FOR SALE.

A FASHIONABLE BROUGHAM, with all the modern improvements, in very good condition, the property of a gentleman having no further use for it.

Also, a Leopold Harouch, forming an excellent close and open carriage, very light and roomy, recently built for a gentleman.

To be seen at E. and E. VEZEY'S, COACH-BUILDERS, LONG ACHE, and 19, Milsum-street, Bath.

FANCY POULTRY.—PERIODICAL SALE.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL by AUCTION, at his GREAT ROOM, 38, KING-STREET, COVENT-GARDEN, on TUESDAY, 19th DECEMBER, at Twelve o'clock precisely, a SELECTION of First-Class DORKING FOWLS, from the yard of Finch Noyes, Esq., of Salisbury, and many very choice Spanish, Cochins, Poland, Bantams, &c. &c., from celebrated Breeders.

Catalogues by enclosing a stamped-directed envelope to Mr. J. C. Stevens, 38, King-street, Covent-garden.

SWINESHEAD ASSOCIATION for the PROSECUTION OF FELONS, and for the Mutual Protection of Property.—NOTICE is HEREBY GIVEN, that the Annual Meeting of the Members of the Association will be held at the GRIFIN INN, in SWINESHEAD, on THURSDAY, the 30th day of NOVEMBER, 1854.—The Directors will meet at Eleven o'clock for receiving Subscriptions, Auditing Accounts, &c. Dinner at Two.

Also, that the Directors will meet at the GRIFIN INN at Six o'clock on TUESDAY Evening, the 18th of NOVEMBER next, when all Persons having any Claim on the Association are requested to present the same.

W. D. REDDISH, Treasurer.

Swineshead, Nov. 10, 1854.

PROVISION AGAINST DISABILITY by Sickness or Accident, effected with the LAW PROPERTY and LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, 30, Essex-street, Strand.

Example: A person aged 30, may secure an Annuity of £100 a year in case of permanent disability, by payment of only 35s. per annum.

Forms and particulars forwarded to any applicant, by

E. BARNES, Secretary.

REDEMPTION OF MORTGAGES and

LOANS secured by a Policy which guarantees the repayment of Loans at a fixed period, or earlier in case of death, so that the Property may pass unincumbered to the family, by the LAW PROPERTY and LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, 30, Essex-street, Strand. Apply to

E. BARNES, Secretary.

LOANS.—Persons desirous of obtaining

ADVANCES from £50 to £250, upon approved personal security, &c., payable by easy instalments, extending over a lengthened period, are invited to examine the principles of the BRITISH MUTUAL SUBSCRIPTION LOAN ASSURANCE CLASSES. Prospectuses, Reports, and every information, may be obtained on application at the British Mutual Life Office, 17, New Bridge-street, Blackfriars. Rules 6d. each copy, or 1s. 4d. post.

CHARLES JAMES THURKE, Resident Secretary.

MONEY.—ESTABLISHED 1842.

LOANS from £5 to £50 on the Personal Security of the Borrower, to be repaid by small Weekly, Monthly, or Quarterly instalments, as may suit the convenience of the borrower. A Form of Application and particulars sent to any part, on receipt of four postage stamps and a stamped directed envelope. Office (private), 16, PENTON-STREET, PENTONVILLE, London.

T. SHURT, Secretary.

MONEY.

MONEY to any amount ADVANCED upon Household Furniture, Stocks in Trade, Farming Stock, Liven and Vollen Drapery Goods, and every description of Property, by Bill of Sale, for long or short periods, repayable by instalments.

Apply at Messrs. SMITH and THOMAS'S Monetary Offices, 213, BROOK-STREET, GROS-VENOR-SQUARE (corner of Gilbert-street), London.

MONEY for INVESTMENT on the personal security (without sureties) of gentlemen of responsibility, held to certain estates, &c., also, on reversions or life interests. This &c., also, on the highest respectability, emanates from a party of the highest respectability, for which references will be given to responsible parties.

Address to S. N., care of Mr. GRIGG, Bookseller, 183, REGENT-STREET, London, and to whom also references may be made.

BANK OF DEPOSIT.
NATIONAL ASSURANCE AND INVESTMENT ASSOCIATION.
No. 3, PALE MALL EAST, LONDON.
Established A.D. 1841.
Empowered by Special Act of Parliament.
PARTIES desirous of INVESTING MONEY are requested to examine the Plan of this Institution, by which a high rate of interest may be obtained with perfect security.
The interest is payable in January and July at the Head Office in London, and may also be received at the various Branches, or through Country Bankers, without delay or expense.
PETER MORRISON, Managing Director.
Prospectuses and Forms for opening accounts sent free on application.

ALLSOPP'S PALE ALE in BOTTLE, as supplied to the CRYSTAL PALACE; also in Casks of 18 Gallons, recommended by Baron LIEBIG.
Address, HARRINGTON PARKER and Co., 53, PALE MALL, London.

PRIZE CATTLE SHOW OF THE SMITH-FIELD CLUB.
J. W. and F. B. THOMAS, SILVER-EGG SMITHS to the CLUB, respectfully beg to inform the Members and the Public that they have in stock a great variety of Silver and Silver-plated Hunting flasks, Drain-bottles, and Sandwich-cases, at 153, NEW BOND STREET.

THE TWO-GUINEA DRESS or FROCK COAT, the Guinea Dress Trouser, and the Half Guinea Waistcoat, made to order by B. BENJAMIN, MERCHANT TAILOR, 74, REGENT STREET, for quality, style, and workmanship, cannot be equalled by any house in the kingdom. N.B.—A perfect fit guaranteed.

THE 16s. TROUSERS REDUCED to 11s.; Trousers and Waistcoat, 28s.; Coat, Waistcoat, and Trousers, 47s. Made to order, from Scotch Tweeds, all wool, and thoroughly shrank, by B. BENJAMIN, MERCHANT TAILOR, 74, REGENT STREET.
N.B.—A perfect fit guaranteed.

PERFECT FITTING TROUSERS for 16s.—The most extensive and varied Stock in London, consisting of upwards of 1,000 Patterns, in West of England, Scotch, Angoras, &c., all wool, and warranted thoroughly shrank, are unequalled for elasticity, fineness of texture, and durability of wear, to be obtained only at J. STRAY and Co.'s, Registered Trousers Makers, 39 and 40, LAYMARKE, corner of Piccadilly. Also, their celebrated Loose-shoed Cape, lined throughout, at 28s., unquestionably the best fitting and most economical garment of the season. An immense stock kept on hand, or to order. The price of every article made, or to measure, marked in plain figures.

THE MOST APPROVED STOVES.
The demand for the GRINK and VESTA STOVES (separately patented) still continuing unabated, and numbers having been sold last season (in all upwards of 14,000), through the patronage of families who have had experience of their pre-eminently useful qualities, WILLIAM S. BURTON has renewed confidence in recommending them for their cleanliness, economy, and safety. During the last thirteen years they have been found sources of great comfort in the bed-room of the invalid, affording a uniform temperature throughout the day and night, with one supply of fuel, without attention. Particulars sent postage free. Chumk, 30s.; Vesta, from 35s.; Stoves for Warehouses, &c., from 10s. each. Joyce's Patent Fuel, 4s. 6d. per sealed bag.

WILLIAM S. BURTON has ten large Show Rooms (all communicating), exclusive of the show, devoted solely to the show of GENERAL FURNISHING IRONMONGERY (including cutlery, nickel silver, plated and japanned wares, iron and brass bedsteads), so arranged and classified that purchasers may easily and at once make their selections.

Catalogues with engravings sent (per post) free. The money returned for every article not approved of.
39, OXFORD STREET (corner of Newman-street); 2 and 3, NEWMAN STREET; and 4 and 5, FLEET PLACE.

BILE! BILE! BILE!
If you suffer from the above distressing complaint, send twelve postage stamps to W. S. BARBOYS, CHEMIST, 76, NEW CITY, LAMBETH, London, and receive a Box of Pills, Diet Table, and plain rules in cases of sickness or accident, by return of post.

N.B.—If you wish to keep the doctor out of your house, don't neglect this timely advice.

DEAFNESS.—IMPORTANT DISCOVERY.—Dr. MANFRED M.H.C.S., has this day published, for post, his eight postage stamps, a PHYSICIAN'S GUIDE FOR COUNTRY PATIENTS, for the Market and Permanent Restoration of Hearing, by his invaluable new treatment. Being a step to quackery, cruel impositions on the suffering public, and exorbitant charges, this book will save thousands from the impositions of the self-styled doctors, inasmuch as the hearing can be restored for life. Deafness of the most inveterate nature relieved in half an hour, cured in a few hours, almost instant cessation of noises in the ears and head, by painless treatment. Hundreds of letters may be seen, and persons referred to, who have heard the usual tone of conversation in a few hours. Patients received daily at Dr. MANFRED'S residence, 72, REGENT STREET, London (first door in Air-street), where all letters must be addressed.

DEAFNESS AND NOISES IN THE HEAD.—Institution for the Cure of Deafness, 9, Suffolk-place, Pall-mall, London.—Instant and permanent restoration of hearing guaranteed, without the use of ear-trumpets, instruments, or causing one moment's inconvenience to the most aged or nervous sufferer. Dr. HUGHES'S new and extraordinary discovery, by one consultation, enables deaf persons of either sex to hear immediately with perfect ease the lowest whisper, and vocally remove all ringing in the ears. Hospitals and private testimonials, and certificates from the most eminent physicians and surgeons in England, in whose presence deaf persons had been cured, and many hundreds of private patients cured, can be seen or referred to. Hours of consultation, eleven till four every day. FRANCIS HUGHES, M.D., Member of the London Medical College of Surgeons, May 2, 1843; Licentiate of the Medical Society, April 30, 1845.

Just Published,
SITTING-OUT OF DEAFNESS, OR COUNTRY PATIENTS, a Step to Empiricism, Quackery, and Exorbitant Charges. Sent, on receipt of seven stamps, free. Examination free.
9, Suffolk-place, Pall-mall.

OYSTERS.
J. SWEETING is happy to inform his Friends and the Public that his Burnham River NATIVE OYSTERS are as true as last season. He has them six years old, four hours from the beds, at his Fish and Oyster Establishment, 159, CHEAPSIDE, Superior Oyster Rooms, Steady Ale; Rich's Stout.

LONG EVENINGS MADE SHORT.
MECH'S FAMOUS BAGATELLE TABLES, manufactured upon the Premises, 4, LEADENHALL STREET, London, make long evenings appear short, and combine calculation with amusement. Prices:—£3 15s., £4 15s., £5 15s., up to £12. None genuine without MECH'S name.

COCHRANE'S PATENT FIXING GIRTH or PAD prevents the Saddle from shifting forward, however low or defective the Horse's shoulder may be.
Manufacturer, GEORGE BLAIR, 30, Brewer-street, Golden-square, London.

FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS.
PATTERNS of the new COLOURED SHIRTS in every variety of colours. Upwards of 20 different Patterns for making FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS sent per post (free) on receipt of six postage stamps. Price 27s. the Half dozen.
FORD'S WHITE EUREKA SHIRTS, best quality, six for 40s.; second quality, six for 31s.; if washed, ready for use, 2s. extra.

CAUTION.—Ford's Eureka Shirts are stamped, "38, FORTNEY, LONDON," without which none are genuine.
"Caladagnes, with particulars, post free."
RICHARD FORD, 38, Fortney, London.

NO MORE PILLS NOR ANY OTHER MEDICINE.
For Indigestion (Dyspepsia), Constipation, Nervous, Bilious, and Liver Complaints, Cough, Consumption, and Debility.

DU BARRY'S DELICIOUS REVALENTA ARABICA FOOD saves 50 times its cost in Medicine, and Cures the above complaints and their consequences—such as flatulency, distension, acidity, heartburn, palpitation of the heart, nervous headaches, deafness, noises in the head and ears, pains at the pit of the stomach and between the shoulders, diarrhoea, dysentery, impurities and poverty of the blood, scrofula, asthma, dropsy, rheumatism, gout, nausea and sickness during pregnancy, after eating, or at sea; low spirits, nervous, cramps, epileptic fits, spleen, general debility, inquietude, sleeplessness, involuntary blushing, paralysis, tremors, dislike to society, unfitness for study, loss of memory, delusions, vertigo, blood to the head, exhaustion, melancholy, groundless fear, indecision. It is, moreover, the best food for infants and invalids generally, as it never purges or turns acid on the weakest stomach, nor interferes with a good liberal diet, but imparts a healthy relish for lunch and dinner, and restores the faculty of digestion, and nervous and muscular energy, to the most enfeebled.

Analysis by the Professor of Chemistry and Analytical Chemist, Andrew Ure, M.D., F.R.S., &c., &c.—London, June 3, 1849: "I find it to be a pure vegetable Farina, perfectly wholesome, easily digestible, likely to promote a healthy action of the stomach and bowels, and thereby to counteract dyspepsia, constipation, and their nervous consequences."
IMPORTANT CAUTION against the fearful dangers of spurious imitations:—The Vice-Chancellor Sir William Page Wood granted an injunction on the 10th March, 1851, against Alfred Hooper Nevill, for imitating "Du Barry's Revalenta Arabica Food."

BARRY DU BARRY & Co., 17, REGENT STREET, London.

A few out of 50,000 cures are here given:—
Cure No. 71, of dyspepsia, from the Right Hon. the Lord Stuart de Decies—"I have derived considerable benefit from Du Barry's Revalenta Arabica Food, and consider it due to yourselves and the public to notice the publication of these cures."

Cure No. 49,832—"Fifty years' indescribable agony from dyspepsia, nervousness, asthma, cough, constipation, flatulency, spasms, sickness at the stomach and vomiting, have been removed by Du Barry's excellent food."—Maria Jolly, Wortham Ling, near Diss, Norfolk.

Cure No. 47,121—"Miss Elizabeth Jacobs, of Nazing Vicarage, Waltham-cross, Herts: A cure of extreme nervousness, indigestion, gatherings, low spirits, and nervous fancies."

Cure No. 48,344—"Miss Elizabeth Youman, Batmore, near Liverpool: A cure of ten years' dyspepsia, and all the horrors of nervous irritability."

Cure No. 3,906—"Thirteen years' cough, indigestion and general debility have been removed by Du Barry's excellent Revalenta Arabica Food."—James Porter, Athol street, Perth.

Cure 52,122—"Bridgehouse, Framley, April 3, 1851: I have suffered these thirty-three years continually from diseased lungs, spitting of blood, liver derangement, deafness, ringing in the ears, constipation, debility, shortness of breath and cough; and during that period taken so much medicine, that I can safely say I have had out upwards of a thousand pounds at the chemists and doctors. I have actually worn out two medical men during my ailments without finding any improvement in my health. Indeed, I was in utter despair, and never expected to get over it, when I was fortunate enough to become acquainted with your Revalenta Arabica, which, Heaven be praised, restored me to a state of health which I long since despaired of attaining. My lungs, liver, stomach, head, and ears are all right, my hearing perfect, and my recovery is a marvel to all my nearest ones. I am, respectfully, James Roberts, Wood Merchant."

Cure 48,615—"Plymouth, May 9th, 1851.—For the last ten years I have been suffering from dyspepsia, headache, nervousness, low spirits, sleeplessness, and delusions, and swallowed an incredible amount of medicine without relief. I am happy to say that your Food has cured me, and I am now enjoying better health than I have had for many years past."—J. S. Newton.

Cure No. 18—"Twenty five years' nervousness, constipation, indigestion, and debility, from which I have suffered great misery, and which no medicine could remove or relieve, have been effectually cured by Du Barry's Food in a very short time."—W. R. Reeves, Pool Anthony, Tiverton.

THE PEOPLE'S LIGHT!
—NIBBS' PATENT OXY-DATE and COTTAGE LAMP produce the Cheapest Oil Light extant. An Illustrated Price List for a stamped envelope. A 1s. Lamp and Wicks free for eight stamps. A 2s. 6d. third Lamp and Wicks free for forty-two stamps.
Address J. S. NIBBS, Bakewell, Derby.

CHRISTMAS! CHRISTMAS! CHRISTMAS!
FREDERICK SMITH, BREWER, 39, MARYBONE, LIVERPOOL, can inform Publicans and others, how to Fine and Head Ales in Six Hours, as bright as Sherry.
For terms, &c., enclose a stamped envelope.

COCOA, containing, as it does, a farinaceous substance, and a bland oil, is a most valuable article of diet. To adapt it, however, to delicate stomachs, it is essential that the farinaceous substance be perfectly incorporated with the oil, so that the one prevents the other from separating. Such union exists in the Cocoa here presented. The delightful flavour, in part dependent on the oil, is fully developed and the whole preparation made grateful to the weakest digestion.

JAMES EPPS, HOMOEOPATHIC CHEMIST, EGYPTIAN HALL, PICCADILLY, 112, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, 83, Old Broad-street, City.

In regard to purity, see the report of the Analytical Commission in the "Lancet," July 5, 1854.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER from a MEDICAL GENTLEMAN at Madras, to his Brother at Worcester, May, 1851.
"TELL LEE & PERRINS that I have been highly pleased to find that your SAUCE is highly esteemed in India, and is in my opinion, the most palatable as well as the most wholesome Sauce that is made."

LEA & PERRINS' EXTRACT OF A LETTER from a MEDICAL GENTLEMAN at Madras, to his Brother at Worcester, May, 1851.
"TELL LEE & PERRINS that I have been highly pleased to find that your SAUCE is highly esteemed in India, and is in my opinion, the most palatable as well as the most wholesome Sauce that is made."

TO YOUNG NOBLEMEN, GENTLEMEN, OFFICERS, &c. A Matter of Importance. Address D. D. A. 160, Bowling Lane, Bradford, Yorkshire.

DO YOU WANT BEAUTIFUL HAIR. WHISKERS, EYEBROWS, &c.? Notwithstanding the numerous oils, highly scented, and most injurious imitations which have been put forth, ROSALIE COUPELLE'S CRINOLIN is the only preparation to be depended on for the growth of Hair, Whiskers, &c., as also curing, nourishing, beautifying and strengthening the hair, and checking greyness. It is a most unique and elegant compound, and has never been known to fail. Price 2s. per bottle through all Chemists and Perfumers, or sent post free on receipt of 24 postage stamps, by ROSALIE COUPELLE, 69, CASTLE STREET, NEWMAN STREET, OXFORD STREET, London.

Mr. Williams, 8, Lowther-street, Liverpool.—"I can now show as fine a head of hair as any person, solely from using your Crinoline."

Sergeant Craven, Longford Barracks, Ireland.—"Through using your Crinoline, I have an excellent moustache which I had before despaired of."

Mr. Hailey, Cumberland.—"It surpasses every thing of the kind."

Mrs. Carter, Pangbourne.—"My head, which was quite bald, is now covered with new hair."

Mr. Lane, Golden Lion, Macclesfield-street, City-road, London.—"A friend of mine, Mr. Harris, describes its effects as truly astonishing."

Mr. Yales, Lincolns-ter, Midlon.—"The young man has now a good pair of whiskers. I want two bottles for other customers."

IF YOUR HAIR IS GREY OR RED use ROSALIE COUPELLE'S PURE INSTANTANEOUS LIQUID HAIR DYE, universally acknowledged as the only perfect one, and infinitely superior to the numerous disgraceful imitations which scorch, burn the hair, and leave an unnatural tinge. Price 3s. 6d. per bottle, through all Chemists, &c., or sent free, secure from observation, for 52 postage stamps.

Mr. Whilliker, 24, Fargate, Sheffield.—"Your Hair Dye is highly spoken of by all who have purchased it of me."

Mr. Fraser, King-street, Ludlow.—"Your Hair Dye has succeeded admirably, it gives such a natural tinge."

Mr. Pearson, 20, Fishergate, Nottingham.—"Your Hair Dye is excellent."

Mr. Casey, 2, Gloster-green, Oxford.—"It gives the greatest satisfaction."

James Thompson Esq., Middleton.—"It answers the highest expectations."

Mr. J. N. Clark, Killick, Wexford.—"It is a most excellent and immediate Dye for the Hair, far preferable to all others."

Obtainable through all respectable Chemists and Perfumers, or of ROSALIE COUPELLE, 69, CASTLE STREET, NEWMAN STREET, OXFORD STREET, London.

DO YOU WANT LUXURANT HAIR, WHISKERS, &c.?—If so, ELLEN GRAHAM'S NOURISHMENT is unfailing in its efficacy. It reproduces the hair when lost by disease or decay, prevents its falling off, effectually checks greyness, strengthens weak hair, and is guaranteed to produce whiskers, moustaches, &c., in three or four weeks. For beautifying the hair, and sustaining its curling powers, it has no equal.

Sent post free on receipt of twenty-four postage stamps, by MISS GRAHAM, 3, NEW-ROAD, HORNSEY, Middlesex.

"My whiskers are greatly improved."—J. Short, Dudley.

"It has produced hair where I was bald."—W. Morgan, Milford.

STAMMERING perfectly and permanently CURED, in both Children and Adults. The system is easily understood and applied, and has been successfully pursued for the last twenty years, by MR. H. R. THOMPSON, who cured himself. References to clergymen, gentlemen, and the parents of children cured.
Address MR. H. R. THOMPSON, MELBOURNE SQUARE, NORTH BRITTON.
Children received into the House.

IMPORTANT TO FAMILIES FURNISHING. who study elegance with economy. JAMES COOK'S THREE GUINEA FRENCH POLISHED MAHOAGANY ARABIAN BEDSTEAD, Bedding, Cabinet, Carpet, Looking-glass, and Upholstery Warehouse—Brompton-house, 22 and 23, Queen's-buildings, Knightsbridge. Families given, and a list of prices sent post-free.

HOW TO KILL RATS AND MICE by HUNDREDS—A Receipt may be had to do so (tho most worth £20), without any trouble, by sending Thirty Postage Stamps, and a directed envelope, to MR. WILLIAM FRANKLIN, POST OFFICE STREET, NORWICH, who will forward it per return, with every instruction, &c.

This wonderful receipt is a fortune to every Farmer, Merchant, or Miller in the world, it will save them pounds yearly, by killing every rat or mouse, either in the field, stack, or house.

EXTRACTS FROM TESTIMONIALS.
"Accuse, 1854.—I was astounded at the efficacy of your remedy for vermin; the receipts are cheap at a sovereign; use my name if of any use to you."
—Frederick Beckham, 37, Burlington-street, Manchester.

"After one dressing we destroyed upwards of 170 rats and mice."—F. Coker, Ware, Herts.

"We have quite cleared our premises from vermin; wish we had known of your receipts before."
—H. N. Frye, Charlotte-street, Yarmouth.

GREAT COMFORT TO INVALIDS.
A FIXED WATER-CLOSET for £1.

Places in gardens converted into comfortable Water-closets by the PATENT HERMETICALLY SEALED PAN, with its Self-acting Valve, entirely preventing the return of cold air or effluvia. Any carpenter can fix it in two hours. Price £1. Also, Hermetically-sealed Inodoriferous Chamber Commodes, £1, £2 4s., and £3; and Improved Portable Water-closets, with Pump, Cistern, and Self-acting Valve. A Prospectus, with Engravings, forwarded by enclosing two postage stamps.

At WYKE and Co.'s Sanatorium, 46, Leicester-square, London.

KNOW THYSELF!—The secret art of DISCOVERING the TRUE CHARACTER of INDIVIDUALS from the peculiarities of their HANDWRITING, has long been practised by ELLEN GRAHAM with astonishing success. Her startling delineations are both full and detailed, differing from anything hitherto attempted. All persons wishing to "know themselves," or any friend in whom they are interested, must send a specimen of their writing, stating sex and age, enclosing thirteen penny post stamps, to MISS GRAHAM, 3, NEW-ROAD, HORNSEY, Middlesex, and they will receive in a few days a minute detail of the mental and moral qualities, talents, tastes, affections, virtues, failings, &c., of the writer, with many other things hitherto unsuspected.
"Miss Graham is a most successful graphologist."—Family Herald.

A NEW DISCOVERY IN TEETH.
MR. HOWARD, SURGEON-DENTIST, 52, Fleet-street, has introduced an entirely New Description of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, fixed without springs, wires, or ligatures. They so perfectly resemble the natural teeth, as not to be distinguished from the originals by the closest observer; they will never change colour or decay, and will be superior to any teeth ever before used. This method does not require the extraction of roots, or any painful operation, and will support and preserve teeth that are loose, and is guaranteed to restore articulation and mastication. Decayed teeth rendered sound and useful in mastication. 52, Fleet-street.—At home from one till five.

SOUND AND ROBUST HEALTH.
The blessing of Health may be enjoyed by every one by the use of KAYE'S WORM-PILLS, which are now universally admitted to be the BEST RESTORATIVE MEDICINE in existence. Their peculiarly purgative and invigorating qualities render them invaluable to all who, from exposure to noxious atmosphere, residence in low and damp localities, or from sedentary habits, have become the victims of physical debility or extreme nervous sensitiveness, with their attendant miseries. These Pills, which are wholly composed of Vegetable Substances, are a true stomachic, a mild yet efficient aperient, and thousands who have tried other medicines in vain have testified to the benefits they have received from their use.

Sold in boxes, at 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d. each, at the Depot, 84, FLEET STREET, London, and by all Medicine Vendors.

FOOD AND DIET.—HARD'S FARI-NACIOUS FOOD for INFANTS and INVALIDS.

"I have carefully examined, and repeatedly prescribed, 'Hard's Farinaeous Food' (see 'Peculiar's Treatise on Food and Diet,' pages 319 and 474, &c.), which is prepared from the most nutritious of the cereal grains. It combines both nitrogenous and non-nitrogenous alimentary principles, and forms a very valuable food for children and invalids."

"Assistent Physician to the London Hospital."
—J. F. Pankhurst Esq., July 1, 1854.

Sold by all Chemists and Druggists, Patent Medicine Vendors, Grocers, Italian Warehousemen, and Confectioners, in 1s. and 2s. packets, and in cases, 6s. 6d. each. Observe! All genuine packets and cases are signed "JAS. HARD'S" and manufactured at the Royal Victoria Mill, Dartford, Kent.

CONTENTS.

Chronicle of the Week	1,155
Sport and Sportsmen	1,156
Iceing	1,157
Hunting	1,157
Shooting and Coursing	1,158
Cricket	1,159
Yachting	1,159
Rowing	1,160
Angling	1,160
Sportsman's Library	1,161
Gardening	1,162
The Farm	1,164
The Country House and Markets	1,164
Letter Bag	1,166
Feuilleton	1,166
SUPPLEMENT	1,169

NOTICE.

With the first number of the new volume of THE FIELD, and the new year, there will be presented to the Subscribers

THE SPORTSMAN'S ALMANAC,

AND

Country Gentleman's Calendar;

THE FIELD, THE GARDEN, THE FARM,
For the Year 1855.

This Almanack will contain superb Engravings, from designs by ANSDALL, WILSON, and others, with all the information useful for reference in the country house.

N.B.—This will be given to all who are Subscribers to THE FIELD for the year 1855.

ADVERTISEMENTS for "The Sportsman's Almanack" should be sent to THE FIELD Office without delay to secure insertion.

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

* * The first and second country posts of Friday brought us so much correspondence that it has proved impossible to oblige all our kind friends by inserting their communications. Among the very many standing over are: "Gun Adventures" (Dead-Shot); "Kenilworth and Barton-upon-Humber Coursing Meetings"; "Poetry" (Bustians); "Management of Poultry" (R.); "Provincial Masonics"; "Yachting"; &c., &c. Had much of this been sent to us early in the week (and it might have been so with due diligence), it could have been inserted. It is now unavoidably deferred.—Punctuality is a quality that highly endears."

RACING.

T. T. C.—A false description disqualifies a horse for any race.

Starter.—A is right; there were 131 acceptances.

P. P.—Lost by a head.

R. S.—The horse did not run.

Scale.—The feather weight is 1st.

Horse shoe.—It is a drawn bet.

Hurdle.—A dead heat.

Jockey (Newmarket).—Mr. Clark's circuit this year has comprised the judging of 545 races, in which 3,246 competitors struggled for victory. There were 10 "dead heats," 84 "heads," and 63 "necks," amongst the number.

NAUTIC.

R. T. F. C.—The Falcon schooner for sale is 115 tons, not 11 tons. There is no yacht called the Loftins. The proper name is Lotus. Her name was misprinted in the last number of THE FIELD.

R. M.—The head-quarters of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club are at Toronto.

S.—There is no Rear-Commodore at present in the Royal Thames or Royal London Yacht Club, or in the Prince of Wales Club.

Tygra.—As an anchorage, we ourselves prefer Greenbottle to Erith.

Lithographer.—1 The "Nautical Magazine" is edited by Commander Becher, of the Admiralty. 2 There are but two yachting magazines at present. We believe a third has recently been contemplated.

R. T. F. C.—Mr. Will Scott is the Hon. Sec. of the Birkenhead Model Yacht Club.

POULTRY.

P.—The Dublin Poultry Show is in type, and will appear next week.

MASONIC.

P. Z. Z.—Yes; we believe the Emperor of Russia to be a Mason. You contend that his conduct in suppressing Masonry is a negative to his being so; that does not follow. In the first place, Masonry cannot make good what is radically bad; it will improve a man, but it certainly will never make a bad man a good one. Secondly, the Czar is perfectly well aware that Masonic meetings would be, in his dominions, a cloak for political matters. Such he fears; therefore persecutes it.

L. L.—We are preparing a narrative upon Russian Freemasonry, which will commence in a week or so.

S. W.—You should write to the Grand Secretary's office, and it will be corrected, no doubt.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Autobiography of a Horse, No. II., is in type, but deferred for want of space.

S. S. (Lejford).—The Kent Poultry Show is fixed to take place in the College-yard, Maidstone, on Tuesday, December 12.

T. T. S.—Your MS. is left with the Publisher.

London S. (H. Leach).—The "Army List" for the present month, price eightpence, can be had at Parker's, Whitehall. An alphabetical list of the 43 officers killed at Inkerman, on November 5th, appears therein at page 117, and is followed by a longer list of the wounded in the same battle.

B. B.—You cannot consult a barrister except through a solicitor.

Inquirer.—The "Patriotic Fund Journal" will be published in a few days. The office is close to Somerset-house, Strand.

London S. (Breadford).—On Monday the new regulation respecting remuneration for militia bullets took effect, and proprietors of taverns on whom they are quartered will receive 1½d. per day. Write to us when the difficulty you mention again occurs.

Manselton (Half-Pay).—Few counties have given greater evidence of practical sympathy with the objects of the Royal Patriotic Fund than Devonshire. Up to the present time, the county of Devon subscription to the Patriotic Fund amounts to £3,657. 7s. 1d., exclusive of the notes already forwarded to the treasurer in London from parishes and districts independent of the county movement.

S.—Had you been punctual, you would have had an interview. The Editor of THE FIELD has too much on his hands to see any one except at the very moment appointed. Call again on Tuesday, at three precisely.

Myoi B.—The question of an immediate decoration for Alma and Inkerman is already much talked of in the West-end Clubs. Certainly, if there lacks time to make engravings, bearing the glorious names of Alma and Inkerman, for those who fought and survived those wonderful achievements of British valour, why should not a ribbon be immediately given, to which hereafter the clasps can be added; and, Deo volente, also some day a Sebastopol medal? When in India, Lord Ellenborough, ever the soldier's warm friend, instituted the "riband of India"; why, therefore, should there not be a ribbon of the East, in which the tricolor of our gallant ally the French should mingle, as have their brave spirits in our mutual cause?

A Constant Reader.—We are informed, by the former Proprietors, that it is not yet fully prepared.

E. W. T.—We shall be obliged by the regular transmission of the fixtures.

Sub. Bern (Hoolich).—We can best answer you by using the very words of the Times, of Thursday, the 7th instant:—"A contemporary has published the exact position of the mines prepared by the besiegers, and that information has actually led to countermines, and consequently to the sacrifice of the labour in those mines thus discovered to the enemy. We have rigorously abstained from giving any hints of this sort. Indeed, we have ever had in our eye the fact that there are Russian agents and partisans in this country, who pursue the necessary every morning in quest of hints for their employers; and who, by means of the telegraph, can communicate what they may think of any service to London, and thence to Warsaw, before the Times is in the hands of the Editor. We reader. We need not say that we are, in the hands of the whole of the war, the shortest road from Sebastopol to London, and consequently from London to Sebastopol, has been through St. Petersburg."

The Field.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1854.

CHRONICLE OF THE WEEK.

THE news from the seat of war is not very eventful this week. Several sorties against the French lines are spoken of, in all of which the Russians were repulsed with great loss. In one sortie, against the English, our troops pursued the enemy so far that they captured and maintained a redoubt containing five guns, before the Russians could spike them. Our siege batteries were grim and silent, the whole army being employed in surrounding the entire camp with a perfect line of circumvallation. Affairs between the pickets were constant. Flags of truce had passed between the generals, and Lord Dunkellin (son of the Marquis of Clanricarde), had been exchanged for a Russian captain. Fresh reinforcements were arriving daily, and in large numbers. The 97th Regiment had landed, and the Queen of the South had arrived at Balaklava with large draughts of Guards and other regiments. Turkish reinforcements, composed principally of more veteran troops than those hitherto employed in the Crimean campaign, were being brought over from Baltchik. All the men were busy butting themselves; but, owing to the difficulty in obtaining planks, tools, and nails, it was feared that it would be at least two months before that important operation could be completed. Meantime, the army is exposed to all the rigours of the weather, at an elevation of 700 feet above the roaring waves of the Euxine, with no better protection than can be afforded by their tents, and even these are reported to be damaged by the terrible storm on the 13th. A hundred and forty-six ship guns had been landed from the fleet, and would be used in new siege batteries.

The details which have now reached us of the storm of the 13th prove that the calamity was not exaggerated; indeed, it seems difficult to overrate the importance of its effects in the present position of the army. The Prince went down with 300 persons and all its valuable cargo on board, this latter including ordnance stores for the siege, winter clothing for the troops, and medical stores. By a piece of mismanagement, unfortunately not singular, the medical stores had been stowed away under the heavy shot and shell, and could not therefore be landed at Scutari. The value of the Prince is estimated at £150,000, and her cargo at £500,000. Thirty transports also went to pieces against the rocks at Balaklava and Eupatoria, and on the shores of the Katscha; 300 men were drowned, and many more fell into the hands of the Cossacks. The money value of these transports is estimated at more than half a million. The French fleet also sustained heavy losses. Eight brigs, laden with men and horses, went to pieces, and the men fell into the hands of the Cossacks. The fine line-of-battle ship Henri Quatre stranded, as also a Turkish ship of war, off Eupatoria. The gross value of the damage sustained by the expedition during the storm, which raged without intermission for three days and a-half, cannot be less than two millions sterling. The Cossacks, to their disgrace be it recorded, fired upon many of the shipwrecked mariners when they refused to come on shore and surrender themselves; but off the Katscha river the Samson replied to them with a smart shower of shell, and speedily made them take to their heels. We recognise in this the same code of humanity which commanded the murder of the wounded at Alma and at Inkerman.

The military authorities at home are making every endeavour to repair the loss with all possible speed. Fresh stores of winter clothing and munitions of war are being packed up and sent off as fast as they can be obtained. Many of the London gunsmiths are now busily engaged in completing the orders which have been shamefully neglected by the apathetic gunmakers of Birmingham; and it is satisfactory to know that Minié rifles form the bulk of these commissions. Altogether, the nation has reason to be satisfied with the exertions now being made to bring up the army to a full state of efficiency.

It is rumoured that the augmentation of the regular army intended to be proposed to Parliament will amount to 36,000 men.

Messrs. Brassey, Peto, and Betts, the celebrated contractors, are commissioned to construct a railway between Balaklava and the trenches. A gang of navvies, platelayers, &c., has been engaged, which starts for the seat of war early in next week. It is clear, however, that this work cannot be finished before March, when, we hope, it will no longer be wanted. Mr. Nasmyth's idea about wrought-iron guns has been taken up by Government, and he is empowered to proceed at once. We may, therefore, expect to have some of his promised miracles of gunnery at work when the spring sets in.

The politics of the present war have been somewhat cleared up by the conclusion of a treaty between France, England, and Austria. What the exact terms are, seems for the present doubtful; but the Times gives the following clauses as including all the important points:—

1. That Austria has engaged to consider any violation of the Turkish territory by Russia as equivalent to a declaration of war against herself.

2. That Austria will reinforce her army in the Principalities, so that Omar Pasha may at once begin operations, the imperial troops remaining as a kind of reserve.

3. At the demand of the Western Powers, Austria will place 15,000 or 25,000 men at Varna, which, in case of need, can be sent to the Crimea.

4. England and France pledge themselves that the territorial possessions of the Emperor of Austria shall, under all circumstances, remain undiminished.

Unlimited credence is not, however, to be given to this account of the treaty actually concluded, and there are indeed very grave reasons why a treaty so constituted should not meet with the approval of this nation. The first three clauses are vague to a fault. If a violation of Turkish territory be a sufficient casus belli, the Russians are at this moment violating that territory in Asia. The reserve of 15,000 or even 25,000 men is but an insignificant quota for an army 500,000 strong to supply; and it is not easy to see why the presence of an Austrian reserve in the Principalities should be necessary to enable Omar Pasha to commence operations, remembering, as we do, how gloriously he fought before a single Austrian soldier marched beyond the frontier. But it is the last clause that must hold up this treaty (if it be really based upon these conditions) to the detestation of all true Englishmen. We are to pledge ourselves to keep the territorial possessions of Austria undiminished. In other words, we are to pledge ourselves to keep Hungary enslaved by the active power of our arms, whenever she sees fit to rise against her tyrants. However, when Parliament meets we shall doubtless be put in full possession of the real terms of this treaty.

Speculation is naturally very rife as to the real nature of the business which Parliament will be called upon to transact. It is to be hoped, however, that all political differences will be suffered to fall into abeyance until the exigence of the crisis is overpast. Our army is waiting for succour, more money is wanted, and men have to be raised, in order that the war may be carried on with vigour. This is no time for party quarrels or party dissensions. Hereafter a time will come when the keenest party man may work his will, and all the shortcomings of Ministers may then be searchingly inquired into; at present, we have an urgent and vitally important duty to perform, and it must be done at once, without waste of either time or words. Nothing could gratify the Emperor Nicholas so much as to hear that the British Parliament met to consider the best means of making war upon him, and that they separated making war upon each other.

Mr. Sturge, the Birmingham corn-dealer, who made himself so eminently ridiculous by going out to St. Petersburg to ask the Emperor of Russia not to go to war, has written a letter to the working-classes of Birmingham, to assure them that the dear bread is all owing to the war. No doubt the war has something to do with it, but not all; and Mr. Sturge is scarcely honest, when he charges it all upon the war. Exaltation of last year's stocks has as much to do with it as the war, and Mr. Sturge, as a dealer, must have known that. The war, being costly, of course increases prices; but the people is satisfied, and bears its burden cheerfully.

Ex-Lord Mayor Sidney has laid himself open to remark by moving, in the Court of Aldermen, "that a dutiful Address be presented to her Majesty, praying that she will be graciously pleased to remove Lord Aberdeen from her councils." The aldermen themselves scouted the motion, as feeling that it would put them in a ridiculous position; and the public have scouted it, not so much because they disliked the suggestion, as because they despised the quarter from whence it came.

M. Kossuth's arguments having been attacked by a correspondent of the Times, the proud and irascible Magyar bursts out into a violent defence, indulging, by the way, in a little sarcasm about the nature of his own reception in this country. The correspondent of the Times had stated that "the Hungarian nation did not assist the Poles in 1830, but remained a quiescent spectator of their heroic struggle." This assertion M. Kossuth proves to be historically untrue; for that the Hungarians, on the contrary, did aid them to the utmost of their power. "And when Poland succumbed (continues M. Kossuth), when the Government we were subject to issued orders for not admitting the Polish refugees to cross the frontiers of Hungary, we smuggled them, at the risk of our lives, to our homes; we gave them not much of thundering cheers (that's not in our national character, being rather a silent people), but we took them to our fire-sides, placed them at our right, and held them as members of our own family for years and years, without even asking for their names, or inquiring whether they were aristocrats or democrats." There is somewhat of rebuke intended here. Shall we say undeserved?

SPORT AND SPORTSMEN.

The vacant seats are filling up. Sir Joseph Paxton had a walk over for Coventry. Captain Stuart has been elected for Bedford, after a struggle. Colonel Dickson, of Croom Castle, is standing for the county of Limerick. Mr. Norris is candidate for Abingdon. Marylebone has not yet made up its mind, but holds caucus meetings, as we hinted in our last.

In spite of the war-fever, the country does not neglect the arts of peace, and the Smithfield Cattle Show exhibits no falling-off when compared with its predecessors.

THE MULTITUDE OF COUNSELLORS.

NEVER was there such a conflict of advice! It used to be said that there is wisdom in the multitude of counsellors, but the proverb has certainly lost its vitality now-a-days. The war has produced a perfect babel of opinions, directly opposed one to another, and a cloud of facts that are entire contradictions. The columns of the Times have teemed with letters from correspondents that convince us there is but one hope for the army, until we read an answer the next day, which equally convinces us that, instead of the path of safety, it is the sure road to destruction. The climate of the Crimea has been a fertile theme for controversy. One writer asserts the cold to be such that you pull off your frozen foot with your boot, and skin your finger with your glove; another protests as positively that the winter in the Crimea is as mild as at Naples—in fact, that it is no winter at all, but only an early spring. One writer recommends sheepskins as the best garment; another looks upon them as worthless and unwearable; and a third and a fourth differ whether the wool is best worn outside or in. The mode of encamping for the winter has been contested with equal obstinacy. Some prefer wood; others iron; others, holes dug in the earth. The champion of wood declares that iron will freeze our warriors to death, and holes kill them with rheumatism. The advocate for iron holds wood in utter contempt, as letting wind through and being liable to burn, and he also protests against the cave theory as promoting typhus fever; while the holder of the hole system triumphantly points to the customs of the Wallachs for refutation of the predicted dangers.

Then there is the diet for the campaigners: how various the doctrines! Beef and beer, says one; soup and mutton, shouts another; soup causes dysentery, declares a third; beer is as bad as water, protests a fourth; brandy in abundance, with tobacco ad libitum, exclaims a fifth; brandy unfits men for cold, and tobacco disables them from active work, roars a sixth.

If Ministers were to pay heed to newspaper advisers, they would go mad. The correspondents of the daily press remind us of the two equal mechanical forces, which produce the equilibrium of perfect rest. If their advice were even entertained, nothing at all could be done. The army would starve, or perish from cold, or be swept away, because their very zealous friends cannot agree how to feed, clothe, house, or arm them.

But these contradictory counsels serve for something more than a laugh. They point a moral—Modesty. Let us agree not to pronounce opinions too hastily upon the conduct of those who, being in receipt of the best information, must better know how to act than we can possibly do, wanting their means of knowledge.

A WARNING.

THE war is popular with the democratic and revolutionary party and press in England, entirely because they hope it will kindle an European conflagration, in which red republicanism will be triumphant and Kossuth, Mazzini, and Louis Blanc reign instead of Frederick, the Pope, and Napoleon; Ernest Jones taking the place of Victoria Guelph in Buckingham Palace. The Leader, whose cleverness makes its principles the more to be feared, dares the open avowal that it looks upon the war as leading directly to European revolution; and it advocates the arming of our own population, that they may wrest their rights—meaning, by rights, the establishment of democracy. The opinions of the foes to the existing order of society are important in this respect, that they teach us what to avoid. If they desire or applaud the adoption of any course, because they believe that it will promote their own destructive desires, it should make all who hold principles that are anti-destructive pause and think twice before they give help or countenance to objects sought by persons only for such ends.

It is one of the advantages of a free press that we learn what our enemies are thinking, doing, or contemplating. We learn from the Red Republican journals what to avoid. If they advocate the arming of the people that it might enable them to make a revolution, prudent men will avoid a course which the foes of real order believe will bring about such a result.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, LONDON.—At the session of Council on Saturday last the Longbridge prize of £40, for general proficiency in medicine and surgery, was awarded to Mr. F. G. Clarkson, lately a student of the college, and now of Paradise-row, Darlington.

CENTRAL ASSOCIATION IN AID OF THE WIVES AND FAMILIES OF SOLDIERS.—By the appointment of the Governor-General of India, the 16th of July last was observed throughout the Indian dioceses as the day of humiliation, on which occasion collections were made in all the churches in aid of the wives and families of the soldiers employed in the present war. In the Madras diocese the amount collected was rupees 10,097 10 2, the equivalent of which in English money is £957. 3s. 5d.

"Pray, what is a gentleman without his recreations?"

ALTHOUGH we are on the eve of Christmas, the weather is such as to allow the hounds to be worked nearly every day in the week. Sly Reynard, as well as the horses, have but little time to rest, and if the frost does not set in, there will be but few sportsmen able to meet "my lord" at the cover side. The Times correspondent who suggested the propriety of fox-hunters sending their spare hunters to the Crimea has, we think, but a poor chance of seeing his suggestions carried out, as all the available hunters are wanted in order to allow their masters to follow the hounds as often as their inclination tempts them. It is no easy matter for a 12st man to keep himself well horsed in such weather as this during the whole season, and unless the weather changes the fields will be considerably thinned. As illustrative of this fact, a well-known master of hounds, who works his country admirably with a stud of upwards of fifty horses, was once applied to by his stud-groom to allow him "just to prepare the Horncastle nag for the Newport Pagnell steeplechase," as he was sure that "nothing could touch him." The reply was "I can't even spare one of my horses, or you should have him." The fact is, that no hunters can be spared for our cavalry, but there are plenty of horses in the country that would make admirable chargers. What our Government should do would be to give our farmers the same price for their cattle as the foreigners give them. If they will do this, there need be no fear of a scarcity of horses for our cavalry; but, as we stated last week, the farmers cannot afford to sell their nags at Government prices.

The Essex Union Hounds had a capital thing a few days ago, when they pulled the sly-kin down at Purleigh Lodge, after two hours and twenty minutes. The pace was very fast. The Squire then took his friends to Slough House, when a brace of foxes were set on foot, and after another two hours of good hunting, the hounds were stopped—both rider and horse having had enough. The Pytchley hounds, on the 22nd ult., had also a severe forty minutes run, when they ran their fox to ground at the Broughton earths. The hounds slipped away so quickly for eighteen miles, that not more than half the field ever saw a hound the whole day. The Belvoir hounds had a fine run of one hour and a-half, with scarcely a check, on the 21st ult., and killed near Norton Disney. The Berkshire experienced, a few days since, a splendid run over a beautiful hunting country—the meet being at Cokethorpe Park—and after one hour and three-quarters running, the fox crossed the Thames, the majority of the field being obliged to resort to Tadpole and Radcott bridges. Lord Portsmouth has scarcely been absent from the field a day this season. His lordship, however, missed "the best thing" on the 23rd ult., when slyboots led them about thirteen miles to and fro, over an open country. The hounds, we understand, worked beautifully, and independent of the huntsman (Turner) and the first whip, there was only one gentleman up at the finish (Mr. Bent), who got off well, and kept his place over an awkward country. Although the fox-hunter cannot spare any of his horses for the war, he is ready with his purse to help our brave fellows in the East. The Warwickshire Hunt Club has set an example which we hope will be followed throughout the country, viz.—"That no ball shall take place this winter, and that a donation be presented, in lieu thereof, to the Patriotic Fund," which generally amounts to about 250 guineas. We have already observed the names of many a good fox-hunter in the list of subscribers, and we have no doubt that their gold has not gone unaccompanied with their hearts' best wishes.

The Burneston (Yorkshire) Coursing Meeting is fixed for the 27th and 28th of this month, under the stewardship of Capt. Russell, Messrs. Read, Oulthwait, Green, Hutclinson, and Thompson. The committee have issued their conditions of the meeting, from which we extract the following, believing that if other officials would observe them, there would be less grumbling on the part of owners of unsuccessful dogs:—

"Double nominations will be guarded throughout.

"No dog to have more than one natural bye, and the lowest dog to have the first. If more byes than one, the biggest dog to have the next.

"The nominator of any dog found loose during a course to be fined 10s.; if belonging to the owner or nominator of either dog engaged in the course, the course to be decided against him.

"When two dogs are left in the last tie, the owner or owners shall not be compelled to run them to decide; but, should they agree to divide, or draw one, and declare the other the winner, the odds laid against either dog winning shall be put together and divided accordingly."

We are aware that it is difficult to please all parties, yet it cannot be denied that the dissentients have, in many instances, good cause to be displeased, not only with the conditions, but with the decisions of some of the judges. The following fixtures are for next week:—

PLACE.	COUNTRY.	JUDGES.	DATE.
Pilling	Lancashire	Mr. R. Curwen	12
Mounainstown ..	Meath	Mr. Owens	12 and 13
Southminster ..	Essex	Mr. Tibbitt	12 and 13
Hainton	Lincolnshire ..	Mr. Watson	13 and 14
Conid	Salop	Mr. Warwick	14
Caledonian	Leamark	Mr. Nightingale ..	14, &c.
Alter Club	Lancashire	Mr. A. Bennett	14 and 15
Shifhall	Salop	Mr. Warwick	12

We learn, from the Inverness Courier, that two poachers have been fined £5. 13s. 6d. for fishing with lights in the river Nairn. The sheriff-substitute, of Nairnshire, gave them a suitable admonition, and impressed upon them the fact, that they had been guilty of no trifling offence. It would be well if the magistrates of England would treat the poacher in fishing-waters with the same severity as the poacher after game. We should then have a more plentiful and, consequently, cheaper supply of fresh-water fish in the market. At the recent meeting of the Tay proprietors it was resolved to recommend the various fishing proprietors to close the season on the 26th of August, instead of the 14th of September. The Earl of Mansfield was of opinion that the fish caught after the 26th of August were bad; and Mr. Condie observed that it was well-known that the tacksmen did not get sufficient fish to pay their working expenses between the 25th of August and the present statutory period. It is evident, therefore, that there can be no objection to that part of Mr. Marshall's proposed bill touching the time at which the season should close. The Duke of Richmond, who was once opposed to the shortening of the season, is now an advocate for it; and as his grace is a large proprietor on the Spey, his opinion will have great weight. At the meeting in question it was resolved to levy 7½ per cent on the rental of the fishings (£9,000), for the purpose of enforcing the Act of Parliament intitled "An Act for the Preservation of Salmon Fisheries in Scotland," and other laws regulating the salmon fisheries. Mr. Buist's report was read, in which was stated:—

"In consequence of proprietors and clergymen exerting themselves in their respective districts, in the vicinity of the Tay and its tributaries, poaching had been diminished, and larger numbers than usual, of spawning fish, were seen on the shallows. The closing, on the 26th August, 1853, of the fishings above the Earn, had done much good."

Mr. Buist, in referring to the artificial propagation of salmon, remarks:—

"When the scheme was first proposed, he had a good deal of misgiving as to its practicability, utility, and beneficial results to the fishings. Having, however, the honour of being appointed on the committee, he was determined, so far as lay in his power, to give the scheme fair play, and all the support he could lend in his department, for carrying it out to a successful result. When Mr. Ramsbottom came here in November, the superintendent supplied him with some of the most intelligent men for carrying on the operations of finding the parturient fish, attending to the spawning, and filling the spawning-beds. All this was done most successfully during the last half of November and the month of December. By the 22nd day of December the spawning-boxes or salmon-nests were all filled, and contained about 400,000 ova or eggs. All these were, with great care, watched and protected from frost and other dangers in winter, and by the end of March and beginning of April the young brood began to make their appearance. They have since been nourished and fed, and are now a fine, thriving, healthy colony of young fish, some already near the size, and getting the silvery appearance of smolts. Unless greatly stunted and retarded in their growth by the rigours of winter, there is reason to believe they will be ready to join with their brethren of the river, and go along with them in their journey to the sea, and will then return as well-grown grilse. So far, therefore, as concerns the practicability of artificial breeding of salmon, that has been demonstrated without a doubt. As to its utility, that has also been partly shown; because, by the experiment, it appears that the eggs of salmon can be transported to other rivers, to stock the barren, or improve the breed in others not so favoured as the Tay."

Pray what do those long-winded "authorities" on the salmon, who pool-pooled even the idea of attempting to re-stock our rivers by artificial means, say to the opinion of Mr. Buist, who is fully qualified to give a correct one? These "eminent naturalists," at the first onset, threw cold water on the movement, and all but ridiculed its promoters. Time, however, has shown the fallacy of their presumptive arguments.

We briefly noticed in THE FIELD of last week a fatal accident which had happened to a person in Yorkshire, by the accidental discharge of his gun. We have now to record another fatal catastrophe which has occurred at Manchester through the bursting of a gun, which was represented to be of the cheap class. From the evidence adduced, it appears that no more than the ordinary charge of shot and powder was used, and that the exterior showed no such defects as would lead the observer to imagine that danger was to be apprehended. The fault rested with the gun-barrel, which was dangerously constructed, and we have no doubt that flaws in the interior of the barrel were observable. Scarcely a week passes in the shooting-season but we read innumerable cases similar to the one referred to; and, considering the number of these dangerous weapons which are constantly being sold by ironmongers and others, who really know nothing of them, our only surprise is that accidents are not of more frequent occurrence. A few remarks, by way of caution, to inexperienced sportsmen, will not, we trust, be deemed misplaced; and having had considerable experience in guns, and everything relative thereto, we can advise thereon with confidence. The articles in question are frequently taken round the provinces and sold at low figures, and are eagerly snapped up by parties who cannot detect a good gun from an indifferent one. By an experienced gunner, however, they are easily detected. The barrels are stained to represent the best twisted iron, whereas the iron is really the very worst metal that can be found for the purpose; the locks are constructed with bad mainsprings, and with tumblers that go off, after a little using, when at half-cock with as much ease as at full-spring; the "furniture" is highly-coloured, in order to prevent the observer from detecting bad furnishing and still worse engraving; the stocks are made of green wood, and the varnish is rubbed on so thickly that it peels off in large cakes when exposed to foul weather. In the inside of the barrels, near the breach, may be seen large holes, from one to two inches in length; and even the interior of the breeches themselves, generally speaking, are so formed that it is a miracle they are not blown to pieces from the effects of the first discharge,—in fine, the works are let into the gun-stock so carelessly, that the workmen fill up sundry niches and cracks with a composition, which is not observable until the gun be taken to pieces for the purpose of cleaning or repairing; in a word, they are made expressly for sale, and not for wear. Serious and fatal accidents are continually occurring by shooting with them; and until the Government punish the makers of these life-destroyers with severity—the generosity of whom unblushingly put on the safety-proof mark—we feel convinced the unthinking public will still continue to purchase, and accidents of a frightful nature will as assuredly follow. Our readers will probably remember the accident that occurred to Sir Claude Scott, through shooting with a gun made of steel barrels, which burst in a similar manner to the one at Manchester this week. In the case of Sir Claude Scott's accident, a searching investigation took place at the proof-house in Whitechapel, before a committee of gentlemen, including the late Colonel Hawker, Mr. Bishop, Mr. Purday, and other practical men, and after all the evidence and circumstances connected with the accident were brought forward, the verdict told against the steel guns—inasmuch as the metal is more brittle than iron, and less likely to swell, as good iron will invariably do, when overloaded, rather than burst. Steel guns are, however, now out of date. The best made guns of the present day are perfectly safe to shoot with so long as they are properly charged and used; but such as those described are dangerous in the extreme, and if the sportsmen would only bear in mind that in discharging it he ran nearly as much risk of losing his life as if he were within the reach of a loaded musket pointed at him by a Russian, he might then be induced to purchase a safe weapon. Great improvements have been made since the reign of "Joe Manton," some five-and-thirty years ago. The price which this celebrated maker obtained for his best guns was eighty-five guineas. His general figure, we believe, was sixty-five guineas, and his fame was so great, that he could not supply guns fast enough. Noblemen have been known to give him blank cheques to fill up for a pair of his best. Money, in those days, is almost unnecessary to state, was more plentiful than it is now—or, at any rate the owners of it were more liberally disposed.

RACING.

DATES OF RACES.

FEBRUARY.—Nottingham.	20	Nottingham.	19
Liverpool Spring.	24	Goodwood.	31
MARCH.—Doncaster.	6	AUGUST.—Brighton.	8
Salisbury.	8	Brighton Club.	10
Warwick Spring.	20	Wolverhampton.	13
APRIL.—Newmarket Craven.	9	Reading.	11
York Spring.	17	Leves.	16
Milton.	19	York.	22
Newmarket First Spring.	23	Belham.	28
MAY.—Chester Spring.	1	Derby.	24
Newmarket Second Spring.	8	SEPTEMBER.—Warwick.	4
Stewardsbury.	13	Doncaster.	11
Bath.	13	Bellfield.	18
Epsom.	23	Leicester.	19
Manchester.	30	Newmarket First October.	23
JUNE.—Ascot.	5	Northallerton.	27
Hampton.	13	OCTOBER.—Chester.	27
Ilkley.	20	Wrexham.	4
Stockbridge.	21	Newmarket Second October.	8
Winchester.	22	Warwick Autumn.	16
Newcastle.	26	Richmond.	17
JULY.—Newmarket.	3	Newmarket Houghton.	22
Worcester.	3	Worcester.	30
Lancaster.	5	NOVEMBER.—Epsom.	1
Liverpool.	11	Liverpool.	6
Stamford.	17	Shrewsbury.	13

TATTERSALL'S.—MONDAY.

A thin attendance, and only a very limited amount of business transacted.

The principal Derby bets were 600 to 40 once, and 630 to 40 twice against Lord of the Isles; the latter odds were laid towards the close—13 to 1, to £75, against St. Hubert, 1000 to 100 against Oulton, and 1000 to 35 against Polydora, whose backers offered to treble the investment, but the odds were immediately reduced to 1000 to 40.

CLOSING PRICES.

Wolverhampton Steeplechase.	1 to 1 on the field (off)
Shov's Handicap.	3 to 1 against Kennyside Hero (t) 5 to 1 against Eva (t) 8 to 1 against Kitchell (t—10 to 1 also laid)
Chatter Cup.	50 to 1 against Honeyuckle (t to £100) 50 to 1 against Wild Huntsman (t to £30)
Derby.	9 to 1 against Greenish Barriens (t) 20 to 1 against Wild Dayrell (t) 13 to 1 against Lord of the Isles (t) 25 to 1 against Polydora (25 to 1 t) 17 to 1 against St. Hubert (t) 1000 to 15 against Rambling Katie (t) 13 to 1 against Oulton (t) 1000 to 15 against The Russian (t) 10 to 1 against Kitchell 1000 to 10 afterwards offered Offers to take 1000 to 13 about Mr. Batson's Bison.

THURSDAY.

Graculus Kauriens was backed for £150 in one bet, at 9 to 1. Very few members were present.

Derby.	9 to 1 against Graculus Kauriens (t) 30 to 1 against Wild Dayrell (t) 13 to 1 against St. Hubert (t) 1000 to 15 against Rambling Katie (t) 15 to 1 against Oulton (t to 1 laid once to 125)
Chatter Cup.	5000 to 100 against The Wild Huntsman 2000 to 40 against Virago 5000 to 75 against Brimswick

The following bets were laid in the course of the morning in the City—

5000 to 100 against The Wild Huntsman	2000 to 40 against Virago
2000 to 50 against Honeyuckle	5000 to 75 against Brimswick

At the Club 300 to 200 was bet on Lord of the Isles, Bonnie Morn, St. Hubert, and Dirk Hatterick.

WOLVERHAMPTON AUTUMN RACES AND STEEPLECHASES.—TUESDAY.

The sport was of a better order, the races better contested, and the fields larger than at several of the recent steeplechase meetings. A flat race opened the proceedings, entitled—

The Short's Handicap, 3 sows each, with 20 added. For all ages. Half a mile. 12 subs.

Mr. J. Wood's Kennyside Hero, by St. Leon, 3 yrs, 1st 12lb.	Kendall 1
Mr. Warrington's Kitchell, 5 yrs, 8st 5lb.	W. White 2
Mr. Douglas's Blossum, 3 yrs, 6st 6lb.	Prime 3
Mr. Mather's Whitlock, 3 yrs, 6st 3lb.	Walters 1
Mr. E. Taylor's Knight Errant, 1 yrs, 7st 1lb, Ashmole
Mr. Green's Alma (late Lady in Waiting), 5 yrs, 7st, Walls
Mr. W. Jarvis's Allobroch, 1 yrs, 8st 13lb (car. 1st 8lb), Jarvis
Mr. Mather's Eva, 3 yrs, 6st 13lb, T. Child
Capt. H. Kitchell's g. by Earl of Richmond, dam by Combat (h-h), 1 yrs, 6st 10lb, Hughes
Mr. W. K. Walker's Chastina, 2 yrs, 6st 8lb (carried 5st 10lb), Bearpark
Mr. J. John's Speed, 2 yrs, 5st 2lb, H. Bray

Betting—5 to 4 against Kennyside Hero, 3 to 1 against Eva, 6 to 1 against Chastina, 10 to 1 against Kitchell, Speed, and Whitlock.

A good start was effected at the first attempt, Kitchell cutting out the running followed by Eva and Kennyside Hero, Whitlock, Speed, and Knight Errant, pretty close together. At the distance, Kitchell and Kennyside Hero came together, the latter detouring the former closely in a sharp run home by half a length. Blossum third, within a neck of Kitchell, and Whitlock equally close up as fourth. Eva was fifth, Chastina sixth, the rest pulled up.

The Selling Stakes, of 3 sows each, with 20 added. Three-quarters of a mile. 10 subs.

Mr. W. Mosely's Romeo, by California, 4 yrs, 7st 7lb	T. Child 1
Mr. Warrington's Voucher, 1 yrs, 7st 11lb.	Charlton 2
Mr. W. Norton's Grimalkin, 3 yrs, 7st 5lb.	Wells 3
Mr. Ashmole's Liberty, aged, 8st 5lb.	Ashmole 4
Mr. J. Hopwood's Royal George, 5 yrs, 8st 4lb.	Thorpe 5

Betting—5 to 4 against Voucher, 2 to 1 against Romeo.

Voucher got off badly, Liberty, Royal George, and Romeo forming the front rank. Coming to the turn, Voucher drew forward, as did Grimalkin, while Romeo, passing Liberty, got well in front. Voucher got by Grimalkin, and raced after Romeo, but lost by two lengths, being a length in front of the third. Liberty was a bad fourth. There was no bidding for the winner.

The Grand Annual Steeplechase Handicap Steeplechases of 20 sows each, 10 ft, and fire only if declared, &c., with 100 added. About four miles. 15 subs, five of whom pay £5 each.

Mr. S. Mansell's Peter, by Steamer, aged, 10st 5lb.	Allett 1
Mr. Gibbs's Jenny the Black, 5 yrs, 8st.	W. White 3
Mr. Price's Tom Gummy, 6 yrs, 8st 5lb.	Weaver 3
Mr. W. Barnett's Diana (h-h), aged, 9st 10lb.	R. Archer 4
Mr. J. B. Barrett's Laura, aged, 10st, J. Byrne
Mr. Buchanan's Escape, 6 yrs, 8st 6lb, Knott
Mr. B. Land's Theodine, 6 yrs, 8st 11lb, G. Stevens
Mr. C. Boyce's Cervus, aged, 8st 3lb, H. Bell

Rose was scratched at five minutes to two o'clock.

Betting—3 to 1 against Jenny the Black, 5 to 1 against Peter and Tom Gummy, 8 to 1 against Cervus and Theodine.

Escape led over the drop fence, Tom Gummy, Laura, Peter, and Jenny the Black joining the front division, and so they went over the water-jump in front of the grand stand, Laura, if anything, first, and Theodine last. Escape in the second round ran out, after wrestling the lead from Laura and Peter. Jenny the Black now came forward, and was first over the last flight of hurdles. Peter, however, headed him, and won by half a length. Time, 10 min. 15 sec.

Match of 100 sows each, 23 ft. 11st each, over the Steeplechase ground. Mr. C. Boyce's St. Hilary (late Wall-awhile) received it from Capt. Rhy's Royalty.

Free Handicap Hurdle Race of 5 sows each, with 10 added. Twice round and a distance, over eight flights of hurdles. 15 subs.

Mr. Devonport's Sailor, 5 yrs, 10st 6lb.	R. Sly 1
Mr. Minors's Garland, aged, 8st 2lb.	G. Stevens 2
Mr. W. Barnett's Freighter, 5 yrs, 9st 13lb.	R. Archer 3
Mr. Harding's Dill Mowry, aged, 9st 11lb.	G. Ratwell 4
Mr. Waller's Apostle, 5 yrs, 10st 2lb.	Knott 5
Mr. Robinson's Freedom, 5 yrs, 10st 4lb, W. White
Mr. J. Brown's Calmar, aged, 10st, G. Pussell
Mr. Gibbs's Jenny the Black, 5 yrs, 9st 13lb (car. 10st 3lb), Tasker
Mr. Davies's Muerra, 1 yrs, 10st 5lb (car. 7lb each, G. Smith
Mr. B. Land's Gaslight, 1 yrs, 9st 10lb, L. Langhugh
Mr. W. Jarvis's Allobroch, 1 yrs, 8st 13lb, Weaver
Mr. C. Walker's The Captain, 6 yrs, 9st 11lb, R. James
Mr. T. Oliver's Frank, 5 yrs, 9st 4lb, R. James
Mr. Boston's Emmeline, aged, 8st 11lb, Hacket

Betting—7 to 2 against Freedom, 1 to 1 against Sailor, 6 to 1 against Frank, 7 to 1 against Freighter, 10 to 1 against Gaslight. Won by a length, two lengths between the second and third. At the hurdles opposite the stand on the far side, Allobroch, who was leading, swerved on to the rails, jumped over some people, and fell heavily. Gaslight and Freedom were carried with him, and also came to the ground. Langhugh, who rode Gaslight, sustained a severe dislocation of the kneecap, which being surgically reduced, we are happy to say, is not likely to inflict any prolonged disablement.

BETTING ON THE COURSE.

8 to 1 on the field (off)	Derby.	30 to 1 against Polydora (t)
11 to 1 against The Flare (t)

Offers to take 25 to 1 about Dirk Hatterick.

CONFY CASTLE STEEPLECHASES.

MONDAY, Dec. 4.

Stewards—Sir Edward Hutchinson, Bart.; and Captain Smith, 4th Northamptonshire Militia. Secretary—Mr. W. Robins. Judge—Mr. R. Hunter. Clerk of the Course—Mr. W. Lynch.

This meeting, which was looked forward to with no ordinary degree of interest by the sporting world in Ireland, in consequence of the match made at Limerick in October last between Allan McDonough, Esq., and the Knight of Glynn, with the conditions of which the public have been for some time acquainted, through the medium of THE FIELD and other journals, came off on the above date, but was rendered almost entirely unattractive on it becoming known that the knight would not "show," and that his fair competitor would be allowed to walk over. No cause, up to the present, has been assigned for thus depriving the curious of witnessing what would have been, indeed, a treat; but we may add, that it was the gallant knight's wish, expressed three weeks ago, that the match should be "off," which, however, could not be agreed to. Three other events, referred to below, were got up on the same day; but one only produced anything like a race, and that, extending to four heats, was won by Matilda (now called Thrush), a weal from Land's stable in England. The day was beautifully fine, the ground in capital order, and the attendance extremely large, numbering many of the aristocracy, who seemed to be sorely disappointed at the result of the match. We append particulars—

Match of 100 sows each, p.p. Catch weights. Three miles.

Mr. A. McDonough's br g Seaman, by The Sea, aged, 5 yrs, paid.

The Knight of Glynn's br m Victory, by Young Friam, 5 yrs, paid. Mrs. McDonough went to the post precisely at a quarter before two o'clock. She was attired in a plain blue cloth habit, and Jersey hat, with feather. At the word "away" she started, her husband riding alongside of her, and, throughout the entire course, met with no accident, if we except that Seaman raised his hind-legs at the brook, first round, and, on landing in the adjoining field, fell over on his side, fortunately without in the slightest degree hurting the rider, who was up and going in an incredibly short space of time. It is needless to add that Mrs. McDonough was cheered most heartily on her return into the enclosure. She wore no spur, but used her whip pretty freely on approaching some of the fences.

Railway Plate of 20 sows, added to a Sweepstakes of 3 sows each. Weight for age. Four-yr-olds, 10st 10lb; five, 10st 10lb; six and aged, 11st 7lb. 2lb allowed to mares and geldings. All sows entering subject to be sold for £100. If entered to be sold for £75, allowed 5lb; £50, 10lb; £30, 14lb. One mile and a half. Heats.

Mr. J. Doyle's br m Thrush (late Matilda), by Birdcatcher, dam Celeste, 5 yrs, £50, 9st 11lb, D. Money

Mr. A. Knox's b g Postillon, aged, £50, 10st 4lb, D. Money

Mr. Wilson's b g Abd-el-Kader, aged, £100, 11st 4lb, P. Martin

Mr. Colgan's ch g Honest Tom, aged, £50, 10st 8lb, Kelly

Mr. Cassidy's b g Bonjour, 4 yrs, £30, 9st 11lb, J. Haulon

First heat won by three parts of a length; second, by a head; third and fourth, in a canter.

Military Stakes, 5 sows each, and a Gold Whip, the gift of Mr. Doyle, V.S., Westland-row Dublin, to the Officers of the 48th Northamptonshire. Horses to be bona fide the property of officers on full pay, serving in Ireland, or of the Stewards, one month previous to the race, and to be ridden by same. 11st 7lb each. Three miles.

Captain Smith's br m Eugene, by Comet, owned w/o Captain Andrews's br g Despard, Captain Watkins's ch g Moonbeam, Captain Hill's ch m Lady-in-waiting, Mr. Wake's b m Miss Reynolds, and Mr. Lovell's b m Topsy, paid.

Scurry Stakes, of 100 sows, with 5 added. 10st each. One mile and a half.

A winner of any steeplechase value £50 to carry 11lb extra. Mr. Cassidy's b g Bonjour by Haulon, J. Haulon 1 Mr. Ryan's Scurry Cat, Ryan 2 Mr. Martin's Don Sister to Dindie, Noonan 3 Mr. Moore's Sport-on (late the Iron Duke), Brady 1 Won easily.

PEDESTRIANISM.—On Thursday, in a field in St. Thomas's, a match to walk seven miles for £30 came off between Robert Rutter, of the 15th Hussars, and John Thomas, known in sporting circles as "the London Salsopian," when Rutter, who was allowed one minute's start, won—accomplishing the distance in 53½ minutes, Thomas losing by 5 seconds. Many sporting gentlemen were present, and bets freely made.

HUNTING.

APPOINTMENTS FOR THE WEEK.

THE QUEEN'S HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Hillingdon; Friday, Middenhead Wicket, at eleven.

THE CHELTENHAM SUBSCRIPTION STAG-HOUNDS.—Monday, Hawling Gate; Wednesday, Walton, Cardiff; Friday, Church-down Hill, at half-past eleven.

THE BRAMHAM MOOR FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Harewood Bridge; Wednesday, Black Dog, Cambleforth Common; Friday, North Deighton; Saturday, Garforth Bridge, at half-past ten.

THE TICKHAM FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Key-street; Thursday, Belmont; Saturday, Rodmersham Green; Tuesday week, Surrenden; Friday week, Squirrel's, Stockbury, at half-past ten.

THE E. E. F. H.—Tuesday, Crouch Fair Green; Thursday, Thessing-street; Saturday, Terling Rayleigh Arms, at eleven.

THE CRAWLEY AND HONSHAM FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, the Norfolk Arms Gate; Wednesday, Slindoff Village; Friday, Turner's Hill; Monday week, Rowfant Lodge; Wednesday week, Whitman's Green; Friday week, Tilgate Lodge, at a quarter before eleven.

COLONEL WYNDHAM'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Saturday (this day), Aldworth Bridge, at half-past eleven.

THE EARL OF YAMBOURGH'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Gralushy House; Wednesday, Elsham Hall; Friday, Normanby Clump, at eleven.

THE BADSWORTH FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Hampole Inn; Thursday, Methley Bridge; Saturday, Ringstone Hill, at half-past ten.

THE DUMFRIES (LORD DRUMLANRIG'S) FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Lockerbie; Saturday, Dalawinton, at half-past ten.

YORK AND AINSY FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Strensall; Tuesday, Copmanthorpe; Thursday, Copgrove; Saturday, Ric Moore, Brufferton, at half-past ten.

MR. DEACON'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Horsebridge; Thursday, Viverdon, at half-past ten.

MR. TRELAVERY'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Ivybridge; Saturday, Flete Western Lodge, at half-past ten.

MR. COLYER'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Bower Farm; Thursday, All Hill; Saturday, the Vigo Gate; Tuesday week, the Portobello; Saturday week, Clattemen, at half-past ten.

THE SOMERSET SUBSCRIPTION FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Wick Park; Friday, Withycombe Wood; Tuesday week, the Kennel; Friday week, Raleigh's Cross, at half-past ten.

THE F. B. FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Antron Gate; Friday, Merther, at half-past ten.

THE OLD BERSHAM FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Farringdon Grove; Tuesday, Bablock Hythe; Friday, Ardington; Saturday, Brudenrop Park, by permission, at half-past ten.

THE DUKE OF BUCCLEUCH'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, St. Boswell's Green; Tuesday, Minto; Thursday, Hinsel; Saturday, Melrose Bridge, at half-past ten.

THE EARL OF WEMYSS'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Langridge; Tuesday, Preston-by-Dunse; Wednesday, Wark; Friday, Sniprin; Saturday, Copeland, at half-past ten.

THE EARL OF PORTSMOUTH'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Kingsclere; Tuesday, Wherwell Wood; Wednesday, Itchingwell; Friday, Littlecott House; Saturday, Freefolk Wood, at eleven.

THE LANARKSHIRE AND RENFREWSHIRE FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Hawkhead; Saturday, Bishopton; Tuesday week, Johnstone Castle; Saturday week, Houston Village, at a quarter before eleven.

THE ATHERSTONE HOUNDS.—Saturday (this day), Arbury; Monday, Desford Station; Wednesday, Grendon Bridge; Friday, Three Pots; Saturday, Middleton Hall, at eleven.

H. C. MEYNELL INGRAM'S HOUNDS.—Saturday (this day), Alvaston Castle; Monday, Eton Wood; Thursday, Drake-lowe; Saturday, Loxley, at a quarter before eleven.

THE HEREFORDSHIRE (MR. HELLER'S) HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Chauston; Friday, Five-Mile-Stone, Froom's Hill Road, at half-past ten.

THE WORCESTERSHIRE HOUNDS.—Monday, Red Lion, Upton Snodsbury; Wednesday, Severn Stoke; Friday, Cotheridge, at half-past ten.

THE HERTFORDSHIRE HOUNDS.—Monday, Pinfret Castle; Wednesday, Willcot; Friday, Bourton Bridge; Saturday, Kidlington Gate, at half-past ten.

THE NORTH STAFFORDSHIRE HOUNDS.—Monday, Johnstone Hall; Thursday, Seighford, at half-past ten.

THE WARWICKSHIRE HOUNDS.—Monday, Long Itchington; Tuesday, Hinington; Thursday, Alcester; Friday, Church Tysote, at a quarter before eleven.

THE NORTH WARWICKSHIRE HOUNDS.—Saturday (this day), Kenilworth Castle, at eleven.

THE WHEATLAND HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Cressage Park; Friday, Willey Park, at half-past ten.

THE LEDBURY HOUNDS.—Monday, the Somers Arms, East-nor; Friday, Huntley Common; Tuesday week, Ham Bridge; Friday week, the Frith, at half-past ten.

THE PITCHLEY HOUNDS.—Saturday (this day), Sibberton, at a quarter before eleven.

THE CHESHIRE HOUNDS.—Monday, Bradfield Green; Tuesday, Tatton, at half-past ten; Thursday, Astle, at eleven; Friday, Arley; Monday week, Waterloft; Tuesday week, Wrenbury; Thursday week, Cholmondeley; Friday week, Ravensmoor Windmill, at half-past ten.

CAPTAIN HAMPTON LEWIS'S HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Store House Wen; Friday, Trevor Gate, at eleven.

MR. ASHETON SMITH'S HOUNDS.—Monday, Tangley Village; Tuesday, New Mill; Wednesday, Pill Heath; Thursday, Vernham Gate; Friday, South Grove; Saturday, Roche Court, at eleven.

THE ESSEX (MR. HENLEY GREAVES'S) HOUNDS.—Monday, Kelydon Common; Wednesday, North Weald; Saturday, Hatfield Heath, at eleven.

MR. DRAKE'S HOUNDS.—Monday, Chilton Village; Tuesday, Weston on the Green; Thursday, Grendon Village; Saturday, Hinton-in-the-Hedges, at a quarter before eleven.

THE ALBINGDON HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Rinton; Thursday, Hilton; Saturday, Pat-hill, at a quarter before eleven.

THE COTSWOLD HOUNDS.—Monday, Carby; Tuesday, Cotes Lodge; Thursday, Foster's Bridge; Saturday, Knassington, at eleven.

EARL FITZWILLIAM'S HOUNDS.—Monday, the Kennel; Leighton Village; Friday, Elton New Close, at ten.

THE HALSBOY HOUNDS.—Monday, Sherwood Green; Friday, Winscott Moor; Monday week, Huntshaw Wood; Friday week, Benford Village, at half-past ten.

THE SURREY UNDS HOUNDS.—Monday, West Horsley Place; Wednesday, Akinge Hatch; Saturday, Oakshot Flat; Monday week, the Kennel; Wednesday week, Wintershall; Saturday week, Hand Post, Netley Heath, at half-past ten.

BARON ROTHSCHILD'S HOUNDS.—Monday, Fleet Marston; Thursday, Aston Abbotts.

MR. GARTH'S HOUNDS.—Monday, Arborfield Bull; Wednesday, Sandhurst Village; Friday, Clere Park, at half-past ten.

MR. WHEELER'S HOUNDS.—Monday, Ashamstead; Tuesday, Burfield Bridge; Thursday, Clapper's Farm, Silchester; Friday, Westport Green, at eleven.

THE PRICKERIDGE HOUNDS.—Monday, Patmore Heath; Wednesday, Stanstead, Essex; Saturday, Bennington, at half-past ten.

THE UNITED PACK.—Saturday (this day), Ridgway Gate; Tuesday, Norton, near Prestoigne, at nine.

THE EAMONT HARRIERS.—Monday, Salkeld Dykes; Wednesday, Hutton End; Saturday, the Kennel, at half-past ten.

THE BRIGHTON HARRIERS.—Mondays, Patcham; Wednesdays, at the Race Course and Thursday's Barrow, alternately; Saturdays, the Dyke, at a quarter before eleven.

THE BROOKSIDE HARRIERS.—Mondays, Newmarket Hill; Thursdays, Telscomb Tye, at half-past ten.

THE SOUTHDOWN FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Bourne Hill, at a quarter before eleven.

THE WORTHING HARRIERS.—Saturday (this day), the Kennel.

THE CARLISLE HARRIERS.—Tuesday, Whitwick; Friday, Howring; Saturday, Cross Roads, at ten.

THE EARL OF LONSDALE'S HARRIERS.—Friday, Rowsham, at twelve.

IRELAND.

THE WARD UNION STAG-HOUNDS.—Monday, Flathouse; Wednesday, Kilshane; Friday, Dunboyne, at one.

THE CLARE FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Ballycar; Friday, Watertown, at a quarter to eleven.

THE GALWAY FOX-HOUNDS (the Blazers).—Tuesday, St. Glens; Saturday, Armagh, at eleven.

THE KILDARE FOX-HOUNDS.—Saturday (this day), Six-Mile-Stone, on the Naas road from Dublin; Tuesday, Tynthe Park; Thursday, Blackchurch; Saturday, Blessington, at eleven.

THE LOUTH FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Rocksavage; Thursday, The Naal, at eleven.

MR. CHARLES MAHON'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Port Royal; Thursday, Newbrook, at eleven.

MR. LONGWORTH'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Newpark; Saturday, The Doone, at eleven.

MR. KING'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Castle Shepherd, at eleven.

THE MEATH FOX-HOUNDS.—Saturday (this day), Corbalton; Monday, Clifton Lodge; Thursday, Mountainstown; Saturday, Somerville, at eleven.

THE QUEEN'S COUNTY FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Corhally; Saturday, Aghavee, at eleven.

THE ROUTE FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Giant's Causeway; Friday, Beaverville Gate, no time stated.

SIR NUGENT HAMBLE'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Saturday (this day), D'Loughane; Tuesday, Carrigounah; Friday, Mountain Castle, at half-past ten.

THE WESTMEATH FOX-HOUNDS.—Saturday (this day), Drumree, at eleven.

THE EYRECOURT FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Gurnanona; Thursday, The Kennel, at eleven.

LORD WATERFORD'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Saturday (this day), Butterstown Castle, no time stated.

THE MUSKERRY FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Carrigadrohid, at eleven.

THE WEXFORD FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Ballygarvan Village; Friday, Cross-roads of Adamstown, at eleven. Should the weather prove unfavourable, the hounds will meet next day at the Kennel.

THE KILMACUD HARRIERS.—Monday, Scalp; Thursday, Ballyroan Gate, Rathfarnham, at eleven.

THE 16th LANCERS' (Cahir) HARRIERS.—Saturday, (this day), Kilmoyler, at twelve.

MR. TYRRELL'S HARRIERS.—Monday, Killanhrige, King's County; Friday, Sweep of Carbury, no time stated.

THE ORMOND HARRIERS.—Saturday (this day), Ballintolly Castle; Tuesday, Youghal; Friday, Ballymackey Church, at eleven.

THE PALMERSTOWN HARRIERS.—Saturday (this day), Mulhuddart; Wednesday, Castleagot; Saturday week, Birberstown Bridge, at twelve.

THE WICKLOW HARRIERS.—Monday, Rathdrum; Friday, Ballyteskin Cross Roads, at eleven.

THE TYNAN HARRIERS.—Monday, Killilea; Thursday, Ulster Canal Stores, at eleven. Should the weather prove unfavourable, the hounds will meet next day at the Kennel.

THE LOUTH UNION HARRIERS.—Saturday (this day), Dunblin; Wednesday, Shortstone; Saturday week, Castletown, at eleven.

THE NEWRY HARRIERS.—Tuesday, Five-Mile-Hill; Friday, the Kennel, Sheepbridge, no time stated.

MR. PIDDULPH'S HARRIERS.—Monday, Blue Ball; Friday, Kimooley, at eleven.

HORSES FOR THE CRIMEA.

Sir,—I find that among the many suggestions of lookers-on, who know far more of the game (while they run less risk) than the real players, there is one, that each hunting man should give his best weight-carrying horse for service at Sebastopol. To send a warm-stabled, perhaps clipped, singed, or shaven horse, young, and therefore subject to inflammation (after the cold he would be sure to catch), would be the height of absurdity; for if the animal should not die, he would very probably become a roarer. Old horses are at a higher price for troops than young ones; and I would venture to suggest that hardy, seasoned horses might be offered to those who seek remounts for the cavalry.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient servant,
O. (MIRON).

Derby, Dec. 4.

SOUTHDOWN FOX-HOUNDS.—On Friday last these hounds met for the first time in the country of the East Sussex Hunt, the "fixture" being the Swan, at Chailley, about six miles from Lewes. There was a capital field, including two of our wounded warriors at Alma, Colonel Hepburn and Captain Ashley, both of the Fusilier Guards. The former was struck in the arm, the latter in the neck, while storming the heights. Several covers were tried before a fox was found; but before one o'clock a fine fellow was untraced in the covers of Mr. Ingram, and showed some good sport, in a close country, for about an hour and a-half, when he was run to earth, and the hounds were whipped off. The blind ditches caused many falls; but we believe there were no "casualties."—Brighton Gazette, Dec. 7.

A CAPITAL DAY WITH THE ESSEX UNION HOUNDS.—This crack pack met on Saturday at Kite Hill, with rather a select field, when, after the usual morning's compliments, the Squire ordered the hounds into Fainbridge Hall Wood. They were in but a few minutes, when Reynard was tally-ho'd away at the Stowe end of the covert for Wright's Lays, up the hill for Purleigh High Trees, on to Walton's, where they came to a welcome check, for to this spot they had a good three miles up steep hills and heavy country, with a plentiful supply of russets of the bank and ditch style. Here the Squire made a sportsman-like cast, and old Blameless, hitting it off in the road, ran him into the Hanging Wood. With a ring or two round he found the covert afforded no rest for him, and again tried the open, pointing for his old home, but heading to the right for Flambirds, to Cank Wood, on to Sneaking Gate, up to Foake's Wood, where they had a brace of foxes, but the hounds preferring the old scent hunted him back through the long line of coverts to Corporation Wood, hearing away to Norton, but turning to the left to Walton's the second time. Here he was viewed, and the hounds, running him like couraige, pulled him down in the yard at Purleigh Lodge, after two hours and twenty minutes. After a few minutes' consultation, the Squire, wishing to keep his friends happy, trotted on to Slough House, when a brace of foxes was soon on foot, one breaking way with the hounds well at him for the Hyde Coverts to Danbury Hills, Ratcliff's Wood, Woodham Walter Common, to the Rodney Common, Pottentees, Woodham Mortimer Thrift, the Parsonage Wood, up the hill, leaving Hazleleigh Hall on the left for the Hanging Wood, on to Flambirds, when horse and rider felt they had had enough, and the Squire stopped the hounds, then going at a killing pace, after more than two hours as good hunting as was ever seen.

Mr. Thow's HARRIERS met at Whittenton on Tuesday. Cold blowing wind and rain prevented much sport in the early part of the day, it became calmer towards noon, the scent changed, and fortunately finding a good hare gave us forty minutes as good as any man could wish for. She was small, owing to the fox-hounds fixture being near, which may in some degree account for the extra sport; no man has a better pack and none more anxious to show sport than the old Squire, and if the gentlemen who hunt with him would give the hounds what all harriers should have, a clear field, instead of riding too near them and before them, forcing them over the scent, no pack could show better sport. We are also much indebted to the noble owner of the estates, that true sportsman, the Earl of Lamford and Wamton for his kindness in giving the country and preserving the hares, affording sport and amusement to so many of his neighbours.

THE BRIGHTON HARRIERS met on Saturday, at the Dyke. There was a numerous field. Found the first hare on the Pond Brow, making for the Dyke Road, which she crossed, turned to the right for the Barn, through Botting's Gorse, on to the Dyke, down that for the Punch-Bowl field, here to the right to her old quarters, ran the foil over again, and was killed near Saddlescombe. Drew to a shepherd's hare in the Dyke, which went away at score for the Front Hill, descending for New-House barn, turned to the left, crossing the lanes for Fulking Bosthill, taking that to the top of the hill, dipping Fulking Bottom, passed the Barn over the Tenantry Down, to Atlingworth Barn, where she squatted in a piece of furze: stole away behind the hounds for the Tenantry Down, the Front Hill, again for Fulking, where she squatted again on a piece of wheat, at the back of the village. Getting up a view they sent her off in quick time over the Front Hill, and killed in the bottom near the Barn, after a very good thing of fifty minutes. Found a third hare on High Dale, which proved one of the right sort, going away for Knight's Rails, headed back for Water Hall, mounted the hill for Tangdean, made a sudden turn back for the Coney Hill, which she crossed, making for Sweet Hill, Green Dean, to Barn Coombe Furze, leaving North Heath Barn to the right, for Saddlescombe Hill, doubled back to Barn Coombe Gorse, dipping Green Dean Bottom, to nearly where she was found, when the hounds got a view; she then crossed the Dyke Road for the Dencher Furze, passing through them for the West Bottom, and killed in Bentfield's Bottom, after an exceedingly good run of one hour and twenty-five minutes, which ended an excellent day's sport. Met on Monday at Patcham. It was very gratifying to see a large field assembled again. They had some very good sport during the day, although the scent was not first-rate; and, there being rather too many hares on foot at once, was rather against it.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

To BOB.—Sir,—In answer to your question, I beg to say it is not usual, or etiquette, to ride in scarlet when out with harriers unless it be the costume of any particular hunt. The late Lord Rolle's harriers were hunted in scarlet; in this case you might also have sported scarlet, but green is the usual colour for harriers.—Yours, RANGER.

COURSING.

APPOINTMENTS.

JANUARY.

PLACE.	DATE.	JUDGE.
Church Hill Open, Westward Winton (Cumberland)	1
Red Hill Open, Westward Winton (Cumberland)	11
Bigger Club (Lanark)	23
The renewed trial between North-Western and South-Western Coursers, at Lytham (Lancashire)
	29 and fol. days

FEBRUARY.

Spelthorne (Wilts)	7, 8, and 9	Mr. Lawrence
Newmarket Open	12
Bigger Champion (Lanark) ..	13
Baron Hill, Beaumaris (Anglesea)	13

MARCH.

Caledonian Open (Lanark) ..	15
Bigger Open (Lanark)	27
Ridgway (Lancashire)	27

KNIPESCAR COURSING MEETING.—Dec. 1.

Judge: Mr. Beacot. Slipper: Mr. R. Noidet.

Mr. Martin, of the Victoria Hotel, Citadel Station, Carlisle, held his annual meeting (by permission of the Right Hon.

the Earl of Lonsdale) on the grounds of Lowther. The morning being fine, a very large party departed from Carlisle, by special train, which was ordered purposely for the occasion.

ALL-AGED STAKE.

Mr. J. Coates's r d Delta beat Mr. Henry's w and f d Sister
Mr. Heslop's b and w b Eye beat Mr. Thomas Jones's w and f d Velox
Mr. Birkett's b and w t d Rob Roy beat Mr. Bowman's f d Floss
Mr. J. Bell's f and w d Telegraph beat Mr. James Birney's w and f b Lady Heroine
Mr. W. Birrell's b and w d Liverpool beat Mr. W. Baty's b k d Omer
Pasha (1)
Mr. Jardine's b and w b Lady Bird beat Mr. A. Thompson's b d d Cheng
Trip (1)
Mr. Conlon's f d Sir Robert beat Mr. Thompson's b d d Telemachus
Mr. Birney's b k b Willing Maid beat Mr. Bell's r d Troublesome Jack

Second Ties.

Delta beat Eye | Lady Bird beat Liverpool

Telegraph beat Rob Roy | Willing Maid beat Sir Robert

Third Ties.

Delta beat Telegraph | Willing Maid beat Lady Bird

Deciding Course.

Mr. J. Coate's r d Delta beat Mr. James Birney's b k b Willing Maid (by Liddesdale, out of Willing Maid, by Crofton), and won the stake

KNIPESCAR PUPPY STAKE.

Mr. T. Coates's w and f d Sir William beat Mr. Joseph Waller's f b Lady Huglin
Mr. Henry's d d Hughie Graham beat Mr. Thorburn's w and f d Tomboy
Mr. John Henry's f b Bessing beat Mr. Gibson's f d Lord Raglan
Mr. Birkett's r b Anna beat Mr. J. Clarke's r and w d Deerstalker
Mr. James Birney's b d d King Harry beat Mr. Bowman's f b Posthumous
Mr. T. Bell's r b Hannah Todd beat Mr. W. Baty's b k d Lord of the Manor
Mr. Martin, ns. f d Snowball beat Mr. Moffett's w and f b Queen Mary Captain Spencer's f d Skylock beat Mr. J. Coates's b d and w b Miss Nightingale

Second Ties.

Sir William beat Hughie Graham | King Harry beat Hannah Todd

Anna beat Bessing | Snowball beat Skylock

Third Ties.

Anna beat Sir William | King Harry beat Snowball

Deciding Course.

Mr. James Birney's b d d King Harry (by Lanerost out of Venus) beat
Mr. Birkett's r b Anna (by Eden out of Eve, sister to Eva), and won the stake

In the evening a large party of gentlemen dined at Mr. Martin's, Victoria Hotel, Carlisle, and, after passing the evening in a true sportsman-like manner, they separated, all being well pleased with the day's proceedings.

APPLEBY COURSING MEETING.

Stewards: Captain Elliot, R.N., J. Robinson, and James Atkinson, Esqrs.
Judge: R. Nightingale

This meeting was held on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, at the Langton field, Southerfield Farms, belonging to Sir Richard Tufton, Bart. The weather was very unfavourable, notwithstanding an immense concourse of people assembled, and the sports were excellent. The following is a return of the courses:—

APPLEBY ALL-AGED STAKE. £5. 5s.

Captain Wilson Frances's r d Nelson beat Mr. Bell's f d Edwin
Mr. James Cook's b d d Clarence beat Capt. Elliot's f d Flying Dutchman
Mr. Airey's w and b d Leveson beat Mr. Haine's b k b Lady Bird
Mr. J. Nicholson's f and w d Vulcan beat Mr. Airey's b d d Dirk Hatterick
Mr. Henderson's f b Miss Nightingale beat Capt. Spencer's f and w b Fawn

Second Ties.

Clarence beat Nelson | Vulcan beat Leveson

Miss Nightingale beat Fawn | Miss Nightingale ran a bye

Third Ties.

Miss Nightingale beat Vulcan | Clarence ran a bye

Miss Nightingale and Clarence divided the stake.

SOUTHERFIELD ALL-AGED STAKE. £3. 3s.

Mr. John Scott's b d and w d Rattle beat Mr. Palmer's r d Sir William Perry
Captain Elliot's b d and w Zebra ran a bye
Mr. Coates's b k b Brenadla beat Mr. Heslop's b k b Miss Sleddall
Mr. J. Nicholson's f b Bess beat Mr. R. Fawcett's w d De Crossfell
Mr. James Gelder's b and w d Titter-up beat Mr. W. Robinson's b k and w b Hope
Mr. Baine's b d d Borderer beat Mr. Heslop's b d and w b Second to None
Mr. James Gelder's f b Skelsmergh beat Capt. Spencer's b k d d Sim-bran
Mr. M. Thompson's r d Turk beat Mr. Parker's w b Queen

Second Ties.

Rattle beat Zebra | Borderer beat Titter-up

Bess beat Brenda | Turk beat Skelsmergh

Third Ties.

Rattle beat Bess | Borderer withdrawn

Borderer beat Turk | Rattle declared the winner

LANGTON-FIELD PUPPY STAKE. £2. 10s.

Captain Spencer's f d Skylock beat Captain Wilson Frances's r b Fly
Mr. John Scott's b k and w d Manner beat Mr. Airey's b k b Countess
Mr. Isaac Fisher's r b Play beat Mr. Pearson's w d Copeland Beck Captain Wilson Frances's f d West Australian beat Mr. Wilson's f d Rob the Rauter
Mr. John Scott's b d b Liberty beat Mr. Pearson's r and w b Eva
Mr. Baine's b d b Bonny Bee beat Mr. Robinson's r d May-duke
Captain Elliot's r b Venus beat Mr. Stalder's f and w d Baupetion Captain Spencer's w and f d Sir William beat Mr. Airey's f d Sultan

Second Ties.

Manner beat Skylock | Liberty beat Bonny Bee

West Australian beat Fly | Venus beat Sir William

Third Ties.

Manner beat Liberty | Venus divided the stake.

After each day's sport, an excellent dinner was provided at the Crown and Mitre Hotel.

SHOOTING.

IMPROVEMENT IN THE REVOLVING PISTOL.—Mr. Leech, gun-maker, of Tindal-street, Chelmsford, has introduced an improvement in the revolver pistol, consisting of an oblong aperture through the cock, which raised to an angle of four or five degrees affords a direct line with the "sight" and the end of the barrel. Mr. Leech has also devised a simple plan by which the barrel and chamber may be unshipped. The pistol, the weight of which is 1lb. 2oz., length of barrel 2½ inches, will, at twelve paces distance, drive a ball through a 3-inch piece of oak.

THE FOLLOWING NEW STAKES and their conditions will be added to the Chester Autumn Meeting 1855-6:—The Alma Stakes of 50s. each, with 100 added by the Citizens, in honour of the gallant officers and men of the 23rd Regiment, recently domiciled in Chester. For two-yr-olds now yearlings. Colts, 8t 7lb; fillies and geldings, 8st 4lb. A winner of £100, including the winner's own stake, 4lbs; 200 or more, 7lb extra. Allowances for beaten ones, having started three times without being placed 5lbs. Second to receive £50 out of the stakes, and winner to pay £20 towards expenses of the course. 43 subs.

DONCASTER MEETING.—It is finally determined that the St. Leger will in future close and name at the same time as the Derby and the Oaks. In the programme for 1855 an addition has been made to the first day's sport in the Glasgow stakes of 30 sovs, each, 20 ft. For two-yr-old colts, 8st. 7lb. each.

CRICKET.

OUR GLANCE AT THE SEASON 1854.

No. II.

TURNING to what was done during the past season, it will be found that the Marylebone Club held their anniversary meeting and dinner in the Pavilion, at Lord's, as usual, on the first Thursday in May, namely, Thursday, May the 4th, when no fewer than thirty-five new members were elected. The programme of the matches for the season was also arranged. Of these contests there were twenty-six, exclusive of the customary "public schools' matches," which, as all cricketers are aware, amount to three. We cannot see why the Rugbians are not, now they have become of increased importance in the cricket circle, admitted to a competition with Harrow, Eton, and Winchester. Of course we are not ignorant of the difficulty that might arise in the attempt to appoint the days for such trials; but, in the ordinary events of human life, obstacles of much greater weight are overcome. We throw out the hint with the hope that an effort may next year be made to accomplish the matter. Upon this subject many letters have reached the writer of these glances during the last three years. Notice was also given that a general meeting would be held on Monday, the 15th, for the purpose of taking into consideration certain proposals as to the amendment and alteration of several of the rules of the game, as well as of rule 1 of the M.C.C. From the report of the hon. secretary and treasurer, Mr. Kynaston, it appeared that as many as 600 annual subscriptions and 66 entrance-fees had been received during the year terminating on the 31st of March in the present year, and that, after deducting all expenses, there was a balance in favour of the stock purse of £355. 6s. 4d. The report further stated that the matches of 1853 had been played at a cost amounting to £469. 10s. It was in the course of the evening announced that the first match of the season would be played on Monday, the 15th.

Accordingly, on that day Mr. Kynaston brought an eleven of the members of the club into the field, in opposition to another eleven of the M.C.C., selected by the Earl of Winterton. Each side had two bowlers of the grounds. It was a one-day's match, and was won by Mr. Kynaston's side by 12 runs upon the first innings. The respective totals were 113 and 101. Of the former, Mr. E. T. Drake contributed 32, Mr. H. Vernon 23, Mr. Kynaston 18, and Dakin 10; whilst of the latter, the double offerings came from the bats of Mr. A. Wilson 18, Royston 16, and Mr. G. W. Barker 16. The last line on the total score of this side headed the list in point of amount, viz., byes, &c., 22. This ought not to have been, even though at the commencement of a season where that commencement had been delayed until the middle of May. Practice and bad weather occupied the remainder of the week. But in the afternoon of this day the general meeting of the members took place in the Pavilion, when, amongst other matters, it was moved that the following alteration be made in rule 46:—

"Except in matches limited to only one day's play, when the number shall be 80 instead of 100."

To this an amendment was moved and seconded, which in the end was unanimously agreed to, and the rule or law was therefore amended thus:—

"The players who go in second shall follow their innings if they have obtained 80 runs less than their antagonists, except in matches limited to only one day's play, when the number shall be 60 instead of 80."

The old laws of cricket—30, 31, and 32—were ordered to be erased, and the following amended laws to stand as their substitutes, namely:—

"30. The striker shall not retire from his wicket, and return to it to complete his innings, after another has been in, without the consent of the opposite party.

"31. No substitute shall, in any case, be allowed to stand out or run between wickets for another person, without the consent of the opposite party; and in case any person shall be allowed to run for another, the striker shall be out if either he or his substitute be off the ground, in the manner mentioned in laws 17 and 21, while the ball is in play.

"32. In all cases where a substitute shall be allowed, the consent of the opposite party shall also be obtained as to the person to act as substitute, and the place in the field which he shall take."

Now, in many respects these alterations will be found beneficial, especially that made in rule 46, seeing that it is the first admission, officially, on the part of the Marylebone Club that there is such a thing as a "one day's" match. We congratulate the M.C.C. on this tardy recognition of a class of matches which had ranged throughout the cricket world in something like the proportion of 1,000 to 2, until Clarke first founded the "All England Eleven" matches, as against those which were what is termed "played out." Year after year rolled on, during which the hundreds of private clubs played their "one day's match" home and home, upon the understanding that, if there were not time to "play it out" in one day, victory should be awarded to the club which obtained the larger score in the first innings, and by that result bets on these innumerable contests were determined. And this understanding was generally adopted in all private club matches, except, so far as we remember, in the instance mentioned in Mr. Denison's "Cricketer's Companion," for 1813, resulting from a match between the then East Surrey Club and the Montpelier Club, played, many years since, at the late Harry Haupton's ground at Camherwell. Each eleven was very strong, and bets to a very large amount were made. At the termination of the day, those who had won upon the score of the first innings claimed payment of their bets, but many of the losers declined to honour the demand, upon the ground that they had betted on the "match," and that as the Marylebone Club, in their rules as to bets, said that bets were not payable unless the game was played out, they were not bound to pay. One effect of this proceeding was, that although some twenty years or more have passed away, there are those who, though previously upon the most intimate terms, several of them relatives by inter-marriage and other degrees of relationship, who from that day to the present have not spoken, and this result was at the time said, and it has oft been reiterated, to have been the effect of the committee of the Marylebone Club not being sufficiently cognizant of the wants, requirements, and the circumstances under which the matches of private clubs were played. The more, then, do we thank the committee of the present day for this official recognition of a custom which ought, in real fairness, to have been sanctioned by the leading club long and many years past. As we proceed with these notices, we shall have to advert to other matters of cricket importance, wherein, to some extent, it is urged by many clubs, especially in the provinces, that the M.C.C. might afford considerable relief.

YACHTING.

HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE.

	MOON.	RIVER.		MOON.	RIVER.
Dec. 10, Sunday	2.51	5.41	Dec. 21, Thursday	2.38	5.2
" 11, Monday	3.41	6.31	" 22, Friday	3.27	6.12
" 12, Tuesday	4.31	7.21	" 23, Saturday	4.18	7.02
" 13, Wednesday	5.21	8.11	" 24, Sunday	5.08	7.52
" 14, Thursday	6.11	9.01	" 25, Monday	5.59	8.42
" 15, Friday	7.01	9.51	" 26, Tuesday	6.50	9.32
" 16, Saturday	7.51	10.41	" 27, Wednesday	7.41	10.22
" 17, Sunday	8.41	11.31	" 28, Thursday	8.32	11.12
" 18, Monday	9.31	12.21	" 29, Friday	9.23	12.02
" 19, Tuesday	10.21	1.11	" 30, Saturday	10.14	1.52
" 20, Wednesday	11.11	2.01	" 31, Sunday	11.05	2.42

To find High Water at the adjacent places, take the above time at London Bridge, and add or subtract the time in the following Table.

SUBTRACT FROM LONDON BRIDGE.			ADD TO LONDON BRIDGE.
	H.M.	H.M.		H.M.	H.M.
Brighton	3.0	4.0	Austerham	0.52	1.02
Boulogne	3.41	4.41	Amersham	1.39	2.39
Calais	2.19	3.19	Amersham	1.39	2.39
Cherbourg	3.37	4.37	Amersham	1.39	2.39
Cowes	3.32	4.32	Amersham	1.39	2.39
Dublin	3.55	4.55	Amersham	1.39	2.39
Dover Pier	3.37	4.37	Amersham	1.39	2.39
Dumfries	3.21	4.21	Amersham	1.39	2.39
Greenock	3.37	4.37	Amersham	1.39	2.39
Greenwich	3.32	4.32	Amersham	1.39	2.39
Haver	4.15	5.15	Amersham	1.39	2.39

CLUB MEETINGS, 1854.

December 12.—Meeting of the Anglesy Club, at Ashley's Hotel, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden.
 December 13.—Meeting of the Lilley Club.
 December 18.—Monthly Meeting of the Royal London Yacht Club.
 December 20.—Meeting of the Lilley Club.
 December 27 (Wednesday).—Full Meeting of the Lilley Club, being the last for the year 1854.

THE NEW YEAR, 1855.

January 11.—Annual Ball of the Prince of Wales Yacht Club, at the Freemasons' Tavern.
 February 14.—Annual Ball of the Royal London Yacht Club, at Willis's Rooms; and of the Royal Thames Yacht Club, at the Hanover Square Rooms.

OUR YACHTSMEN AND THE CRIMEAN ARMY FUND.

An association has been formed under the above title, with the view of rendering some assistance to the British army while exposed to the many privations and hardships incidental to a winter campaign. A committee has been formed, including the Duke of Wellington, the Marquis of Blandford, Viscount Mansfield, Lord Robert Grosvenor, M.P., &c., and it is proposed to forward to Balaklava a supply of such articles of provisions, warm clothing, &c., as may be considered most useful. The committee have already at their disposal the Fairy yacht, the property of Mr. William Lyon, member of the R.Y. Club, and another yacht, 220 tons burthen, the property of the Earl of Ellesmere, which will severally have a freight of tobacco, tea, and other serviceable articles, as a gift to the non-commissioned officers and privates. The Fairy sails from Portsmouth, and the other vessel will soon follow with a similar supply of necessities. A store of articles also will be established at Balaklava, which will be sold at cost price to those who would be unwilling to receive such articles as a gift. A letter has appeared in a contemporary which we may here subjoin:—

"Sir,—Cooking utensils would not be thrown away in the camp, I think. The following extract from a letter from my friend, Colonel S—, of the Guards, received this morning, needs only to be made public through the Times to insure the hint being taken in the proper quarter. My friend says:—'I offered £1 for a frying-pan, and thought it a good price. Fancy a Fusilier sending his servant yesterday (November 9) with orders to bid up to £10 for one!' We hear that such trifles as lucifers, tapers, and bath bricks are in great demand, but almost unobtainable."

STORES FOR THE CRIMEA.

Sir,—A correspondent of the Times, in answer to "A Yachtsman," asks for "a better means of transport and stowage" than the proffered yacht service. I am happy in being able to suggest a better. A subscription of a very limited sum from all the yacht clubs in England (including, of course, the Royal Yacht Squadron) would suffice to charter one of the new screw-vessels which are being now extensively built for colliers; and such a craft would stow as much as any of the Royal Yacht Squadron, and with less than half the trouble which must be incurred by refitting the yachts selected for the purpose. Further, she would have an infinitely better chance of arriving in reasonable time where she is wanted; for my enthusiastic friends must remember that wind and weather in December cannot always be relied upon during a voyage extending through the Bay of Biscay, the Mediterranean, and the Euxine; whereas a steamer is to a great extent independent.

The statements of "A Yachtsman," in reference to the necessary season and stores, are not a bit exaggerated, and ought at once to put at stopper upon the well-meant employment of vessels wholly unsuited to the duty; an employment about as judicious as if Lord Derby or the Duke of Bedford, charitably anxious for a supply of coals to the neighbouring poor, were to render the services of the pick of their respective racing establishments to carry fuel on their backs to the cottagers' doors, with a boy at each horse's head; instead of resorting to the more business-like but less romantic course of paying the hire of a wagon and cart horses between them.

The same correspondent talks of "co-operation." Class subscriptions appear to have been very general lately, and very successful; but I cannot myself see that these classes can be beneficially cut up anew into sections; and I think most yachtsmen will agree with me that it would have been more graceful on the part of "his Lordship's Club" if they had thrown their intended operations of benevolence open to their brethren of other squadrons, who would have cordially joined in one common enterprise. Were this, Sir, a solitary instance of exclusiveness in matters where exclusiveness should not reign, no mention would have been made of it by me; but many will remember that when all amateur sailors were naturally desirous to contribute to the monument intended to be erected to a late lamented commodore, whom they were equally entitled to respect and admire with the Royal Yacht Squadron, the latter, although the desire was communicated, refused to allow any but their own members to testify their regard.

In matters of public charity, and affording a vent to public feeling, this ought not to be; least of all, to be set as an example by the distinguished body in question.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,
 ANOTHER YACHTSMAN.

YACHTING TO THE CRIMEA.

Sir,—By a letter signed "Wilton" in the Morning Herald of the 1st inst., I conclude that his lordship's fine new schooner the Zara must be from some cause ineffective, otherwise our noble commodore had been spared "active measures to procure the loan of a yacht" the Zara being larger and better adapted to the highly-laudable purpose of carrying out to our friends in the East the supplies of which they stand so much in need than the Erminia, volunteered by Lord Ellesmere.

With all due respect to the exertions of Captain Lyon—yielding to no one in hearty desire to carry out the proposed object, and fervently wishing the Fairy a speedy passage, I must venture to remind my yachting brethren that time is everything in this matter. Our friends and relatives are under actual privation for want of necessities which, with a good steamer, we could calculate upon furnishing at a given period.

"Be not apt etc. etc."

I have myself been in a fast-sailing craft twice from twenty-five to thirty days* between the Land's End and Gibraltar, and as long again thence to Malta, a delay to which all who have made trips to the Mediterranean must have been either subject or liable.

Let us charter a suitable steamer, and either with or even without the aid of other clubs, which would be readily contributed, we might send out a freight yet in time, and in a manner worthy of the Royal Yacht Squadron, and of those with whom the scheme originated.

Dec. 5. I am, Sir, your obedient servant, R. Y. S.
 [* We have been ourselves the same time, more than once, in beating up the Dardanelles in vessels about 150 tons, and we have known vessels to be windbound two and even three months in the same Straits.—ED. FIELD.]

COWES, Thursday, Dec. 7.—The Royal Yacht Squadron schooner Fairy passed through our roads this morning, with a fine breeze from the northward, loaded with comforts for the heroes of Inkermann. She appeared very deep in the water, and can hardly be expected to reach her destination before the middle of January. "God speed the good ship."

ROYAL THAMES YACHT CLUB.

The monthly meeting of the above club took place on Wednesday evening, at the Balford Hotel, Covent-garden, when, in the absence of the noble commodore, Lord A. Paget, M.P., R. S. Wilkinson, Esq., was unanimously voted to the chair. Between forty and fifty gentlemen were present at the house dinner.

The business of the evening commenced by the secretary reading the minutes of the previous meeting, which were duly confirmed, when the six gentlemen already mentioned in THE FIELD having been proposed, seconded, and balloted for, were declared duly elected.

The report of the sailing committee, in reference to Mr. H. Chilton's motion, was read by the secretary.

It was proposed by the chairman, and seconded by Charles Smart and Deane John Moore, Esq., "That the decision of the sailing committee be confirmed." This was unanimously carried; so that for the future "sluffing ballast and sliding keels will not be allowed in club matches."

The chairman, in a very able speech, moved the following resolution:—

"That it is the opinion of this meeting, that the sum of Fifty Guineas should be given by this club to the Royal Patriotic Fund, subject to confirmation, agreeably to the laws of the club, upon notice in the circular, at the January meeting."

Carried unanimously.

It was afterwards resolved:—"That the Annual Ball, under the auspices of the Club, be held at the Hanover-square Rooms, on Wednesday, the 14th February, 1855, and that the surplus be given to the Royal Patriotic Fund."

The lists of the stewards will be submitted at the next general meeting.

The meeting was very crowded towards the close of business.

LONDON MODEL YACHT CLUB.

Our readers are already aware that this club was founded eight years ago, and that it still holds a meeting every month. Its present rendezvous is Anderson's Hotel, Fleet-street, where, under the "pursership" of Mr. Clemow, its treasurer, the members held on Tuesday last their 97th monthly meeting, and sat down subsequently, nearly fifty in number, to their annual dinner, at which the flag-officers filled the chair and vice-chair of the three tables, while the Secretary and Mr. Armitage took the ends of the commodore's table. By this arrangement, the comforts of the company were much enhanced, and the details of the evening passed off without let or hindrance. The officers were so spread over the room, that any question arising was instantly met by the proper authorities, and all went "merry as a marriage bell," except in one instance which, as it will, we hope, never be repeated, we at once bury in oblivion.

During the business part of the evening, five candidates were balloted into the club, and the following officers elected for the year 1855:—

Commodore	W. Tuckwell.
Vice-Commodore	T. H. Williams.
Rear-Commodore	J. P. Gordon.
Secretary	W. B. Crabb.
Standing Counsel	W. Knight.
Treasurer	Frank Clemow.
Auditors	T. H. Wilson.
	B. London, secr.
Usher	R. Armitage.
Usher	H. Williams.
Sailing Committee.
J. Gardner, jun.	E. Gibbins.
R. Armitage.	J. Hunt.
J. Purcell.

The following motions were carried:—

That the annual subscription be henceforth ten shillings, and that there be no entrance fee or other sum whatever demanded of members.

That the maximum tonnage of the club-raft be eight tons, &c. This is reverting to the tonnage originally established in the L. M. Y. C., but once decreased to five in order not to interfere with the P. W. Y. C., then confined to eight tons, but now increased to fifteen tons.

The rules of the club are about to undergo revision; but, with the exception of this decision, and the business above reported, nothing further was brought forward on Tuesday last. About eight o'clock the commodore took the chair at the dinner-table, which, we may as well at once say, was growing under the substantial viands of the season. Great credit is due to Mr. Clemow for the handsome supply he put before the members, the moderation of his charges, and the attendance he had provided. As to the toasts, the commodore proposed "The Queen," which was drunk enthusiastically, and followed by the National Anthem; and he next gave, "Prince Albert and the Royal Family," followed by the "Allied Navies and Armies," by Mr. Wm. Knight; the "London Model Yacht Club," by Mr. Armitage, coupled with the "Officers re-elected," who severally returned thanks. The Commodore next proposed, "the other Yacht Clubs of the United Kingdom," coupled with "Vice-Commodore Knibbs," who ably returned thanks, and elicited a capital song from Mr. Purcell. Mr. W. Knight here sent a New York Spirit of the Times round the table, which he had received the day before, and which contained a high eulogium on the L. M. Y. Club. The worthy Secretary's health was next proposed by the commodore, and after the toast had been duly acknowledged, Mr. Gibbins delighted the company with a song; and the Vice-commodore proposed, "The Press," the representatives of five metropolitan papers being present. Mr. Robt. Soutar, jun., of The Field, facetiously returned thanks; and, owing to the cries for their "following on the same side," was backed up in his observations by Mr. Denison of the Times, and by Mr. Luxton and Mr. W. Knight. The rear-commodore next proposed, "the Visitors," for whom Mr. Barnard made a most eloquent reply. And here we must pause, and wind up our report, by simply stating that Mr. Biffin cleverly explained his newly-invented boat, a craft we may yet describe in a future number of The Field.

BIRKENHEAD MODEL YACHT CLUB.

The usual monthly meeting of the club was held at the Monk's Ferry Hotel on the evening of Wednesday, the 6th inst., at seven o'clock. This was the annual meeting of the club, at which the officers for the ensuing year were elected. We subjoin a statement of the financial position of the club, at the close of the present season. The books of the club were laid before the meeting for the inspection of such members as were desirous of obtaining further information regarding the accounts:—

Birkenhead Model Yacht Club in account with W. Scott, Treasurer, from April 18th, 1854.

Dr.	£ s. d.	Cr.	£ s. d.
To paid for Prizes	47 14 0	By Balance received of late Treasurer	51 9 4
To Balance of Steam-boat Account	13 9 0	By Subscriptions received since 1st April	23 2 0
To Balance of Working Account	14 10 10	By Entrance Money for Prizes	11 14 6
Balance	5 3 0
	£86 5 10		£86 5 10

Examined, 1st December, 1854.

T. WILKINSON TETLEY, Auditor, B.M.Y.C.

List of Yachts belonging to the Club:

Name and Rig.	Tons.	Owner.
Challenge, sloop	7½	A. Bower, Esq.
Jessie, cutter	7½	J. A. Clarke, Esq.
Sirocco, sloop	8	W. Brown, Esq.
Electric, sloop	7	T. Wilkinson, Esq.
Polly and Anne, cutter	6	J. Hume, Esq.
Warlock, sloop	6	R. C. Hicks, Esq.
Spirit, sloop	4½	T. Wilkinson, Esq.
Kelpie, sloop	3½	E. A. Horley, Esq.
Tormentor, sloop	3½	E. C. Hicks, Esq.
Cyprian, sloop	3½	J. M. Hamay, Esq.
Sylol, sloop	3½	Hon. Secretary.
Nana, yawl	2	W. J. Conlan, Esq.
Wee Jeanie, sloop	2	Late H. Laird, Esq.
Squib, sloop	2	J. A. Clarke, Esq.
Squib, sloop	1½	W. Bowen, Esq.

MR. DEMPSTER'S INVENTIONS.

Those who have noticed the exertions made by Mr. Dempster whilst endeavouring to make known the principles of his four new nautical inventions—namely, a new system of rigging sailing yachts, a new system of building sailing yachts, a new code of signals, &c., a new trawling apparatus, will have seen the difficulties he had to contend against, whilst struggling up a stream interspersed with obstructions, which from his position in life he was an entire stranger to. Many of those parties will not only wonder at seeing him still underway, and persevering to reach a haven so difficult of access, but their greatest wonder will be to learn that he is afloat at all, and able to show a stitch of canvas to the breeze. To introduce readily amongst communities such inventions as Mr. Dempster has laboured with, much time, trouble, and expenditure are required. Nothing for nothing is the general rule now-a-days that most inventors have to make headway against, especially when they have nothing else to show in exchange for the legal tender but the workings and labours of the brain's creation. Until inventions are produced into the market in a tangible shape, exhibiting real substance and reproductive properties, the courses and lives of inventors, can seldom run smooth. "What use are such things to me?—I have not the slightest interest in such things; they are not at all in my way, and I have too much to do with other matters.—I am no speculator.—You should call on Mr. So-and-So; he is a likely person to enter on your views," are responses from parties inquired at to take up new inventions. The numerous twistings and windings inventors at times are necessitated to make—the delays and disappointments they are doomed to suffer—the refusals, rebuffs, and other species of annoyance they are everywhere subjected to, are discouragements sufficient to make inventors reflect seriously on their position, seek for retirement, and avoid society. Were it not for hope, that cheering watchman perched up aloft and looking ahead, how desolate would be the lives of inventors who had staked their all to produce and mature some plan of utility calculated to benefit the human family! Hope scans the horizon carefully, and looks stedfastly at several points; hope sees in the distance an opening which, if once fairly entered, may yet lead on to success; hope cannot for a moment think of returning down a steep, that is more difficult to descend than it is to climb upwards; hope, therefore, calls in the aid of perseverance to embark on the enterprise, and as both of these patriots had previously in company huffed the storm, and they are now better seasoned to the influence of weather, they are more regardless of puffs of wind directed against them, when unaccompanied by thunder, rain, and hailstones. "Kootchprance" (never mind)—"Nil desperandum" (never despair) at difficulties—ought to be the motto of all inventors. Let indomitable perseverance show sincerity of purpose—let sobriety be the sentry continually on guard, and depend upon it the saying—"It is a long lane that has no turning"—is quite correct.

The natural enemies to all inventions are those evil instincts of nature aroused by the esteem we have of ourselves. These formidable opponents are what all inventors have to war against. Rival interests fortify themselves against all things new, calculated to encroach on their already established rights; new-fangled plans are something to be learnt afresh, and what use is there in them, when people are well enough contented with things as they are. Innovations of every kind are reckoned usurpations, and every yachtsman does not feel comfortable when he sees other clippers gliding gently by him. There are no other means for inventors to meet such an array of hostile forces than by using overpowering arguments and truths impregnable. With an abundance of such weapons at disposal, if judiciously handled and well directed, they act on the enemy like a long-ranged gun playing on a fort where ordnance are of less calibre. First, the walls give way—then a breach is made—the walls crumble, and havoc ensues in the camp—a variety of opinions are now expressed—a council of war is held—the majority says, there is no use holding out longer—a flag of truce is hoisted—the colours are struck—arms are laid down—and, finally, peace is established.

The friends of Mr. Dempster are to understand from this that two out of his four nautical inventions have at length been taken up. Two highly respectable firms in London are to bring them forward at their earliest convenience in a regular ship-shape way.

Messrs. James Inray and Son, publishers of nautical works, 102, Mitre-street, will produce a universal telegraphic dictionary.

Mr. Samuel Tull, net manufacturer, No. 153, Fenchurch-street, will produce trawling apparatuses with nets, to fit vessels of all denominations and sizes.

Thus relieved of two inventions, Mr. Dempster now offers the plans of his other two to yachtsmen. Both of them are of some public utility. The experimentally yacht "Problem," twenty feet long and six feet beam, was satisfactorily tested during all descriptions of weather. The Royal Scottish Society of Arts, Edinburgh, appointed a committee of their naval members to report on this vessel. They reported as their opinion—"The idea was well adapted for yachts under forty tons, to train youth in naval tactics, giving them an active notion of vessels in the fluid, and the action of wind on sails." The stem and stern posts of the "Problem" meet at an angle below the centre of the vessel, thus forming a triangular keel. The apex of the keel being strong, with an incline direction, the vessel, whilst sailing at the rate of seven knots, struck a rock where there was one and a half feet less water than her extreme draught, and she went over it without sustaining the slightest damage. Another advantage of this formation of hull is—as the vessel lays over upon board, there is more length and body of the hull immersed in the fluid to leeward than there is to windward, and the hydraulic action of the fluid upon a weather helm tends to press the vessel up to windward of the course she looks. As a vessel of war, she can be made to perform the revolving manœuvre, which is to keep her turning round and round, as if on a pivot, so that broadside after broadside, bow and stern guns, can be discharged without ever having occasion to call a man from his gun to attend the braces. The advantage of the new rig chiefly rests in the fore-and-aft triangular sails. Booms (or yards) are secured at the middle in swivels fitted at the bow and stern of the vessel. These yards work clear of the mast, and can be made to perform a circle. By this it will be seen that when those two sails are set alone, a complete balance of power is obtained over the vessel. The possibility to trim those yards to any degree, or hundredth part of a degree, upon a circle, gives them a double advantage over any other description of sails constructed. Under them alone act, the vessel can be tacked, wore, and boxhailed sternways as well as ahead. All the manœuvres and evolutions of a square-rigged ship or four-and-aft rigged craft, can be performed as the artist disposes. They are easily set, easily taken in, and, as the body of canvas is low, they are powerful in the breeze. The mainmast of the vessel is rigged as a square-rigged ship, where studding-sails, royals, moonrakers, and skyscrapers, can be set as required.

Any one wishing to see the model from which the "Problem" experimental yacht was built, and the swivel that fits over the fore and mizen mast-heads (a particular part of the machinery), may call at Messrs. Hunt and Son's, No. 6, New Church-street, Edgeware-road.

Parties desirous to address Mr. Dempster sincerely on the subject, will see his address in the catalogue of the Great Industrial Exhibition of 1851, where he obtained a prize of £20 for his new equilateral triangular telegraph.

PRINCE OF WALES YACHT CLUB.—On Friday next, the 15th inst., Mr. Ditchburn will continue his lecture on the "Science of Naval Architecture." We hope members will attend at the Club-house, Freemasons' Tavern, in a strong muster. The members of any royal yacht club, and naval officers, will be admitted on presenting their cards.

ANGLSEY YACHT CLUB.—On Tuesday next, the 12th inst., the monthly meeting will be held at Ashley's Hotel, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden. Several candidates are on the list for ballot.

THE BRITISH FLEET IN OLDEN TIMES.—The fleet of Richard I. of England, when he weighed anchor for the Holy War, from Messina, in Sicily, where he passed the winter, A.D. 1190-1, is said to have consisted of 13 dromones, or ships of the largest size; 250 ships of second-rate; 53 galleys, and a vast number of barques and other vessels used as transports. Edward III.'s fleet before Calais in 1347, consisted of 738 ships, carrying 14,956 mariners, being an average of only about 20 in each ship; 15 ships and 495 mariners from Bayonne, being 30 to each ship; 7 ships and 184 men from Spain; 1 from Ireland, carrying 25 men; 14 from Flanders, with 123 men, scarcely 10 to each ship; 1 from Guelderland, with 24 mariners. Fifteen of these were called the King's own ships, and were manned by 419 mariners. It would thus be seen that the British vessels of that period were of a small size. About the middle of the 15th century ships of larger proportions began to be constructed. William Canning, the eminent merchant, who was five times mayor of Bristol, A.D. 1474, having forfeited the King's peace, was condemned to pay 300 marks, in lieu of which sum, Edward VI. took of him 2470 tons of shipping, amongst which there were one ship of 900 tons burden, one of 500 tons, and one of 400 tons. In 1505, James IV. of Scotland built a large ship, which was lost on her way to France. In the fleet fitted out by Henry VIII. there was one ship, the Regent, of 1000 tons. The Henri Grace de Dieu was of a still larger size, and said to have been the first vessel which accomplished a voyage round the world. At the present time, when so much attention is directed to naval affairs, it may not be without interest to give the following particulars of our navy of former days, and which in 1575 consisted of only 24 ships, and the number of merchant ships belonging to England amounted to no more than 135 vessels of above 100 tons, and 656 between 40 and 100 tons. At Queen Elizabeth's death, in 1603, there were not above four merchant ships of 400 tons each. The largest of Queen Elizabeth's ships of war was 1000 tons, and carried 340 men and 40 guns, and the smallest 600 tons, carrying 50 men and 30 guns. The account given by Sir William Monson, about the time of the death of Queen Elizabeth, is as follows:—

2 ships of 1000 tons, carrying each 500 men.

3	800	"	"	400
3	600	"	"	400
2	700	"	"	353
4	600	"	"	350
4	500	"	"	250
2	400	"	"	200
10	350	"	"	100
9	200	"	"	100

9 smaller vessels; 39 in the whole.—The Builder.

ANCIENT SHIPS OF WAR.—Among the most celebrated ships of antiquity is that of Ptolemy Philopater, which is said to have been 280 cubits long, 38 cubits broad, and 43 high; it carried 4,000 rowers, 400 sailors, and 3,000 soldiers—in all, 7,400. That which the same prince made to sail on the Nile, we are told, was also of large proportions. Yet these ships were nothing in comparison with Hiero's ship, built under the direction of Archimedes, on the structure of which, Moschian wrote a whole volume. There was wood enough used in it to make sixty galleys. It had all the variety of apartments of a palace—banqueting-rooms, galleries, gardens, fish-ponds, stables, mills, baths, a temple of Venus, &c. It was encompassed with an iron rampart and eight towers, with walls and bulwarks, furnished with machines of war, particularly one, which threw a stone of 300lb., or a dart 12 cubits long, the space of half a mile. It was as late as B.C. 261 before the Romans had seriously determined on building a fleet of ships of war; and when this resolution was formed so ignorant were they in all that concerned naval architecture that the thing would not have been very speedily accomplished but by an accident. A Carthaginian galley being on a cruise off the coast of Italy, and venturing too near the shore, she grounded and stuck fast. The Romans, availing themselves of this accident, seized the vessel before the crew had time to get her off; and it was on the model of this galley that their first fleet of ships of war was constructed. The Roman ships of war were long in proportion to their breadth, and received different names, according to the number of tiers of oars they were calculated to employ. The Danish vessels of war were richly ornamented with gold and other objects of great value. The boats which until lately had been used on the River Tyne for some centuries, are said to have been of the same model as those of the rapacious northmen. These were clumsy-looking vessels, round at each end, and rather flat-bottomed, with a mast and single square-sail.—The Builder.

ROWING.

"We shall feel obliged by the Secretaries of "Rowing Clubs," and others, forwarding their Appointments of Matches or Notices of Meetings to come, at their early convenience.

OXFORD.

FOUR-OAR RACES FOR CHALLENGE CUP AND MEDALS.

These races came off Monday and Tuesday. Much disappointment was felt in consequence of Balliol having been obliged to take off through the indisposition of their stroke. Owing to the low state of the river, time races were substituted for the usual level boats. On the first day the race was between Worcester and University. The following were the crews:—

WORCESTER.	UNIVERSITY.
Wheeler (stroke)	Denne (stroke)
S. Key (3)	Craster (3)
Cole (2)	Booth (2)
Windnough (bow)	Glyn (bow)
Yapp (coxswain)	Elias (coxswain)

Worcester took the first place, and after a capital start, drew slightly away from their antagonists up to the Gut: here they lost ground by careless steering, but again recovered their position. At the top of the Willows, University seemed to awake, and their great strength beginning to tell, drew on Worcester, and finally won by five seconds.

On Tuesday, University rowed against Exeter—the crew of the latter being Marshall (stroke), Gildes (3), Salmon (2), Stocker (bow), H. Stoue (coxswain). The river being lower than on the previous day, much difficulty was experienced in starting, both boats having their oars in the mud. The race was very even to the top of the Willows, where Exeter gained considerably, owing to some eccentric steering on the part of the University coxswain, who crossed the river nearly at right angles, we suppose to avoid the wind. It, however, lost the race, for, notwithstanding their most plucky exertions, Exeter won by two seconds, rowing the distance in eight minutes sixteen seconds—wonderfully fast, considering the wind, which was blowing a hurricane.

Trinity, the holders of the prize, could not find a crew this year, and consequently the Challenge Cup and Presentation Medals were handed over to Exeter. Since the establishment of these races in 1840, the following Colleges have had the honour of carrying off the prize, viz.—1840, Brasenose; 1841, University; 1842, University; 1843, Oriel; 1844, University; 1845, Christ Church; 1846, Christ Church; 1847, Christ Church; 1848, Oriel; 1849, Brasenose; 1850, Brasenose; 1851, Christ Church; 1852, Trinity; 1853, Trinity; 1854, Exeter.

ROWING AT CAMBRIDGE.

UNIVERSITY SCRATCH FOURS.

These races which we briefly noticed last week, were concluded on Monday, the 4th instant. The forty-four boats having been reduced to three, a time-race was rowed between them. Mr. Gorst's crew won easily, Mr. Bather's being second. The following were the crews:—

FIRST.	SECOND.	THIRD.
Cayley, St. Johns	Fitzroy, Trinity Hall	Hayant, St. Johns
Kyffin, Jesus	Lothian, 1st Trinity	Leonard, St. Johns
Parson, St. Johns	Blake, Corpus	Nix, 1st Trinity
Graham, 1st Trinity	Jones, 3rd Trinity	Atkinson, Trinity Hall
Gorst, St. Johns (cox)	Batler, St. Johns (cox)	Hollway, Jesus (cox)

A HINT TO CAMBRIDGEMEN.

SIR,—An intimation has been sent by Mr. S. Herbert to a friend in Oxford, that any boating jackets, Jerseys, cricketing trousers, or loose old reading gowns, may be of great use to the army in the Crimea.

This had not occurred to most of us, and may possibly not have hitherto been thought of at Cambridge. We are now making a collection as fast as we can.

It is obviously just the sort of supply that University men can best send out; and it is the nick of time for it—just before we all go down.

If you will put this suggestion into your columns it may be of use.

Yours, Sir, &c.,

OXONIENSIS.

ANGLING.

OUR SALMON FISHERIES.

To the Editor of THE FIELD.

SIR,—I rejoice to find in your article, "Sports and Sportsmen," in the last FIELD, that the important subject of our salmon fisheries is not being lost sight of. Mr. Henry Marshall deserves the thanks of all lovers of the rod for his exertions in the matter, and to have secured the good offices of a gentleman willing to undertake the conduct of a new Act of Parliament on the subject is a great advantage. The existing laws are quite inadequate for the preservation of our fisheries, and the obtaining of a conviction under them is frequently a doubtful matter. I hope THE FIELD, under its now proprietor, will not let the matter drop, but continue to ventilate the subject well; no doubt, by so doing, you will receive many practical suggestions from salmon fishers, which may be useful to those who have the task of framing a new law on the subject.—I remain, Sir, your obedient servant,

PISCATOR.

December 4.

SALMON.

To the Editor of THE FIELD.

DEAR SIR,—I noticed, with great pleasure, in your paper of last Saturday, that a friend of Mr. Henry Marshall intends introducing a bill in the House of Commons, with a view of restoring the salmon fisheries of Great Britain: such a friend is a friend in need, and, I should say, will almost be worshipped by those who enjoy the sport of salmon-fishing, if he has, as he certainly deserves, the good fortune to carry the measure.

As a bill of this kind will have to provide against innumerable evils which beset this monarch of the finny tribe, allow me to draw attention to one or two which occurred to me at the time I read the particulars, viz., the construction of many of the weirs, or mill-dams, which prevent the fish ascending, except in times of floods, and the fixed traps, which are constantly waiting, day and night, for their unfortunate prey. I should beg to suggest, that every one who erected, or was the owner of a weir or dam, should make such provision as would enable the fish to ascend at all times without obstruction, and any person fixing traps of any kind should be subject to a heavy penalty. Wishing the bill every success, I remain your constant reader,

FLYFISHER.

BOTTOM FISHING.

To the Editor of THE FIELD.

SIR,—In reference to a letter in your paper (last week's), stating that some old fisher had caught a horse mussel with bottom fishing, I beg to state that I can vouch that two have been caught at Staveley this year in the same way; and a person named Woodhead assures me, that as he was fishing for chub with a large moth (according to instructions given by "quaint old Izaak," when he caught the chub with the white spot on it), he perceived a weasel on the other side of the river (Rother) watching his bait, and which finally took it, and was caught.

I myself saw a kingfisher last year which had been caught by an old man, named Jarvace, on a night-line baited with a live minnow, and left on a shallow.—I am, Sir, yours obediently,

G. D. B.

SALMON PROPAGATION AT PERTH.—The fishermen employed at present in re-stocking the boxes at Stourmount-field with ova for next year's fry have been pretty successful, as upwards of a hundred thousand have already been safely deposited. The fishermen report that a considerable number of the fish taken in their nets have spawned, which is considered very early in the season, and at no previous time have the fords been so full of spawning fish.

HERRING FISHING.—At Pendone, on the 27th, a great quantity of fish, supposed to be pilchards, were seen going down the Channel. Fish have been seen off Mullion and Gunwalloe, but the weather has been too rough to secure any.

ST. IVES.—On the 27th inst. an abundance of fish passed deep taking a western direction; one seine was shot at Porthminster, by Messrs. Tremearne and Co., on the 28th inst., but missed; and on Wednesday morning the drift boats took from 1,000 to 15,000 fine pilchards, which found a ready sale at 1s. and 2s. per hundred for the Bristol market, and home consumption.

HAY—THE WYE FISHERY.—An influential meeting, under the presidency of Viscount Hereford, lately took place at Hay, where a subscription was entered into for the purpose of protecting the salmon in the act of spawning, and otherwise preserving the salmon brood in that locality. Several gentlemen put down their names for £5 each; a pretty good testimony of their earnestness in the cause. A local committee was appointed, and we have no doubt, if their energies be well directed, we shall soon witness the benefit of their exertions by an increased number of fish in the river Wye. We hope that similar proceedings will take place at Builth, Ross, Monmouth, and Chepstow.

THE SPORTSMAN'S LIBRARY.

Shooting: A Manual of Practical Information on this Branch of British Field Sports. By ROBERT BLAKEY, Author of "Angling," &c. London: Routledge.

SHOOTING is one of the many sports which have made the English gentleman the world's wonder; for it is with amazement the world has seen him quitting the ease and luxury of his home and sharing the toils, the privations, the wounds, and the death of the soldier, and all for the love of glory and for the pleasure of exercising those physical faculties which he has cultivated in his native fields. Mr. Blakey, writing before the war had exhibited the great advantage of field sports, praised shooting for many other benefits produced by it. It augments the pedestrian capabilities of man, on whose health depends the enjoyment, or associated with, "all that is manly, energetic, and healthful;" it gives a gentle impulse to the intellect, preventing that extreme sensibility to the evils and perplexities of life which overwhelm men of sedentary habits, who think too much. Zimmerman says of it:—

There is no one, who may not, by quietly traversing the mountains with his gun, learn to feel how much the great secrets of nature will influence the heart, when assisted by the powers of the imagination. The sight of an agreeable landscape, the various points of view which the spacious plains afford, the freshness of the breeze, the beauties of the sky, and the appetite which a long ramble procures, will give energy to health, and make every new step seem too short. The privation of every object that can recall the idea of dependence, accompanied by domestic comfort, wholesome exercises, and useful occupations, will add vigour to thought, and inebriate the heart with the most delicious sensations.

Truly does Mr. Blakey add that—

The social and individual advantages of English field sports are beyond calculation. Men dwell upon a remembrance of them with a reverence bordering on idolatry. The pastimes of our forefathers have ever been of a manly and vigorous kind. The old train of amusements in olden times was calculated to render the youthful generation active, sprightly, nimble, generous, and courageous, and to rear them up to useful and honourable manhood. With what enthusiasm and right good feeling do we ponder over the pages of some of the old writers, who tell us that "in the holidays, in the summer and autumn, the youths are exercised in leaping, dancing, shooting, wrestling, and casting the stone, and practising at the target; and the maidens trip with their timbrels, and dance as long as they can see."

A love of field sports generally, and of shooting in particular, takes us from the noise, and filth, and moral degradation incident to large towns. It places us in the midst of the cultivation of the soil—the real foundation of all national wealth and happiness. Every thing connected with the wanderings of the sportsman is calculated to foster the best and noblest feelings of the soul, and to impart to the mind the most lofty and sublime ideas of universal nature. To men of genius and contemplative habits, the roaming among the mountain wilds, and the green fields, gives rise to the most refined intellectual enjoyments. Such persons may be said to live in a world of their own, and are the recipients of joys and sorrows, with which the world at large doth not intermeddle. How pure, refined, and exquisite are the delights which fill the mind from gazing on the mountain pass, the wood, the rocks, and waterfalls!

The use and advantage of shooting being conceded, the author proceeds to describe the means by which it is to be enjoyed and the rules that regulate it, treating successively of the gun and its necessary appendages; the dog, and his management; the necessary rules of the art, embodied in the use of both gun and dog; and, lastly, of the application of these rules to the various objects which come under the ordinary category of a shooting sportsman. And, first, of the gun.

The most important part of the gun is the barrel. The Spanish barrels are the best, and, next to them, Mr. Blakey prefers the stub-twist. Mr. Greener has thus told us

HOW TO TEST A GUN-BARREL.

Require the gun-maker to stain the barrel under examination with the smoke-brown (a staining composition of which he gives an account in his book) and he will not be able to accomplish it, if the barrel be not genuine; whereas nothing is easier, if it be really made of stabs twisted. The matter may be thus explained: hydrogen gas acts only on iron, steel resists its action; so that, when a barrel is properly finished, the steel remains quite bright, while the iron has become a beautiful jet-black, which will be easily recognised by attention to the appearance.

Gravitation produces a curvilinear flight of shot from the barrel: there is a constantly increasing tendency to fall to the ground. The elevated rib is designed to counteract this effect. The usual elevations do not deliver the shot at the mark even at forty yards with a usual charge of powder. Mr. Greener says that his experiments prove that in heavy charges of shot the droop is full twelve inches in forty yards, but that with less charges of shot the line is more direct.

As to the length of barrel, the fashion now is brevity; but it is questionable if our sportsmen have not carried this too far. Mr. Robins says that the length may be anything between twenty-eight and forty inches, but that the range of shot falls either above or below these lengths. The Oakleigh Shooting Code says of this:—

The fowling-piece to be recommended for general use is a double-barrelled detonator, weighing about eight pounds; the barrels thirty or thirty-two inches in length, sixteen gauge, and made of twisted stabs. It is not sportsmanlike to use double-barrels of a greater calibre; nor are longer barrels convenient on account of their weight, although additional length, not carried to an extreme, or a larger calibre, may probably render them more effective, in so far as they will sustain a heavier charge. Single barrels, for general use, may be thirty-four inches long and fourteen gauge.

And again:—

The barrels of the groning gun should be thirty-two inches long, sixteen gauge; a single barrel for grouse-shooting should be thirty-six inches long, and fourteen or fifteen gauge. If selected for partridge-shooting only, the barrels should be thirty inches long, and sixteen gauge; or a single barrel thirty-four inches, and fourteen or fifteen gauge. If selected for cover-shooting only, the barrels should be only twenty-eight inches by sixteen gauge; or single barrels thirty-two inches, and fifteen gauge.

The ordinary distance of range of a fowling-piece is forty yards. The long shots are exceptions to the rule:—"From twenty-five to thirty yards is about the average distance at which nine out of ten of every bird is killed. Many are wounded, nay, even killed dead, at forty, fifty, or even sixty yards; but it is clear that these are but solitary cases, and are chiefly the efforts of mere chance or random shots hitting some vital member of the body."

A gun being a valuable instrument easily damaged by carelessness, it should be kept clean and in working order; and the sportsman should do this himself, and not depend upon others, especially upon servants. We like Mr. Lancaster's

DIRECTIONS FOR CLEANING GUNS.

Always clean those parts of the barrels and locks that the detonating powder acts upon with a wet rag; then rub them dry, and leave them in oil to prevent rust. The pegs should not be taken out too often. Before you take out the barrels, bring the locks to half-cock. The locks do not require to be taken off every time the gun is used; once a fortnight is quite sufficient. Put a little fine oil to the parts where there is friction; but if the gun has been used on a wet day, the locks should be taken off to be cleaned, and oiled immediately.

To which Mr. Blakey adds:—

The following, among many other methods, is chosen because we have found it always to answer the desired end. Provide some boiling water, and an empty pail; detach the barrel from the stock, and with a clearing-rail furnished with tow, we begin to pour the hot water down each barrel. We scour it well with the clearing rail, and discharge the barrel of the foul water. Place hot water in it a second time, and wipe out the barrels with fresh tow, until they are completely dry, both without and within. Should there be any moisture lurking within the screw-joints of the breech and touch-hole, it is a good plan to let down an iron plug of red heat, which, being moved up and down the barrel or barrels for half a minute, will effectually absorb every particle of moisture or damp. All this should be done by the sportsman's own hand; and not, if it can be avoided, left to another person to do.

A barrel should be cleaned, as a general rule, after twenty shots.

As for powder, there has been much disputing which is best, some recommending coarse, others fine, grains. Col. Hawker preferred the fine cylinder of Curtis and Harvey; and he remarks that the large-grained powder is apt to miss fire, in which our own experience corroborates him. The cause of this being, as we found, that the large grains did not enter the nipple. The Oakleigh Shooting Code gives the following directions for

THE CHOICE OF GUNPOWDER.

The Dartford gunpowder bought from one retailer will fire smart and strong, while a similar article obtained from another will be comparatively weak and slow of ignition. This difference in the quality of powder is occasioned by exposure to different atmospheres. Gunpowder is generally purchased by the shooter at a provincial town at some distance from the manufacturers. One shop or warehouse is dry; another is damp. One package of powder may have lain only twenty-four hours in the front boat of the London mail, in July, to the imminent danger of the cigar-whiffer on the coach-box; another may have been sweating three weeks in a canal-boat, in March; hence the various degrees of liability to imbibe moisture before the powder comes into the retailer's possession, and while in his keeping. Damp not only affects the nitre, of which gunpowder is chiefly composed, and thereby occasions loss of strength; but it also operates prejudicially on the ingredients which contribute to instantaneous ignition.

In relation to shot, opinions also vary. Mr. Blakey thus treats of it:—

WHAT SHOT TO USE.

To what degree the various sorts of shot are effective, is a question not at all settled at the present day. Where opposite opinions prevail it is difficult to decide, and it is a folly to be dogmatical. Some sportsmen of distinction maintain that, for ordinary purposes of game shooting, No. 7 is the best kind of shot that can be used. It lies closer and more compact to the barrel than any other. Other sportsmen, again, think the Nos. 3 and 4 are to be preferred to any other sizes for common every-day work in the prime of the shooting-season. Captain Williamson pleads for No. 9, and General Hanger for No. 2. Another great authority tells us, that in the first month of partridge-shooting, shot No. 5 should be used; and for this reason: at this time the birds spring at hand, and we seldom fire at more than the distance of forty yards. If a shooter takes a fair aim he can scarcely fail to do some mischief by such a circle or disc of shots. Hares, likewise, at this period sit closer, and being but thinly covered with fur, may easily be killed with this sized shot at thirty or thirty-five paces. In snipe and quail shooting this shot is the most eligible. When October advances, the birds are stronger on the wing, and then No. 3 will be found more suitable. This shot, it is maintained, possesses a proper medium between shot too large and that which is too small, and will kill a partridge at fifty yards with certainty. It is adapted for all kinds of game. It is contended that constant objects may be shot by large shot; but this consideration cannot bear upon the question which involves the killing a number of birds within a comparatively short range, and where the shots are numerous. With these statements we shall leave the reader to his own fancy and experience. To go on alluding to the various and conflicting ideas on the subject, would only perplex instead of enlighten his judgment on the controverted point of dispute.

Mixed shot is used by some sportsmen, who have given a high opinion of the practice. But there again we find many dissentients. Some sportsmen have even ridiculed the idea of such a thing in no measured language. The same difference of opinion hangs around the patent shot cartridges of Ely; therefore we shall say nothing on the matter. Shooting has its fanciful enthusiasts as well as everything else.

And, lastly, as to

THE WADDING.

The range and delivery of the shot are greatly influenced by the wadding. The common opinions on the matter are that all waddings should be quite close to the barrel, but not rammed too hard. The material should be rather softish in its nature, and yielding to a certain extent, but still of sufficient consistency to carry the shot in a body to a certain distance from the muzzle of the piece. For if the wadding is rammed too close, or is of a hard and rigid nature, such as stiff brown paper, the piece will recoil, and the shot will spread more wide; if, on the contrary, the wadding is not sufficiently close, and is composed of a slight and too pliant material, such as wool or cotton, it will not be of sufficient consistency to carry shot, and the discharge will lose its proper force. Besides, a certain portion of the shot, which is more immediately in contact with the wadding, will be melted by the explosion of the powder. Mr. Greener says that a substantial wadding between the powder and the shot is equal to a considerable artificial friction in improving the strength with which the powder expels the shot. It answers the purpose of completely preventing the explosive matter becoming mixed with the shot; and the powder is confined the same as it would be were there a ball in the barrel that fitted tight. Thus the whole force is properly exerted.

We shall return to this useful manual, for our space is limited this week.

THE GARDEN.

ALTERATIONS IN PLEASURE GROUNDS.

(Continued from page 1138.)

In our last article we offered a few practical remarks to our readers on some of the most prominent points to be considered by those who are establishing new seats or villas; and if we did not, from the nature of the subject and our limitation as to space, show them how to make what is called a "composition," we may, at least, have shown them how to avoid glaring errors.

As subjects for discussion or illustration in gardening affairs are so various, that, when intended to prove serviceable off-hand (through their adaptability to the period of their publication), they press closely on each other, we trust our readers will at once see that it is impossible to handle in full all the collateral hearings of the subject; to do this would require a book.

We observed, in our previous article, that hold curves in walks—which must be curved occasionally, from the nature of the ground surface, and other circumstances—are, in the main, qualified to produce a better effect than those tame and insipid lines, which look as though the designer had been desirous of a straight line and missed his aim. Now, although we all know that a fine-flowing curve is handsomer in its nature than an awkward curve, yet it is not on this account alone that we recommend it; as before observed, such highly subserves the purposes of the planter, or designer of clumps, shrub masses, groups, &c. The bends of ground produced by such bold curves form admirable situations for detached shrub masses of the choicer kinds; whilst the more ordinary shrubs, mingled with trees of half-height, and occasionally with timber trees, where height is desirable, either for varying the sky-line, or for shutting out unpleasant objects, may be made, in the main, to skirt the exterior portions. It is assumed on all hands that it is absolutely essential each bend of lawn formed by these hold curves should receive some object—generally planting—in order to accomplish two great requisites. The first is, that such bends, although of such eminent service to the general composition when judiciously occupied, become formal and unmeaning, and offend the Perambulator, who has no relish for going round points which can obviously be so readily crossed. In the second place, they induce this kind of trespass; and the habit of crossing over the grass soon produces a track, which, we need hardly observe, derogates exceedingly from the general style and tone of the grounds.

Such bends, however, need not of necessity receive shrub masses; groups of three or four evergreens, or trees of half-height, of handsome character, may occasionally occupy them, or such things as busts, vases, on appropriate pedestals, dials, and indeed other artistic or natural objects. About the planting in these bends, let us advise that it be in general of a dressy character, especially near the house; such character gradually decreasing as we recede, until it may at last, if requisite, merge fairly into the woodland character, the grove, &c. Evergreens especially should prevail; and here many of our new hybrid rhododendrons will be found peculiarly suitable; and amongst what are termed American shrubs, some nice little evergreen things may be selected from the families Andromeda, Ledum, Kalmia, &c.; then such things as the Arbutus, Allaternus, Bays, and where the bends are of considerable bulk, the Portugal laurel, not forgetting the laurustine, besides several novelties in the evergreen way, which we have not space to enumerate. Occasionally some of our spiry-pointed evergreens of the cypress and juniper families, may heighten the outline by their spiry forms, rising above common flat-headed things. To such we may add the Berberis and Mahonia families; the new Berberis Darwinii is a delightful thing; these, and such families as the hardy Ericas, may with great propriety occupy the minor bends by themselves, totally devoid of any mixture. Of course, a sprinkling of deciduous shrubs, may be used, and near the house our splendid new hardy azalias will find a place; amongst other things, the new Deutzias, Weigelas, &c., may not be forgotten.

But, in the interior spaces of lawn, where what are vulgarly termed clumps are requisite, it sometimes becomes necessary to resort to another style of planting. Before, however, remarking on the character of trees and shrubs adapted to the interior of lawns, let us caution the young schemer against what has been termed the dotting or frittering system; which is but too apt to antagonise what is termed "breadth." We need scarcely remind persons of taste of the beauty and freedom of a fine English lawn; it is proverbial; and to what owing? Why, to its velvety texture, and a permanency of freshness unknown to some of our continental neighbours. But there is another point, and an important one; its entireness—if we may use the term. We do not, however, here attempt to argue that a good lawn must of necessity be unbroken by any planting; reasons will arise for introducing groups or retaining those already existing; and it merely remains for the judicious schemer so to use his materials as to secure some bold portions totally devoid of planting.

Masses, or clumps, where required to occupy portions of the lawn, should possess great freedom of outline; the trees or shrubs, moreover, of which they are composed, should be of size and expression. And here we may point to the beauty of trees possessing what is termed the pinnate character of foliage, and, to make it more familiar to those of our readers who are not acquainted with botanical language, we may adduce the Acacias, Sumachs, the Ailanthus, &c. Such confer a kind of exotic impress. We may point also to the order known as Conifers, or the fir tribe, in which this country is now so rich; and, amongst the rest, to the noble cedar of Lebanon.

Whilst speaking of the beauty and effect of forms, let us also point to our spiry forms, such as the Lombardy poplar, the Cornish elm, the red cedar, &c., to which numerous others might be added: our nurserymen's lists, however, will furnish ample suggestions.

We may, in a future paper, pursue this subject further, and, amongst other objects, turn our attention to the renovation of old places, which will, perhaps, be more useful than advice concerning new ground work.

Let us suggest that, although the general principles here enumerated will, we trust, be found a tolerably good guide, yet, so much depends on the character natural to the ground to be operated on, together with its associations, that many departures will occasionally be found necessary; to abide strictly to rules, under all circumstances, would give rise to an intolerable mannerism.

GARDENING FOR THE WEEK.

PLANT HOUSES.—In houses devoted to the exhibition of flowers in blossom during the winter, much care is necessary to prevent drip on the delicate blossoms. To accomplish this, ventilation, night and day, should be practised; there is much more need of night ventilation in winter than in summer. Fires will of course be sustained sufficient to maintain the desired temperature, say forty to fifty degrees. Ericas, New Holland plants, &c., will want a most liberal amount of air, and, indeed, it is scarcely necessary to point to any tribe. Remember that the water-pot must be used now with caution, and principally, or entirely, in the forenoon. Plant-houses should now be gay with Camellias, Salvias, Begonias, some winter Ericas, scarlet Geraaniums, Heliotropes, ageratums, Lachenalias, mignonette, Chinese primroses, Gesneria zebrina, Linum trigynum, Poinsettia pulcherrima, Euphorbia jacquiniiflora, chrysanthemums, &c.

FLOWER GARDEN.

Let everything decayed be instantly removed, and the ground dressed up neat for winter. Set traps for the mice, where crocuses are attacked. Those who care about a fresh appearance in their beds during winter, may introduce such things as Wallflowers, sweet-williams, and, in fact, anything which will carry freshness through the winter. Some introduce small dwarf evergreens here and there; but, to accomplish this, a small reserve-garden should be provided.

SHRUBBERIES.

Amidst the winter operations in shrubberies, the saw and bill-hook must not be forgotten. Every shrubbery should be looked over each winter, and at least decayed and decaying materials removed. But much may be done in a judicious pruning of shrubs; for, as years roll on, the stronger will press on the weaker. Of course, all dead leaves will have been raked away; these make excellent compost.

FORCING MATTERS.

The early cucumber-grower must now see to his fermenting materials without delay; most gardeners think of this in what are called "the dark days before Christmas." If, however, he is lucky enough to possess a cucumber-house—which we strongly recommend to all who can afford it—he will have little occasion to care about frames. Indeed, all forcing matters will now begin to press on the mind of the gardener.

THE KITCHEN GARDEN.

Protection is the order of the day here with those who wish to insure a succession of all our culinary dainties of the kitchen garden through a long winter; for, come what may, it is our duty to provide for such. In our next we will chat over protection matters, the principles of which are but ill-known, we fear, or ill-applied. In the meantime, let us advise that all vacant ground be well trenched and ridged, for the sake of providing a good and renewed tilth in the ensuing spring.

MISCELLANEOUS AFFAIRS.

We need scarcely remind our friends, the young gardeners—who will, we doubt not, excuse the suggestions of one somewhat "bleached" in the service—that although the dark and stormy days of winter are but too apt to lull us into a supine mood, yet that such a dull period is invaluable if, by a wise forecast, we anticipate the busy period which will soon arrive. What are called "shed jobs" are what we allude to; all matting for tying purposes through a whole summer should, if possible, be now provided. The preparation of materials for training purposes, too, together with stakes, labels, protective materials, &c., must be all thought of.

Last, not least, let us remind the inexperienced of the policy of attacking those insect tribes in the dormant season, which are so prejudicial to good gardening, either by destructive or preventive measures.

THE GARDENER.

COVERS FOR GARDEN STRUCTURES.—The question of covering to houses, pits, frames, &c., has become a rather serious one, in consequence of the high price of Russian mats; and now is the time for an ingenious manufacturer to lay the foundation of a fortune, by inventing some truly useful and economical covering; such would meet with a universal demand. To accomplish such a desirable end, four things must be kept steadily in view, and their degrees of importance are tolerably well indicated by the order in which they are placed:—

1. It must exclude wet.
2. It must be durable.
3. It must be comparatively light.
4. It must be produced at a moderate cost.

In addition to this, it should not be compact, thin, and hard; the more open and porous its interior texture, the better non-conductor it would prove. We have found Neil's asphalt felted economical and useful; we wish to remark further on this material, but must previously correspond with a person of high standing in the gardening profession, who has used it for years. In the meantime, we beg to place the following excellent remarks before our readers; the writer, Mr. W. P. Ayres, well understands this subject, and is a person of great experience; it is from the Gardeners' Chronicle:—

Protection of Forcing Pits and Plant Frames.

As many gardeners and amateurs will doubtless be obliged to find some substitute for their usual supply of Russian mats this year, a few remarks on the most economical mode of protecting these structures may not be without interest. The object for which protecting material of all kinds is used is vulgarly to keep out cold, philosophically to prevent the escape of heat, and hence that which with the least expenditure of money and time best secures the object in view must be the best to adopt. The market-gardeners round London use principally long litter, and they prepare it through the summer by taking the longest straw from the dung as it is brought from the stables, and this, where it is well shaken out and dried, is formed into a stack contiguous to the frame ground, ready for winter's use. This is simply thrown over the frames to the thickness of four, six, or twelve inches, according to the severity of the weather, and answers very well. But it is untidy for a gentleman's garden, and moreover makes the glass very dirty, depriving the plants of much light, and rendering a great loss of labour necessary in washing the frames, and also much breakage. It is, however, very surprising how little attention some of the best market growers seem to pay to the importance of light; you may go into their forcing grounds in the dark months of winter, when they are forcing cucumbers and other early crops, but you might as well try to look through a 14-inch wall as to discover the contents of the frames through the glass; yet how astonishing is their success!

Wood shutters and thatched hurdles have been used since the days of Abercrombie; but if they are durable, they must be awkward and clumsy; and if they are not durable, they become expensive. They have also another and still worse objection, which is, that if not very carefully handled they rub the paint off the sashes.

Mats, if they are good, so long as they remain in that condition, are a very effective protection; but thin, hard, common mats, as too many of them have been of late years, are dear at any price. A really good mat, if held by the four corners, ought to hold water for a considerable time without its soaking through; but even the "best Archangel" mats of this description are few. Mats, however, are expensive, troublesome, and littery; and when shabby, they are shabby indeed. The price of good mats will average about a guinea per dozen; and supposing each mat to cover three square yards, that fixes the price at 7d. per yard, or, as double mats must be used, at 1s. 2d. per yard annually. Frigi domo may be compared to a poor blanket; it is a good non-conducting substance, but thin, and I fear not very durable; but still I should think as good as mats.

Now, it is an established fact that confined air is an excellent non-conductor, and hence a covering, to be really effective, should be as nearly as can be air-proof, and of course at the same time it will be waterproof. Hence, acting upon this hypothesis, some nine years back, I had waterproof covers prepared for all the pits and frames under my charge; these were made of sail-cloth, of which several qualities were offered by the dealers, but the best was procured from Henry and Co., of Mark-lane, being such as is used by the Admiralty for sails for our first class men-of-war vessels; in width it was something less than a yard, and the expense at that time something like 1s. 3d. per yard. This was made up by a sail-maker into cloths of a size suitable for the pits to be covered, allowing six or nine inches to hang over at the back and front of the pits, and being elevated about two inches above the glass, and fastened tightly down, it became both air-tight and waterproof; each cover was fastened at one end to a roller, and the other end was fastened to the frame of the pit, and at the time for covering up nothing more was necessary than to roll the cloth on and fasten it down by strong springs to staples back and front fixed for the purpose; and hence, "Let the storm pelt us" or not, we could retire for the night certain that everything so protected was safe from frost. These covers, with a coat of boiled oil every alternate autumn, lasted for seven years, and I believe one of them at the present time forms the cover of one of Mr. Colyer's principal plant vans. Of course such a covering in the first outset will be more expensive than mats or other temporary appliances, but the first expense is the last, for seven years, and consequently the saving is considerable. With proper care, and applied only to their legitimate purpose, I believe such covers would last several years longer than mine did, and perhaps with some preparation of gutta percha they might be rendered still more durable. But my covers were used for all kinds of purposes, such as shading seed-beds or cuttings in the open ground in the summer, protecting strawberry beds when in fruit from drenching rain, sheltering plants in temporary frames, harvesting seeds, and sometimes protecting the hay-ricks in catching harvest weather; and this last was the most destructive use of all, for the heat caused the oil to liquefy, and hence a good deal of it was lost.

For shading during the summer months thin straw mats made with tar-twine, or, still better, where they can be procured, reed mats, are very useful, as they may be made sufficiently thin to shade the plants without obstructing much light; but possibly good screes, or Haythorn's hexagon netting, would be still less expensive, and certainly preferable, and more convenient for use.

For purposes of protection I look upon it to be of as much importance to have a waterproof covering as one capable of preventing the escape of heat; for if on cold stormy nights, or in heavy falls of snow, it runs through the covering, and trickles down the glass, it is quite certain it cannot do so without abstracting a considerable portion of heat in its progress. I think a waterproof and air-tight substantial cloth, supported two inches above the glass, is as nearly perfect as can be; and those who make the experiment will find (though expensive at the first) that in a few years they have avoided the general rule in such matters, viz., that of being "penny wise and pound foolish."

Where pits are heated sufficiently by hot water or fires the expense of covering may be avoided; but, in all cases of very severe weather, it will be found more advantageous to cover than to use much firing—not because of the expense of the fire, but to avoid the dryness of atmosphere, inevitable where a high internal temperature has to be maintained at the same time that all the moisture contained in the atmosphere is being condensed upon the cold glass. All forcing-houses would be best covered in severe weather, especially where it is indispensable to maintain a high moist temperature, and where fuel is dear, I think the expense of providing good waterproof covering would soon be covered by the saving in fuel.

It may not be out of place to give our great horticultural builders a hint which, if carried out, would offer considerable facilities to gardeners in large establishments, and that is in making a new garden to have the whole of the sashes of the same size, so that the sashes of a late might be placed over an early peach-house or vinery, and thus form the best covering that could be had for such a purpose.

In the practical management of covering, of course it is important in severe weather that cold pits and frames should be covered up before the glass becomes frozen, and while there is yet some heat in the frame; in continued frosts such pits are better covered up than exposed in the daytime, if the atmosphere is dry, and, indeed with the cloth-covers, sufficient light is admitted for all plants in a state of hibernation for several weeks together, especially if care be taken afterwards not to expose the plants to strong sunlight until they have been exposed to moderate light for some few days.

W. P. AYRES.

DESSERT PEARS.

As we shall have much to say about fruits as the season returns, let us at once commence by remarking on pears. Our readers are doubtless aware that the name "Van Mons" is attached to many of our Belgic pears, and that the latter have attained great notoriety in our times by their great importance in the winter's dessert; indeed, so great, that a modern dessert for any important occasion, would prove matter of astonishment if there were not a dish or dishes of noble melting pears, even in January, February, or March. The pear question, therefore, is second to none in the whole range of practical horticulture, and as we boldly lay claim to as much experience in their culture as any British gardener, we shall frequently offer remarks calculated to be of real service to our readers. As we must speak off-hand for the present, it must be to advise those who are about planting pears to keep their eye well fixed on the following, which are all first-rate pears, and indispensable in every garden, be it large or small:—Placed in the order of their ripening.

Jargonelle	Aug., Sept. ..	Stds.
Delice d'Hardenpont ..	Sept.	E. or W.
Dunmore	Oct.	Stds., or E. or W.
Fondante d'Automne ..	Oct.	Stds.
Beurré d'Amanlis	Oct.	Stds.
Williams' bon Chretien ..	Oct.	Stds.
Althorpe Crassano	Nov.	Stds.
Louis bonne of Jersey ..	Nov.	Stds.
Marie Louise	Nov., Dec.	Stds., and E. or W.
"Thompson's" pear	Nov.	Stds., and E. or W.
Nelis d'hiver	Dec., Jan.	S. E. or W.
Beurré diel	Dec.	E. or W.
Glout morceaux	Dec., Jan.	E. or W.
Passe Colmar	Dec., Jan.	E. or W.
Beurré d'Arenberg	Dec., Jan.	E. or W.
Soldat Laboureur	Dec., Jan.	E. or W.
Easter Beurré	Dec., Jan.	Stds., or E. or W.
Ne plus Meuris	Feb., March ..	E. or W.
Beurré de Rance	March, April ..	E. or W.

As to the abbreviations, they explain the aspect. For instance:—Std., standards; that is, no wall or fence. E., W. S., &c., of course signify east, west, or south aspects on walls.

With this hasty preface, we beg to give the following extract from the Gardeners' Chronicle, from the pen of Mons. de Jonghe, of Brussels, giving an account of the origin of many of our now famous dessert pears:—

Origin of the Pear Tree, its Progress and Success.

In the endeavours to obtain new and improved varieties of fruits by seed, the chemist, Van Mons, of Brussels, was the first in Belgium who was guided chiefly by the idea of raising seedlings from the pips of fruit of vigorous trees in the first instance and continually re-sowing the seeds obtained from the last generation of seedlings, in order to obtain improved fruits, in form and taste. He is also the only one who has stated the principles by which he was guided in his researches. These were commenced at Brussels, about the end of last century, in a nursery bearing the name of La Fidélité. Called at a later date to be Professor of Chemistry at the University of Louvain, he transferred, in 1819, his numerous seedlings to that place not, however, without losing a great many; and he continued his essays till 1842, the time of his decease. After continuing his researches for twenty-five years the first catalogue, indicating the new varieties obtained, was printed at Louvain in 1823. Some of these varieties have been described by the author, and published in the following works:—

Annales des Sciences Naturelles: MM. Toulard et Weissenbruck, 1819-30. New [American] Orchardist by Mr. Kenrick: Boston, 1833. American Gardeners' Magazine, T. G. Hovey: Boston, 1835. Systematisches Handbuch uer Obstkunde, J. G. Dittich: Jena, 1837. Album de Pomologie, par A. Bivort, and others: 4 vols. 4to, 1847-1851. La Pomonomie Belge, of the late Van Mons, appeared at Louvain in 1835 and 1836 in 2 vols. 8vo.

In 1845 the nurseries of Louvain were given over by the heirs of Van Mons to M. A. Bivort, and the collection transferred to the gardens of the village of Geest St. Remy, near Jodoigne. In consequence of the vigorous trees having been transplanted into a less favourable soil than that of Louvain, many of them again fruited in 1847 and 1848. The new and good varieties were named and sent out, at least a great number of them; nevertheless they are still but little known, and not widely distributed. A better knowledge of them would therefore be advantageous to amateurs. M. Bivort, having retired from business in 1852, formed a society, a committee of which is charged to ascertain the good varieties which may be found among those that have not yet fruited, and of which, consequently, the merits have not been proved. Major Esperen, of Mechlin, commenced researches of the same kind somewhat later than Van Mons, and he also obtained results deserving notice.

GYNERIUM ARGENTEUM, OR PAMPAS GRASS.

This extraordinary grass, so singularly adapted to pleasure-grounds, is said to cover the open country to a vast extent in Buenos Ayres. These plums, as our readers know, are termed pampas, and hence the popular name. This noble herb flowered first, we are informed, at the gardens of Robert Hutton, Esq., Putney-park, and has since flowered at various places. The flower stems, sometimes thirty to forty in number, grow nearly twenty feet in height, and are terminated by a silvery panicle of more than half a yard in length, which forms a beautiful plume. The foliage is about eight to ten feet in length, and of flinty texture, describing a graceful semicircular and wavy outline, and produced in tussocks. It is, doubtless, perfectly hardy, and the roots have been known to remain under-water a whole winter. It is likely soon to become exceedingly plentiful; and we entreat those gardening readers of THE FIELD who are at present unacquainted with it, to obtain this charming acquisition as soon as possible.

THE FARM.

THE event of the week has been the Smithfield Club Cattle Show. Mere fat has disappeared, and, instead of disgusting deformities, which formerly were the winners of prizes, we have round, sleek, graceful forms, the Duke of Rutland's four-year-old shorthorn ox taking the gold medal, as the best of any breed exhibited. It is noted that the shorthorns, Herefords, and Devons maintain their superiority for fattening. The Duke of Richmond obtained the first prize for Southdown sheep, which were models of beauty. The finest pigs in the Show were undoubtedly those of Mr. Williams, of Ringrove Farm, near Bridgewater, which particularly deserve attention. Prince Albert again obtained a prize for the best Devon steer.

The grain market continues quiet, with a tendency downwards. A fall of full 2s. per quarter, on wheat has taken place; but it is not anticipated that it will go much lower, at all events, before Christmas, because the importations have been less than in any former year, by upwards of one million quarters of wheat and nearly eight hundred thousand hundred-weights of flour. True, we have intelligence of some shipments from America; but what are these compared with the resources of which the war has deprived us? But the closing of those markets in the Black Sea has not only operated directly upon our own, but, by cutting off of the shipments to the Mediterranean, it has prevented any corn coming to us from those countries. Furthermore, it is now ascertained that both France and Belgium must be importing countries during this winter, for the yield of their crops has not equalled the promise. Putting all these causes together, the continuance of high prices may be calculated upon with confidence, and the prosperity of the farmer is secured for many months, and probably for many years to come.

FARMING PROSPECTS.

THE CATTLE SHOW.

(From a Correspondent.)

Expediency is the order of the day in mundane matters as well as those of the farm, and the growth of corn so much depends upon the capabilities and proper culture of the land, and the amount of stock kept, that any means tending to diminish it must decrease our acreage fertility, and this at a time when we are least able to bear it, and when the prices of food are out of all proportion to the bounteous gifts of Providence during the late harvest. The value of a crop, as everybody knows, is enhanced by the return the different varieties of stock kept on it will make; so it is expedient to procure and produce that kind of stock which will make the best and quickest return by the consumption of it; and the object of the Smithfield Cattle Show Club is to cause that competition for premiums in the different classes of Devons, Herefords, shorthorns, Scotch or Irish breeds, Welsh breeds, and other pure breeds, or cross or mixed breeds, as well as in the different breeds of sheep and pigs, in order to ascertain which breed is capable of producing the desired requisites, viz., the greatest weight of good and well-fatted meat, combining, at the same time, symmetry, strain, and soundness of bone, in the smallest possible compass, and at the least possible expense. Prize beasts are very difficult to procure and produce, and are mostly confined to the strains of our eminent breeders, such as the late Earl Spencer, the late Lord Western, Lord Leicester, Lords Hill and Berwick, Lord Portman, Sir Robert Price, and others, who can afford to combine pleasure with profit (if there is any profit attached to a prize beast, which I have heard, by a good judge, doubted). There are four different breeds, says Mr. Hillyard, a late eminent grazier of Northamptonshire, although there are several cross breeds. The Durlands and Herefords visit our best pastures; the South Devons for the short and warm pastures on light soils; and the Scots for the wild and cold pastures. These four breeds, he says, must ever remain pure, because they cannot be benefited by crossing with any other breed; but the males of these breeds, by judicious crossing, would improve other breeds; thus, the Durlands would improve the Lincoln, and the long-legged, light-fleshed Glamorgans and Monmouths; and the Herefords would improve the Shropshire and Somersetshire breeds; and the South Devons the South Wales black beasts. A cross, adds Mr. Hillyard, is the operation of a moment, and its end once attained, the breeder's object is not to repeat it, but to sustain it. Some counties are so famous for the fine growth and the particular development of the points of animals, that they rarely do well in any but these counties; for instance, the old turf lands of the Midland Counties and Herefordshire suit cattle better, and fatten them quicker, than almost any other; whilst the rich pastures of Dorsetshire, Somersetshire, Derbyshire, and Cheshire cause them to yield more abundant and richer milk. So corn or roots from certain districts, or from certain kinds of alluvial soil, yield more nutritious produce than others, and go further towards improving the growth and fatness of the animal, which depends as much on what it feeds on, as the plant or root from which it derives from the soil. A prize beast is fattening all its life; and good fresh beasts, from our best pastures, take about three or four months to fatten, or even more, and require three bushels of Swedes, or four bushels of whites, with the addition of four or five pounds of oilcake, or meal, a-day; and hay is given between each meal, and an ordinary ox will eat one cwt. a-day. There is also the box-feeding system on warm food, consisting of ground grain, boiled parsnips, turnips, &c., well mixed up with one-inch cut straw, thoroughly wetted before the meal is thrown in, and then divided into three regular meals a-day. Professor Johnstone says:—"Cattle have in their bodies different forms of matter, but particularly flesh and fat; albumen supplying in great parts the muscle, whilst oilcake and meal supplies the flesh and fat." There can be no doubt that covered homesteads are strongly to be recommended, when ever they can be introduced with advantage, and adapted to the requirements of the farm, open at the sides to admit air by day, and by shutting them to increase the warmth at night. The profits of rearing and feeding stock are not so regular as the production of corn, which is considered the rent crop; but such is the laudable ambition of several noblemen and gentlemen connected with agriculture, as also the graziers, to combine symmetry, strain, and soundness of bone in the animals which they think worthy of exhibiting at our annual Christmas show, that although the mere experiment of laying on fat is one in which the wealthier of them only can indulge in, it affords much instruction in proving in how short a time, and in what particular food, our best breeds of cattle, sheep, and pigs are brought to the highest perfection for the butcher.

On attending the Show yesterday, I was glad to see the three favourite breeds—Herefords, Devons, and shorthorns maintain their reputation for their fattening propensities. The Duke of Rutland's shorthorn ox, which gained the first prize of £25, and the gold medal, for the best of any breed exhibited, is certainly a most level, fine specimen, and is thought by first-rate judges to be one of the best beasts ever shown, and, in the words of an admiring rustic, fresh from the shires, "all over alike." Mr. Niblett's Hereford is very good; forwards with a good cylindrical barrel, but certainly rather deficient in his hind quarters; and I prefer Mr. Ford's Dorsetshire Hereford steer, No. 48. The Prince's prize oxen are rather small, even for Devons, but are very full of fine rich meat. The Devons are, as usual, very fine, and the Duke of Richmond, Mr. Rigden, and Lord Walsingham, run almost a dead heat for the first prize. The Marquis of Exeter's Leicesters are remarkably well bred and small boned; and there are some very fine mixed breeds of Down and Leicesters, bred by Mr. Redman, of Norfolk; and the pigs are also very good—the improved Leicester and Dorset breeds carrying off the principal prizes into the pockets of Mr. Williams, Mr. Coates, and Mr. Drew. Farming prospects are certainly improving; expensive machinery is fast coming into operation, and corn can now be thrashed for 1s. per quarter, which formerly cost 2s. 6d. by hand-threshing. Labour is also, owing to the want of emigration, abundant; and we find no decreasing supplies of animal food, or diminished skill in feeding; on the contrary, the Show is not disfigured by the extreme obesity of animals, as it was some few years ago, and the fine points are more developed than they were in days of yore. E. B. A.

London Farmers' Club, Dec. 6th, 1854.

THE LAND.

CROPS AND PRICES.—The grain markets, after a rally, have, during the past week, shown symptoms of decline, and we still believe that the present high range of prices will not be permanent. We observe that large quantities of oats have already come in, and it cannot be doubted that large supplies of wheat will be forthcoming under the inducements held out by existing rates. In some places we hear, as thrashing proceeds, the recent estimates of the yield of wheat crops have not been borne out; but that is not generally the case, the yield fully coming up to the calculated quantity. Wheat is coming up well, and as regards the prospects of the current year, all is as favourable as possible. That farmers, who have their land in good condition, are doing as well, perhaps better, than at any former period within the last forty years, is certain, and the effect is to induce a very active demand for farms. Yet on this point we must raise a warning voice. Prices such as now prevail are not likely to be permanent, and many farmers who are now taking land, without either the requisite durable improvements by the landlord or security for their own capital if employed in such improvements, will, when prices subside, be sure to find themselves in positions of more or less difficulty. There is nothing in the present accidental and temporary range of prices to justify any farmer in taking a farm without an ample guarantee for its permanent improvement either by the landlord, or by the means of the tenant's own capital under the safeguard of a lease. That such warnings are necessary we know, from many recent farm lettings which have come under our notice.

The new market at Copenhagen Fields, near the terminus of the Great Northern Railway, in substitution of the Smithfield market, approaches completion, and is, it is reported, likely to be opened for business next month. The benefits to farmers, butchers, and the public from the improved arrangement under which fat stock will then be exhibited must be apparent.—Economist.

WILTSHIRE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY: AWARD OF PRIZES.—The following award of prizes for turnip crops has just been made:—

Mr. Hovocoll's prize for the best crop of Swede Turnips.

	tons.	cwt.	qrs.	lbs.
Mr. Hovocoll, Severn End	22	13	2	0 per acre
Mr. George McCaig, Great Molesey	18	12	2	25 "
Mr. Richard Giddings, Hainey-castle	17	15	2	15 "
Mr. Benjamin Hall, ditto	15	0	1	2 "

Mr. Webb's Prize for the best two acres of Swede Turnips, manured with Guano only.

	tons.	cwt.	qrs.	lbs.
Mr. Harris, of Stoney-lane, near Bromsgrove	19	8	3	20 per acre
Mr. Richard Giddings, Hainey-castle	17	3	0	0 "

The judges were Mr. E. B. Guest and Mr. Joseph Lett, both well-known agriculturalists.

AGRICULTURAL NEWS.

We regret to announce the serious indisposition of Mr. Philip Pusey, the eminent agriculturist, of Pusey, Berks, and late M.P. for the county.—Professor Wilson, F.R.S.E. succeeds to the Chair of Agriculture in the University of Edinburgh, vacant by the retirement of Professor Low. Mr. Wilson is already well known from the public appointments he has held, one of the most important and successful of which was his commission to report on the agricultural department of the New York Exhibition.—The last advices from the West Indies mention the discovery of a guano island in the Leeward group—Aves, or Bird Island, belonging to the Dutch Government. The deposit was discovered by an American; two American vessels were taking in cargoes; and it is said that the Yankees have landed men and cannon to defend their possession against intruders.—On Tuesday se'night, six ewes of the Dorsetshire breed, belonging to Mr. Cruickshank, Clives, presented their owner with a couple of lambs each; and, what is no less extraordinary, forty other ewes of the same stock are expected to lamb this week! These lambs will therefore be ready for the butcher by Christmas.—Work now is exceedingly plentiful; indeed, farming operations are now somewhat retarded, owing to the scarcity of hands. Women are being employed in the place of men and even disabled men who can do no more than "women work" are certain of employment.—Stamford Mercury.—In Yorkshire they say potatoes generally are a nice healthy crop, not having more than one or two per cent. of diseased tubers; carrots very inferior, almost a failure in most cases. Mangold wurzel pretty good, considering the season; in some cases upwards of thirty tons per imperial acre have been stored. The turnip crops are likely to prove far short of an average supply, more especially the Swede portion, which are seriously mildewed.—Mr. Sadler's dairy manager (North Wilts) objects strongly to cheese tubs of wood, because, however carefully they may be scrubbed, they cannot be completely freed from portions of the milk or whey that have been absorbed by them, and which will afterwards emit products injurious to milk. Everybody knows that milk is peculiarly susceptible of injury from a tainted atmosphere.—Agricultural Gazette.

SPIRIT OF THE AGRICULTURAL MEETINGS.

(Instead of long and uninteresting lists of prizes and reports of dinners, we purpose, under this title, to give selections of any thing that is done that may be really worth reading.)

STEAM POWER.

At the Farmers' Club meeting last week, Mr. Meeni said, alluding to steam thrashing-machines—A steam horse only cost half the price of a real horse, and did double the work. Mr. Gardner, of that town, who employed a steam-engine, told him that day that it was of great use and advantage to him, and he only regretted that he did not take his (Mr. Meeni's) advice, and have had it a 6-horse, instead of a 3-horse power; and he had no doubt but he would in time wish it had been of 12-horse power. He thought they would next be requiring fixed engines in the place of portable ones, and which he recommended as being more economical and capable of being made more generally useful. His fixed engine cost £200, and his portable engine £300, and £100 saved in one article was a great object. It was one of the singular illustrations of progression, that when he first put up his engine—the only one in the county—everybody cried shame of him; but now people could not get engines fast enough. He asked what had become of the old horse machines? [A voice: "I sold mine for £6."] What were their horses doing now?—either they must have found new work for them, or else they were not half worked before. He was going down to Leeds next week to see whether they were going to put their sewage on the land. He thought this was a great question which would force itself on the minds of the people of England. (Hear, hear.) A friend of his, opposite, was discussing the question whether dried blood was as good as birds' dung or guano; but nobody ever asked whether the sewage was good for the land. He begged of them to think and talk about it, and the next thing, they would get it. It was no use for any public company to lay down pipes and get Acts of Parliament, unless they agreed to use the stuff which was brought them. He believed agriculturists were not yet in a position to say to a company, "We will take that sewage and value it as capital stuff and pay you for it," and therefore they could not expect people to be at the expense of collecting it. The town of Colchester once thought the railway a nuisance, but they had seen their error, and he had no doubt but others would acknowledge they were wrong in reference to the disposal of the food of cities.

SMITHFIELD CLUB CATTLE SHOW.

The Show has been very fine, distinguished more for beauty of form and excellence in all parts, than for fat. The visitors have been as numerous, and apparently as interested in the Show, as ever.

We come first upon the sleek little Devons, for each breed is now shown in its several classes distinct from others, thus affording an excellent comparison between individuals of the same breed, though not an opportunity of pitting the various breeds against each other. The show of Devons is excellent, the Earl of Leicester carrying off the palm. It is impossible not to be struck with the symmetry and compactness of this favourite breed, and their fineness of bone. As we pass along we become sensible of the increased accommodation which Mr. Gibbs has this year obtained for the stock. The number at the Show is equal to the last, and in quality it has probably never been surpassed. The shorthorns have now, for the third year in succession, gained the gold medal as the best of any breed exhibited, the Duke of Rutland being this year the winner. His Grace's four-year-old ox, No. 69, is perhaps the most perfect animal ever shown at Baker-street. He has no coarse points about him, no unsightly humps of fat, but is, in all respects, the model of a fat ox. In this class the second prize is gained by the Rev. J. Holmes, No. 71, fed by Mr. Elliot, of Hardgrave, stands higher and is three inches larger than the first prize ox, though six months younger, but he is seven inches less in girth, and, though a fine animal, is not nearly so well finished as the Duke of Rutland's ox. It is here that the northern feeders are apt to fail. A Smithfield Club prize-ox must be brought out to the last point before he can compete successfully. In the younger class of this breed, No. 60, bred by the Secretary-of-War, takes the first prize, and in class 12, Mr. Townley's cow—a barrel of fat—is worthy of inspection.

The show of Herefords is, as usual, excellent, Mr. Heath, of Ludham-hall, carrying off the highest prizes. Mr. Niblett's ox (No. 38), which takes the first prize in Class 6, is a prime animal, very equal and free from lumps. We cannot speak so favourably of No. 49, which exhibits some of those unsightly humps of fat for which the show was once too remarkable; but which, happily, good taste and the requirements of the market have now nearly banished. On that point very little fault can be found with the present show. There is a liveliness and wholesomeness about the animals which gives pleasure to the spectator. The three favourite breeds—shorthorns, Herefords, and Devons, maintain their reputation as fattening animals; but it may be a question whether some other of the old breeds ought not to be more patronised. The Sussex steer, No. 109, for instance, shows excellent points, and it is difficult to understand upon what principle the longhorn next him received the preference from the judges. No. 112, another steer of the same breed, shown by Messrs. Neame, is a very good animal, and deservedly gained a prize. In early maturity, size, symmetry, and fineness of bone, the Sussex appears to us to be quite worthy of greater encouragement. No. 99, Mr. Gurney's Galloway Scot, is reckoned a very fine specimen of that favourite breed. In crosses, those of the shorthorn and Hereford are the best. We particularly recommend an inspection of No. 118, a very handsome animal, only one year and nine months old; and 129, a cross of the short horn and Ayrshire.

The show of sheep, especially South Downs and crosses, is remarkably good. The Duke of Richmond gains the principal honour in the South Downs; his Grace's pens, No. 195 and 222, being the perfection of that breed. In size and bone it strikes us that the Duke is year by year increasing. Mr. Drice takes the first prize in crosses with his down and Cotswolds, No. 172, which is very fine; but it is extremely difficult to say in what respect they excel Mr. Overman's pen, No. 170, of Down and Leicesters, which are awarded the second prize. Mr. Hine shows an excellent pen, No. 166, of Sussex Down and Leicesters. These cross-bred sheep we have little doubt are the most profitable animals in the Show.

Mr. Williams, of Haygrove farm, Bridgewater, carries off the first prize in pigs, his pen of seventeen weeks old Leicesters being reckoned the finest of their age ever exhibited. Mr. Coote and Mr. Druce also take prizes for their justly celebrated breeds.

His Royal Highness Prince Albert spent a couple of hours this afternoon in the show-yard inspecting the various animals. As will be seen by the prize list, which we subjoin, his Royal Highness has been a successful competitor this year. Upstairs the show of implements is very good, there being room only for the best selection of the best from each maker. There is a very fine show of roots on the stand of Messrs. Gibbs. Among the implements a steam plough is shown, and several reaping machines.

The following is the award of prizes:—

Deacons.

Sheep—Class 1.—1st prize of £75 to his Royal Highness Prince Albert; the silver medal to the breeder, Mr. Richard Mordridge, Noland, South Moulton; 2nd prize of £10 to Mr. Walter Farthing, the representative of the late Samuel Farthing, Stowey-court, Bridgewater.

Sheep or Oxen—Class 2.—1st prize of £25 to the Earl of Leicester, Holkham-hall, Norfolk; the silver medal to the breeder, his lordship; 2nd prize of £10 to Mr. Frederick King, Nursling, near Southampton.

Heifers—Class 3.—1st prize of £15 to the Earl of Leicester, Holkham-hall, Norfolk; the silver medal to the breeder, his lordship; 2nd prize of £5 to his Royal Highness Prince Albert.

Cows—Class 4.—1st prize of £20 to Mr. John Hudson, Castle Acre, Swaffham, Norfolk; the silver medal to the breeder, Mr. John Hudson; 2nd prize of £10 to Mr. Thomas Bond, Park, North Feltherton, Bridgewater.

Herefords.

Sheep—Class 5.—1st prize of £25 to Mr. Isaac Niblett, Conygro-house, Pilton, Bristol; the silver medal to the breeder, Mr. T. L. Melre, Count Arbor, Shrewsbury; 2nd prize of £10 to his Royal Highness Prince Albert.

Sheep or Oxen—Class 6.—1st prize of £25 to Mr. William Heath, Ludham-hall, Norwich; the silver medal to the breeder, Mr. Thomas Carter, Dodmore, Ludlow; 2nd prize of £10 to Mr. John Ford, Jun., Rushton, near Blandford.

Heifers—Class 7.—1st prize of £15 to Mr. Frederick King, Nursling, Southampton; the silver medal to the breeder, Mr. Thomas Samsou, Kingston Russell, Dorchester; 2nd prize of £5, withheld.

Cows—Class 8.—1st prize of £20 to Mr. William Heath, Ludham-hall, Norwich; the silver medal to the breeder, Mr. Edward Longmore, Ludlow; 2nd prize of £10 to Mr. John Stevens, 69, Holywell-street, Oxford.

Shorthorns.

Sheep—Class 9.—1st prize of £25 to Mr. James Fulcher, Jun., Fovant, near Salisbury; the silver medal to the breeder, the Right Hon. Sidney Herbert, M.P., Wilton, near Salisbury; 2nd prize of £10 to Mr. William Aldworth, Efrillford, Abingdon.

Sheep or Oxen—Class 10.—1st prize of £25 to his Grace the Duke of Rutland, Belvoir Castle, Grantham; the silver medal to the breeder, ditto; 2nd prize of £10 to the Rev. J. Holmes, Brook-hall, Norwich.

Heifers—Class 11.—1st prize of £15 to Mr. Joseph Phillips, Arlington, Wantage; the silver medal to the breeder, Mr. William Fussell, Laycock, Chippenham; 2nd prize of £5 to Earl Spencer, Althorp-park, Northampton.

Cows—Class 12.—1st prize of £20 to Mr. Charles Towneley, Towneley-park, Brunley; the silver medal to the breeder, Mr. Alexander Bannerman, South-cottage, Chorley; 2nd prize of £10 to Mr. J. A. Langston, M.P., Sarsden-house, Chipping Norton.

Scotch or Irish Breeds.

Sheep or Oxen—Class 13.—The prize of £10 to Mr. John H. Gurnoy, Catton-hall, near Norwich.

Heifers or Cows—Class 14.—The prize of £5 to Mr. H. H. Lindsay, Westdean, near Chichester.

Welsh Breeds.

Sheep or Oxen—Class 15.—The prize of £10 to Mr. B. E. Bennett, Marston Trussell-hall, Market Harborough.

Heifers—Class 16.—The prize of £5 to Mr. R. Worthington, Saddington, near Market Harborough.

Other Pure Breeds.

Sheep or Oxen—Class 17.—The prize of £10 to Mr. R. H. Chapman, Upton, Nuneaton; the silver medal to the breeder, Mr. R. H. Chapman.

Heifers or Cows—Class 18.—The prize of £10 to Messrs. C. Neame and Sons, Selling, Faversham; the silver medal to the breeders, Messrs. C. Neame and Sons.

Cross or Mixed Breeds.

Sheep—Class 19.—The prize of £15 to the Right Hon. the Earl of Radnor, Coleshill, Berks; the silver medal to the breeder, the Right Hon. the Earl of Radnor.

Sheep or Oxen—Class 20.—The prize of £15 to Mr. William Hewer, Sevenhampton, Highworth, Wilts; the silver medal to the breeder, Mr. William Hewer.

Heifers—Class 21.—The prize of £10 to Mr. John Tucker, Abbey Printworks, Stratford, Essex; the silver medal to the breeder, Mr. John Tucker.

Long-woolled Sheep.

Class 22—1st prize of £20 to the Marquis of Exeter, Burghley-park, Stamford; the silver medal to the breeder, the Marquis of Exeter; 2nd prize of £10 to Mr. G. S. Foljambe, Osberton-hall, Worksop; 3rd prize of £5 to Mr. Thomas Twitcheall, Willington, Bedford.

Class 23—1st prize of £20 to Mr. G. S. Foljambe, Osberton-hall, Worksop; the silver medal to the breeder, Mr. G. S. Foljambe; 2nd prize of £10 to the Marquis of Exeter, Burghley-park, Stamford; 3rd prize of £5 to Mr. Richard Newman, Harrowden Bedford.

Long-woolled (not being Leicesters).

Class 24—The prize of £10 to Mr. William Slatter, Stratton, near Cirencester; the silver medal to the breeder, Mr. William Slatter.

Cross bred Sheep.

Class 25—1st prize of £10 to Mr. Samuel Druce, Eynsham, near Oxford; the silver medal to the breeder, Mr. Samuel Druce; 2nd prize of £5 to Mr. John Overman, Burnham-Sutton, Burnham-Market, Norfolk.

Class 26—The prize of £10 to Mr. John Overman, Burnham-Sutton, Burnham-Market, Norfolk; the silver medal to the breeder, Mr. John Overman.

Short-woolled Sheep.

Class 27—1st prize of £20 to his Grace the Duke of Richmond, Goodwood, Chichester; the silver medal to the breeder, the Duke of Richmond; 2nd prize of £10 to the Right Hon. Lord Walsingham, Merton-hall, Thetford.

Class 28—The prize of £10 to Mr. William Rigden, Hove, near Brighton; the silver medal to the breeder, Mr. William Rigden.

Class 29—1st prize of £20 to his Grace the Duke of Richmond, Goodwood, Chichester; the silver medal to the breeder, the Duke of Richmond; 2nd prize of £10 to the Right Hon. Lord Walsingham, Merton-hall, Thetford.

Short-woolled (not being Southdowns).

Class 30—The prize of £10 to Mr. William King, New Hayward-farm, Hungerford; the silver medal to the breeder, Mr. William King.

Pigs.

Class 31—1st prize of £10 to Mr. J. V. Williams, Haygrove-farm, Bridgewater; the silver medal to the breeder, Mr. J. V. Williams; 2nd prize of £5 to Mr. William M. Barber, Langley Broom, Slough.

Class 32—1st prize of £10 to Mr. John Coote, Hammoor, Dorset; the silver medal to the breeder, Mr. John Coote; 2nd prize of £5 to Mr. Samuel Druce, Eynsham, Oxford.

Class 33—1st prize of £10 to Mr. Samuel Druce, Eynsham, Oxford; the silver medal to the breeder, Mr. Samuel Druce; 2nd prize of £5 to Mr. Stewart Marjoribanks, Busley-grove, Watford.

Gold Medals.

The gold medal to the best steer or ox in any of the classes, to the Duke of Rutland, Belvoir Castle, Grantham.

The gold medal to the best heifer or cow in any of the classes, to Mr. Charles Towneley, Towneley-park, near Burnley.

The gold medal to the best pen of long-woolled sheep in any of the classes, to the Marquis of Exeter, Burghley-park.

The gold medal to the best pen of short-woolled sheep in the 27th, 28th, and 30th classes, to his Grace the Duke of Richmond, of Goodwood, Chichester.

The gold medal to the best pen of pigs in any of the classes, to Mr. J. V. Williams, of Haygrove-farm, Bridgewater.

Extra Stock.

The silver medal to the best beast in extra stock, to Lord Feversham, Duncombe-park, York.

The silver medal to the best long-woolled sheep in extra stock, to Mr. William Sanday, Holme Pierrepont, Nottingham.

The silver medal to the best short-woolled sheep in extra stock, to Mr. William Rigden, Hove, near Brighton.

The silver medal to the best cross-bred sheep in extra stock, to Mr. George Hine, Jun., Oakley, Bedford.

The silver medal to the best pig in extra stock, to his Royal Highness Prince Albert.

Commendations.

Highly Commended—The Earl of Leicester's Devon steer; Mr. George Hine, Jun., pen of cross-bred sheep; Mr. William Rigden's pen of Southdowns; the Duke of Richmond's pen of Southdowns; Mr. Stephen King's pen of Hampshire downs; the Earl of Leicester's Southdown wether; Mr. John Coote's pen of Dorset pigs; Mr. N. Newman's pen of Essex and Berks pigs; the Rev. J. Holmes's pen of pigs.

Commended—The Earl of Leicester's Devon cow; the Marquis of Exeter's shorthorn steer; Mr. Edward Frost's shorthorn steer; Mr. J. W. Brown's shorthorn steer; the Marquis of Exeter's shorthorn steer; Mr. Stephen Goode's shorthorn ox; the Rev. J. Arkwright's shorthorn and Ayrshire cow; Mr. John Hiteham's cross-bred wether; Mr. Henry Langer's pen of Southdown wethers; Sir R. Throckmorton's pen of Southdown wethers; the Earl of Radnor's pen of Southdown wethers.

Young Pigs—Class 31—Commended generally.

R. F. BRANDETH GIBBS, Hon. Sec.

FIELD NATURALIST.

ABSTRACT FROM A METEOROLOGICAL JOURNAL, FOR NOVEMBER, 1854.

Highest reading of the barometer, corrected to 32° Fahr. 30.453 on the 7th.
Lowest reading of the barometer, corrected to 32° Fahr. 28.882 on the 22nd.
Mean, 9 a.m., 29.773.
Mean, 3 p.m., 29.748.
Greatest range for the month, 1.571.
Maximum of the thermometer, 56° 8 on the 2nd.
Minimum of the thermometer, 26° 5 on the 27th.
Mean highest (by day), 45° 91.
Mean lowest (by night), 35° 51.
Mean diurnal variation, 10° 40.
Greatest range for the month, 30° 3.
Mean temperature was 40° 72, being 2° 90 lower than the mean of the month for the last forty years.
Mean of the dew or vapour point, 9 a.m., 31° 4.
Mean of the dew or vapour point, 3 p.m., 38° 5.
Rain and sleet fell on 12 days, amounting to 1.09 inches.

PREVAILING WINDS.

East and N.E.	6 days.
West and N.W.	9 "
North	7 "
South and S.W.	6 "

REMARKS.

November has been on the whole a calm, dry, cold month. There has been great variation of pressure, and the temperature has averaged, nearly every day, below the mean. Nevertheless, there has been no freezing in the daytime, and the frosts at night slight, and but just sufficient to stop the progress of the late flowering annuals, &c. The number of frosty nights did not exceed eight.

The warmest day was on Sunday, the 5th, when the temperature rose to 7° above the mean; and the coldest day was on Monday, the 27th, when it averaged as much as 11.7 below the mean.

The mean temperature at Greenwich, of the autumnal quarter (September, October, and November, a period of 91 days) during the last forty years, is 50° 42; the quarter now ending with November averaged 49° 42, or exactly 1° Fah. below the mean.

This has been one of the driest autumns perhaps on record, only four inches and a quarter of rain having fallen. Consistently with this state of the air, the barometer ranged very high during the months of September and October, but exhibited some remarkable depressions in November. Nevertheless, as before mentioned, the result has been that of a dry abnormal state of the atmosphere; the period has been far from healthy, the bills of mortality always averaging high.

J. HENRY BELVILLE.

No. 9, Hyde-vale, Greenwich, Dec. 2.

THE WEATHER.

EXTRAORDINARY DEPRESSION OF THE THERMOMETER.—On Sunday morning last, at eight o'clock, the thermometer, in the neighbourhood of this town, stood at twenty degrees, being twelve degrees below the freezing point, a circumstance of very unusual occurrence, so long previous to the winter quarter. In the course of Saturday night and Sunday morning ice was formed, in exposed places, exceeding two inches in thickness.—Wolverhampton Chronicle.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SEEDTIME IN NORTH NOTTINGHAMSHIRE.—It was feared autumn sowing would be greatly protracted this season, on account of the late drought. These apprehensions have not, however, been realised. All the clay wheats have found a capital bed, and the plant, which has already made its appearance, has a very promising aspect. Some of the seed on the strong soils went in rather rough, but the recent fine rains have softened the soil and prepared the seed for germinating. A considerable breadth of the sand lands remains unsown, but it is considered soon enough yet to plant this kind of soil. Snow fell in East Bedford for the first time this season on the 24th ult., and a rather sharp frost set in on Saturday night, and continued until Monday, when the Chesterfield Canal was completely iced over. Since then the weather has become milder.

FRENCH CORN DECREE.—The Monitor of Thursday contains a decree prohibiting the exportation of grain and flour up to the 31st July, 1855.

THE WHEAT CONTRACT. Contracts were taken at the Royal Clarence Victualling-yard, Gosport, by Rear-Admiral Courtenay, on Thursday, for 2,000 quarters of wheat, at an average of 74s. per quarter.

THE MARKETS.

FOREIGN.

Intelligence has been received through Malta that the English Consul at Tunis had sent word that the prohibition to export corn from the regency of Tripoli had been revoked on the 31st of October.

MARK LANE.

MONDAY, Dec. 1.—The arrivals from the provincial markets generally report a decline of 1s. to 2s. upon the rates current during the preceding week. At Liverpool there have been large purchases, at full prices, of United States Indian corn. The supplies of English wheat are liberal, and small of foreign. The former met a slow sale, at a decline of 2s. per quarter from this day week. Foreign was held firmly at last week's prices, which buyers were unwilling to pay, and only a limited business was done. In floating cargoes of Black Sea corn nothing doing for want of offers. Malt moved off tardily, and was 1s. per quarter cheaper. Barley was 2s. 6d. 3s. per quarter cheaper. The arrival of oats were liberal, and the trade dull, at a decline of 6d. per quarter from this day week. Beans and peas were each 1s. per quarter lower than this day week.

FRIDAY.—The foreign arrivals of wheat and flour continue small, and the supplies of English in Mark Lane this week have not been large. Old foreign wheat could scarcely be purchased so well as earlier in the week, and English cannot be quoted cheaper than on Monday last. Flour was unchanged in value. Barley was in better request, and the turn cheaper. Old oats maintained late rates, but new, and especially black Irish, were 6d. to 1s. cheaper. Beans and peas scarcely sold so well as before.

COUNTRY GRAIN.

Ipswich, Tuesday.—The supply of wheat is evidently again considerably fallen off—the condition too is worse; hence a decline of 2s. per quarter must be written. Barley is in large supply, the quality of the greater bulk of it however was very secondary and ordinary—there appeared a ready sale at a reduction of 2s. and 3s. per quarter upon last week's prices. We saw no beans or peas. We quote prices to the growers: Wheat, red, 70s. to 76s.; ditto, white, 78s. to 82s. per quarter; barley, mowing, 31s. to 36s.; ditto, grinding, 30s. to 34s. per quarter; beans, nominal; peas, nominal. Averages for the week ending December 2nd, 1854: Wheat, 1,612 quarters, at 73s. 1d.; barley, 3,119 quarters, at 34s. 8d.; peas, 76 quarters, at 18s. 1d.

DUBLIN CORN MARKET.

TUESDAY.—We had a very dull market to-day, and wheat, oats, and barley, of which several samples remained unsold, may be quoted at fully 1s. per barrel lower. In Indian corn and foreign wheat, there was scarcely a transaction. We subjoin prices:—White wheat, 40s. to 42s.; red ditto, 38s. to 41s.; barley, 16s. to 19s. 6d.; here, 15s. 6d. to 16s. 9d.; new oats, 11s. 6d. to 16s. 3d.; oatmeal, 16s. to 17s.; rapeseed, 27s. to 28s. 6d.; baker's flour, 23s. to 28s.; Indian corn, per 150lbs., 40s. to 47s.

BOROUGH HOT MARKET.

THURSDAY.—The market continues very firm with a great scarcity of fine hogs, and as importations of new must now cease from Bavaria, Bohemia, and Belgium, unless a considerable advance takes place now, there seems no prospect of lower prices.

FRIDAY.—Messrs. Pattenden and Smith report that the demand continues steady, with a decreasing supply, both of English and Foreign hogs.

SMITHFIELD.

MONDAY, Dec. 4.—We had an increased supply of beasts, and consequently trade was slow. Prices were rather lower for all descriptions, and several inferior remained unsold. The number of sheep was not larger, but the demand was smaller, and on the average quotations were lower. A clearance could not be effected. Good calves were bought pretty readily, although prices generally were reduced. From Germany and Holland there were 1,166 beasts, 3,150 sheep, 128 calves, and 10 pigs; Ireland, 500 beasts and 4 calves; Scotland, 250 beasts; Norfolk and Suffolk, 100; and 2,500 from the Northern and Midland Counties.

Per stone of 8lbs.	s. d. s. d.	Per stone of 8lbs.	s. d. s. d.
Best Scotch, Herefords	5 0 5 2	Best Dns. & Half-breds	5 0 0 0
Best Short Horns	4 0 4 10	Best Long Wools	4 0 4 8
Second quality beasts	3 4 3 0	Do. do. Shorn	0 0 0 0
Calves	3 8 3 6	Ewes and second quality	3 0 4 2
Pigs	3 8 4 8	Do. do. Shorn	0 0 0 0
Best Dns. & Half-breds	4 10 5 0	Lambs	0 0 0 0

Beasts at market, 4,990; sheep and lambs, 26,080; calves, 165; pigs, 410.

FRIDAY.—We have a fair supply of beasts; trade is dull for them. The weather being apparently on the change, purchasers are exceedingly cautious, and a clearance cannot be effected, although there is a disposition to take lower prices. The trade for sheep is very bad; the dead markets being quite overstocked. Good calves are selling pretty well, but generally trade is worse. From Germany and Holland there are 271 beasts, 1,150 sheep, and 161 calves; Scotland, 160 beasts; 600 from the Northern and Midland, and 90 milch cows from Home Counties.

COUNTRY CATTLE.

DERBY SMITHFIELD, Tuesday.—There was a better supply of fat beasts to-day, and the demand was good; sheep without any alteration of price. The supply of pigs was large, but a dull sale. Fat calves were scarce. Beef made 6d to 6½d, mutton, 6½d. to 7d.; veal, 7d. per lb.; pigs, 2s. 6d. per score; rough fat, 8s. 6d. per stone, commencing 23rd October; hides, young, 8s. and above, 3½d. per lb.; ditto, young, under 8s. 3½d.; old cows, all weights, 3d.; cut hides, 2½d.; calf skins, 10lb. and under, 1d.; above 10 and under 16, 1½d.; above 16, 3½d.; all cut calf skins ½d. less.

EXETER.—A good supply of prime beef, with a large proportion of superior quality. There was a fair amount of business doing, and sales were readily effected at from 10s. to 10s. 6d. per score, and in various instances higher rates were paid. Barreners were in moderate supply, and sustained last week's quotation—prime quality being at 6s. per score, and inferior 5s. 10d. Of butchers' calves the supply was again small, and the whole sold off readily at from 6½d. to 7d. per lb. A large supply of cows and calves, with a moderate sale, mostly ranging at from £11 to £17. Sheep are in heavy supply with a dull sale. Large wethers, 6d., small ditto, 6½d., ewes, 5½d. per lb.

DUBLIN SMITHFIELD CATTLE MARKET.

THURSDAY.—The attendance, although good, was not so large as last week; but from the state of the English markets, beef was not so high, ranging from 46s. to 60s.; and prime, 50s., sinking to 45d. Mutton brought from 5½d. to 6½d.; prime, 8d. Veal, 7½d. to 8d. Slaughtering of beef going on rather quickly at 40s. to 50s. Pork sold at from 44s. to 16s.

COAL MARKET.

FRIDAY.—Walls End Stewart's, 23s. 111 ships at market.

THE COUNTRY HOUSE.

HOUSEHOLD MATTERS.

PRICES AT COVENT GARDEN AND THE STOPS.—Tuesday, Dec. 8: Beef, 9d. to 10d. per lb.; mutton, 9d. to 10d.; veal, 10d. to 1s.; lamb, 1s. 4d. to 1s. 6d.; fresh pork, 8d. to 10d.; lobsters, 1s. 6d. to 2s.; cod, 6d. to 9d.; turbot, 10d. to 1s. 2d.; fowls, 1s. to 2s.; geese, 8s. to 10s.; ducks, 5s. to 6s.; geese, 6s. to 7s. each; turkeys, 8s. to 10s.; hares, 2s. 6d. to 3s. 6d.; rabbit, 2s. 6d. to 3s. per couple; pigeons, 1s. 4d.; grouse, 4s. per brace; pheasants, 4s.; partridges, 2s.; snipes, 1s.; fresh butter, 1s. 4d. per lb.; salt do., 11d. to 1s. 2d.; eggs, 8s. to 10s. per 124; potatoes, 1s. 2d. to 1s. 6d. per peck; cucumbers, 1s. to 2s. each; filberts, 2s. 6d. per lb.; English grapes, 4s.; foreign do., 1s.; English pine apples, 6s. each.

OUR LETTER BAG.

THE FIELD.

SIR,—I am very glad to see the great improvements announced in the character of THE FIELD. And I have not the slightest doubt that if you persevere in them, and have a little patience, the result in a year or two will be a bona fide circulation of three or four times the present amount.

The great mistake of late in THE FIELD has been publishing for the railway-station sale, and not for its subscribers; hence an illustration outside—often, as you say, apropos to nothing—to draw a passing purchaser; hence the publishing an edition on Friday afternoon in the summer months, evidently to sell a few copies at the stations before the other papers were out; hence again, half the score of a cricket match in one week's paper, and no mention of the conclusion in the next.

I am glad you have returned to the old form of the paper. It is far more convenient, though it may not be quite so attractive (as I said before) on the counter; but, rely upon it, if you get a good body of subscribers, you will be sure of plenty of occasional purchasers.

I think you are quite right in abridging the racing news, &c.; and I hope the Prophecs are discarded. I hope you will secure a good Cricket editor, and announce it before the season begins. A little outlay in securing good reports of the matches at Lord's will be abundantly repaid by the contributions of amateurs in different parts of the country.

As a sincere well-wisher to THE FIELD, I have spoken my ideas pretty plainly. All I ask is, continue exactly as you have announced your intention of doing for one year.

Yours, &c.,

A READER FROM THE FIRST.

HARD-PULLING HORSES.

SIR,—Will any of your readers be kind enough to tell me in your next, if they know any remedy for a hard-pulling horse, that sticks his head into his chest and pulls like the very devil. I have tried every means and bit I can think of, and apply to you as a last resource. If your readers cannot advise anything, I shall have to part with him. An answer to this will oblige

A SUBSCRIBER FROM THE FIRST.

OLD BERKSHIRE HUNT.—MR. MORRELL'S FOX-HOUNDS.

SIR,—On Wednesday the 22nd this celebrated pack of hounds met at Cokethorpe Park, the seat of W. Strickland, Esq., and had as fine a day's sport as ever was seen in the Old Berkshire country. The hounds found their fox in Boy's Wood, and ran him a very sharp ring towards Standlake village, then heading back by Yelford to Boys Wood. The hounds now rattled him in covert for twenty minutes, when he broke away to Barley Park; here a fresh fix came away with the hunted one. The hounds settled to the fresh fox, racing him by Lew Heath to Kilkenny, then by Halden and Black Bourton to Bampton. Time, up to this point, thirty-five minutes, first-rate pace. Now came some beautiful hunting, and right well the Old Berkshire bitches proved that they can hunt as well as race a fox. The chase now went by Mr. Corbin's gorse at Clunfield, and on to Alrescott; then the fox crossed the river Thames, near Radcot Bridge, going over Thrupp Common, as if pointing for Parndon Grove; he now, however, swung to the left by Puckett Farm, and saved himself by going to ground in the main earths at Revere (Buckland). Had it not been for a storm of snow, there is little doubt but this fox would have been killed in the open; as it is, it is to be hoped he still lives to give another day's sport equal to this. The distance from find to the run to ground was fourteen miles. RANGER.

CAPERCAILZIE.

SIR,—A writer in Bell's Life laments the decrease of the capercailzie in Scotland. He is wrong in this, as in many other particulars. So far from decreasing, it is becoming pretty common in most of the pine woods of Perthshire. He states that the Duke of Buccleuch introduced it; this is a mistake, it was brought from Norway by the present Marquis of Breadalbane, about eighteen or nineteen years since, and, if I mistake not, more than one lot was brought over. The bird was once plentiful in Scotland, but became extinct some sixty years since; now, thanks to the noble Marquis, this magnificent bird is becoming, as I said above, quite common. They do not appear to be the same birds as that described by the writer in question, being neither so large as he states, nor of the same colour. The beak is black and not yellow, and the prevailing colour of the male is dark grey, appearing at a distance black, a green neck, and white under the wing, two small tufts of white appearing at the shoulders, as in the black cock; the female is of a reddish brown, spotted with black, a few white feathers scattered irregularly about, a good deal like the grey hen. The male weighs about ten pounds and the female five. They are said to be good eating when young; but when full grown I know them to be hard, tough, and dry, often with a pretty strong taste of turpentine. Their chief food is the leaf of the Scotch fir, and if the crop be full of these when the bird is killed—which is generally the case—it should be emptied, or the bird will taste strongly of turpentine. They are not, however, very particular in their food, eating the leaves of various trees as well as any kind of grain. There is not the slightest chance of their becoming extinct again. I think it more probable that, in a few years, they will become more common than the black cock. W.

CURE FOR STUBBORN HORSES.

SIR,—I send you the following, as bearing on the whip-and-spur question.—An itinerant was at a nobleman's to exhibit feats of horsemanship, and the people had collected from far and near, to behold the exhibition. When the man had done with his own horses he turned, and said, "Now, my lord, I am willing to ride a horse of yours in the same manner." Having one remarkably stubborn, the nobleman told the groom to bring her out. The stranger then deliberately mounted, and urged her to move, but not one step would she stir. After a pause, he quietly dismounted, gave her one severe stroke with his whip, and again resumed the saddle. The mare remained immovable, but the man preserved his temper, and got down quietly a second time, repeating the blow, but with no better success. After the third stroke, however, she was completely subdued, and moved forward with perfect obedience.

It now became evident that the design of the horseman was to give the animal time to associate the idea of her obedience with the stroke that followed. When this was established, she was willing to move. On the contrary, if a shower of blows had been dealt out, as thousands of horsemen would have done, the mare would have had no time to reflect, and both she and her rider been roused into fury.—With good temper great savings might be made in the article of whips. Yours, MENTE MANUQUE.

SHOOTING SHOES.

To the Editor of THE FIELD.

SIR,—The well fitting of boots and shoes is a matter of some importance to all who have occasion to take strong exercise. Now the holidays are in near perspective, many gentlemen will be visiting, and walking out shooting, who have been unaccustomed to walk any distance, or over difficult and uneven ground. I have seen more gentlemen knocked up by the blistering and chafing of the feet than by want of training, or want of stamina; yet what foolish boots have I seen turned out of the portmanteaus of visitors coming into the country to shoot—or to pretend to shoot. Some with cloth tops, others with thin soles, but all too narrow and tight across the foot, with overstanding and pressed out sides upon a narrow sole,—the beau ideal of some daudy hoot-maker, who ought to make shoes and boots for women only; for women seem to delight in letting the shoemaker spoil their crimped-up feet with corns, bunions, and malformations. Look at the beautiful naked foot of a little Scotch or Welsh child; and then, by contrast, peel off the tight shoe and stocking of a belle of five-and-twenty. One would almost fancy that the boot and shoe makers, and the old fashioned race called corn-cutters—now more genteelly chiropodists—participated in each other's profits, and were banded together to disfigure, destroy, and make gain by one of the most beautiful of Nature's handiworks—the human foot. But there is no driving anything into the head of a shoe-maker; therefore, let us leave him as hopeless. One stupid fellow in my village I have at length taught to make shooting boots; and he has made many for friends of mine, and for gamekeepers, which really do give ease and satisfaction; and the process is simply this:—Impress the foot, with a stocking on it made damp, on a sheet of brown paper, and then cut out the sole of the boot, or shoe precisely like the impression; make a duplicate impression or pattern, and take it home, having first stipulated with Mr. Cordwainer that if, on comparison, the work, when finished, and the pattern differ, you will return the article, and not pay him, nor have another pair made; and, to bind him effectually, you had better have a stamped agreement drawn up by your counsel or solicitor. UMBRA.

MICE.

SIR,—The old adage says, "preservation is better than cure." In the case of your correspondent, whose crocuses are ate by mice, I would, for once at least, reverse the decision, and endeavour first to cure the evil. To accomplish which, I would suggest the purchase of half-a-dozen sixpenny box spring-traps, to be baited with the kernel of a nut, or a piece of toasted cheese; but in the meantime the depredation may be wholly prevented by chopping up some whin (gorse) quite fine, and putting it in a trench, three inches wide, and two deep, round the bulbs, with a small quantity on the top, the whole to be covered over with a thin layer of earth. This plan I would strongly recommend in all cases where either early sweet peas, or common peas are sown, the gorse to be scattered thinly in the drills. Yours truly, R. M.

TOBACCO FOR THE TROOPS IN THE CRIMEA.

SIR,—Among your numerous correspondents concerning comforts for our gallant fellows in the East, as yet there has been no mention made of tobacco, which, although known to be plentiful in Turkey, was mentioned as a scarce article in the Crimea, and I am sure it will seem to some of your readers that a few ext. of tobacco would not be at all misplaced or unacceptable to the brave defenders of our country. I remain, yours truly, BIRD'S EYE.

MAGPIES.

MR. EDITOR,—My plantations are much infested with magpies: can you or any of the numerous readers of THE FIELD hit upon any plan for destroying them? It is impossible to get near enough to shoot them—even waiting on them at night will not do; also I have built a new hen-house, and cannot 'tice the fowls by any means to roost there. Yours, COCHIN-CHINA.

FOOD FOR HORSES.

SIR,—Will some of your readers give me information on the following subject:—

I have a mare that by no means does justice to her keep, which is as follows:—Three feeds of oats a day with cut hay, and about a cut of the latter, uncut, per week. She is very greedy, and will eat anything; her work is little or nothing—gentle riding two hours a day, and sometimes not that. In spite of this she looks thin and sleepy.—Yours, &c., December 5th. A SUBSCRIBER, A. Z.

THE Eliza transport-vessel has received on board eleven eight-inch guns, weighing 120 cwt. each, for conveyance to the Crimea.

JOHN BULL.—The English are a calm, reflecting people; they will give time and money when they are convinced; but they love dates, names, and certificates. In the midst of the most heart-rending narratives, Bull requires the day of the month, the year of our Lord, the name of the parish, and the countersign of three or four respectable householders. After these affecting circumstances, he can no longer hold out, but gives way to the kindness of his nature—puffs, blubbers, and subscribes.—Sidney Smith.

DAUGHTER IMPOSITIONS EXPOSED.—INJUNCTION AGAINST NEVILL'S IMITATION OF DU BARRY'S REVALENTA ARABICA.—Notice is hereby given, that his Honour the Vice-Chancellor Sir William Page Wood has this day granted an order for injunction in this cause restraining Alfred Hooper Nevill, his servants, workmen, and agents, from selling or offering for sale any article manufactured by him as and for or under the name of "Du Barry's Revalenta Arabica," or "Revalenta Arabica," and from making up for sale any article manufactured by him in such packets or in such manner as to resemble or be a colourable imitation of the packets made up and sold by the proprietor as "Du Barry's Revalenta Arabica," or "Revalenta Arabica," and in particular from printing or engraving, or causing to be printed or engraved, and also from using, or causing to be used, any wrapper or label, directions for use, paper of instructions, bill or placard, resembling or made in imitation of the wrapper, label, directions for use, or paper of instructions, bill or placard of the proprietor, or any inscription, seal, coat of arms, device, or combination of words intended or appearing to represent or indicate that the article manufactured by him is "Du Barry's Revalenta Arabica," or "Revalenta Arabica." Dated this 5th day of March, 1854.

AMUSEMENTS.

THEATRE ROYAL DRURY LANE.—

M. JULIEN'S GRAND BAL MASQUE. This Grand Entertainment will take place to-morrow, MONDAY, December 11.—Tickets for the Ball, 10s. 6d.—The Audience portion of the theatre will be set apart for spectators. Dress Circle, 5s.; Boxes, 3s.; Lower Gallery, 2s.; Upper Gallery, 1s.—Private Boxes from 24 4s. upwards.—Doors will be open at half past nine. Dancing will commence at ten.—Places and Private Boxes may be had at the Box-office of the Theatre, and of the principal Librarians and Music Sellers.

THEATRE ROYAL, HAYMARKET.—Under the Management of Mr. BUCKSTONE.

Last engagement in England of the renowned SENORA PEREA NENA and her unequalled SPANISH DANCERS, as they depart for Madrid next week. The successful comedy of THE BALANCE OF COMFORT, by Mr. BUCKSTONE and Mr. HUDSON every evening.

MONDAY, December 11, and DURING THE WEEK, the Comedy of PRESENTED AT COURT. Geoffrey Weddellburne, Mr. Buckstone, Rochester, Mr. Moore; Charles II., Mr. W. Warren; Anne Franklyn, Miss Reynolds; Lady Castlemaine, Miss E. Chaplin; Lady Frumpton, Mrs. Poynter. After which, SENORA PEREA NENA and her unequalled SPANISH DANCERS. To be followed by THE BALANCE OF COMFORT. Torrington, Mr. Howe; Pollard, Mr. Rogers; Sheepshanks, Mr. Clark; Mrs. Torrington, Miss Reynolds; Mary, Miss E. Chaplin. After which an Irish Farce, in which Mr. Hudson will appear. And concluding BALLET, by the SPANISH DANCERS and SENORA PEREA NENA. Stage Manager, Mr. CHIPPENDALE.

THEATRE ROYAL, ADELPHI.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. B. WEBSTER. Directress, Madame CELESTE. First Week of a New Rustic Drama; in which Mr. B. Webster, Mr. Keeley, Madame Celeste, Mrs. Keeley, and Miss Woolgar, will perform.

MONDAY, Dec 11, and during the Week, an entirely New Rustic Drama, in Two Acts, with new Scenery, Dresses, and Music, entitled PIERRE THE FOUNDLING. Principal characters by Mr. B. Webster, Mr. Keeley, Madame Celeste, Mrs. Keeley, Miss Woolgar, and Miss Cubber. With BONA FIDE TRAVELLERS, by Mr. Keeley, Mr. Paul Bedford, and Mrs. Keeley, &c. After which, MONDAY, WEDNESDAY, and FRIDAY, THE CAMP AT CHOBHAM, by Mr. Keeley, Mr. Leigh Murray, and Miss M. Keeley. TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY, THE SLOW MAN, by Mr. Keeley; and to conclude every evening with THE RAILWAY BELLE, by Mr. J. Rogers, Miss Wyndham, &c. A GRAND NEW SPECTACLE is in preparation for Christmas. Stage Manager, Mr. LEIGH MURRAY.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—Under the Management of Madame VESPERIS.

Sole Lessee, Mr. CHARLES MATTHEWS. On MONDAY, December 11, will be presented (5th time), a new Comic Drama, in Two Acts, entitled AGGRAVATING SAM. Principal characters by Mr. Charles Matthews, Mr. R. Roxby, Mr. B. Baker, Mr. Swan, Mr. Williams, Mr. Templeton; Miss M. Oliver. Mrs. Macnamara, and Miss H. Gordon. After which a new Comic Drama, entitled A COMICAL COUNTESS. The Chevalier de Vilbrac, Mr. Charles Matthews; the Baron de Bergence, Mr. B. Baker; the Countess de l'Espalier, Miss Talbot. To conclude with the Farce entitled MY FELLOW CLERK. Principal characters by Mr. R. Roxby, Mr. Templeton, Mr. Williams, Mr. Swan; Mrs. Wadham, Miss M. Oliver, Mrs. Macnamara, and Miss Wastall. The Scenery by Mr. W. BEVERLY. Stage Manager, Mr. R. ROXBOROUGH.

Mr. ALLCROFT, 15, New Bond street, is appointed sole agent for the Private Boxes, to whom all applications must be made.

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—

Lessee and Manager, Mr. WILLIAM COOKE. Immense preparations are in progress for the Christmas Pantomime. SEVENTH WEEK OF THE BATTLE OF THE ALMA! which, with a Matchless Pantomime, will also be acted at Christmas. This gigantic spectacle, representing the errors of the Battle-field, showing the prowess of Britons and their brave Allies the French, contains its full career of unexampled success. The effect produced by 400 Auxiliaries, depicting the dreadful "wage of war," is indescribable.

MONDAY, Dec. 11, and all the week, THE BATTLE OF THE ALMA! After which, "Les Elites du Cercle" will appear in the Equestrian SCENES in the ARENA. Conducted by Mr. William Cooke. The whole to conclude with a RISIBLE FARCE.

PATRON: H. R. H. PRINCE ALBERT.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—

Continued Improvements—Increased Attractions—Fresh Decorations—Re-lighted under the Patents of John Leslie, Esq. Miss GLEN will read ANTONY and CLEOPATRA on Tuesday, the 12th inst., at Eight, and OTHELO on Thursday, the 14th inst., at Eight. Monday evening, the 11th inst., Lecture to the Industrial Classes; on the Manufacture of Coal Gas, by Lewis Thompson, Esq. Lectures on Chemistry, by J. H. Pepper, Esq. Lectures on Music, by Mr. Cooper. The artist and companion of Layard, illustrated by Panoramic Views taken by himself, on Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays, at Three; and on Wednesday and Friday evenings, at Eight.

Opening of the new Hall, with Lectures by Dr. Bachhoffner, illustrated by the Hydro-Electric Machine, the most splendid and successful Electrical Apparatus in the world, on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, at Three.

A beautiful Series of Forty-five Cosmographic Views of Russia, and the Costumes of the Inhabitants.

The Dissolving Views maintain their old reputation, with Scenes of the War, Sebastopol, &c. The Oxy-Hydrogen Microscope, as usual.

The Large Theatre is open on Saturday Evenings, from half past Seven till Ten, with Mr. Crawford's Vocal Illustrations of the Patriotic Songs of Scotland, the American Entertainment, and Mr. Waud's Band.

Admission 1s.; Stalls, 2s. and 3s.; Schools and Children (under ten years of age), half price.

FEUILLETON.

THE THEATRES.

LYCEUM.—"Aggravating Sam" is the title of a new drama, presented at this theatre on Wednesday evening. The Aggravator was impersonated by Charles Matthews, and that versatile actor seldom appeared to greater advantage than in this annoying and pertinacious Samuel. It is impossible to follow the plot—if indeed there be any—for one incident arises out of another without any defined object, except to create amusement and embroglio; and the whole is brought to a climax by the marriage of Sam with a young lady, just to aggravate her sui-disant lover and her father. Sam is the quintessence of mischief, and, like a bird of ill-omen, portends, wherever he shows himself, strifes and misunderstandings. He is designated a mischief-maker, chuckling over the effects of his plots, and full of anxiety lest they should miscarry, and end in happiness instead of misery. Even to the very last Sam was spiteful, for, upon the fall of the curtain, the author was loudly called for, but Sam refused to give his name, because it would aggravate him. Messrs. Robert Roxby, Basil Baker, and Misses M. Oliver and Harriet Goodson (a young lady of much talent, recently performing at the "Strand"), ably sustained their volatile and rattling chief, and materially aided the success of the piece.

EGYPTIAN HALL.—Mr. Albert Smith recommenced his "Ascent of Mont Blanc" here on Monday evening, when a crowded and fashionable audience assembled to greet the very popular lecturer on his return. Mr. Albert Smith rattles away as amusingly and impetuously as heretofore, and makes us laugh as heartily: all the while he flutters us that we are seeking and obtaining information and not amusement. That much is taught by the lecturer, and in the most enticing method, must be allowed, for, notwithstanding the gay colours in which he dresses his facts, much of the history of the countries through which we pass so gaily is imparted to us. The route is now from London to Rotterdam by Brussels, through Holland, and up the Rhine. Some admirable pictures, painted by Beverley, have been added to the former ones, and the entertainment has all the charm of novelty about it. Mr. Albert Smith kept his audience in capital spirits through the entire evening, his efforts never flagging for one instant; breathing time being allowed him by the frequent bursts of hearty applause, which rewarded his endeavours.

TURKISH MUSEUM.—This favourite lounge has been more than ever crowded during the week, the many country gentlemen attending the cattle-show having availed themselves of the opportunity of also paying their respects to the courteous M. Aznavour, and the wonders he has collected at Hyde Park-corner.

BUCHAREST, Nov. 14.—On Friday last an incident occurred at the opera here which has excited considerable sensation and is the talk of the town. Omar Pasha made his appearance in his box, accompanied by the wife of his nephew, Tewfik Bey. The lady was completely unveiled, and sat thus listening to the music with the most perfect composure. This is, I believe, the first instance on record in which the wife of a Mussulman has displayed her features before men, and above all before gossips, and is consequently a tremendous innovation, of which I am very anxious to see the result. It displays great courage on the part of Omar Pasha, but will, I am certain, when the news reaches Constantinople, excite the fiercest ire amongst the old Turks. Mussar Pasha came into the box soon after, and entered into conversation with Madame, and while this was going on Ismail Pasha (not be of Kalsfat) arrived and took his place on the opposite side of the house. Glancing across, he saluted Omar Pasha, but on seeing the lady suddenly become deadly pale, remained motionless for two or three minutes, and then rose up, saluted again, left the box, and returned no more.

MIDLE. RACHEL.—We (Gulignani) last week gave an account of M. Latour de St. Ybars' one-act tragic sketch of "Rosemonde," in which Middle Rachel performed the principal character. We have since learnt that the subject of the piece, some parts of which, it may be recollected were of a revolting, and all of a painful description, worked upon the mind of the tragedian so sensibly that at the fall of the curtain, after reaching her dressing-room, she had a succession of nervous attacks, and has not since been able to appear before the public. The recent death of a sister to whom she was devotedly attached, and whom she attended in her last hours, had, it is known, seriously affected Middle Rachel's health, and the ghastly nature of the incidents, particularly of the last scene, in which Rosemonde is seen watching the dying agonies of her husband, acting upon over-excited feelings and weakened health, will readily account for the effect thus produced. Some ridiculously distorted versions have been given of this circumstance, one, for instance, that she asked for a poison to commit suicide!—the reason, according to the veracious and good-natured writer, for this remarkable request, being the consciousness of failing powers, and the declining favour of the public.

AT PARIS, an action brought by the Emperor of Russia and General de Guadéouff, manager of the St. Petersburg Theatre, against M. Berton, the actor of the Gymnase, for breach of an engagement, was tried last week in the Imperial Court. M. Berton, after having passed eleven years in Russia, and being under an engagement for a further period at the Imperial Theatre there, obtained last year a month's leave from the Emperor Nicholas to come to Paris to see his mother, who was seriously ill. His leave expired on July 11th, 1853, and at the end of that time he refused to return to St. Petersburg, and wrote to the Czar, personally begging to be released from his engagement. The answer to this letter was an action, claiming 100,000fr. damages. The Tribunal of Commerce, in February last, gave a verdict for the plaintiff, in default of appearance on the part of M. Berton, and fixed the damages at 50,000fr. The present proceeding was an appeal from that judgment. M. Paillet, for the defendant, took the technical objection that the action had been wrongly brought before the Tribunal of Commerce, the Imperial Theatre of St. Petersburg not being a commercial enterprise, but a school of polite manners, patronised by the Czar. The court overruled this line of argument, and confirmed the judgment, reducing the damages, however, to 5,000fr.

HOW TO MOUNT A HORSE.—A letter from an officer on board the U.S. ship St. Mary's, dated at St. Mary's Anchor, Peru, published in the "Burlington Free Press," gives a ludicrous mode of mounting a horse. The women do all the work, and the men are a good-for-nothing set of gamblers and thieves. The women ride on the hind-quarters of their horses, without a saddle, cross-legged, with the lead on the horse in front. They mount the animal by taking hold of his long tail, making a loop by doubling it up, and clasp with one hand the upper and lower parts of the tail, and then putting one foot in the loop and the other foot on the joint of the horse's leg, they ascend as if going up stairs. They usually stand erect on the horse, before sitting down. The horses never kick or stir.

BE ALWAYS BUSY.—The more a man accomplishes, the more he may. An active tool never grows rusty. You always find these men who are the most forward to do good, or to improve the times and manners, always busy. Who starts our railroads, our steamboats, our machine-shops, and our manufactories? Men of industry and enterprise. As long as they live they work; doing something to benefit themselves and others. It is just so with a man who is benevolent—the more he gives the more he feels to like giving. We go for activity—in body, in mind, in everything. Let the gold grow not dim, nor the thoughts become stale. Keep all things in motion. It is better that death should find us scaling a mountain than sinking in a mire.

PEOPLE NOT COUNTED IN THE LATE CENSUS.—Houseless poverty, with rufed sides and looped and windworn raggedness, there must have been cowering in the black tenebræ of dark entries, in the dank shadows of railway arches, and under the dry arches of bridges; under the lee of tilted carts and timber stacks; rolled up like hedgehogs before the deadly warmth of brick and lime kilns; crouching behind ambuscades of lath and plaster on the bare joists of unfurnished houses; huddled up stealthily in or under baskets in the London markets, with potatoes for a pillow and a tarpaulin for a counterpane; snatching a surreptitious, quaking, waking, shivering sleep—a sleep disturbed by nightmares of stern policemen with strident voices and loudly creaking boots, of violent market gardeners with pails of water, or the testy market hawker with his cane. Were these enumerated? The poverty-stricken rogues forlorn, who clambered into haystacks and coal-barges and empty waggons and dilapidated post-chaises drawn together in wheelwrights' yards, and in silent places where tall ladders raise their spectral forms in the moonlight; the masses of wretched rags that should have been children lying huddled together, round a top of each other, gathering a scanty warmth by close contiguity; the miserable berils of utter worn-out poverty cast upon remote doorsteps, motionless—sleeping dogs, and which, but for the larger size and the battered bonnets, might have been dogs for any human kindred that acknowledged them. Who counted the phantoms in the street that would have been young and beautiful, and women? Not Lais in the Regent's Park, not Aspasia in her brougham, not Phrynia at the Casino, not Timandra in the houndoir; not these, but that phantom world which we see gibbering in the gaslight; flitting in the shadows of Westminster Abbey, and among the trees of the Queen's Park; cowering in the bays of the bridges; brawling with tipsy revellers; shrieking in the stillness of the night; falling into fits on the pavement; struggling with the police; lurking on the bridges; hovering at corners; creeping by taverns; nameless, sexless, friendless, foodless, penniless, despairing, drunk, and dying.—Dickens' Household Words.

MANGER, RACK, AND WATER-TROUGH, AS ONE FIXTURE. IMPROVED AND NEWLY PATENTED.

COTTAM and HALLEN, the original inventors, obtained the Great Exhibition Prize Medal for this arrangement, to which all the latest improvements are adapted, secured by Patent, including a method entirely new of attaching the halter-weight and rein from the back of the manger to the under front of the plate, allowing the horse greater freedom, and being noiseless in operation, and much to its comfort whilst feeding and convenience when at rest, as likewise, from their position, avoiding the liability of the most restive horse getting cast. No well-managed stable should be without these fittings.

COTTAM'S ENAMELLED MANGERS are constructed in the best possible manner, both as to form and utility; are cleanly in appearance, durable, and impervious to infection; manufactured Plain, Galvanized, and Enamelled. Improved Surface Drain, with safety Covers, Sanitary Traps, Stable Pumps, Loose Box, Fittings, Gutta Percha Preserving Saddle and Harness Brackets, and every article in Stable Furniture, in stock. An extensive assortment of Patterns for both Plain and Ornamental Castings, and every description of Wrought and Cast Iron Work for building and other purposes, Agricultural and Horticultural Implements, Iron Gates, both plain and ornamental, Hurdles, Strain Fencing, &c.

Estimates and Catalogues on application to COTTAM and HALLEN,
2, WINSLEY-STREET, OXFORD-STREET.

AT THE EXTENSIVE WAREROOMS IN REGENT-STREET AND CORNHILL, BELONGING TO

H. J. and D. NICOLL,
MERCHANT TAILORS AND PALETOT PATENTEES.

THE best Materials, Talent, and Workmanship are employed, and the principle of a combination of economy and excellence maintained. Here also the Dress Buttons and Colours of every Yacht Club or Hunt are always ready for inspection.

FOR HUNTING.

The Scarlet, Brown, Olive, or Mixed Cloths, are both fine and strong, the dye cannot even be moved by acids, and in the course of manufacture they are prepared by a peculiar process to resist a very heavy shower of rain.

FOR YACHTING.

Every description of Pilot and Pea Jackets, with prepared India Rubber and other Waterproofed clothing, may also be seen.

For Shooting, Fishing, Rowing, or Cricketing, all suitable materials are provided.

Nicoll's Dry-seat Coat

Is useful to all, whether Sportsman or Traveller, as it is well known that rheumatism and colds, with the thousand and one other ills that flesh is heir to, are chiefly caught through damp seats.

114, 116, 118, 120, Regent-street, and 22, Cornhill.

TO SPORTSMEN, PEDESTRIANS, AND OTHERS.

A GREAT VARIETY OF NEW AND SECOND-HAND
SANDWICH BOXES, HUNTING FLASKS, DRAM BOTTLES,
IN SIZES, AND BEAKERS IN NESTS, IN ELECTRO-PLATE OR SILVER,
At THOMAS'S, Silversmiths and Platers, 153, New Bond-street, London.

ALLEN'S ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE, CONTAINING SIZE, PRICE, AND DESCRIPTION OF UPWARDS OF 100 ARTICLES.

CONSISTING OF PORTMANTEAUS, TRAVELLING BAGS, LADIES' PORTMANTEAUS, DESPATCH BOXES, WRITING DESKS, DRESSING CASES, and other Travelling Requisites, forwarded on receipt of two stamps.

ALLEN'S Travelling Bag (patented) has the opening as large as the bag itself, and therefore possesses an immense advantage over all others.

ALLEN'S Registered Despatch Box and Writing Desk, and their New Quadruple Portmanteau (containing four compartments), are the best articles of the kind ever produced.

J. W. & T. ALLEN,
MANUFACTURERS OF PORTABLE BARRACK-ROOM FURNITURE, AND
MILITARY OUTFITTERS (see separate Catalogue),
18 & 22, WEST STRAND.

WATER POISONED

OR LEADEN
PIPES.

"The above engraving represents accurately a section of a leaden pipe, which was employed for a short time in conveying water from a well on the grounds of Mr. Dick, of Bournemouth, Isle of Wight. The original section of pipe is 84 in. long, 24 in. diameter, and 5-16 in. thick. A great part of the internal surface is corroded by the action of the water; but, as shown in the drawing, four deep excavations have been made, and another is shaded out of view by the manner in which the section of the pipe has been cut. The water has cut these deep pits almost through the pipe, and not only upon the portion which we have illustrated, but have formed similar chasms throughout the entire length."—Expositor.

N.B.—The corrosive water of the Isle of Wight has no effect on Gutta Percha Tubing. See Testimonial below.

DURABILITY OF GUTTA PERCHA TUBING.

Many inquiries having been made as to the durability of Gutta Percha Tubing, the Gutta Percha Company have pleasure in giving publicity to the following letter from Sir RAYMOND JARVIS, Ventnor, Isle of Wight.

(Second Testimonial)

March 10, 1872.

"In reply to your letter received this morning, respecting the Gutta Percha Tubing for pump service, I can state, with much satisfaction, it answers perfectly. Many builders and other persons have lately examined it, and there is not the least apparent difference since the first laying down, now several years; and I am informed that it is to be adopted generally in the houses that are being erected here."

THE GUTTA PERCHA COMPANY, PATENTEES,
18, WHARF-ROAD, CITY-ROAD, LONDON.

HENRY PEAT,
HUNTING SADDLER,
14, OLD BOND-STREET,
LONDON.

Cribbiting and Wind-Sucking prevented by the use of BLACKWELL'S PATENT STRAPS, 12s. and 14s., lined with leather.

BLACKWELL'S PATENTS FOR SADDLERY, HARNESS, &c., reduced 25 per cent. by improved make and sale. Valiantest India rubber Springs for Saddle Straps, Birches, Rollers, Belts, 2s. each. Gutta Percha Jockeys, 10s. each. Horses, Bridling, Exercising, 3s. 6d. to 5s. 6d. Spring for ditto, 4s. Springs for herring, darning, and riding-reins, recommended for Ladies' Belts, attached to both Bits and one rein; Web Fetlock, Speedy Cnt. and Leg Bonts. At the Patentee's Saddlery and Harness Manufactory, 25, OXFORD-STREET, near the Marble Arch; Gallery, Crystal Palace; and of all Saddlers.

CHARLES LENNY,
Coach and Harness Manufacturer,
20, NORTH END, CROYDON.

BEGGS call attention to his Broughams, Clarences, Harouches, with his registered non-class wheel-plate, thus shortening the distance between the wheels, and lessening the draught for the horse, allowing the wheels to lock quite under, and having high front wheels.

C. L. has constantly on sale Cab and Driving Phaetons, Stanhopes and single Horse-ditto, Pony Carriages, and Park Phaetons. He also solicits attention to his Newmarket and other Carts, either with panels or wickerwork sides, and to his Bagot Cart, in panel or wickerwork, easy of access, and possessing all the advantages of the Mulverton Cart, but less expensive.

He has also a large stock of Croydon Basket Carriages, cheap and elegant, and in every variety of shape, either for sale or building to order, with or without heads, to suit either the Shelland Pony or the Horse.

C. L. would also invite an inspection of his registered Phaeton in basket-work, suitable either for one or a pair of ponies or horses.

Carriages of all kinds let on hire for long or short engagements.

LIVERY and COMMISSION STABLES, WILLOUGHBY HEATH FARM, near GRANTHAM.

T. W. GARNER begs to inform the Nobility, Gentry, and Public in general, that he is, as usual, preparing HORSES for HUNTING. Terms, including livery and riding to Hounds, £1. 8s. per week.

HORSES taken into WINTER GRAZING and SHALW-YARD, and Cattle to GRAZE, at BEDDINGTON PARK, BEDDINGTON, near CASHLTON and CROYDON, Surrey. Inquire of WILLIAM TUFFS, the park keeper. Some excellent loose boxes for wintering horses are vacant, and can be had reasonable.

HORSES WANTED.—The Proprietor of the GREAT CENTRAL REPOSITORY begs to inform the Nobility, Gentry, and the Public, that a great number of horses are now wanted for the Army. They should be strong, active, and five to nine years old, at prices from £25 to £30. Owners of horses can meet purchasers or agents daily at the Repository. Several applications for good hunters, to carry twelve stone and upwards. All horses sold will be paid for the third day after the sale.

R. D. REEA, Proprietor.

DO YOU BRUISE YOUR OATS?
YET?—Great Saving.—New Oat Crushers, Chaff Cutters; Mangles, £2. 10s. 6d.; Flour Mill, £4. 10s. 6d.; Book on Feeding, 1s.—WEDLAKE and Co., 118, FENCHURCH-STREET.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

MAJOR'S REMEDIES for the HORSE.
The best and most effective ever discovered, supplanting the "burning iron" and the torture of "cautery."

MAJOR'S BRITISH REMEDY for the Cure of Ringbone, Spavins, Splints, &c. A single bottle sufficient to cure from four to six Spavins, price £1. 15s.

MAJOR'S SINOVITIC LOTION (the Remedy, No. 2), for Grapineux, Weak Joints, Sprains of the Back Finews, Disturbances of the Sheaths of Tendons, Suspensory Ligaments, Shoulder Lameness, and Inflammation; also for the cure and prevention of bruising down, &c. The bottles large size, £1. 4s., small, 10s. 6d. each. The above invaluable remedies can now be forwarded to any part of the United Kingdom. Pre-payment by Check or Post-office order, made payable to Joseph Major, Post-office, Charing-cross.

Letters addressed to Joseph Major, Horse Infirmary, British-yard, Corkspur-street.
Agent for Newmarket, Mr. Thomas Dunning; for Scotland, Messrs Gardner and Ainslie, Edinburgh; Mr. W. F. Wells, chemist, 32, Newmarket-street, agent for Dublin; agent for Glasgow, Mr. W. A. Preston, 16, Stockwell-street, and 11, Adelphi-street.

THE HUNTING SEASON.
P. HARBOR'S "ERA" FLANNEL SHIRT, for Hunting, Shooting, &c., obtainable only at
No. 40, MINSTER-STREET, READING.
"It has only to be seen to be admired, and when once worn will never be deserted."—Era, April 3rd, 1853.

THE SUCCESSFUL RESULTS OF THE LAST HALF CENTURY HAVE PROVED BEYOND QUESTION THAT

ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL possesses peculiarly nourishing powers in the hair, restoration, and improvement of the Human Hair, and is now universally acknowledged to be the cheapest, and superior to all preparations for the hair. It prevents it from falling off or turning grey, strengthens weak hair, cleanses it from scurf and dandruff, and makes it beautifully soft, curly, and glossy. Its operation in cases of baldness is peculiarly active; and in the growth of the beard, whiskers, eyebrows, and mustaches, it is unfailing in its stimulative operation. For children it is especially recommended, as forming the basis of a beautiful head of hair. In dressing the hair nothing can equal its effect, rendering it so admirably soft that it will lie in any direction, and imparting a transcendent lustre.

Price 2s. 6d. and 7s.; Family Bottles (equal to four small), 10s. 6d., and double that size, 21s.

CAUTION!—On the Wrapper of each Bottle are the words ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL, in two lines. The name is engraven on the back of the Wrapper nearly 1,500 times, containing 29,028 letters.

Sold by A. ROWLAND and SONS, 20, Hatton-garden, London, and by all Chemists and Perfumers.

CHAFF-CUTTING MACHINES.

AN ILLUSTRATED and PRICED LIST of CHAFF-CUTTING MACHINES will be sent free on application to WM. DRAY and Co., Agricultural Engineers, Swan-lane, Upper Thames-street.

OATS SHOULD BE BRUISED, BUT NOT PULVERISED.

AN ILLUSTRATED and PRICED LIST of CORN-BRUSING MACHINES will be sent free on application to V. M. DRAY and Co., Agricultural Engineers, Swan-lane, Upper Thames-street.

On the 15th December will be published, price 3d., Stamped 4d.

PUNCH'S ALMANACK FOR 1855.

ILLUSTRATED BY JOHN LEECH AND JOHN TENNIEL.

OFFICE, 85, FLEET-STREET.

In One large Volume, 8vo., with upwards of Six Hundred Woodcuts, price 60s. half-bound.

BLAINE'S ENCYCLOPEDIA of RURAL SPORTS: Hunting, Coursing, Shooting, &c. &c. A new and revised Edition, corrected to the present time.

London: LONGMAN, BROWN, GREEN, and LONGMANS.

This Day, Two Volumes, Post Octavo, 18s.

GENERAL BOUNCE, or, The Lady and the Locusts. By G. J. WHITE METEOR. Originally published in "Fraser's Magazine."

By the same Author, Two Volumes, 18s.

DIGBY GRAND: An Autobiography. London: JOHN W. PARKER and Son, West Strand.

WORD-BOOK FOR THE CRIMEA AND SCUTARI HOSPITAL.

Now Ready, Price One Shilling.

K NIGHT'S POCKET VOCABULARY IN ENGLISH AND TURKISH. By Wm. KNIGHT, Esq., Barrister-at-Law.

"Mr. Knight passed three years in Turkey. In a letter which appeared in the daily newspapers, evidently from an intelligent correspondent, the writer said that, by the aid of this Vocabulary, he had got on famously with the Turks—had succeeded in making himself understood, and in getting all his wants supplied, which may be considered the best compliment that could be paid to the work."—Britannia, September 16, 1854.

"The Turks are throwing up earthworks near Balaklava; and at meal-times, when we occasionally mingle with them, we can get along with 'Knight's Vocabulary'—famously without any other interpreter. At every place in the Black Sea where we have touched this book has proved invaluable."—Letter from a Naval Lieutenant.

Published by BRADBURY and EVANS. Sold by all Booksellers; and at THE FIELD Office, 408, Strand, opposite Adam-street, Adelphi.

Officers at Southampton can procure their copies at Daniel's Victoria Hotel.

Bound in cloth, and interleaved, price 1s.

THE SCOTTISH AGRICULTURIST'S ALMANAC, and Year-book of Progress for 1855. By JOHN LOCKHART MORTON.

"It needs only to be known to be valued as the work of a man who knows thoroughly what he has in hand."—Fertile Soil Advertiser.

Publishing Office, 9, Pitt-street, Edinburgh. Sold by all Booksellers.

On Thursday, the Fourteenth of December, will be published, price Threepence, or Stamped for Post, Fourpence.

THE SEVEN POOR TRAVELLERS, being the CHRISTMAS NUMBER of HOUSEHOLD WORDS, conducted by CHARLES DICKENS, and containing the amount of One Regular Number and a Half.

Office, 15, Wellington-street, North Strand; and sold by all Booksellers and News-vendors.

Just Published, price, in cloth, 2s. 6d.; by post, 3s.; as a pocket-book, with metallic paper and pencil, 4s. 6d.; by post, 5s.

RUFF'S GUIDE to the TURF; or, POCKET RACING COMPANION for Great Britain and Ireland for 1855, and the Great Stakes for 1856; a Complete Calendar of the Races in Great Britain and Ireland for 1854; the Horses Indexed, with their Pedigrees; Laws of Racing, Lengths of Courses; Revised and enlarged Lists of the Trainers; Winners of the Great Races from their Commencement; Races to Come, Derby Lot, &c. &c.

London: FIELD, STEPHENSON, and SPENCE, 23, PATERNOSTER-ROW. Sold by all Booksellers and at all Railway Stations.

PRESENTS AND PRIZES.

The Second Series of

BEAUTIFUL POETRY, a Selection of the Choicest in the Language, now rems, superbly bound in green and gold, or purple and gold, price 7s. 6d. A copy sent by post to any person enclosing 7s. 6d. to the Publisher, CROCKFORD, 29, Essex-street, Strand.

Price 4d., free by post for five Stamps.

COMMON BLUNDERS MADE IN SPEAKING AND WRITING. By CHARLES W. SMITH, author of "Hints on Elocution," &c.

"This useful little book will settle many disputes. It ought to be on every table; and be particularly recommended to the young before habit makes common blunders unconsciously hard to cure."—Britannia.

London: W. H. COLLINGRIDGE, City Press, 1, Long-lane.

BUILDING SOCIETIES.—The Important Judgment of the Lord Chancellor in "Fleming v. Self," involving the Rights and Liabilities of Building Societies, will appear verbatim in a Double Number of THE LAY TINKER of this Day. A copy sent to any person enclosing 1s. postage stamps to the Law Times Office, 29, Essex-street, Strand.

THE NEW MILITIA LAW.

THE MILITIA LAW, as altered by the Acts of last Session, and all the New Orders and Regulations, as supplied for this Work by the War Office. By THOS. W. SANDERS, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Price 5s. 6d., cloth.

CROCKFORD, 29, Essex-street, Strand.

Entirely New Comic Songs never before Published.

MR. W. LAMBERT EDMONDS begs to inform his friends and the public that the SECOND SERIES of his CREMOLINE COMIC SONG-BOOK is now ready, price One Shilling; post free, 1s. 6d.

London: ALDMAN and Son, 42, Holborn-hill.

THE FAVOURITE BALLADS of the SEASON are Miss Lindley's "Excelsior," finely illustrated, 2s. 6d.; and "Speak gently," 2s. 6d. John Parry's "Sweet Vesper Halls of Ancona," illustrated, 2s. 6d.; and "Have still some Kind Words for me," 2s. 6d. France Abt's "May Song," 2s.; "Morning," 2s. 6d.; "Evening," 2s.; and "The Earth it loves Rain," 2s.; and his favourite song, "The Tear," 2s. Fressel's "A Youth from the summit," 2s.; and "When two fond Hearts," 2s. 6d.; and "The Dreams of Youth," illustrated, 2s. 6d.; and "Like the Song of Birds," illustrated, 2s. 6d. Kliza Cook's smg. of "The Sutor Boy," music by Rodwell, 2s. Harper's "Truth in Absence," 2s. Miss Fricker's "Failing away," 2s. Burker's "The Lane Blossom," illustrated, 2s. 6d.; and Glover's (S.) "Annie o' the Banks o' Dee," illustrated, 2s. 6d. &c.

London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

HAMILTON'S MODERN INSTRUCTIONS for the PIANOFORTE.—70th edition, 2 large folio pages, 4s.; for Singing, 3rd edition, 5s.

"These are new editions of highly popular works. Mr. Hamilton devoted himself wholly to the task of musical instruction; and his didactic treatise on every branch of the art, the fruits of an intelligent mind, aided by large experience, are by far the most useful works of their class extant in this country."—Spectator, Dec. 10, 1853.

London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

NEW SONG by RUCKEN, equal in beauty to his admired song "The Tear," the STAR (Das Sternlein), dedicated by permission to her Majesty the Queen of Hanover. German and English words, the latter by J. E. Carpenter. Price 2s.

London: ROBERT COCKS and Co.

ROBERT COCKS and Co's HAND-BOOK of GLEES, Part Songs, Madrigals, &c. Edited by JOSEPH WARREN. 4to, 50 numbers, 2d. each, or in one volume, bound in cloth, containing 50 compositions, 8s. Besides the elegance of the selection, and the great number of original copyright pieces contained in it, this work is universally preferred to others of the same class, on account of its convenient size and its large clear type.

London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street. Publishers to the Queen, and of all Booksellers. Specimen pages gratis and postage free.

ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

THE YEAR 1855 bids fair to be one of the most important and eventful of modern history. On the 6th of JANUARY, 1855, will be issued the FIRST NUMBER of a New Volume of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, and not only of a New Volume, but of a New Year—each volume being perfect and complete in itself—containing, for the time, a faithful record, pictorial and descriptive, of all events of interest in every part of the world. To that limited portion of the public who do not subscribe to this Journal, it may be stated that no period could be selected more opportune for commencing; the whole expense being but Twenty-six Shillings per annum, exclusive of Double Numbers, which are issued on rare occasions, when it would be impossible to crowd the important events and Engravings into a single Number; for this small sum the Subscriber will receive Twenty-four large Pages—Seventy-two Columns of the most interesting information, carefully selected from the News of the Week, interspersed with a variety of charming Articles on the chief topics of the day.

The ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS has, by its impartial and consistent advocacy of the welfare of the public, secured for itself a political influence scarcely second to any Newspaper in the Empire; and it retires, with some pride, be made to the support afforded to all beneficial measures proposed and adopted by the English Parliament.

Foreign Politics will ever command the attention which ought to be devoted to so important a feature of a Newspaper. On the question of the Russian War, during the year 1854, ONE THOUSAND ENGRAVINGS appeared in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS. Extensive arrangements, calculated to improve this popular Journal, and to enlarge its usefulness, such as will greatly enrich its Literary, Scientific, and other departments, have been made, and will thus combine on this Paper the greatest talent of the day.

The ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS has been established thirteen years, during which period it has received a greater degree of encouragement and approbation than any Journal ever published. This is proved by the returns of Stamps issued from time to time by order of Parliament.

The Stamps applied for the first six months of 1851 were upwards of 2,734,000, showing a WEEKLY CIRCULATION of UPWARDS of ONE HUNDRED and THIRTY THOUSAND COPIES.

Terms, for payment in advance—Half-year, 1s. 6d.; Year, 2s.

Any of the Volumes of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, from the commencement to the present time, may now be had, in paper or cloth. Covers for Binding the Volumes, 2s. 6d. each.

All Numbers may be sent free by Post to any part of the Kingdom and the Colonies.

Give an order for Six Months, to ensure all the gratuitous Prints and Supplements. Supplied by all Booksellers and News-vendors.

The ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS is published in London every Saturday, Stamped, to go free by Post, Sixpence per Copy.

Office, 128, Strand, London.

NETTING for SHEEPFOLDS, made of Cocoa-nut Fibre; a material known to possess the most extraordinary durability when exposed to the intemperatures of weather. It will wear out several sets of tarred hemp netting, and is so light that a herdman may with ease carry 500 yards of it. Price 1d. in 6d. per yard. Sold in Nets of 50 and 100 yards long, 48 inches high, by the Manufacturer, W. CILLINGFORD, 1, EDMUND-TERRACE, BALL'S-POND-ROAD, near Kingsland-gate, London.

A SUPPLEMENT GRATIS, with the WEEKLY DISPATCH, every week until further notice.

The unexampled interest which attaches to every incident connected with the operations of the Allied Armies in the East has determined the Proprietors of the WEEKLY DISPATCH to devote a greater space to the intelligence from the seat of war than the ordinary limits of this large newspaper published, could possibly afford, and with the view of giving the ampler details, they have resolved on the issue of a SERIES of SUPPLEMENTS gratis, which will include every particular of interest connected with the siege and decision of the contest at Sebastopol, and will be continued whenever demanded by the progress of the Campaign.

By the publication of these Supplements the portion of the paper usually devoted to the incidents of domestic and political importance will be reserved intact, and the engrossing subject of the War will receive the fullest and most varied illustration.

A SUPPLEMENT will be published on SUNDAY NEXT (gratis), and on every succeeding week until further notice.

Orders may be given to all News-vendors in town and country, and to the Publisher, at the DISPATCH OFFICE, 139, FLEET-STREET.

GUNS, RIFLES, AND REVOLVERS.

J. LANG has an extensive assortment of Second-hand GUNS, by all the first London Makers, at half their original cost, which he has taken in exchange in his own superior GUNS and RIFLES, as turned out by the late Joseph Manton, for the superior finish of which J. Lang obtained a prize-medal at the Great Exhibition. Rifles on the most approved plan for the Conical Ball, for Deer-shooting or long distances. Revolving Pistols on J. Lang's own plan, as also Derris and Adams' Colts, &c.; but a trial is recommended before risking money or life.

22, Cockspur-street, London.

THE BEST SHOW of IRON BED-STEADS in the KINGDOM is WILLIAM S. BURTON'S. It has two very large Rooms, which are devoted to the exclusive show of Iron and Brass Bedsteads and Children's Cots, with appropriate Bedding and Mattresses. Common Iron Bedsteads, 18s.; Portable Folding Bedsteads, from 12s. 6d.; Extent Iron Bedsteads, fitted with dovetail joints and patent sacking, from 21s.; and Cots, from 25s. each. Handsome ornamental Iron and Brass Bedsteads, in great variety, from £2. 10s. to £13. 13s.

THE PERFECT SUBSTITUTE for SILVER.—The REAL NICKEL SILVER, introduced twenty years ago by WILLIAM S. BURTON, when PLATED by the patent process of Messrs. Elkington and Co., is beyond all comparison the very best article next to sterling silver that can be employed as such, either usefully or ornamentally, as by no possible test can it be distinguished from real silver.

Table Spoons, per dozen, 18s. 26s. 32s.

Dessert Forks " 30s. 40s. 46s.

Dessert Spoons " 30s. 42s. 48s.

Table Forks " 40s. 56s. 64s.

Table Spoons " 40s. 58s. 66s.

Ten and Coffee Sets, Waiters, Candelsticks, &c., at proportionate prices. All kinds of Re-plating done by the patent process.

CHEMICALLY PURE NICKEL NOT PLATED.

Table Spoons and Forks, Full size, per dozen, 12s. 28s. 30s.

Dessert ditto and ditto, 10s. 21s. 25s.

Tea ditto " 5s. 11s. 12s.

GAS CHANDELIERS and BRACKETS.—The increased and increasing use of gas in private houses has induced WILLIAM S. BURTON to collect from all the various manufacturers all that is new and choice in Brackets, Pendants, and Chandeliers adapted to offices, passages, and dwelling-rooms, as well as to have some designed expressly for him; these are now on show in one of his Ten Large Rooms, and present, for novelty, variety, and purity of taste, an unequalled assortment. They are marked in plain figures, at prices proportionate with those which have tended to make his Establishment the largest and most remarkable in the kingdom, viz., from 12s. 6d. (two light) to £16.

LAMPS of all SORTS and PATTERNS.

—The largest, as well as the choicest, assortment in existence of FRENCH and ENGLISH MODERATEUR, PALMIER'S CAMPHINE, ARGAND, SOLAR, and other LAMPS, with all the latest improvements, and of the newest and most recherche patterns, in Ormolu, Bohemian, and Plain Glass, or Papier Maché, is at WILLIAM S. BURTON'S, and they are arranged in one large room, so that patterns, sizes, and sorts can be instantly selected.

REAL FRENCH COLZA OIL, 4s. 9d. per gallon.

PALMIER'S CANDLES, 9d., 9d., and 10d. per lb.

WILLIAM S. BURTON has TEN LARGE SHOW ROOMS (all communicating), exclusive of the shop, devoted solely to the show of GENERAL FURNISHING IRONMONGERY (including cutlery, nickel silver, plated and japanned ware, iron and brass bedsteads and bedding), so arranged and classified that purchasers may easily and at once make their selections.

Catalogues with engravings sent (per post) free. The money returned for every article not approved of.

39, OXFORD-STREET (corner of Newman-street); 1, 2, and 3, NEWMAN-STREET; and 4 and 5, PERRY'S-PLACE.

MELIUSI'S WESTERN HUNTING GARRACK SAUCE, for Venison, Steaks, Clumps, Hashed Mutton, Game, and all kinds of Meat and Fish, either hot or cold. On trial of this new Sauce, all Sportsmen will find it one of the best Sauces for giving a zest to their dinner, by imparting a flavour unequalled by any now extant.

Hotel Masters will find it a Sauce universally approved of, imparting a delicious flavour to all kinds of gravies, game, and fish, not requiring the further addition of pepper or salt.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.

One table-spoonful to be added to every half-pint of gravy for steaks, chops, and hashes, a wine-glassful to every half-pint for hashed meats, and according to taste for venison and game, double the quantity for cold meat, pour a little in the plate.

Sold in bottles, 1s. and 2s., the large bottles hold nearly three of the small ones, and can be obtained of Messrs. CROSS and BLACKWELL, School-house, London, or of the Proprietor, J. MELIUSI, DRUGGIST, FOLEY-STREET, TAVEN.

TON, and may be had retail of Druggists and Grocers, on application.

Printed by HENRY LEE, of No. 25, Robert-street, Bristol, and of No. 10, in the County of Middlesex, at the Printing-office of TAYLOR and GRAYSON, No. 4 and 5, Gray's Inn, London; and published by him at No. 408, Strand, opposite Adam-street, Adelphi, in the said County.—DUBLIN: 1854.

VOL. IV.—No. 102.]

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1854.

[GRATIS.]

THE NEWSPAPER.

THE FIELD OF WAR.

THE BATTLE OF INKERMAN.—FRENCH OFFICIAL DESPATCHES FROM THE CRIMEA.

The General-in-Chief of the French army of the East has forwarded to the Minister of War the two following reports, which he has received from Generals Forey and Bosquet, who commanded the French troops engaged on the 5th of November at the battle of Inkerman:—

THE SORTIE FROM SEBASTOPOL.

Before Sebastopol, Nov. 7, 1854.

GENERAL.—I have the honour to report to you that on the 5th of November, at nine o'clock in the morning, the left of our force attacking Sebastopol was assailed by a Russian column, composed of four battalions forming the regiment of Minsk, and a certain number of volunteers who followed in the rear. This column, more than 5,000 strong, supported by a battery of artillery, left the fortifications by the Quarantine Gate, and followed the course of the ravine on the left of our lines. Favoured by a thick fog, their progress could not at first be checked, and on their arriving at the batteries 1 and 2 they attacked them in full force. Those who served in the batteries were obliged to retire towards the 39th and 19th Regiments of the Line, and four companies of the foreign legion entrusted with the defence of the trenches. These battalions, or fractions of battalions, were obliged to give way under the effects of the charge of the Russian column, but they quickly resumed the offensive when two companies of the 19th battalion of Chasseurs, stationed as a reserve at Clocheton, and four companies of the foreign legion from the Maison des Carrières, came up on the field of battle.

General de la Motte Rouge, who was on duty in the trench in the first parallel, threw himself rapidly, with some companies of the 20th Light Regiment, on the points of the attack. When he arrived at the batteries 1 and 2, they had been already abandoned by the enemy, who had been thrown back on the other side of the ravine, at a small distance from the trench. At the voice of the general our soldiers cleared the first line of defence, followed the enemy, and poured in a murderous fire upon them. They halted on reaching the elevation of the house, which goes by the name of the Shore (Rivage), and taking up a position behind its walls continued their fire.

Whilst this was taking place, at the first sound of the firing I mounted my horse, and made the following arrangements:—I gave orders to General Lourmel to march straight towards the house that was burnt, and to General d'Aurelle to advance his front on the Sebastopol road, which runs along the seashore.

His Imperial Highness Prince Napoleon received instructions to keep his division under arms, and it advanced towards the house at Clocheton to support my right, while the effort was being made on the left.

The division Levaillant taking the place of the brigades Lourmel and d'Aurelle, advanced their front in close columns, by brigades. General Levaillant posted himself, in person, at a distance of 500 metres beyond this line, in order to decide on the moment when his assistance would be necessary.

I put myself at the head of the 5th battalion of Chasseurs and my artillery, and followed the ravine Carrières, which is in a direction perpendicular to the Sebastopol road, in order to cut off the retreat of the enemy should he advance beyond the batteries 1 and 2.

Such were the general arrangements which I took to enable me to be prepared for any event on the side of the siege corps. I was vigorously attacked. I heard firing in the direction of Inkerman. I knew that you were both engaged there, but not being able to judge on what side the most violent effort would be made, I judged it right to advance towards the battle with my first line supported by the whole of my reserve.

The brigade Lourmel, led with inexpressible ardour by its chief, cut to flight the enemy in its front the moment it got up to them. Two battalions of the 26th regiment of the line furiously pursued the Russians, who retreated in disorder. It was then that General de la Motte Rouge, seeing General Lourmel arrive on the height above the Quarantine Bay, where he was stationed, followed him in movement on the offensive. Our troops, stimulated by the excitement of success, came within a very short distance of the walls of the place, driving before them the mass of Russians, whilst the section of artillery commanded by Lieutenant De la Hütte kept up a fire of shot and bombs upon them.

I had taken up a position with the 5th battalion of Chasseurs on the right flank of General de la Motte Rouge on the Quarantine height.

Thinking that the pursuit was being continued too far, I sent Dauvergne, chef d'escadron, and Colson, captain of the staff, to order the generals to retreat immediately. There was much trouble in effecting this movement, so great was the ardour of the soldiers. This retreat was supported by the position which I held, on the right with the fifth battalion of Chasseurs, in the centre by the remainder of the brigade Lourmel en echelon, and on the left by General d'Aurelle. This general officer had extended his line as far as the sea shore, and, by main force, had gained possession of the buildings of the Quarantine, which he occupied with the first battalion of the 7th Regiment of the Line. He had left behind in the second line, on a commanding position, Colonel Beuret with two battalions, ready for whatever might happen.

The occupation of these buildings was of great use. It effectually protected the retreat of Lourmel's brigade. I cannot dwell too much upon this measure taken by Gen d'Aurelle, for it stopped the furious fire of the Russians, who, having made a movement in advance, were again lining the northern side of the Quarantine Bay. The fire of the 74th, directed with accuracy, compelled them to make a retreat a second time, and forced them to re-enter the fortification. It is on this northern side that I would have had the pursuit of the enemy to be discontinued, had not the gallant Gen. Lourmel, excited by an ardour which I deplore, led his troops beyond. In the pursuit he was seriously wounded by a ball, which went through his breast. He then gave up the command to Col. Niel, who was obliged to make good his retreat under a most violent fire from all the batteries—a movement which was only completed at the back of the Quarantine Ravine.

Our losses have been very considerable: but I do not think that I am below the truth in stating the loss of the Russians, dead and disabled, at 1,200.

The enemy obtained no result as a compensation for his losses, for the trenches are untouched, and of the eight guns that were spiked, five opened fire immediately, and the rest have been used to-day.

I cannot praise too highly the troops engaged on the 5th of November. I was thoroughly well supported by every one—generals, officers, and privates. The officers of my staff, since the commencement of the siege, and particularly on the 5th, have unceasingly distinguished themselves by their bravery and coolness. General d'Aurelle gave proofs of distinguished military intelligence this day. General Lourmel, who although dangerously wounded, did not give up his command until his strength was exhausted, was the admiration of every one. He has just sunk under his wound. I cannot express to you the grief which I have felt at this misfortune. The army loses in him a general whose chivalrous courage recognised no obstacle, and a chief who appeared to be marked out for the highest destinies.

You will notice, general, by the number of the officers disabled, that they are in a particular manner the object of the enemy's attack. The French are too proud to disguise their rank, as the Russian officers do, under a private's cloak.—I am, with respect, &c.,

(The General commanding the siege corps).

FOREY.

GENERAL BOSQUET'S CORPS AT THE BATTLE OF INKERMAN.

The following is General Bosquet's report of the battle of Inkerman, on the 5th of November, 1854, addressed to General Canrobert, Commander-in-Chief:—

On the 5th of November, at the break of day, the enemy showed himself in position on three points of our lines, namely: 1st, on this side of the Inkerman bridges, facing the English right; in the plain of the Tchernaya, threatening the English redoubt; and also facing the telegraph.

He had taken up these positions under the cover of the night and a thick fog, and opened his fire about half-past six before Inkerman and before the telegraph. I ordered the whole of the corps of observation under arms, and caused the infantry to lean towards the telegraph, while I went beyond the mill. General Bourbaki followed me with one battalion of the 7th Light Infantry, one battalion of the 6th Line Regiment, four companies of Foot Chasseurs, and the two horse batteries.

There I met the two English generals, Sir George Brown and Sir George Cathcart, together.

I offered them my assistance, informing them that I was followed by the troops I have just stated, and by others that I could take from the lines, if the serious attack was in front of the English. They thanked me, and assured me that they had reserves for the moment, but that they had no one towards their right behind the English redoubt, and they begged me to make them assured on that side, which I instantly did. I then went, in order to ascertain personally the full import of the two attacks by the Tchernaya and the plain of Balaklava, facing the telegraph. These were evidently feints.

I was examining the false attack at the telegraph, when some English officers came to inform me that the fire was getting serious on their right; Colonel Styl especially gave me clear information, and I instantly sent away General Bourbaki to the English right. At the same time I gave orders for a battalion of Zouaves, and one of the Rifles, to march in the same direction. Lastly, a short time after General d'Aumetarde received orders to march against the same attack with a battalion of Zouaves, and the two battalions of the 50th.

The two batteries of the 2nd division had been sent, at daybreak, to the telegraph; I sent one of them to the English right to join the two horse batteries already in motion.

I rejoined the first troops, led on by General Bourbaki, as they were about to form into line. All the ground in front of the English right was evacuated, and the only part occupied was the crest, that is, twenty paces in advance of the first row of tents.

I did not hesitate to move forward my two battalions, with the four companies of Foot Chasseurs, who charged the enemy very bravely and arrived near the small redoubt on the right.

On the arrival of the battalion of Zouaves (commanded by Dubos) and the Algerine Rifles, I brought up a fresh charge, and led it on as far as the crest that looks down on the ravine of the road.

I reckoned on the English being able to support my left beyond the road, but they were prevented from doing so; the enemy turned it by the road, and for a moment I was all but surrounded. The Zouaves of Commander Dubos crossed in the rear the heads of the columns that had turned us, and stopped them completely: I had for an instant to re-form my line in order to charge once more, and this time also was eminently successful. But the enemy, crushed by the fire of the English and French guns that I had joined on the crest behind my left, gave way finally, and only resisted while he fled.

In these encounters with the bayonet our field of battle was heaped with dead bodies; it was a complete butchery; several officers had their horses killed there.

The 7th Light Regiment, commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel Vaissier, behaved with such glowing and brilliant gallantry that it deserves special mention, as does also the skill and advance of the Foot Chasseurs of the 3rd Battalion.

The battalion of the 6th of the line charged very splendidly, and avenged well the death of its brave colonel, M. de Camas, who fell inside of the enemy's ranks.

The battalion of Zouaves, under its commander, Dubos, manœuvred with that intelligence, that inflexible bravery, that does not falter even when the enemy surrounds you.

The Algerine Rifles leaped nimbly like panthers through the bushes. This day has done honour to them, and likewise to their colonel, M. de Wimpfen.

The other battalion of Zouaves, and the two battalions of the 50th strenuously supported us, without having had to charge the enemy.

During this combat, the two horse batteries of Commander La Bousinière, and the battery of the Second Division, the whole commanded by Commander de Barral, were engaged in a fierce fight with the Russian artillery, which consisted of 21 pounders and 30-pounders in position, and of a great many field pieces. Our batteries, assisted by an English battery of 9-pounders, had the honour of extinguishing the Russian fire, and reducing it absolutely to silence. This combat of artillery was directed by Colonel Forgeot, who rendered me on that day the greatest service.

Lastly, at the moment when the Russian fire was being put out, I caused to be brought up as far as the last crest a battery of division, supported by two battalions, which was able to cover the bridges of Inkerman with shells and balls. By their means the Russian troops fell into the greatest disorder, and we had the joy of seeing them fly in full rout. But this rout was protected by the Inkerman marshes, which we were unfortunate as not being able to cross, as our cavalry would have had there some glorious work to do at the end of a victorious day.

The brigade of General Monet, that came up as the second reserve, had no opportunity given it for action; but it suffered loss from the guns of the enemy, whose balls had a very extensive range.

In front of the telegraph we only had a cannonade, but no wounded, and I experienced real pleasure in expressing here how well the detachment of Marines under Captain de Caution served their good 30-pounders, which kept the enemy's line at a great distance and inflicted on it sensible loss.

I have thanked Generals d'Aumetarde and Bourbaki, who so valiantly led on their troops, and Colonel de Cisse, the chief of my staff, who seconded me right heartily. I wish I could mention by name each of the brave men who fought so well at Inkerman, but this would be mentioning every one.

The Lieutenant-General commanding the Corps of Observation.

BOSQUET.

ENGLISH OFFICIAL DESPATCHES.

(From the Supplement to the London Gazette of Friday, December 1.)

WAR DEPARTMENT, Dec. 2, 1854, 1 p.m.

His Grace the Duke of Newcastle has this day received a despatch, of which the following is a copy, addressed to his Grace by Field-Marshal the Lord Raglan, G.C.B.:—

Before Sebastopol, Nov. 11, 1854.

MY LORD DUKE.—When, on the 8th instant, I reported the gallant and successful repulse of the very formidable attack made upon the position occupied by our troops above the ruins of Inkerman, I stated that I would in a subsequent despatch lay before your Grace the names of the officers whose conduct upon the occasion had been brought to my notice. I now proceed to discharge that duty.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge reports most favourably of the exertions of Colonel the Honourable George Upton, of the Coldstream Guards, Lieutenant-Colonel Reynardson, of the Grenadier Guards, and Colonel Walker, of the Scots Fusilier Guards, as well as of Colonel Cunynghame, Assistant-Quartermaster-General, and Lieutenant-Colonel Brownrigg, Assistant-Adjutant-General; Captain the Honourable Percy Fielding, Acting Deputy-Assistant-Quartermaster-General, who was severely wounded; and of Captain Butler, Deputy-Assistant-Adjutant-General, who was unfortunately killed; and here I may pause to mention that he was the brother of Captain Butler, who so distinguished himself at Silistria, and fell just before the siege was raised.

The Duke of Cambridge likewise recommends Lieutenant-Colonel Daeres, of the Royal Artillery, who commanded the field batteries of the 1st Division, which were admirably served by Captains Paynter and Woodhouse, Captain Hamley of the Royal Artillery acting as staff-officer to that branch of the service; Captain Ellison, the Brigade Major to the Guards; and Major the Honourable James Macdonald (whose conduct particularly attracted my attention), and the other officers of his personal staff.

His Royal Highness speaks also in the highest terms of the spirited exertions of Assistant-Surgeon Wilson, of the 7th Hussars, who at a critical moment rallied a few men, which enabled them to hold the ground till reinforced.

In the 2nd Division, which, as I have already informed your Grace, received the first attack, and was engaged throughout the day, the officers whose names I have to bring forward are very numerous.

Those who commanded the regiments of which it is composed were, without exception, either killed or wounded; and in many instances, those who succeeded were wounded. Major-General Pennefather commends them highly. Colonel Warren, of the 55th, in command of the 1st Brigade, and Lieutenant-Colonel Daubeney, 55th, who succeeded to it on the former being wounded, and was himself wounded afterwards; Lieutenant-Colonel Mauleverer, 30th, and Major Patullo, of the same regiment, who took the command of the regiment when the Lieutenant-Colonel was wounded; Major Chaupion, 95th Regiment, and Major Hume, of the same corps, who were both wounded, the latter having succeeded the former in the command, and being himself relieved by Captain Davis, when he was obliged to leave the field; Lieutenant-Colonel Carpenter, of the 41st, who was mortally wounded, and succeeded in the command by Major Eman; Lieutenant-Colonel Haly, of the 47th, who was obliged, when wounded, to relinquish his command to Major Farrer; Major Dalton, of the 49th, who fell at the head of his corps, and was replaced by Major Grant; Lieutenant-Colonel Fitzmayer, commanding the batteries of the 2nd Division, under the able direction of Captains Pennycook and Turner; Lieutenant-Colonel Wilbraham, and Lieutenant-Colonel the Honourable Percy Herbert, the Assistant-Adjutant, and Assistant Quartermaster-General, and Captain Thompson, 10th Hussars, and Captain Glazbrook, 49th Regiment, the Deputy Assistant-Adjutant, and Deputy Assistant-Quartermaster-General of the Division; and Captains Thackwell and Armstrong, the Brigade Majors; Captain Harding, Aide de Camp, and the other officers attached to the Major-General's personal staff, one of whom, Captain Allix, the First Aide-de-Camp of Lieutenant-General Sir De Lacy Evans, and a most promising officer, was unfortunately killed.

The 3rd Division was only partially engaged; but having been actively employed in all the siege operations, Lieutenant-General Sir Richard England avails himself of the opportunity to mention, in terms of high approbation, the staff officers and the officers in command of regiments, and has drawn my attention to the services of Major Wood, Assistant Adjutant-General, the Honourable Major Colborne, Assistant-Quartermaster-General, Captain Worley, Deputy-Assistant-Quartermaster-General, and Colonel Bell, of the Royal Regiment; Colonel Cobbe, of the 4th Regiment; Lieutenant-Colonel Lowth, of the 38th; Lieutenant-Colonel Adams, of the 28th; and Lieutenant-Colonel Waddy, of the 50th Regiments; Major the Hon. A. Hope, of the 60th Regiment; Captain Daniell, of the 38th, Brigade Majors; and Captain Edward Neville, Scots Fusilier Guards, his Aide-de-Camp.

The superior officers of the 4th Division, Lieutenant-General the Honourable Sir George Cathcart and Brigadier-General Goldie, having fallen, and the survivor, Brigadier-General Torrens, having been severely wounded, I take upon myself to recommend the surviving officers of the staff, viz., Colonel Wyndham, Assistant-Quartermaster-General, and Captain Hugh Smith, 3rd Foot, Deputy-Assistant-Quartermaster-General; Major Maitland, Deputy-Assistant-Adjutant-General, who is wounded; and Captain Street, 57th Regiment, and Lieutenant Torrens, 23rd Regiment, Brigade Majors; and I may here express my deep regret that Lieutenant-Colonel Charles Seymour, Scots Fusilier Guards, should have fallen. He had served on the staff with the lamented Sir George Cathcart at the Cape, and had accompanied him to this country in the capacity of Assistant Adjutant-General; and he was remarkable for his intelligence, gallantry, and zeal.

I would likewise beg to solicit your Grace's attention to the services of Colonel Horn, who commanded the 20th, and came out of action the senior officer of the division; Captain Inglis, commanding 57th, and Lieutenant-Colonel Smyth, commanding the 68th Regiment, who was severely wounded; and Captain Dallas, commanding detachment of the 46th; of Lieutenant-Colonel Ainslie, of the 21st, who was wounded; of Lieutenant-Colonel Swyny, who unfortunately fell at the head of the 63rd, and was succeeded in the command by Major the Hon. Robert Dalzell; and Lieutenant-Colonel Horsford, of the Rifle Brigade; of Lieutenant-Colonel D. Wood, the senior officer of the artillery of the Division; and Major Townsend, of the Artillery, who was unfortunately killed. He was considered a most valuable officer, and was ably succeeded by Captain Hoste. Lieutenant-Colonel Powell would have commanded the 57th, but he was on duty in the trenches.

The officers of the Light Division whose services have been brought to my notice by Lieutenant-General Sir George Brown, who was obliged by a wound in his arm to quit the field before the action terminated, and by Major-General Codrington, who succeeded him in command, are Lieutenant-Colonel Yea, of the Royal Fusiliers; Major Sir Thomas Troubridge, of the same regiment, who was commanding in a battery, and, though desperately wounded, behaved with the utmost gallantry and composure; Major Bunbury, of the 23rd, who replaced him in command; Brevet-Major Mundy, commanding the 33rd; Lieutenant-Colonel Shirley, of the 88th, who was employed in the trenches; Lieutenant-Colonel Jefferies, commanding the portion of that regiment which was in the field; Lieutenant-Colonel Egerton, commanding the 77th; Majors Stratton and Dixon, of the same regiment; Lieutenant-Colonel Unett, of the 19th, on duty in the trenches; Lieutenant-Colonel Lawrence and Captain Ebrington, of the Rifle Brigade; and Captain Hopkins, commanding a detachment of Royal Marines, which had been brought up to replace a wing of the Rifle Brigade that had been sent down to Balaklava, and fully maintained the reputation of that distinguished corps; Lieutenant-Colonel Lake, of the Royal Horse Artillery; and Captain Morris, commanding the battery attached to the division; Colonel Sullivan, Assistant-Adjutant-General; Lieutenant-Colonel Airey, Assistant-Quartermaster-General; Captain Halliwell, Deputy-Assistant-Quartermaster-General; Captain Macdonald, and the other officers of the Lieutenant-General's personal staff; Lieutenant the Hon. H. Campbell, Aide-de-Camp to Major-General Codrington; and Brigadier-General Buller's Aide-de-Camp, Lieutenant the Hon. H. Clifford, whose conduct is represented to have been peculiarly conspicuous; Captains Mackenzie and Glyn, the Brigadier-Majors of the Division.

It is due to the principal Medical Officers of the several divisions, Doctors Alexander, Cruickshank, Forest, Linton, and Humphrey, to report that their able exertions have been strongly represented to me, and deserve to be most honourably mentioned, and the arrangements of the Inspector-General of Hospitals, Dr. Hall, for the care of the wounded, merit the expression of my entire approbation.

Lieutenant-Colonel Gambier, of the Royal Artillery, who had the command of the artillery in the trenches during the siege, a duty which he discharged to my perfect satisfaction, was, I regret to say, unfortunately wounded, when moving up with the two 18-pounders which I had ordered to be brought to the right of the 2nd Division; and I have great pleasure in speaking in terms of high panegyric of Lieutenant-Colonel Dickson, who had charge of those guns, Captain D'Agnilar, and the officers and men who worked them; they performed under Lieutenant-Colonel Dickson's directions the most effective service, notwithstanding that they had a very heavy fire upon them, and that their loss, in consequence, was very severe, seventeen men having been either killed or wounded, and one officer wounded.

I derived, as upon every other occasion, the most able and effective assistance from the Adjutant and Quartermaster-General, Brigadier-General Esteourt and Brigadier-General Airey, and their assistants, Major the Honourable W. Pakenham and Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. A. Gordon, and the officers of their departments; and from the Military Secretary, Lieutenant Colonel Steele, Lieutenant-Colonel Poulett Somerset, and the officers of my personal staff; and I feel deeply indebted to Lieutenant-General Sir John Burgoyne for the constancy with which he applies himself to the discharge of his arduous duties, and the benefit I derive from his advice and assistance; as well as to Captain Gordon, Commanding Royal Engineers, Captain Chapman, and the officers of that corps; and to Major Ayle, the Hon. Captain Gage, and Captain Fortescue, the staff officers of the Royal Artillery, to the command of which Lieutenant-Colonel Daeres has succeeded by the lamented death of Brigadier-General Strangways, whose aide-de-camp, Captain Gordon, I would also bring to your Grace's notice.

I profit by this opportunity to render justice to two officers whom I omitted to mention in my despatch of the 28th of September.

The one, Captain Maude, of the Royal Horse Artillery, who has since been badly wounded, distinguished himself at the battle of the Alma, as I myself observed; the other, Captain W. Pitcairn Campbell, became the senior officer of the 23rd Regiment when Lieutenant-Colonel Chester was killed, and, though severely wounded, could hardly be persuaded to quit the field.

I have, &c., RAGLAN.

His Grace the Duke of Newcastle, &c. &c. &c.

War-office, December 2, 1854.

The Right Hon. Sidney Herbert, M.P., the Secretary-at-War, has received no list of casualties amongst the non-commissioned officers and privates in the forces under the command of Field-Marshal the Lord Raglan, G.C.B., at the battle of Inkerman; and it appears that no such lists can be forwarded to England until after the next or following mail, in consequence of the great difficulty existing in obtaining complete and corrected lists from the several regiments of the army in the Crimea.

The following is a summary of the killed, wounded, and missing in the surprise of the 5th of November, 1854, of the English position on the Heights of Sebastopol, which resulted in a fierce and bloody battle, and the defeat of the enemy.

Regiments, Battalions, &c.	Killed.					Wounded.					Missing.	Grand Total.
	Officers.	Sergeants.	Drummers.	Rank and File.	Total.	Officers.	Sergeants.	Drummers.	Rank and File.	Total.
Staff	5	..	..	..	5	12	..	..	..	12	..	15
4th L. Dragoon ..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	2	2	..	2
11th Hussars ..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	1	1	..	1
17th Lancers ..	1	..	..	..	1	..	..	..	..	..	..	1
Artillery	2	3	..	10	15	4	5	..	71	80	..	95
Guards	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..
3rd B. Gren. ...	3	3	1	27	34	6	6	1	27	40	30	104
1st B. Cold. ...	8	3	..	9	20	5	6	..	110	121	53	194
1st B. Scots Fusiliers ..	1	2	..	21	24	8	8	2	109	127	16	167
1st Foot	..	..	..	1	1	..	..	..	..	..	..	..
7th Regiment ..	..	..	..	5	5	2	1	..	40	43	..	67
10th " ..	1	..	..	1	2	..	..	..	3	3	..	5
20th " ..	1	..	..	10	13	8	17	1	104	130	29	171
21st " ..	..	..	..	13	14	6	11	..	79	96	11	121
23rd " ..	..	..	..	7	7	1	2	..	18	21	13	41
30th " ..	..	..	..	27	29	5	4	..	97	106	..	135
33rd " ..	2	..	..	6	7	2	3	..	52	57	..	64
34th " ..	..	..	..	53	60	6	4	2	95	107	..	167
41st " ..	5	2	..	..	..	..	..	..	24	28	12	40
46th " ..	..	..	..	..	..	2	2	..	43	43	..	66
47th " ..	..	..	..	19	19	2	2	..	107	119	..	169
49th " ..	2	1	1	37	41	..	11	1	20	22	..	31
60th " ..	1	..	..	8	9	1	..	1	54	63	..	82
65th " ..	..	..	..	18	18	5	4	..	69	78	..	113
67th " ..	1	3	1	9	14	3	5	1	82	96	..	135
68th " ..	3	..	..	12	15	7	2	..	34	37	..	55
69th " ..	2	..	..	4	6	2	2	..	71	82	..	105
77th " ..	1	2	..	17	20	..	2	1	101	108	..	135
83rd " ..	..	..	..	25	27	4	3	..	77	86	12	114
95th " ..	..	..	..	11	16	3	5	1	25	27	..	38
1st B. Rifles ..	1	..	..	8	9	1	..	1	23	27	..	36
2nd " ..	1	..	..	4	5	1	1	..	1	1	..	1
Royal Marines ..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..
Amulance ..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..	..
43 32 3 330 458 101 121 17 1577 1816 196 2170

* One officer and one sergeant included in this.

SUMMARY OF TOTALS.

Killed	458
Wounded	1816
Missing	196
Grand total	2470

This table exhibits a curious return, perhaps singular in war details—the number of officers killed (43) exceeds that of the sergeants (32) by 11; and the number of officers wounded (101) is 20 less than sergeants (121). It clearly proves one of two things, either that the officers set a noble example of self-devotion, or that the Russians, from the conspicuous dress of the officers, particularly aimed at them.

It will be observed of the 196 missing, that 99 belong to the brigade of Guards, and 28 to the 20th Regiment, who so gallantly came to their assistance. It may, therefore, be inferred that they became mixed with the Russians, and were hurried down the ravines with the enemy in their retreat, and are now prisoners.

It will be observable that the old 41st, the Welsh Regiment or Prince of Wales, lost the most in killed and wounded (167), and without a man missing. The Guards had 77, 141, and 151 killed and wounded in each of the three battalions. Next to the Welsh Regiment comes the Old Hertfordshire or 49th, the Princess Charlotte of Wales Regiment, bearing a loss of 160. The 20th, 30th, and 95th show a return respectively of 143, 135, and 135; the 21st, 63rd, and 1st battalion Rifle Brigade, with a list of casualties of 110, 113, and 114 each; the 88th, Connaught, 104; the 55th and 57th, show each 81 and 92; the Artillery, 95. The casualties in the other regiments engaged run from 60, 50, 40, to 30.

Of the 27 regiments and corps engaged, who make a total return of 453 actually killed in action, no less than 101 of that number belonged to the 41st and 49th, and 78 to the brigade of Guards.

REINFORCEMENTS AND STORES FOR LORD RAGLAN.

INFANTRY.—The following movements of regiments effected during the past month show the extent of the recent reinforcement of our Eastern army:—The 9th Foot, from Malta to the Crimea; 14th ditto, from Malta to the Crimea; 62nd ditto, from Malta to the Crimea; 68th ditto, from Malta to the Crimea; 34th ditto, from Corfu to the Crimea; 71st ditto, 1st Battalion, from Corfu to the Crimea; 17th ditto, from Gibraltar to the Crimea; 39th ditto, from Gibraltar to the Crimea; 89th ditto, from Gibraltar to the Crimea; 90th ditto, from Dublin to the Crimea; 97th ditto, from Canterbury to the Crimea.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.—Captain Campbell's company, 5th battalion, Captain Wragge's company, 6th battalion, Captain Graydon's company, 1st battalion, and Captain Oldfield's company, 4th battalion, left the garrison at Woolwich during the same month for the Crimea; and the 2nd company of Royal Sappers and Miners from Woolwich, under the command of Captain King, Royal Engineers, proceeded for the same destination.

ROYAL SAPPERS AND MINERS.—The bounty money for the corps of Royal Sappers and Miners has been raised to £7. 13s. 6d., and upwards of 600 men are wanted to complete the strength of that branch of the ordnance service. The second company embarked in the Royal Albert, 121, for the Crimea. The men were armed with the old ordnance carbine, but, with the other corps sent to the East, they will all be supplied with Minié rifles on landing in the Crimea; it having been considered advisable that, with the exception of a few rifles to practise with on the passage out, the new and superior long-range small arm should be supplied to the troops in the most perfect condition on their arrival before Sebastopol, consequently the Minié rifles were packed in cases and sent out in transports.

A NUMBER OF LADIES in Southampton advertised to receive contributions of lint, linen, knitted comforters, mufflers, warm caps, furs, flannel, worsted stockings, list slippers, gloves, hooks, newspapers, lucifer matches, pens, paper, envelopes, ink, potted meats, arrow-root, tea, coffee, pepper, curry powder, jams, raspberry vinegar, biscuits, tobacco and pipes, to forward free to the sick troops at Scutari, or to the fighting Englishmen at Balaklava. Large contributions were received, and forwarded by the Magdalena, which left Southampton for the Crimea on Wednesday.

HOUSES.—The screw-steamer Norman left Southampton, on the 3rd inst., with one hundred wooden houses for the Crimea. The timbers for these houses were done up in marked packages, thirty of which form one house. The screw-steamer, Hutton, John Bowes, and Metropolitan, have arrived at Southampton, for the purpose of taking out wooden houses to the Crimea. Messrs. Cooksey, Brothers, at Southampton, have received immediate orders to place victualling stores on board the Hutton and John Bowes, and men were busy at the above-named port shipping houses the whole of Sunday. All the houses hitherto shipped have been received from Gloucester. Messrs. Driver and Sheppard, the steam sawyers at Southampton, have nearly got two hundred houses ready for shipment.

BALAKLAVA, Nov. 12.—Mr. Brew, acting-deputy assistant-commissionary-general, was a few days since sent off to Sinope and Trebizond to purchase wood for houses, &c. He was accompanied by Lieutenant de Vere, Royal Engineers. Since Lord Raglan has made up his mind to do what every one expected of him and the army—that is to winter in the Crimea, it seems strangely inconsistent that the preparations for procuring suitable shelter for the troops should have commenced about the middle of November. If some of the work is now done with extraordinary despatch, a few lucky regiments will be housed at the beginning of January, and in March the whole of the army—or what remains of it—is likely to have the benefit of roofs over their heads. It is indeed said that wooden houses have for some time past been making at Gallipoli, and that these are on their way to our camp. God grant that it may be so, for life under canvas, on the open plain of Sebastopol, is a dreary and sorry sort of existence. For the winter is at length setting in, and in its own peculiar way too. For a few hours each day the sun is warm and the air mild; but each night and morning have their showers of rain, and boisterous, squally gales of wind. Against these the tents afford little protection, and night after night tents, heavy and dripping with wet, are blown down, and spread over the heads of their luckless occupants.

WINTER CLOTHING FOR THE TROOPS.—On Saturday the Messrs. Almond completed the following contract with the Ordnance for the Army in the East:—14,000 fur cloaks, 44,000 fur cap (helmets), 44,000 fur gauntlets (gloves), 14,000 waterproof capes, 44,000 long boots (cow-hide material), 44,000 suits of inner clothing, 44,000 pairs of leggings, 10,000 suits of fur clothing for officers.

The following is an extract of a letter from Corfu, dated Nov. 26:—"On the arrival of the news of the battle of Inkerman, and of the pressing need for reinforcements in the Crimea, the Lord High Commissioner and General Macintosh took upon themselves the responsibility of despatching forthwith to the seat of war the 34th Regiment, in garrison at Corfu. They embarked last Wednesday on board the transport Gomelza, towed by a government steamer. Both officers and men were in the highest spirits and health. There are still four battalions of infantry and three companies of artillery in the Ionian Islands. In all about 2,000 men."

MR. PERO'S BRIGADE OF "NAVIES."—Monday having been appointed for the selection of navies, platelayers, and others acquainted with railway work, to proceed to the Crimea for the purpose of constructing a tramway from Balaklava to the entrenchments of the allies, and such other works as may be considered necessary, the temporary offices in the Waterloo-road were crowded to excess from an early hour. The selection commenced at eleven o'clock, and, notwithstanding that each applicant had to produce testimonials of ability and steadiness, in little better than three hours the contractors had obtained a sufficient number. At half-past two o'clock the office doors were closed, and the following notice posted:—"No more men are required."

The Royal George, 120, is ordered to Cork, to embark 660 rank and file and 100 tons of stores for the Black Sea.

The Melampus steamer is ordered to be fitted with all expedition, to carry troops to the Crimea.

BEDSTADS.—A Carlow paper states, "upon authority," that every available iron bedstead in the several barracks in the country, with blankets in bales and otherwise, have been ordered to be sent forthwith to the Tower of London. These are to be despatched immediately, in order to furnish the wooden houses for winter occupation in the Crimea.

On Monday the officers of the Ordnance at the Tower were actively engaged in forwarding bale goods, consisting of blankets, fur cloaks, caps, and gloves, waterproof capes, cow-hide boots, suits of inner flannel clothing, waterproof leggings—10,000 of each description—to Portsmouth and Woolwich, for shipment to the Crimea. There were also forwarded 10,000 suits of the above-mentioned articles for the use of officers.

On Monday, also, the commissioners for victualling and transport service issued contracts for the supply of 500,000lb. of preserved boiled beef for the use of the forces in the Crimea; also for the conveyance of 2,400 tons of provisions from Deptford and 1,100 from Gosport to Malta; as also 375 tons of powder to Malta. Contracts were also issued for the supply of 22,300 pair of boots, one half to be delivered within six weeks.

Minié rifles, to the number of from 1,100 to 1,200, are now being sent into the Ordnance stores weekly.

Upwards of 500 tons of roundshot and shell are now in course of delivery at the Royal Arsenal, Woolwich, for service in the Crimea.

The different cavalry depôts are now actively engaged training and breaking young horses to be sent out as remounts for the cavalry in the Crimea.

THIRTY-SIX THOUSAND RECRUITS WANTED.—The augmentation of the army to be proposed on the meeting of Parliament includes forty three battalions of the line, each of 800 bayonets, a battalion of rifles, and another of artillery—total, about 36,000 men.

PORTSMOUTH, THURSDAY, Dec. 7.—Detachments of the 19th, 35th, 41st, and also about eighty of the Rifle Brigade, total about 264, embarked at Portsmouth dockyard in steam-tugs early yesterday morning, and were put on board the steam-transport Charity, at Spithead, for passage to the Crimea. At noon other detachments consisting of men from the 11st, 49th, and 88th, total 227, with five officers, arrived at Portsmouth from Winchester, and were embarked in the same vessel, which also carries out a large supply of stores to the Black Sea. The steam transport Cumberland, No. 151, left Spithead yesterday with the first load of huts for the Crimea, shipped from Portsmouth.

THE IMPERATRICE STEAMER is ordered to proceed to Cork to embark 1,000 rank and file for the Crimea. In consequence of the difficulty experienced in procuring proper forage for the cavalry and artillery horses in the Crimea, the Commissariat are about sending out large quantities of hay, and the Lady Jane transport has already sailed from the Mersey with 400 tons.

FATIGUE PARTIES of the Royal Artillery and the several detachments forming the garrison of the Tower are actively engaged in shipping warlike stores, comprising Minié rifles, carbines, pistols, sabres, picket posts, nosebags and bales of bedding and warm clothing in lighters, for conveyance to Woolwich and Deptford, at which places they will be transhipped to steam-vessels to proceed to the seat of war. The London and foreign contractors for Minié rifles are exerting themselves to the utmost to make up the deficiency caused by the spathy of the Birmingham gunmakers, who are now several thousand stand of arms in arrears. Contracts have been entered into for the supply of a number of rifle carbines, it being the intention of the Government to arm two light cavalry regiments (which will be termed Light Dragoon Riflemen) with this formidable weapon.

DEPARTURE OF OMAR PASHA AND 10,000 TURKS FOR THE CRIMEA.

(BY SUBMARINE AND BRITISH TELEGRAPH.)

Bucharest, Wednesday, Dec. 6.

About 40,000 Turks and 100 guns will be embarked at Baltschik and at Varna next week, for the Crimea.

One regiment remains at Bucharest.

Danisk Bey replaces Mussa Pasha as commandant of the town.

Mussa Pasha superintends the embarkation.

Omar Pasha will leave in a few days.

LETTERS ABOUT THE CRIMEA.

THE FOUR POINTS.

SIR,—Prince Gortschakoff has officially notified the Czar's readiness to negotiate on the four points, in answer to which, I beg to say that any of our commissioned or non-commissioned officers, or those of our gallant allies, are fully prepared to enter the lists with the Czar; but to prevent the possibility of mistake as to the nature of the four points, I will give the real English of them:—

First point—cut.

I—2 and right point.

Cut 5—6 and left point.

Cut 5—6 rear cut and point.

These are the only four points that the allies can understand at the present moment or feel disposed to treat with.

I am, Sir, your obedient servant,

AN OLD CAVALRY OFFICER,

whose Son is now doing his duty at Sebastopol.

The following letter is from the steward of H.M. gunboat Arrow:—

Constantinople, Nov. 20.

"We left Sebastopol on the 11th for Constantinople, and glad enough we were that our vessel had escaped the doom which so many were fated to within twelve or fourteen hours of our departure. The fleet had given us up as lost, and well it might, for such a fearful gale had never before been witnessed by any of the crew. All our upper works and bulwarks were washed away, the lower deck and the engine-room completely swamped, and every time the sea made a clean breach over us, we thought our time had come, and that we must then go down. It was, however, not to be so, and the little Arrow weathered it out, and established a confidence in her floating powers which appeared almost miraculous.

"Before leaving Balaklava I had an encounter with a Cossack, the effects of which have since made me rather queer; but I am happy to say that I am now getting the better of it, and shall soon be all right again. I accompanied our purser on shore for the purpose of procuring some fresh meat for the ship's company, when we were attacked by five Cossacks. In our flight I was struck in the thigh by a spear hurled at us by a Cossack. The purser got captured, but soon released himself by disposing of three of them whilst I settled a fourth with our revolvers; the other one, I need not say, made himself scarce in an incredibly short space of time. The Russians call our revolvers infernal machines, which have been given to their enemy by the devil, and imagine that they will go off whenever required by invoking his aid; hence the great terror always evinced whenever these weapons are brought forth. Since being wounded I have received every attention from my shipmates who, one and all, have shown me the greatest kindness possible. A spear-wound is not so painful, after all, as might be supposed. I cannot describe it better than what would be felt by placing a hot iron on the side which the spear entered, and a cold one on the opposite side, where the point passed out."

FROM A BOMBARDIER OF THE ROYAL ARTILLERY.

Scutari Hospital, Nov. 15.

Dear William and Katherine,—I take this opportunity of writing to you these few lines, to let you know that I am well in health, thank God! hoping that when this reaches you it will find you in the same. My dear brother and sister, I am sorry to inform you that I got wounded on the 5th instant, from a round shot striking me on the outside of the left ankle whilst engaged with the enemy. They commenced about six o'clock on the morning, and did not finish till about a quarter to four p.m. I got hit about half-past twelve, but was treated very well by the officers of the 55th Regiment, who dressed my ankle for me, gave me blankets to lie upon, and as much brandy as I wanted. About six a.m. we were aroused by a fire of musketry; our battery being on duty, we were hooked in and ready. We then moved up to the support of the infantry, and came into action front, there being about fifteen to one of infantry, and six to one of artillery against us. Their motive was to force our position (which was a strong one) and gain our heights, which, if they had, would have been a very strong force in Sebastopol. Dear Bill, I hope you will return an answer by the first mail, and give me all the news and a paper, for I am beginning to weary already. I wrote about the battle of Alma, but I can assure you it was child's play to that of the 5th. We had only three batteries (eighteen guns) to keep them in check for about four hours—viz., Turner's, Franklin's, and Woodhouse's, and horses, wheels, limber boxes, and men were strewn about in all directions. We were then supported by twelve guns from Captain Payuter and Captain Thomas's old company. We kept firing shot and shell, but to no effect, for on came their infantry till within a hundred yards of us. Our battery got the word to limber up and retire, but it was of no use; we were determined to give them a parting dose; so my gun and the one next to it loaded with common case, and gave it to them, causing them to stagger and turn. They were then within thirty yards of us. Our infantry rallied, cheered us, and charged them. They then retired in great disorder, we pitching into them as fast as we could load our guns. Their artillery then opened on us, doing great execution. This continued for about an hour and a-half, when up came their infantry again in masses. Our infantry had fired away all their ammunition, and could only keep them back by throwing stones at them. However, we opened fire on them again, but we were forced to limber up and retire, not till our battery lost three guns (left half battery). My gun had a very narrow escape, six of my gun numbers and four horses being unfit to do anything. Lieutenant Broughton, two others, and I had to limber up the gun with great difficulty, the Russians being only five or six yards from us. We retired about 150 yards, and were met by the French artillery and infantry coming to our support. It would have done your heart good to hear the cheering and to see shakos, red nightcaps, &c., tossed in the air when they passed us. Then it was that the enemy caught it in earnest. The French retook our left half-battery from them, and drove them back from the heights. Very shortly after that, while going to change a broken wheel, I was struck, and carried to the rear half an hour afterwards; the wounded were sent on board ship. I arrived in Scutari on the 9th, and, as the mail went on the 10th, I wrote to Hannah. Dear brother and sister, I hope you will cheer her, and tell her that I am not badly hurt, and also hope to see all very soon. I saw McGooncy about a week before I met with this, and he was then in good health. It was getting very cold in the Crimea when I left. I think Sebastopol will fall this month. I will try to remain for a month or six weeks in hospital, so as I shall be able to receive an answer to this letter from you. Dear Bill, if you can send me a paper with an account of the battle of the 5th I shall be very glad, because, while Sergeant Henry (who was bayoneted at his gun) and I were lying on the ground, Dr. Perry and the captain came and visited us, and told us both that he would not forget either of us for our bravery; and I expect he has spoken to the general about us. My kind love to you, Katherine, and Margaret. Please tell Hannah and the children I hope to see them soon crowned with laurels. About 9,000 of the enemy killed, wounded, and prisoners. Hoping to hear from you by return of post,

I remain your affectionate brother,

A. BISHOP.

SIR THOMAS TROWBRIDGE AT INKERMAN

SIR,—Several letters, as well as the despatch, have noticed Major Sir Thomas Trowbridge's firm conduct in continuing to give orders after he was severely wounded in a battery. But, Sir, the public are thus only half made acquainted with his heroic fortitude. His wound was, indeed, severe. Both his feet were knocked off by a cannon shot, and in that dreadful condition he continued to give his orders as if unhurt. I am not acquainted with this brave man, but know the fact from an eye-witness, and therefore think it right to mention it; and I hope other journals will notice it also. ELIAN.

CRIMEAN ARMY FUND.

COMMITTEE.—Chairman: The Earl of Ellesmere, K.G. The Duke of Wellington; the Marquis of Blandford, M.P.; the Viscount Mandeville, M.P.; the Earl of Chesterfield; the Earl of Shaftesbury; the Earl of Malmesbury; the Earl of Wilton; Viscount Somerton; Lord R. Grosvenor, M.P.; Lord Blantyre; Baron Lionel de Rothschild, M.P.; Count P. E. de Strzelecki; Hon. Wm. Cowper, M.P.; Sir William Fraser, Bart.; Major-General Buckley; Major-General H. Bentinck; Thos. Baring, Esq., M.P.; Alexander Barclay, Esq.; R. W. Cousins, Esq.; C. J. Devan, Esq.; C. C. Greville, Esq.; St. Leger Glyn, Esq.; E. Nourse Harvey, Esq.; Spencer de Horsey, Esq.; Captain Hovenden; Henry Kingcoote, Esq.; H. Belward Ray, Esq.; H. Sehenley, Esq.; H. L. Wigram, Esq.

This committee has been formed with the view of rendering some assistance to the British army whilst exposed to the many privations and hardships incidental to a winter campaign.

It is proposed to raise a fund for the purpose of forwarding to Balaklava a supply of such articles of provisions, warm clothing, &c., as may be considered most useful.

The committee, through the liberality of the public, have already been enabled to despatch the Fairy yacht, placed at their disposal by William Lyon, Esq. She is freighted with tobacco, tea, chocolate, leather, stationery, &c., for the use of the troops.

A steam-vessel, capable of stowing 270 tons of goods, has been engaged, to sail as soon as she can be loaded.

The Earl of Ellesmere has also liberally offered his yacht to the association.

The committee appeal with confidence to the public to enable them to freight these vessels, and to take advantage of any future means of transport which they may be enabled to obtain.

The distribution of the cargoes sent out will be conducted by the Hon. A. Egerton, Alfred Denison, Esq., and T. Tower, Esq., who have most kindly placed their services at the disposal of the Association.

It is proposed that Messrs. Egerton and Tower should sail in Lord Ellesmere's yacht. Mr. Denison will endeavour to reach Balaklava by a more direct route, with the view of making arrangements on the spot for the distribution of the cargoes.

The committee cannot convey articles to individuals, nor deposit anything at Scutari.

It is earnestly requested that all contributions addressed to Hill-street may be carriage paid, and have a clear invoice or catalogue attached.

The committee have thankfully to acknowledge many valuable donations of clothing and provisions.

Contributions of venison, game, meat or poultry, are very acceptable. They should be forwarded direct to Messrs. Gunter, Berkeley-square.

Many inquiries having been made as to the most desirable articles for transmission to the army, the following has been framed under the best advice, and contributions of these goods will be gladly accepted, and forwarded at the earliest opportunity:—Blankets, shirts, flannel ditto, hose, wash-leather waistcoats, leather for shoes, shoemakers' tools, needles, thread, buttons, tape, tobacco,* preserved meats, portable soup, arrowroot, tea,* chocolate, sugar,* essence of coffee, pearl barley, preserved vegetables, ditto milk, salt, pepper, mustard, cayenne pepper, ham, tongues, bacon, cheese, ale, porter, wine, spirits, coffee-rovers and coffee grinders, patent fuel.

The committee being enabled to purchase all excisable articles (marked *) in land, and free of duty, it is respectfully suggested that contributions of non-excisable articles will be more acceptable.

Subscriptions are received by Messrs. Herries, Farquhar, and Co., 16, St. James's street; and Messrs. Glyn, Mills, and Co., Lombard-street. Subscriptions and contributions are also received at No. 23, Hill-street, Berkeley-square, where the committee meet daily.

Dec. 4. J. B. STANDISH HILLY, Hon. Sec.

MISCELLANEOUS ANECDOTES, INCIDENTS, AND MEMORANDA.

TRENCHES BEFORE SEBASTOPOL, Nov. 11.—From the following order, just published by the Commander of the Forces, we may suppose that some arrangement has been come to by Prince Menschikoff, which will have the effect of preventing a recurrence of inhumanities already referred to:—"General Order, October 11."—"When burying the dead, if the party so employed will hoist a black flag, the enemy will not fire on the party."

ADMIRAL LYONS seems to have no separate command of any kind; but wherever there is a chance of work, there the Agamemnon will be also. The other day he appeared on his little grey pony among the Marines, and addressed them in a few words, saying how much England now expected of them. They answered with hearty English cheers. The Marines certainly appear a magnificent body of men.

SCALE BREAD.—Russian deserters say that there is bread enough to supply 25,000 men for three years in Sebastopol, and up to the present date (Nov. 12) we have not had force enough to prevent any quantity of supplies from being thrown in.—Correspondent of Chronicle.

AFTER THE BATTLE OF INKERMAN some of the Russian regiments effected their retreat with great steadiness, the officers with their drawn swords marking time, and the soldiers keeping step with the utmost precision.

A VERY PROMISING YOUNG OFFICER, Mr. Karalake, acting-mate of the Rodney, was killed in the batteries on the 10th.

THE DUKE OF CAMBRIDGE had a very narrow escape in the last battle, being only saved from death by the presence of mind of an assistant-surgeon of a Hussar regiment, who seized and hurried him from a spot where he had observed half-a-dozen riflemen aiming at him. He is very unwell on board the Retribution, and it is very probable will be obliged to return to England; if so, he will carry with him the regrets and good wishes of the whole army, for he has shown himself a worthy representative of the great name he bears.

WE REGRET TO SAY THAT DR. SPENCE, one of the Inspectors of the Hospitals in the East, sent out by the Government, is reported to have gone down in the Prince, steam-transport.

A RIFLEMAN WAS SEEN leading off a wounded Russian, to whom he called, exultingly, "Come along, my fine fellow; you must live with us now. I have got your pipe and tobacco, and all I want more is your boots." These boots, to which allusion is so constantly being made, come well up to the knee, and must serve admirably to protect the legs during the cold and wet of winter; but, at the same time, they are so heavy that they necessarily restrain the limbs they cover—whence it is that so many Russians are destroyed when pursued after a charge.

AN OFFICER OF THE 77th REGIMENT was for a time in the hands of the enemy, and marched off towards Sebastopol between two soldiers with fixed bayonets; but to the astonishment of his guard, he suddenly turned round, shot one of the men, and then rushed at the throat of the other. A struggle ensued, in which the Englishman having proved victorious, hastened back to his regiment, where his companions hailed his return with a hearty welcome.

AT THE ATTACK OF THE GREAT FORT AT SEBASTOPOL, by the fleet, the Agamemnon went close in, while the Britannia kept at the distance of 1,700 yards; there has, therefore, been a great jealousy between the crews of the two vessels from that day, and every opportunity is seized for giving a slap to the one to the other. A few days ago, the boat of the Agamemnon went alongside the Britannia, and the boatswain of the latter, after a time, called "Agamemnon's boat, there, you cannot lay about the ship's side; lay off—come, lay off," to which one of the sailors in the boat naively answered, "What, lay off—that's it, is it? how far—1,700 yards, hey?" We need scarcely say this hint told its tale to all who had heard it more forcibly than pages of open abuse. It is generally considered that Admiral Duada is a very good man in office, and Sir Edmund Lyons in ship.

IT WAS BEEN DECIDED TO ABANDON EUPATORIA, and orders have been sent thither to destroy the Henri Quatre. There is a rumour that the Tartar inhabitants who have trusted to our protection are to be removed to Sinope. The gale of the 14th ult., appears to have injured the Russian breakwater at the entrance of Sebastopol, as they sunk another two-decker on the 17th ult., in the same position as the others.—Correspondent of Morning Chronicle.

AN ORDER WAS BEEN SENT TO MALTA to forward to the Crimea, with the least possible delay, every 13-inch mortar the arsenal can provide; and on their arrival most terrible will be the roar and hissing of the bombardment of Sebastopol.

AN ENGLISH OFFICER reports that his regiment was quartered with the Zouaves for some months, and that nothing could exceed their merit as light troops. One man among them spoke excellent English, and, being questioned, informed him that he had been waiter at a London hotel for three years, but getting tired of answering "Anon, anon, Sir," he became Zouave, and was ready for anything. Many are much puzzled as to what the Zouaves really are. According to some, they are Arabs; while others contend that they are a mixture of all nationalities. The truth is, they are simply Frenchmen, picked principally from regiments which have served in Africa, and chosen for their courage, daring, activity, and powers of endurance. Most of them have been gamins de Paris, and the metal still rings as true as it did in June, '48, when the gamins of the Garde Mobile saved the capital.

THE STEAM-FRIGATE SANE, at the distance of about two leagues from Cape Chersonese, was assailed, Nov. 14, by a gale of wind such (says an officer on board) as I have never experienced since I passed Cape Horn. You will be enabled to form an idea of the rolling of our ship when I inform you that one of our 30-pounders at the fore-castle, although strongly lashed to the deck, broke from its fastenings, and was pitched overboard as if it was a broomstick. We had serious apprehensions for the howitzer of 120 and the gun of 60, but fortunately they held fast. I bring you good news from the great siege. The courage of the troops and of the fleet has increased with their difficulties.

THE RUSSIAN MAJOR who, at the battle of Inkerman, told his men to grant no quarter, and who was afterwards made prisoner and recognised by an English officer, is stated by the Impartial of Smyrna to be named Alexandre Anguelopoulou, of Orcek origin, but born in Finland.

THE RUSSIANS ADVANCED up to the breastwork and muzzles of our guns; those that I saw (says a correspondent) were almost blown to pieces. Their artillery practice was excellent. As soon as the battle was ended I went over the field. On our ridge, where were our batteries, the ground was covered with dead, principally Russians, their bodies fearfully shattered. They fought desperately, and at one time were nearly outflanking us and carrying the ridge. One Russian, or rather his remains, lay on the parapet of the breastwork; had it not been for his clothes, he would have dropped to pieces. He had literally been blown from the muzzle of a gun while in the act of climbing over the breastwork.

AT THE BATTLE OF INKERMANN the Duke of Cambridge was quite surrounded once, and had it not been for Dr. Wilson (who was in the 7th Hussars) drawing his sword and cheering some men on, he must have been taken or killed. Every one had, says Capt. Kingscote of the Guards, wonderful escapes. A shell pitched on the flap of my saddle behind my leg and sword, which it bent, fell on the ground, where I saw it fizzing, but before I could kick my horse out of the way it burst, without touching either me or my horse. Why the horse's ribs were not broken, I cannot conceive. I rode Fusilier again until two o'clock, when my other came up, Fusilier being done up and lame. He is all right now. Lord Raglan rode Sbadrac the whole time. A splendid picture of the Virgin, most elaborately decorated with gold and silver, which was carried as a standard to keep up the enthusiasm, fell into our hands; it was captured by a sergeant of the Guards. Most of the Russians wore medals of various sorts as usual—indeed, each army has a regular store of them for distribution. Some are very handsomely gotten up in well-chased silver, with the face and hands of the saint they represent well painted in oil colours.

THE BODY OF CAPT. SWABY, 41st REGIMENT, was brought into the camp three hours after the engagement of the 5th of November, pierced with nine wounds, the mortal one being that of a musket-shot through the abdomen. The men of his company who last saw him called to him, saying that they were surrounded, and begged him to retire, when he answered, "No, I will not, I'll fight to the last." He was seen to discharge his revolver several times, and to use his sword. His captain, who was wounded, had also called upon him to do so, but Captain Meredith says he is not sure he was heard. All his men speak of him with the deepest regret, and of his behaviour being most gallant and brave. Five of our officers were killed that day, including the colonel, and six were wounded. The body of Swaby was interred the next morning, the whole regiment attending, and the chaplain of the division read the burial service.

AMONG THE RUSSIANS killed at the battle of Inkerman we observe the name of Major-General Ochertlov, who, we believe, was a Scotchman and a native of Forfarshire.

A PRIVATE IN THE 93RD HIGHLANDERS, writing to his father in Caithness, informs him that the sheet of paper forming his letter had cost him five shillings.

WE REGRET TO STATE that Cornet the Hon. Grey Neville, 5th Dragoon Guards, youngest son of Lord Braybrooke, died at Scutari, on the 11th ult., of wounds received at the battle of Balaklava. Captain the Hon. Henry Aldworth Neville, Grenadier Guards, third son of Lord Braybrooke, was killed in action at the battle of Inkerman on the 5th ult.

THE FOLLOWING IS A LIST OF THE OFFICERS who were on board the Prince, screw steamer, which foundered on the 14th ult.:—Captain John Goodall, Chief Officer J. Richardson, Second Officer William Whiteway, Third Officer Francis Wilkinson, Fourth Officer W. P. Stewart, Fifth Officer G. J. Inglis, Sixth Officer F. Ainslie, Surgeon J. M. Salter, M.D., First Engineer William Anderson, Purser F. J. Maughan, Principal Storekeeper F. J. Dickinson.

LEUT. ELLISON of the 47th says—"I made use of Dean and Adams three times. I was about to fire another time, when the Russian threw down his musket, and I took him prisoner. We asked some of the prisoners how it was they murdered our wounded; they replied, it was by order of their General. I saw one ruffian at some distance kill a wounded man; I fired my rifle at him, and knocked him over."

MR. ROMAINE, DEPUTY JUDGE ADVOCATE GENERAL, came down to Balaklava, on Nov. 6th, by order to collect evidence against the Russian major accused of killing and inciting his men to kill our wounded officers and soldiers, but he found, unfortunately, that the witnesses had gone to Scutari. This will only defer the investigation a few days.

COLONEL CARPENTER (41st Regt.) was shot in the thigh, and when down a Russian shot him in the back, clubbed his musket, and struck him on the mouth. These Russians are more barbarous than the Burmese, and it is but little quarter our men will give them the next time they meet, for they all vow a deadly vengeance, and it is not to be wondered at. The colonel died in fifteen hours.

IT WOULD APPEAR STRANGE, says a surgeon who was on duty at Inkerman, to be told that extensive surgical operations, after most serious wounds received in battle, afforded mitigation from pain, but so it is; for how tranquil are those who at the moment have lost their limbs under the surgeon's knife, in comparison to what they were when lying unassisted and uncared for in their wounded condition! Very many of the poor fellows manifested the greatest gratitude for the services I rendered them, seizing my hands and covering them with kisses, and, by their upward looks, imploring the blessing of Heaven on their benefactor.

THE 46TH REGIMENT have landed and marched out to camp. They looked very smart and clean, officers and men, and their bright facings and the brilliant unstained red of their coats offered a strong contrast to the dirty, ragged, and bedabbled dresses of the men in Balaklava, who have been so long campaigning. They marched off in good spirits to the camp, with their band playing.

THE "TIMES" CORRESPONDENT cuts a queer figure in the Crimea. The chances of war have deprived him of nearly all his garments, and, when last seen, he was walking about in a Rifleman's jacket, much too small for his portly person, and his nether garments had been converted into breeches by constant scrambling among rocks and briars. However, his health was excellent, his spirits as inexhaustible, and his pen as fluent and eloquent as ever. Esto perpetua!

CAPTAIN PEELE, OF H.M.S. DIAMOND, left his "blue jackets" at the battle of Inkerman on the 5th, and went right in among the thickest of the fight, where he joined the red-coats, and slashed away with his regulation sword, wherever the mille was fiercest.

THROUGHOUT THE BATTLE OF INKERMANN a Russian battery kept moving about in the direction of Lord Raglan and his staff, but fortunately without effect.

THE AMBULANCE CORPS have arrived at Balaklava from Varna; two waggons are attached to each division, and they are most useful in bringing the wounded from the trenches, and removing the sick and wounded for embarkation or to the hospital. The medical officers are fond of using chloroform, and find it beneficial, notwithstanding all that has been said to the contrary. A canteen has been set up, but the articles are very dear; potatoes 3d. per lb., and candles 3s. 6d., and other things in proportion. Tobacco is now got plentifully, a great boon to the men, and for which they would make any sacrifice. Grog is also freely distributed, and the men are comparatively content, but like to grumble, after the manner of the English, as they don't like lying behind the trenches, being pelted at and doing nothing.

SIR GEORGE JOHN YOUNG, Bart., brother to Sir William Norris Young, Bart., of the 23rd Fusiliers, died on the 22nd ult. of cholera before Sebastopol. The title is now assumed by the surviving brother, Lawrence.

THE LANDLADY of a respectable public-house in St. Matthew's, Ipswich, has just bestowed upon her infant the sonorous and spirit-stirring name of "Alma Sebastopol."

DOES NOT THE PUBLICATION OF SIR J. THACKWELL'S circular suggest the propriety of our Government forbidding the exportation of horses at the present crisis except to accredited French agents? Every one knows what an immense number of our best horses are annually bought by the Austrians and Prussians.

THE ADMIRAL (SIR E. LYONS), on his little grey pony, is to be seen hovering about our lines indefatigably. The wife of one of the light cavalry officers—I think the 11th Hussars—rides every day near the entrenchments.

ALL THE PRISONERS were sent in from head-quarters to the main guard at Balaklava, except two, who are employed with the Quarter-Master General's Staff to point out the sites of the magazines and public buildings which should be destroyed. Our prisoners contradict each other on many points, but all agree as to the damage done to the town and as to the multitudes of killed. On dit, that the Russian Governor sent in yesterday to Lord Raglan to ask for a day's truce to bury the dead on both sides. The same authority has it that Lord Raglan replied, "He had no dead to bury." The Russians in revenge for this are leaving their dead where they fall outside the lines, and also bring them out from the town and place them in the valley frequented by our pickets and skirmishers, who are much annoyed by the stench. This is a new engine of warfare.

CALLED AT HALF-PAST FOUR THIS MORNING (Oct. 28), I was electrified with the announcement that Balaklava was attacked by the enemy in different places. However, this has since turned out to have been a mistake. The alarm was caused by a number of Russian horses, all greys, that had broken loose and traversed our encampments. In the dark it could not be discovered what state they were in—viz., riderless—so they were fired at. Some were brought down, others seized. The French caught twenty-four, and sagaciously, in my opinion, are about to convert all into rotis and stews those that fell under their fire—regular game. As always, they have got the best of this little incident.

A LETTER RECEIVED from a French officer engaged before Sebastopol contains a curious passage, in which he describes the arrival of a forçat as a deserter in one of the batteries, with pieces of his chains hanging about him. According to the man's account, he was taken out of prison for the sake of being employed at the guns, and he assured the writer of the letter in question that the town was literally a heap of ruins, for that there was not a whole house standing.

THE TWO GRAND DUKES, sons of the Emperor Nicholas, whose arrival at Sebastopol is mentioned in General Canrobert's report of the battle of the 5th ult., hold high rank in the Russian army. The Grand Duke Nicholas, third son of the Emperor, is 23 years of age; he is Inspector-General of the Engineering department, Aide-de-camp of the Emperor, titular Colonel of a regiment of Dragoons, of a regiment of Grenadiers, and of the Regiment of Cuirassiers of Astrakan. He is, besides, proprietor of the 2d Regiment of Austrian Hussars, and Chief of the 5th Regiment of Prussian Cuirassiers. The Grand Duke Michael, fourth son of the Czar, is 22 years of age; he has the title of Quarter-master-General of the Artillery, is Commander of the 2d Brigade of Artillery of the Imperial Guard, Aide-de-Camp of the Emperor, Colonel of a regiment of Lancers, of a regiment of Dragoons, and of a regiment of Horse Chasseurs. He is, moreover, proprietor of the 26th Regiment of Austrian Infantry, and Chief of the 4th Regiment of Prussian Hussars.

AS IT WAS VERY DESIRABLE to destroy the ships anchored in the harbour below us, and to fire the dockyard buildings, our rockets were brought into play; and, though rather erratic in their flight, they did some mischief, though not so much as was expected. Wherever they fell the people could be seen flying up the streets when the smoke cleared. At 3 p.m. the town was on fire, but after the smoke had excited our hopes for some time, it thinned away and went out altogether.

A POLE AND SOME RUSSIANS deserted. They tell us that the enemy have lost 3,000 killed and wounded, that the town is in a frightful state—the shops closed, the merchants fled, the goods placed underneath in the cellars, and that the "pointed" balls and shells (Lancasters) do frightful mischief. There are no longer volunteers to work the guns, as there were at first. The men have now to be forced to the batteries. Many poor women and children have lost their lives in this terrible cannonade. It seems incredible that the Russian authorities should have let them stay in the town when they could have easily sent them across by the bridge of boats to the north side. Provisions still continue plenty, and water is abundant in the town.

SOME SMART AFFAIRS of skirmishers and sharpshooters took place in front. Our riflemen annoy the Russian gunners greatly, and prevent the trailleurs from showing near our batteries. On one occasion the Russian riflemen and our own men came close upon each other in a quarry before the town. Our men had exhausted all their ammunition; but as soon as they saw the Russians they seized the blocks which were lying about, and opened a vigorous volley on the enemy. The latter either had empty pouches, or were so much surprised that they forgot to load, for they resorted to the same missiles. A short fight ensued, which ended in our favour, and the Russians retreated, pelted vigorously as long as the men could pursue them.

ON THE NIGHT OF Oct. the 20th the Russians attempted a coup de main. About a hundred of them, all volunteers, arrived by the cul-de-sacs in the French batteries. The lieutenant of artillery on duty, M. Clarin, cried out, Qui vive? and received the answer, Nous sommes Anglais; ne tirez pas. The next moment the Russians dashed forward. The lieutenant, however, at once gave the order to his men to fall on the assailants, and a hand to hand contest ensued. The Russians at last fled, leaving seven men dead, and four taken prisoners, and amongst them an officer speaking French perfectly well, and who died the day after of six bayonet stabs which he received. The other three prisoners have stated that our mortars, in particular, do the fortifications of the town much damage.

I WAS AT AN AUCTION of the effects of the late Col. Beckwith, of the R.B., who died of cholera about a month ago. Some of the things went at wonderful prices. A box of wax-matches, such as you can get for 1s. at home, went for 13s., and another for 15s. They are very useful out here, and impossible to be got. The Golden Fleece was sent off to Constantinople or Varna for French troops, and all our traps are in that ship, so we are done for the present. I bought a blanket at the sale, and am now very comfortable at night.

LORN DUNKELIN, Captain Coldstream Guards, and eldest son of the Marquis of Clanricarde, was taken prisoner. He was out with a working party of his regiment, which had got a little out of their way, when a number of men were observed through the dawn light in the ravine in front of them. "There are the Russians," exclaimed one of the men. "Nonsense, they're our fellows," said his lordship, and off he went towards them, asking in a high tone as he got near, "Who is in command of this party?" His men saw him no more. As they were unarmed, they retreated rapidly; but there is no fear of his lordship's safety, for the Russians fired no shot, and merely closed round and seized him ere he could get away. He has since been liberated by the Czar, in exchange.

HOME NEWS.

THE COURT.

On Monday, his Royal Highness Prince Albert, with the Prince of Wales and Prince Alfred, accompanied by Prince Ernest of Leiningen, went to London by a special train of the Great Western Railway, and visited the exhibition of prize cattle and implements of the Smithfield Club, at the Bazaar, in King-street, Portman-square. The royal party returned to Windsor in the evening.

The Castle has had its usual share of illustrious visitors during the week, among whom have been her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, his Serene Highness Prince Ernest of Leiningen, the Earl of Aherdeen, Viscount and Viscountess Hardinge, Baroness de Speth, Lord George Paget, Lady Raglan, and the Hon. Miss Somerset.

The Earl Somers and Lieutenant-Colonel the Hon. N. Hood have succeeded the Earl of Listowel and Lieutenant-Sir Frederick Stovin as Lord and Groom in Waiting.

FASHIONABLE WORLD.

We are gratified to learn, upon inquiry, that the Duke of Somerset is progressing favourably.

The Duke of Beaufort has taken for a term of years the mansion in Grosvenor-square, late in the occupation of his Excellency the French Ambassador.

THE DUKE OF PORTLAND.—His Grace is still at Harcourt House, improving in health, but has not been at Welbeck since the late Duke's death, as was reported.

The Marquis of Clanricarde comes to town this week, from Ireland. The family have not arrived in Carlton House-terrace, as erroneously stated.

The Earl of Rosse has returned to the Castle, Parsonstown, from London.

Viscount Clifden has subscribed £100 towards the county of Kilkenny Patriotic Fund.

Lord John Russell arrived at his residence, in Chesbam-place, on Wednesday from Pembroke Lodge, Richmond-park.

Lord Lyndhurst has quite recovered from his recent indisposition. The noble and learned lord is at Tynville-park, surrounded by his family.

The Lady Heron Maxwell gave birth to a daughter, on Monday last, at Springkell.

The Rev. Mr. Rice has arrived at the Clarendon, from the rectory, Wye, Kent.

Mrs. Gubbins and Miss Gubbins have left Edwards's Private Hotel, in George-street, Hammer-square, for Clifton.

Lieut.-Colonel Hon. Lawrence Parsons and Mr. Parsons are on a visit to the Earl and Countess of Rosse, at the Castle, Parsonstown.

Sir W. Hartopp has arrived at the Clarendon, from Four Oaks Hall, Warwickshire.

We are happy to find that Sir John Blunden, of Kilkenny, has nearly recovered from the effects of his recent severe accident.

The Hon. John Cole and suite have arrived at the Gresham Hotel.

NAVAL.

THE ATTACK ON PETROPAULSKI.

Return of Officers, Seamen, and Marines killed, wounded, and missing on board her Majesty's ships engaged in the operations against the batteries and town of Petropaulski, Sept. 4, 1854.

PIQUE.—A. Bland, lieut., contusion; G. Robinson, mate, slightly; L. Chichester, mid., slightly; G. McCallum, lieut., R.M., slightly; W. H. Clements, lieut., R.M., severely. Seamen, killed or missing, 8; dangerously, 5; severely, 5; slightly, 4. Marines, killed or missing, 4; dangerously, 2; severely, 5; slightly, 1. Total, killed or missing, 12; dangerously, 7; severely, 11; slightly, 9—39.

PRESIDENT.—C. A. Parker, capt., R.M., killed or missing;

G. H. Howard, flag lieutenant, severely; G. Palmer, lieutenant, severely; W. G. H. Morgan, lieutenant, slightly. Seamen, killed or missing, 5; dangerously, 2; severely bruised, 14; slightly, 4. Marines, killed or missing, 5; severely bruised, 10; slightly, 4. Total, killed or missing, 11; dangerously, 2; severely, 28; slightly, 9-50.

VINAGO.—T. Whitelock, boatswain, severely. Seamen, killed or missing, 1; severely, 3; slightly, 7. Marines, killed or missing, 2; dangerously, 3; slightly, 1. Total, killed or missing, 3; dangerously, 3; severely, 4; slightly, 8-18.

Total, killed or missing and wounded, 107.

R. BURRINGE, Captain.

(Copy.)

Pacific Station. F. Nicholson, Capt.

List of officers and seamen killed, wounded, and missing, on board the French squadron, on the 31st of August, and September 4, 1854, at Petropaulski.

August 31, 1854.

FORTE.—Dumesnil, mid., slightly wounded. Seamen (died on board), 1; dangerously, 1; slightly, 5. Total, killed, 1; dangerously, 1; slightly, 6.

Sept. 4, 1854.

FORTE.—Seamen, killed or missing, 8 (7 left on shore, one died on board); Letebre, lieutenant, killed or missing (left on shore); Bourruet, lieutenant (died on board); d'Alacomba, lieutenant, dangerously. Total, killed or missing, 10; dangerously, 17; slightly, 4.

EUNYDICE.—Gieguel des Touches, mate, dangerously; Coste, mid., dangerously; Gnerin, surgeon, dangerously; seamen, killed or missing, 8 (left on shore). Total, killed or missing, 8; dangerously, 11; slightly, 10.

OBLAGADO.—D'Journel, mate, slightly; Gieg. des Touches, mate, killed or missing (left on shore); Letebre, mid., slightly; seamen, killed or missing, 6 (5 left on shore, one died on board). Total, killed or missing, 7; dangerously, 10; slightly, 18.

Total, killed or missing and wounded, 102.

THE GALE IN THE BLACK SEA.

(By Submarine and British Telegraph.)

The Oesterreichische Correspondenz contains the following disastrous intelligence from Constantinople, of the 20th, brought by the Trieste steamer Australia:—

"During the awful gale on the night of Nov. the 14th, the English lost thirty-two transports on the coast of the Crimea.

"The fine screw-steamer Prince and the Sea Nymph foundered with all on board.

"Three smaller English steamers were stranded.

"Of the vessels of war, the Sanspareil was driven on shore, though she had her steam up. The Britannia (Admiral Druas) had five feet water in her hold.

"The Agamemnon (Admiral Lyons) was driven on shore, but managed to get off, and the engines of the Samson were seriously damaged.

"The Retribution was also stranded, but got off by throwing her guns overboard.

"The Terrible escaped without damage.

"The French line-of-battle ship Henri Quatre and the Pluton were lost off Eupatoria, and another French steamer was dismantled.

"Both the besieged and the besiegers were acting on the defensive.

"Prince Napoleon was still at Constantinople on the 20th, where it was expected that the vessels of the fleets which had suffered great damage would arrive to be repaired.

BALAKLAVA.—"All the steam squadron are off for Odessa, to have a turn with our friend there, as they have fortified that very strongly. But what an idea, when we could have taken it with little loss! We have given them time to get nearly 100 guns more mounted. I must now conclude, as the mail starts at once. In my next, if spared, I shall tell you all about our taking Odessa."

CASUALTIES IN THE BLACK SEA, &c.—The Wynnstay (transport No. 128), from London, with government stores, provisions, &c., has been wrecked near St. Stefano Point; provisions, &c., saved. The Sardinian brig S. Francesco di Paola, Ravano; Sardinian bomb, N. S. Della Misericordia, Boero; and the French brig Nouvelle Française, Such, laden with provisions for the French army, were wrecked at Varna on the night of the 30th October: crews saved. The Marie Melanie, Delavé, and the bomb, Autonette Andromache, Granier, with cattle (both French vessels), have been wrecked between Midia and Caraburni.

LINER ASSIEN.—Intelligence has just arrived that the Jen, line-of-battle ship, is ashore off the Castle of Asia, in the Dardanelles, and that the William Penn, an American steam-transport, chartered by the French, and full of troops, is also stranded.

KIEL, HOLSTEIN, Nov. 25.—On the arrival of the pilots for the St. Jean d'Acre and Princess Royal, these ships immediately weighed anchor, and have left this port for Spithead and Plymouth.

KIEL, HOLSTEIN, Nov. 15.—The fleet at anchor in Kiel harbour is composed of the following ships:—

Vessel	Guns.	Horse power.	Men.	Tonnage.
Duke of Wellington, flag of Vice-Admiral Sir G. Napier, Commandant-in-Chief	131	750	1,100	3,700
Edinburgh, flag of Rear-Admiral Chas.	58	650	600	1,772
Royal George, Captain Collingwood	120	600	970	2,016
St. Jean d'Acre, Captain the Hon. H. Keppel	101	400	900	3,200
Cesar, Captain John Robb	91	400	850	2,501
Princess Royal, Captain Lord C. Phere	91	400	850	3,129
James Wint, Captain G. Elliot	91	400	850	2,013
Nile, Captain G. R. Mundy	90	400	850
Cressy, Captain R. L. Warren	80	400	750	2,537
Majestic, Captain J. Hope, C.B.	80	400	750	2,580
Bismarck, Captain the Hon. P. Pelham	60	500	700	1,717
Imperieuse, Captain W. Ramsay	60	400	700	1,750
Phiblog (paddle), Capt. W. H. Hall	6	500	160	1,330
Rosamond (paddle), Commander G. Woodhouse	6	250	160	1,059
Basilisk (paddle), Captain Egerton	6	400	160	980

The following are blockading the enemy's ports in the Gulf of Finland, &c., under the orders of Captain Watson:—

Vessel	Guns.	Horse power.	Men.	Tonnage.
Imperieuse (screw), Capt. Watson	50	350	550	2,317
Euryalus (screw), Capt. G. Ramsay	46	300	550	2,371
Argonaut (screw), Capt. Yelverton	46	300	450	1,873
Magnifique (paddle), Capt. Fisher	16	400	250	1,255
Desperate (screw), Capt. D'Eyncourt	8	400	160	1,100
Cruiser (screw), Captain Douglas	17	160	250	750
Archer (screw), Capt. E. Heathcote	14	200	300	973

AN OFFER FROM WALES.—The following letter has been addressed to the Shipping and Mercantile Gazette:—"Sir,—We, the undersigned, British shipmasters, observing the want of men for the British naval service, will undertake to provide 1,000 South Wales sailors, and bend the same, against the Russians, in any part of the world her Majesty may think fit to order them, provided the Admiralty will fit out a screw line-of-battle ship, of 120 guns, to be called the 'South Welshman.' The men we could have ready by April next. We have been induced to make this offer from patriotic feelings only, being persuaded, from what we personally know of Welsh pluck and courage, that they will add new lustre to the British navy.—We remain, yours obediently, David Owens, master of Mankra, of Newquay; James Phillips, master of Relative, of Newquay; William Sennett, master of Emperor, of Liverpool.—Liverpool, Nov. 25, 1854."

MILITARY.

THE BATTLE OF INKERMANN was fought and won entirely by the battalion officers and the soldiers. It is called in the camp "the Soldiers' Victory."

COL. URTON.—Letters have been received from the Hon. Colonel George Upton (nephew of the late Marchioness of Bristol), whose name appears in the list of wounded in the Coldstream Guards, stating that he hoped to be fit for service in a few days. We understand the gallant colonel's escape was most miraculous. His horse was killed under him, and being the only man in a red coat, he was a continual mark for the enemy's guns. The command of the brigade of Guards has devolved upon Colonel Upton.

DR. WILSON AND THE DUKE OF CAMBRIDGE.—Dr. Wilson, mentioned by Captain Kingscote, Lord Raglan's aide-de-camp, as having saved the life of the Duke of Cambridge, by drawing his sword and leading a body of men to his rescue, when his Royal Highness was surrounded by enemies at the battle of Inkerman, is a Scotchman. He is the son of a highly respected man in Stranraer, and was formerly in the 7th Hussars, where he was much esteemed by his brother officers in that regiment. He is also an alumnus of the University of Edinburgh.—Edinburgh Courier.

THE HORSE GUARDS AND "THE HERALD."—The Horse Guards authorities are diligently employing themselves in circulating false reports. It was but yesterday the chief stated to a high personage, that Lord Raglan had 30,000 bayonets under his orders. Every man of common sense must be aware that on the morning of the 5th of Nov. he had not 14,300 present under arms. The above statement having been repeated in the presence of a general officer just arrived from the Crimea, he observed that on the morning of the 6th of November Lord Raglan had not 12,000 bayonets present under arms. Now the plain English of this is, the Government in their meanness attempt to throw dust in the eyes of the British public, and to discredit Lord Raglan, by making out that he had greater means at his command than he really had. Either Lord Raglan was grossly wrong in not having more than 8,000 men at the battle of Inkerman, or the Government was grossly wrong in not supplying him with proper force and proper reserves. The public will know upon which horse to put the saddle.—Morning Herald of Thursday.

EDINBURGH.—The contributions to the fund in Edinburgh and neighbourhood amount to above £13,000. On Tuesday a motion was brought before the Town Council, by Councilor Clark, to vote the sum of £200 to the fund out of the burgh revenues. The motion was opposed by Treasurer Dickson, Lord Provost Melville, Sir R. Arbuthnot, and other councillors, on the ground that the present state of the burgh funds would not admit of such donations, while the inhabitants generally had already made a liberal response to her Majesty's appeal. A long discussion ensued, when the motion to vote the £200 was carried by a majority of seventeen to sixteen.

YEOMANRY AND MILITIA.

THE SUFFOLK ARTILLERY.—This regiment is now under orders to prepare itself for permanent duty. The men will assemble at the dépôt in Brook-street, Ipswich, on the 14th of the present month. There are nearly 100 parishes in East Suffolk which have not contributed volunteers; but within the last two years upwards of 950 men have been enrolled upon the system of voluntary enlistment. About 200 men are now required to complete the regiment. The new artillery barracks, intended to afford accommodation for the regiment of Suffolk Artillery, will be ready by the time named for the reception of the regiment, with its stores, guns, &c.

A FURTHER number of volunteers from the Moumouth Militia, seventy-five in number, together with Lieutenant Peirse, have volunteered for active service with the 23rd Fusiliers in the Crimea, and have joined the dépôt previously to proceeding to head-quarters at Balaklava.

DURING the last eight days a very large proportion of the South Lincoln Militia, at present stationed at Chichester, under the command of Colonel Sibthorp, M.P., have volunteered into the Guards and regiments of the line.

THE inhabitants of Bristol have petitioned the Home-office to be allowed to form a volunteer rifle-corps, and a similar desire exists in Sheffield.

METROPOLIS.

DESTRUCTION OF THE WHITTINGTON CLUB-HOUSE BY FIRE.—The range of premises occupied by the members of this club, extending from Arundel-street into Milford-lane, and running almost parallel with the church of St. Clement's Dunes, in the Strand, was totally destroyed by a fire, which broke out about half-past five o'clock on Sunday morning. With this structure has fallen all that remained of the once famous Crown and Anchor Tavern—the favourite scene of metropolitan political meetings during the latter part of the last and the early years of the present century. The fire was of a most destructive character. Indeed, several female servants would in all probability have perished had they not succeeded in mounting the roof of the printing premises of the Illustrated London News, whence, after incurring great danger, they at length descended to the street in safety. The discovery was made by Mr. Brace, secretary to the club, who, with his wife and child, was sleeping in one of the first-floor rooms. He was awake about ten minutes to six o'clock by a loud crackling noise as of wood burning, and hastily arousing his wife, he ran up to the upper floor and called the servants, nearly twenty in number. The fire, which had evidently originated in the kitchen-department on the ground floor, had made great progress before Mr. Brace was aroused, and before the servants could descend the whole interior was in flames. Only one man-servant succeeded in following

Mr. Brace down stairs, and this person, with Mr. and Mrs. Brace and their child, were the only parties who escaped by the entrance-door. All that the other servants could do was to effect a rapid exit through one of the parapet windows, and by making the circuit of the stone coping round the building got on to the roof of the adjoining warehouse, whence some were rescued by means of the Royal Society's fire-escape, and others were lowered by the "lift" attached to the premises. The inconvenience to the club, which is said to number nearly one thousand members, will be very great. They have lost an extensive library of modern books, and some of the more polite members have also lost the "wardrobes" in which they were accustomed to deposit themselves upon "gala nights" and "festive occasions," for which this club has obtained a remarkable distinction. It is stated that the building and furniture of the club are insured. The Crown and Anchor Tavern is noticed by Strype, writing at the close of the seventeenth century, as "a large and curious house, with good rooms, and other conveniences, fit for entertainments." "Here," says Mr. Peter Cunningham, in his excellent Hand-book of London, "Johnson and Boswell occasionally supped together. Here Johnson quarrelled with Percy about old Dr. Munsey; and here, when Sir Joshua Reynolds was maintaining the advantages of wine in assisting conversation, and referring particularly to himself, Johnson observed, 'I have heard none of those drunken—day, drunken is a coarse word—none of those vinous flights.'" The house ceased to be a tavern in 1847.

MAJOR-GENERAL H. BENTINCK has arrived in London from the Crimea, and considering the severity of the wound—fortunately only a flesh one—he received at the battle of Inkerman, in better health than might be expected.

ROBBERY OF LORD RAGLAN'S WAR-COAT.—On Tuesday night a box, containing a new great-coat for Lord Raglan at the seat of war, was on its journey from the manufactory, to be conveyed to the railway station at London-bridge, when it was discovered that the box, in which the property was deposited, had been stolen.

THE ADMIRALTY will receive tenders on the 15th inst. for the supply of 22,300 pairs of shoes, and on the 9th inst. for 500,000 lbs. of preserved boiled beef.

DURING the last few days upwards of 200 horses passed through the metropolis, in charge of detachments of Light Dragoons, from the northern and eastern counties, en route for the cavalry depot at Millstone, where they will be trained for the service. The animals are nearly all three-quarters bred, finely shaped, and are principally bays and browns, with a few greys for trumpeters; they are intended for the re-mounts of the additional troops to augment the several cavalry regiments in the Crimea; the average price of each is £28.

THE PEOPLE'S LIGHT.—NIBB'S PATENT LAMPS.—In these lamps the inventor, whose manufactory is at Bakewell, seems completely to have attained that greatest of all desiderata—a cheap, clean, and simple oil lamp, which furnishes a maximum of light with a minimum of expenditure. Both the principle of the lamp and its result have a scientific basis. By a simple contrivance the fitting which holds the glass is converted into a condensing cap, causing a current of air to play upon the flame; and, as a result, the total consumption of the oil. The light is perfectly clear, steady, and free from smoke; and these qualities are not at the mercy of the servant who may light it, for, unlike the equally beautiful but more troublesome French lamps, it cannot be lighted at a wrong focus. It will consume common oil, and may be had from the inventor in all forms—from the common shilling lamp for the humblest cottage to the elaborate drawing-room lamp and ornament for fifty shillings. Mr. Nibbs has produced a valuable popular invention, and he deserves the encouragement which the Society of Arts has afforded him, and the success which has already rewarded his labours.

MASONIC INTELLIGENCE.

MEETINGS.

MONDAY, Dec. 11.—St. George and Corner Stone, No. 5, Freemasons' Tavern; Lodge of Fortitude and Old Cumberland, No. 12, Freemasons' Tavern; St. Alban's Lodge, No. 32, Freemasons' Tavern; Domestic Lodge, No. 206, Falcon Tavern, Fetter-lane; Lodge of Confidence, No. 278, Anderson's Hotel; St. Andrew's Lodge in the East, No. 469, London Tavern; Wellington Lodge, No. 803, Railway Tavern, Lewis-ham.

TUESDAY, Dec. 12.—Burlington Lodge, No. 113, Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-street; St. James's Union, No. 211, Westmoreland Arms, George-street, Portman-square; Percy Lodge, No. 234, Ship and Turtle, Leadmill-street; Lodge of Israel, No. 247, St. James's-place, Abgate; St. Michael Lodge, No. 255, George and Blue Boar; Lodge of United Strength, No. 276, Gun Tavern, Pinckno; Lodge of Nine Muses, No. 286, Freemasons' Tavern; Chapter, 218, Jerusalem, George and Vulture.

WEDNESDAY, Dec. 13.—CORN R. BEL INST., at three; Lodge of Fidelity, No. 3, Freemasons' Tavern; Faith Lodge, No. 11, Freemasons' Tavern; Union Waterloo Lodge, No. 13, Queen's Arms, Woolwich; Kent Lodge, No. 15, Three Tuns Tavern, Southwark; Royal Alliance Lodge, No. 19, George and Blue Boar; Neptune Lodge, No. 22, removed from King's Head, Poultry, Ship and Turtle; Royal Naval Lodge, No. 70, Radley's Hotel; Vitruvian Lodge, No. 103, White Hart Tavern, College-street, Lambeth; Eastern Star Lodge, No. 112, Wade's Arms, Poplar; Caledonian Lodge, No. 156, George and Vulture; Lodge of Justice, No. 172, Royal Albert, New Cross, Deptford; Pilgrim Lodge, No. 289, Ship and Turtle; Bon Accord Mark Masters, Freemasons' Tavern.

THURSDAY, Dec. 14.—Lodge of Friendship, No. 6, Thatched House Tavern, St. James's; Lodge of Friendship, No. 248, George and Vulture; Bank of England Lodge, No. 329, Radley's Hotel; Polish National Lodge, No. 778, Freemasons' Tavern.

FRIDAY, Dec. 15.—Britannia Lodge, No. 38, Thatched House Tavern, St. James's; Lodge of Temperance, No. 128, removed from King's Head Poultry—no information as to where; Jordan Lodge, No. 237, Freemasons' Tavern.

SATURDAY, Dec. 16.—Lodge of Honour and Generosity, No. 124, London Tavern; Phoenix Lodge, No. 702, Freemasons' Tavern.

BOARD OF BENEVOLENCE.—The monthly meeting of this board took place on Wednesday, the 29th inst., when the sum of £88 was voted amongst twelve recipients; this was the annual night for twelve past-masters to be asked to the board, but the absolute election was postponed in consequence of some allegation bearing reference to the disposal of the funds, which is believed to be without foundation; however, about eighteen candidates were proposed to fill the vacancies at the board.

EMULATION LODGE OF IMPROVEMENT, No. 318.—The anniversary festival of this excellent lodge of Instruction, was held on Thursday evening last, at the Freemasons' Tavern, when 153 Brethren assembled to do honour to the occasion, Br. Beedon, P. G. W., presiding. The chief feature of the evening was the presentation of an elegant watch and chain to Br. John Hervey, as a testimonial of respect, due to him from the Brethren, in conducting, and bringing the lodge to its present prosperity, the inscription on the watch was as follows:—"Presented by the Brethren of the Emulation Lodge of Improvement, No. 318, to Br. John Hervey, S. G. D., Treasurer, to evince their appreciation of the zeal and ability with which he has discharged his Masonic duties to the lodge, and his unremitting attention to the interests of the craft in general; 1854."

ROYAL FREEMASONS' GIRLS' SCHOOL.—At an adjourned meeting of the House Committee on Saturday, the 25th Nov., to consider the testimonials of the certificates for the situation of governess, vacant by the death of Mrs. Crooks, it was resolved to recommend Miss Suter to the General Court for the office. Miss Suter, who is the orphan daughter of the once well-known bookseller of Fleet-street, was originally educated in the Royal St. Ann's Asylum Schools, whence she proceeded to Whitland's Training Institution, from which she holds a high certificate of her talents. From inquiries we have been able to make, we believe Miss Suter to be in every way suited to the situation to which she aspires.

ANECDOTE (A FACT).—A Scottish gentleman in the Prussian service was taken prisoner at the battle of Lutzen, and was conveyed to Prague along with 400 of his companions in arms. As soon as it was known that he was a Mason he was released from his confinement; he was invited to the tables of the most distinguished citizens, and requested to consider himself a Freemason, and not as a prisoner of war. About three months after the engagement, an exchange of prisoners took place, and the Scottish officer was presented by the fraternity with a purse of sixty ducats to defray the expenses of his journey.

MASONIC KNIGHT TEMPLARS.—The encampment of Mount Carmel ministered roll at the Ship and Turtle, Leadenhall-street, on the 27th of October, when Sir Knt. Comp. T. Vesper was installed E.C. for the ensuing year. Amongst the visitors on the occasion was Sir Knt. Comp. Hy. Emly, Grand Chancellor of the Order.

The lady was cousin to General Anthony St. Leger, Governor of St. Lucia, who instituted the interesting race, and the celebrated Doncaster St. Leger Stakes. Miss St. Leger married Richard Aldworth, Esq., of Newmarket. Whenever a benefit was given at the Theatres in Dublin or Cork, for the Masonic Female Orphan Asylum, she walked at the head of the Freemasons with her apron and other insignia of Freemasonry, and sat in the front row of the stage-box. The house was always crowded on these occasions. Her portrait is in the lodge room of almost every house in Ireland where Masonic meetings are held.

PROVINCIAL.

EXETER.—The Freemasons of the Grand Lodge in this city have given £25 to the Patriotic Fund.

LODGE OF FORTITUDE, STONEHOUSE, DEVONSHIRE (No. 122).—The usual monthly meeting of this lodge was held at the George Hotel, on the second Wednesday (Nov. 8), Br. E. W. Cole, W.M. in the chair, when a Br. received the third degree in Freemasonry, the ceremony being performed by P.M. Doidge with his usual ability. There were eight visiting brothers, who expressed great gratification at the able and correct manner in which the ceremony was performed; after which the nomination of a W.M. for the year ensuing took place, and Br. Phillips the senior warden was unanimously named as successor to the present W.M. A Royal Arch Chapter of this lodge was held on the 14th inst., when three qualified brethren were duly exalted, the ceremony being performed by P. Z. Companion Pollard, in his usual impressive and able manner. At the conclusion of the ceremony, the companions retired to partake of an excellent supper provided by Companion Killingly, M.E.Z., and the evening was much enlivened by some good songs and toasts. This chapter is rapidly progressing in numbers, and bids fair to become the strongest in this province.

EXETER.—The St. George's Royal Arch Chapter (129) has aided the Patriotic Fund by voting to it out of the monies of the lodge the sum of £5.

STAPCROSS.—The brethren of the Lodge of Union (650) have also voted the sum of £5 in aid of the Patriotic Fund.

MARQUIS OF GRANBY LODGE, DURHAM (No. 164).—Among the additional subscribers to the "Patriotic Fund," we are glad to notice the donation of £10 from this lodge; and we trust the step taken by the Granby will be followed by every lodge in the United Kingdom. It will occur to all members of the craft that among our numerous soldiers and sailors at the seat of war there will be a large number of Freemasons; and this spontaneous act on the part of the craft in the city of Durham shows that, apart from the nationality which always characterises the order, they have not forgotten that to relieve the distressed is a duty incumbent on all men, but more particularly so on Masons, who are linked together by an indivisible chain of sincere affection. To soothe calamity, alleviate misfortune, compassionate misery, and restore peace to the troubled mind, is the grand aim of the true Mason.

* * * Much more Masonic matter is in type, and will be inserted next week.

PROVINCIAL.

READING POULTRY SHOW.

The Reading Fat Cattle Show Society held their second annual exhibition on Wednesday and Thursday the 29th and 30th of November; on this occasion there was added a poultry show; and the anticipations of the complete success of the whole, which had been for some time previously formed by the friends of the society, were not realised. The poultry show was certainly successful beyond expectation. Other circumstances, apart from the entries, militated against the show; one especially contributed to prevent that large influx of visitors which had been looked for. The prices of admission had been fixed at so high a scale as to be almost exclusive, and many were those who exclaimed against this arrangement. On the first morning of the exhibition an accident occurred, which led to the removal of most of the more valuable animals. The whole area of the Cattle Market was covered with a temporary awning of canvas, to protect the cattle, as well as visitors, from the weather; a very strong north-westerly wind prevailed; the erection was not sufficiently strong to withstand the gale, and the whole of the roofing was raised to the ground, tumbling in with a tremendous crash. This was a most unfortunate event, and it could not be replaced.

The poultry show was more fortunate, being under a capacious and safe marquee; it was a very large and exceedingly meritorious exhibition, and was decidedly the most attractive, especially among the ladies, who principally patronised it. The public dinner of the society was given in the Town Hall, on Wednesday afternoon. The Marquis of Downshire was announced to preside, but was not present. About 130 sat down at the tables. Mr. Rose, of the Upper Ship Inn, provided dinner in a very satisfactory manner. After the removal of the cloth, the usual loyal and complimentary toasts were drunk, and suitably acknowledged.

CLASS 1—Spanish.—For the best cock and two hens, exceeding one year.—First prize, £1. 10s., Mr. George Botham, Wexham Court Slough; second ditto, 10s., ditto.

CLASS 2—Spanish.—For the best cock and two pullets, ebickens of 1854.—First prize, £1. 10s., William Saunders, Esq., Egypt Cottage, Cowes, Isle of Wight; second ditto, 10s., Mr. Daniel Parsley, Rock Cottage, Bristol; very highly commended, John G. Ramsden, Esq., Twickenham.

CLASS 3—Dorking (coloured).—For the best cock and two hens, exceeding one year.—First prize, £1. 10s., Mr. Breavington, Vicarage Farm, Hounslow; second ditto, 10s., Mr. George Botham, Wexham Court.

CLASS 4—Dorking (coloured).—For the best cock and two pullets, chickens of 1854.—First prize, £1. 10s., Robert Loder, Esq., the High Beaches, Crawley, Sussex; second ditto, 10s., Rev. E. H. Ketloe, Chadwell Rectory, Grays, Essex.

CLASS 5—Dorking (white).—For the best cock and two hens, exceeding one year.—First prize, £1. 10s., Mrs. Mills, Bisterne, Ringwood; second ditto, 10s., Mr. A. Williams, Reading.

CLASS 6—Dorking (white).—For the best cock and two pullets, chickens for 1854.—First prize, £1. 10s., Mr. William Bullford, Brightwell, Oxon; second ditto, 10s., Mr. Joseph Clift, Dorking.

CLASS 7—Cochin-china (cinnamon and buff).—For the best cock and two hens, exceeding one year.—First prize, £1. 10s., G. W. Hoyle, Esq., Sydney Villas, Reading; second ditto, 10s., ditto.

CLASS 8—Cochin-china (cinnamon and buff).—For the best cock and two pullets, chickens of 1854.—First prize, £1. 10s., G. W. Hoyle Esq., Reading; second ditto, 10s., Rev. J. Mathew, Chelvey, near Bristol.

CLASS 9—Cochin-china (brown and partridge feathered).—For the best cock and two hens, exceeding one year.—Prizes withheld.

CLASS 10—Cochin-china (brown and partridge feathered).—For the best cock and two pullets, chickens of 1854.—First prize, £1. 10s., Captain W. H. Snell, St. Swithin's-lane, second ditto, 10s., J. T. Foster, Esq., Hartley Row.

CLASS 11—Cochin-china (white).—For the best cock and two hens, exceeding one year.—Second prize, 10s., Mrs. Mills, Bisterne, Ringwood; first prize withheld.

CLASS 12—Cochin-china (white).—For the best cock and two pullets, chickens of 1854.—First prize, £1. 10s., Mr. D. Smith, Clipping Norton, Oxon; second ditto, 10s., Mr. G. Botham, Slough.

CLASS 13—Brahma Poutra.—For the best cock and two pullets, chickens of 1854.—First prize, £1. 10s., Robert H. Bush, Esq., Ashton Lodge, near Bath; second ditto, 10s., Mr. William Cave, Hartley Row.—Very highly commended, Mr. G. Botham, and Mr. Breavington, Hounslow.

CLASS 14—Malay.—For the best cock and two hens, of any age.—First prize, £1. 10s., Mr. S. C. Baker, 3, Half-moon Passage, London; second ditto, 10s., Mr. James Leighton, 183, High-street, Cheltenham.

CLASS 15—Game Fowl (white piles, duckwings, and greys).—For the best cock and two hens, exceeding one year.—First prize, £1. 10s., Mr. E. Farmer, Greer Spark Brook, Birmingham; second ditto, 10s., Mr. George Botham, Slough.

CLASS 16—Game Fowl (white piles, duckwings, and greys).—For the best cock and two pullets, chickens of 1854.—First prize, £1. 10s., Mr. George Ellis, Bury St. Edmunds; second ditto, 10s., Mr. Geo. Slyfield, Wokingham.

CLASS 17—Game Fowl (black, black breasted, and other reds).—For the best cock and two hens, exceeding one year.—First prize, £1. 10s., Mr. Henry Shield, Taunton; second ditto, 10s., Edward Farmer, Esq., near Birmingham.

CLASS 18—Game Fowl (black, black breasted, and other reds).—The best cock and two pullets, chickens of 1854.—First prize, £1. 10s., Mr. G. Ellis, Bury St. Edmunds; second ditto, 10s., Mr. W. Green, Aylesbury.

CLASS 19—Golden Pencilled Hamburg.—The best cock and two hens, exceeding one year.—First prize, £1. 10s., Mrs. Mills, Bisterne, Ringwood; second ditto, 10s., Rev. J. Atkinson, Briggs, near Sevenoaks.

CLASS 20—Golden Pencilled Hamburg.—The best cock and two pullets, chickens of 1854.—First prize, £1. 10s., Mr. Richard Tiebener, Chiseldon, Wilts, second ditto, 10s., Rev. J. Atkinson Briggs, Sevenoaks, Kent; very highly commended, Mr. C. Adams, Windsor.

CLASS 21—Golden Spangled Hamburg.—For the best cock and two hens, exceeding one year.—Second prize, 10s., Mr. Jos. Wittington, jun., Wooton Warren; first prize withheld.

CLASS 22—Golden Spangled Hamburg.—For the best cock and two pullets, chickens of 1854.—First prize, £1. 10s., Mr. Henry Thompson, Windsor; second ditto, 10s., ditto.

CLASS 23—Silver Pencilled Hamburg.—For the best cock and two hens, exceeding one year.—First prize, £1. 10s., Edward Archer, Esq., Malvern; second ditto, 10s., Mr. Buckland, Wraishbury.

CLASS 24—Silver Pencilled Hamburg.—For the best cock and two pullets, chickens of 1854.—First prize, £1. 10s., Edward Archer Esq., Malvern; second ditto, 10s., F. H. Aberdeen, Esq., Honiton.

CLASS 25—Silver Spangled Hamburg.—For the best cock and two hens, exceeding one year.—First prize, £1. 10s., Francis Edwards, Esq., Bulstrode Park, Bucks; second ditto, 10s., Mr. Thomas McCann, Malvern.

CLASS 26—Silver Spangled Hamburg.—For the best cock and two pullets, chickens of 1854.—First prize, £1. 10s., the Rev. H. K. Venn, Honiton; second ditto, 10s., Francis Edwards, Esq., Bulstrode Park.

CLASS 27—Poland Fowl (black, with white crests).—For the best cock and two hens, exceeding one year.—First prize, £1. 10s., and second ditto, 10s., Thomas P. Edwards, Esq., Lyndhurst, Hants.

CLASS 28—Poland Fowl (black, with white crests).—For the best cock and two pullets, chickens of 1854.—First prize, £1. 10s., T. P. Edwards, Esq., Lyndhurst; second ditto, 10s., James F. Hine, Esq., Thickthorne House, Ilminster.

CLASS 29—Poland (golden).—For the best cock and two hens, exceeding one year.—1st prize, £1. 10s., Robert Bush, Esq., Ashton Lodge, Bath.

CLASS 30—Poland Fowl (golden).—For the best cock and two pullets, chickens of 1854.—First prize, £1. 10s., Mrs. Mills, Bisterne, Ringwood; second ditto, 10s., Charles E. Coleridge, Esq., Eton College.

CLASS 31—Poland Fowl (silver).—For the best cock and two hens, exceeding one year.—First prize, £1. 10s., C. E. Coleridge, Esq., Eton College; second ditto, 10s., Mr. S. C. Baker, 3, Half-moon Passage, London.

CLASS 32—Poland Fowl (silver).—For the best cock and two pullets, chickens of 1854.—First prize, £1. 10s., Charles E. Coleridge, Esq., Eton College; second ditto, 10s., F. Edwards, Esq., Bulstrode Park.

CLASS 33—Bantams (gold laced).—All prizes withheld.

CLASS 34—Bantams (silver laced).—For the best cock and two hens.—First prize, 10s., C. Ballance, Esq., Taunton; second prize withdrawn.

CLASS 35—Bantams (white).—For the best cock and two hens.—First prize, 10s., the Hon. A. Irby, Hedsor.

CLASS 36—Bantams (black).—For the best cock and two hens.—Extra first prize, Master R. N. Bricknell, Enysbarn Vicarage; first prize, 10s., Charles Ballance, Esq., Taunton; second ditto, 5s., George H. Montagu, Esq., Caversham.

CLASS 37—Geese.—For the best gander and two geese.—First prize, £1, T. P. Edwards, Esq., Lyndhurst, Hants; second ditto, 10s., Mr. H. G. R. Breavington, Vicarage Farm, Heston, Hounslow.

CLASS 38—Ducks (white Aylesbury).—For the best drake and two ducks.—First prize, £1, Mr. H. G. R. Breavington, Vicarage Farm, Heston, Hounslow; second ditto, 10s., Lady Margaret Macdonald, Woolmer Lodge, Hants.

CLASS 39—Ducks (Rouen).—For the best drake and two ducks.—First prize, £1, Charles Ballance, Esq., Mount-street, Taunton; second ditto, 10s., Thomas Panton Edwards, Esq., Lyndhurst, Hants.

CLASS 40—Turkeys.—The best Turkey cock and two hens, exceeding one year.—First prize, £1. 10s., Mr. A. Williams, Reading; second ditto, 10s., Joseph Symonds, Esq., Gorwell, Dorchester.

CLASS 41—Turkeys.—The best turkey cock and two hens, hatched in 1854.—First prize, £1. 10s., Mr. A. Williams, Reading; second ditto, 10s., Miss S. M. Hickman, Colbrook

EXTRA STOCK.

Highly commended.—Black Cochins, shown by E. A. Dabenny, near Cirencester; white Poland fowls, by F. Edwards, Esq., Bulstrode Park; black reds, game, by F. L. Holland, Esq., Trunkwell House; Dorking cock, by W. Stephens, Esq., Prospect-bill; gold laced sealright bantams, by Mr. F. Staff, London.

Commended.—East India ducks, Miss Crawshaw, Caversham Park; gold laced sealright bantams, chickens, Mr. F. Staff, London.

THE BIRMINGHAM POULTRY SHOW.—The sixth of the great annual exhibitions of stock and domestic poultry, which have excited so much interest in all parts of the United Kingdom, will open in Bingley Hall, on Tuesday, the 12th instant, when the private view takes place, and will be followed by the annual dinner in the evening. The nature and extent of the entries, and the other arrangements which are in progress, are such, we understand, as to hold out abundant promise of a highly satisfactory meeting. The show of poultry—always in Bingley Hall a most agreeable and striking feature—will, it is stated, this year, be of extraordinary excellence. This is but a natural and necessary consequence of the increased knowledge which now obtains on all matters connected with the cultivation of the different race of domesticated birds, and of the unabated desire manifested by large numbers of enterprising amateurs to win the distinction and rewards which awaits the disposal of the judge. Since last year, a change has been made in the amount of subscription giving the right to exhibit poultry, which has been raised from ten shillings to one pound, the entries at the same time being limited to four instead of six as heretofore. Notwithstanding this change, however, the total number of pens will be very nearly eighteen hundred. As regards the stock, we understand that the list of competitors, in the various classes, will, as heretofore include the names of breeders and feeders of the highest eminence, who, we may reasonably expect, will have turned their past experience to good account; so that we may confidently expect that the general standard of merit attained by their contributions will be a very high one. Nor will the facilities for visiting the exhibition be at all behind the probable inducements which it holds out. The town in which it is held, it is almost needless to add, is central, and easy of access; and the council have, as usual, taken the needful steps to secure the co-operation of the several companies, in obtaining for the public the fullest possible amount of railway accommodation.

PRIZES FOR POULTRY.—At the Poultry Show held last week, in connection with the Taunton Agricultural Association the following were among the successful competitors for prizes:—Cochin-china—Brown or partridge feathered, second prize, Mr. B. J. Ford, Exeter; ditto, white or black, second prize, Mr. J. Turner, Northbrook, Exeter; Spanish (cock and two hens), second, Mr. B. J. Ford; ditto, (pen of four chickens), second, Mr. H. M. Ellicombe, Exeter; Poland, (pen of four chickens), Mr. J. B. Ford; Bantams, second prize, Mr. J. G. Gully, Exeter. On the same day Mr. B. J. Ford obtained the first prize with white Aylesbury ducks, at Gloucester, and in the previous week a first prize with white Aylesbury ducks at Cambridge; Mr. Breavington being second. At the latter place the Cottage Gardener states that they weighed 23 lbs.

DERBYSHIRE AND MIDLAND COUNTIES POULTRY SHOW.—The second annual exhibition of poultry for Derbyshire and the Midland Counties took place on Nov. 30th and Dec. 1st, in the entrance of the County-hall, Derby, and was, like its predecessor, eminently successful. Almost every class of fowl was well represented; but the competition ran particularly high in Dorkings, which elicited the highest commendations from the judges and numerous visitors. There was also an excellent and extensive display of Cochin-china, black Spanish, gold and silver spangled, Poland and other fowls. Of bantams alone there was a limited supply. The geese and turkeys were numerous and good. The total number of entries was 336. Mr. Bailey, of London, and Mr. Hewitt, of Birmingham, were the judges. The majority of the prizes have gone into Derbyshire, Yorkshire, and Staffordshire.

SUSSEX.—We are sorry to learn that the Reigate and Brighton Poultry Show, which took place in the Pavilion, Brighton, was attended with a loss of nearly £60 to the Society.

COVENTRY ELECTION.—The election of a member to supply the vacancy in the representation of the city caused by the lamented death of Mr. Geach, M.P., took place on Saturday, and Sir Joseph Paxton was returned without opposition.

MR. BRIGHT'S LETTER ON THE WAR.—REQUISITION TO THE MAYOR OF MANCHESTER.—A requisition, of which the following is a copy, has been originated amongst some who have hitherto ranked as Mr. Bright's supporters, and it is now in course of signature:—"To the Worshipful the Mayor of Manchester.—Sir,—We, the undersigned, having learned that the letter of Mr. John Bright, M.P., on the war, has been translated and circulated in Russia, as embodying the sentiments of the people of Manchester, respectfully request that you will call a public meeting, in order to enable the citizens to declare that they do not concur in the opinions of Mr. Bright, but are fully convinced of the justice and necessity of the war, and earnestly hope that it will be carried on with the utmost vigour until the objects for which it was commenced are thoroughly effected.

CONFLAGRATION AT LEEDS.—A conflagration, involving a serious loss of property, happened here on Wednesday morning. A few minutes after six o'clock a lad discovered smoke issuing from the lower floor of the extensive flour-mill situated in Sykes-street, York-street, occupied by Messrs. Dickinson and Thorp. Information was given to the police and to the various fire-stations. In a short time the Leeds and Yorkshire, Sun, Norwich Union, and Corporation engines were on the spot, but were delayed three-quarters of an hour, in consequence of the bursting of one of the mains. By seven o'clock they got into play, but it was evident the whole building was doomed to destruction, for it was one mass of fire. Floor after floor fell, until the entire six-storied building fell with a terrific crash. Fortunately, no one was injured, although several parties had a very narrow escape. The flames extended across the street, and fired the St. James's Day-schools and Mrs. Anakin's saw-mills, which were with much difficulty preserved from entire destruction. The mill is the property of Thomas Bolland, Esq., of Gledholme, and was worth £6,000, having recently, at an expense of £3,000, been converted from a flax-mill into a flour-mill, working fourteen pairs of French stones. It was insured for £3,100 in the Leeds and Yorkshire Office. The mill contained at the time of the conflagration about 600 sacks of superfine flour, and 350 quarters of wheat. About fifty sacks of flour only were saved. Messrs. Dickinson and Thorp's loss is estimated at £1,000, and they are insured in the Unity Office for £1,200. Neither the St. James's Schools nor Mrs. Anakin were insured, but their loss will not be many hundreds of pounds.

BEDFORD.—The election to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Henry Stuart, the late Conservative member for this borough, took place on Tuesday. Captain Stuart, nephew of the deceased member, came forward upon a requisition from the Conservative party, and Mr. J. S. Trelawny, the late member for Tavistock, was brought out by the Radical party. At the nomination on Tuesday morning Captain Stuart, in his address from the hustings, declared himself opposed to the Maynooth endowment, the ballot, and any large increase of the suffrage. Upon local matters he took the popular view, and especially with reference to the management of the great charity endowment of this town. Mr. Trelawny expressed his opinions in favour of the ballot, a large extension of the suffrage, and the grant to Maynooth. He treated with quiet sarcasm the attempts which he said had been made to brand him as a Papist. He warmly advocated the great question of reform, and especially in reference to the abolition of church-rates. At the close of the poll the numbers were declared as follows:—Captain Stuart, 422; Mr. J. S. Trelawny, 331; majority, 91.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

FRANCE.

(From our own Correspondent.)

PARIS, Thursday, Dec. 7.

Opinions in Paris on Lord Aberdeen.—Lord Palmerston, the Court, and its feeling towards France.—Legitimate Sentiment of the British Army.—The Russian Assassins; one good effect.—Letter of a Zouave.—Theatres and Miscellaneous.

WITHOUT entertaining the least ill-will personally towards Lord Aberdeen, most of the English met with in Paris heartily desire his removal from office—a feeling so general among them as to have been lately expressed at the table of the British Ambassador. However high his character for honour and integrity, his well-meaning reluctance to believe in the possibility of the war—though clear to all the world beside—till it actually broke out, and, then, the fatal delays and want of energy displayed even after the Rubicon had been crossed, are all laid at his door, and, in fact, deprive the entire Government of all confidence on this question; his late spiritless speech in the City more befitting a puritanical preacher than the minister of a great nation just entering into a war. These singularly-timed effusions have a mischievous effect on the Continent, giving an impression that the war with Russia—and, what is more important, the alliance with France—is viewed with disfavour by at least a section of the Cabinet, and also in higher quarters. This impression receives something of a confirmation from the evidently friendly footing on which Lord Aberdeen is received at Windsor, where his visits, as recorded by the Court newsmen, are constant. Some of the French writers, who are remarkably quick-sighted in reading the signs of the political horizon, comment upon these frequent invitations, and sharply remark that Lord Palmerston, who arrived in town from Paris on Thursday or Friday last, has not been honoured by any summons to the Royal presence, though they seem to think that his Lordship's frequent interviews with the Emperor, in considering the deep interests involved in the personal opinions and feelings of his Majesty respecting the conduct of the war, and the measures to be taken, it might have been expected that his Sovereign would have been desirous to learn the opinion of her French ally, from his Lordship himself, rather than through the somewhat misty explanations of the noble Premier. This, however, has not been done; and though the exclusion of Lord Palmerston from the hospitalities at Windsor, according to the other Cabinet Ministers, has been often a subject of remark, on the present occasion it assumes the character of something like a slight, which extends further than the noble lord himself. Mind, I am merely conveying you the opinion of Parisian quid nuncs on this point, which is to be heard in every salon. But at a moment like the present, where a cordial alliance with France is, in the eyes of most reflecting men in Europe, the only real object of satisfactory contemplation which the blunders and hesitations of Ministers have left the country in this mismanaged Russian affair, it would be sad indeed to have the best interests of two great nations thwarted by little short-sighted prejudices, certainly not of English growth.

Everywhere, in the salons, in the foyers of the theatres, the elegant frivolities of Parisian life have given way before the higher predominating considerations of the hour. Even the ladies, those privileged crapotees, have given over their favourite pursuits, and reading, or, rather, devouring the intelligence from the Crimea, is the chief occupation of their leisure. With that innate sentiment of admiration, for all that is great and noble, which distinguishes them, they share in the feeling with which the chivalrous gallantry of the English army is regarded by all Europe; and many a tear has been shed in the boudoirs of Paris over the fate of the young heroes who fell at Inkermann, and in the ever memorable cavalry charge at Balaklava. To give you an idea of what the most inveterate enemies of the alliance, the Legitimists, feel and think on the subject, I transcribe an extract of an article in one of their weekly journals, written by one of the staunchest adherents of Henri V.:

Let us remind our readers that those officers who fall in the Crimea belong, by the privilege of birth and fortune, to the highest families in the English aristocracy. Those noble fellows, who shed their blood so freely for Old England, inhabit palaces in London, castles and manor-halls in the country, and all those gifts of rank and wealth, that make life doubly sweet, are theirs. Let our founders of systems, and dreamers of Utopias, admire the phenomenon presented by the English aristocracy, sustaining its proud pre-eminence in this age of iridly-spread equality. Let them look closer, and they will see that the first privilege claimed by that superb and intelligent nobility is to die for their country. Behold them, by land and by sea, everywhere, beneath the red or blue uniform and golden epaulettes of the English officer, beats the heart of one of England's noblest families.

There are, no doubt, many inaccuracies in the writer's notions of our social system, yet this honest burst of enthusiasm cannot fail to awaken sentiments of cordial good-will at home—at all events, to borrow the words of Tacitus, "professione pietatis aut laudatuli erit, aut excusatus." One good effect—and no evil is unaccompanied by some good—must result from the savage murders committed by the Russians on our poor wounded brothers in the field: it will put an end to the mawkish, sympathising clap-traps with which Ministers and others in Parliament are wont to season their orations when speaking on the war. One language towards a noble and generous enemy, another for a cruel and treacherous foe. A provincial paper publishes a letter from one of the Zouaves (a private) who was in the late action, from which it appears that gallant corps gave no quarter, on the hint of their officer. I give a few extracts from the epistle, which is eminently characteristic, but rather too free for anything like literal translation:—"Here I am," writes this soldier, "in the trenches, up to my knees in mud and wet, but very comfortable, having just had a bowl of scalding-hot coffee and half a loaf, baked this morning, which has set me up for the day. Ah! father, you've often told us of your hard work at Smolensko and Moskowa, and that the Russians were tough morsels to digest; but they never stood then as they did at Inkermann, where they fought like drunken devils. As for the English, they're the best fellows in the world, and as good soldiers as live—I won't say better than the French, because they are not; they do some things better than we do, and we others better than they. I think we shall both improve under fire; they are as steady as old rocks—too steady. They advance too regularly, and lose many men, where the French fly on the enemy at once; but as for giving in, they can't do it—it's against their nature. For more than four hours the poor fellows were cut up by a whole Russian army, and though sometimes actually surrounded, never gave way; but they were getting awfully tired when we came in sight. They gave us an English hurrah that I think made the Russians stare. Our captain, who was killed, said to us—'Voilà de l'ouvrage, Enfants! travaillez! Et souvenez vous que ces gailurds là ne donnent pas de quartier!' Enough said: in five minutes we were into the front rank of the enemy, and bloody work it was. We went to work like courages. The English fought as savagely as we did—all bayonet work. They stood their ground for about two minutes, when they were seized with a choleric and ran, we helping them behind our bayonets. But they had so many in reserve that their place was soon supplied by fresh troops. Our new obusa-balles, luckily, here came into play, and bursting in the midst of their crowded ranks, spread terrible destruction, killing and maiming hundreds at every explosion. This completed their defeat; and if we had had only half their numbers, we should not only have repulsed them, but been masters of Sebastopol that night."

The obusa-balles, the writer mentions, seems an improvement on the old Congreve rocket; and, doubtless, much of the carnage described as taking place in the enemy's ranks was the effect of this formidable missile. The letter details many horrible incidents on both sides, but particularly the Russians, whose indescribable barbarities, it is to be hoped are exaggerated. These atrocities are, however, treated by our worthy Zouave with a careless indifference almost amounting to gaiety—peculiarly and characteristically French.

The absorbing question of the war excludes all other topics to such a degree that I have left myself scarcely any room for any other subject. The loss is not great, for there is otherwise little of interest stirring. Bulls and parties, so usual at the beginning of the winter season, are wholly suspended in consequence of the mourning late events have carried into so many families. The theatres are firing badly; among many novelties, we have but one striking affair, and that good only in name. It is called "Cinq Cents Diables" Five Hundred Devils. The title alone would—and probably will—make the fortune of the Adelphi. Alas! What's in a name? All the merits of this piece are confined to its title, for a more incomprehensible stupid set of "devils" were never seen or heard of.

Galvani tells us, through an advertisement, that "a young widow lady, considered handsome, and having an honourable name, with the addition of the title of Countess, is desirous of meeting with a marrying Englishman of independent fortune. Address, Mme. de B—, Poste Restante." Another advertisement, in the same paper, reads somewhat more bourgeois, "a young woman of twenty, who understands the getting up linen, and the superintendence of a household, desires a place as companion or upper servant, with an elderly bachelor, or widower. Address, Mile. Louise, Hotel Soubise, Rue du Bac."

Among the too many suicides recorded by the papers in Paris this week, is one from rather a remarkable cause. A Savoyard who had been the Samson of his native village and its neighbourhood, where none of the men could equal him in strength and agility, lately came up to town, and became a porter at the Corn-market. Here the post of honour for strength was already in the possession of a man of very extraordinary muscular power, against whom our Savoyard had no chance. He, however, insisted upon a trial, but, though he made a fair struggle, was completely overmatched by his burly antagonist. He took his defeat so much to heart, that the next day he was found hanging behind the door of his bed-room, life quite extinct! Another suicide of a more romantic cast, in which there were two victims, took place a few days previous, in one of the little hotels near the Lyons railway. After the arrival of the train, a young man and woman, both—particularly the young woman—remarkably well-looking, presented themselves and hired a bed room for a few days. They remained much at home, and were little noticed in the house, but on Saturday a very strong smell of charcoal from their room led the waiter to knock. No reply was returned, and on forcing the door, the pair were found locked in each other's arms, and both dead. A letter on the table stated that their parents had refused their consent to their marriage, and that life being insupportable, they had resolved on "flight, a few days of happiness, and death"—"quelques jours de bonheur, et la mort." The places of their residence were given, from which it appeared that the father of the young man was the magistrate of the district, and the girl a farmer's daughter in the vicinity. The young man's age was twenty, that of the girl seventeen. Two-thirds of the suicides in France, among the lower classes, arise from the same cause—disappointment in love, no religious feeling ever seeming to prevent this last and worst of crimes. Poor wretches—

"Because they never think of death, they die!"

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

Tuesday Dec. 5.

MASTER-OF-THE-HORSE'S OFFICE, July, 16, 1851.

The Queen has been graciously pleased to appoint Lieutenant-Colonel Thomas Myddelton Highfill, Master of the Household, to be Extra Equerry to her Majesty.

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 28.

Corps of Royal Marines.

BREVET.

With reference to Her Majesty's Order in Council of 13th September, 1851, the following promotions are to take place:—

To be Generals—Lieutenant-Generals Walter Tremereere, K.H.; Edward Nicolls.

The undermentioned officers, who were placed upon Retired Pay previous to her Majesty's said Order in Council, to be each promoted to a step of Brevet rank:—

To be Colonels—Lieutenant-Colonels Henry James Gillespie, Samuel Garington, John Harrold Stevens, Charles Fegen, Richard Lyde Hornbrook, William Lewis Dances, William Calamy, James Clarke, John Todhill.

ADMIRALTY, Nov. 30.

Corps of Royal Marines.

First Lieutenant Henry Way Mawbey to be Lieutenant and quarter-master, vice Williams, promoted.

BANKRUPTS.

William Hunt, Bedford-row, wine merchant—John Hisey, Southampton, carpenter—James Charles Jones, King William-street, City, and Mickleham, Surrey, dealer in shares—Charles Kolley, High-street, Kensington, and Baker-street Bazaar, Portman-square, auctioneer—Daniel Chapman, Cornwall-road, Hammersmith, builder—Charles Samuel Sasse, High-street, Portland-town, bread baker—Thomas Palmer, Birmingham, licensed victualler—Thomas Plimley Berham and William Bennett, Bristol, cabinet makers—John Bush Meece, Bath, carpenter—Edward Leaker Box, Bristol, corn merchant—William Crowther, Halifax, Yorkshire, joiner—John Mitchell, Hingley, Yorkshire, norsted splinter—George Jones and Edmund Clee, Salford, Lancashire, ironfounders—David Ainsworth, Manchester, warehouseman.

CAVALRY PROMOTIONS.

From Friday's Gazette.

WAR OFFICE, Dec. 8.

4th Dragoon Guards—Lieutenant Thomas Miller Clarke to be Captain, without purchase, Dec. 8.

To be Lieutenants without purchase—Cornet Daniel Peppoe Webb, vice Clarke; Cornet Bathurst Edward Wilkinson, Dec. 8.

5th Dragoon Guards—Lieutenant Charles Augustus Drake Halford to be Captain, without purchase, Dec. 8.

To be Lieutenants without purchase—Cornet Robert James Montgomery, vice Halford; Cornet J. Stephenson Ferguson, Dec. 8.

6th Dragoon Guards—Lieutenant Francis Richard Barker to be Captain, by purchase, vice Sherston, who retires, Dec. 8.

7th Dragoon Guards—Lieutenant-Colonel Edward Topham, from half-pay of the 9th Foot, to be Lieutenant-Colonel, vice Brevet-Colonel Ainslie, who exchanges; Major Arthur Carensell Huntlock to be Lieutenant-Colonel, by purchase, vice Topham, who retires; Captain Charles Fynder Beauchamp Walker to be Major, by purchase, vice Bentinck; Lieutenant William Wentworth Lamb to be Captain, by purchase, vice Walker, Dec. 8.

1st Dragoons—Lieutenant John Chamberlain to be Captain, without purchase, Dec. 8.

To be Lieutenants without purchase—Cornet Richard George Glyn, vice Chamberlain; Cornet William Wray Harrold, Dec. 8.

2nd Dragoons—Lieutenant Francis Sutherland, to be Captain, without purchase, Dec. 8.

To be Lieutenants without purchase—Cornet Andrew Nugent, vice Sutherland; Cornet Lemuel Fremberg, Dec. 8.

4th Light Dragoons—Lieutenant and Adjutant George Ellis, to be Captain, without purchase, Dec. 8.

To be Lieutenants without purchase—Cornet William Affleck King, vice Ellis; Cornet George Warrick Hunt, Dec. 8.

6th Dragoons—Lieutenant Germain Wheatcroft, to be Captain, without purchase, Dec. 8.

To be Lieutenants without purchase—Cornet William Stratford Sleight, vice Wheatcroft; Cornet Edward Finch Dawson, Dec. 8.

8th Light Dragoons—Lieutenant Francis Edward Macnaghten, to be Captain, without purchase, Dec. 8.

11th Light Dragoons—Lieutenant Harrington Avelly Trevelyan, to be Captain, without purchase, Dec. 8.

To be Lieutenants without purchase—Cornet George Ashley Maddock, vice Trevelyan; Cornet Arthur Lyttleton Annsley, Dec. 8.

13th Light Dragoons—Lieutenant Peter Valentine Purcell, to be Captain, without purchase, vice Goad, killed in action, Oct. 26; Lieutenant Edward Lemmex Jerris, to be Captain, without purchase, Dec. 8.

To be Lieutenants without purchase—Cornet George Maxwell Goad, vice Purcell, ret. 26; Cornet Benall Thomas Chamberlayne, vice Jerris; Cornet John Dearden, Dec. 8.

16th Light Dragoons—Brevet-Major Richard Knox to be Major, by purchase, vice Brevet-Lieutenant-Colonel Blatchford, who retires; Lieutenant Henry Lee to be Captain, by purchase, vice Knox; Cornet Thomas Francis Maule to be Lieutenant, by purchase, vice Lee, Dec. 8.

16th Light Dragoons—Cornet Joseph Tarrant to be Lieutenant, by purchase, vice Newman, who retires; William Whinstanley, gent., to be Cornet, by purchase, vice Stewart, promoted, Dec. 1.

17th Light Dragoons—To be Captains without purchase—Lieutenant Lewis Edward Knight, vice Webb, died of his wounds, Nov. 7; Lieutenant J. W. Cradock Harrold, Dec. 8.

To be Lieutenants without purchase—Cornet Drury Carzon Love, vice Knight, Nov. 7; Cornet Arthur Burnall, vice Harrold, Dec. 8.

To be Cornets without purchase—Cornet Walter Digby Seymour from the Royal Horse Guards, vice Lidd, promoted; John Gibson gent, vice Wombell, promoted, Dec. 8.

BANKRUPTS.

Friday.—William Hudson, Church-street, Hackney, grocer—Benjamin Hatley, Kingsland-road, corn dealer and trader—Henry Brown Marden, Kent, potter—Richard Derbyshire, Liverpool, merchant—John Henry Goodere, Northey, Tyflid, Glamorganshire, scrivener—John Young and Jasper Young, Broad-street, Cheapside, a warehousemen and commission agents—John Frisby Bentley, Saby, Northamptonshire coal merchant—William Winer, Haymarket, tavern-keeper—William

VOL. IV.—No. 103.]

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 16, 1854.

[WITH SUPPLEMENT, PRICE 6d.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE BOROUGH OF MARYLEBONE.

GENTLEMEN,—I must in the first place condole with you on the premature decease of your late lamented Representative, whose self-sacrificing liberality and philanthropy have identified the name of Dudley Stuart with hatred of oppression, and sympathy with distress. The vastness of the Constituency, which justly gives it so much influence, and renders the seat such an object of honourable ambition, will preclude, I regret to say, the possibility of my personally waiting upon each of you during the short remaining interval before the Election. It, however, you do me the great honour of approving me as the tried friend of Civil, Religious, and Commercial Freedom; as the promoter of good Local Self-Government, and of that efficiency in Local Administration, which is the only true economy; as the Supporter of Extended Franchise, General Education, and Sanitary Reform; and as the advocate of the present just and necessary war—a war undertaken in concert with our brave French neighbours, for the purpose of checking the encroachment of despotism, and of ultimately, with God's blessing, conquering for Europe a safe and honourable peace—if, above all, you feel with me that we ought to strain every nerve to succour effectively and at once our struggling forces in the Crimea, the wasted survivors of that gallant army so lately embarked from our shores in the pride of health, of equipment, and of numbers—if you agree with me that we are imperatively bound to reinforce and re-fit, without stint, that sadly diminished band of heroes, whose noble prowess and ill-regarded humanity, whose devoted obedience and uncomplaining endurance make us proud of the name of Englishmen, but whose losses, privations, and sufferings it makes our hearts bleed in the midst of our exultation to think upon:—If, on these terms, and with these sentiments, you place me in the proud position of your Representative, I shall endeavour to merit your approbation, and testify my gratitude by a diligent attention to my public duties, and a zealous promotion of your local interests.

I have the honour to be,
Gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,
EBBRINGTON.

P.S.—I hope to be able to communicate personally with every Elector, through the medium of meetings to be held in different parts of the Borough.

TO THE ELECTORS OF MARYLEBONE.

GENTLEMEN,—A Voting Card has been sent from my Committee-room to every Elector in the Borough, which it is important that they should take with them to the Poll. If any Elector should not have received this Card on Monday morning, he is requested to give notice at my Central Committee-room.

The number of Votes given at previous contested Elections has been considerably less than half the number registered: the successful Candidates were returned by a small minority of the Electors. I hope that on the present occasion the Electors of all classes will come forward and express their sentiments, in order that the Candidate elected may really represent the whole constituency.

I have the honour to be,
Gentlemen,
Your faithful servant,
EBBRINGTON.

Central Committee-room, Portland Hotel.

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE BOROUGH OF MARYLEBONE.

FELLOW ELECTORS,—At the present crisis, I think it a duty I owe to you to state a few reasons why I am compelled to oppose JACOB BELL, and support LORD EBBINGTON.

JACOB BELL voted for the Tory candidate in opposition to the late Lord Dudley Stuart, whose memory he professes to revere, and whom he seeks to succeed.

JACOB BELL, when he gave his subscription to the Patriotic Fund, did it publicly under protest, wishing it distinctly to be understood that he neither approved of or sanctioned the War.

JACOB BELL, who now, to suit his purpose, calls himself a Reformer, never assisted Joseph Hume and the other advocates of the Liberal cause.

JACOB BELL has just proclaimed partially in favour of the Ballot; but, when Member for St. Albans, he left the House to avoid voting for that measure.

JACOB BELL now says that, in order to insure a lasting peace to Europe, Poland must be restored as a kingdom, although he never assisted the late lamented Lord Dudley Stuart, by sympathizing with the Friends of Poland in public matters, or otherwise.

The political views of LORD EBBINGTON fall short of my own, but his antecedents prove him to be honest to the full extent of his profession, while those of JACOB BELL prove him to be politically dishonest; therefore let us honour character and consistency, and without hesitation reject JACOB BELL.

Yours, &c., &c.,
J. A. NICHOLAY.

Oxford-street.

MARYLEBONE ELECTION.—The Nomination will take place on Monday, Dec. 18th, at Park Crescent, Portland-place, at Eleven o'clock.
The Polling will take place on Tuesday, the 19th, beginning at Eight and ending at Four o'clock.
Lord Ebbington's Central Committee-room, Portland Hotel, Great Portland-street.

LORD EBBINGTON'S CENTRAL COMMITTEE. SIR JOHN EASTHOPE, BART., CHAIRMAN.

Sir Felix Agar,
Joseph Adolphus, Esq.,
H. D. Austin, Esq.,
Edmund Batten, Esq.,
George Birmingham, Esq.,
The Rev. R. Bingham,
W. J. Blake, Esq.,
Henry Botley, Esq.,
B. C. Brodie, Esq.,
R. J. P. Broughton, Esq.,
James Bush, Esq.,
James Campbell, Esq.,
Sir R. W. Carles,
Robert Bruce Chichester, Esq.,
James Clarke, Esq.,
R. P. Collier, Esq., M.P.,
James Cowens, Esq.,
Professor Cressy,
Raikes Currie, Esq., M.P.,
G. Woodhouse Currie, Esq.,
James H. Dark, Esq.,
Vice-Admiral Sir Wm. H. Dillon,
Sir Henry Dymoke, Bart.,
Dr. Farr,
John Flather, Esq.,
Frederic Folitt, Esq.,
Charles Freeth, Esq.,
C. Freeth, jun., Esq.,
M. A. Garvey, Esq.,
Leggatt Gilbert, Esq.,
W. Gill, Esq.,
The Baron de Goldsmid,
H. Goldsmid, Esq.,
Dr. Gray,
Samuel Gregson, Esq., M.P.,
The Right Hon. Lord Robert Grosvenor, M.P.,
George Gutch, Esq.,
John A. Haukey, Esq.,
Thomson Hankey, jun., Esq.,
Charles Haselden, Esq.,
William Hutton, Esq.,
Edward Hodges, Esq.,
B. Holden, Esq.,
John Jeffery, Esq.,
Thomas D'Huanger, Esq.,
Joseph Ivimey, Esq.,
Edmund James Kennedy, Esq.,
Professor J. Hewitt Key,
J. Wm. Latham, Esq.,
Charles H. A. Martelli, Esq.,
Richard Mitchell, Esq.,
Regnier W. Moore, Esq.,
James Morrison, Esq.,
John Moser, Esq.,
Robert P. Munro, Esq.,
J. A. Nicholas, Esq.,
Sir George Nicholls, K.C.B.,
W. T. Nier, Esq.,
S. M. Peto, Esq., M.P.,
James Parker Pierce, Esq.,
James Ponsford, Esq.,
Thomas Powell, Esq.,
Captain Probyn,
John Salmon, Esq.,
John Scarlett, Esq.,
Joseph Sloper, Esq.,
Sir George Staunton, Bart.,
F. T. Streeten, Esq.,
A. C. Strugnell, Esq.,
John Swaine, Esq.,
Colonel Sykes,
Captain John Sykes,
William Tapping, Esq.,
George Tarranton, Esq.,
Doctor Thorne,
Doctor Thurnall,
Wm. Tins, Esq.,
Henry Watson, Esq.,
John Henry Welchman, Esq.,
J. Whitmore, Esq.,
Dr. Wilton,
Captain J. R. Winchworth,
William Wonnacott, Esq.,
John Worrell, Esq.,
Charles Worrell, Esq.,
James Yates, Esq.

AGRICULTURE, &c.

SEED WHEAT.—Samples and Prices of RED HYBRID NURSERY, and other kinds of Wheat, suitable for late sowing after Harrows, will be sent on application to Mr. H. RAYNBIRD, Basingstoke.

THE FLUKE KIDNEY POTATO.—This excellent variety is now planted here as the principal crop, being more free from disease and more prolific than any other in cultivation. It was raised in Middleton, and may be had genuine in any quantity at 8s. per bushel of 56 lbs.—Apply to JOHN HOLLAND, BRADSHAW GARDENS, MIDDLETON, near Manchester.

NONPAREIL PEAS.

WILLIAM FAIRBEARD begs to inform the trade that he is now ready to execute any orders he may be favoured with. This Pen W. F. is confident will become a general favourite both for Garden and Field culture. Price can be had on application. MOUNT PLEASANT NURSERY, GREEN-STREET, SITTING BOURNE, KENT.

THE BEST AND CHEAPEST FOOD FOR PIGS, &c.

PIG RICE, £9 per ton, 10s. per 112 lbs., in bags, containing 16 lbs., fattens Pigs more quickly than barley. Rice Meal, £8. 10s. per ton, 9s. per cwt. Fresh Greaves, 11s. per cwt. WILSHIRE and Co., 2, TALBOT-COURT, GRACECHURCH-STREET.

THE NEW CHINESE POTATO (DIOSCOREA JAPONICA)

MR. JOHN HENDERSON, formerly of the firm of John A. Henderson and Co., Five Apple-place, London, has the pleasure of informing the Public that he has just completed the purchase from M. Paillet, of Paris, of his entire Saleable STOCK of the above introduction from China, the nutritive properties of which are said so far to surpass the ordinary Potato that it is likely, not only to act as an auxiliary, but entirely to supersede that valuable but uncertain excellent.

The most satisfactory results have followed from personal experiments, and proved that when cooked in the ordinary manner, from the large amount of farinaceous properties it contains, it can never become waxy, as is too generally the case with the Potato. Its flavour resembles in delicacy an early ASH-LEAVED KIDNEY; but, independent of the above excellent qualities, there is every probability of its taking a still more important position in the economy of this country; for, when dried and reduced to powder, it is equal to the best ALBION ROOT; or, mixed in the proportion of one-third with two-thirds of wheaten flour, it makes an extremely light and wholesome BREAD, as well as very superior PASTRY.

Messrs. Vilmorin and Co., speaking of it, observe:—"Of all the excellent roots proposed as substitutes for the diseased Potato, the DIOSCOREA JAPONICA is certainly the only important one. It is easily propagated. The tubers are large and long, the flesh very mealy and devoid of any peculiar or disagreeable flavour. The DIOSCOREA JAPONICA is, in our opinion, a precious acquisition."

M. Paillet, Horticulturist, Paris, in his supplementary Catalogue of this autumn says:—"A new alimentary root, introduced into France by M. Montigny, French Consul in China. Serious experiments have shown that this tuber will be much more advantageous to cultivate than the Potato, both in regard to its QUALITY as well as its PRODUCE."

M. Paillet, to whom the Imperial Society of Agriculture and Commerce of France has awarded the sum of 3,000 francs, as encouragement for having brought it into cultivation, also notices that "this tuber attains at least 1 to 2 lbs. weight. In its growth it is less delicate than the Potato, which unfortunately has of late years much degenerated. It does not require particular care, and its abundant produce amply repays cultivation. Its taste is pleasant, and being a root which contains a large amount of FARINA, will be a great addition to the FOOD of the PEOPLE as soon as it becomes generally known. It is so HARDY that it has passed the winters of 1853 in the open ground, without having in the least suffered from frost. It is also found that the STEMS and LEAVES, which are very numerous, form an excellent FOOD for CATTLE."

Tubers, with description of the Chinese Mode of Culture, to be obtained of Mr. JOHN HENDERSON, KINGSKERSWELL, SOUTH DEVON, at the following prices, for each only:—

Four Tubers	£10 0 0
Ten ditto	1 2 6
Fifty ditto	5 5 0
Hundred ditto	10 0 0

Post-office orders are requested to be made payable at Newton Abbot, South Devon. The usual discount allowed to the trade when not less than 10s. are taken.

P.S.—All orders unaccompanied by a remittance will be considered as not received.

SEWAGE CHARCOAL MANURE.

THIS highly fertilising MANURE, which is Peat Charcoal, completely saturated with London Sewage, will be found most efficient for every species of crop, more especially for Peas, Beans, Turnips, Mangold Wurzel, and other root crops. It will produce a greater return for the outlay than Guano or any other manure at an equivalent value; it also possesses the property of retaining its fertilising power longer than other Manures now in use. It may be obtained at the SEWAGE MANURE WORKS, Stanley-bridge, Fulham, at 1 1/2 per ton, and, in quantities less than half a ton, at 8s. per cwt., for ready money only; and in quantities not less than a ton will be delivered at the London Terminal of the Railroads free of charge for carriage. It may also be had from Messrs. G. GIBBS and Co., No. 26, Down-street, Piccadilly, Agricultural Seed-men, Agents for London; and from all the other Agents of the Company.

HORSES taken into WINTER GRAZING and STRAW-YARD, and Cattle to graze, at BEDDINGTON PARK, BEDDINGTON, near Croydon and Croydon, Surrey. Inquire of WILLIAM TUFFS, the park keeper. Some excellent loose boxes for wintering horses are vacant, and can be had reasonable.

NEW FOOD FOR CATTLE.

By which Horses, Oxen, Pigs, and Sheep, are kept healthier, fed quicker, and at a less cost than by any other article now in use.

IMPORTANT DISCOVERY in the TREATMENT of HORSES, since the Eastern War, by Feeding with the CIRCASSIAN SULPHURATED BARK MEAL.—A gentleman, writing to this country, remarks that its effects upon English horses are extraordinary, as it not only feeds them fast, but induces new life into them, fines the coat, purifies the blood, assists the urine, and quickly improves their general appearance. When upon a journey, or after a heavy field-day, the Arabs and Circassians throw 1oz. of this meal into water. This article is most extensively used in racing, hunting, and private stables throughout Yorkshire, and most flattering accounts of its virtues are daily forwarded to Mr. HENRY, the sole manufacturer in England.

Sold in packages of four cwt., at 1s. with full directions for use; 1lb. 6s.; 1lb. 10s. 6d.; 24lb. £1. Forwarded to any part of England, carriage free, upon receipt of order, addressed GEORGE WILLIAM HENRY, FISHERGATE, York.

The extraordinary demand for this article has induced the proprietors to appoint Mr. F. C. YVOCK, 113, BROUGH-ROAD, Southwark, London.

SWINESHEAD ASSOCIATION for the PROSECUTION of FELONS, and for the Mutual Protection of Property.—NOTICE is HEREBY GIVEN, that the Annual Meeting of the Members of the Association will be held at the GRIFFIN INN, in SWINESHEAD, on THURSDAY, the 30th day of NOVEMBER, 1854.—The Directors will meet at Eleven o'clock for receiving Subscriptions, Auditing Accounts, &c. Dinner at Two.

Also that the Directors will meet at the GRIFFIN INN at Six o'clock on TUESDAY Evening, the 8th of NOVEMBER instant, when all Persons having any Claim on the Association are requested to present the same.

W. D. REDDISH, Treasurer.
Swineshead, Nov. 10, 1854.

PROVISION AGAINST DISABILITY by Sickness or Accident, effected with the LAW PROPERTY and LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, 30, Essex-street, Strand.

Example: A person aged 30, may secure an Annuity of £100 a year in case of permanent disability, by payment of only 35s. per annum.

Forms and particulars forwarded to any applicant, by
E. BARNES, Secretary.

REDEMPTION OF MORTGAGES and

LOANS secured by a Policy which guarantees the repayment of Loans at a fixed period, or earlier in case of death, so that the Property may pass unencumbered to the family, by the LAW PROPERTY and LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, 30, Essex-street, Strand. Apply to
E. BARNES, Secretary.

BANK OF DEPOSIT,

NATIONAL ASSURANCE and INVESTMENT ASSOCIATION,
No. 3, FINE MALL EAST, LONDON.
Established A.D. 1841.

Empowered by Special Act of Parliament.

PARTIES desirous of INVESTING MONEY are requested to examine the Plan of this Institution, by which a high rate of Interest may be obtained with perfect security.

The Interest is payable in January and July at the Head Office in London; and may also be received at the various Branches, or through Country Bankers, without delay or expense.

PETER MURKIN, Managing Director.
Prospectuses and Forms for opening accounts sent free on application.

MONEY.—ESTABLISHED 1809.

LOANS from £5 to £50 on the Personal Security of the Borrower, to be repaid by equal Weekly, Monthly, or Quarterly instalments, as may suit the convenience of the borrower. A Form of Application and particulars sent to any part, on receipt of four postage stamps and a stamped directed envelope. Office (private), 16, PENTON-STREET, PENTONVILLE, London.
T. SHUTT, Secretary.

MONEY for INVESTMENT on the personal security (without surplus) of gentleness of responsibility, loans in entailed estates, &c.; also, on reversions or life interests. This is also, on the part of the highest respectability, for which references will be given to responsible parties.

Address to S. V., care of Mr. GRIGG, Bookseller, 13, REGENT-STREET, London, and to whom also references may be made.

HENRY PEAT,
HUNTING SADDLER,
14, OLD BOND-STREET,
LONDON.

LIVERY and COMMISSION STABLES. WILLOUGHBY DEATH FARM, near GRANTHAM.
T. W. GARNER, begs to inform the Nobility, Gentry, and Public in general, that he is, as usual, preparing HORSES for HUNTING. Terms, including livery and riding to Hounds, £1. 8s. per week.

CRIBBITING and WIND-SUCKING prevented by the use of BLACKWELL'S PATENT STRAPS, 12s. and 15s., lined with leather.

BLACKWELL'S PATENTS for SADDLERY, HARNESS, &c., reduced 21 per cent. by improved make and sale. Valuable India rubber Springs for Saddle Straps, Girths, Rollers, Belts, 2s. each. Gutta Percha Jockeys, for Breaking Horses, Biting, Excessing, 3s. to 5s. Spring for ditto, 4s. Springs for bearing, driving, and riding reins, recommended for Ladies' Brides, attached to both bits and one rein. Web Fetlock, Speedy Cut, and Leg Boots. At the Patentee's Saddlery and Harness Manufactory, 259, OXFORD-STREET, near the Marble Arch; Gallery, Crystal Palace; and of all Saddlers.

CHARLES LENNY,
Coach and Harness Manufacturer,
20, NORTH END, CROYDON.

BEGS to call attention to his Broughams, Clarances, Barouches, with his registered not-ess wheel-plate, thus shortening the distance between the wheels, and lessening the draught for the horse, allowing the wheels to lock quite under, and having high front wheels.

G. L. has constantly on sale Cab and Driving Phaetons, Stanhope and single Horse ditto, Pony Carriages, and Park Phaetons. He also solicits attention to his Newpont (Patent) and other Cars, either with panels or wickerwork sides, and to his Bagot Cart, in panel or wickerwork, easy of access, and possessing all the advantages of the Malvern Cart, but less expensive.

He has also a large stock of Croydon Basket Carriages, cheap and elegant, and in every variety of shape, either for sale or building to order, with or without heads, to suit either the Shetland Pony or the Horse.

C. L. would also invite an inspection of his registered Phaeton in basket-work, suitable either for one or a pair of ponies or horses.

Carriages of all kinds let on hire for long or short engagements.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

MAJOR'S REMEDIES for the HORSE.
The best and most effective ever discovered, superseding the "burning iron" and the torture of "cautery."

MAJOR'S BRITISH REMEDY for the Cure of Kingbone, Spavins, Splints, &c. A single bottle sufficient to cure from four to six Spavins, price £1. 15s.

MAJOR'S SINOVITIC LOTION (the Remedy, No. 2), for Grogginess, Weak Joints, Sprains of the Back Sinews, Ruptures of the Sheaths of Tendons, Suspensory Ligaments, Shoulder Lameness, and Inflammation; also for the cure and prevention of breaking down, &c. In bottles, large size, £1. 18s.; small, 10s. 6d. each. The above invaluable remedies can now be forwarded to any part of the United Kingdom. Pre-payment, by Check or Post-office order, made payable to Joseph Major, Post-office, Charing-cross.

Letters addressed to Joseph Major, Horse Infirmary, British yard, Corkspur-street.

Agent for Newmarket, Mr. Thomas Dunning; for Scotland, Messrs. Gardner and Ainslie, Edinburgh; Mr. W. F. Wells, chemist, 32, Sackville-street, agent for Dublin; agent for Glasgow, Mr. W. A. Prestou, 16, Stockwell-street, and 44, Adelphi-street.

A SUPPLEMENT GRATIS, with the WEEKLY DISPATCH, every week until further notice.

The unexampled interest which attaches to every incident connected with the operations of the Allied Armies in the East has determined the Proprietors of the WEEKLY DISPATCH to devote a greater space to the intelligence from the seat of war than the ordinary limits of this, the largest newspaper published, could possibly afford, and with the view of giving the simplest details, they have resolved on the issue of a SERIES of SUPPLEMENTS gratis, which will include every particular of interest connected with the Siege and decision of the contest at Sebastopol, and will be continued whenever demanded by the progress of the Campaign.

By the publication of these Supplements the portion of the paper usually devoted to the incidents of domestic and political importance will be reserved intact, and the engrossing subject of the War will receive the fullest and most varied illustration.

A SUPPLEMENT will be published on SUNDAY NEXT (gratis), and on every succeeding week until further notice.

Orders may be given to all News-vendors in town and country; and to the Publisher, at the DISPATCH OFFICE, 139, FLEET-STREET.

GREAT COMFORT TO INVALIDS.

A FIXED WATER-CLOSET for £1. Places in gardens converted into comfortable Water-closets by the PATENT HERMETICALLY SEALED PAN, with its Self-acting Valve, entirely preventing the return of cold air or effluvia. Any carpenter can fix it in two hours. Price £1. Also, Hermetically-sealed Inodoriferous Chamber Commodes, £1, 4s. 4d., and 2s.; and Improved Portable Water-closets, with Pump, Cistern, and Self-acting Valve. A Prospectus, with Engravings, forwarded by enclosing two postage stamps.

KNOW THYSELF!—The secret art of DISCOVERING the TRUE CHARACTER of INDIVIDUALS from the peculiarities of their HANDWRITING, has long been practised by ELLIEN GRIFFITHS with astonishing accuracy. Her startling demonstrations are both full and detailed, differing from anything hitherto attempted. All persons wishing to "know themselves," or any friend in whom they are interested, must send a specimen of their writing, stating sex and age, enclosing thirteen penny post stamps, to Miss GRIFFITHS, 8, NEWROAD, BARNES, Middlesex, and they will receive in a few days a minute description of the mental and moral qualities, talents, and attainments of the individual, &c., of the writer, with many other things hitherto unsuspected. Miss Griffiths is the most successful graphologist of the day. —Edw. Rees.

CHAFF-CUTTING MACHINES.

AN ILLUSTRATED and PRICED LIST of CHAFF-CUTTING MACHINES will be sent free on application to WM. DRAY and Co., Agricultural Engineers, Swan-lane, Upper Thames-street.

OATS SHOULD BE BRUISED, BUT NOT PULVERISED.

AN ILLUSTRATED and PRICED LIST of CORN-BRUSING MACHINES will be sent free on application to WM. DRAY and Co., Agricultural Engineers, Swan-lane, Upper Thames-street.

ALLEN'S ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE,

CONTAINING SIZE, PRICE, AND DESCRIPTION OF UPWARDS OF 100 ARTICLES.

CONSISTING of PORTMANTEAUS, TRAVELLING BAGS, LADIES' PORTMANTEAUS, DESPATCH BOXES, WRITING DESKS, DRESSING CASES, and other Travelling Requisites, forwarded on receipt of two stamps. ALLEN'S Travelling Bag (patented) has the opening as large as the Bag itself, and therefore possesses an immense advantage over all others. ALLEN'S Registered Despatch Box and Writing Desk, and their New Quadruple Portmanteau (containing four compartments), are the best articles of the kind ever produced.

J. W. & T. ALLEN,

MANUFACTURERS of PORTABLE BARRACK-ROOM FURNITURE, AND MILITARY OUTFITTERS (see separate Catalogue),
18 & 22, WEST STRAND.

WHISTLER'S, 11, STRAND.

GUNS RIFLES, AND PISTOLS

BY EVERY MAKER IN THE WORLD.

SPORTSMEN are invited to inspect
WHISTLER'S

SECOND-HAND STOCK.

They will find a Gun to suit their Shooting, and easy to the pocket.

ANY ARTICLE TAKEN IN EXCHANGE.

WHISTLER, 11, STRAND,

OPPOSITE THE

GOLDEN CROSS HOTEL.

BILLIARD TABLES.

MESSRS. THURSTON AND CO.,

MANUFACTURERS by appointment to her Majesty, 14, Catherine-street, Strand, London, caution their friends and the public against spurious imitations of their Tables, lately advertised by men professing to have left their Establishment. They beg to say that they have not parted with any of their workmen whose services were worth retaining. —N.B. 14, Catherine-street, Strand, is the only house where the THURSTON TABLE can be obtained. Messrs. Thurston and Co. are the patentees of the improved vulcanised Cushions, which retain their elasticity in the coldest climate. Also Manufacturers of the Central Revolving Lamp, the best light ever constructed for Billiard Tables.

WATER POISONED

BY LEADEN PIPES.

"The above engraving represents accurately a section of a leaden pipe, which was employed for a short time in conveying water from a well on the grounds of Mr. Dick, of Bonelurch, Isle of Wight. The original section of pipe is 8 1/2 in. long, 2 1/2 in. diameter, and 5-16 in. thick. A great part of the internal surface is corroded by the action of the water, but, as shown in the drawing, four deep excavations have been made, and another is shaded out of view by the manner in which the section of the pipe has been cut. The water has cut these deep pits almost through the pipe, and not only upon the portion which we have illustrated, but have formed similar cavities throughout the entire length." —Expositor.

N.B.—The corrosive water of the Isle of Wight has no effect on Gutta Percha Tubing. See Testimonial below.

DURABILITY OF GUTTA PERCHA TUBING.

Many inquiries having been made as to the durability of Gutta Percha Tubing, the Gutta Percha Company have pleasure in giving publicity to the following letter from Sir RAYMOND JARVIS, Ventnor, Isle of Wight.

(Second Testimonial)

March 10, 1872.

"In reply to your letter received this morning, respecting the Gutta Percha Tubing for pump service, I can state, with much satisfaction, it answers perfectly. Many builders and other persons have lately examined it, and there is not the least apparent difference since the first laying down, now several years; and I am informed that it is to be adopted generally in the houses that are being erected here."

THE GUTTA PERCHA COMPANY, PATENTEES,

18, WHARF-ROAD, CITY-ROAD, LONDON.

A CLEAR SKIN and BEAUTIFUL COMPLEXION for ONE SHILLING.—LOCOCK'S LOTION. For the Complexion, removes all imperfections of the Skin, giving it a soft, fair, and juvenile appearance. In Bottles, 1s. 1d. each.—LOCOCK'S ORANGE-BLOSSOM TOOTH-POWDER, for preserving the Teeth, giving them a pearly whiteness, arresting decay, and sweetening the breath. In Boxes, 1s. 1d. To be had of Mr. Sanger, 150, and Messrs. Hannay and Co., 63, Oxford-street; and all Medicine Vendors.

TEETH.—By Her Majesty's Royal Letters Patent.—Newly-invented and Patented application of Chemically-prepared White India rubber in the construction of Artificial Teeth, Gums, and Palates.—Mr. EPHRAIM MOSLEY, Surgeon-Dentist, 41, Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, sole Inventor and Patentee.—A new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of CHEMICALLY-PREPARED WHITE INDIA-RUBBER as a lining to the ordinary gold or bone frame. By this application all sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings are required. A natural elasticity, hitherto wholly unobtainable, and a fit perfected with the most unerring accuracy, is secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agent employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose, or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums. The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the Chemically-prepared White India-rubber, and, as it is a non-conductor, fumes of any temperature may with thorough comfort be inhaled and retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell or taste being at the same time wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

To be obtained only at 61, Lower Grosvenor-street, London; 22, Gay-street, Bath; 19, Eldon-square, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

MELHUISE'S WESTERN HUNTING CARRACK SAUCE, for Venison, Stenks, Chops, Hashed Mutton, Game, and all kinds of Meats and Fish, either hot or cold.—On trial of this new Sauce, all Sportsmen will find it one of the best Sauces for giving a zest to their dinner, by imparting a flavour unequalled by any now extant.

Hotel Masters will find it a Sauce universally approved of, imparting a delicious flavour to all kinds of gravies, game, and fish, not requiring the further addition of pepper or salt.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.—One table-spoonful to be added to every half pint of gravy; for steaks, chops, and hashes, a wine-glassful to every half-pint; for hashed meats, and according to taste; for venison and game, double the quantity; for cold meat, pour a little in the plate.

Sold in bottles, 1s. and 2s., the large bottles hold nearly three of the small ones, and can be obtained of Messrs. CROSS and BLACKWELL, Soho-square, London, or of the Proprietor, J. MELHUISE, DRUGGIST, FORE-STREET, TAUNTON, and may be had retail of Druggists or Grocers, on application.

SOUND AND ROBUST HEALTH.

THE Blessing of Health may be enjoyed by every one by the use of KAYE'S WORKS' BELL'S PILLS, which are now universally admitted to be the BEST RESTORATIVE MEDICINE in existence. Their peculiarly renovating and invigorating qualities render them invaluable to all who, from exposure to impure atmosphere, residence in low and damp localities, or from sedentary habits, have become the victims of physical debility or extreme nervous sensibility with their attendant miseries. These Pills, which are wholly composed of Vegetable Substances, are a fine stomachic, a mild yet efficient purgative, and thousands who have tried other medicines in vain have testified to the benefits they have received from their use.

Sold in boxes, at 1s., 10s., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d. each, at the Depot, 81, FLEET-STREET, London, and by all Medicine Vendors.

OYSTERS.

J. SWEETING is happy to inform his Friends and the Public that his Burnham River NATIVE OYSTERS are as fine as last season. He has them six years old, four hours from the beds, at his Fish and Oyster Establishment, 159, CHEAPSIDE, Superior Oyster Rooms, Steed's Ale; Reid's Stout.

THE PEOPLE'S LIGHT!

NIBBS' PATENT OXY-DATE and COTTAGE LAMP produce the Cheapest Oil Light extant. An Illustrated Price List for a stamped envelope. A 1s. Lamp and Wicks free for eighteen stamps. A 2s. 10d. Hand-Lamp and Wicks free for forty-two stamps. Address J. S. NIBBS, Bankwell, Derby.

THE TWO-GUINEA DRESS or FROCK COAT, the Guinea Dress Trouser, and the Half Guinea Waistcoat, made to order by B. BENJAMIN, MERCHANT TAILOR, 71, REGENT STREET, for quality, style, and workmanship, cannot be equalled by any house in the kingdom. N.B.—A perfect fit guaranteed.

THE 16s. TROUSERS REDUCED to 11s.; Trousers and Waistcoat, 21s.; Coat, Waistcoat, and Trousers, 17s. Made to order from Scotch Tweeds, all wool, and thoroughly shrunken; by B. BENJAMIN, MERCHANT TAILOR, 71, REGENT STREET. N.B.—A perfect fit guaranteed.

PERFECT FITTING TROUSERS for 16s.—The most extensive and varied Stock in London, consisting of upwards of 1,000 Patterns, in West of England, Scotch, Angora, &c., all wool, and warranted thoroughly shrunken, are unequalled for elasticity, fineness of texture, and durability of wear, to be obtained only at F. STRAY and Co.'s Registered Trousers Makers, 39 and 40a, HAYMARKET, corner of Piccadilly. Also, their celebrated Loose-sleeved Cape, lined throughout, at 28s., unquestionably the best fitting and most economical garment out this season. An immense stock kept on hand, or to order. The price of every article made, or to measure, marked in plain figures.

HOW TO KILL RATS and MICE by HUNDREDS.—A Receipt may be had to do so (honestly worth £20), without any trouble, by sending Thirty Postage Stamps, and a directed envelope, to MR. WILLIAM FRANKLIN, POST OFFICE-STREET, NORWICH, who will forward it per return, with every instruction, &c.

This wonderful receipt is a fortune to every Farmer, Merchant, or Miller in the world, it will save them pounds yearly, by killing every rat or mouse, either in the field, stack, or house.

EXTRACTS FROM TESTIMONIALS.

"August, 1854.—I was astonished at the efficacy of your remedy for vermin: the receipts are cheap at a sovereign; I use my name if of any use to you." —Frederick Beckham, 37, Burlington-street, Manchester.

"After one dressing we destroyed upwards of 170 rats and mice." —F. Coker, Ware, Herts.

"We have quite cleared our premises from vermin; wish we had known of your receipts before." —H. N. Frye, Charlotte-street, Yarmouth.

FOOD and DIET.—HARD'S FARNACEOUS FOOD for INFANTS and INVALIDS.

"I have carefully examined, and repeatedly prescribed, 'Hard's Farnaceous Food' (see 'Pereira's Treatise on Food and Diet,' pages 319 and 473, &c.), which is prepared from the most nutritious of the cereal grains. It combines both nitrogenised and non-nitrogenised alimentary principles, and forms a very valuable food for children and invalids."

"JOHN PEREIRA, M.D., F.R.S., Assistant Physician to the London Hospital, 47, Finsbury-square. July 1, 1843."

Sold by all Chemists and Druggists, Patent Medicine Vendors, Grocers, Italian Warehousemen, and Confectioners, in 1s. and 2s. packets, and tin cases, 7s. 6d. each. Observe! All genuine packets and tins are signed "JAS. HATTON," and manufactured at the Royal Victoria Mill, Dartford, Kent.

THE PERFECT SUBSTITUTE for SILVER.—The REAL NICKEL SILVER, introduced twenty years ago by WILLIAM S. BURTON, when PLATED by the patent process of Messrs. Elkington and Co., is beyond all comparison the very best article next to sterling silver that can be employed as such, either usefully or ornamentally, as by no possible test can it be distinguished from real silver.

	Fiddle Pattern.	Thread or King's Pattern.	King's Pattern.
Tea Spoons, per dozen.	15s.	25s.	22s.
Dessert Forks	30s.	40s.	45s.
Dessert Spoons	30s.	42s.	48s.
Table Forks	40s.	55s.	64s.
Table Spoons	40s.	58s.	66s.

Tea and Coffee Sets, Whittens, Candlesticks, &c., at proportionate prices. All kinds of Re-plating done by the Patent Process.

CHEMICALLY PURE NICKEL NOT PLATED.

	Fiddle Pattern.	Thread or King's Pattern.	King's Pattern.
Table Spoons and Forks.
Full size, per dozen.	12s.	25s.	20s.
Dessert ditto and ditto	18s.	21s.	25s.
Tea ditto	55s.	11s.	17s.

CUTLERY WARRANTED.—The most varied assortment of TABLE CUTLERY in the world, all warranted, is on SALE at WILLIAM S. BURTON'S, at prices that are remunerative only because of the largeness of the sales—34-inch ivory-handled table knives, with high shoulders, 1s. per dozen; dessert, to match, 10s.; if to balance, 1s. per dozen extra; carvers, 9s. per pair; larger sizes, from 14s. 6d. to 25s. per dozen; extra large, 31s.; if with silver handles, 37s. to 50s.; white bone table knives, 7s. 6d. per dozen; dessert, 5s. 6d.; carvers, 2s. 3d. per pair; horn table knives, 1s. 4d. per dozen; dessert, 6s. 1d.; carvers, 2s. 6d.; black wood-handled table knives and forks, 6s. per dozen; table steels, from 1s. each. The largest stock in existence of plated dessert knives and forks, in cases and otherwise, and of the new plated fish-carvers. Also a large assortment of razors, penknives, scissors, &c., of the best quality.

WILLIAM S. BURTON has TEN LARGE SHOW ROOMS (all communicating), exclusively of the shop, devoted solely to the show of GENERAL FURNISHING IRONMONGERY (including cutlery, nickel silver, plated and japanned wares, iron and brass bedsteads and bedding), so arranged and classified that purchasers may easily and at once make their selections.

Catalogues with engravings sent (per post) free. The money returned for every article not approved of.

39, OXFORD-STREET (corner of Newman-street), 1, 2, and 3, NEWMAN-STREET; and 4 and 5, PERRY'S-PLACE.

CONTENTS.

Chronicle of the Week	1,179
Sport and Sportsmen	1,180
Racing	1,181
Hunting	1,181
Coursing	1,182
Shooting	1,183
Crickel	1,181
Yachting	1,181
Rowing	1,181
Angling	1,183
Sportsman's Library	1,185
Field Sports and Pastimes	1,185
Gardening	1,186
The Farm	1,187
The Country House	1,189
Poultry	1,189
Letter Bag	1,190
SUPPLEMENTS	1,193
Parliament	1,193
Freemasonry	1,193
Feuilleton	1,193
Markets	1,200

NOTICE.

With the first number of the new volume of THE FIELD, and the new year, there will be presented to the Subscribers

THE SPORTSMAN'S ALMANAC,

AND

Country Gentleman's Calendar;

THE FIELD, THE GARDEN, THE FARM,
For the Year 1855.

This Almanac will contain superb Engravings, from designs by ANSDILL, WILSON, and others, with all the information useful for reference in the country house.

N.B.—This will be given to all who are Subscribers to THE FIELD for the year 1855.

ADVERTISEMENTS for "The Sportsman's Almanac" should be sent to THE FIELD Office without delay to secure insertion.

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

RACING.

The Perth John Dory.—The revela question, relative to the Ladies' Plate at Perth, appears to have excited considerable interest in sporting circles north of the Tweed; and a long process of litigation seems to be in view, instead of a ready acquiescence with the decision of the arbitrator, the Hon. Admiral Rowe, than whom no more fitter person could have been selected for the office. The facts appear to us simple in the extreme, and at Newmarket would have been decided in two minutes, and the result published in the Return List of the afternoon. In 1852 John Dory walked over for the Ladies' Plate at Perth races. In 1853 he beat two others for it. In the present year he claims the same privilege that was accorded to him in 1852, the race being continued on for three years under the same conditions. Now, then, the stewards can refuse to deliver the Plate to Mr. Redfern, the owner of John Dory, we are utterly at a loss to imagine. For if they attached any sense to the clause of three horses being compelled to be entered for it, they should have started the point at the race in 1852, when John Dory was alone, entered, and allowed to walk over for it. To expect that the honourable and gallant admiral would enter into an elaborate explanation of his decision is rather too much to expect in so simple a case as the Perth Ladies' Plate; for his experience as a turfite, and his thorough knowledge of the laws of the turf, forbid such an idea for a moment being entertained. For the last twenty years he has been the recognised arbiter of all disputes at Newmarket, and we feel satisfied that any jury would pay far more attention to his opinion than to the construction of the Perth Race Committee. Courts of law are not the places for the settlement of turf disputes, which are much better settled out of doors; and we sincerely recommend that both of gentlemen to at once drop all litigation upon the subject of the Plate, by delivering it up at once to Mr. Redfern, by which means all wrangling will cease, and greater encouragement given to trainers to bring their horses to the Perth Meeting of 1855. Otherwise we are apprehensive that the John Dory will prove an expensive fish to the committee, and be only enjoyed by the gentlemen of the lounge.

Distance post.—The starter's decision is final.

Abbot.—The horse should have been at the post five minutes before the appointed time for the start.

Jon.—Entered, but did not run.

Pricku.—The race you refer to is to be found in the second volume of THE FIELD.

Q. H.—The horse died a short time back.

A. Q.—Won by a length; half a length between second and third.

Doubtful.—The horse was scratched.

H. A.—You lose.

Pedro.—The bet is off.

HUNTING.

H. H.—We refer you to our column of Hunting Appointments.

Truly ho.—Send us the account of the run and it shall be inserted.

Whip.—The defect may arise from imperfect shoeing.

CRICKET.

U.—It would be out.

A. H.—No. Refer to the 23rd law of cricket, which you ought to be conversant with.

N.—Forward the MS., which shall have our best consideration; and, if approved of, shall appear as you wish in our columns.

O. P.—Not out. Why not possess yourself with a copy of the rules, which you can obtain from R. Dark, at Lord's ground?

A Subscriber.—Thanks for your communication. It has been referred to our Cricket Editor for consideration.

YACHTING.

Peak.—The tonnage was raised to eight tons, and not ten tons, as has been erroneously stated.

Singfolk.—We have been on board the Novice, your commodore's schooner. She is not a clipper; but for comfort we will back her against any vessel of her tonnage in any club.

POULTRY.

Quill.—Indian corn is an excellent food for fowls.

Cochin.—Cochin-china hens will lay at a time when others will not.

P. G.—The best food will, in the end, be found the cheapest.

Bantam.—Dampness should be guarded against.

Nest-Egg.—Fit up convenient boxes, filled with hay.

H. X. P.—You cannot have a handsome fowl than the black Spanish.

Pharos.—No doubt of it. On this head the Judges at Cambridge were wrong.

Johnny.—You cannot do better than give them a little root and butter. It is almost an exploded recipe, but none the worse for that.

Norwich.—See a letter from Mr. Baker on the subject in our columns of to-day.

MASONIC.

O. P.—We have received the Masonic Mirror, and want of space alone has prevented our reviewing the second number of this excellent work up to the present time. Next week, however, we shall hope to do the same.

G. T.—Yes; the murdered Mr. Moore was a freemason of high standing, and it is our intention next week to say something of the masonic career of our unfortunate brother.

MISCELLANEOUS.

T. F.—Much obliged. The matter will be attended to.

H. B.—The Turkish one is equal to 2½ lbs. English.

Quassar.—The manufacture and sale of gunpowder is regulated by several statutes. Ours is supposed to be composed of 70 parts of nitre, 9 sulphur, 15 charcoal; but what the Russian powder is made of we cannot say.

J. M. C.—The Act you speak of has been repealed, but some of its provisions have been adopted in the Merchant Shipping Act of last session.

Some changes having been made in the Editorial Departments of THE FIELD, all communications are requested to be addressed, in future, to "the Editor of THE FIELD, Office, 408, Strand."

The Field.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 16, 1854.

CHRONICLE OF THE WEEK.

PARLIAMENT was re-opened by her Majesty in person on Tuesday last, having been summoned especially for the despatch of urgent business connected with the prosecution of the great war in which we are now engaged. Her Majesty's Speech upon the occasion will be found elsewhere.

Although the Opposition have very judiciously consented to waive all mere party warfare against the Ministry, certain explanations have been required and given with regard to the past conduct of the war. In making these explanations, the Duke of Newcastle admitted some errors and denied others. He urged, and with justice, that there never yet was a war in which errors had not been committed, and more especially at the outset; but the tendency of his argument was to show that less avoidable errors had been committed than at the commencement of any former war. In some respects the defence of the Duke of Newcastle must be pronounced to be a failure; especially when he attempted to defend the organisation of the medical corps, and the inefficiency of hospital supplies for the use of the wounded. Incontrovertible facts are not to be overcome by official statements, and the evidence in support of these charges is too complete to be upset by the unsupported statements of the Duke of Newcastle.

The testimony borne on all sides to the heroic conduct of our troops will be gratifying to those gallant hearts. The Queen, the Ministers, and the Opposition, had all their tribute of eloquent praise for the heroes of the Alma and the Inkerman.

The first measure laid by the Government before the House is a bill to enable the militia regiments to volunteer for service in the colonies. This will have the effect of freeing the various regiments of the line now employed in garrison, and enabling them to proceed to the seat of war. For the present it is contemplated only to treat the Mediterranean garrison in this manner; but there can be no doubt that the operation will subsequently extend to Canada and other distant colonies. This bill is now in committee in the Commons, and will probably pass into a law without opposition.

Another measure proposed by Government is a bill to enable her Majesty to raise and drill in this country a legion of foreign troops, not exceeding 15,000. In introducing the bill, the Duke of Newcastle explained that the Government was following the precedent afforded by the levy of the German Legion in 1806. He further said that he was unable to state as yet what particular foreigners would be enlisted; but that, after the bill had been passed, he should at once communicate with the Governments of the various countries in which he proposed to levy the auxiliaries. A violent opposition to this measure, headed by Lords Derby and Ellenborough, has manifested itself in the House of Lords. Lord Derby pointed out the obvious distinction to be drawn between levies among the enemies of the power against which we are at war, and among mercenary neutrals, and characterised it as a humiliating confession, that, with more than 20,000,000 of population, we are unable to send an army of 50,000 men without drawing away the troops from our garrisons abroad, and placing ourselves in humiliating reliance upon foreign mercenaries. When this measure was first announced, it was hoped that Government had resolved upon levying a Polish legion, which would have been a measure acceptable to the country. The bill, such as it is, has gone into committee, where Lords Derby and Ellenborough have pledged themselves to oppose it vigorously.

Public attention is now intently fixed upon the coming disclosures as to the treaty with Austria. The responsible advisers of her Majesty made her declare, in her Speech, that "in conjunction with the Emperor of the French, she had concluded a treaty of alliance with the Emperor of Austria, from which she anticipated important advantages to the common cause." When called upon for an explanation, Lord John Russell said that Austria "had not even yet gone the length of saying that if before the end of the year peace were not made with Russia she would be a belligerent;" but that she had agreed "that before the end of the year she would take into further consideration what steps she would be prepared to take with respect to terms of peace with Russia." If this really be the terms of the treaty, the country will feel inclined to agree with Mr. Disraeli, when he said:—"I say, for one, no Austrian assistance—no four points, no secret article; but let France and England together solve this great question, and establish and secure the civilisation of Europe." There certainly is nothing in the past conduct of the Court of Austria calculated to inspire confidence, but the reverse. She is chargeable with vacillation, with double-dealing, and with having been the cause of freeing the large reinforcements which have been poured into the Crimea. Can we, therefore, submit to make this power the arbiter of peace and war?

In answer to a question put by Mr. Milner Gibson, the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced that it was not the intention of the Government to propose the repeal of the newspaper stamp during the present special session. A pledge was, however, given, to give the subject "the best consideration" of the Government as soon as possible after the Christmas adjournment.

The news from the Crimea this week has been very meagre. Up to the 29th ult. the weather was wet and stormy. The camp was reported to be a sea of mud, and many men and officers had succumbed to the effects of the weather. The Russian line against the French position was very violent, and incessant sorties had been made, which were vigorously repulsed by the French. Intelligence received via Marseilles states that General Canrobert had decided that a great battle should be fought on the 2nd of December, and that a general assault was considered as very near. This, however, is doubtful. It is also stated that, on the 23rd, the English surprised and spiked sixteen guns. Fresh siege works were being thrown up, and the defences of the camp were completed. Reinforcements, both French and English, were arriving very fast, and large quantities of ammunition, and also necessaries for the winter encampment, had been received. Omar Pasha, with 35,000 men, was moving towards Varna, for embarkation to the Crimea. It is thought that the destination of this force is the strait of Perekop, there to prevent ingress or egress of Russian troops into or out of the Crimea.

The Duke of Cambridge was at Constantinople, on his way back to England. The army have to deplore the loss of Lieutenant Thistlethwaite, who died, at Constantinople, from the effects of fatigue. This promising young officer had distinguished himself greatly at the Alma and at Inkerman. Lieutenant Tryn, of the Rifle Brigade, one of the best shots in the army, had been killed by a bullet through his brain. The example of Lord George Paget, who returned uninjured from the Crimea, is reported to have had a bad effect upon the officers; and Lord Raglan has been obliged to issue a General Order forbidding the departure of any officer from the camp without the previous inspection of a medical board. It has also been announced that Lord George Paget is to return to the Crimea without delay.

Some apprehension has been expressed at the contingency of Sir Richard England's succeeding Lord Raglan in the command of the forces. The Times adduces quotations from "Kaye's History of the War in Afghanistan," to prove the incompetency of that officer to fulfil any post of command.

The most energetic efforts are being made at home to despatch reinforcements, provisions, ammunition, and clothing, to the Crimea.

On Wednesday morning, the Wildfire sailed from Liverpool, with railway plant and thirty "navvies," in the employ of Messrs. Brassey, Peto, and Betts, on board. The Duke of Newcastle states that the object is to construct a complete railroad, with stationary engines, for the conveyance of guns and material from Balaklava to the trenches. He also states, that when the contractors accepted the task, they insisted upon having it distinctly understood that they were not to derive one farthing of profit by the transaction—a fact very much to the credit of their patriotism.

Lord John Russell's unsatisfactory, and, it is to be hoped, inaccurate account, of the Austrian treaty exercised a depressing influence over both the French and English funds. In Paris, it gave rise to great dissatisfaction.

Marylebone is yet unrepresented. The nomination of candidates is fixed for Monday. Lord Ebrington and Mr. Jacob Bell occupy the field, the former being the favourite.

A public meeting has been convened by the Mayor of Manchester, on Monday next, with a view of expressing the opinion of the public there upon the conduct of their representative, Mr. Bright, with reference to the war. At a meeting of the Bible Society, held at Rochdale last week, Mr. Bright suddenly appeared, and announced the discovery of a new virtue in the Czar. In reply to a speech made by the Rev. H. Stowell, Mr. Bright said that the Emperor of Russia had remitted the duty upon bibles, and was therefore, pro tanto, a subscriber to the Bible Society. "There had been some reference made to him whom they were bound by law to regard as an enemy. The Czar had remitted all duties upon bibles, and was therefore a subscriber to the Bible Society to the extent of about £300 or £400 per annum, and he was not quite satisfied that it was judicious to speak, in such terms as had been expressed that evening, with respect to a contributor to the Bible Society."

The "sympathy" with the Russian prisoners, as the maudlin lionising mania is called, is certainly proceeding to very disgusting extremities. Last week, there was a ball at the Brighton Pavilion, in aid of the Patriotic Fund. The Russian officers, on parole at Lewes, had the impudence to be present—and an eye-witness testifies to the almost incredible fact, that many of our "sympathising" countrywomen danced with them. Do these officer-mad simpletons know that these men are of the same school with those brutal zealots who stabbed and bayoneted our wounded heroes at Alma and the Inkerman?

News from India states, that envoys from Dost Mahomed and Kokan had arrived in Peshawur, to ask for the assistance of the British Government against the Russians—the Afghan chiefs having decided on an English, in preference to a Russo-Persian, alliance. Lord Elphinstone was in Bombay, suffering from a sun-stroke. Lord Frederick Fitzclarence, G.C.H., Commander-in-Chief at Bombay, and the second son of William IV. and Mrs. Jordan, had died.

From letters received by the Government from Major Herman, her Majesty's Consul at Tripoli, we learn, with the deepest regret, that Dr. Barth, the enterprising African explorer, has died at Meroda, about 100 miles E.N.E. of Sokatu. No date is given, but Dr. Vogel communicates circumstantial evidence which leaves little doubt as to the fact. Mr. Henry Warrington, an Englishman accompanying Dr. Vogel's expedition, had also died at the well El Dibia, some hundred miles to the south of Bilma. Dr. Vogel himself had suffered a severe attack of fever.

A most brutal murder has been committed in the metropolis, under very mysterious and extraordinary circumstances. The murderer is Emmanuel Barthélémy, a Frenchman, who has already been before the public as the survivor in a duel, fought at Egham about three years ago, with a man named Courmet. It will be remembered that great suspicion was attached to the conduct of Barthélémy in that transaction—it having been discovered, upon examination, that the pistol used by Courmet was rendered useless by the introduction of a piece of rag into the breech of the barrel. In the absence of any direct evidence, however, Barthélémy got off upon that occasion with ten months' imprisonment. It is understood that since that time he has been following the business of an engineer, and that in that capacity he became connected with Mr. Moore, soda-water manufacturer, Warren-street, New-road. On the evening of Friday the 8th, he went to the house of Mr. Moore, accompanied by a woman. Shortly afterwards, the servant heard a scuffle; and, on hastening to the spot, saw Barthélémy deliberately shoot Mr. Moore through the head. In attempting to escape through the garden into the New-road, he was prevented by a Mr. Collard, a neighbour, whom also he deliberately shot in the abdomen, of which wound the unfortunate man died in the hospital. A man named Madden then attempted to apprehend him; but he attacked him furiously with the empty pistol, "gonging" him in the face, and cutting off the upper part of his ear. Finally he was overpowered, and taken into custody. The police have not yet apprehended the female who accompanied the murderer, but they speak confidently of being able to do so. Some curious discoveries also have been made in a house at Chelsea lately inhabited by the prisoner. Inquests have been held upon the bodies of Moore and Collard, and verdicts of "Wilful murder" recorded against Barthélémy. The career of this man appears to be traced out in blood. He was one of the red republicans, and escaped from France in December, 1848, after killing a gendarme upon a barricade. Those who are acquainted with him say that he had killed six men previous to the tragedy lately consummated. During his stay in London, he has been a constant attendant at a celebrated fencing-school, where he was remarkable for his skill in the use of weapons of defence. His trial for these murders will probably not take place before next January. The unfortunate man Collard, having left a family unprovided for, public subscriptions have been opened on his behalf. His poor wife, unable to support the mental shock, has died since the murder, making the third victim of this diabolical act. The motive of the murder has not yet been made public.

WHAT ARE WE FIGHTING FOR?

This question is often asked, and it ought to be clearly answered.

The republican and revolutionary party say, we fight to revolutionise Europe, to restore Kossuth, Mazzini, and Louis Blanc, and dethrone Francis Joseph and Napoleon the Third.

Warlike men of peace say, to protect Turkey and the Turks against the invasion of Russia.

In truth, we are fighting neither for the one nor for the other. England does not desire the reign of red-republicanism, either abroad or at home, and the Government of England ought not to leave this in doubt for an hour. The most explicit declaration should be made, that with their consent, this shall not be turned into a revolutionary war.

Let us also thrust aside the sham that we have undertaken the war from a chivalrous devotion to Turkey. England is not Quixotic, and does not desire to be the policeman of nations. If she is to fight the battles of the oppressed Turk, she would be much more bound to go to war for the emancipation of the slaves in America.

Let the honest truth be proclaimed—we are fighting for no other purpose, nor do we need other justification, than to beat back the growing power of Russia, which threatens the independence of Europe.

Within a century this Power has come into existence. Within a little more than half a century it has cast its shadow over the half of Europe. It has laid its hand upon territories four times as large as itself; it has almost secured the Baltic in the north; it had quite secured the Black Sea in the south. It had gorged Poland, Georgia, Circassia; it had partially swallowed the Principalities; it was preparing to suck in Prussia, and, serpent-like, was first covering her with its slaver; it had awed Austria with the weight of its hand, held out in seeming friendship to snatch her from a danger, but with design not to relax the grasp; Sweden has been bullied into silence, and Denmark bribed into neutrality, while Finland and the Aland Isles, audaciously seized, were converted into fortresses whence, at any moment, Russia might blockade the ports of Prussia and Sweden, close the Baltic, and menace even the shores of Great Britain.

This is the true cause of the war. It is to beat back this aggressive and threatening Power that the war has been undertaken. It is for this we are fighting, and we must continue to fight until security is obtained—until the Baltic and the Black Sea are protected against the possibility of further encroachments.

Whoever would divert us from this object is a public enemy. The revolutionary party, in their endeavour to make it a revolutionary war, are only playing the game of Russia. They would sever France and Austria from us, and leave us alone to fight the world leagued against us, with the just rebuke that by aiding red-republicanism we had become the foes of social order. To promote the Kossuth policy would not only be to ally continental Europe against us, but to destroy unity at home; for there is no man who has read history, who regards religion, or loves virtue, who, if he must submit to despotism in some shape, would not prefer the despotism of Russia to the despotism of red-republicanism—who would not rather be ruled by Nicholas than by Louis Blanc or Ernest Jones.

SPORT AND SPORTSMEN.

"Pray, what is a gentleman without his recreations?"

We recently remarked that the present system of handicapping steeplechasers was highly censurable, inasmuch as the flat-racers were favoured by the adoption of such light handicaps that a bona fide hunter had but a poor chance of success; and, as a natural consequence, farmers and others would not enter their horses as they were wont to do: hence the decline of one branch of our field sports, which, if carried out with fairness and honesty, would do more to improve the breed of horses than any other sport extant. As we announced a fortnight ago, the steeplechasers already out are a sorry lot—we may now add, a very sorry lot. We miss the short-legged and well-topped racing-like hunter; and in its place we find a rickety, weedy, leggy animal, "yeleped" "steeplechaser"—to all appearance scarcely fit for a lady's hack. They manage, however, to get over their fences, and with nine stone they can dispose of a first-class hunter carrying the same weight. There is, of course, here and there a good-looking hunter in the steeplechase class capable of carrying a fair hunting weight over four miles across country; but the generality of them cannot go the pace with a flat-racer. It seems to us that the respective handicappers now handicap more for the class of horses just described than for a perfect hunter; that is, if we may judge from the light standard of weights already published. In our opinion, no horse should be handicapped at so light a weight as 9st.—a weight more suited for a flat-racer than anything else. The standard should be higher; for instance, we would allow no first-class winner, aged, to carry less than 12st. 10lb., nor would we admit the worst description of animals, aged, under 10st.; for if they cannot run well up with this weight, they have no business in a steeplechase. Again, under existing arrangements, the "run in" very frequently exceeds half-a-mile, thereby giving a racer ample time to catch and pass a hunter before the latter reaches the winning-post. These, with other partial conditions, convince the farmer or country gentleman that, however good his nag may be, his chance of success will be but a poor one. The present system of handicapping is bad; and unless a competent, paid public handicapper be appointed, and his name published with the conditions, steeplechasing will soon be ranked with the "things that were." Under the present system, some obscure Mr. A., although probably of local reputation, is fixed upon by a committee to handicap the horses, and, with considerable diffidence, consents of course to use the best of his judgment in discharging his duty. Fortunately for Mr. B., who intends to start a horse, Mr. A. happens to be his cousin or particular friend, and, on the strength of the anticipated favour, Mr.

B. puts his "cousin" on at 100 to nil, should his nag be good enough to win. Consequently, an owner who has not the pleasure of Mr. A.'s acquaintance, has 7lb. or 10lb. more put on his horse. Moreover, the exact distance of the ground or course is scarcely ever given, the word "about four miles" being too frequently introduced in the programmes. In some cases, the "about four miles" turns out four-and-a-half miles, and in others three-and-a-half. The exact distance should always be announced, in order that the competitors may be trained to the distance.

We tender these few remarks for the consideration of all steeplechase committees, believing that if they were observed there would be less cause for complaint by owners and others interested in the sport. There are many abuses existing in the management of steeplechase meetings, and the question naturally arises—how will you reform them? We say, let a clever and disinterested sportsman be appointed public handicapper—a gentleman possessing a thorough knowledge of all matters connected with the moves practised in the steeplechase world, and who could devote all his time to the different classes that take place in England, Ireland, or any other country where English horses are engaged. Let the committees select a hunting country for the race, with some good rasping fences, about a mile from the starting-flag, and not within the last mile of the winning-post; and also reduce the distance of the "run in," so that hunters, whose style of fencing may enable them to keep up to the last fence, may have a chance with other horses, whose success alone depends on their speed during the last half-mile. There should never be less than thirty-five leaps in a four-mile race. If these suggestions are adopted, the farmers will again take an interest to breed and run their horses in steeplechases and hunters' stakes. Abuses also exist in the managing and conditions of hunters' stakes, which, by the bye, are fast declining in all parts of the country. The following letter has been forwarded to us for publication, and, as it bears upon the subject, we willingly give it a place:—

SIR,—I read with pleasure "Sport and Sportsmen" last week, containing some capital remarks (evidently written by a practical sportsman) on hunters' races being run away with by flat-racers. It is quite a treat now-a-days to read good practical suggestions—for scarcely a day passes over without a lot of trash from the "prophetic goose-quill sportsman" meeting one's eye. In fine, the "valuable" hints and strictures thrown out by these tailors on the condition, &c. of the "noble animal," are really laughable. There is, however, a class of the community about as learned as themselves in these matters, and who eagerly swallow all they see in print, and exclaim, with the scribbler, "It is an abuse." Bona fide grievances, in which the genuine sportsmen are interested, are scarcely ever alluded to by these "genls"—unless the "betting sportsman" is concerned. There can be no doubt that the decline of hunters' stakes in various parts of the country is in some measure attributable to the facts asserted in THE FIELD. If a farmer has a good promising half-bred, he will not devote either his time or purse to get him fit to run; for these preliminary matters are not done for one flimsy, or two either. Moreover, the stake scarcely exceeds 50 sovs.; and besides, he knows that Mr. Smith, the neighbouring brewer or wine merchant, intends to purchase a flat-racer a few months or weeks previous to the time of meeting, and is aware that if he should be beaten by a nearly broken down flat-racer, the value of his hunter will be considerably reduced. I write from experience on this point. I knew a swaggering young farmer, although a good sportsman, who had bred a fine slashing hunter, worth 250 guineas. He prepared him for the hunters' stakes, and was continually boasting of the speed and capabilities of his nag at the market ordinaries, at one of which I happened to be present. He was continually boring the company about his horse. "Such a stunner never was seen," I thought that I had nothing good enough to beat him, so I resolved (all on the quiet) to look out and purchase an old flat-racer up to my weight. I heard of one which was announced for sale by auction at a neighbouring market town. I attended, and the "old stick" was knocked down to me for £16. He was heavy-looking, and nearly, if not quite, thorough-bred. I showed him out with the hounds three or four times, and we either hungled through or tumbled at the fences. He was then, of course, a hunter, and I got a certificate from the huntsman, and entered him, amidst much laughter, for the stakes. The reputation of the farmer's nag was so great that few horses were entered. I rode my "old stick" in the race, and won the first heat easily, but pulled up lame, my nag having caught a sinew with his shoe. There was half-an-hour between each heat; and I ordered the lad to keep him moving, in order that he should not get cold and stiff. I gave him a sharp preliminary canter, warmed his blood for him, and off we started for the second heat. I was told during the race by the young farmer, that he never went for the first heat, which I believe, for at the distance he put on the steam, and we raced neck-and-neck home, I being just fortunate enough to land my "old stick," who was now pronounced "an out-and-outer," by a neck. As we rode in to be weighed, my rival fairly cried; and, although the conditions of the race could not dispute my being the victor, I felt so hurt to see the mortification of the owner of a horse, bred, reared, trained, and ridden by himself, that I think if we had had to run the race over again I should have allowed him to win it. His remark at the ordinary after the race was a truthful one—"It's not," he exclaimed, "tho' vally o' the stake; but to be beat by a d—d old cripple like that! I'll gie over racing." My nag went fitch so much by a hundred after this "ere go." Farmers and others know that they are likely to have the prize grasped from them in the manner I grasped the one just stated; and this accounts for the decline of hunters' stakes. The question is, how will you sweep away these abuses, and increase the interest and number of starters for these truly sporting spins? Permit me, Sir, to offer these few suggestions:—Let the distance be three miles, and do away with beats; let them carry weight for age (12st. for aged), with penalties for winning; allow no horse that has ever run in a flat-race to be entered; confine them to horses bred within forty miles of the place of meeting, and to those known to have been in the possession of the party at the time of entry not less than twelve months; let a certificate be produced, signed by the huntsman, whippers-in, and six gentlemen accustomed to hunt the country in which resides the owner of the nag intended to be entered, certifying that Mr. So-and-so's horse has been hunted regularly with So-and-so's hounds, and is, in every sense of the word, a hunter.

We perfectly agree with our correspondent, and hope that the above illustration may have the desired effect.

The owners of greyhounds are making complaints both loud and deep against the heavy expenses they are called upon to pay at the various Coursing Meetings. Some parties have gone so far as to state that there are instances where no account of the expenditure can be had from the "officials." Any subscriber to the fund can demand to see an account of the expenses; and if the "official" should fail to supply the desired information, he can be compelled by legal measures. In former days the expenses were but trifling, but they are now considerably too high, and there is every probability of their being raised still higher. The patrons of coursing have the remedy in their own power; and if they decline to reform grievances, the fault rests with themselves. There are five meetings to come off next week; viz.:

PLACE.	COUNTRY.	JUDGE.	DATE.
Limerick.....	Limerick.....	Mr. Owens.....	19 and 20
Cardington (Open).....	Hedfordshire.....	Mr. A. Bennett.....	19, 20, and 21.
Blyton.....	Salop.....	Mr. Warwick.....	20
Dalemain.....	Cumberland.....	Mr. Nightingale.....	20
Market Drayton.....	Salop.....	Mr. Warwick.....	21

Nothing of interest has occurred in the hunting world during the past week. A few days ago Mr. Farquharson's hounds and the Atherton had a tolerably good run; independent of these we have not received anything worthy of note. As will be seen in another part of THE FIELD, one or two packs of harriers have shown some first-rate sport.

Great quantities of wild fowl have made their appearance in some parts of Hampshire, which is indicative of severe weather.

RACING.

DATES OF RACES.

FEBRUARY.—Nottingham.....	20	Nottingham.....	10
Liverpool Spring.....	29	Goodwood.....	31
MARCH.—Doncaster.....	6	AUGUST.—Brighton.....	8
Salisbury.....	8	Brighton Club.....	10
Warwick Spring.....	13	Wolverhampton.....	13
APRIL.—Newmarket Craven.....	19	Reading.....	14
York Spring.....	17	Leaves.....	16
Malton.....	19	York.....	22
Newmarket First Spring.....	23	Egham.....	23
MAY.—Chester Spring.....	1	Derby.....	24
Newmarket Second Spring.....	8	SEPTEMBER.—Warwick.....	4
Shrewsbury.....	10	Doncaster.....	11
Bath.....	15	Bedford.....	18
Epsom.....	22	Leicester.....	19
Manchester.....	30	Newmarket First October.....	25
JUNE.—Ascot.....	5	Northallerton.....	27
Hampton.....	13	OCTOBER.—Chester.....	2
Bilbury.....	20	Wrexham.....	4
Stockbridge.....	21	Newmarket Second October.....	8
Winchester.....	22	Warwick Autumn.....	16
Newcastle.....	26	Richmond.....	17
JULY.—Newmarket.....	3	Newmarket Houghton.....	22
Worcester.....	3	Worcester.....	31
Lancaster.....	6	NOVEMBER.—Epsom.....	6
Liverpool.....	11	Liverpool.....	6
Stamford.....	17	Shrewsbury.....	13

RACING AND RACERS.

For many a long year past we do not recollect so dull a month as the past has been relative to the Derby and the Chester Cup. Formerly the great Cattle Show, which would bring the agricultural members of the turf to Town, or a sudden frost, which would drive the hunting-men from Melton to the bow-window at White's, would cause a host of horses to be made responsible for divers ponies and fillies, but now Mill and Hargreaves, those great professors of the art of book-making, complain, with Otello, "that their occupation is gone," and at the Turf Clubs not a Derby bet has been laid for some time. They take, however, 10 to 1 about Aurifer, for the Two Thousand; and the adventurous spirits will, if we err not greatly, have the worst of their investments when Mr. Clarke pronounces his fiat on the race. For the Chester Cup, singular to state, only one or two animals figure in the betting, which varies strangely from the state of things a few years back, when Cossack saw 12 to 1 before the weights were published, without Mr. Pedley having backed him for a shilling, and which led to the circumstance of that gentleman scratching him by telegraph from Chesterfield, before the parties who had anticipated him in the market were enabled to save a shilling of their money. Now the horse most in demand we believe to be The Reiver, an animal of no mean celebrity, who, as a three-year-old at death's door, was so resuscitated by the elixir of the Yankee Doctor Major, of Charing-cross, that he actually started third favourite for the St. Leger, and made the great West Australian, the pride of Yorkshire and John Scott, put his best leg forward to secure the coveted prize of the Whitewall Stable. Since then The Reiver has never run to his old form; and we are apprehensive, from what we saw of him at Northampton and Doncaster, that he has lost his temper, and become what trainers designate a rogue. He subsequently—to relieve the pecuniary embarrassments of his real owner, a scion of a noble house, whose transactions on the Stock Exchange were made the subject of a fierce debate in the House of Commons—was put up at Tattersall's; and, in the absence of any friends, and amid a thin muster, was knocked down for the absurdly low price of three hundred and fifty guineas. France was stated to be his destination; and whether his new owner fancies he can do as much on the banks of the Seine with him as Jouvence did with his countryman before the aristocratic assemblage of Goodwood, we do not pretend to say; but of this we are satisfied, that no more improbable winner of the Chester Cup is to be found in the calendar, as none of his family could ever stay beyond a mile, and in a struggle he appears determined not to try. His weight, also, however lenient Mr. Topham might be towards him, cannot help being such that a good three-year-old must beat him.

The recent police "crack" against the minor betting-houses of the metropolis, however praiseworthy in a moral point of view, strikes us as having been commenced at a most unfitting period, viz., at a time when but two or three meetings remained in the calendar. Had the efforts of these officials to try the effects of the new law been put in force a month or six weeks earlier, when every greengrocer, valet, and coachman at the West End, was wagering upon the St. Leger, Cesarewitch, and Cambridgeshire, then some good might possibly have been effected; but when they laid their information, scarcely any races were left to bet about, and the "batch of gamblers," as the penny-a-liners termed those who were assembled in "the slaughter-house of Long Acre," seemed to pay as little attention to the homily of Mr. Jardine, as the people of England do to the crude vapourings of Kossuth on the Eastern question. And now we are on the subject of betting-houses, we cannot help remarking how singular it seems that the "ring," who were the loudest advocates for the abolition of the "lists," derive not the slightest benefit from the prayer of their petition being complied with; but, on the contrary, have often sustained a severe loss, as now no money can ever be "got on," except on the eve of a race, or when the horses are at the post. Properly conducted, the "lists" were an accommodation to owners of horses, which was sensibly felt; but when they fell into the hands of swindlers, their abolition was imperative.

The Derby betting, as will be seen by our report, is confined to very few horses, and Grænelus Esuriens, the "great unknown" of Mr. Boves, still continues in office at the head of the poll. All the reports which are so industriously set about to his disadvantage appear only to have strengthened his position; and as it is stated he will not run prior to the Derby, a good winter is alone required to bring him to 5 to 1—if not to a shorter price. His great backer is said to be Mr. Villiers, the intimate friend of Mr. Boves, and who managed the market so well with West Australian for him. Between Mr. Howard—whose stable at the present moment, from his ample pecuniary resources, as well as the judgment of his veteran trainer, Mr. John Day—and the Whitewall division a strong feeling of rivalry for the premiership of the Derby appears to have sprung up, and the result time alone can develop, although, from what we saw the owner of Virago effect with Little Harry in his year, it strikes us he will be laid to beat now. St. Hubert, the foremost of the pair now in the betting, has never yet been out, and in Sussex it is stated that the Two Thousand will give us the first taste of his quality. He was bred by Mr. W. Sadler, of Doncaster, and we well recollect, when the nod of Honest John to Mr. Tattersall consigned him to his care, how many were the congratulations which were offered him upon getting so promising a foal into his hands. His blood being by Surplice (dam a Venison mare), cannot be surpassed in pureness or fashion, and report speaks highly of the speed he exhibited in a spin with the other two-year-olds and Little Harry. Oulston is a public horse of a staying family, and has made but one mistake throughout his public career, and that has since been atoned for. He is supported by some of the first judges of the day, who maintain he is the best colt his dam, the celebrated Alice Hawthorn, has yet thrown. At present, 15 to 1 may be had about him, from those who have not touched him; but from what we have seen going on during the year at Hyde-park-corner, we should imagine that the owner's commission had exhausted all the good money, and therefore we are likely to witness, in May, Oulston's occupying a far better position than he does at present. Lord of the Isles has been rather under a cloud lately; but a noble lord connected with the stable, and who has backed him heartily, remarked at Tattersall's, on Monday, that there was nothing the matter with his Lordship, and that he would be very near winning the Derby. De Clare is, by many, imagined to be the best of John Scott's lot, but although every inch a race-horse in appearance, we entertain as strong a prejudice against his blood, on his dam's side, as we did against that of Dervish, and which proved to be well founded. John Scott was at Tattersall's, on Monday, with Heapy, a draft of young stock, belonging to Mr. G. Hargreaves, of Liverpool; but, beyond a statement that his stables were healthy, he expressed no opinion relative to his Derby horses. Heapy, who looked all to pieces, was bought in, but the Touchstone yearlings fetched fair prices.

Among the trainers some changes are talked of. Hayhoe, for a number of years head lad to John Scott, succeeds William King as private trainer to Baron Rothschild; and Harlock, who has served Lord Exeter so faithfully for such a series of years, will, it is said, have a well-known stud placed shortly under his management. And thus our turf budget for the present week is exhausted.

TATTERSALL'S.—MONDAY.

Chester Cup.
1000 to 20 agst Wild Huntman (laid twice)
Derby.
9 to 1 agst Grænelus Esuriens (t to £100, and afterwards off)	20 to 1 agst Wild Dayrell (t)	25 to 1 agst Cruiser (t freely)
12 to 1 agst Lord of the Isles (t)	25 to 1 agst Bonnie Morn (t)	25 to 1 agst Polydore (25 to 1 t freely)
13 to 1 agst St. Hubert (t to upwards of £100)	40 to 1 agst Alibian (t)	1000 to 15 agst Hambling Katio (t)
15 to 1 agst Oulston (t)

In the early part of the afternoon 15 to 1 was laid to £50 agst Lord of the Isles, and a strong disposition was manifested to back Cruiser and Polydore, but the odds required were not obtainable. 50 to 1 would have been taken to some money about Sir Joseph Hawley's colt by Venison, dam Vexation.

Outs.

12 to 1 agst Bianca (t)

TRUNDAY.

Only the following bets were laid:—

Chester Cup.

1000 to 15 (each) agst Calamus and Honey-suckle

Derby.

600 to 55 and 300 to 25 agst De Clare
650 to 50 agst St. Hubert
4000 to 60 agst Colt by Surplice, dam Clementina

MANCHESTER.—TUESDAY.

At the commencement of business, Kilkenny, who has seldom been mentioned of late, was backed for the Derby for all that could be got on at 100 to 5. Subsequently, however, and after the commissioner had left the rooms, 20 to 1 was laid in ponies, the layer being ignorant of what had previously transpired. Grænelus Esuriens was in a little better odour, 10 to 1 being eagerly taken. 25 to 1 was taken a time or two about Dirk Hatterick. Aurifer, own brother to West Australian, was also in demand at 50 to 1, and in one instance 100 to 10 was taken. 30 to 1 would have been taken about the Reiver for the Chester Cup. 100 to 1 continues to be offered by the small book-makers against anything not previously laid against. Frequent attempts were made to bet upon the Liverpool Steeplechase. 500 to 35 was offered against naming the winner, and there were offers to take 8 to 1 about Mr. Wadlow's lot, or to take 6 to 1 about Messrs. Wadlow and Abraham's lots. The latest quotations were—

Chester Cup.
20 to 1 agst The Reiver (wanted)
Derby.
9 to 1 agst Grænelus Esuriens (t to 1 t freely)	13 to 1 agst De Clare (nom)	20 to 1 agst Cruiser (t off)
100 to 5 agst Lord of the Isles (nom)	20 to 1 agst Wild Dayrell (off)	25 to 1 agst Dirk Hatterick (t)
100 to 6 agst Kilkenny (t)	40 to 1 agst Aurifer (t)

Mr. C. Suowing's yearling by Nutwith, dam Tisiphone, has been named "The Laird of Hazlewood."

Lord Londesborough has, we understand, become the owner of Midsomer, 3 yrs, and Marchioness, 2 yrs, both of which have gone to Scott's stable, Whitewall.

The Roman, and Haunch of Venison are at W. Day's, Woodycates, training for their engagements.

Daley's stable at Newmarket will be represented by S. Stoggles, who is engaged to ride for it.

The SELLING RACE at HARRON.—An objection was raised after the ring broke up by the owner of Blue Stockings against Little John receiving the stakes, on account of his not having been entered in sufficient time, and the case was left open for decision until the meeting at Wolverhampton last week. The question was then gone into by the stewards, and the objection having been made after the race they gave their verdict in favour of Little John; consequently all bets have been paid.

THE WHITEWALL STABLE.—The following authentic statement requires no comment:—During the past racing season the Whitewall stable has won no less than 61 races, amounting to the enormous sum of £30,000, as will be seen by the following particulars:—

Lord Derby.....	Races	Value.
Mr. Boves.....	24	£15,300
Mr. Howard.....	7	3,040
Mr. Howard.....	5	3,385
Lord Londesborough.....	3	2,501
Mr. H. Robinson.....	2	1,100
Mr. S. Murland.....	1	1,075
Mr. A. Nichol.....	1	795
Mr. J. Way.....	2	770
Mr. Newland.....	3	685
Sir Charles Monk.....	4	504
Mr. Montague.....	1	450
Mr. R. Reed.....	2	250
Mr. Walker.....	2	190
Mr. Harrison.....	1	70
Mr. J. Scott.....	3	210
Total.....	61	£30,000

HUNTING.

[We shall feel greatly obliged if masters of hounds will favour us with the results of runs at their earliest convenience, to be forwarded to the Editor, FIELD Office, 308, Strand.]

APPOINTMENTS FOR THE WEEK.

THE QUEEN'S HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Hayes, Adant and Eve; Friday, Farnham Common, at eleven.

THE CHELTENHAM SUBSCRIPTION STAG-HOUNDS.—Monday, Taddington; Wednesday, Cleve Gate; Friday, Pavedown Inn, at half-past eleven.

THE BIDSWORTH FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Wentbridge; Thursday, Horton Pagnall; Saturday, Hindley Common, at half-past ten.

THE E. E. F. H.—Tuesday, Bulmer Plough; Thursday, Marks Hall; Saturday, St. Ann's Castle, at eleven.

THE F. B. FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Stithian's Old Farm House; Wednesday, Curlew Lodge; Friday, Zelah, at half-past ten.

THE EARL OF YARBOURGH'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Pellam's Pillar, at eleven; Wednesday, Newsham Lodge, at eleven; Friday, Blythorpe Hall, at twelve.

THE BRAMHAM MOOR FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Parlington; Wednesday, Church Fenton; Friday, Marston; Saturday, Arthington, at half-past ten.

THE DORSETSHIRE FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Miller's Bridge; Saturday, Kimount, at half-past ten.

MR. DEACON'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Tuell Down; Thursday, Amy Cross, at half-past ten.

MR. TRELAWNEY'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Lenthor Tor; Saturday, Smith Leigh, at half-past ten.

YORK AND AINSY FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Shipwith Bridge; Tuesday, Copman Thorpe; Thursday, Strensall; Saturday, Naburn, at half-past ten.

THE OLD BERKSHIRE FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Colleshill House; Tuesday, Southleigh; Wednesday, Oakley House; Friday, Anlington, at half-past ten.

THE DUKE OF BUCCLEUGH'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Mellerstain; Tuesday, Drinkstone; Thursday, Blakelaw; Saturday, Spottiswoode, at half-past ten.

THE EARL OF WEMYSS'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Sunwick; Tuesday, Newbigen; Wednesday, Cockburn; Friday, Bar-moor; Saturday, Hiral Law Toll, at half-past ten.

THE ALBION FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Stewponey; Thursday, Smeaton Gate; Saturday, Plough, Westou Heath; Tuesday week, Tong Norton Village.

THE EARL OF PORTSMOUTH'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Wasing Park, at eleven; Tuesday, Ham Village, at half-past ten; Wednesday, Three Legged Cross, at eleven; Friday, Stype, at eleven; Saturday, Nutty Wood, at eleven.

THE ATHERSTONE HOUNDS.—Monday, Dorsford Station; Wednesday, Crickets Inn; Friday, Ulesthorne Station; Saturday, Oldbury, at eleven.

H. C. MEYNELL INGRAM'S HOUNDS.—Monday, Spread Eagle; Thursday, Bretby Park; Saturday, Wichnor.

CAPTAIN HAMMOND LEWIS'S HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Red Warf, Pontruet; Friday, Llanddyfuan, Roman Road Top, at eleven.

THE NORTH STAFFORDSHIRE HOUNDS.—Monday, Swynerton Hall; Thursday, Swynall Hall; Saturday, Betley, at half-past ten.

THE WARWICKSHIRE HOUNDS.—Monday, Hampton Lucy; Tuesday, Brilles House; Thursday, Easington Village; Friday, Burton Toll Gate, at a quarter before eleven.

THE HEREFORDSHIRE (MR. HENRI'S) HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Fownhope; Friday, Corne's Bridge, at half-past ten.

THE CHESHIRE HOUNDS.—Monday, Wheatcroft; Tuesday, Wrenbury; Thursday, Ridley Toll Bar; Friday, Ravensmoor.

THE SUMNER UNION HOUNDS.—Monday, the Kennel; Thursday, Smithwood Common; Saturday, Hand Post, Netley Heath, at half-past ten.

THE GORRESMOUTH HOUNDS.—Monday, Cosewick; Tuesday, Hambleton; Thursday, Clippam; Saturday, Tilton Village.

THE WORCESTERSHIRE HOUNDS.—Monday, Gosehill; Wednesday, Tiddesley Wood; Friday, Bishop's Wood, at half-past ten.

MR. DUKE'S HOUNDS.—Monday, Arncott Bridge; Tues-

COURSING.

APPOINTMENTS.
JANUARY.

PLACE.	DATE.	JUDGE.
Church Hill Open, Westward Wighton (Cumberland)	1
Red Dial Open, Westward Wighton (Cumberland)	11
Rigger Club (Lanark)	23
The renewed trial between North-Western and South-Western Coursers, at Lytham (Lancashire)	29 and fol. days

FEBRUARY.

Spelthorne (Wilts)	7, 8, and 9	Mr. Lawrence
Newmarket Open	12
Bigger Champion (Lanark)	13
Baron Hill, Beaumaris (Anglesea)

MARCH.

Caledonian Open (Lanark) ..	15
Bigger Open (Lanark)	27
Ridgway (Lancashire)

BARTON-UPON-HUMBER COURSING MEETING.—
DEC. 5.

Stewards: Messrs. P. Richardson, J. Davy, I. Murkill, J. Egremont, J. C. Thorpe, W. T. Wellitt. Secretary: Mr. R. B. Richardson. Judge: Mr. Watson.

ROWLAND CUT.
Sophy beat Young Sylvan	Surprise beat Feucilla
Riot beat Raven	Lola Montes beat West Australian
Second Two.
Sophy beat Riot	Lola Montes beat Surprise
Third Two.
Lola Montes beat Sophy.

ST. LEGER.
The Little Corporal beat Realty	Ranter beat Bashful
Black Jimmy beat Alma	Doctor beat It's the Matter
Glory beat Duke	Julia beat Duchess
Wide Awake beat Highlander	Emerald beat Colin Campbell
Second Two.
Glory beat The Little Corporal	Ranter beat Doctor
Black Jimmy beat Wide Awake	Emerald beat Julia
Third Two.
Black Jimmy beat Glory	Ranter beat Emerald
Deciding Course.
Ranter beat Black Jimmy.

APPLEBY CARR STAKES.
Warlock beat Daphne	La Gitana beat Kate Collins
Marylass beat Dividend	Smash beat Nancy
Remembrance beat Fury	Mynheer beat Wave
Dear Woman beat Lady Scotland	Self-Defence beat Blye
Second Two.
Warlock beat Merrylass	La Gitana beat Smash
Remembrance beat Dear Woman	Self-Defence beat Mynheer
Third Two.
Warlock beat Remembrance
Self-Defence ran a bye, La Gitana drawn
Deciding Course.
Self-Defence beat Warlock.

KENILWORTH ANNUAL COURSING MEETING.—
DEC. 5 and 6.

Stewards: Rd. Barnes, Esq., T. Harris, Esq., and F. R. Leacroft, Esq. Slipper: Mr. H. Heritage. Secretary: Mr. H. Bursell. Judge: Mr. Tibbett.

This meeting came off at Stoneleigh Park, by the kind permission of Lord Leigh, and a more splendid meeting has never taken place since their commencement. As may be expected, upon such an extensive range of grassland, the hares were very strong, the courses generally well, and several of them severely contested. Every praise is due to Mr. H. Bursell, in getting up these meetings, as also for the superior comfort and accommodation he affords his patrons. The dinner, after the day's coursing, was attended by upwards of fifty, and a more sumptuous and inviting repast could not have been afforded. The celebrated Mr. Bunn, of theatrical notoriety, took the chair, and was in excellent tune, "suited the action to the word." The appropriate introduction to the most loyal toasts given, and his amusing anecdotes, charmed every one, and gave a greater zest to the party. Mr. Heritage, the slipper, was highly commended, and the judge gave satisfaction. The following is a return of the running:—

THE STONELEIGH CUT STAKES.
Moeris beat Lamie	Mortality beat Gohlbeater
Nancy beat Measure	Bowler beat Monarch
Lady beat Ambita	Pilot beat Bessing
Minie Rifle beat Catherine Hayes	Motacilla beat Gaysham
Second Two.
Moeris beat Nancy	Mortality beat Bowler
Lady beat Minie Rifle	Pilot beat Motacilla
Third Two.
Moeris beat Lady	Mortality beat Pilot
Deciding Course.
Mortality beat Moeris, and won the stakes.

THE KENILWORTH STAKES.
Spicy beat Firefly	Habnab beat Grisi
Guy Faux beat Rapid	Spot beat Princess
Little Queen beat It's so Wicked	Gipsy Royal beat Bracelet
Maybunt beat Muley	Grace Dalton beat Fazely
Second Two.
Guy Faux beat Spicy	Habnab absent, Spot run a bye
Maybunt beat Little Queen	Gipsy Royal beat Grace Dalton
Third Two.
Guy Faux beat Maybunt	Gipsy Royal beat Spot
Deciding Course.
Guy Faux drawn, Mr. Gunn having declared to win with Gipsy Royal.

THE ABDEY STAKES.
Harriett beat Gipsy Queen	Bouncing Ross beat Bright Beam
Hardstone beat Ady	Single heat Gipsy
Topper beat Major	Driver beat Monia
Layman beat Jack	Purley beat Humlet
Second Two.
Harriett beat Hardstone	Bouncing Ross beat Dugle
Layman beat Topper	Driver beat Purley
Third Two.
Layman beat Harriett	Driver beat Bouncing Ross
Deciding Course.
Layman and Driver, after an undecided course, divided the stakes.

RIDGWAY SOUTHPORT MEETING.—DEC. 7 and 8.

NORTH LANCASHIRE STAKES.—For dog puppies.
Bonfire beat Nicol Jarvis	Geologist beat Charley
Slug beat Whirlshaw	Deacon beat Gleaner
Glee Shiger beat Sultan	Major Demo beat Privyater
Hetman beat Gameboy	Mandarin beat Marble Hall

day, Barton Common; Thursday, Edgecote Village; Saturday, Helleidon, at a quarter before eleven.

EARL FITZWILLIAM'S HOUNDS.—Monday, Castor Hanglands; Wednesday, Bythorn Toll Bar; Friday, Elton Toll Bar, at ten.

THE ESSEX (MR. HENLEY GREAVE'S) HOUNDS.—Monday, Roxwell; Thursday, Abridge; Saturday, Tyfield, at eleven.

BARON ROTHSCHILD'S HOUNDS.—Monday, Fleet Marston; Thursday, Littlecott, at eleven.

MR. ASHINGTON SMITH'S HOUNDS.—Monday, Crawlboys Farm; Tuesday, Oare Hill; Wednesday, Hursthouse Tarrant; Thursday, Tangle Village; Friday, Netheravon; Saturday, Sperry Well, at eleven.

MR. GARTH'S HOUNDS.—Monday, Hawthorn Hill; Wednesday, Winchfield House; Friday, the Bull, Arborfield, at half-past ten.

THE NORTH WARWICKSHIRE HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Humber Slade; Thursday, Princethorpe; Saturday, the Kennel, at a quarter before eleven.

THE PITCHLEY HOUNDS.—Monday, Rushton; Tuesday, Ashby St. Ledgers; Wednesday, Stamford Hall; Friday, Cottesbrooke; Saturday, Clipston, at a quarter before eleven.

THE HETHOR HOUNDS.—Monday, Chapple House; Wednesday, Burton Gate; Friday, New Barn; Saturday, Shipton Barrow, at half-past ten.

THE LARY HOUNDS.—Monday, the Second Milestone on the Durham Road; Wednesday, Baby Kennel; Friday, Manfield, at half-past ten.

THE PUCKERIDGE HOUNDS.—Monday, Boint Pelham; Wednesday, Widdington; Saturday, Layston, at half-past ten.

MR. WHEBLE'S HOUNDS.—Monday, Harpstone House; Tuesday, Ashmsted; Thursday, Padworth House; Friday, Blade Bone, Buckelbury, at eleven.

THE EARL OF LONSDALE'S HARRIERS.—Friday, Broughton Farm, at twelve.

THE CARLISLE HARRIERS.—Tuesday, Wetheral; Friday, Halfway House, Dalston Road, at ten.

IRELAND.

WARD UNION STAG-HOUNDS.—Monday, Eight-mile-stone, Ashbourne-road; Wednesday, Kilbride; Friday, Blackhall, at one.

THE CARLOW AND ISLAND FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Ballymore; Wednesday, Cooper's Hill; Friday, Timrick, at eleven.

MR. GODFREY BALDWIN'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Cashel; Thursday, Kilanure, at ten.

THE DULEEK FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Calpe; Thursday, Hawkinstown, at eleven.

MR. DENNIS'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Millbrook; Thursday, New-forest, at eleven.

THE EYECOURT FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Heathlawn; Friday, Ballymore Castle, at eleven.

THE GALWAY FOX-HOUNDS (the Blazers).—Saturday (this day), Annagh; Tuesday, Tullym; Friday, Abbert, at eleven.

MR. CHARLES MAHON'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Turin Castle; Thursday, Ballintubber, at eleven.

MR. NAGHTON'S FOX-HOUNDS (the Koh-i-Noor).—Monday, Milltown Park; Thursday, The Kennel, at eleven.

THE KILKENNY FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Lodge Park, near Freshford; Friday, Shankill Castle, at eleven.

THE MUSKERRY FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Nowceston; Thursday, Kileaskin, at half-past ten.

THE ROUTE FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Croagh; Friday, Ballymoney, no time stated.

THE TIPPERARY FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Gaile House; Friday, Knockelly Castle, at half-past eleven.

THE WESTMEATH FOX-HOUNDS.—Saturday (this day), Roosmoade; Wednesday, Rabarney; Saturday, Bunhrusna, at eleven.

THE WEXFORD FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Ballysopp; Friday, Coolhawn, at eleven. Should the weather prove unfavourable, the hounds will meet next day at the Kennel.

MR. BIDDULPH'S HARRIERS.—Monday, Black Lion; Friday, Derrydalney, at eleven.

THE KILMACUD HARRIERS.—Monday, Eight-mile-Stone, Bray Road; Thursday, Belgart, at eleven.

THE LOUTH UNION HARRIERS.—Saturday (this day), Castleown; Wednesday, Ballykelly; Saturday, Knockbridge, at eleven.

THE PALMERSTOWN HARRIERS.—Saturday (this day), Barberstown Bridge; Wednesday, Peamount; Saturday, Mayne, at twelve.

MR. TYRRELL'S HARRIERS.—Monday, Kilrany Hill; Friday, Ballinacross Roads, King's County, no time stated.

THE TYNAN HARRIERS.—Monday, Rowsfort; Thursday, Madin Police Barracks, at eleven. Should the weather prove unfavourable, the hounds will meet next day at the Kennel.

THE WICKLOW HARRIERS.—Monday, Glencaly; Friday, Kilcool, at eleven. Should the weather prove unfavourable, the hounds will meet next day at the Kennel.

MR. FETHERSTONHAUGH'S BEAGLES.—Tuesday, Tyrrell's pass; Friday, Kilbride Cross-roads, at eleven. Should the weather prove unfavourable, the hounds will meet next day at the same place.

SALE OF HUNTERS IN DUBLIN.

The following horses, the property of Richard H. Reynell, Esq., who has given up hunting, were sold at Dyce's, on Thursday week, and realised the following prices:—

The Kaffir Queen, six years old, by Brown Molton, dam by Cupbearer; up to 16st.—Capt. Newman, 125 guineas.

Prince Patrick, five years old, by Brown Molton, out of Victoria; up to 15st.—George Pollock, Esq., 115 guineas.

The Emperor, six years old, by Blackfoot, dam by Cockahoot; up to 15st.—Mr. Bywater, 95 guineas.

Bay mare (thorough-bred), five years old, by Brown Molton, dam by Blackfoot.—60 guineas.

Princess Louisa, four years old, own sister to Prince Patrick.—R. Fowler, Esq., 58 guineas.

Tippity Witchett, five years old, by Verulam; up to 12st.—Joseph Shackelton, Esq., 36 guineas.

PHEASANTS.

SIR,—In an article on the Christmas trees exhibited in the Crystal Palace, mention is made of some beautiful pheasants (phasianus torquatus) that were presented to her Majesty by a gentleman on whose estate they were shot, and stating that it was supposed to be the only locality in which they were to be found in this country. I beg to say this is an error, as they have been bred in great numbers on the estates of the Earl of Stamford, both at Kenville-hall and Bradgate-park, many beautiful specimens having been shot this season.

—Yours obediently, A SUBSCRIBER.

LAST WEEK the South Oxfordshire Hounds threw off on the Brightwell estate, the seat of Wm. Lowndes Stone, Esq., when there were upwards of 100 horsemen assembled in the park. On account of the unfavourableness of the morning they had little sport till about half-past one o'clock, when they drove master Reynard out of the Holcombe cover, when he made off at pretty good speed towards Chalgrove, leaving the "Hampden" monument to the right, and across the fields to Wharpsgrove, through the Gorse belonging to the Earl of Macclesfield, up Mr. Treadwell's hill out to Tetworth and Darinies, and through Thame Park to Sydenham, where they "lost," and the sport terminated.

CAMBRIDGESHIRE HUNT.—These hounds met lately at Kuesworth; and after drawing the "Spineys," they trotted off to Rouse's; no sooner in cover than a fox was on foot, but not liking to face so large a company, who had carefully distributed themselves all round the cover, so as to leave no chance for him to break, the Squire exercised his authority, and cleared one corner, from which Reynard broke, with the best pace went to Gil Rags, through which he went, crossing the Potten-road, when being headed by some plough people, he again went to Gil Rags; and after several turns round this cover, he broke, evidently intending for the earths in the Bottoms towards Croydon. These, however, had been carefully stopped, and he again crossed the Bottoms to Rouse's, straight through the cover, along the meadows pointing for Wendy, but here away to the left, crossed the road into Wimpole avenue, and all through Cobbs, his destination; but he then bore away for New Wimpole, at the back of Orwell village, and was eventually run into, in gallant style, in Barrington village.

THE BADSWORTH HUNT.—The Badsworth hounds had a splendid run on Tuesday last. The meet was at Hampole, and the close the field was "riddled out" to a select few of the right sort.

A GOOD DAY WITH HIS GRACE THE DUKE OF CLEVELAND'S HOUNDS.—On Friday, the 8th instant, these hounds met at Middleton Tyas, on the Yorkshire side, with a goodly muster of the right sort, several gentlemen from the Bedale and Hurworth Hunts being present. At eleven o'clock his Grace arrived, and gave Cox the huntsman orders to try Lisle Gorse, which happened to contain one of the right sort; and both the horn, and a note from a few of the favourites, told us to draw our girths up an extra hole; but Charley, not having an opportunity of showing himself for a few minutes, rather hung in cover; but, finding it too hot, he was obliged to break, and away, taking a direct line for Hannah, bearing to the left by Allen's Gorse, keeping a direct line for Cleasby; being headed, turned to the right by Stapleton, trying Monk End earths, but no admittance; took away over Croft Race course, crossing the Richmond and Darlington-road by Croft Castle, over the Great North of England Railway, at a railway pace, crossed the North-allerton-road by Dalton; being now into the Hurworth Hunt, and putting his head straight for some main earths, near to Eryholme, but was gallantly pulled down in the open, within a field of them. Time, one hour and fifteen minutes. Out of the large field assembled at the start—

"There were but few

That saw them run from scent to view."

Great praise was given to Cox the huntsman, and his two able whips, H. Sebright and J. Woody.—Yours,

AN EYE-WITNESS.

THE BRIGHTON HARRIERS met on Saturday, at the Dyke. Found the first hare near Sedlescombe, which was soon captured. Moved another close by, going away for Giles's Bottom, West Hill, doubled back to Saddlescomb, Pond Brow, crossed the Dyke Road for Bentfield's Bottom, turned to the left for the Dencher Furze, where the hounds got a view and killed, being a very pretty burst of thirty minutes. A third hare started immediately afterwards, making for the Dyke Road, Water Hill, Green Deau, Barconah Gorse, nearly to the rail, headed back to the furze, and was killed. The hounds were then taken to a shepherd's hare in West Bottom, going away at score for High Dale, Green Dean, Barn Coomh, North Heath, to the London line, running parallel with that to the bridge at Seare Hill, where she was headed, turning to the right over Sweet Hill, Water Hall, to the Dencher Furze, doubled back to Green Dean, where she squatted in a piece of turnips, starting away a view over the foil for Giles's Green, where they lost amongst the rabbits, after an excellent run of one hour and a-half. Met on Monday at Patcham. Could not do anything at the north part of the meet, on account of the frost; but had two sharp bursts from Patcham, though, unfortunately, both hares took to the Park.

A GOOD DAY'S SPORT WITH MR. TREGONWELL'S HARRIERS.—On Saturday the 2nd, this clever little pack, consisting of couples of dwarf fox bitches met at "Harley Gap," with a field of about twenty horsemen. A hare was soon started on Mr. Ford's farm, and after a sharp struggle reached the favourite cover of "Harley," now almost hardless. Here "Pussy" vainly endeavoured to shelter herself, but at length broke away gallantly over Thorney Down and into the drove leading to higher "Gussage," where the pack getting a view, pulled her down in the open. After drawing a fallow, and some turnips, an outlying hare was found in a field adjoining the Blundford turnpike at "Cashinoor," the hounds working her a good ring or two in the enclosures near "Gussage," when putting her head straight down wind, she led over the fine downs to Lord Shaftesbury's Fir belt, and leaving "Harley" on the right, kept "forward" at a rattling pace o'er field and down right into St. Giles's village, the hounds running her down the road and making a beautiful hit into the meadows by Mr. Waters's house, crossing the brook and up the fields nearly to "Bottle Bush." Here, however, this gallant "Puss" was viewed, "dead beat," and the pack closing in, a who-whoop! resounded, after as good a forty minutes' gallop without a check as could be desired, the last five miles being almost as straight as a line across the country.

"WHAT SHALL WE HAVE WHO KILLED THE DEER?"—A few days ago, two notorious poachers from Forfar, named Frederick Thom and John Stewart, were apprehended on the estate of Mr. Chalmers of Aldhar, having in their possession a deer each, and were brought to Brechin, where they were identified and set at liberty in the meantime.

MR. THOMAS DUNCOMBE, M.P.—This gentleman has been for some time in a precarious state of health at Brighton. It is feared that he will be unable to attend to his parliamentary duties during the present session.

ABINGDON ELECTION.—The election terminated on Tuesday in favour of Major Reed. There was a good deal of excitement during the day, and some skirmishes occasionally took place between the partisans of the two candidates, but no serious injury was inflicted. At the close of the poll the numbers were,—Major Reed, 125; Mr. J. T. Norris, 117;—majority for Major Reed, 8.

CRICKET.

OUR GLANCE AT THE SEASON 1854.

NO. II.

Proceeding with our "Glances," we arrive at the second match of the M.C.C. season, which was played at "Lord's" on Monday, the 22nd of May, and was, like its predecessor, a "one day's match." The respective sides were again selected by the Earl of Winterton and Mr. Kynaston, and it will be seen that the latter won by 45 runs on the first innings, the numbers being—Mr. Kynaston's side, 83 and 195; and the noble earl's side, 48 only. In the second innings of the hon. secretary's team, the bowling was transferred from Pollett and Royston, the two players on the opposite side, to Mr. Benson and Mr. Haygarth, and, as these gentlemen were not in over-good practice, the large results we are about to mention accrued. In the first hands 83 was the total, including two double scores (those of Mr. Wynyard, 19, and Mr. G. Barker, 10); but, in the second, the amount was 195, with no fewer than seven double figures. Of these seven Mr. A. Baillie stood at the numerical head, scoring 49; Mr. G. Barker came second on the list, with an offering of 23, followed by Mr. Wynyard with 22, whilst Mr. W. J. Christie carried off his bat with 20 marked up to him; Mr. H. Hayley gave 19, Mr. Du Cane 18, and Mr. C. Greville obtained 14 (not out). The winding-up line of the score exhibited 17 in the shape of byes, &c. The only score above one figure on the side of the noble earl was that of Mr. Haygarth, who contributed 14. The next match of the M. C. C. was that which accompanied the annual visit of some of its members to Cambridge, where, on Fenners' ground, they met the University Eleven. This was all but a one-handed matter, seeing that, with their two innings, the Cambridge men were only able to "tie" the one hands of the M. C. C. The former scored 66 and 101, or 170; the latter placed the same total on the score paper in their first innings, so that they had only a single run to make in their second to obtain the honour of winners. There were three double scores in the Cambridge's first, and five in their second hands. Of these, Mr. W. M. Leake gave 16 and 0, Mr. A. R. Ward 7 and 15, Mr. J. McCormick 1 and 17, Mr. R. A. Clement 10 and 16, Mr. Johnson 12 and 13, and Mr. Fitzgerald 1 and 20. The "byes" line in these innings stood thus, and speaks much for the "long stop": Leg bye 1, and other byes 2, legs 2, 4, or 5. A contrast of an unfavourable character will present itself when the same "item" is referred to in the M.C.C. score. The 170 of the great Metropolitan Club combined six doubles; namely, Mr. W. Nicholson 61, Mr. P. Knight 24, Mr. A. D. Bonnel 12 (not out), Dean 11, Mr. J. Walker 10, and Grundy 10. At the head of the score, however, stood, in regard of amount, "byes and wide balls," 11 of the one and 15 of the other, with 4 "leg byes," constituting a total of 30. We had hoped that the representatives of this University would have made an improvement in this respect, inasmuch as that, by the absence of the proper amount of care and skill in those departments of the game, their chances of success must, to a certain extent, vanish. Why will they not take a lesson in bowling from the steadiness of Dean and Grundy, and other professionals? Such a course would serve them not in the University matches alone, but in all future contests wherein they may take part. Moreover, the improvement and consequent success would add a laurel to their college which at present in these days it does not possess. The M.C.C. were the victors by 10 wickets. The match was played on Thursday and Friday, May 25 and 26. The witness of the following Monday, May 29, prevented the contest with the St. John's-wood Club from taking place, and therefore it was not until June the 5th that "Lord's" ground was again the scene of any further public contest. The M.C.C. committee, however, put forth the undermentioned well-considered notice:—

The committee of the Marylebone Cricket Club consider that it is desirable that, before the commencement of every match, some person should be nominated as the acknowledged manager of each side; and being anxious that the new laws with respect to substitutes should be carried out in a spirit of fairness and mutual concession, suggest that substitutes may be allowed in every case where a reasonable cause is given for the absence from the field of the principal. With a view to carry out this recommendation, the committee wish their umpires, in case a substitute should appear in the field, to inquire whether the consent of the manager of the opposite side has been obtained as to the person acting as substitute, and the place in the field which he may occupy.

This intimation in its early part has reference to the new rule 32:

"In all cases where a substitute shall be allowed, the consent of the opposite party shall also be obtained as to the person to act as substitute, and the place in the field which he shall take."

Complaints having been made to the committee that some persons, when at the wicket, are in the habit of making holes in the ground for a footing, they are of opinion that the umpires should be at liberty to prevent this practice, if they consider that it in any way interferes with other strikers.

The first grand match of the metropolitan season was opened at Lord's, on Monday, June the 5th, and was thus entitled, "Nottinghamshire v. England," a match which being so abundant in excellence, attracted, as was confidently anticipated, a large assemblage of spectators. The weather, however, was far from producing satisfactory cricket days, or the amount of lookers-on would have been prodigiously swollen. The sides, on this occasion, presented some features of novelty, for while in the England Eleven the name of Lockyer was substituted for that of Box, as wicket-keeper, so was that of Brampton inserted in the place of Guy, for Nottingham. The contest, as it progressed, was one of events. In the first place, Nottinghamshire, which, in the preceding year, had gained the victory by 27 runs, in this instance lost it by 59 runs—a total, which, but for the following accident, would, in all probability, have been materially increased. In accordance with the regulations of the M.C.C., the dinner-time is limited to half an hour—a circumstance which would appear to have escaped the recollection of Lockyer—even supposing he, being a young one, had ever been made acquainted with the fact, and, therefore, when at the expiration of the half hour the bell sounded for the resumption of the game, Lockyer, who was one of the batsmen in, was not forthcoming, and so he lost the remainder of his innings, in pursuance of the laws of cricket. He had previously scored 26, in his usual bold style. The next event of an unusual nature which arose in the match was that of Caesar's "run out." He had a substitute to run for him; and in one part of his innings, Caesar ran as well as his substitute (Buttress); and a short time afterwards, having made a drive off Clarke, he again ran, but his substitute remained at home. Caesar made the run; but Clarke, nevertheless, put down, and claimed the wicket, as the wrong man had run. The incident gave rise to much discussion, and at length it was resolved in the pavilion, by the leading members of the club in attendance, that Caesar should lose his wicket. And so his wicket was sacrificed to what may be ascribed his want of thought at the moment; for, having an admitted substitute to run for him, he had no right to make the run himself. There were many around the ground who entertained the opinion that of the two wickets, Wisden's should have been the one which should have yielded. Taking the match throughout, there were many instances of as fine play as can well be conceived, and yet there were some acts in the field which we have seen far better accomplished. The totals were—England, 159 and 117, or 276; Nottinghamshire, 115 and 102, or 217—the county thus losing by 59 runs. The double numbers were from the bats of Denn, 25; Casslyn, 6 and 36; Vernon, 19 and 9; Anderson, 18 and 21; Lockyer, 26 and 1; Adams, 13 and 9; Wisden (not out), 25 and (not out) 11. On behalf of the county, the two-figured scores were: Parr, 39 and 55; S. Parr, 35 and 1; R. C. Tinley, 14 and 0; A. Clarke, 8 and 11; and C. Brown, 6 and 11. The second innings of Parr was about as brilliant a specimen of batting as was ever witnessed at Lord's, or anywhere else; and at its termination he was called up to the pavilion and presented with a new ball by the Earl of Winterton, in the name of the Marylebone Club, as an honorary reward for the fine play he had exhibited.

Oxford was the scene of the next M.C.C. match, and there the representatives of the club were destined to sustain a defeat, notwithstanding they were aided by the efforts of three players—all of them bowlers, and bowlers, too, of no very small repute. There are occasions, however, when the best bowling, unassisted by effective batsmen, fails to gain the day.

The M.C.C. took the bat in the first instance, and continued to wield that instrument of defence and punishment until they had obtained a score of 121, towards which amount Dean contributed 36; Mr. A. Wilson, 28; Mr. G. W. Barker, 19; and Nixon, 11. The Undergraduates then went to the wicket, and were all removed with a score of just 20 less than that made by their opponents. Of this total, Mr. W. Fellowes gave 45; Mr. W. G. Armitstead, 15; and Mr. A. F. Payne, 13.

In their second innings, the M.C.C. were unable to score more than 63, having but two double figures—those of 20 by Grundy, and 12 by Dean. The University, therefore, had to go in for 84 to win—a number they accomplished with three wickets to spare. Mr. C. D. Marsham carried off his bat, having obtained 30, including a 7 for a drive off Dean, whilst Mr. E. L. Bateman presented 27, and Mr. E. Balfour 13. This match was played on Thursday and Friday, the 8th and 9th of June.

On the following Monday, the 12th, the Surrey Club sent up to "Lord's" eight gentlemen and three players, to contend against eight gentlemen of the M.C.C. and three players. In this engagement the county got sadly worsted, for they were defeated in one innings by 47 runs—a result heavier than we had looked for, although we had not anticipated a victory for Surrey, seeing that, in consequence of the proceedings of the Duchy of Cornwall, the members of the Surrey Club had not been able to take their accustomed practice at the Oval. There was, nevertheless, some beautiful play on both sides. The M.C.C. scored 154: Grundy contributing 11; Mr. Broughton, 26; Mr. F. Walker, 25; Royston, 15; and Mr. Haygarth, 10. On the Surrey side the largest score in the first hands was an 8, of which there were two—one given by Mr. Rogers, and the other by young Mortlock. In their second innings, the latter and Stephenson each obtained 12.

It was about this period that we received an intimation that Eleven of the M. C. C. members, who had gone forth to do their country's battle in the East, had played a match adjoining the tented field at Scutari, and furthermore, that they had gained the day by 38 runs upon the first innings. It was impossible for the contest to be carried on to its full conclusion, in consequence of several of the "camp" Eleven being under orders to set sail on the succeeding day for Varna. The M.C.C. consisted of Mr. S. T. Blane, of the Scotch Fusilier Guards; Mr. G. Goodlake, of the Coldstream Guards; Mr. F. Bathurst, of the Grenadier Guards; Captain King, of the 49th Regiment; Lord Balgonie, of the Grenadier Guards; Captain the Hon. W. Coke, of the Scotch Fusilier Guards; Lord Guernsey; Captain Buckley, of the Scotch Fusilier Guards; Captain Kinlock, of the Grenadier Guards; Captain Crawley, of the Coldstream Guards; and Mr. S. Damer, of the Scotch Fusilier Guards. These played against Eleven officers, who ranged themselves under the title of "The Camp." The former, however, carried off the laurels, as already stated—scoring 152 against 113 obtained by their opponents. The most successful batsmen among the M.C.C. were—Captain Buckley, who made an offering of 57; Captain Crawley, 21; Mr. Blane, 16; Captain Kinlock, 14; and Captain King, 10. On behalf of "The Camp," the leading scores were those of Captain Armstrong, 20; of Sir D. Young, 17; and Mr. Buchanan, 13.

A FEW DAYS AGO the Duke of Hamilton and party had some first-rate sport on his Grace's woods and grounds. On one day ninety hares were killed, and on another 193 hares, thirty rabbits, besides pheasants, &c.

YACHTING.

NOTICE.

All Fixtures, Reports, Intelligence, or Communications relating to Yachting are requested to be addressed to "the Editor of THE FIELD, at the Office, 408, Strand."

HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE.

DATE.	TIME.	DATE.	TIME.
Dec. 17, Sunday	11 50	Dec. 23, Monday	6 0
" 18, Monday	0 15	" 24, Tuesday	6 54
" 19, Tuesday	1 1	" 25, Wednesday	7 52
" 20, Wednesday	1 10	" 26, Thursday	8 55
" 21, Thursday	2 34	" 27, Friday	10 1
" 22, Friday	3 37	" 28, Saturday	11 5
" 23, Saturday	4 18	" 29, Sunday	0 9
" 24, Sunday	5 8

To find High Water at the subjoined places, take the above time at London Bridge, and add or subtract the time in the following Table.

PORTS FROM WHICH DISTANCE.	ADD TO LONDON BRIDGE.
Brighton	3 0
Boulogne	5 41
Calais	5 29
Cherbourg	5 33
Cowes	5 33
Dover	5 35
Harwich	5 37
London	5 37
Lowestoft	5 37
Margate	5 39
Norwich	5 43
Orford	5 43
Portsmouth	5 47
Ramsgate	5 47
Shoeburyness	5 47
Southampton	5 47
Spilhead	5 47
Amsterdam	0 53
Antwerp	0 53
Breda	1 39
Brussels	1 39
Cherbourg	5 53
Fairford	6 53
London	6 53
Rotterdam	6 53
Torkey	6 53
Weymouth	6 53
Wharfedale	6 53
Youghal	6 53

CLUB MEETINGS, 1854.

December 18.—Monthly Meeting of the Royal London Yacht Club.
December 20.—Meeting of the Liffey Club.
December 27 (Wednesday).—Full Meeting of the Liffey Club, being the last for the year 1854.

THE NEW YEAR, 1855.

January 11.—Annual Ball of the Prince of Wales Yacht Club, at the Freemasons' Tavern.
February 14.—Annual Balls of the Royal London Yacht Club, at Willis's Rooms; and of the Royal Thames Yacht Club, at the Hanover Square Rooms.

THE QUEEN'S NEW STEAM-YACHT.—The middle of January, probably the 15th, as the tides then suit, has now been definitively fixed as the period of launching her Majesty's new steam-yacht, the Windsor Castle, now building at Pembroke. A report is current that her Majesty will honour Pembroke with a royal visit, and that the vessel will be named by her Majesty or some member of the royal family. As yet, however, no intimation of such an event has been given. Should the Queen honour the dockyard with a visit, she would be the guest of the Earl of Cawdor, whose seat, Stackpole-court, is not far distant. The men are now working from dawn to 9 p.m. on the vessel.

ANGLESEY YACHT CLUB.—The monthly meeting of this club was held at the New Club-house, Ashley's Hotel, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, on Tuesday last, Commodore Chubb in the chair. The arrangements at the new house gave general satisfaction to the members, who passed a most convivial meeting. Vice-Commodore Knibbs, of the P.W.Y.C., was present, and signified his desire to promote the success of the club by all the means in his power. Messrs. H. F. Griffin, 24, Cornhill, W. James, Brewer's-quay, and G. Spencer, Brewer's-quay, were proposed for next ballot.

BIRDS AND SHIPS.—A bird is a model ship constructed by the hand of God, in which the conditions of swiftness, manageability, and lightness, are absolutely and necessarily the same as in vessels built by the hand of man. There are not in the world two things which resemble each other more strongly, both mechanically and physically speaking, than the carcass and framework of a bird and a ship. The breast-bone so exactly resembles a keel, that the English language has retained the name. The wings are the oars, the tail the rudder. That original observer, Huber the Genevese, who has carefully noticed the flight of birds of prey, has even made use of the metaphor thus suggested to establish a characteristic distinction between rowers and sailors. The rowers are the falcons, who have the first or second wing-feather the longest, and who are able, by means of this powerful oar to dart right into the wind's eye. The mere sailors are the eagles, the vultures, and the buzzards, whose more rounded wings resemble sails. The rowing bird is to the sailing bird what the steamer that laughs at adverse winds, is to the schooner, which can not advance against them.—New York Spirit of the Times.

ROWING.

* * We shall feel obliged by the Secretaries of "Rowing Clubs," and others forwarding their Appointments of Matches or Notices of Meetings to come, at their early convenience.

OXFORD AQUATICS.

GRAND SCRATCH FOUR-OAR RACES.

A grand Scratch Four-oared Race, by Members of the University, came off on the afternoons of Thursday and Friday, the 7th and 8th instant. Stakes—Pewter Quarts for the first boat, and Pints for the second; and for which no less than twelve boats entered. The following was the order of the trial heats:—

FIRST HEAT.

Lloyd—stroke.	Egerton—stroke.
Marindin.	Everett.
Shipton (Worcester).	Barrow.
Shepherd.	Wheeler.
Coldcott—coxswain.	Petch—coxswain.

Won by Mr. Egerton.

SECOND HEAT.

Cardigan—stroke.	Hooper—stroke.
Wollaston.	Craster.
Williams (Ch. Ch.)	Skey.
Manie.	Vesey.
Williams—coxswain.	Hole—coxswain.

Won by Mr. Hooper.

THIRD HEAT.

Sport—stroke.	Codrington—stroke.
Murrie.	Harrington.
Phillips.	Henderson.
Atkinson.	Jones (Pembroke).
Williams—coxswain.	Ellers—coxswain.

Won by Mr. Short.

FOURTH HEAT.

Marshall—stroke.	Hayler—stroke.
Gidlen.	Green.
Onslow.	Rumsey.
Overton.	Thompson.
Hobinson—coxswain.	Mosley—coxswain.

Won by Mr. Marshall.

FIFTH HEAT.

Wylie—stroke.	Mellish—stroke.
Wanklyn.	Grier.
Johnston.	Ramsay.
Lewis.	Thompson.
Bent—coxswain.	Mosley—coxswain.

Won by Mr. Wylie.

SIXTH HEAT.

Hayward—stroke.
Hutton.
Northey.
Bowden.
Stockin—coxswain.

Williams (Trinity)—stroke.
Pain.
Jones (Jesus).
Wormald.
Smith—coxswain.

Won by Mr. Williams.

The winning boats now contended in the following order, viz., Messrs. Egerton, Hooper, and Short. The crew of the latter went a head at first, but was soon collared and compelled to retire to the rear, Mr. Hooper's boat coming in first, Mr. Egerton's second. This ended the first day's racing.

FRIDAY.

Messrs. Hooper and Wylie contended. A good race to the long bridges, when the superior qualities of Mr. Hooper's crew told upon their opponents, and the latter came in easy winners.

The next heat was between Messrs. Marshall and Williams. Mr. Marshall's boat won this heat.

For the final heat Messrs. Hooper and Marshall contended. This was also won by Mr. Hooper's crew, viz.:

1. Skye (Worcester College).
 2. Vesey (Christ Church).
 3. Cranster (University College).
 4. Hooper (Pembroke College).
- Hole (Corpus Christi College)—coxswain.

The races were most of them hard contested ones, and the rowing better than has been seen in scratch races for some time; and proves, that although there were not many competitors this term, in the recent pair-oared races, for the sculls and presentation silver goblets, and the four-oared races, for the challenge cup, that the Isis is not yet forsaken, but will, no doubt, turn out many good oarsmen to compete with the oarsmen of the Cam.

ANGLING.

[We shall be glad to receive any angling information from secretaries of angling clubs, if they will be kind enough to forward it as early as possible to the Editor.]

CHAR IN WINDERMERE LAKE.—A meeting has been held for the purpose of adopting some measures with a view to the preservation of the Windermere fisheries. It has been proposed to lease the fisheries to an association, and to offer to all living in or visiting the lake district the privilege of angling in the lake and tributaries of Windermere, and thus, if possible, prevent the lake being swept with nets. The char, or northern char (salmo umbla, Lin.), it may be stated, belongs, as its scientific name indicates, to the salmon genus. It is not a large fish, seldom exceeding twelve or fourteen inches in length, although in rare instances, attaining the dimensions of two feet.

FIELD SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

OXFORD.—EXETER COLLEGE FOOT STEEPCHASE.—The under-graduate members of Exeter College, on Saturday last, contended for a sweepstake over two miles, consisting chiefly of meadow land, along the valley of the Cherwell, starting from Tew's meadow, opposite Loggerhead bathing-place, crossing Evans's Honour and Blays meadows, turning to the right to Rippington's meadow, across several others, to a flag; then back again nearly in the same direction to where the starting-post was erected. There were upwards of thirty jumps, including the brooks, which had to be taken both ways, and plenty of hedges and ditches. The entries amounted to twelve, but of that number five only came to the scratch; viz., Messrs. Douglas, Phillips, Daubeny, Henry, and Wilton. Numberless mishaps occurred between the starting-post and the flags. Mr. Daubeny, who had the lead considerably, passed the flag on the wrong side, and was not aware of it until he had cleared the first brook on his return; he had, consequently, to retrace his steps, which gave Mr. Douglas the lead. At the last brook, which was full six yards wide, Mr. Douglas jumped slap in, followed by Mr. Phillips. Mr. Henry refused, and lost all chance of the race, which was now between Mr. Douglas and Mr. Phillips. The former, after getting out of the brook, took the lead, and finally won by about twenty yards. Mr. Daubeny cleared the brook (which his competitors failed in doing) in capital style, thus settling many wagers that not one would clear the brook on their return. Mr. Daubeny came in third, and saved his stake. Mr. Wilton shut up at the second brook after starting.

FOOTBALL AT WINCHESTER COLLEGE.—The annual football match between the second six of College, and the second of the Commoners, took place on Wednesday last, in which the College six proved too strong for their antagonists; at the conclusion of the game the Collegers were eight goals to the Commoners six. The names of the players were as follow:—College: Harris, sen., Pigott, Majendie, Bouchier, Mayo, Eaton. Commoners: Gundry, Warry, Henty, Boley, Holmes, Pauli.

WALKING MATCH AGAINST TIME.—Mr. J. F. Sugden walked a match against time, on Tuesday last, at Hyde-park, Sheffield, for £10 aside. The match was made to walk six miles in fifty-eight minutes, which Sugden accomplished easily, with forty seconds to spare, and consequently pocketed the needful. We hear that he is matched for £25 aside to walk six-and-a-half miles within an hour, in a month's time, on the same ground; which shows that if he is not the "American Stag," at least he has earned the appellation of the "Retford Favourite."

SYMPTOMS OF WINTER.—Large quantities of wild fowl have during the last week visited the Solent Sea to the west of the Isle of Wight.

CAUTION TO POOR PERSONS KEEPING DOGS.—A short time since Josiah Osborn, of Leigh, near Rochford, kept a dog, and having no goods whereon a levy might be made for a tax, refused to pay it. A warrant to commit him to gaol was immediately issued by the commissioners, when he paid the tax and expenses.

A HENPECKED HUSBAND.—For some years past a pair of noble eagles have been conspicuously ornamental in the pleasure grounds of Charles Clarke, Esq., at Matlock Bath. The hen was by far the largest and most powerful, as well as pugnacious, and many a castigation has she bestowed on her liege lord, especially at dinner time, when not content with taking the head of the table, she would insist on taking the head and body too, of any defunct rabbit, rat, or other delicacy provided, her mate being only permitted to dine in peace after his lady had bountifully helped herself. Things went on in this unsatisfactory manner until last Saturday, when a sad crisis arrived; as on that day a quarrel arose, followed as usual by assault and battery, but which in this instance ended only with the death of the least powerful combatant.

THE SPORTSMAN'S LIBRARY.

Dogs: Their Management. Being a New Plan of Treating the Animal, based upon a Consideration of his Natural Temperament. By EDWARD MAYHEW, M.R.C.V.S. London: Routledge and Co.

[SECOND NOTICE.]

MR. MAYHEW, like a sensible man, always refers to Nature for suggestions as to the treatment of dogs; thus he reminds us that, in its natural state, the dog is a carnivorous animal that hunts for his own food, and is subjected to long fasts. Hence, his excellent advice:—

HOW TO FEED YOUR DOG.

The dog can fast for a great number of days. Abstinence for forty-eight hours seldom injures it; but it is a practice which ought not to be too frequently adopted, as, by its repetition, the digestion is weakened. One meal, however, is sufficient, in every case, for the twenty-four hours. Animals not worked, but kept as favorites, or allowed only to range at pleasure, should not have any meat, nor be permitted to consume any large quantity of fatty substances. Butter, fat, or grease, soon renders the skin of the dog diseased and its body gross. Milk, fine bread, cakes, or sugar, are better for children, and can be on the human race bestowed with advantage; while given to the brute they are apt to generate disorders, which a long course of medicine will not in every case eradicate. Beer, wine, or spirits, all of which the dog can be induced to drink, show rather the master's ignorance than the creature's liking. Nice food, or that which a human being would consider, is in fact not fitted to support the dog in health. It may appear offensive to ladies when they behold their favorites gorge rankly, but Nature has wisely ordained that her numerous children should, by their difference of appetite, consume the produce of earth. The dog, therefore, can enjoy and thrive upon that which man thinks of with disgust; but our reason sees in this circumstance facts worthy of our exclamation. The animal, seeking the provender its Creator formed its appetite to relish, is not necessarily filthy or unclean; but, could dogs write books, probably the opinions of these beasts upon many of the made dishes and tit-bits of the fashionable circles would be opposed to the ideas which delicate epicures entertain concerning such luxurious fare. The spaniel which, bloated with sweets, escapes from the drawing room to amuse itself with a blackened bone picked from a drug-hill, follows but the inclination of his kind; and while tearing with its teeth the dirt-begrimed morsels, it is, according to its nature, distantly employed. Could we read its thoughts, probably the perverse little pet, even while it is provoking its mistress's horror, is reflecting upon the nasty trash which the human stomach can endure, and upon the tempting relishes which mankind know not, like dogs, how to appreciate. An occasional bone and a little dirt are beneficial to the canine race, while food nicely minced and served on plates is calculated to do harm. Such keep fittens to excess, destroys activity, renders the bowels costive, and causes the teeth to be encrusted with tartar.

A bone is of great service to the animal, which cannot employ a tooth-brush; and the larger it be and the less meat upon it, the better it will prove for little, high-fed favorites. A dog in strong health may digest an occasional meal of bones; but the pet has generally a weak and often a diseased stomach, which would be irritated by what would otherwise do it no harm. The animal, nevertheless, true to its instinct, has always an inclination to swallow such substances, provided its teeth can break off a piece of a size fitted for deglutition. Game and chicken bones, which are readily crushed, should therefore be withheld, for not unfrequently is choking caused by pieces sticking in the oesophagus; though more often is vomiting induced by irritation of the stomach, or serious impaction of the posterior intestine ensues upon the feebleness of the digestion.

The bone, therefore, should be large, and on it there should be nothing which the knife can remove. It ought to be thrown upon the earth, and the animal should be allowed to gnaw it at leisure. During the act, a considerable quantity of earth and saliva will be swallowed, and little actual food be added to an already loaded stomach. In all points of view the animal is benefited. The soil is always slightly alkaline, and so is the saliva; any undue acidity is by both in some measure counteracted; but the earth is also of further service. Food too highly or purely nutritive will not support life; but to render it healthy, a certain quantity of indigestible or refuse matter is imperative. The latter portion acts mechanically as a stimulant to the intestines, and hence gentlemen by choice consume bread in which a portion of the husk is mingled, finding it prevents the costiveness that the baker's "best" induces. Dogs are here very like men, but they require more of the mixture than the human being could bear. The animals, therefore, should not be fed off plates.

Don't set a dainty dish before a dog—he does not like it: throw his meat upon the ground, and let it be seasoned with dirt, which is a wholesome stimulant. Oatmeal and ship-biscuits are the best food when taking little exercise. Meat, when given, should be lean and coarse. Pamper and tripe is good food; horseflesh is bad, and, in fact, should never be given—it generates skin disease. Liver is a capital laxative, but is too costly to be often given. During the shooting season, a pointer may have as much meat as he can gorge, and it cannot be too nourishing; but it must not be done by an occasional meal, the dog must be fed up for a time:—

It is one of the prejudices of most men to believe that a feed of oats to the horse, or a meal of flesh to the dog, just before starting, gives strength for the labour which is to be endured. We cannot, however, make strength as beds are made, at any moment, but the invigoration of a living body must be the result of a slow and a long process. On the day of work it is of less consequence what food is given than is the diet which has been allowed the many previous weeks.

The hour of feeding should be as regular as possible. As for quantity, it cannot be assigned: every dog has his own capacity of stomach and physical requirements, like human beings. What is one dog's meat is another dog's poison. The only rule should be—enough, and at the right season.

Dogs, moreover, are pertinacious beggars; they will eat when they see their masters eating, although they are full; and, contemplating this peculiarity, Mr. Mayhew bursts into a pathetic exhortation against

THE DOG IN THE KITCHEN.

Where the servants are trustworthy this danger will not arise; but good servants mostly have tender hearts, and dogs have a peculiar tact in appealing to female weaknesses. However strict may be the orders, and however sincere may be the disposition to observe them, bits will fall, scraps will be thrown down, dishes will be placed upon the ground; and sometimes affection will venture to offer just "the little piece," which no one could call feeding. It is astonishing how much will in this way be picked up, for the dog that lies most before the kitchen fire is generally the fattest, laziest, and at feeding time the best behaved of his company. Consequently no dog should be allowed to enter the kitchen, for their arts in working upon mortal frailty can only be met by insisting on their absence. The dog that is well fed and not crammed, should not refuse bread when it is offered. If this be rejected, while sugar is eagerly snapped up, it will be pretty certain that the animal is either too much indulged, or that its health requires attention.

Mr. Mayhew approves of exercise, of course, but he objects to soap and water. Dogs, he considers, are not like men in this respect—they are better for going unwashed. Behold and shudder at

THE CONSEQUENCES OF WASHING YOUR DOG.

Soap and water make the hair look white; but the coat usually becomes soiled the quicker because of their employment. The use of alkalis, soda, or potash, in the water, renders the immediate effects more conspicuous; but unfortunately these substances also make the after-consequences more vexatious. They take the subacneous or mucous secretion from the coat. The skin is deprived of its natural protector in this animal; the cuticle grows weak and dry. The hair is rendered rough; is prepared to catch the dirt; and not infrequently the skin itself, by Nature striving to counteract the effect of its deprivation, pours forth a secretion that aids in causing it to appear foul. Above all, the warmth, so repeatedly and often inhumanly applied to the entire surface of the body, debilitates the system of the creature, and generates in the long run certain disease, even if by the drying immediate disorder be not engendered. The warm-bath to the dog is peculiarly debilitating, and the heat which the hand of a cook would endure with a sense of comfort, will sometimes cause the dog to faint. Washing is a sign of sensible weakness in this animal, and few of these creatures are washed without exhibiting it. If washing is insisted upon, the water should never be warm, and in cold weather only should the chill be taken off. The soap ought to be of the mildest quality; but the yolk of egg is much to be preferred, and in its effects is every way more beneficial where the hair either of man or beast must be cleaned. A small dog will require the yolk of one egg; and a Newfoundland the yolks of a dozen eggs. The yolks are to be separated from the whites and smeared well into the hair. A little water is then to be poured upon the back, and the hand is to be rubbed upon the coat till a lather covers the body, after which the hair may be cleared by copious ablutions. This process is much to be preferred, and the dog dislikes it far less than when soaps are employed.

But then he should be combed and brushed daily, and even thrown into a cold bath. Hold him by the head, and plunge his body into the water, don't attempt to dry him, but set him off for a scamp.

Mr. Mayhew has a high opinion of the INTELLIGENCE OF THE DOG.

Dogs are very intelligent. They understand much more than men choose to give them credit for. Their pride is enormous, and through this feeling they are easily moved. Laughter, when directed against himself, no dog can endure, and the slightest reprimand is always answered by an immediate change of aspect. Rather than have their dignity offended, dogs will quickly become honest, especially when deceit is experienced to be of no avail. People who are physiognomists may detect this sentiment impressed upon the countenance.

We shall have occasion again to return to this valuable volume.

SEVERAL small books of the season have invited a passing glance. The Colonial Almanack contains a vast quantity of information relating to the colonies, useful to all connected with them.—The Racing Calendar for 1854 is an old friend, not with a new face. It comes to the sporting world for the eighty-second time, recording the races of the present year, giving lists of the winning horses, with a most complete index, and further lists of foals produced during the year; and divers other information required by those who interest themselves practically or theoretically in the affairs of the turf.—Another work of the same kind, but rather prospective than retrospective, is Raff's Guide to the Turf for 1855. It is a pocket book, giving, in addition to the usual contents of an almanack, the nominations for the coming year, the entries for sweepstakes in 1856, a calendar of the races of the present year, the performances of the two-year-olds; and to these are added the laws of racing, length of courses, Derby lots, list of trainers, and of winners of the great prizes from the commencement. It is ably edited by Mr. Langley.—The Sporting Review for December contains many interesting articles on sporting: a Diary of Sports for the Month; a Review of the Racing Season; Adventures of the Atherton Hounds; Red Deer hunting; a Tale by Lord William Lennox; and a gathering of sporting news. It is embellished with two capital engravings.

A MOST INTERESTING RECOVERY from a vast complication of diseases, without the aid of medicine is recorded in the following letter:—"Bridgehouse, Finsley, April 3, 1854.—Grateful for the benefit I have derived from Du Barry's Revalenta Arabica Food, I feel it my duty to express to you my unfeigned thanks for the invariable kindness I have met with at your hands. My case is an extraordinary one, and as it may benefit other sufferers I think it but right to place its details at your disposal. I have suffered these thirty-three years continually from diseased lungs, spitting of blood, liver derangement, deafness, singing in the ears, constipation, debility, shortness of breath and cough, and during that period, taken so much medicine that I can safely say I have laid out upwards of £1,000 at the chemists and doctors.—I have actually worn out two medical men during my ailments without finding any improvement in my health.—Indeed I was in utter despair, and never expected to get over it when I was fortunate enough to become acquainted with your Revalenta Arabica which, heaven be praised, restored me to a state of health which I long since despaired of attaining. My lungs, liver, stomach, head and ears are all right, my hearing perfect, and my recovery is a marvel to all my acquaintances.—I am, respectfully, James Roberts."—More ample details than our space permits will be found in Messrs. Du Barry's advertisements.

THE GARDEN.

VEGETABLE PROTECTION.

THIS is by no means an unimportant branch of horticulture, for in our northern clime we are apt to receive such severe visitations in the shape of early autumnal frosts, protracted and hard winters, and capricious springs, as to cause the experienced gardener much jealousy. A really good gardener trusts little to the weather; idmanacks are of little use to him; even the indefatigable and long-continued labour of the meteorologist, however valuable as leading to general deductions, is allowed but a moderate share of influence in his practice. Now this is not because he despises science; it is not that he despises the rule, but that he dreads the exception. Indeed, it would little avail that he owned weather rules to have been his guide, when the ladies of the establishment were mourning the loss of their pets after an unexpected frost. We must all remember that the ice-king is a slippery personage, and that although we very naturally expect his frigid embraces in December and January, yet he has been known to make very early calls; and also, such late ones, as might fairly warrant, on certain occasions, our calling him a procrastinator. But why lay all the blame on this adamantine monarch?—has not the chilling breeze a vast influence in the world of gardening? Indeed it has; and amidst the general sufferings of the gardening fraternity, these two powers would appear to divide spoils. There is, however, yet another enemy to contend with, which although not quite of so serious a character, must still be placed in the category. I mean moisture; which may affect variously, either separately or in conjunction with the before-named powers.

We have now the enemy full in view, and I will proceed to offer advice, the result of experience; as "burnt children dread the fire," so I, having been singed many times, may be expected to feel strongly. In casting our eyes over the vegetable world, as exhibited in our kitchen gardens, we find not only plants of foreign climes, but the indigenous ones, requiring what we term, in a gardening sense, "protection." This is not because they are so tender as to be ill-adapted to the climate that produced them; but because man in his attempt to render the vegetable as well as animal world subservient to his purpose, has thrown them into a position which nature, aiming chiefly at the perpetuation of the species, took little care about. Let us look at our endives! which we may fairly call aristocratic dandelions; not indigenous certainly, for we are told that the Cichorium endivia, or endive, is an East Indian; but we all know that most of what are called, in broad terms, "East Indian plants," require a hothouse here; this annual however flourishes during even the cooler part of the autumn in Britain. The fact is, that its history is little known; it may have come from the east, but, if so, surely from some great elevation. This would seem to be a fair inference from the fact, that it is impatient of damp air long continued, together with a diminished degree of light: low temperature, after all, acquires much of its importance in this matter through such powerful conditors in the work of destruction.

As to materials for protection purposes, every one desirous of securing a thorough supply of good vegetables, should, in the middle of October, look to a good supply of litter. Now this litter should not be any sort of rubbish, out of a mistaken notion of economy; if vegetables such as lettuces, endives, cauliflowers, celery, &c., will pay for protection, they will at least pay for good litter. I find nothing better than newly-thrashed wheat straw for strong growing crops, and oat straw for lighter things. But these materials are meant chiefly to exclude frost and chilling winds, they cannot keep out wet, and when it is really necessary so to do, why I know of nothing better than the asphaltic felting:—"frigi domo," I have not tried. I will now take some of our chief vegetables in detail, and point out modes of protection; but before doing so, I must offer a few general observations. In the first place, I like, as a maxim, to cover somewhat early and lightly; rather than defer it until an extreme case occurs. Many of our vegetables suffer more when taken by surprise in the early part of November, than afterwards; especially if it has been a growing autumn. Things thus early covered with a delicate screen, just enough to erry off cutting winds, and to soften the rigour of frost, may remain covered thus for days, even in mild weather, without taking any harm; that is to say, supposing the party too busy to attend to them; indeed, we frequently leave this screen intentionally on such things as endive, lettuce, &c.—crops which it is desirable to advance a stage in the way of blanching. If, however, it is frosty, with a likelihood of continuance, our practice is not to add more litter or other covering until the very soil in which the crop is growing is frozen nearly an inch in depth; then we apply our complement of covering—the object being to keep them frozen as long as possible. This, remaining completely dormant, damp has no effect on them, and all extremes of frost being warded off, and the cutting blast carried over their heads, they remain as safe as the art of man can render them; and, doubtless, some things will keep better this way than if they were under glass cases or frames, where a humid and stagnant atmosphere, combined with a partial deprivation of light, is but too apt to throw the plants into an attenuated state—a kind of vegetable consumption.

Under the protective mode here suggested, the uncovering and gradually inuring them to light after being shut up so long, is important, and requires some care; a moment's thought, however, about the effects of a too sudden thaw, either in the vegetable or animal world, will lead to sound practice; and those who have ever received a basket of soft-wooded plants after a long journey, matted closely, and then unluckily exposed them instantly to a bright sunshine, will be tolerably well acquainted with the effects of a sudden exposure to light after days of darkness. On such occasions, a thaw supervening, we never distress ourselves about uncovering at that period when hundreds are in a hurry to get their crops thawed; we always leave them covered until we can with ease thrust the finger into the soil in which they grow, and then practice only a partial uncovering, leaving a light screen over them to avoid the evil influences of a too sudden admission of light, and of a sharp and cutting air, if such should prevail.

We will now proceed to point to some of our chief crops, such as cauliflowers, celery, coleworts, brocolis, lettuces, endives, &c. These I will deal with in their order.

CAULIFLOWERS.—It is well known that cauliflowers in head will keep a long time suspended from the roof of a shed or outhouse, where severe frosts can be excluded. They, however, become considerably shrivelled, and somewhat tarnished in colour. We therefore think it not good to risk many in this way. One chief consideration is to house or otherwise afford them extra protection before they are injured by frosts; it is in vain to do so afterwards. Our practice is this, and it succeeds admirably. In the end of October, we have all cauliflowers examined; those in head or "showing" have each a wisp of oat straw (bundled up in the hand) thrust in amongst the central leaves; this wards off any frost at this period. They are again examined in the second week of November, when more will be showing; these, if forward, are treated in like manner, but those just showing are, at this period, removed to a trench as follows:—On any convenient spot an excavation is made, five feet in width, and over two feet in depth, the sides of the trench being beat firmly, so as not to fall in, though it would be worth while to shore the sides up with rough slabs. The cauliflowers, taken up with earth adhering, and first having their long leaves slightly shortened, are here "heeled," as it is termed, almost close together. Across this trench some poles are laid, the ends hooked down, and over the poles mats are placed nightly. In the event of severe weather, litter of any kind is thickly strewn, and increased when necessary. Frost is hereby almost entirely excluded; the soil, to be sure, may become slightly crisped by frost, but not to harm them, and all that is requisite is to uncover them as frequently as a chance offers, for on the dispersion of confined damp, through the medium of a free circulation of air occasionally, their wellbeing depends. If the early winter is tolerably mild, and the successive crops have received attention in the way of litter, another batch may be sown at the end of the month, and by such means it is perfectly easy to command nice cauliflowers into the new year. This, to the cook, is a thing of much importance.

CELERY.—The preservation of this useful vegetable depends much on its receiving a liberal earthing in the end of October. But it is not in the amount of earth alone; the way in which it is applied deserves consideration. It will be manifest to our readers that the closer the soil presses the stem of the celery the more secure will it be. It is, therefore, expedient at this period to take some pains in what is termed "hand earthing," that is, putting the finishing touch to it by means of the hand, taking care to gather all the foliage and stalks close together, and pressing the soil closely to them, so as scarcely to leave any interstices for frost or sun to enter. This should be done when dry: it requires a sort of hay-making day to accomplish this, and is best done in the afternoon. Those who are particular about their winter and spring celery should cover with litter according to the principles laid down previously; a flickering, light covering betimes—say beginning of November, if frosts occur—and when the soil is encrusted an inch in thickness, let the full complement of covering be superadded. After this, the same cautious mode of procedure should be observed when a thaw comes, as before suggested; and this, we believe, will be found quite satisfactory. One thing more: celery is apt to "run," that is, to begin to shoot for the future bloom, in February. It is well, then, to take up the remainder and to "heel" it; this gives a salutary check, which, for a while, retards the advancing blossom-spike.

COLEWORTS.—It may seem odd to some persons to find importance attached to these; but whatever may be thought of them in summer as ordinary greens, they are of eminent service to our best cooks in the dead of winter. Too many are apt to confound them with mere enbauge sprouts; but, although of the same parentage, they differ widely. From their rapid growth, which, under high culture, is but a matter of from ten to twelve weeks, they are exquisitely tender; and, moreover, being of kinds noted for dwarfishness and precocity, they possess, in the condition termed colewort, a special character. The practice we are about to propose may be thought somewhat singular, but on trial it will be found well worth while, taking winters on the average. Suppose a person to have a quantity in the second week of November, from a sowing made about midsummer; let us also suppose them to be just in that state which practicals call "beginning to cabbage;" let them then be pulled up, at least those beginning to "head"—selected, and "heeled"—thick as they can be placed in any open spot. Here let their treatment be precisely as recommended previously for celery, &c., and it will be found that a very little litter will protect some hundreds, and that a supply will be guaranteed to the table in a most delicate state, until the end of January, or, in some cases, much longer.

BROCOLIS.—In referring to protective matters as connected with this numerous family, I must beg at once to group them into two sections, having, of course, reference to protection matters. These two groups will be, first, autumnal kinds; and, second, our true spring brocolis. As for our midwinter kinds, they are not by any means plentiful; unless we take Snow's winter white, when pure, Walcherens, and the sprouting or branching brocolis. Autumnal brocolis, such as the Capes, Grange's autumnal, and others of similar habit, will submit to the kind of protection suggested for the cauliflower: only, be it observed, they are somewhat harder than the cauliflower, and do not require assistance quite so early, or of quite so coaxing a character. An old practice with regard to brocolis still prevails, and it may yet be regarded as good: it is that of "falling," or sinking, the plants in the course of November, in order to subdue their grossness, thereby enabling them better to withstand the vicissitudes of winter. The practice is correct in principle, inasmuch as snow being an excellent protector, there is a double advantage in the practice, providing we have snow; the only real set-off that can be placed against these advantages being, as far as we are aware, loss of power in the plant, and, consequently, of size. After many years' experience, we see no reason to discontinue the practice, and must beg to remind our readers that the heads must be placed towards the north, in order that when snow falls such a natural and economical covering may be preserved as long as possible. We need scarcely urge here, that a good dinner in February, March, or April, is all the more complete by adding fine white brocolis to the forced asparagus, sea-kale, and mushrooms; we may not entirely depend on our winters for success, without having recourse to protection. Such being the case, a little clean wheat-straw thrust carefully between and over the principal portions of the foliage, proves of much service. This is just tucked up into a sort of wisp, and thrust quietly in the centre of each crown; at the same time thrusting a few straws here and there between the outer leaves of the crown. This, whether the plants are "heeled" or not, will much assist in protecting them.

LETTUCES.—Our readers, doubtless, know that the Bath eos and the hardy green cabbage lettuces are the very best to pass the winter. Such, sown about the middle of August, on good soil, will be fit to transplant about the third week in October. They will, of course, be stout little plants, and by the middle of November, if not earlier, will at least deserve protection if they do not chance to require it. In obedience to the same principles, which have before been pointed to, we suggest the timely use of clean straw; a thin screen betimes—say, the first sharp frost at the end of October; increasing it afterwards in proportion to the growth of the ice-king. Fresh thrashed oat-straw is a nice thing for an early screener, and new wheat-straw is the best to add to it in very hard frosts. As to thawing, we have nothing to add beyond previous observations.

ENDIVE.—Fine blanchend endive is such an important adjunct to a good salad-bowl, that no pains should be spared to preserve it through the winter. One of the best plans by which to accomplish this, is to form turf pits; to fix some spars or rafters at regular distances over them, and to cover with the asphaltic felt. Such are extensively used at the Earl of Sefton's, at Croxeth, near Liverpool, and answer admirably. As many of our readers may not have the means to do so, we may just glance at the next best modes of preserving it. In the first place, all endive of any size or consequence should receive a slight flickering protection from the end of October onwards. Our practice is, be the weather what it may, to shake a little straw on in the evening; but this is not removed every morning: it sometimes remains for two or three days together, principally on dull and quiet days. Endive is, however, so liable to engender rot, that no chance should be lost in getting it dried; and, to accomplish this, not only sun but wind is of consequence. That likely to be required for use in two or three weeks may remain covered much longer than younger stock, for while they remain covered of course the blanching process is advancing. This practice of night covering is, after all, no more pains than are taken over early radish beds. But it is unsafe to leave all the stock thus in the open ground, for the wet may ultimately prove a greater enemy than the frost, and means must be taken to ensure a comparative degree of dryness to one portion of the stock. Of course, any glazed structure is excellent for the dead of winter; and if any one is fortunate enough to be able to spare a frame or two, or a pit, such may be filled with some of the best of the stock about the beginning of November. It is not worth while to introduce any that is tied for blanching to these structures; such may be preserved for present use by good covering, or a quantity may be housed in some dry, open shed, removing them with balls of earth when the plants are very dry, and burying them up to their necks in dryish soil; the charred material of the rubbish heap, doubtless, would be excellent, as being antiseptic. Those removed to the frames at that period should be the very best plants unblanched, and they should be selected for their stoutness and compactness. They will, of course, be removed with good balls of soil, and the material they are planted in should be rather dry; for distance they may be placed about eight or nine inches apart; henceforth they will require all ventilation possible, and the lights should be lifted entirely off them on windy and dry days. The lights must be off every night, and the covering increased as needed; in fact, they must not be suffered to become frozen if it can be avoided; but if they should, let the same principles be applied in thawing as before suggested. In addition to these modes, it is a good plan to remove a quantity with hails and place them close under a garden wall or fence; this is a very good situation, especially if the wall possesses a coping. Here, too, they must have some litter shaken over them; and, indeed, the practice before described must be adhered to. As to blanching, of course they may be tied up successively, and according to the needs of the family. Some persons lay slates or boards on them, and some use blanching-pans; these are all very well in their way, but we are not aware of anything better than tying them with bass. Tying, however, like everything else, may be done well, middling, or bad: this is a more important matter than many would imagine. The operator should take special care not to wound the endive, and, instead of tying grudgingly a piece of bass once round, he should have bass long enough to go four times round, depending more on a repetition of bands than on a tight hugging of the plant. The tie should commence at the lower portion of the plant; be drawn very lightly there; return round the very centre, being there slightly compressed; thence, a stage higher, drawn pretty close; and, finally, round the upper portion, which may be so far closed as to exclude wet. Towards the beginning of December, a stock of that from out-doors, which has been tied about two or three weeks, may be taken in-doors when in a very dry state; it may there be hurried to the neck in dry soil, and will thus keep for use for several weeks; in which ease, those in frames or pits may be made to succeed them. More advice might here be offered concerning endive, but we pass on to other matters.

ARTICHOKES.—The kind called the globe is here meant, which most of our friends know to be too tender to be neglected. But here it is not produce that we protect, but to save the life of the plant, or so to foster it as to ensure its well-being in the ensuing summer and autumn; for the globe artichoke may be had from the end of May until the early part of November in high perfection. Its protection is very simple: our practice is, to pile leaves—the rakings of the shrubbery—around their collars, a foot in depth, in the middle of November, and to earth these over with soil from the sides of the plant, to prevent the wind blowing the protection away. We then tuck a bouncing bunch or two of straw in those openings which appear between the groups of foliage, and the work is done. The whole is uncovered in the end of February in the ensuing spring, and by this practice we seldom lose a plant.

BULB-FORCING.—As we wish to offer some seasonal advice under the above head, we will preface it by a little extract from Mrs. Loudon's works:—

There are three kinds of plants which are said to have bulbous roots. Those which are solid, and which should be properly called corms such as the crocus, the corn-flag, and many other of the half-hardy plants with similar half-tubular flowers; the tunicated bulbs, which may be peeled off in scales, such as the onion, the hyacinth, and the tulip; and the scaly bulbs, such as the lily. Now the real roots of all these plants are the long fibres sent down by the lower part of the bulb, which may be seen plainly in hyacinths grown in glasses, and in any of the kinds if taken up while in a growing state; and what is called the bulb is in all the corms, only a contracted stem, but in the tunicated and scaly bulbs, the bulbous part is formed of a contracted stem and metamorphosed leaves. If you will take the trouble to examine a hyacinth, you will find, at the base of the bulb, a flat fleshy substance called the root-plate, and this is, in fact, the contracted stem of the plant, while the tunics or scales are metamorphosed leaves. In the scaly bulb the stem is plainly perceptible in the centre, and the scales are evidently metamorphosed leaves.

Thus much as to the structural character of bulbs in general; let us now see what "forcing bulbs" means practically. It is known to most persons that we obtain our superior hyacinths from Holland annually, also many of the narcissi, tulips, and, indeed, various other bulbs adapted chiefly for forcing, as our seedsmen's lists amply testify. In them will be found "large Dutch crocuses," but our readers must not suppose that all our crocuses, narcissi, &c., come from Holland, vast quantities termed Dutch being of British growth. As the hyacinth is the principal root, and everybody's favourite, we will chat about it first. Our practice is to select our bulbs the moment they arrive, if we can discover that secret. This is necessary on two accounts—first, in order to obtain good roots, not to be condemned to the leavings of previous selections; and, secondly, in order to give them as long a period as possible to root before forcing them. The following maxims must be strictly observed:—1st, do not introduce them to heat before the pot or glass is at least half-filled with roots; 2nd, keep the bulbs covered until the rising sprout is three inches in length; 3rd, when uncovered, immerse them gradually to the light; 4th, when expanding the blossoms, place them where they will enjoy a free circulation of air and plenty of light; 5th, when suffer the soil to become dry from the moment the foliage expands. We pot in September in moist soil, and immediately place the pots out of doors on an elevated bed of ashes, covering the pots six inches deep with cinder ashes, and placing something over the whole to exclude rain. By the end of November the pots are nearly full of roots, and we then commence forcing them, introducing them in groups successively, according to the demand. The forcing is conducted in a pit of fermenting materials, the bottom heat as near seventy degrees as possible, not more. As to those in glasses, they simply require the same moderate conditions as the pots in their early stages—above all, keeping them from the light. Where it becomes desirable to place the glasses for ornament sake in drawing-rooms or parlours where there is a fire, and, by consequence, a dry air, damp moss may be piled over the crowns, or green baize. These must be kept damp, and will foster the bud, keeping it in comparative darkness. Let us offer one concluding remark: the moment your bulbs, of whatever kind, acquire such a length of rising sprout as to show the propriety of a development of the foliage, &c., let them be instantly divested of all covering, and immerse them gradually to the light.

TRANSPLANTING LARGE TREES BY MACHINERY.—Most of the readers of THE FIELD have, doubtless, heard of a Mr. McGlashan's apparatus, which has made some stir in quarters of some consequence during the last two years. It is probable that it may prove of some service where extensive removals are contemplated. In these times, indeed, we may very fairly hail every advance in mechanical appliances as a public boon, and, in doing so, of course occasionally run the risk of appearing to sanction machines not altogether worthy of general adoption. The following, from the Gardener's Chronicle, points to a trial made at St. Cloud by desire of the Emperor of the French. Further comment is needless:—

We read in the Moniteur as follows:—Some new experiments with a machine for transplanting trees, invented by Mr. Stewart McGlashan, took place at St. Cloud, by the desire of his Majesty the Emperor, who wished the first trial to be made in the Bois de Boulogne, in order that her Majesty the Empress might honour it with her presence. M. Mathieu, head of the gardens of St. Cloud, directed these experiments, which were as successful as the preceding one. It was tried upon a tree of about 30 feet high, and more than 20 inches in circumference, which even a force of 20 horse power could scarcely have raised from the ground, supposing the preliminary operations all complete, such as removing the earth from around the roots, in order to facilitate the transplanting of the tree. The tree in question was an acacia, naturally firmly fixed in the soil, its straight roots offering a great resistance, which must have subjected the machine to a very hard trial. Twenty minutes sufficed to uproot and replace the acacia in its former hole. The principle of Mr. Stewart McGlashan's machine was so powerful that with an apparatus of reasonable dimensions it would be possible to remove the largest trees, such for example as the elms and ancient chestnuts of our public promenades. A third experiment was tried, under the direction of M. Mathieu, at Villeneuve l'Étang, near St. Cloud, upon an apple-tree, which was very difficult to transplant, but the attempt proved perfectly successful.

THE GARDENER.

PLANT-HOUSES.—This is a very general term to use, but not every one has a conservatory, nor every one a stove—to say nothing of special geranium-houses, heathery, &c. Of such we need scarcely speak in detail; our time will, perhaps, be more usefully occupied in such general remarks as will suit the majority of our readers. We have before adverted to the necessity for using much caution in the application of fire heat, and also of atmospheric moisture; so little can be added now. The dark days of winter are at hand, in which it will be far safer, and more wholesome, as to the needs of vegetation, to submit to the minimum point as to temperatures, than to risk undue excitability and to waste fuel.

FLOWER-FORCING.—We have previously given a limited list of the indispensable in flower-forcing; let us now, whilst in time, endeavour to expand the list, in order to suit the purposes of those who have a desire to widen their objects. The Cyclamen finally possess high eligibilities for what is termed "forcing," not so much that they require to be hurried by extreme temperatures, as that they fall well in with the winter groups. Of this family we strongly recommend Cyclamen persicum, the sweet var., C. coccineum, C. repandum, &c. &c.; about their culture we will in due time offer hints. Rhododendrons in all their varieties, even some of the Sikkim or Himalayan kinds; Daphnes hybrida, cucurum, &c.; Syringae, Ribes, Berberis Darwinii, dulcis, &c.; Azaleas, Ledums, Kalmias, Dentzias, Lilacs (the Persian), Rhodora Canadensis, the little Polygala chamaeboxus, Lily of the Valley, Wallflowers, Pinks, Violets, Roses; such as these, with bulbs as an adjunct, if well forced, would keep the ladies of the establishment highly gratified in our very darkest weather, and tend, in a high degree, to dispel that canai which is but too apt to accompany a British winter.

PLEASURE-GROUNDS.—Of course, by this time, these will have been cleansed from all dead leaves and decayed flowers, and now the gardener should make the whole look as comfortable as he can; gaiety is for the present out of the question. Flower-beds, devoted in summer to the massing system, or what is termed, popularly, bedding, should be dug deeply, and put in shape, and the walks being cleansed and edged, the whole will at least look neat and systematic. The lawns also should be well rolled; this gives a pleasant appearance, and facilitates the mowing of the future spring. Those who have much planting to do, or alterations to accomplish, should not lose a day in mild weather; not that mid-winter is the very best period of all others, but that the spring may not be overburdened by arrears—it will assuredly bring business enough of its own.

FRUIT-FORCING.—Little can be done beyond preparatory measures; these consist in pruning vines, peaches, &c., dressing their shoots afterwards, and finally training them. Those who require such in the month of May, must begin to make advances. If fermenting material can be placed in the houses, it will prove a valuable adjunct of the fire heat, and the trees will bud with greater strength and regularity. Much caution must, however, be exercised in regard to temperatures; the early forcer must not be too keen at first. The best way is to imitate what may be termed mild spring weather. Where early spring beds are required, for cucumbers and melons, the dung must be immediately prepared. A few strawberries may be introduced to a mild heat just before Christmas, and some kidney-beans planted where facilities exist for forcing them. Asparagus, sea kale, rhubarb, &c., must be introduced in succession as required, and mushroom-beds receive proper attention. We will say more in detail soon.

KITCHEN-GARDEN AND ORCHARD.—Pruning is the order of the day here, especially of trained trees; coarser orchard trees, which occasionally require the bill-hook or hand-saw, may stand over for frosty weather. Early peas should be speedily sown, a row of Mazagan beans, and some early radish, "Wood's frame," on a warm sloping border. Let trenching and ridging of ground proceed, and, in frosty weather, wheeling out manure. Let us here ask our friend the gardener, whether he has planned his next year's rotations? if not, the sooner the better; no man can tell where or how to place his manure until this is done. See to the protection of vegetables; in our leading article will be found useful advice.

GARDEN GOSSIP.

It is said that the highly respected clergymen of Chilton, a cheerful village in Bucks, has been expending about £300 a-year on his gardens. In cultivating the beauties of garden produce, expense has been considered secondary. As may be imagined, the rarest and best is to be seen at the reverend gentleman's delightful residence.

QUICK-LIME will neutralise mischievous acid substances in the soil; it will displace, and so fit for use, portions of the soil now fixed and useless—for it will so act upon vegetable matters in the soil as to make them capable of contributing to the growth of new vegetable structures; and it is itself directly, to some extent, the food of plants.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

I have a meadow fenced in on one side by a brick wall, some six feet in height and thirty yards in length; the grass under the wall being of a very moderate quality. I have broken up the turf, two yards wide, the whole length of the wall; in the spring I intend planting the ash-leaved potato. Being new ground, what distance ought the sets to be placed, supposing the rows to be a yard apart? Might not beans be planted between each? Would lime or soot, as a top-dressing, be of any advantage. Any information on these points, or any other suggestions would be most gladly received.

Can you also give me any remedy for the following:—I have some young apple-trees, which have been barked completely round the stem by sheep.

What is a cheap but satisfying diet for a puppy? I have one of the Newfoundland breed; its appetite is enormous, and will soon ruin me in keep. A SUBSCRIBER.

Dec. 12, 1854.

MICE.

In the hope I may be of some service to your correspondent who complains of the depredations of mice on his crocus-beds, I would, through the medium of your very excellent paper, recommend him to adopt a plan I have myself adopted on similar occasions with the most favourable results.

The injury is committed by the short-tailed field mouse. Its colour is inclining to that of the domestic mouse, the upper part being blackish, and the under of an ash-colour. It attacks the roots of the crocus, and removes them to its general store, where, M. Buffon informs us, they sometimes have above a bushel of food at a time. He must purchase of a chemist a pot of Roth and Ringensin's Vermin Destroying Paste, which will cost him sixpence, and spread it rather thick on small pieces of toasted cheese, which are to be placed on the crocus-beds. These he will find partially devoured in a day or two, and the cause of the mischief will be speedily and easily removed. Although I believe it is stated that cats and dogs will not touch it, he will not, without timely notice, permit a favourite spaniel of any of his fair friends to roam at large. I have been a subscriber to your paper ever since its commencement, and heartily do I concur in the gratifications expressed by many at the recent improvements in it. We shall now have wherewith "they who tarry at home may divide the spoil;" and, considering the immense addition they are to our domestic comfort and happiness, I am sure all right-thinking gentlemen will view the matter in the same light as yourself.—Yours faithfully, H. T. G. W.

TO A "READER."

Sir,—I had hoped to have seen your letter of the 25th Nov., respecting the treatment of the Avicaria fabricata answered before now, by some one of the numerous admirers of THE FIELD, and a younger and more scientific pen than mine; but, in the absence of all other advice, I would respectfully suggest (since you are satisfied as to the drainage) that the soil in which the plant has been placed is too poor. If you are at a loss how to remedy this, let me know, and my pen is again at your service.

Dec. 13, 1854.

ARBORICULTURE.

THE FARM.

THE landed interest and farming pursuits have received a great impetus from the several meetings in London of the Royal Agricultural Society, the Farmers' and the Smithfield Clubs, as also the meetings of the Society of Arts, during the past week. These societies, by avoiding all political discussion, include noblemen, gentlemen, and agriculturists of all parties, who not only take an interest in the welfare and well-doing of their country, but who are united, as well for the purpose of forwarding, as of improving, the several branches of practical agriculture, and promoting the general communication of its acquirements as a science. Experiments in draining and subsoiling of land, and the mode of detecting the adulteration of guano and other portable manures, is there detailed in extenso, and their operations discussed before large assemblies, with a view to effect and accomplish what such societies and associations are expected to perform. The general improvements promoted under the auspices of these valuable societies, among several others, have been the introduction of green crops, as artificial grasses, &c., and an improved method of turnip culture, the improvement of agricultural machinery by means of portable or fixed thrashing-engines, steam-ploughs, and other ploughs of an improved nature, as also drills and clod-crushers; better breeds of all kinds of live stock, a more numerous variety of seeds, and a higher system of farming. Mr. Mechi, at the Society of Arts, entered into a lengthened discussion on the good effects of liquified and solid manures, and the great importance of circulation—earthly, vital, or monetary; and he proved that stagnated water or air is as ruinous to the plants as it would be to ourselves, and he chuckled over farming prospects with a very satisfactory balance-sheet. A lengthened and animated discussion then took place upon the relative merits of manure, in which Mr. Sidney, Mr. Oakley, Mr. Davies, Mr. Morton, Colonel Challoner, and Mr. Caird took part, and the feeling of the speakers was, for the most part, in favour of the application of manure in a solid pulverised form. At the Central Farmers' Club, held in Bridge-street, Blackfriars, there was also an animated discussion on "the results arrived at from the several systems of drainage in practice during the last few years." It was introduced by Mr. Bailey Denton, of Gravelly, Herts. He advocated a deep system, say four feet, in retentive clay lands, whilst Mr. Ballock Webster thought that in such soils a depth of three feet at moderate distances upon retentive clay soils was more efficacious than going deeper at wide distances. This proved a voxata questio amongst the members of the club, and we believe a committee will be formed to ascertain which mode is most beneficial on retentive clay soils, and whether porous soils ought to be drained deeply. The price of wheat remains much the same as last week, although on Wednesday last a rally of 1s. in prices took place; the decline in barley in Mark-lane has been fully 2s. per quarter, and oats have not advanced in price. Prices generally have been well supported. Farming prospects still remain good. If the farmer, amateur or working, of the present day, be not endowed with sound practical knowledge in the multifarious branches of the art and mystery of agriculture, he cannot attribute it to a dearth of instruction, which is now profusely distributed and dispersed, by aid of numerous societies; and it may, indeed, with justice be said, that the light of agricultural science, like other sciences, is beaming gloriously, dissipating the clouds of antiquated ignorance and superstitions bigotry.

FARMING PROSPECTS.

THE CATTLE SHOWS.

(From our Correspondent.)

The breeding and rearing of cattle and sheep has, for many years past, been a prominent feature in the history of the agriculture of this country, although agriculture, considered as a modern science (still an ancient art), and as a means of providing for an immensely increased and increasing population, made no considerable progress until the middle, or towards the end, of the last century. Yet the attention or towards the several herds of cattle and flocks of sheep has paid to the several herds of cattle and flocks of sheep has been so great, that they have become for some years past an object of acquisition by continental nations, and, before the present war, even to Russian princes; and, I believe, two years ago, after the July Windsor Show, Prince Demidoff purchased prize bulls, and other good breeds, to the amount of £2,000 and upwards, and which, I have reason to know, were afterwards shipped to an estate of his near Florence. America is also a large purchaser for our shorthorn bulls; and, I believe, that the celebrated bull, the Duke of Gloucester, sold at the late Lord Ducie's sale for £682. 10s., whose sire, the Grand Duke, was sold for 1,000 guineas, and whose dam fetched £377. 10s., has left us for America. This is chiefly owing to such meritorious breeders of stock as the Bakewells (father and son), of Ditchley, in Leicestershire, who, having observed that moderate-sized, compact, small, and fine-boned animals were generally in the best condition, applied themselves to regulate their breeding in such a manner as to develop those desirable points only, and to remove what they considered blemishes. This mode was afterwards followed out by Messrs. Collins and Bates—great names in the Herd Book—and afterwards by Mr. Booth, and the late Lord Spencer and his father. So also with sheep, the slow-feeding, long-woolled, rickety-looking animals, which seldom got fat before they were three years old, by a judicious cross with improved Leicesters, are now fit for the butcher at little more than a year old; and much credit is due to Mr. Ellman, and also to his father and grandfather, as also to the Duke of Richmond and Mr. Rigden, of Sussex, who have now brought the Southdowns to that point of perfection which has made them the envy of the world. One cannot not but be struck with astonishment at the vast difference of the breeds in different counties, both of cattle and sheep, from the fine Hereford, Devon, or Durham ox, worth, when fat, £40, down to the abortions which we often see on our commons worth as many shillings; or from the princely, prize Down sheep, worth £5, to the wild, haggard-looking spectacles which we see on our hills in many parts of the west of England. Sheep, the nearer they approach the Down in form and quality, the more they are likely to command the best London prices. Pure-bred Lincolns, Leicesters, and Cotteswolds are considered too fat; unless they are sent to market young, they are sure to fetch inferior prices. There is a very fine breed of sheep, between a Down and a Leicester, which originated, I believe, with the Bennets of Bedfordshire; and I saw in the last Christmas Smithfield Show some very fine cross-breeds of Mr. Overman's, of Norfolk, evidently sprung from the old black-faced Norfolks. In former times live stock was either kept on such a limited scale, so as to render the amount of winter food easily attainable, or they were half-starved, in very severe winters, for several months whilst it lasted; but as the improved knowledge of the science of agriculture increased, it was found necessary and profitable to alternate the crops by green food, that is, crops of artificial grasses, including the different kinds of clovers, as also turnips, mangel wurzel, and other roots and plants, for by having a proper supply of these substances, two important points in farming were gained—the support of cattle for manure, and the alternations of green with corn crops; thus at once enriching the land, and relieving it from the exhausting properties which the corn crops had caused, by being grown for many years in succession, which was a very common practice in those days. Turnips, as most people know, were introduced into Norfolk about a century ago, producing a revolution in the condition of agriculture, and subsequently mangel wurzel has been introduced, especially in the neighbourhood of London, with great advantage. Its chief superiority over turnips is, that it will succeed where the turnip declines, and will thrive in tenacious soils which will not produce turnips, and it is very greedy for manure, and enables farmers, where manure predominates, as in and near large towns, to support a large amount of live stock. Its fattening and milching qualities are good, and the produce heavy, and not so susceptible of failure as the turnip. It is thus of the first importance with breeders to obtain the necessary supply of cows from some well-known stock of healthy character, combining beauty, symmetry of form, and good quality of flesh, and early propensity to fatten; and it is found to be a matter of the greatest importance for the young stock to be fed from the first on food which has a tendency to increase the milky secretions. It is poor feeding that causes so much young stock to turn out bad; and they should be reared in good pastures, and provided with oil cake in small quantities, turnips, and other roots in the winter, as it is almost an impossibility to rear any animal to perfection without the best treatment, both in summer and winter, and it is as well to bear in mind, that if an animal has not arrived at its full growth in bone and flesh, much of the fattening food is consumed in the formation of frame and muscle. The food then of such an animal should contain less carbonaceous and more nitrogenous matter than if for fattening only. Hence, for young animals, grass lands are so beneficial, and their value is considerably enhanced by the high rents that are given for them, as they suit lean stock, and those that are getting fresh and ripe for stall-feeding; the stall-feeding system then should not commence until the animal be half or three parts fat, and the grass will carry him no further, and the season approaching in which he would necessarily decline unless stall-feeding be introduced; indeed, it is perfectly necessary to increase the number and size of stock by what is called artificial means; in fact, I believe the whole profit of the farm arises from manure and labour. Such being, then, the case, it is requisite to have recourse to a proper alternation of cropping, and, for general purposes, there is none better than the Essex shift or four-course system—viz., turnips, clover, barley, and wheat, in succession; thus by altering the crops, and by manuring the land, through the medium of herds and flocks eating the produce of the green crops, which should be kept up to the utmost extent the land will carry, a system of high farming may be carried on, highly instructive and remunerative, according to present prices, although not without considerable outlay of capital; and the supply of animal food thus supported throughout the kingdom. E. B. A.

Farmers' Club House,
39, New Bridge-street, Blackfriars.

THE LAND.

MANURES.—The following is from an address by a practical farmer, which appears in an American journal, called the Northern Farmer:—

I have been trying to think of some article that will not make manure, but I cannot at present think of any, unless it be an icicle, and I believe that I may be at fault even here. The late David Buffum, a good farmer and a close observer, used to say that "rain was the manure of poor land." In fact, I believe that everything may be made into manure. Glass bottles are a first-rate manure: glass contains from 20 to 40 per cent. of potash—a most powerful manure. A barrel of ground-glass would probably be worth a ton of sea-weed applied to the soil. Ground granite-rock is a capital manure for clay soils. Some farmers carefully pick up all the shells, bones, old boots, rags, hats, &c., &c., that accumulate in their back yards, and tuck them into some corner, and there suffer them to remain, an unsightly ill-savoured heap of rubbish. My practice has ever been to plough such rubbish under the soil, where most of it soon rots into good manure. Wool is a most powerful manure, and consequently all old woollen garments, hats, &c. Farmers I consider to be worth as much, pound for pound, as the best of guano; so is hair of all kinds; even old leather will turn into hide again if buried in the soil. Shells are an excellent manure; mark where they lie thick in the soil, you will always find it rich, even though they were placed there by the Indians a century ago. Bones are a most enriching manure, especially if ground or pounded. No farmer should ever throw them from his land. I always spread what accumulates on my farm with the manure. I plough them in. When my land is laid down with oats and grass seed, I generally pass over the field with hoe in hand to smooth the corners, &c., and when I see a bone above ground I dig a hole and bury it just beneath the surface—that spot will not wear out soon, depend upon it. It is a trifle to be sure, but then it is so much saved, and nothing lost, and that is the side of the fence to keep on in order to prosper. Never waste, if it is but a pin. Better give a dollar than waste a penny; you will prosper better. It has been my custom to mingle round turnip-seed with hay-seed, and to sow it with my oats, for late-feed for sheep, also with my corn at second hoeing. After the crop of oats is removed, they frequently grow well. On one occasion, in passing over my oat-stubble, I observed a huge turnip, some four or five times as large as its fellows; I had the curiosity to look for the cause, and found that its tap-root was inserted in the eye-hole of a creature's skull that lay buried beneath. Ground-bones and wood-ashes are probably two of the most valuable manures known, and have never been fully appreciated as yet by our farmers. The dead bone will make its living fellow; the ashes of a tree will grow the tree again. I want our farmers to think of these things.

LIVE STOCK.

FARM BUILDINGS.—The following excellent practical hints on farm buildings were given by Mr. Webster, at the "London Central Farmers' Club":—

After having visited nearly all the best farm buildings in England, Ireland, and Scotland, and noted the requirements of farmers in different localities, I have come to the conclusion that partially closed sheds, eighteen feet wide in the clear, and not less than eight feet in height of walls, are capable of being made available for all the purposes, except that of the barn, for which farm buildings are required under the various systems of farming now pursued. [Mr. Webster here referred to his models in explanation of his views.] Take, for instance, model No. 1, and suppose it be required for milch cows, fattening stock, or young cattle. You have a space of three feet for the feeding passage, two feet for the feeding trough, six feet for the animal, one foot for the drain, and six-foot passage behind, with say four feet in width for each animal, as the case may be. Again, should Mr. Warne's system of box-feeding be pursued, this arrangement is equally well adapted to it, the only difference being in the interior fittings. The same holds good if Mr. Mechi's system of gratings for sheep be pursued; and in this case the interior fittings might be moveable, to allow of the conversion of this room for other purposes when not wanted for sheep. In fact, in most cases, the interior fittings should be moveable for the sake of convenience. For stabling, you have but to partition off six feet for each horse, or, what might be better, to take in twenty-four feet of shed; and making your stables crossways, get six feet for each of four horses, and a good harness-room across the end. For pigsties the plan is equally applicable, through a different arrangement of the fittings. And it will be easily understood that portions of these sheds partitioned off, or erections of the same dimensions, will answer well for carpenters' and blacksmiths' shops, straw and root houses, gig-houses for bailiff, &c.; whilst for shelter for young cattle in the straw-yard the interior wall would be done away with, and posts substituted; and for carts and implements, posts substituted in the same manner for the outward wall. I will not attempt to lay down any general rule as to the mode of arranging these 18-foot sheds, as it ought to depend in a great measure upon situation, kind of stock kept, and various local circumstances; but where these make it desirable, I think it will be found practically that three or four 18-foot sheds placed together will form as convenient and economical a covered home-stall as any other kind of erection. One or two remarks, however, I may be allowed to make, which, though trite here, may not be inopportune elsewhere. The square or oblong farm is nearly always advantageous. Straw, hay, and roots should be near the cattle, the cart and implement shed near the stable, the piggery near the dairy and boiling-house, the cow-house near the dairy; and there should be but one entrance, which should be near the bailiff's cottage or the farm-house, so that persons going to and fro may be seen. But, though the exact form of the homestead may be a matter of indifference, or may depend on circumstances, the question as to covered or open homesteads cannot, I take it, be looked upon in that light; for whether we consider the comfort of the animals, and therein their condition for fattening faster and cheaper, or the greater value of unwashed manure, we must, I think, discard in a great measure the idea of the open homestead. For my own part, I decidedly object to covered homesteads opened at the sides, as precluding the proper regulation of the temperature. Any one who has stood under open railway-stations on a cold day may have experienced some of the sensations to which cattle are subject under these intended to be comfortable homesteads. As the arrangement of the homestead may vary according to circumstances, so also may the materials of which it is composed. I have thought it might be desirable to give a rough estimate of the cost of eighteen-foot sheds, as far as the shell, i. e., the walls and roofing, and I caused one to be prepared, showing what would be the cost for 100 feet of shed at the present price of timber, slates, and bricks in the London market. Upon going fully into the matter and getting estimates for tiles, slates, and iron-roofs, in various localities, I find that with walls of brick and stone, if you take any agricultural district, the expenses per foot in length of these sheds, and including windows and doors, will not exceed 25s. In most places it will not be more than 20s., and where stone or bricks are found for the walls and rough timber for other purposes, it will be only from 12s. to 14s. In addition, I have only to notice the barn, and as far as my experience goes, I would never build one more than sufficiently large to hold one rick, of the size usually made in the locality, with space for the barn machinery and straw. This may be placed at the end or centre of the sheds, as seems best. Thus it would appear that we have in these 18-foot sheds a plan of farm buildings adapted for the improved systems of farming of the present day; equally good for any other that may be adopted, whether on a large or smaller scale, capable of expansion to any extent, easily constructed from the materials to be found in different localities, as inexpensive as possible in a plain form, and yet capable of great ornament and finish.

Mr. MECHI agreed with Mr. Webster, that it must be laid down as a rule that the cattle on the farm should be sheltered, and that open yards like those which had hitherto prevailed could no longer be tolerated, as they were evidently unprofitable. It was the mischief which arose from bad ventilation that caused farmers in Essex to keep their horses in open yards; and it was well-known that where sheds and open yards were combined, there was scarcely any doctor's bill. Ventilation was a point in which he felt very great interest, as he sold off his farm, annually, meat to the value of £2,500. His losses of late had been little more than nominal, and this he attributed to the circumstance that there was ample ventilation. As regarded the best method of securing ventilation he thought it ought to be obtained from the bottom rather than the top of a building. He would tell them why he was of that opinion: in his sheds, the floors of which were boarded, he had on a level with the ground a number of six-inch pipes, placed within nine inches or a foot from the floor and it was a singular fact that while there were large openings above, the smell issued from the lower far more than the upper part of the building. The inference was unmistakable; and he considered it, therefore, highly important that in stables and cattle-sheds, especially such as were made of brick, and therefore impervious to the air, an opening should be made below as well as above, in order that the circulating air might be complete. Another point for consideration was the question of the construction of boarded floors as part of an improved system of farm buildings. He had always entertained a great dislike to boarded floors, as far as comfort and appearance were concerned; but after eight years' experience, he thought the balance was decidedly in favour of boarded floors. (Hear.) He could assure them from that experience, that if they divided a lot of bullocks, keeping one-half on boards and the other half on straw, the butcher, when he came to make his selection, would go first to the bullocks on the board. It was only that day his butcher had remarked to him, that he should always give the preference to sheep fed on boards, as the mutton was of a superior quality; whilst a friend of his, who had been obliged to keep some animals on straw instead of boarded floors, said that his butcher had complained that the meat was not as good as under the latter system. As regarded both sheep and pigs, he (Mr. Mechi) was convinced that boarded floors were best.

FARMING MATTERS.

REVIEW OF SALES—VALUE OF PROPERTY.

[From the Journal of Auctions.]

The sales to be noted in this review are not numerous, but they are of more than usual interest. Of estates, properly so called (for a very ridiculous fashion has crept in of calling every little leasehold cottage or paddock of three acres an estate), we have to report the following:—First, there was Horsley-hill in Surrey, midway between Guildford and Dorking. Of this 63 acres were sold for £1,190, or £19 per acre; 129 acres, with farm buildings, at £1,490 or only £12 per acre; 154 acres, at £1,700, being the same proportionate price; and 66 acres for £660, or £10 per acre. But better prices were obtained in Bedfordshire. There Messrs. Cobb sold a farm of 404 acres for £10,520, or £25 per acre; 46 acres for £1,170, being the same price, and divers other lesser lots at some advances. The entire sale of 836 acres produced the sum of £21,880, or £28 per acre, which may be deemed a pretty fair test of the present selling price of land in that part of the country, viz., the parish of Streteley.

Some sales of land in small lots in Lincolnshire, near Spalding, will afford some test of value there. Mr. Beeton sold 59 acres of pasture for £2,900, or £49 per acre; 79 acres, with farm buildings, for £2,800, or £35 per acre; 25 acres, pasture and arable, for £1,000, or £40 per acre; 7½ acres of arable, for £420, or £56 per acre. On the borders of Pendle Forest, near Burdley, in Lancashire, 19 acres of meadow and pasture were sold by Messrs. Denbigh and Son for £2,000, or £100 per acre, being forty years' purchase.

In Kent, Dulham Farm, near Rochester, 206 acres, with farm buildings, was sold by Messrs. Cobb for £7,320, or £35 per acre. The rental of this was £290 per annum. Another farm near it, of only 27 acres, but consisting partly of hop-grounds, and having a rental of £90 per annum, sold for £2,200, or £81 per acre; and the produce of the sale of 19 other acres in several lots, the rental of which was £125, was £3,370, or £177 per acre on the average. But then it consisted chiefly of land containing brick-earth, and adapted for building.

In Essex, in the parish of Gosfield, a sale by Messrs. Beadel and Son has produced some good prices. Gosfield hall, mansion, park, and farm of 462 acres, including a lake of 36 acres, with three other farms annexed, and which amounted together to 1,106 acres, obtained £33,400, or £30 per acre. Another farm of 100 acres, of which 70 acres were wood, sold for £2,500, or £25 per acre. A wood of 7 acres obtained £150, or £21 per acre.

At the same sale the five manors, said to be worth about £75 per acre, sold for £620.

The advowson of Great Saling, in Essex, tithe rent charge £181, with residence and 8 acres of glebe, the present incumbent being 64, was sold by Tophis and Son for £980.

The following is a summary of the results of the sales we have noticed, and which are thus given for convenience of reference:—

Surrey, average prices per acre, £19, £12, £10.
Bedfordshire " " £75, £28.
Lincolnshire " " £19, £35, £40, £56.
Lancashire " " £105.
Kent " " £35, £81, £177.
Essex " " £30, £25, £21.

Among sales of mansions, &c., which are rather matters for curiosity than of value for the assistance of purchasers, mortgagees, and their advisers, is the Hightgate-hall House, at Hawkhurst, in Kent, with four acres of land, which obtained £1,396. Lordship-lodge, at Tottenham, with ten acres of land, sold for £4,500.

Ground-rents, as will be seen by numerous sales, continue to command prices which pay the purchasers from 5 to 5½ per cent. Yet what investment can be safer than this.

Of shares, the following have been sold. In the West Ham Gas Company, £5 shares, all paid, sold for £4 to £4.10s. per share—yet they yield 5 per cent. interest. Five shares in the Burnley Market Improvement Company, £10 paid, sold for £20.

The Westminster Improvement Bonds continue to exhibit the same remarkable depression. They have now so fallen in value, that ten of them, for £1,000 each, only obtained £300 each—yet we understand that interest at 5 per cent. is regularly paid upon them.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE GREAT SMITHFIELD CATTLE MARKET.—With regard to the general character of the show of beef, there is much scope for commendation. It was a general remark that the beasts were never so "selling," as, with some few exceptions, here were none of those absurdly and preposterously overfed animals which we were accustomed some years back to have on show at Christmas. There was consequently an improvement in the character of the supply, for, when an increased consumption is met with an increased supply of good consumable flesh, the absence of uneatable fat can be no cause for regret. In fact, the graziers of England are now fully aware that to obtain a proper and just reward for their labour, time, and capital, they must send to market meat fit for the tables of the people, instead of fat suited only for the tallow-cask. It is but seldom, and not in the whole lifetime of some men, that tallow and grease of every kind realise the high prices now and for some time past current. The supplies of tallow from Russia are not always cut off to force up the price to the present quotation. The graziers of England are, however, the caterers of the nation for an adequate supply of good consumable meat, and they will best study their own interest by meeting the demand. The show to-day was not, however, what we could have wished, and still hope to see in time accomplished. There were too many inferior beasts, and not a sufficient number of the very choicest kind. The show of Scotch beasts, comprising about 600, was very fine, all being very choice selling animals. Messrs. Giblett and Gurrier showed their usual quality of this description, from the stock of Messrs. Milne, Martin, Stewart, Shepherd, and others. They had also some very fine Herefords from Leominster. Messrs. Collins exhibited some superior lots from Norfolk, and the stands of both these salesmen were a great attraction. Messrs. Burrell and Morgan, likewise, had a fine show of stock. There was an unusually large supply of foreign beasts, chiefly of the Dutch breed, and Messrs. Giblett and Gurrier had a novelty in a lot of 80 fine Spanish beasts. With regard to the state of trade for beef, it was, notwithstanding the period so long before Christmas, steady throughout the day, at from 4s. to 5s. 4d., and a good clearance was effected. One new feature of the market was the presence of a considerable number of buyers from different parts of the country, between whom and the top of the London trade there was an active competition for the choicest quality of meat. The smaller metropolitan butchers were quite beaten out of the market, and their choice will generally have to be selected from the show of Friday next. The supply of Christmas mutton was for both quantity and quality much under that of last year. In fact, the quality of mutton has been indifferently good throughout the entire year. There were, however, to-day some few really good sheep, but they were not of the size of previous years' shows. A general scarcity of choice large sheep was observable. Messrs. J. and B. Weall had some fine Downs on sale for Mr. Whittingstall; also some very good half-breds belonging to Messrs. Rowland. Mr. Gurrier had, as in previous years, some very fine Cotswold sheep from Mr. W. Hewers, of Northleach, Gloucestershire; also a fine lot of Dutch sheep from Amsterdam. Messrs. Collins, Eland, Hancock, and other salesmen, showed some fine sheep, but, nevertheless, mutton of the larger sort was scarce. The state of the mutton trade was very good for the best descriptions, at 5s. 4d. per stone. For other qualities the trade was slow at from 4s. to 4s. 6d. per stone of 11lb.

BIRMINGHAM AND MIDLAND COUNTIES CATTLE SHOW.—The annual exhibition of fat cattle, sheep, and poultry, established for this district six years since, opened at Birmingham on Monday. As a whole, the show is looked upon as quite up to that of last year, which was in almost every respect excellent, and in some particulars this year's exhibition exceeds any of its predecessors. Taking the classes of neat cattle generally, there is more equality of merit, with a very high reach of perfection as regards breeding and feeding, and in almost every class there was very great competition. The entries were not quite so strong as last year; there were 119 against 127 in 1853. The Devon classes were all better filled than last year. Breeders who have confined their attention to this class of animal for a long course of years declared that the specimens shown to-day were perfect. His Royal Highness Prince Albert took the first prize for Devon steers and for Devon heifers. The Earl of Leicester was also amongst the successful competitors in these classes. The shorthorn blood was best sustained by the heifers, the cows and oxen being not perhaps quite up to last year's entries. The first prize for Hereford steers was awarded to Prince Albert. There was a great deal of competition in all the classes for Herefords, all the animals possessing the very highest merit. The "cross-breds" attracted much attention, and were very much praised. The gold medal and extra prize of £20, for the best beast in the yard, was awarded to Mr. William Heath, of Ludham Hall, Norfolk, for his Hereford ox. The uniformity of merit in all the classes was a subject very much commented upon by the eminent agriculturists; and one distinguishable feature of the exhibition is the fact that no such thing as an over-fed beast is to be seen in the stalls—a very gratifying change, indeed, from the waste of feeding so much in vogue a few years ago. There was a capital show of sheep.

SALE OF SHEEP.—The seventh annual sale of Shropshire sheep, the property of the Earl of Aylesford, was held at the farm, Meriden Heath, by Messrs. Brown and Clark, on the 4th of September, when thirty-one sheerhogs, and nine two and three-shear rams, and 200 store ewes and theaves, were disposed of. There was a large attendance, and amongst the principal purchasers were Lord Willoughby de Broke, the Hon. A. H. Vernon, Lord Dartmouth, C. B. Adderley, Esq., M.P., General Adams, Dr. Wood, Colonel Whichcote, Mr. Docker, Mr. Dorrer, Mr. Neville, Mr. Pedley, Mr. Rigg, Mr. Sammons, Mr. Glover, &c. A two-shear ram was purchased for Lord Willoughby at £15.; another of the same age realised £12. 10s.; and a three-shear ram, £10. Of the shearing rams, the highest price was £11. 10s., the purchaser being Mr. Docker, of Allesley; and four others were sold at £10., £9. 5s., £9., and £8. 10s., respectively. Of the ewes, four pens were purchased for the Hon. A. H. Vernon Sudbury, at 70s., 60s., and 50s., per head.

HIGH FARMING.—At the ordinary meeting of the Society of Arts last week, Mr. Mechi read his fourth paper "On British Agriculture," with some account of his own operations at Tiptree. He showed that the last abundant harvest was inadequate for our increased population, and that the remedy for the deficiency was to be found in improved methods of farming, especially as to drainage, which alone, if properly effected, would add millions of quarters of corn and some thousands of live stock to our present supply. That improvements in farming were profitable was proved by his own balance-sheet, which showed a net gain of £750.

LAMING IN NOVEMBER.—On Tuesday last, says the Elgin Courier, six ewes of the Dorsetshire breed, belonging to Mr. Cruickshank, Clives, presented their owner with a couple of lambs each; and what is no less extraordinary, forty other ewes of the same stock are expected to lamb this week! These lambs will therefore be ready for the butcher by Christmas. It is something unusual in this quarter to see a flock of ewes suckling their lambs in the beginning of winter; and but for the enterprise of Mr. Cruickshank in taking the initiative in the introduction of this famed breed of sheep, we would not have had the novelty to record. We trust the success of the speculation will be such as to induce this eminent stock-breeder to add even further to the benefits which in this respect he has already conferred upon the country.

LEEDS SMITHFIELD MARKET.—CAUTION TO HORSE AND CATTLE DEALERS.—Persons attending Leeds fairs and markets for the purpose of disposing of horses, cattle, sheep, or pigs, should know that (since the Town Council has provided and opened Smithfield market), they are liable to a fine of £5 if they expose animals for sale in the public streets of the town. On Wednesday last, at the Leeds Court-house, Mr. Sands, nuisance and market inspector, complained against the following persons for exposing horses for sale in North-street, camp-road, or adjacent streets, at the recent fair:—Mr. Henry Austick, Monk Fryston, who was fined 5s. and costs; Joseph Hainsworth, of Farsley, who was ordered to pay the costs; John Thomas Hall, of Wakefield, who was convicted in a penalty of 5s. and costs; Benjamin Asquith, of Rothwell, who was fined 1s. and expenses; Thomas Stanfield, of Pudsey, who was ordered to pay costs; Joseph Lamb, of Burley, who was convicted in a 5s. penalty and expenses; and John Hudson, of Whiston, near Rotherham, who was mulcted in a similar penalty and costs.

A cow recently found its way through an open door into a clergyman's breakfast-parlour at Towyn, Merionethshire, and upon being disturbed, jumped through the window, smashing the glass, and carrying the frame away on her neck.

THE COUNTRY HOUSE

HOUSEHOLD MATTERS.

ABERNETHY BISCUITS.—Dissolve a quarter of a pound of butter in half a pint of warm milk, and, with four pounds of fine flour, a few carraways, and half a pound of sugar, make a stiff but smooth paste; and, to render the biscuits short and light, add half a drachm of carbonate of ammonia in powder. Roll out very thin; stamp the biscuits, pricking them with a fork; and bake in tins, in a quick oven.

Mr. Sover recommends housekeepers to place the teapot with the dry tea in it upon the hob for a little while before making. It improves both strength and flavour. Rain water, when pure, is the best for making all infusions.

TO PRESERVE CURRANTS AND KEEP THEM FRESH THROUGH THE WINTER.—Take them when ripe, separate them from the stem, put them in a glass jar, set them in a kettle of cold water, then put them over the fire, and boil fifteen or twenty minutes; cork tight, and set away where the frost will not get to them.

ADULTERATION OF FOOD AND DRUGS.—A meeting of medical and scientific gentlemen was held on Tuesday at Birmingham, to consider what measures should be adopted by the Legislature to prevent the adulteration of food and drugs. Mr. Postgate stated the result of the analyses he had made of flour, milk, &c., and the danger which arose from adulteration. A discussion followed, in which the statements were corroborated by several gentlemen. After a vote of thanks to the chairman, the meeting separated.

MICE IN AVIARIES.—Wherever there are birds, there most assuredly will be mice. It is next to an impossibility to keep these pests out, and they poison all they touch. Examine, therefore, very narrowly, every corner of the room; and whenever you see a hole, nail over it a piece of tin or zinc. So cunning are these vermin, that they conceal themselves in the most unsuspected situations. I have actually found them secreted in the food "hoppers;" they have raised the lid, and artfully ensconced themselves behind the seed until my hack was turned! I hardly need tell my readers what was their fate when so discovered. Suffice it to say that they were "tried," and that I myself personated the witnesses, judge, jury, and executioner. They were taken in flagrante delicto.—William Kidd.

LIBRARY.

THE WAR IN THE CRIMEA.—A good map was a desideratum. It has just been supplied in "Stanford's Sebastopol and Country Round, including Balaklava, Kamara, Kadikoi, the Belbek and Cheruaya Rivers; showing also the Positions of the Allied Camps, the Allied and Russian Batteries, Ports, &c., with Number of Guns, the Position of the Turkish and other Redoubts, the Head Quarters of Lord Raglan," &c. Compiled from the New Admiralty Charts and Authentic Sketches by Captain Wetherall, D.A.Q.M.G., and other officers. Mr. Edward Stanford is map-seller and map-mounter to her Majesty's Stationery-office, and the present map is published at 6, Charing-cross, price 2s., or 2s. 6d. by post.

BATH AND WEST OF ENGLAND AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.—The new volume of the journal of this influential society is expected to be published about Christmas next, and a copy of it will be sent, gratuitously, to every member of the society, and a large number otherwise disposed of.

THE MASONIC MIRROR.—The second number of this excellent work made its appearance on the 1st of the month. Press of matter this week compels us to defer a notice of it until our next.

THE BILLIARD ROOM.

BILLIARD MATCH IN AID OF THE PATRIOTIC FUND.—On Tuesday evening, a match at billiards was played between Mr. John Roberts, the celebrated English player, and Mr. Bowles of the Union Club, for £25 a side, it being agreed that all the money received for admission should be given to the Patriotic Fund. The match was "the best out of eleven games," of a hundred each, Roberts giving Bowles thirty in each game. The play commenced at half-past seven o'clock, at Roberts's rooms, Cross-street, and it terminated with the tenth game, at half-past ten o'clock, Roberts having won six to Bowles's four. The following was the score:—

1st.	2nd.	3rd.	4th.	5th.	6th.	7th.	8th.	9th.	10th.
R.	R.	R.	R.	R.	R.	R.	R.	R.	R.
30	30	30	30	30	30	30	30	30	30
1	31	1	31	1	31	1	31	1	31
5	31	5	35	2	41	31	15	44	4
23	35	15	38	87	17	30	41	17	55
35	43	17	37	94	51	67	44	38	67
39	69	38	73	100	64	88	86	83	79
83	86	90	92	83	100	85	101	91	87
86	89	84
92	101	101

The play was, on the whole, considered good, although not great. The best game was the third, in which Roberts scored 85 at one break, almost entirely by a succession of winning hazards, many of them being splendidly made. In the second game he made 22, all by winning hazards and bold play; in the eighth, he scored 76; and in the tenth, as will be seen, he left his opponent no chance. In fact, he seemed "on his mettle" after the "love game" won by Bowles, who played very finely indeed in the ninth game, scoring 70, and thus at once ending that point. The room was well filled during the match, and the amount received and paid over to the Patriotic Fund by Mr. Roberts is about £17.—Manchester Guardian.

POULTRY.

MANAGEMENT OF POULTRY.

Should the Editor of THE FIELD consider them worth a corner in his paper, I propose to give a few short notes on keeping breeding and fattening fowls in the most economical manner, and so as not to be kept, as they too frequently are, at a loss. It may seem unnecessary to write any more on a subject about which so many excellent works have been published; but most of these works, which I have seen, appear to me to be more Fanciers' than Poultry Keepers' guides. What I propose doing, therefore, is to put fancy birds out of the question, and only to take notice of those which will really pay for their keeping. Many friends have told me, that they have bought good birds, fed them well, and taken great pains with them, but that they must give it up as it did not pay; their eggs costing them at the rate of threepence or fourpence each, when they could buy new laid ones for a penny each. Now how is this? There must be something radically wrong in their method. Farmers who have a large corn barton, keep their fowls for little or nothing, it is true; but the great mass of eggs do not come from the farmer, but from the small cottager, and he certainly could not and would not keep poultry, if it was only to be done at a loss. I believe the fault to be that, too expensive fowls are bought to begin with, too much is spent on building the house for them, and last and not least they are kept in an improper place, that is to say, in some confined space where they have no run, and where even perhaps sunshine and fresh air are not to be had. The only fowls, I believe, that will answer without a run, are the Cochins China. Where fowls are kept for profit and use, the best plan is to obtain well-bred birds at a low figure, and that may be done by purchasing from a good breeder's yard, birds that he has rejected for some fault in feather or some such outward qualification. Such birds have all the good qualities of the particular breed to which they belong, and frequently throw chicken in all respects perfect. Let us now look at a rough table of expense and profit yielded by four fowls for a year. In this table I have put the average price of the best grinding barley, and the chicken at merely table price, whereas no doubt there would be some that would fetch three or four times the price as breeders. It must be remembered too, that two more hens may be kept with one cock over and above the number I have put down, so that the loss, in food, by the cock would be still further compensated by the profit of two more hens:—

	£	s.	d.
Cock and three hens, at 3s. 6d. each	...	...	12 0
Barley, $\frac{1}{2}$ of a pint each bird per day	...	...	1 13 9
Barley-meal for chicken	...	...	0 15 0
Barley for chicken, until five months old, say $\frac{1}{2}$ of a pint per day each	...	...	0 2 6
Expense	...	...	3 12 3
Eggs, say 110 each at fourteen for a shilling	...	...	1 3 6
27 chickens, at 3s. 6d. per couple	...	...	2 7 3
Dung, about	...	...	0 1 0
Feathers, about	...	...	0 1 6
Receipts	...	...	3 11 3
Expense	...	...	3 12 3
Profit	...	...	0 1 0

By this it appears that a profit, a very small one it is true, may be obtained the first year, and supposing the same stock to be kept the second year with the same results, we must deduct from the expenses, the cost price of the original stock birds, so that then the second year's profit would be 14s. I must again remind my readers that these lines are not intended for those who are fond of poultry and keep them regardless of expense, but for those who do not choose to spend much, for the luxury of new laid eggs, and also for the use of cottagers and others, whom some kind-hearted subscriber to this paper may thus instruct, to add a few shillings to their hard earnings. I cannot promise to continue these notes week by week regularly, as my time is much occupied with other matters, but I will do so as regularly as possible. I propose the following order:—The fowl-house, choice of stock, breeding, fattening, and diseases and accidents.

RUSTICS.

(To be continued.)

BIRMINGHAM POULTRY SHOW.—The Birmingham and Midland Poultry Show opened on Tuesday morning, at Bingley-hall, Birmingham, and presented great attraction to the general public. The specimens, though less numerous, were more select than on former occasions. The Hamburgs, though comparatively good, did not present all the improvements to be desired. At the same time, those now placed in competition were eminently superior to those of last year. The Poles were decidedly progressive; while in the Spanish classes, the commended pens enumerated by the judges would have walked over the course for a first prize

DO YOU WANT BEAUTIFUL HAIR,
WHISKERS, &c.?—If so, use PALMELLA, declared by thousands of testimonials to be nurgical in its effects. In all cases of baldness it is a certain remedy, causing a thick and luxuriant growth, strengthening weak hair, preventing its falling off, and checking greyness in all its stages. For the production of Whiskers and Moustaches in two or three weeks it has never been known to fail.

2s. 6d. post free (anywhere) on receipt of 21 penny postage stamps, by Miss ALICE MELVILLE, 23, Argyle-square, London.

"I was quite bald, but have now a good head of hair."—Wm. Hopton.

"My whiskers are growing very thick."—K. Mede, Esq.

"It restored my hair, which I had lost in patches."—W. Sturt.

"It has quite checked the greyness."—Miss H.M.

"My moustache is greatly improved."—Captain Ross.

J. B. ROSS & CO.,

IMPORTANT to FAMILIES FURNISHING, who study elegance with economy. JAMES COOK'S THREE GUINIA FRENCH-POLISHED MAHOGANY ARABIAN BEDSTEAD, Bedding, Cabinet, Carpet, Looking-glass, and Upholstery Warehouse.—Brompton-house, 22 and 23, Queen's-buildings, Knightsbridge. Estimates given, and a list of prices sent post-free.

FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS.

PATTERNS of the new COLOURED SHIRTS in every variety of colours. Upwards of 200 different Patterns for making FOLDING EUREKA SHIRTS sent per post (free) on receipt of six postage stamps. Price 27s. the half dozen.

FORD'S WHITE EUREKA SHIRTS, best quality, six for 40s.; second quality, six for 31s.; if washed, ready for use, 2s. extra.

CAUTION.—Ford's Eureka Shirts are stamped, "39, POULTRY, LONDON," without which none are genuine.

* Catalogues, with particulars, post free.

RICHARD FORD, 39, Poultry, London.

BILE! BILE! BILE!

If you suffer from the above distressing complaint, send twelve postage stamps to W. S. WOODBOY, CHEMIST, 76, NEW CITY, LAMBETH, London, and receive a Box of Pills, Diet Table, and plain rules in cases of sickness or accident, by return of post.

N.B.—If you wish to keep the doctor out of your house, don't neglect this timely advice.

STAMMERING perfectly and permanently CURED, in both Children and Adults. The system is easily understood and applied, and has been successfully pursued for the last twenty years, by Mr. BARTHOLOMEW, who cured himself. References to clergymen, gentlemen, and the parents of children cured.

Address Mr. BARTHOLOMEW, MELBOURNE-SQUARE, NORTH BRITON.
Children received into the House.

DEAFNESS.

DEAFNESS. — IMPORTANT DISCOVERY.—Dr. MANFRED, M.R.C.S., has this day published, free by post for eight postage stamps, a PHYSICIAN'S GUIDE FOR COUNTRY PATIENTS, for the Perfect and Permanent Restoration of Hearing, by his invaluable new treatment. Being a stop to quackery, cruel impositions on the suffering public, and exorbitant charges, this book will save thousands from the impositions of the self-styled doctors, inasmuch as the hearing can be restored for life. Deafness of the most inveterate nature relieved in half an hour, cured in a few hours, almost instant cessation of noises in the ears and head, by painless treatment. Hundreds of letters may be seen, and persons referred to, who have heard the usual tone of conversation in a few hours. Patients received daily at Dr. MANFRED'S residence, 72, REGENT-STREET, London (first door in Air-street), where all letters must be addressed.

DO YOU WANT BEAUTIFUL HAIR, WHISKERS, EYEBROWS, &c?—Notwithstanding the numerous oils, highly scented, and most injurious imitations which have been put forth, ROSALIE COUPELLE'S CRINOLIN is the only preparation to be depended on for the growth of Hair, Whiskers, &c., as also curling, nourishing, beautifying and strengthening the hair, and checking greyness. It is a most unique and elegant compound, and has never been known to fail. Price 2s. per bottle through all Chemists and Perfumers, or sent post free on receipt of 24 postage stamps, by ROSALIE COUPELLE, 69, CASTLE-STREET, NEWMAN-STREET, OXFORD-STREET, London.

Mr. Williams, 8, Lowther-street, Liverpool.—"I can now show as fine a head of hair as any person, solely from using your Crinolin."

Sergeant Craven, Longford Barracks, Ireland.—"Through using your Crinolin, I have an excellent moustache, which I had before despaired of."

Mr. Halley, Cumberland.—"It surpasses every thing of the kind."

Mrs. Cuthbert, Pangbourne.—"My head, which was quite bald, is now covered with new hair."

Mr. Lane, Golden Lion, Macclesfield street, City-road, London.—"A friend of mine, Mr. Harris, describes its effects as truly astonishing."

Mr. Yates, Hairdresser, Malton.—"The young man has now a good pair of whiskers. I want two bottles for other customers."

IF YOUR HAIR IS GREY OR RED use ROSALIE COUPELLE'S PURE INSTANTANEOUS LIQUID HAIR DYE, universally acknowledged as the only perfect one, and infinitely superior to the numerous disgraceful imitations which smell horribly, burn the hair, and leave an unnatural tinge. Price 3s. 6d. per bottle, through all Chemists, &c., or sent free, secure from observation, for 32 postage stamps.

Mr. Whittaker, 23, Fargate, Sheffield.—"Your Hair Dye is highly spoken of by all who have purchased it of me."

Mr. Peurse, King-street, Ludlow.—"Your Hair Dye has succeeded admirably, it gives such a natural tinge."

Mr. Pearson, 29, Fiskergate, Nottingham.—"Your Hair Dye is excellent."

Mr. Pacey, 2, Gloster-green, Oxford.—"It gives the greatest satisfaction."

James Thompson Esq., Middleton.—"It answers the highest expectations."

Mr. J. N. Clark, Killinick, Wexford.—"It is a most excellent and immediate Dye for the Hair, far preferable to all others."

Obtainable through all respectable Chemists and Perfumers, or of ROSALIE COUPELLE, 69, CASTLE-STREET, NEWMAN-STREET, OXFORD-STREET, London.

MANGER, RACK, AND WATER-TROUGH, AS ONE FIXTURE. IMPROVED AND NEWLY PATENTED.

COTTAM and HALLEN, the original inventors, obtained the Great Exhibition Prize Medal for this arrangement, to which all the latest improvements are adapted, secured by Patent, including a method entirely new of attaching the halter-weight and rein from the back of the manger to the under front of the plate, allowing the horse greater freedom, and being noiseless in operation, add much to its comfort whilst feeding, and convenience when at rest, as, likewise, from their position, avoiding the liability of the most restive horse getting out. No well-managed stable should be without these fittings.

COTTAM'S ENAMELLED MANGERS are constructed in the best possible manner, both as to form and utility; are cleanly in appearance, durable, and impervious to infection; manufactured in Plate, Galvanized, and Enamelled. Improved Surface Drain, with Safety Covers, Sanitary Traps, Stable Pumps, Loose Box, Fittings, Gutter Preserving Saddle and Harness Brackets, and every article in Stable Furniture, in stock. An extensive assortment of Patterns for both Plain and Ornamental Castings, and every description of Wrought and Cast Iron Work for building and other purposes. Agricultural and Horticultural Implements, Iron Gates, both plain and ornamental, Hurdles, Strain Fencing, &c.

Estimates and Catalogues on application to COTTAM and HALLEN,
2, WINSLEY-STREET, OXFORD-STREET.

RIMMEL'S TOILET VINEGAR,

(As exhibited in the Fountains at the Crystal Palace).

Is far superior to Eau de Cologne, as a Tonic and refreshing Lotion, for the Toilet or Bath, a reviving Perfume, and a powerful Disinfectant for apartments or sick rooms. Its numerous useful and sanitary properties render it an indispensable family requisite. Price 2s. 6d. and 5s.

Just out, price 6d.,

RIMMEL'S PERFUMED MINIATURE ALMANACK,

FOR imparting a delightful and lasting scent to Pocket-books, Card-cases, Desks, Work-boxes, &c. It is beautifully illustrated, and forms a most acceptable Christmas Present to friends at home or abroad. Sent by post for seven stamps.

Sold by E. RIMMEL, Perfumer to her Majesty, 39, GERRARD-STREET, SOHO, London; and by all Booksellers, Perfumers, and Chemists.

AT THE EXTENSIVE WAREHOUSES IN REGENT-STREET AND CORNHILL, BELONGING TO

H. J. and D. NICOLL,

MERCHANT TAILORS AND PALETOT PATENTEES.

THE best Materials, Talent, and Workmanship are employed, and the principle of a combination of economy and excellence maintained. Here also the Dress Buttons and Colours of every Yacht Club or Hunt are always ready for inspection.

FOR HUNTING.

The Scarlet, Brown, Olive, or Mixed Cloths, are both fine and strong, the dye cannot even be moved by acids, and in the course of manufacture they are prepared by a peculiar process to resist a very heavy shower of rain.

FOR YACHTING.

Every description of Pilot and Pea Jackets, with prepared India Rubber and other Waterproofed clothing, may also be seen.

For Shooting, Fishing, Rowing, or Cricketing, all suitable materials are provided.

Nicoll's Dry-seat Coat

Is useful to all, whether Sportsman or Traveller, as it is well known that rheumatism and colds, with the thousand and one other ills that flesh is heir to, are chiefly caught through damp seats.

114, 116, 118, 120, Regent-street, and 22, Cornhill.

TO SPORTSMEN, PEDESTRIANS, AND OTHERS.

A GREAT VARIETY OF NEW AND SECOND-HAND
SANDWICH BOXES, HUNTING FLASKS, DRAM BOTTLES,
IN SIZES, AND BEAKERS IN NESTS, IN ELECTRO-PLATE OR SILVER,
At THOMAS'S, Silversmiths and Platers, 153, New Bond-street, London.

IF YOU REQUIRE FAMILY ARMS,

Send NAME and COUNTY to the HERALDIC OFFICE. Fee for Search and Sketch of Arms, 3s. 6d., or Postage Stamps. Crest Engraved on Seal, signet Ring, &c., 8s. 6d. Arms, with Name on Plate, for Books, &c., Club Dishes, Seals, &c. Testimonials, Memorials, Voices of Thanks, &c., Written, Illustrated, and Embellished.

Arms Painted, Empaled, Quartered, for Banners, Flags, &c.

H. SALT, Lincoln's Inn Heraldic Office,
GREAT TURNSTILE, LINCOLN'S INN FIELDS.

COCOA, containing, as it does, a farinaceous substance, and a bland oil, is a most valuable article of diet. To adapt it, however, to delicate stomachs, it is essential that the farinaceous substance be perfectly incorporated with the oil, so that it may prevent the other from separating. Such union exists in the Cocoa here presented. The delightful flavour, in part dependent on the oil, is fully developed and the whole preparation made grateful to the weakest digestion.

JAMES EPPS, HOMOEOPATHIC CHEMIST, EGYPTIAN HALL, PICCADILLY,
112, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, 82, Old Broad-street, City.

In regard to purity, see the Report of the Analytical Commission in the "Lancet," July 5, 1851.

DEAFNESS and NOISES in the HEAD.—Institution for the Cure of Deafness, 9, Suffolk-place, Pall-mall, London.—Instant and permanent restoration of hearing guaranteed, without the use of ear-trumpets, instruments, or causing any moment's inconvenience to the most ailing or nervous sufferer. Dr. HOGGTON'S new and extraordinary discovery, by one consultation, enables deaf persons of either sex to hear immediately with perfect ease the lowest whisper, and magically removes all ringing in the ears, tinnitus, and private testimonials, and certificates from the most eminent physicians and surgeons in England, in whose presence deaf persons had been cured, and many hundreds of private patients cured, can be seen or referred to. Hours of consultation, eleven till four every day. FRANCIS ROBERT HOGGTON, Member of the London Royal College of Surgeons, May 2, 1843; Licentiate of the Apothecaries' Company, April 30, 1846.

Just Published,

SELF-CURE OF DEAFNESS, for COUNTRY PATIENTS; a Stop to Quackery, Quackery, and Exorbitant Fees. Sent, on receipt of seven stamps free. Examination free.
9, Suffolk-place, Pall-mall.

NO MORE PILLS NOR ANY OTHER MEDICINE.

For Indigestion (Dyspepsia), Constipation, Nervous, Bilious, and Liver Complaints, Cough, Consumption, and Debility.

DR BARRY'S delicious REVALENTA ARABICA FOOD saves 50 times its cost in Medicine, and Cures the above complaints, and their consequences, such as indigestion, acidity, heartburn, palpitation of the heart, nervous headaches, deafness, moves in the head and ears, pains at the pit of the stomach and between the shoulders, diarrhoea, dysentery, impurities and poverty of the blood, scrofula, asthma, dropsy, rheumatism, gout, nausea and sickness during pregnancy, after eating, or at sea; low spirits, spasms, cramps, epileptic fits, apoplexy, general debility, immoderate sleepiness, involuntary twitching, paralysis, tremors, dislike to society, inability for study, loss of memory, delirium, vertigo, blood to the head, exhaustion, melancholy, groundless fear, indisposition. It is, moreover, the best food for infants and invalids generally, as it never purges or turns acid on the weakest stomach, nor interferes with a good liberal diet, but imparts a healthy relish for food and drink, and restores the faculty of digestion, and nervous and muscular energy, to the most enfeebled.

Analysis by the Professor of Chemistry and Analytical Chemist, Andrew Ure, M.D., F.R.S., &c., &c. "London, June 3, 1849: I find it to be a pure vegetable Farina, perfectly wholesome, easily digestible, likely to promote a healthy action of the stomach and bowels, and thereby to counteract dyspepsia, constipation, and their nervous consequences."

IMPORTANT CAUTION—Against the fearful dangers of spurious imitations:—The Vice-Chancellor Sir William Page Wood granted an injunction on the 10th March, 1851, against Alfred Hooper Nevill, for imitating "Dr Barry's Revalenta Arabica Food."

BARRY DU BARRY & Co., 77, REGENT-STREET, London.

A few out of 50000 cures are here given:—

Cure No. 1245.—"Eight years' dyspepsia, nervousness, debility, with cramps, spasms, and nausea, have been virtually removed by Du Barry's health-restoring food. I shall be happy to answer any inquiries.—Rev John W. Flavel, Riddington Rectory, Norfolk."

No 81.—Twenty years' liver complaint, with disorders of the stomach, bowels, and nerves, Andrew Fraser, Haddington.

No 4139, Major-General King, cure of general debility and nervousness. No. 32,110, Captain Barker D. Birmingham, R.N., who was cured of twenty-seven years' dyspepsia in six weeks' time. Cure No. 2,416, William Hunt, Esq., Barrister-at-law, sixty years' partial paralysis. No. 32,511, Captain Allen, recording the cure of a lady from epileptic fits. No. 26,419, the Rev. Charles Kerr, a cure of functional disorders. No. 27,511, the Rev. Thomas Munster, cure of five years' nervousness, with spasms and daily vomitings. No. 11,617, Dr James Shorland, late surgeon in the 26th Regiment, a cure of dropsy.

No. 37,103, Samuel Easton, Esq., a cure of two years' diarrhoea. Mr. William Martin, a cure of eight years' daily vomiting; Richard Willoughby, Esq., a cure of many years' biliousness.

No. 32,831.—"Three years' excessive nervousness, with pains in my neck and left arm, and general debility, which rendered my life very miserable, has been radically removed by Du Barry's health-restoring food.—Alex. Sturt, Archdeacon of Ross, Skibbereen."

No. 58,131.—"Grammar School, Stevenage, Dec. 15, 1850.—Gentlemen,—We have found it wonderfully adapted for infants. Our baby has never once had disordered bowels since taking it.—R. Anblin."

No. 52,118, Dr. Gries, Mangelburg, recording the cure of his wife from pulmonary consumption, with night sweats and ulcerated lungs, which had resisted all medicines, and appeared a hopeless case. No. 32,121, Dr. Gattiker, Zurich, cure of cancer of the stomach and fearfully distressing vomitings, indigestion, flatulency, and cholera. All the above parties will be happy to answer any inquiries.

No. 51, Dr. Wurzer.—"It is particularly useful in confined habit of body, as also in diarrhoea, bowel complaints, and hemorrhoids. Also in bronchitis and pulmonary complaints, where irritation and pain are to be removed, in which it counteracts effectually the troublesome cough; and I am enabled, with perfect truth, to express the conviction that Du Barry's Revalenta Arabica is adapted to the cure of incipient hectic complaints and consumption.—Dr. Rud. Wurzer, Council of Medicine, and practical M.D. in Bonn." Col. H. Walters, Grantham, a cure of gonorrhea, near Birmingham, Broomfield Colliery olding, near Birmingham, a cure of angina pectoris; and 50,000 other well known individuals.

In canisters, suitably packed for all climates, and with full instructions, 1lb, 2s 9d; 2lb, 4s 6d; 5lb, 11s; 12lb, 22s; super refined, 1lb, 5s; 2lb, 11s; 5lb, 22s; 12lb, 33s. The 10lb and 12lb canisters are forwarded carriage free, on receipt of Post office order.

Send to BARRY DU BARRY & Co., 77, Regent-street, London; Fortnum, Mason, and Co., Purveyors to her Majesty, 152, Piccadilly.

HORTICULTURE, &c.

RENDLE'S PRICE CURRENT and GARDEN DIRECTORY for 1855 is now in the press, and will shortly appear. Due notice will be given in the columns of this Paper.

LYNCH'S STAR OF THE WEST CUMBER—THE BEST FRAME VARIETY in cultivation. For description see "RENDLE'S PRICE CURRENT and GARDEN DIRECTORY" for 1855. Price 1s. 6d. and 2s. 6d. per packet. Apply to WILLIAM E. RENDLE and Co., Seed Merchants, Plymouth.

NEW SEEDS JUST HARVESTED can now be obtained, of the most GENUINE description, from WILLIAM E. RENDLE and Co., Seed Merchants, Plymouth.

RENDLE'S COMPLETE COLLECTIONS OF KITCHEN GARDEN SEEDS will be ready in a few days. They can be had to suit various sized Gardens at the following prices:

No. 1 Collection	£3 0 0
No. 2 "	2 0 0
No. 3 "	1 5 0
No. 4 "	0 15 0

The quantities are fully detailed in their "PRICE CURRENT and GARDEN DIRECTORY," a New Edition of which is now in the press.

WILLIAM E. RENDLE and Co., SEED GROWERS, PLYMOUTH.
Established Sixty-eight Years.

GREAT NOVELTIES for the ENSUING SEASON.

FUCHSIAS

WHITE COROLLA'S.

LUCOMBE, PINCE, and Co. beg leave to announce that they shall be prepared to send out two splendid and entirely novel seedling Fuchsias early in May next, viz.:

FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE:

Three white corolla, with brilliant scarlet sepals finely reflexed. An extremely lovely and novel variety.

GALANTHIFLORA-PLENO:

(The Double Snowdrop Corolla'd Fuchsia.) Pure double white corolla, resembling a large double snowdrop, with rich scarlet sepals; altogether distinct from anything of the kind ever yet produced.

Price 10s. 6d. each.

EXETER NURSERY, EXETER.
Established 1726.

THE PAMPAS GRASS, GYNERIUM ARGENTÆUM

LUCOMBE, PINCE, and Co. have a fine healthy stock of this highly-ornamental plant, well established in pots, and fit to send out immediately.

Specimens of it are now, and have long been, flowering in their nursery; and it is universally admitted that few plants produce a more beautiful effect than this gigantic Grass. See woodcut and description of it in "Gardener's Chronicle" of the 4th ult.

Sizes, prices, and all particulars may be had on application to LUCOMBE, PINCE, and Co., EXETER NURSERY, EXETER.

BEAUTIFUL NEW PLANT.

LUCOMBE, PINCE, and Co. are now prepared to send out their beautiful new VERONICA KEMESINA, raised by that eminent Horticulturist, J. Lucombe, Esq., of Combe Royal, who sent specimens to Dr. Lindley at the time of its first flowering, who thus pronounced his first opinion of it—

"The variety sent with this was charming; a decided rose colour having mingled with the violet."

See also notice of Dr. Lindley in the "Chronicle" for December 2nd, 1854, as follows:—

"L. P. and Co.: Your V. Kemesina is a handsome dark variety of V. Speciosa, its beautiful large spikes of deep purplish crimson blossoms cannot fail to make it a favourite."

Price 7s. 6d. each.—A few extra-sized specimens may be had. The usual discount to the trade when three or more are taken.

EXETER NURSERY, EXETER.
Established 1720.

GENUINE GARDEN SEEDS.

LUCOMBE, PINCE, and Co. beg leave to announce that they have just completed their supply of the above, all carefully selected from the stocks of the best growers, and consequently superior in quality, and also at economical prices, to which they respectfully call the attention of those who require a really genuine article. Their long experience in the Seed Trade (always also proving the vitality of their Seeds before sending them out) fully justifies them in saying that their Seeds cannot fail to give great satisfaction. Catalogues may be had on application.

EXETER NURSERY, EXETER.
Established 1720.

THE PLANTING SEASON.

JAMES DICKSON and SONS, NEWTON NURSERIES, near CHESTER, and also at NEWTON, MONTGOMERYSHIRE, have on sale every description of FOREST TREES, of all ages and sizes, suitable for Villa Planting, so as to give immediate effect, as well as for forming new Plantations, to any extent; also, FRUIT and ORNAMENTAL TREES, EVERGREEN and FLOWERING SHRUBS, ROSES, HERBACEOUS, STOVE, and GREENHOUSE PLANTS, all healthy and vigorous, at very moderate prices.

Forest Tree Planting done by contract to any extent, and in the most efficient manner. Experienced Gardeners, Bailiffs, and Workmen recommended, whose characters and abilities may be strictly relied on.

The NEWTON NURSERIES and SEED WAREHOUSE, No 102, EASTGATE-STREET, CHESTER.

25th October, 1854.
The following Catalogues are published, and can be had on application: Dutch and other Flower Forests; Fruit Trees (descriptive); Roses ditto; Forest Trees; Herbaceous and Alpine Plants; Stove and Greenhouse Plants; Garden and Flower Seeds; Ornamental Trees and Shrubs.

WEEDS ON WALKS.

MR. FLEMING'S WEEDING or SAILING MACHINE for Gravel Walks, Court Yards, &c., manufactured and sold by ALEXANDER SHANKS and SON, ARBOUTH, FORKESHIRE, from whom particulars, with prices, may be had.

NEW CRIMSON DAHLIA "INCOMPARABLE."

MR. E. ABLITT begs most respectfully to announce to the Dahlia Trade that he purposes disposing of the above-named splendid Seeding Dahlia in ground roots. Colour rich ruby crimson, fine shape, with great depth of well-arranged ribs, and good centre: it has been shown at the exhibitions in the neighbourhood, and is highly admired. Mr. Glenney also speaks of it in the "Gardener's Chronicle" of the 11th ult. See also the "Gardener's Chronicle" of the 11th ult. See also the "Gardener's Chronicle" of the 11th ult. See also the "Gardener's Chronicle" of the 11th ult.

See also the "Gardener's Chronicle" of the 11th ult. See also the "Gardener's Chronicle" of the 11th ult. See also the "Gardener's Chronicle" of the 11th ult. See also the "Gardener's Chronicle" of the 11th ult.

THE FOREST, the PARK, the SHRUBBERY, and the GARDEN—Noblemen and Gentlemen requiring Trees, Shrubs, or Fruit Trees, during the present Autumn should obtain RENDLE'S NEW AUTUMNAL DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE which can be had on application from WILLIAM E. RENDLE and Co., Nurserymen and Foresters, Plymouth. Established 1856. New Seeds, growth of 1854. Arrangements are now being made at this Establishment for a large supply of genuine and good Seeds for the coming season.

TO BE LET, SOLD, &c.

GAME and SHOOTING LODGE.—To be LET, for the term of seven years, the Shooting over about 18,000 acres, in the Parish of Gartau, Barony of Kilmarevan, County of Donegal. There are large quantities of Grouse, Partridge, Hares, Woodcocks, and Snipe on the property, which has been preserved. There is a comfortable two story Slated Lodge, with Stabling and Coach-house, that would be let, either with or without Land. Apply to PITT SKIPTON,—Londonberry, 27th Nov., 1854.

COUNTRY RESIDENCE, furnished or unfurnished.—To be LET, a detached VILLA, containing six bed-rooms, two sitting-rooms, usual domestic offices, coach-house, stables, and other out-buildings, garden, paddock, lawn, shrubbery, &c., all in perfect order, most delightfully situated on the Surrey hills, five miles from Croydon, in the centre of the hunting district. For terms, &c., apply to A. B. C., 66, Conduit-street, Regent-street.

KEA'S CENTRAL HORSE and CARRIAGE REPOSITORY.

St. George's-road, Southwark (within a mile of the London bridges).

TO BE SOLD BY AUCTION, on TUESDAY, December 19th, 1854, at Twelve o'clock precisely, upwards of

ONE HUNDRED HORSES,

(on Commission).

A number of Carriages, &c., of various descriptions, for unreserved sale; several pairs of Carriage and Brougham Horses, Hunters of some of which are direct from Ireland; Weight-carrying Cobs, Ladies' Hacks, &c. Also Twenty powerful, sound Cart and Van Horses, Carriages and Harness, particulars of which may be had in Catalogue on the morning of sale.

PRIVATE COMMISSION DEPARTMENT.
From Eighty to One Hundred Horses, and several Hundred Carriages and Vehicles, always on Sale daily by Private Treaty.

Keep, 3s. per Day and Night.
Horses taken from the London Railway Terminus without charge to the owners.
N.B.—Near the Elephant and Castle.

A BARGAIN.

FOR SALE, a very capital LIGHT SPRING CHAISE-CARRIAGE, nearly new, cushions and lamps complete. Apply to MR. B. BEEDS, 67, George-street, Hastings.

TWO POINTER BITCHES.—To be SOLD BY AUCTION, on SATURDAY next, at ALDRIDGE'S, ST. MARTIN'S-LANE. They are of the best Yorkshire Blood. One has been shot over three seasons, the other one season. The property of an officer ordered abroad.

ON SALE.

FOUR thorough-bred RETRIEVER PUPS, seven weeks old (three Dogs and a Bitch), of brown and dark liver-colours; will make fine dogs, and well curled. Price Two Guineas each. Also, a pretty, dark liver-coloured RETRIEVER BITCH, mother of two of the Pups. Price Five Guineas. The Pups are by the mother of beautiful dogs, and also per the dog himself, but not bred "in and in" at all. Apply, MR. W. WELLS, WELLINGTON-STREET, LEEDS.

SPANISH and BRAHMA CHICKENS for SALE, bred from Mr. FOX's well-known PRIZE BIRDS, for 10s. each. Some splendid old Birds, of both kinds, to be SOLD cheap, in consequence of Mr. Fox removing from the country. Wire Game and Poultry Netting, Poultry Hurdles, Hen Houses, Chicken Coops, Flower Stands and Trainers, Garden Arches, Wire Blinds, Sieves, Screens, Wove Wire of every description, and all kinds of Wire useful and ornamental. Apply at T. H. FOX'S CITY OF LONDON WIRE WORKS, 44, SKINNER STREET, LONDON.
Illustrated Catalogues forwarded post free.

WANTED.

TO AGRICULTURISTS.—WANTED, a situation as WORKING BAILIFF, by a married Man without family. The wife would attend to the Dairy and management of Poultry, &c. Indispensable references can be given. Apply to MR. F. JONES, Much Pawley, near Ross, Herefordshire.

AS STEWARD or BAILIFF, a highly respectable married Man, aged thirty-two, is desirous of obtaining an ENGAGEMENT under a Nobleman or Gentleman; he has had considerable experience in the cultivation of Land, management of Stock, Drainage, &c., and is a good accountant. Can give unexceptionable reference as to ability and integrity. No objection to go abroad. Direct, S. S., Post-office, Eton.

WANTS A SITUATION, as GARDENER, a married Man, without incumbrance; has a good practical knowledge of grapes, clematis, melons, kitchen and flower garden. Good character. Address, A. T., Post-office, Huddersfield.

WANTED.—A steady middle-aged married Man, without incumbrance, as a WORKING BAILIFF. None need apply unless they can produce unexceptionable testimonials for activity and sobriety, as well as honesty. Address, MR. FLEETWOOD, Bapton Farm, Codford St. Mary, Wilts.

WANTED.—A Situation as BAILIFF, by a person who has had many years experience on a large sheep-breeding FARM, and can give most unexceptionable reference as to capability, habits, &c., &c. Letters addressed to P. S. Mr. C. BROMFIELD, Yeoman, Lyndhurst, will be immediately attended to.

FARM-STEWARD OR BAILIFF.

THE ADVERTISER is open to an ENGAGEMENT. He has for some Years managed a FARM in one of the best cultivated Districts of East Lothian, and is thoroughly acquainted with the most approved modes of Husbandry. References to Practical Agriculturists of the highest standing. Apply to L. H. care of Mr. HARTMILL, Waterloo News-room, Edinburgh.
December 5, 1854.

A SITUATION, as BAILIFF, by a respectable Scotoman. He is perfectly acquainted with the most approved system of FARMING in every department, as also STOCK of every description. For reference apply to MR. JAMES CUTHBERT, Seedsman, 12, Clayton-square, Liverpool; or to MR. LAWRIE, at Sir Richard Bulkeley's, Bart., Baron Hill, Beaumaris.

WANTED TO RENT, a moderate-sized RESIDENCE in the Country, with good TROUT FISHING in the neighbourhood, and with at least 1,500 acres of LOW GROUND SHOOTING attached. SALMON FISHING and MOOR GROUND in addition would be preferred. A lengthened lease would be taken, if found suitable. Address, free, stating full particulars, to No 65, N. B. A. O. Glasgow.

COUNTRY HOUSE WANTED, with Entry in March or April, 1855, containing at least Thirteen Apartments. Comfortably furnished, with a moderate quantity of Shooting and Fishing attached. The seaside preferred. Apply, free, with full particulars, to No. 577, N. B. A. O. Edinburgh.

MAUNDER'S TREASURY OF KNOWLEDGE, and Library of Reference. A popular Compendium of Universal Knowledge; comprising a Grammar, Dictionary, Gazetteer, and a large amount of other Miscellaneous Information. The Twenty-first Edition, revised throughout, with Additions.—Also, all uniform in size and price.

THE SCIENTIFIC and LITERARY TREASURY. THE TREASURY OF NATURAL HISTORY. THE HISTORICAL TREASURY. THE BIOGRAPHICAL TREASURY.
London: LONGMAN, BROWN, GREEN, and LONGMANS.

New and cheaper issue, in 10 vols., fcap. 8vo, price 3s. 6d. each.

THOMAS MOORE'S POETICAL WORKS. A re-publication of the last collected Edition, containing the Author's last Introduction and Notes, and embellished with a Portrait and Nineteen Steel Plates.—Also, complete in One Volume, with Portrait and Vignette, price 21s. cloth. London: LONGMAN, BROWN, GREEN, and LONGMANS.

Just published, with a Coloured Plate, price Half-a-Crown.

THE ENTOMOLOGIST'S ANNUAL for 1855, comprising Notices of the New British Insects detected in 1854.

LEPIDOPTERA. By the EDITOR.
HYMENOPTERA. By FREDERICK SMITH.
COLEOPTERA. By E. W. JASON.
Edited by H. T. STANTON.
London: JOHN VAN VOORST, 1, Paternoster-row.

WORD-BOOK FOR THE CRIMEA AND SCUTARI HOSPITAL.

Now Ready, Price One Shilling.
KNIGHT'S POCKET VOCABULARY IN ENGLISH and TURKISH By WM. KNIGHT, Esq., Barrister-at-Law.

"Mr. Knight passed three years in Turkey. In a letter which appeared in the daily newspapers, evidently from an intelligent correspondent, the writer said that, by the aid of this Vocabulary, he had got on famously with the Turks—had succeeded in making himself understood, and in getting all his wants supplied, which was considered the best compliment that could be paid to the work."—Britannia, September 16, 1854.

"The Turks are throwing up earthworks near Balaklava; and at meal-times, when we occasionally mingle with them, we can get along with 'Knight's Vocabulary' famously without any other interpreter. At every place in the Black Sea where we have touched this book has proved invaluable."—Letter from a Naval Lieutenant.

Published by BAIRD and EVANS. Sold by all Booksellers; and at THE FIELD OFFICE, 408, Strand, opposite Adam-street, Adelphi.

Officers at Southampton can procure their copies at Daniel's Victoria Hotel.

On the 18th December will be published, price Three-pence, or stamped Four-pence,

PUNCH'S ALMANACK for 1855.

Illustrated by JOHN LEECH and JOHN TENNIEL.
Office, 85, Fleet-street.

This day is published, price Three-pence, or stamped Four-pence, for post, Four-pence,

THE SEVEN POOR TRAVELLERS, being the CHRISTMAS NUMBER of HOUSEHOLD WORDS, conducted by CHARLES DICKENS, and containing the amount of One Regular Number and a Half.

Office, 15, Wellington-street North, Strand; and sold by all Booksellers and News-vendors.

Just Published, price, in cloth, 2s. 6d.; by post, 3s.; as a pocket-book, with metallic paper and pencil, 4s. 6d.; by post, 5s.

RUFF'S GUIDE to the TURF, or POCKET RACING COMPANION for 1855.—Contains: The Nominations for Great Britain and Ireland for 1855, and the Great Stakes for 1855; a Complete Calendar of the Races in Great Britain and Ireland for 1855; the Horses Indexed, with their Pedigrees; Lists of Races, Lengths of Courses; Revised and Enlarged Lists of the Trainers; Winners at the Great Races from their Commencement; Races to Come, Derby Lots, &c., &c.
London: PIPER, STEPHENSON, and SPENCE, 23, Paternoster-row. Sold by all Booksellers, and at all Railway Stations.

BUILDING SOCIETIES.—The Important Judgment of the Lord Chancellor in "Fleming v. Self," involving the Rights and Liabilities of Building Societies, will appear verbatim in a Double Number of THE LAW TIMES of this Day. A copy sent to any person enclosing in postage stamps to the LAW TIMES OFFICE, 29, Essex-street, Strand.

THE NEW MILITIA LAW.

THE MILITIA LAW, as altered by the Acts of last Session, and all the new Orders and Regulations, as supplied for this Work by the War Office. By THOS. W. SAUNDERS, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Price 8s. 6d., cloth. Chancery-lane, 29, Essex-street, Strand.

Entirely New Edition. Songs never before published. MR. W. LAM informs his friends and the public that the SECOND SONG-BOOK is now ready, price One Shilling; post free, 6d. London: ALLMAN, and Son, 42, Holborn-hill.

NEWEST MUSIC.

MESSRS. ROBERT COCKS and Co., of New Burlington-street, have lately presented us with two very charming compositions by Miss LINDSAY, the "EXCELSIOR," and "SPEAK GENTLY," 2s. 6d. each. We naturally give our preference to the former, since the beautiful words are from the pen of our favourite author, Longfellow; they are undoubtedly too well known to require any further notice; but the music to which they are adapted deserves the warmest praise, and we are certain it will soon become a general favourite with the musical world.—Yide "United Service Gazette," Nov. 11, 1854.

JUDAS MACCABEUS.—ROBERT COCKS and Co.'s STANDARD OCTAVO EDITION, 4s. 6d. Visitors to St. Martin's Hall and Exeter Hall will find this elegant Handbook a suitable companion. It will be equally appropriate as a handsome memorial upon the drawing-room table or piano-forte. Specimen pages (or the work itself) may be had at St. Martin's Hall, Long Acre; also of the Publishers.

SPEAK GENTLY.—Song by Miss LINDSAY, the Composer of the popular Song, "Excelsior!" Second Edition, 2s. 6d.—"The beautiful sentiment embodied in the words and music of this song has made it an especial favourite."

MUSIC.—Gratis and postage free, i.e., SPECIMEN PAGES of ROBERT COCKS and Co.'s superior and elegant editions of MESSIAH, 6s. 6d.; the CREATION, 4s. 6d.; SAMSON, 6s.; CHRISTIE'S HANDBOOK (52 short hymns), 8s.; WARREN'S PSALMODY, 312 Psalm and Hymn Tunes, 4 vols., 2s. each, or the four in one volume, bound, 8s.; WARREN'S CHANTER'S HAND GUIDE, 373 Cathedral Chants, with the Psalms pointed, 6s.; ISRAEL IN EGYPT, 4s. 6d.; JUDAS MACCABEUS, 4s. 6d.; and ROBERT COCKS and Co.'s Handbook of Glee, Madrigals, &c., edited by Joseph Warren, 8s.

TO GLEE PARTIES, Amateur and Professional.—WARREN'S HANDBOOK of GLEES, Calches, Canons, Madrigals, Part Songs, &c., with Piano-forte Accompaniment. 100 Nos., each 2d., or Two Vols., bound in cloth, gilt, each 8s.

MISS LINDSAY'S "EXCELSIOR."—Words by LONGFELLOW. Finely illustrated, 2s. 6d. "It translates the sentiments of the words, and makes the heart echo the cry of 'Excelsior!'"—The Epitome. "An exquisite lyric."—Eliza Cook. "This famous poem has been set to music scores of times, but never more successfully than in the present instance."—Weekly Times.

London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street, Music Publishers to the Queen, and of all Booksellers.

ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.

THE YEAR 1855 bids fair to be one of the most important and eventful of modern history. On the 6th of JANUARY, 1855, will be issued the FIRST NUMBER of a New Volume of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, and not only of a New Volume, but of a New Year—each volume being perfect and complete in itself—containing, for the time, a faithful record, pictorial and descriptive, of all events of interest in every part of the world. To that limited portion of the public who do not subscribe to this Journal, it may be stated that no period could be selected more opportune for commencing; the whole expense being but Twenty-six Shillings per annum, exclusive of Double Numbers, which are issued on rare occasions, when it would be impossible to crowd the important events and Engravings into a single Number; for this small sum the subscriber will receive Twenty-four large Pages—Seventy-two Columns—of the most interesting information, carefully selected from the News of the Week, interspersed with a variety of charming Articles on the chief topics of the day.

The ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS has, by its impartial and consistent advocacy of the welfare of the public, secured for itself a political influence scarcely second to any Newspaper in the Empire; and reference can, with some pride, be made to the support afforded to all beneficial measures proposed and adopted by the English Parliament.

Foreign Politics will ever command the attention which ought to be devoted to so important a feature of a Newspaper. On the question of the Russian War, during the year 1854, the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS appeared in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS. Extensive arrangements, calculated to improve this popular Journal, and engagements, such as will greatly enrich its Literary, Scientific, and other departments, have been made, and will thus combine on this Paper the greatest talent of the day.

The ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS has been established thirteen years, during which period it has received a greater degree of encouragement and approbation than any Journal ever published. This is proved by the returns of Stamp issued from time to time by order of Parliament. The Stamps applied for the first six months of 1855 was upwards of 2,731,000, showing a WEEKLY CIRCULATION of UPWARDS of ONE HUNDRED and THIRTY THOUSAND COPIES!

Terms, for payment in advance—Half-year, 12s. 6d.; Year, 24s.

Any of the Volumes of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, from the commencement to the present time, may now be had, in paper or cloth. Covers for Binding the Volumes, 2s. 6d. each.

All Numbers may be sent free by Post to any part of the Kingdom and the Colonies. Give an order for Six Months, to ensure all the gratuitous Prints and Supplements. Supplied by all Booksellers and News-vendors.

The ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS is published in London every Saturday, stamped, to go free by Post, sixpence per Copy.
Office, 198, Strand, London.

Printed by HEARN and KIRTON, of No. 29, Robert-street, Bristol, and of No. 10, Abchurch-lane, in the County of Middlesex, at the Printing-office of LAWSON and GREENING, Nos. 4 and 5, Gray's-inn-lane, FETTERBURY, and published by WILLIAM and ANNE ADAM, of No. 408, Strand, opposite Adam-street, Adelphi, in the said County.—Decembris 16, 1854.

THE FIELD SUPPLEMENT

VOL. IV.—No. 103.]

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 16, 1854.

[GRATIS.]

THE NEWSPAPER.

THE WAR.

THE SIEGE OF SEBASTOPOL.

The Thabor, which arrived at Marseilles on the 9th, brought news from Constantinople to the 30th ult., and from Balaklava to the 26th, at which time the weather in the Crimea was wet and stormy.

The Russian fire against the French position was very violent, but fresh guns were being disembarked, and quantities of ammunition. The Russians made incessant sorties, but the French repulsed them all, and were advancing. The French outposts had been pushed much nearer to Sebastopol. The Russians were constructing huts for their troops in the valley of the Tchernaya.

It is positively asserted that at a Council of War held on the 25th ult., General Canrobert had decided that a great battle should be fought on the 2nd inst. The army was full of enthusiasm.

The fire of the batteries against Sebastopol had been resumed with vigour, the last parallel had been finished, and the works had reached within a hundred metres of the place.

A general assault was considered as very near.

On the 23rd, after a sudden attack, the English surprised and spiked sixteen Russian guns.

Under date of December 3, General Canrobert, writing from Sebastopol, states:—"The rain falls in torrents. Our roads are broken up; our trenches filled with water, and all our military movements, as well as the greater part of our siege works, are suspended. The enemy is held inactive by the same causes. Notwithstanding these trials, the morale of all is excellent, and we hold firm, ready to recommence our operations as soon as the weather and the state of the roads shall permit."

By the arrival of the Europa at Varna on the 11th we have news from Sebastopol of the 7th.

A great movement of the enemy between the town and the north of the bay was observable. The investment of the place was nearly complete. Four French regiments and numerous reinforcements had arrived. The new siege guns from the allied fleets had not been got into position.

Omer Pacha left Bucharest for Varna on the 11th, where preparations are actively made to embark the remainder of the nineteen Turkish battalions, some of which have already gone to the Crimea.

A letter from Sebastopol of the 25th ult., in the Moniteur de la Flotte, says: "Two Russian deserters were yesterday brought to camp. One came from the town, where he said hunger and thirst prevailed, and many were dying. From the description he gave of the illness, there seemed a doubt whether it was plague or cholera. The other came from the camp of Menschikoff. Reinforcements are arriving there, but without proper clothes and without provisions. The distress is such that many would be delighted to desert to the French, who are said to be well supplied with all things; but Menschikoff, like a prudent man, has had all the issues guarded by a line of Cossack horsemen, and such deserters are condemned to be hanged to death. In spite of that, scarcely a day passes without some deserters arriving in our camp."

MOVEMENTS OF THE BELLIGERENTS.

THE BALTIC FLEET.—The chief division of the English fleet left Kiel on the 7th, the Duke of Wellington, with Sir Charles Napier's flag, taking the lead, followed by the Hogue, Nile, Royal George, and Blenheim line-of-battle ships, and accompanied by the Bulldog, Locust, and another paddle steamer. The good people of Kiel witnessed the departure of Sir Charles Napier's fleet with great regret; many of them derived no small advantage from the expenditure which so large an addition to this large but thriving town naturally created. On the 11th, the Edinburgh (Rear-Admiral Chads), the Euryalus, the Dragon, and the Impérieuse, also left, these being the last of the British fleet in the Baltic.

TREBIZONDE, Nov. 18.—Ibrahim Pacha, Schamyl's commissioner to the army of Anatolia, has received intelligence that some mountaineers of the Caucasus have surprised a convoy of 800 Turkish prisoners on its way towards the Don, destroyed the Russian escort, and set the Turks free. Zarf Mustapha Pacha lately commanding the Sultan's army in Asia, has gone to Constantinople. Abdul Kerim Pacha, who commands until the arrival of Ismail Pacha, is occupied, together with Colonel Williams, in housing the troops for the winter.

RUSSIAN SACRIFICE OF ANOTHER HARBOUR.—During the summer the governor of Riga, to prevent the approach of hostile ships, sank some enormous stones in the harbour, so as entirely to impede the navigation. Now that the British ships are withdrawn, several loaded merchant vessels endeavoured to leave the port, but the obstructions were found to be insurmountable; and after several attempts to get out, the ships were obliged to return to the port and discharge their cargoes, some of them having suffered considerable damage from bumping on these artificial rocks.

RUSSIAN LOSS ON THE SEA OF AZOFF.—A communication from Warsaw of the 8th states that in an unpublished portion of Prince Menschikoff's despatch of the 24th ult. he says that, near Cape Berdjanskia (on the north coast of the Sea of Azoff), a hurricane had literally demolished the breakwater, driven on shore thirty-five Russian vessels, and dashed to pieces five others.

OMAR PASHA'S EXPEDITION TO THE CRIMEA.—The Lloyd of Dec. 9 communicates an important piece of intelligence—the immediate retirement of the whole Turkish army from the Principalities (the small garrisons of Giurgevo and Kala-rasch excepted), and the embarkation at Varna of 35,000 Turks, with Omar Pasha at their head, for the Crimea. Sadyk Pasha's corps is to occupy the Dobrukscha. The Lloyd thinks this is the best employment of the Turkish army, seeing that the Principalities are well garrisoned by Austria, that Sadyk Pasha's corps is sufficient to guard that section of the line of the Danube which forms the boundary between Russia and Turkey. The Turkish army it thinks too weak for the attack on Bessarabia, lately much talked of; but 35,000 good soldiers, as Omar Pasha's certainly are, will be a most important reinforcement to the army of the Allies. "Thus already," says the Lloyd, "does Austria second the operations in the Crimea."

THE TURKISH ARMY.—A despatch from Bucharest dated December 8, states that the whole Turkish army had re-crossed the Danube. 35,000 men were to be thrown into the Crimea, and on the 11th Omar Pasha was to leave Bucharest for Varna. Sadyk Pasha was occupying the Dobrukscha, and Kalarasch and Giurgevo had received Turkish garrisons. A letter from Bucharest states that a Turkish commissariat office has been established in that place for the purpose of paying for all the supplies furnished to the Ottoman army. This has produced an excellent impression on the inhabitants, many of whom, from a spirit of patriotism, have relinquished claims due to them. The Sultan has published a decree banishing all the Moldavian and Wallachian subjects who have followed the Russians into Bessarabia.

THE FRENCH NAVY.—Admiral Hamelin, having been elevated to the highest dignity in the Imperial navy, returns to France, with his staff, and resigns the command to Vice-Admiral Bruat. The squadrons of the ocean and the Mediterranean are now united under the name of "Mediterranean Squadron." Rear-Admiral Charner is second in command. Rear-Admiral Bonet-Willamez, Chief of the Staff of Admiral Hamelin, returns with him to France. Rear-Admiral Rigault de Genouilly remains, until further orders, detached on shore, in command of the seamen landed before Sebastopol, and at the disposal of the General-in-Chief of the Army of the East. Rear-Admiral Lugol continues under the orders of Vice-Admiral Bruat, and is charged with the administration of the fleet at Constantinople.

PRINCE NAPOLEON.—"The Chargé d'Affaires of France at Constantinople writes to the Minister of Foreign Affairs under date of the 6th of December. The health of Prince Napoleon is becoming re-established, and his Imperial Highness will set out in a few days to resume his command in the Crimea."

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE DUKE OF CAMBRIDGE is at Therapia, rather better; he returns to the Crimea directly. He was severely suffering from dysentery and over fatigue.

ENTRANCE OF THE RUSSIANS INTO POLAND.—Advices from Warsaw of the 7th, in the German papers, report the entrance of the Russian guards into Poland. The Cuirassier division of the Russian guards, which it was expected would go into cantonments in the neighbourhood of Warsaw, and reinforce the garrison, already so large, of the Polish capital, had arrived at Miedzyrzec and Siedlee. No less than seventeen Russian generals, who had arrived from various points of the empire, were assembled on the 7th at Warsaw.

POSITION OF THE BELLIGERENTS.—The Soldier's Friend of Vienna of the 8th says:—"The battle of Inkerman has made the English more attentive to their position at Balaklava, and all the entrenchments have been carefully completed. It is now occupied by 4,000 English and 10,000 Turks, who reach to the division of General Bosquet at Kadikofka. The Russian troops of the 4th corps still occupy Traktir, Tchorguna, and Kamara, and the left bank of the Tchernaya has not, therefore, been evacuated, as was stated in the accounts from Constantinople of the 27th. On the 23rd and 24th some insignificant skirmishes took place. The Russians showed themselves in great force on the line from Inkerman to Traktir and Tchorguna, which led to the idea that they again threatened Balaklava. This point has been therefore reinforced, as well as the division of General Bosquet. Some detachments of Cossacks have been seen in the valley of Baidas, to the south-east of Balaklava. The march of Russian reinforcements towards the Crimea has not ceased; only a few days ago a regiment arrived at Baktchissary. The division of General Popoff has entered Sebastopol, in order to reinforce the garrison. On the 15th of November, at a council of war at the headquarters of Prince Menschikoff, it was resolved to still remain on the defensive."

OFFICIAL DESPATCHES.

WAR DEPARTMENT, 10 A.M., December 11, 1854.

His Grace the Duke of Newcastle has this day received despatches and enclosures, of which the following are copies, addressed to his Grace by Field-Marshal the Lord Raglan, G.C.B.:

Before Sebastopol, Nov. 23, 1854.

My Lord Duke,—The Russian advanced posts in front of our left attack having taken up a position which incommoded our troops in the trenches, and occasioned not a few casualties, and at the same time took in reverse the French troops working in their lines, a representation of which was made to me both by our own officers and by General Canrobert, a detachment of the 1st Battalion Rifle Brigade, under Lieutenant Tryon, was directed on the night of the 20th to dislodge the enemy; and this service was performed most gallantly and effectively, but at some loss both in killed and wounded, and at the cost of the life of Lieutenant Tryon, who rendered himself conspicuous on the occasion, was considered a most promising officer, and held in the highest estimation by all.

The Russians attempted several times to re-establish themselves on the ground before daylight on the 21st, but they were instantly repulsed by Lieutenant Bouchier, the senior surviving officer of the party, and it now remains in our possession.

Brigadier-General Sir John Campbell speaks highly of the conduct of the detachment, and of Lieutenant Bouchier and Lieutenant Cunningham; and he laments the death of Lieutenant Tryon, who so ably led them in the first instance.

This little exploit was so highly prized by General Canrobert that he instantly published an "Ordre Général," announcing it to the French army, and combining, with a just tribute to the gallantry of the troops, the expression of his deep sympathy in the regret felt for the loss of a young officer of so much distinction.

Nothing else has occurred since I had last the honour to address your grace.

The weather is again very bad, and steady rain is constantly falling.

I inclose the nominal list of killed and wounded at the battle of the Inkerman, and a return of the casualties that have occurred in the trenches to the 20th instant.—I have, &c.,

RAGLAN.

His Grace the Duke of Newcastle, &c. &c. &c.

Near Sebastopol, Nov. 28, 1854.

My Lord Duke,—In the despatch which I addressed to your grace on the 23rd instant, I reported the gallant conduct of a detachment of the 1st Battalion Rifle Brigade, and its occupation of an advanced position which it continued to retain, notwithstanding the repeated efforts of the enemy to re-establish themselves upon it.

On the night of the 22nd and on the following morning shortly before daylight, the Russians renewed their endeavours to get possession of the ground they had been driven from, but they were repulsed on each occasion in the most spirited manner, in the first instance by a detachment of the 4th Foot, under Lieutenant Patrick Robertson, and a working party belonging to the 57th Regiment; in the last instance by the detachment of the 1st Foot alone.

Brigadier-General Eyre speaks in the highest terms of the conduct of these troops, and particularly that of Lieut. Robertson, whose former distinguished services at the Cape, coupled with that he displayed in the present affair, fully entitle him to be considered an officer of much promise.

There has been no movement of importance on the part of the enemy. The weather has been very bad, and the camp and the country are in consequence of the rain in a most unsatisfactory state.

The men are, however, endeavouring, and with some success, to shelter themselves with the stones that are found in the vicinity of the encampment, and every effort is making to provide them with the materials for hutting themselves; but the condition of the roads renders this a matter of extreme difficulty.

It is gratifying to me to be able to assure you that, notwithstanding their privations, their exposure to the weather, and the constant labour required of them, they exhibit the same cheerfulness, the same ardour in the discharge of their duty as they have manifested throughout the extensive operations in which they have been engaged.

I inclose the return of casualties up to the 26th instant inclusive.

The defences of the Inkerman position, notwithstanding the frequent interruptions from the weather, are making considerable progress.

I have, &c.,

RAGLAN.

His Grace the Duke of Newcastle, &c. &c. &c.

VICE-ADMIRAL DUNDAS has forwarded to the Admiralty a despatch which incloses a letter from the Hon. S. T. Carnegie, of the Tribune. The letter is as follows:—

Her Majesty's ship Tribune, Straits of Kerch, Nov. 17, 1854.

Sir,—I have the honour to acquaint you that on the forenoon of Sunday, the 12th inst., while standing in for the coast of Circassia, about 10 miles to the north-west of the Fort of Anapa, guns were observed to be fired from a large martello tower, situated at a spot which commands the coast road from Anapa to Kerch, and which is marked on the charts by the word "Dshemetie." Her Majesty's ships Tribune, Highflyer, and Lynx stood in as far as the depth of water would allow them, anchored at a distance of 900 yards from the beach, and opened a fire upon the place, which in a short time compelled the garrison to leave it. Some of the seamen and Marines were immediately landed, and completed the destruction of the place by fire. The tower, with two guns, ammunition, &c., was blown up, under the direction of Captain Moore, of Her Majesty's ship Highflyer; and I regret to add that, in the performance of this service, that officer was slightly, and Lieutenant M. E. Smithett, of Her Majesty's ship Tribune, severely wounded by the explosion. The landing was effected without trouble, but the surf rose with such rapidity afterwards that it was with difficulty our boats were enabled to rejoin their ships. The officers who landed behaved with skill and ability; and I wish to bring under your notice the exertions of Captain Moore, Lieutenant Luce, commanding the Lynx, Lieutenant M. E. Smithett, of Her Majesty's ship under my command, and Lieutenant Armytage, of the Highflyer, whose conduct in getting the boats over the surf was most conspicuous. I have, &c.,

S. T. CARNEGIE, Captain.

Vice-Admiral Dundas, C.B., &c.

THE STORM IN THE BLACK SEA.

We last week gave the telegraphic news of this tremendous storm and hurricane. Later news brings the details. The following is the official summary of the loss:—English Transports, at Katcha, 5; at Eupatoria, 8; at Balaklava, 8. French loss, 12. Total, 33.

In reference to this storm, the Times correspondent, writing from Constantinople on the 23rd ult., says—"Up to this moment no news has reached the Admiral's office of the losses at Eupatoria; we only know with something like certainty that eight English transports have been wrecked there, and the French loss has been considerable. As nearly as can be learned, 21 English transports are total wrecks, and about 15 were so much injured as to be temporarily unfit for sea. The following is the list of the losses at Balaklava:—No. 82 transport, Rip Van Winkle, ship, 1,400 tons, 60 hands, all lost; Peltona, 470 tons, steamer, 1,000 bags biscuit, crew saved, sunk in harbour; No. 5, Resolute powder-ship, 600 tons, 25 hands, all lost; No. 63, Wilk Wave, ship, 600 tons, 25 hands, one boy saved; No. 16 Wanderer, bark, 420 tons, all hands lost; Progress, 955 tons, hay-ship, master and mate lost; No. 107, Prince, screw steamer, 2,700 tons, 700 tons clothing on board, 300 tons powder, &c., and 160 hands, only two saved; El Malti, brig, all lost; No. 40, Kenilworth, sunk at anchor, all lost; Mary Ann, sunk at anchor, all lost. Injured.—Melbourne, screw steamer, flag of Captain Christie, lost fore and main masts; Her Majesty's ship Retribution, threw guns overboard, and lost anchors; Mercin, lost all her masts; Lady Valiant, lost all her masts; Sovereign, lost all her masts, figure-head much injured; Albatross, very much injured; Wild Irish Girl, lost mainmast, and hull much shattered; Bride, lost mainmast, hull much injured; other vessels injured more or less. At the Katcha the hurricane blew with incredible violence, with squalls increasing in force till about mid-day. About 1 o'clock the Pyrenees snapped her cables and drifted across the bows of H.M.S. Sampson, whose masts instantly went by the board. The Sampson was able to ease her anchors, and to this she owed her safety. By the concussion with the Sampson, the Pyrenees was rendered unmanageable, and drifted slowly on shore. This ship was soon after followed by a French brig, which went to pieces immediately. During the day and night, the Lord Raglan, the Rodsley, and the Ganges became total wrecks. Each of these is a first-class ship, worth between £15,000 and £20,000. Several of the French brigs went ashore at different times, in all 13 vessels. The Tyrone was among the English transports. The Queen's boats rescued 80 persons, and the Pury received on board 20 more. One of the Queen's seamen was shot by the Cossacks, who lined the cliffs, the ball passing through the bonnet of a woman whom he was lifting into the boat. On the 16th and 17th a considerable part of the men's effects was brought on board various ships, but all the stores have been lost. The London and three French liners have lost their rudders. The Turkish Admiral is completely dismasted. Each ship rode with three or four anchors. The sea broke over the decks in a perfect deluge. The Britannia was pumping for 11 hours. The loss of the Henri IV, and the Turkish line-of-battle ship at Eupatoria is confirmed, and it is feared that the crews are in the hands of the Russians. The total loss of British seamen at Balaklava and the Katcha is about 360."

The Morning Herald of Wednesday says :—"The fatal disasters in the Black Sea storm of the 14th ult. are appalling to the most indifferent to the lives of our gallant, hardy, and much-neglected seamen. No less than 1,000 lives have been lost, and of these at least 600 of the best, bravest, and most skilful seamen on the ocean. Yet it would appear as if this dreadful calamity is considered of such little moment as happening to sailors—sailors so often have only a single plank between themselves and eternity—that the wreck of their frail partition, and the dreadful alternative, seems to be regarded as a matter of course. As we have stated, more seamen have been lost in this Black Sea service than in the bloody battles of Inkerman and the Alma; but no patriotic testimonial is raised for the benefit of their widows and children, and no paragraph in the Speech from the Throne recognises the sacrifices the sailors have made to the exigencies of the patriotic cause."

With reference to the loss of the Prince, a letter has been received, by the General Screw Steam-ship Company, from Mr. Cotgrave, midshipman, who is the only surviving officer belonging to the ill-fated vessel. He writes from Balaklava, Nov. 15, and says:—

"While lying at anchor in twenty-five fathoms water, with two anchors down, about half a mile from the shore, the wind blowing a terrific hurricane from the southward and westward, No. 16 Transport fouled us, doing us some damage, and we were obliged to cut away all masts. About nine a.m. the port cable parted (all hands being on deck at the time); cut-awed round to steam ahead, but on account of some of the wreck being foul of the screw were unable to do so. About five minutes afterwards the starboard cable parted, and the ship drifted in rapidly towards the rocks.

" Captain Goodall, who had been on deck from the commencement of the gale, called all hands aft, and with Captain Baynton, R.N., Transport Agent, pulled off their coats, Captain Goodall at the same time saying, ' Now, my lads, I've done the best I can for you, every man must try and save himself.'

" About 9.15, a.m., the ship touched the rocks, and owing to the great force of wind and severe sea setting in at that time, in fifteen minutes after not a vestige of her was to be seen. After thumping about five or six times the ship broke in halves about amidships, and I jumped out of the mizen chains on part of the wreck, and being about ten minutes in the water was washed ashore.

"After remaining on the rocks about five hours, with six of the crew of the Prince, we were hauled up by parties from the Medway, Trout, Tonning, and Harbinger (who had been engaged all day with life-boys and limes, endeavouring to save lives) over an almost perpendicular cliff, of about 250 feet in height.

"Out of upwards of thirty vessels anchored in that place only three rode the gale out with masts standing, and I believe about ten were lost entirely.

"I have omitted to mention the praiseworthy conduct of some men in the life-boat (which I have since learned to be the Avon's, under the charge of Mr. Hammond, second officer of that vessel), who went out in the severe part of the gale to render assistance.

"I have, &c., H. G. F. COTGRAVE, late shipman
C. S. S. S. Company's steamer, Prince."

The Times correspondent, to whom we are indebted for so many picturesque narratives of the incidents of the war, gives a graphic account of the effects of the hurricane on shore. He dates from the camp before Sebastopol, Nov. 14, on which day the gale commenced about 6 a.m. We extract a few of the prominent details from his letter:—"As the wind passed along we heard the snapping of tent poles and the sharp crack of timber and canvas. The whole head quarters camp was beaten flat to the earth, and the unhappily occupied tents were rushing through the mud in all directions in chase of their effects and clothes, or holding on by the walls of the enclosure as they strove to make their way to the roofless and windowless barns and stables for shelter. Three marquees alone stood against the blast. The air was filled with blankets, hats, great coats, little coats, and even tables and chairs! Macintoshes, quilts, indiarubber tubs, bed-clothes, sheets of tent-canvas went whirling like leaves in the gale towards Sebastopol. The shingle roofs of the outhouses were torn away and scattered over the camp, and a portion of the roof of Lord Raglan's house was carried off to join them. The barns and Commissariat-sheds were laid bare at once. Large arabas, or waggons, which stood close to us, were overturned; men and horses were knocked down and rolled over and over; ambulance waggons were turned topsyturvy; a large heavy table was lifted off the ground, whirled round and round till the leaf flew off, and then came to mother earth deprived of a leg and seriously injured. The Marines and Rifles on the cliffs over Balaklava lost tents, clothes—everything; the storm tore them away over the face of the rock and buried them across the bay, and the men had to cling to the earth with all their might to avoid the same fate. The face of the country was covered with horses which had torn away from the pickets. Inside the commissariat yard, overturned carts, dead horses, and groups of shivering men were seen—not a tent standing. Nearer to us Hussar horses were dead and dying from the cold. Towards twelve o'clock the wind, which had been blowing from the south-west, chopped round more to the west and became much colder. Sleet fell first, and then came a snow-storm. The African soldiers seemed particularly miserable. Poor fellows! several of them were found dead next morning outside the lines of our cavalry camp. We lost several men also. In the Light Division four men were "starved to death" by the cold. Two men in the 7th Fusiliers, one man in the 33rd, and one man of the 2nd Battalion Rifle Brigade, were found dead. Two more of the same division have died since, and I fear nearly an equal number have perished in each of the other divisions. About forty of our horses also died from the cold and wet, and many will never recover that fatal day and night."

REINFORCEMENTS AND STORES.

POLISH VOLUNTEERS.—The French Government having consented to allow the Polish prisoners to enlist in the Foreign Legion, the greater part hastened to enrol, to the number of 318 non-commissioned officers and soldiers. They are to proceed at once to the dépôt at Bastia; and, after being fully armed and equipped, they will leave for the Crimea, to be incorporated with the battalion of the Foreign Legion which forms part of the 2nd brigade of the 6th division.

THE STEAMER NEW YORK left Havre on the 8th for Constantinople. She takes out seventy-eight ambulance carts, waggons, field forges, hospital stores, clothing, camp equipage, provisions, dried meats, biscuits, vegetables, flour, &c. After landing her stores the New York is to proceed to the Black Sea, where she will be employed in the transport of the sick and wounded.

THE TWO WAR BATTALIONS of the 49th Regiment, forming part of the 9th Division of the army of the East, which have just left Toulouse, were expected to arrive at Nismes on the 17th and 18th, and wait there for further orders. The 10th battalion of Foot Chasseurs has arrived from the Camp of the South at Marseilles to embark for the Crimea. An immense quantity of munitions of war reaches Marseilles daily.

Cracow, Dec. 4.—Ordnance, tumbrils, and baggage-waggons, are continually arriving here. Twenty-two redoubts, each armed with seven guns, have been erected round the town; four citadels have also been built, which in some measure supply the place of ramparts, and will enable the troops to maintain the defence. In the immediate neighbourhood a fort has also been erected on the hill Kosciuszko, and the hill Krakus has now a wall round it. The old royal castle on the hill Wawel is being strongly fortified, and supplied with barracks and magazines.

A NUMBER of the 16th and 49th depôts at Cork have volunteered for service in the Crimea.

The 72ND HIGHLAND REGIMENT left Limerick on the 9th for Malta, to relieve the 14th, ordered up to the Crimea. The 72nd will take shipping from Cork immediately after their arrival there. There will not be a single infantry soldier in Limerick when the last division of the 72nd are gone.

A NUMBER OF CARPENTERS are now being hired by Government to proceed to the Crimea to assist in the erection of the wooden huts for the army. They receive £2. 6s. per week, and rations.

THE HIMALAYA.—From the time the Himalaya was first engaged in the conveyance of troops (February), she has run a distance of 22,000 miles, and carried from England to Malta and the Crimea, 5,527 officers and men, and 1,688 horses, with a loss of four only.

The ADMIRALTY received tenders on the 14th for the hire of two or three vessels of about 350 tons (u. m.) each for the conveyance, from the Thames, of about 957 tons of heavy ordnance stores (shot), and 66 tons of light stores (platforms, &c.), including about 35 feet of combustible stores, to Malta.

WOODEN HUTS.—Up to the present time wooden huts have been sent from England to the Crimea, to house 10,000 men. Many of these must be now arriving at Balaklava.

PRIVATE ENERGY and benevolence are actively exerted in all quarters for the relief of our gallant army in the Crimea. The ladies of Exeter, headed by Lady Dumfries, have forwarded to a large supply of flannel vests. In Northumberland, the ladies have purchased at prime cost upwards of £300 worth of blankets, &c., and the same thing has been done by the ladies of Penrith. Mr. Elliett, of Southampton, despatched a ton and a half of lint last week, having received contributions from all parts of the county.

contribution from all parts of the country, and this week he has forwarded another ton. He has written to Miss Nightingale, undertaking to collect and send out an ample supply of any articles she may require. A ton of linen has been sent from the ladies of Kendal and the Lake district.

Mr. J. Vickers, the distiller, is about to send twelve dozen of ginger brandy; and "a wine merchant" writing to the Times offers a hogshead of port, provided twenty others do the like. The ladies of Ireland have applied to the War Office through the Primate and Archbishop of Dublin, suggesting an organised plan, which has been approved by the Secretary at War, whereby contributions of clothing, &c., shall be forwarded to ladies' committees in all the principal towns. In Newcastle the ladies have established a Balaklava Clothing Fund, which has amounted to nearly £500. They have also forwarded forty plum puddings, which are expected to reach the Crimea by Christmas. Many other similar efforts are being made.

THE MALTA, (Austrian steamer), which runs between the Ionian Islands and Malta, has been actively employed in towing vessels with our troops from the Ionian Islands to off Cape Mataban, en route for the Crimea.

THE PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL Company's steamer Candia, arrived at Malta on the 3rd with 1,150 French troops, also two French steamers; they coaled and proceeded on to the Crimea. On the 4th her Majesty's ship Dankestrom from England, and the Enau, with French troops from Toulon, also proceeded to the Crimea, after coaling. The Edinburgh, another transport, sailed for the Crimea, with stores. The Ripon and Thames are to proceed immediately on to Chersonesus, being the French landing place in the Crimea.

COMFORTS TO THE WOUNDED SOLDIERS.—General Lord Strafford, commanding the Coldstream Guards, has presented to the corps an iron machine, hitherto adapted to bedsteads, but now converted to a purpose by which the wounded may be easily lifted from their beds, and kept suspended without suffering, until their wounds are dressed and their bedding changed. The inventor, Dr. Thomson, has presented a second machine of the same kind, and both have been conveyed from England, one for the hospital for the brigade of Guards at Scutari, the other for Balaklava.

THE MARQUIS OF CONYNHAM has placed at the disposal of Captain Lyons his lordship's fine yacht, for the purpose of conveying comforts to the British army at the Crimea.

FRENCH REINFORCEMENTS.—The Nubia sailed from Marseilles on Monday with 17 officers, 1,093 soldiers, 24 horses, 3 tons of gunpowder, and 270 tons of matériel for the Artillery. The Indiana, which left on Saturday, took out 17 officers, 1,016 soldiers, and 28 horses.

THE ARMY OF LYONS, under the orders of Marshal Castellane, is to be reorganised, and its effective force to be increased to three divisions of infantry and one division of cavalry. They are to be quartered at Lyons for the present, but to be in readiness to take the field at a moment's notice.

THE WHOLE OF THE SCREW boats belonging to the South American and General Steam Navigation Company have been chartered for the transport service. The Emperatriz, 1,500 tons, is expected to be at Queenstown in a few days, the Bahiana, 1,700 tons, is being rapidly fitted at Liverpool and the Emperador, 1,800, expected from the Brazil; the latter end of the month, will be converted into a troopship immediately on her arrival. The Lady Jane will sail from Liverpool for the Crimea in a day or two with 400 tons of hay.

THE STEAM TRANSPORT Cosmopolitan left Portsmouth on Saturday with a load of the wooden huts for the troops in the Crimea. She took out a large quantity of stores also for the Government depots, and a good consignment of warm clothing and other necessities.

A FRENCH ENGINEER officer arrived on Thursday at Southampton, to superintend the embarkation of wooden houses for the French troops in the Crimea. Fifty waggon loads of prepared timber, for wooden houses for the English troops at Balaklava, arrived at Southampton on the same day by railway train. Sappers and miners are erecting a wooden house in the Southampton Docks, for the inspection of the Government authorities. The Cæsus steamer is to be chartered to proceed to the Black Sea.

SPECIAL PAY TO THE WORKING PARTIES BEFORE SEBASTOPOL.—The following order has been issued:—"The Commander of the forces has authorised the issue of working parties to the troops, to be henceforward employed as working parties in the trenches, according to the following rates: Non-commissioned officers, one for every twenty men, 1s. by day and 1s. by night; rank and file 8d. by day and 10d. by night, provided the amount of work does satisfy the officer or engineers in charge. Although it has not been usual to issue this gratuity at sieges, the Commander of the Forces is induced to view the present as an exceptional case, in consideration of the length of the siege operations before Sebastopol, the constant labour the men have been called upon to perform, the inclemency of the weather, and the cheerfulness and goodwill they have manifested in discharge of their duty."

THE NAVVIES. — The Wildfire, purchased by Messrs Brassey, Peto, and Co., sailed on Wednesday from Liverpool with railway plant and thirty or forty navvies, for Balaklava.

MISCELLANEOUS ANECDOTES, INCIDENTS, AND MEMORANDA.

THE EMPRESS OF RUSSIA.—By a telegraphic despatch received in Vienna on Tuesday, it is reported that the Empress is dying, and it is not certain that she was alive when the account was transmitted from St. Petersburg.

"OUR NATURAL ENEMIES."—On the arrival lately of the 10th battalion of Foot Chasseurs at Marseilles quays, several of the men, knocked up from fatigue, were obliged to fall off the mules. In an instant they were surrounded by groups of English sailors, who eased them of their knapsacks and heavy rifles, which they carried to Fort St. Jean. There the sailors, after a hearty shaking of hands, took leave of our soldiers, who were greatly pleased at the feeling of good fellowship displayed by their allies.

WORKING IN THE TRENCHES.—It is extraordinary how few the casualties are amongst the seamen and artillery who work the great guns in the trenches. While one of the seamen gunners was laying a gun for one of the Russian batteries, a round shot came through the embrasure and knocked the lock off the gun. The seamen ducked his head and escaped intact.

'TIS AN ILL WIND THAT BLOWS NOBODY GOOD.—During the late gale, a whole flock of sheep actually deserted from Sebastopol and came over to the English camp, the men chasing them in all directions; and on the following day, the tent tables groaned with legs of mutton. Savoury odours arose from the slaughtered hecatombs of sheep.

NARROW ESCAPE OF A SURGEON IN THE GUARD.—"The whiz of the shot and explosion of shell were incessant at the battle of Inkerman. While in the act of turning round to remount my horse a shot passed through the leg of my trousers, and when in the act of remounting a round shot came through the tent, and at the same instant my poor horse fell, having been shot through the head, his brain sprinkling my face. This, however, was not all. One of our poor soldiers had just shown me his hand, which was smashed, and having directed him to make the best of his way to my field hospital, he was in the act of picking up a piece to do so, when, at the same time that my horse fell, I heard him cry out, and saw him fall by my side shot through the body." The same surgeon adds:—"The barbarous cruelty of our foe was not confined to the officers; many of the poor soldiers suffered severely, and one poor fellow had received a gunshot wound which would have been amenable to operative proceedings had he not been so severely injured by bayonet wounds in other parts of his body, from effects of which he sank. It was not a single instance, for in many cases they were first stabled and afterwards jumped upon."

SIR DE LACY EVANS.—The Duke of Newcastle, writing to Lady Evans, thus speaks of the general, who is on his return home: "All know him to be a gallant soldier, but I know nothing more noble in the records of war, than a veteran general rising from his bed of sickness at the sound of a battle, hurrying to his troops, and, instead of claiming his right to command them, resolving not to supersede the junior who was winning the laurels of the day, but remaining at his side, aiding him with his advice, and assisting him as if he were his aide-de-camp."

DURING THE PRESENT CAMPAIGN in the Crimea the enemy on one occasion fell into a well-laid trap of the French, by which the Russians lost about 100 men, blown up by the explosion of the powder laid for them, and lost many prisoners; the French afterwards chasing them into Sebastopol.

GENERAL CANROBERT is said to entertain an attachment for the daughter of one of our Generals who fell on the 5th at the desperate battle of Inkermann. Previous to the departure of the French General for the East, he had an interview with the young lady in Paris, and urged his suit with his characteristic and national enthusiasm. It is said that the interview was satisfactory, and the gallant General, left, expressing a chivalrous determination of winning a Marshal's baton, and thus becoming more worthy of the much prized English beauty. Sebastopol has, however, proved fatal to the father of the young lady; but the same officer who brought the distressing intelligence was also entrusted with a message from the wounded Canrobert to the lady, in utter ignorance of her bereavement, dilating on his brightened prospects as one step towards his implied promise of rendering himself worthy of her hand.

LORD CARDIGAN.—The following account of Lord Cardigan's share in the memorable charge of Light Cavalry at Balaklava, is derived from a letter from his lordship. When he had ridden through the Russian lines, and was near the muzzles of their guns in an earthwork battery, he was unable to see what to do next. Observing, however, that the embrasures were not high, he put his horse at one of them, as he would have charged a fence in Leicestershire. The horse took the wall, and alighting on the gun they fell together. Lord Cardigan got up as quickly as possible, and flourished his sword, when, to his astonishment and relief, he saw the Russian artillerymen running away. Knowing that he had no support, he retired with the rest of the division who were fortunate enough to get back to their own lines.

MARSHAL ST. ARNAUD.—The Emperor has caused a bronze medal in honour of Marshal de St. Arnaud to be struck off. It bears on one side the effigy of his Majesty, and on the other an inscription in French, of which this is a translation:—"Napoleon III. to the memory of Marshal de St. Arnaud, conqueror in the battle of the Alma on the 20th of September, 1854. Died on board the Berthollet, the 29th September, 1854. His interment in the church of the Invalides was ordered on the 11th October, 1854, and celebrated under the direction of Marshal Vaillant, Minister of War, on the 16th October, 1854."

ADMIRAL NACHIMOFF.—The Wanderer of Vienna of the 8th states, on the authority of a letter from Sebastopol, that Admiral Nachimoff, who, it was reported, had been killed, only lost one of his ears, and has again resumed his command. It was Vice-Admiral Skoropatski who was killed.

ENGLISH COURT-MARTIAL ON A RUSSIAN MAJOR.—The Courrier de Lyons says that General Canrobert sent to Prince Menschikoff the notes of the English court-martial which sentenced the Russian major who killed and mutilated the wounded English at Inkermann to be hanged, asking him at the same time, for the sake of humanity and the rules of civilised war, to sign the death-warrant himself. Prince Menschikoff declined to affix his signature, stating that he had always strictly prohibited such acts of cruelty, but that he could not acknowledge any other jurisdiction in such a matter than that of a Russian court-martial. It appears, from the correspondence of this journal, that the major was actually hanged,—a fact not hitherto established beyond doubt.

PARLIAMENT.

TUESDAY, DEC. 12.

On Tuesday, her Majesty opened in person a session which will probably be one of the most important on record. The Royal procession left Buckingham Palace at a quarter to two o'clock. The House of Peers was attended by several persons favoured with tickets, and the ladies' galleries were filled, many of the Peeresses appearing in deep mourning, showing too plainly the great losses in the aristocratic circle from the terrible struggle in the Crimea. The attendance of Peers was numerous. At half-past two her Majesty arrived, when the House of Commons having been summoned, the Lord Chancellor handed to the Queen the speech, which she read clearly as follows:—

"My Lords and Gentlemen,—
I have called you together at this unusual period of the year, in order that, by your assistance, I may take such measures as will enable me to prosecute the great war in which we are engaged with the utmost vigour and effect. This assistance I know will be readily given; for I cannot doubt that you share my conviction of the necessity of sparing no effort to augment my forces now engaged in the Crimea. The exertions they have made and the victories they have obtained are not exceeded in the brightest pages of our history, and have filled me with admiration and gratitude.

"The hearty and efficient co-operation of the brave troops of my ally, the Emperor of the French, and the glory acquired in common, cannot fail to cement still more closely the union which happily subsists between the two nations.

"It is with satisfaction I inform you that, together with the Emperor of the French, I have concluded a treaty of alliance with the Emperor of Austria, from which I anticipate important advantages to the common cause.

"I have also concluded a treaty with the United States of America by which subjects of long and difficult discussion have been equitably adjusted.

"These treaties will be laid before you.

"Although the prosecution of the war will naturally engage your chief attention, I trust that other matters of great interest and importance to the general welfare will not be neglected.

"I rejoice to observe that the general prosperity of my subjects remains uninterrupted. The state of the revenue affords me entire satisfaction; and I trust that by your wisdom and prudence you will continue to promote the progress of agriculture, commerce, and manufactures.

"Gentlemen of the House of Commons,—

"In the estimates which will be presented to you I trust that you will find that ample provision has been made for the exigencies of the public service.

"My Lords and Gentlemen,—

"I rely with confidence on your patriotism and public spirit. I feel assured that in the momentous contest in which we are engaged you will exhibit to the world the example of a united people. Thus shall we obtain the respect of other nations, and may trust that, by the blessing of God, we shall bring the war to a successful termination."

The passage relative to the victories of the Crimea, which her Majesty declared had filled her with gratitude and admiration, was delivered with graceful emotion.

Her Majesty, having delivered her speech, rose, and giving her hand to Prince Albert, left the house.

The assembly then dispersed.

Their lordships re-assembled at five o'clock.

In the LORDS, the Address was moved by the Duke of Leeds, who thought the treaty with Austria likely to lead to the restoration of an honourable peace. He highly eulogised the army in the Crimea. Lord Ashburton expressed similar sentiments. The Earl of Derby highly praised our own and the French army, and suggested some mark of honour to General Canrobert. He then commented on the whole policy of the Government in respect to the war, showing that it was tardy and inadequate, and urged on them the necessity of energy. The Duke of Newcastle replied to the earl, and although not prepared to defend everything which had been done by his department, he believed much had been well done. The trade of Russia had been destroyed, and their fleet could not proceed to sea. The expedition to Sebastopol was not rashly undertaken, and he himself had taken the earliest opportunity to provide for reinforcements. He admitted they were in error as to the means of defence possessed by Sebastopol, but they could take no blame in that respect. Earl Grey thought the defence of Government a very poor one, but was willing to lend them every support if they vigorously followed the course they were now pursuing. The Duke of Argyll supported the Duke of Newcastle, and after some remarks from the Earls of Hardwicke, Carlisle, and Aherdeen, the Address was agreed to.

In the COMMONS, Lord John Russell gave notice that on Friday (yesterday) he would move the thanks of the House to our army and navy in the Crimea, and also to that of our allies—(loud cheers). The Address was moved by Mr. Sidney Herbert, who congratulated the House on the treaty with the United States. He supported the policy adopted by Government as to the war, highly eulogised the bravery of our army in the battles of Alma, Balaklava, and Inkermann, and congratulated the House on the treaty with Austria. Mr. Leveson Gower seconded the address, supporting the views of Mr. Sidney Herbert.

Sir J. Pakington, for the great Conservative party, would say that they were heartily agreeable to the increase proposed in the army: they were indeed disappointed that the increase had been so long delayed. The Government were now waking up from a dream, and putting forth energies too long dormant. He deprecated the policy of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, who would limit the energies of the country by the amount that could be raised within the year. After paying a high tribute to the British army, he reviewed the errors and delays of the whole campaign, and intimated that upon the explanations which the Government might offer, would depend the confidence of the House. After a defence of the Government from Sir Robert Peel, who complained of the attacks upon our allies by M. Kosuth, Mr. S. Herbert entered on an elaborate defence of Government, contending that everything had been done which could reasonably have been expected, in conjunction with our allies. Having entered into details similar to those advanced by the Duke of Newcastle, in the Lords, he mentioned that the total force sent to Lord Raglan, including those ready to embark, was 54,736; and that our losses were 2,783 by disease, and 1,350 killed in battle; total, 4,133—a loss less than had been supposed. Mr. Layard thought the great fault was the absence of any definite policy, and that as to the treaty with Austria, it would increase our difficulties; he therefore called on the Government to produce it for discussion. He warned them that the taking of Sebastopol would not conclude the war, for the Russians would retire to Perikop, and an additional 100,000 men would be thrown by Menschikoff into Asia, where no efficient resistance could be offered to them. In Europe alone could Russia be crippled by the establishment of Poland. Mr. Disraeli commented on the fact that the Government evinced no disposition to answer Mr. Layard, whose name would live when this Government was forgotten, and also on the miserable estimate of the Chancellor of the Exchequer. It was clear that in his opinion we were not embarked in a great war, and that he totally misconceived the difficulties we had to contend with. He (Mr. D.) contended that Ministers had lowered that spirit throughout the country which they should have fostered. We had entered on a campaign without making the slightest provision for it. He trusted the House would insist on knowing the provisions of the treaty with Austria. Lord J. Russell deprecated the speech of Mr. Disraeli, as calculated to damp the ardour of the country, and to weaken our alliance with France. The noble lord replied to the objections of the several speakers, and said, with respect to the treaty with Austria, that that country had not done her duty by Europe in so long refraining from an alliance with the Western Powers; but then she had more to fear from a war with Russia than had either England or France. Austria had not agreed that if peace were not concluded before the end of the year, she would go to war with Russia; but she had agreed that by that time she would determine on the steps she would take in regard to the war. From this he inferred, that if France and England proposed terms of peace consistent with the four points which Austria could adopt, she would conclude a treaty of peace offensive and defensive. The Address was then agreed to.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 13.

The HOUSE OF LORDS did not meet.

In the COMMONS, Sir B. Hall announced that after Christmas he should propose to repeal the Health of Towns and Nuisances Removal Act, and introduce two new measures. The report on the Address was brought up by Mr. H. Herbert, and agreed to after some miscellaneous remarks upon the conduct of the war from Admiral Walcott, Mr. A. Pellatt, Sir H. Willoughby, Mr. Aleck, Colonel Sibthorp, Mr. Rice, the Chancellor of the Exchequer and other members. Leave to bring in a bill enabling her Majesty to accept offers of service by militia regiments in places out of the United Kingdom was moved for by Lord Palmerston. The bill would be framed upon the model of an act passed during the last war, and its immediate purpose was to give the Government power to send such militia regiments as might volunteer upon the service to do garrison duty in our colonies in the Mediterranean, so as to release the troops now stationed in those garrisons for employment at the seat of war. The Home Secretary added a warm eulogium upon the loyalty manifested among the regiments of militia lately embodied, and on the proficiency which the men had attained in their military exercises. Leave being given, the bill was brought in, read a first time, and ordered for second reading on Thursday.

THURSDAY, DEC. 14.

In the HOUSE OF LORDS, the Duke of Newcastle moved the second reading of a bill designed to empower the Crown to enlist foreigners for the military service. The present application of the measure would extend to the enlistment of fifteen thousand men, who would be embodied and drilled in this country, and sent to serve abroad. The Earl of Ellenborough observed that this would supersede the services of fifteen thousand militiamen by those of an equal number of aliens. The Duke of Richmond bore testimony to the admirable services performed by the German Legion in the course of the war against Napoleon.—The Earl of Derby enlarged on the discredit and danger that attended the employment of foreigners as a portion of the British army.—The Earl of Aberdeen remarked on the disparaging reception given to this, the first measure introduced by the Government, for carrying on the war with vigour and effect.—The Earl of Malmesbury contended that the example afforded during our previous wars did not now apply, since the country was then embarked almost single-handed in a conflict with a sovereign who wielded nearly the whole power of the Continent.—The Duke of Argyll and Earl Grey defended the measure.—After a few remarks from the Earl of Glengall, and a somewhat prolonged reply by the Duke of Newcastle, the bill was read a second time.—Her Majesty's gracious reply to the address from the Peers was brought up by the Marquis of Blandford.

In the HOUSE OF COMMONS, Lord J. Russell stated that he must postpone, until after the Christmas recess, announcing the measures which the Government proposed introducing during the present session. He also stated that the papers relating to the ratification of the new Austrian treaty were despatched from London some days since, and the treaty itself would be laid before the House as soon as the ministry received intelligence that the ratifications had been completed.—Sir James Graham, replying to Mr. Lill yard, said that no official intelligence respecting the loss of the Prince steamer had yet reached the Admiralty. The men belonging to the 46th Regiment, which had been conveyed by that vessel to the Crimea, were landed on the 8th of November. He added, that Captain Goodall, the late commander of the Prince, must be exonerated from all blame.—Mr. Cardwell announced that a bill was in preparation, and would be introduced during the session, for amending the law of partnership.—Sir J. Young obtained leave to bring in a bill consolidating and simplifying the law of jurors and juries in Ireland. In reply to a question from Mr. Disraeli as to public business, Lord John Russell stated, that for the present only two bills would be proposed by the Government, namely, one respecting the militia, already read a first time, and another sanctioning the employment of foreigners in her Majesty's army. The report on the address in reply to the royal speech was brought up and considered.—Mr. M. Gibson urged an inquiry respecting the proposed measures for regulating the newspaper stamp law.—The Chancellor of the Exchequer said the Government had prepared a bill which they believed would prove satisfactory. It was, however, judged expedient to delay its introduction until it could be regularly proceeded with, after the Christmas holidays.—The second reading of the Militia Bill was moved by Lord Palmerston.—Colonel Sibthorp recommended the insertion of provisions prescribing definitely the places in which the militia were to serve, and the period of their service abroad.—After a few words from Lord Lonsdale, Lord Palmerston, in reference to a question asked on the previous debate, explained that no militia officers who should from private reasons decline to volunteer on service beyond seas, would be disparaged thereby.—The bill was then read a second time.—On the question that it be ordered for committee this day, Mr. Disraeli suggested some modifications in the measure, and expressed his regret at learning that the Government proposed, although the war was only in its first year, to enlist foreigners in the British army.—Lord J. Russell submitted that the chief strain of a war was ordinarily experienced during its early commencement, and before the military resources of the country could be fully developed.—Mr. Adderley referred to some recent proceedings in the Canadian House of Assembly, and inquired why the Government preferred enlisting foreigners when the colonies offered abundant supplies of men for the army.—Sir C. Grey recognised the gratifying proofs of loyalty and attachment to the British Crown manifested by the colonies, and especially Canada. They had liberally contributed their money, and might hereafter supply also men for the services of the empire, but no definite proposal to that effect had yet been made.—Sir W. B. Smith inquired whether militia officers employed abroad would take military rank?—Mr. S. Herbert contended that such a concession to the militia would prove unjust to the army.—The committee of the bill was then fixed for Monday next.

FRIDAY, DEC. 15.

In the LORDS, the Duke of Newcastle moved "A vote of thanks to the army and navy engaged in the Crimea and Black Sea; and also a vote of thanks to the military and naval forces of the Emperor of the French engaged in conjunction with her Majesty's forces in the Crimea and the Black Sea." His Lordship paid a high tribute to Lord Raglan, and asked the House to include in their vote of thanks Sir J. Burgoyne, Sir G. Brown, the Duke of Cambridge, and Sir De Lacy Evans. The Earl of Derby seconded the motion, highly eulogising the skill and bravery displayed by our gallant army. The motion was supported by the Earl of Hardwicke, Lord Hardinge, the Earl of Malmesbury, and several other noble lords. The vote was carried amid loud cheering. In reply to the Marquis of Clanricarde, the Earl of Clarendon said he had just received from Vienna the news of the ratification of the treaty with Austria. He had pleasure in laying it on the table, and in stating that every information would be afforded by Government. The papers should be produced after the recess. The Government had received full assurance that an exclusive occupation of the Danubian Principalities by Austria was intended. On the question for going into committee on the Enlistment of Foreigners' Bill, the proposition was adopted by a majority of 12, and the House then adjourned.

In the COMMONS, after the presentation of petitions from Blackburn against the Sale of Beer Act, and from Scarborough against any alteration in the system of licensing public-houses, Mr. Muntz moved for a return of the contracts by the Board of Ordnance for small arms since January 1st, 1853, and the particulars relative to such contracts. In reply to a question from Mr. Labouchere, Sir W. Molesworth stated that the vacant space near St. Paul's belonged to the City Corporation, who valued it at £60,000. It would be a scandalism to cover it with buildings, but he, as a member of Works, had no power to prevent it. Lord J. Russell, in reply to Mr. Packer, said he would bring on the amendments immediately after Easter. In reply to Mr. St. Herbert, the Government had selected services of the Sisters of Charity, and had selected a for the Crimea, with a view to the religious wants of the whole army, without sectarian favouritism. Lord J. Russell brought up a copy of the treaty with Austria, which was ordered to lie on the table; and subsequently the noble lord, in a long and eloquent speech, proposed a vote of thanks to the army in the Crimea. Mr. Disraeli seconded the vote, which Lord Hotham and Mr. Layard supported. Mr. Drummond, in supporting the vote, referred to the charge against Admiral Dundas, mentioned in a letter of Mr. Layard; and the latter gentleman having explained his conduct, Lord John Russell defended Admiral Dundas, after which the vote of thanks was passed, and the House adjourned.

FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE.

The Moniteur of the 9th publishes the following Imperial decree:—"The clauses of our decrees of the 24th of February and 26th of April last, prohibiting the exportation of arms, ammunition, and other articles of war, are extended to the transit of the same articles throughout the territory of the empire."

The correspondent of the Daily News, writing from Paris on Tuesday night, says he is informed, from a good source, that a circular addressed by the Prussian Government to the Prussian ambassadors at the different European courts, contains the following passages:—

"In the delicate conjuncture in which Europe now finds herself, the German Powers have acted under the influence of a desire for peace. It is in the interest of Europe, and in order to attain an important end, that they have pressed the court of Russia to accept conditions which a year ago no one supposed for a moment that Russia could be brought to accept. The Emperor of Russia, yielding to the wishes ardently expressed by his ancient allies, has just shown a proof of the utmost moderation. The concessions which he makes go to the utmost limits compatible with his dignity. Should the monstrous pretensions put forth in certain organs be proposed in any conference, the German powers would not only not support them, but the responsibility of an European conflict would fall upon the authors of these pretensions."

The Presse, however, gives news of a totally different complexion. According to a Berlin correspondent, writing on the 9th, M. de Manténuff, the Prussian Minister for Foreign Affairs, has announced to the Prussian ambassador at Vienna, M. Arnim, that the King of Prussia will speedily adhere to the treaty of December 2. The letter in the Presse mentions several rumours current in Berlin; one to the effect that the French and English ambassadors told M. Buol—the Austrian Minister of Foreign Affairs—that if the treaty was not signed in twenty-four hours they would demand their passports. The minister was in consternation. He proposed the treaty to the "chivalrous young Emperor," Francis Joseph, and met with an obstinate resistance, which he only overcame by threatening to resign.

THE ARMY IN THE EAST is to be reinforced by a 9th division, formed of troops taken from Algeria, with the exception of one regiment, the 49th, which belongs to the garrison of Toulouse. The division is to be commanded by General Brunet.

Marshal de Castellane, who arrived in Paris a few days ago, has returned to Lyons, to resume the command of the camp, which has lately been so strongly reinforced.

SPAIN.

Espartaco and his colleagues resigned on the 2nd. The Queen, it is said, was surprised, and declined to receive the resignation, but Espartaco was firm and insisted. Up to a late hour of the night the clubs and cafés were full, and there were groups in the street, eagerly discussing the event of the day. At Espartaco's house there was a constant succession of visitors up to half-past one o'clock in the morning, to entreat him not to give up the reins of Government. Generals Concha, Zabea, O'Donnell, Prim, Dulce, and many other officers of high rank and political personages of note, went to see him with this object. The next day the visits were renewed. Generals Serrano, Dulce, Salazar, and a number of others had interviews with him. At one o'clock Lord Howden, the British Ambassador, had an interview with him, to prevail on him, for the sake of public tranquillity, to continue to hold office. The news of the retirement of the Ministry caused much agitation, but no disturbances were apprehended.

Under date of the 5th we learn that at a Council of Ministers Espartaco was prevailed on to remain in office, an outbreak, if not a revolution, being anticipated if he persisted in resigning. His whole Ministry remain with him. The ultra Liberals are very dissatisfied at this; they hoped to have got rid of all the moderato portion of the Ministry. Both the Ministry and the Chamber have lost much prestige by this vacillation. Espartaco, too, is personally blamed by his Progresista friends; they say he should have held firm. The great question now in Spain is one on which these threatened changes have hinged—the abolition of consumos and puertas, taxes which press heavily on the poor. Several places (amongst them Saragossa) have for many months refused to pay these dues, and it is expected that now several other towns will follow the example.

The Espana of the 6th mentions a report that the Cabinet has resolved on suppressing the octroi duties from the 1st January, and on raising a loan to provide for the deficit the measure will occasion.

In the Cortes, on the 6th, M. Lafuente read the draft of a reply proposed by a committee, in answer to a speech from the throne. It proposes a liberal constitution, the impeachment of ex-ministers guilty of corruption, and the preservation of the throne of Isabella II.

AUSTRIA.

The Augsburg Gazette announces that the passage of the infantry division of the 6th corps d'armée was to commence on the 15th. They were to travel by railway, and proceed to Cracow. The detachments of the 5th corps d'armée, at Milan, and of the 5th, at Verona, were also directed towards the north of the monarchy.

PRUSSIA.

The Prussian Court has not yet formally acceded to the new treaty, but no doubts are entertained that it will do so at the fitting moment. The augmentation of the army proceeds. An order has just been given to add 72 guns to the artillery. The liberal National Gazette was seized by the police on Saturday.

PRUSSIA AND THE AUSTRIAN TREATY.—A letter from Vienna, in the Augsburg Gazette says:—"There has arrived here, it is said, a note from the Prussian cabinet, in which it expresses its satisfaction at the treaty of December 2. It may, therefore, be hoped that Prussia will join the alliance of Austria and the Western Powers."

DENMARK.

The new Ministry was formed on the 12th. Bang is Premier, and takes the department of the interior; Scheel is Minister for Holstein; Count Scheel-Plessen (at present ambassador in Stockholm) has the department of Foreign Affairs; Colonel Lutichian has the War Department; Colonel Andrie, Finance; Professor Hall, Religion (cultes); Simony, Justice; Michelsen, Marine; the Minister for Schleswig is not yet appointed. Ministers held a Cabinet Council on the 13th, the King presiding. A programme of the address to the Diet was discussed.

GREECE.

By letters from Athens of the 27th ult., we learn that the cholera, after a first invasion, followed by a marked decrease, has suddenly assumed a certain degree of intensity. No one was prepared for it. The alarm is general, and the emigration immense. The villages of the neighbourhood are filled with a wandering population, and without shelter. The capital presents the most afflicting spectacle; justice is suspended; the employees of the different public offices were the first to fly. Provisions are everywhere deficient, and the butchers and the bakers have closed their shops. The sanitary condition of the French and English troops is satisfactory, and our soldiers have been able to render great assistance to the sick. Their devotedness is admirable, and the hospital men have spontaneously offered their services to assist the Greek troops. Several cures have taken place in consequence, and it is to this that the garrison of Athens is indebted for not having suffered severely. Our Sisters of Charity have gone to the cholera hospital, and also go from house to house, to attend to the sick. Admiral de Tinnan has placed a number of tents at the service of General Kallergi, who displays an activity worthy of the highest praise.

INDIA AND CHINA.

The Austrian Lloyd's steamer Calcutta arrived at Trieste on Thursday. The dates are Calcutta, Nov. 8; Madras, Nov. 12; Shanghai, Oct. 11; Amoy, Oct. 22; Hong Kong, Oct. 28; Canton, Oct. 27; Bombay, Nov. 14. Lord F. Fitzclarence, Commander-in-Chief at Bombay, is dead. An envoy from Kokan, and one from Dost Mohammed, have arrived in Peshawar to apply for assistance from the British Government against the Russians. The Afghan chiefs have decided on an English, in preference to a Russo-Persian, alliance. Lord Elphinstone is at Bombay, suffering from the effects of a sun-stroke. Trade in India dull, and money scarce. Exchange at Calcutta, 1.11½. The price of opium has declined to ₹400, in less than a year. The Governor-General, now at Calcutta, will leave for the Neilgheries in March. Trade in China dull. Exchange at Canton, 4s. 8d., with few trifling purchases of teas. The patriot cause is gaining ground in the north of China.

AMERICA.

The Asia arrived at Liverpool on Sunday from New York, bringing advices to the 23rd ult. According to the Herald, the tone of the President's message will be rather quiet. The New York Tribune says that a naval demonstration against Dutch India is contemplated. The Governor of South Carolina, in his letter to the Legislature, suggests a modification of the laws relating to free persons of colour arriving at southern seaports. Great financial distress existed. The Fendal Tenure Abolition Bill had been read a third time in the Canadian Legislature. The Inspector-General's resolutions were adopted without important change, except as regards sugars. There was no abatement of the pressure in the New York money-market, and the business generally continued on a limited scale.

The result of the deliberations of the bishops assembled at Rome to consider the Immaculate Conception is that 540 bishops pronounced by acclamation for the new dogma, and thirty-two voices questioned the appropriateness of such a discussion just now.

THE JEWS AND THE PORTE.—The Presse of Vienna has the following from Jassy, of the 21st ult.:—"The Porte has recompensed the Jews of Moldavia for the loyalty which they have always shown. All the Jews whom the Russians had incorporated by force in the Moldavian militia have been liberated, and have had a part of their taxes remitted."

THE AFRICAN MAELS.—The Ethiopie arrived at Plymouth on Wednesday with the usual monthly mails. The news is unimportant. She brings a large cargo of palm oil, ivory, camwood, Guinea grain, wax, gum, copal, cochineal, oranges, and 1,940 ounces of gold. The African coast was healthy. Peace continued at Lagos. The riot was all settled at Christenang, and everything was quiet. The whole of the town had been blown down by the English steamers of war.

COLONIAL NEWS.

AUSTRALIA.

The General Screw Steam Shipping Company's steamship Croesus arrived at Southampton on Thursday, bringing the Australian mails, 34 passengers, 3,805 ounces of gold dust from Sydney, 42,406 ditto from Port Phillip, and specie amounting to £295,500, besides a full cargo. The total amount of specie and gold dust is £254,000. She left Sydney on the 2nd of September.

The Croesus on the 12th September broke one fan off the propeller, and on the 3rd October lost the remaining one. The remaining portion of the screw was hove up and unshipped. Experienced baffling easterly winds between New Zealand and 126 degrees west. Rounded Cape Horn Oct. 19, under sail only; and did not get the new propeller until the 29th October, owing to the heavy sea and rolling of the ship.

The Croesus left England on the 11th January last, and has consequently been eleven months in going round the world. She was detained several months in Australia repairing damages which she met with on her outward passage. The expense of the repairs amounted to about £6,000. Before she arrived out at Australia every berth in her was engaged for the homeward passage, but the length of her outward voyage frustrated these arrangements. Notwithstanding the delays she had met with, those who came home in her speak highly of her sea-going qualities, of the skill of her commander, and of the comforts on board. One of the passengers who arrived home in her has been the whole voyage in the Croesus, and has been delighted with his trip. On the outward voyage lectures were delivered, Sir Thomas Mitchell having been one of the lecturers, and dramatic representations took place on board. The gentleman who went round the world in the Croesus visited the chief places in New South Wales, Victoria, and Van Diemen's Land, while he stopped in Australia, and speaks in the highest terms of the public spirit of the colonists. Melbourne will shortly be supplied with water by works twenty miles long.

The Cape Horn route, it appears, will not pay for steamers, and the route to Australia performed by the ships which sail on the great circle principle has been found to inflict great hardships on emigrants on account of the cold and danger to which it exposes them.

A gentleman left Australia for the United States before the Croesus sailed to arrange for a steam-packet communication between Panama and Australia, and the Australians have resolved to give all their support to an American steam-packet line.

CAPE OF GOOD HOPE.

News from the Cape of Good Hope to the 21st of October, is unsatisfactory, as disturbances, and serious ones too, appear to be again threatening that colony, if we are to believe the statements in the Cape Town Mail. From that journal it appears that both in the Council and the Assembly the present state of the frontier is dangerously unsettled. "The frontier," it continues, "is but another word for the colony, and the meaning of the soft word 'unsatisfactory' is that the colony is in danger from the tribes beyond it, on whose territory Government has made extensive encroachments. We have driven back those tribes on one another. We have seized the lands of those who ventured to fight, like Saullili; and we have appropriated the lands of those who yielded them for the sake of peace, like Moshesh. We have violated treaties with faithful allies, like Adam Kok. We have broken promises with those who stood by us in the hour of danger, as with the Bushmen and Fingoes. The Kafirs, it is known, are only kept down by the strong hand. The lands taken from them were conquered. Be it so, but don't forget that what is taken by force may be resumed by force. It would be foolish in the Kafirs to attempt this. But Kafirs do foolish things sometimes. . . . Such is the degraded and dangerous position into which irresponsible rulers have dragged this colony. With every tribe justly hostile in their hearts—without a friend, without an ally—what provision has been made within to meet the impending storm? None whatever. At the most critical moment—a war of some years just ended—hostile tribes forced into a corner where they cannot live—friends insulted—allies abandoned—the colony unorganised, we are left with an 'intermediate government,' to keep things quiet, we suppose, until somebody whom we never heard of, and who knows us only on the map, shall come to take the reins of Government into his single hand. The colonists are as much injured, wronged, abandoned to pillage as the native tribes, and as free from blame."

NEWS OF THE UNITED KINGDOM.

REPRESENTATION OF MARYLEBONE.—During the week meetings have been held to hear the views of gentlemen desirous of filling the vacant seat. The candidates were Mr. Jacob Bell, in the Liberal interest; Sir C. Napier, Radical; and Viscount Ebrington, Liberal Conservative. On Thursday, however, it was understood that the only candidates were Viscount Ebrington and Mr. Bell. The nomination takes place on Monday.

ST. JAMES'S-PARK.—On Wednesday workmen were engaged in making improvements adjoining Buckingham Palace. The old gates leading from Birdcage-walk into Piccadilly have been removed, and a new entrance to the park is being completed. The new gates will be thrown back a considerable distance, to form a large area for the entrance of carriages passing from the Palace to Belgravia and the west end. The new buildings at the eastern extremity of Piccadilly, and immediately at the rear of the royal residence, are in a state of forwardness, and in a few weeks that important thoroughfare will be completed.

HEALTH OF LONDON DURING THE WEEK.—The weekly return continues to exhibit a rather high rate of mortality, the number of deaths registered in London last week having been 1,331. In the ten corresponding weeks of the years 1844-53 the average number was 1,243. When this is raised in proportion to the increase of population it becomes 1,367, a result which represents a high mortality, principally because the facts embrace the epidemic period of 1847, when influenza prevailed. Compared with the estimated amount the return of last week shows only a small decrease. That class which suffered most appears to have been the young—656 deaths, or nearly half, having occurred to children under 15 years of age. Of these children 98 were carried off by scarlatina, and 103 by pneumonia, the effect to some extent of recent lowness of the temperature. Small-pox is also making progress, and was fatal in the week to 19 children and 11 adults. 328 deaths were caused by diseases of the zymotic class, and 303 by affections of the respiratory organs, exclusive of 131 by phthisis. Last week the births of 777 boys, and 769 girls, in all 1,546 children, were registered. In the nine corresponding weeks of the years 1845-53 the average was 1,454.

LONDON-BRIDGE.—The London-bridge Committee have come to a resolution, to recommend to the Court of Common Council to widen London-bridge, by extending the footway on each side over the river, and throwing the present footpaths into the carriage-way. A beautiful model of the projected alteration was exhibited by Mr. Bunning, the City architect. As a considerable time will be occupied in carrying out the change, the committee came to a determination to try, in the meantime, the experiment of confining the heavy traffic each way in one line, and leaving the whole of the centre open for quick traffic. Notice-boards will be placed at each end of the bridge, giving notice—"That, after a given day, all heavy, slow-going carriages will be required to keep close to the curb, and only such carriages as go at a trotting pace will be allowed to occupy the centre of the bridge." It is expected that the experiment will prove extremely serviceable in facilitating transit for the enormously increased traffic of the bridge. Application will be made to the Lord Mayor for his sanction, and to the Commissioner of City Police for the assistance of two officers to enable the committee to test the efficiency of the project.

THE CAR WATERMEN.—The Commissioners of Police have just carried out another improvement at the cab stands. The watermen have been clothed in a kind of uniform; they are paid a fixed weekly sum at the nearest police station, where they have to report themselves, and state the time when they take charge of and deliver up their rank; they are inspected when on duty, in the same way as a policeman on his beat; and they have to supply water to the horses without charge.

LIMERICK ELECTION.—Mr. Barrington declines going to the poll; therefore Mr. De Vere will be returned without opposition, Lieut.-Col. Dickson having already retired.

THE ESTATES OF SIR THOS. STABLES, Bart., county Tyrone, have been sold in the Incumbered Estates Court, realising £37,000. The cholera still lingers about Dublin in a malignant form, and several fatal cases among persons of respectability have occurred within the last few days.

THE REMAINING ESTATES OF THE EARL OF ALDBOROUGH were sold on Tuesday in the Incumbered Estates Court, Dublin. They realised £50,390, being at the rate of about twenty-one years' purchase on the net yearly rents for the Sligo and Leitrim lots; 26½ years' purchase all round for the residue of the Wicklow estate, and about 23½ years' purchase for the Kildare estate. With the exception of the Sligo and Leitrim estates, the rest of the property appeared to be held on farming leases, or from year to year.

AN ALARMING THUNDERSTORM a few days since, visited Newtonshart and Strabane. At noon the darkness was very great, and at two o'clock a large ball of fire passed over the latter town, for a mile and a-half, descending with a noise like the discharge of a park of artillery, and doing considerable damage to farm produce.

AGRICULTURAL PROSPERITY.—The Belfast Mercury has an article showing that the present year has been one of the most prosperous Ireland has been favoured with. It attributes much of this to increased energy in farming, to the infusion of skill and capital from Scotland and England, and to the habits of industry induced by the absence of political agitation. "During the last three years," it continues, "the sale of farm stock in Tipperary and Galway has risen from £1,440,000 to about £2,000,000 in the one case, and from £1,380,000 to about £1,900,000 in the other. Cattle of the finest descriptions are now to be seen in each of those localities. In three different periods the number of cattle and sheep owned by Ireland's agriculturists stood as follows:—

	Cattle.	Sheep.
1841	1,863,116	2,106,189
1851	2,067,161	2,122,128
1853	3,383,309	3,147,956

Not less satisfactory are the decrease of pauperism and the almost total absence of agrarian outrage. Ireland is no longer 'the chief difficulty' of the British Minister."

IRISH BANK RETURNS.—The returns of the circulation of the Irish banks show an enormous augmentation—no less than £31,600 on the month—the increase in the corresponding month of 1853 having been £112,000, and of 1852, £76,000. The bullion shows an increase of £83,000.

DISTRESS AMONG THE GLASGOW HANDLOOM WEAVERS.—On Wednesday evening last, after discussing their hardships at public meeting in Calton, a number of weavers proceeded in a body to the shops in the neighbourhood, and asked alms; no positive threats were used. The police have put a stop to this; and, to do them justice, the unemployed have shown no disposition to persist in such outrages, upon finding that the relief committee were prepared to aid the really necessitous. —Scottish Press.

THE EDINBURGH CADDIES' STRIKE.—The magistrates have suggested a compromise, viz., that the drivers should attend every alternate Sunday; but to this the drivers refused to agree, on the ground that it would be an abandonment of the principle for which they contended. The magistrates have therefore resolved to grant drivers' licences to any number of men of good character, whose competency should be certified by the inspector of cabs; thus leaving the question of Sunday driving to be settled by the masters and the men so licensed. —Scotsman.

NAVAL AND MILITARY.

The Monarch, 84, is to be placed in Devonport dockyard for repairs, prior to sailing for South America.

The screw steamship Sanspareil, 81, is ordered from service in the East to Plymouth, where she is to be fitted with engines of 400 horse-power.

Two powerful steamtugs, the Express and the Tartar, belonging to the Liverpool Steam-tug Company, have been purchased by Government for service in the Black Sea.

HER MAJESTY'S NEW STEAM-YACHT, the Windsor Castle, is to be launched at Pembroke dockyard on the 16th of January, and it is hoped that the Queen will perform the ceremony of naming her.

CAPT. M'CLURE.—The Admiralty have presented to Captain M'Clure a very handsome gold watch, with a suitable inscription, as a token of their entire approbation of his conduct during the perilous enterprise which he has carried to a successful issue. Their lordships admit that Captain M'Clure is the discoverer of the North-west Passage.

The Belgravia, 1,600 tons, belonging to Somers Brothers, of Blackwall, reached Constantinople in sixteen days from Plymouth.

NEW CANNON.—The new cannon invented by Dr. Church, and patented by that gentleman in connection with Mr. Goddard, is now undergoing a trial at one of the Government depots, with a view to its being brought into immediate use if found to answer the purpose for which it is intended. The principal feature in the invention consists in the capability of the gun to discharge 300 balls continuously in an almost incredibly short space of time. —Birmingham Gazette.

THE BIRMINGHAM GUNMAKERS.—A numerous meeting of gun manufacturers was held in the committee-room of the Town-hall on Wednesday last, for the purpose of conferring with Messrs. Spooner, Muntz, and Newdegate on the present state of the trade. The four old contractors, as they are termed, are now supplying 1,200 guns weekly, and the new contractors 1,300; London is producing a proportionate number; if the Government were to issue orders for double that quantity there are hands and machinery sufficient to produce them.

RECRUITING IN MANCHESTER.—Since the increase of the bounty and the lowering of the standard, recruiting has been very active in this city. In the month of November 480 recruits presented themselves for examination before the surgeons of the 3rd Light Dragoons and the 51st Light Infantry.

MAJOR-GENERAL BENTINCK and Lieutenant-Colonel Lord George Paget will return to the Crimea, the former to command the fourth division of the army, instead of the south-western district; the latter to resume the command of the 4th Light Dragoons, instead of retiring from the service by the sale of his commission.

COMMISSIONS FOR MERITORIOUS SERGEANTS.—An honour is about to be bestowed on the non-commissioned officers under Lord Raglan. The Field-Marshal is to submit the name of one sergeant of each regiment of cavalry, of three battalions of the Foot Guards, and of each regiment of infantry of the line; the nominee to be appointed to a cornetcy or ensigncy. The commissions are appropriately to be dated the 5th of November.

ANNUITIES AND REWARDS.—The non-commissioned officers under Lord Raglan are to be rewarded by one sergeant in each regiment of cavalry and infantry, and of each battalion of the Foot Guards, and of the Rifle Brigade, being selected by the commanding officer, and recommended for an annuity not exceeding £24, provided that the aggregate of grants shall not exceed £4,000 in any one year; and rewards are also to be distributed. The commanding officer of each regiment of cavalry is to recommend one sergeant, two corporals, and four privates; and the commanding officer of each regiment of infantry, and of each battalion of Foot Guards, and of the Rifle Brigade, is to recommend one sergeant, four corporals, and ten privates, to receive a medal and a gratuity of—For a sergeant, £15; for a corporal, £10; for a private, £5. The gratuity to be placed in the regimental Savings' Bank, there to remain in deposit at interest until his discharge.

A GERMAN LEGION.—A body of Germans are to be enlisted and trained in England, like our German legion in the old war.

YEOMANRY AND MILITIA.

THE NORTHUMBERLAND LIGHT INFANTRY are to be embodied on the 9th of January, and to hold themselves in readiness for any part of the kingdom. Its strength is about 1,000. The Notts, the Leicestershire, the 2nd Royal Lancashire, the West York (who have sent about 300 volunteers to the line), the North York, and the Royal Denbigh are also in active training. The Monmouthshire, the 4th Royal West Middlesex, and some other regiments, have also furnished a large quota to the regiments of the line. In Dublin the volunteering into the line regiments is very frequent, so as fully to meet, if even not to exceed, the exigencies of the service, and the volunteers are a fine and soldierly body of men. In the vicinity of Kilmaham and the Royal Hospital an animated scene may often be now observed, in the crowds of young men who have just joined the ranks, animated with desire to take their share in the campaign. In London also recruiting for the Militia is actively proceeded with. On Wednesday recruiting parties arrived from the head quarters of the 4th South Middlesex. The chief rendezvous was at the Surprise Tavern, Chelsea. The party wore the new regulation uniform, looking very soldierlike: they are obtaining numerous volunteers. Two hundred and fifty volunteers from the Militia to the line arrived on the same day at the staff office, Westminster, and having passed were forwarded to the regimental depot. Forty-six also arrived at the Horse Guards for the Household Brigade. The East Middlesex muster at Hampstead on the 26th, and the West Essex in Chelmsford on the 27th. According to official returns, there are now sixty-one militia regiments called out for service.

THE COURT AND WORLD OF FASHION.

Her Majesty went in state on Tuesday to open the session of Parliament. The Queen was preceded by six carriages, conveying the officers of her Majesty's household, and by the Yeoman of the Guard, &c. The Queen's carriage was drawn by eight cream-coloured horses, conveying her Majesty, Prince Albert, the Master of the Horse (the Duke of Wellington), and the Duchess of Wellington, officiating as Mistress of the Robes for the Duchess of Sutherland. The escort was composed of the Life Guards. After the ceremony the royal party travelled to Windsor by special train.

ROYAL VISIT TO EATON HALL.—We have every reason to believe that her Majesty and the royal family will honour the Marquis of Westminster with a visit to Eaton Hall early next June. —Chester Chronicle.

On Tuesday and Wednesday the royal dinner party included the Duchess of Kent, Lady Fanny Howard, Baroness de Speth, Earl Granville, Lord Carrington, Lord Churchill, and Colonel Francis H. Seymour.

The Viscountess Canning succeeds Lady Churchill. Her ladyship's first "wait" on her Majesty will be on Saturday next (to-day), at Windsor Castle.

Lord Dunkellin arrived at the Marquis of Clarendon's residence, on Carlton-house-terrace, on Tuesday, from Russia, via Berlin.

Lord John Russell, as leader of the House of Commons, gave a full-dress dinner on Monday evening, at the Foreign-office, to several influential members of his party.

The Earl of Aberdeen gave a full-dress banquet to several members of the House of Lords, on Monday, at Argyle House.

LORD FREDERICK FITZCLARENCE, Commander-in-Chief at Bombay, whose death, we regret to announce with our Indian news, was second son of King William the Fourth and Mrs. Jordan. He was born in 1799, and in 1821 married Lady Augusta Boyle, daughter of the Earl of Glasgow. Lord Frederick entered the army in 1814, and gained in it perhaps as much reputation as is attainable by a soldier who is never called to active service. His lordship held the rank of lieutenant-general at his death. Although neither a peer nor the son of a peer, his lordship enjoyed the title and precedence of a younger son of a marquis, by royal grant, dated May 24, 1831.

DESPATCHES WERE RECEIVED at the Foreign-office on Monday announcing the death of the enterprising African traveller, Dr. Barth, and also that of Mr. Henry Waddington, who have both fallen victims to the pestilential climate of Africa. The last communication from Dr. Barth announced his approaching departure from Timbuctoo for the interior of Africa.

WHEN is a man thinner than a lath?—when he is a shaving.

THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN'S JOURNAL.

THE UNIFORM WORN BY THE DUKE OF LEEDS on the occasion of moving the address in the House of Lords, was that of the North York Rifles, of which his grace is colonel.

CELEBRATION OF THE MAJORITY OF THE BIRTH OF HAWKSTONE.—The coming of age of the Hon. Rowland Clogg Hill, eldest son of Viscount Hill, has been celebrated by a series of festivities at Hawkstone, the seat of the noble family. Upwards of two thousand invitations had been issued for two bills and suppers; one for the nobility and gentry, and the other for the farmers and tradesmen. The former took place on Tuesday, the noble heir's natal day. In the morning Viscount Hill, with the Hon. Mr. Hill, and a select circle of friends, started in carriages and four to visit the various places on the estate where festive gatherings were being held. Every village was decorated with evergreens and emblematic devices, and by every one was the heir welcomed most cordially. The ball took place at Hawkstone, in a pavilion erected for the occasion. Supper, provided under the superintendence of Mr. Gunter, the celebrated purveyor, was laid out in an adjoining tent.

COMING OF AGE OF WALTER DE SODINGTON BLOUNT, Esq., ELDEST SON OF SIR EDWARD BLOUNT, Bart., of Mawley Hall. —The fund to celebrate this event already exceeds £50.

The committee of management have agreed to purchase a good fat ox, three fat wethers (the latter to be roasted), and 300 loaves of bread, to distribute amongst the poor of the parish of Clebury Mortimer, on the 19th inst. It was also agreed that there should be a public dinner on the same day, at the Talbot Hotel, to which Sir Edward and Mr. Blount would be invited; C. Waksted, Esq., of Shakenhurst, has consented to take the chair.

E. G. HOUNSBY, Esq., has resigned the office of chairman of the Lancaster quarter sessions, on account of ill health.

EDWARD BEST, of Bilston, Esq., has been added to the Commission of the Peace for the county of Stafford.

"IT IS UNDERSTOOD," says the Worcester Herald, "that the Marquis of Salisbury has conferred the valuable living of Bishop's Hatfield, with Tottenridge Chapelry annexed, in the county of Herts, upon his kinsman, our excellent neighbour, the Hon. and Rev. W. W. C. Talbot, at present Vicar of Ombersley. Bishop's Hatfield is a rectory, with a population over 4,000, and its value in the clergy list is set down at £2,097. Its late vicar held the benefice thirty-three years. The vicarage of Ombersley, which will thus become vacant, is in the gift of Lord Sandys. Its value, we believe, is about £500 per annum."

EARL SOMERS' RENT AUDIT.—At the rent audit of the Right Hon. Earl Somers, at the Somers' Arms, Epsom, a sumptuous dinner was provided for the tenants, upwards of forty whom were assembled, and presided over by the respected agent, Michael Thorold, Esq. That gentleman, in proposing the health of Earl Somers, said he felt much pleasure in informing the tenants that, in consequence of the great damage they sustained by hares and rabbits, which not only destroy the crops but greatly injure the land, his Lordship had given him instructions to tell them they might destroy all hares and rabbits on their respective farms. The pheasants and partridges not doing much serious harm, the tenants to be managed to do their best to preserve them for his Lordship.

CHRISTMAS IN THE CRIMEA.—Sir Charles Morgan, of Tredgar Park, Monmouthshire, has two sons, officers, now serving in the Crimea; and having determined to send them a Christmas treat, has shipped off a sufficient abundance of the good things of this season for the Crimea, to enable Capt. Geoffrey Morgan and his brother, Lieutenant Frederick Morgan, if alive, not only to enjoy them, but to invite their brother officers, and provide a Christmas treat for the men of both their companies under the cover of their tents before Sebastopol.

SIR CHARLES NAPIER in a COUNTRY DANCE.—On the Baltic fleet being ordered home, a ball was given on board the Duke of Wellington, which was attended by some of the first people of Kiel and its neighbourhood. Every one was highly delighted, and even Sir Charles took a turn in a country dance, to the great joy of the visitors.

SMALL TALK.

THE Lord Chancellor has presented the Rev. Harvey Vachell, chaplain to the Queen's Prison, to the rectory of St. John's, Hove, and the Rev. George Goodenough Hayter, to the rectory of Burnham-Sutton, Norfolk.

A MADRID journal states that General Liprandi is a Spaniard who has been several years in the Russian service, and that his real name is Espejo.

THE Cortes have determined, by a majority of 206 against 21, that the throne of Isabella II., and her family, shall be based upon the present political edifice.

AT LISBON a subscription is getting up in aid of the Patriotic Fund, through the influence of Mr. Smith, her Majesty's consul. Madame Castellani and Madame Allioni had, it would appear, some altercation as to the right to be prima donna, in "La Sonnambula," but the former gave way.

ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH.—An office is to be established within the walls of the Castle at Windsor, in order that all messages at this important crisis may be instantly received by her Majesty and Prince Albert.

SPANISH HUMANITY.—Several ladies of high rank in Madrid are endeavouring to get up a society for preventing cruelty to animals; and even, it is said, to preach a crusade against bull-fights.

A LITTLE DOG, lost six weeks previously, has been found in a deep pit at Northampton. It was dreadfully exhausted, but likely to recover from the effects of its long confinement and abstinence from food.

A COMPANY of Negroes at Havana, who clubbed together and purchased a lottery ticket, were fortunate enough to draw a 100,000 dollar prize.

FIFTY-SEVEN English ladies going to the East to nurse the sick and wounded, embarked at Marseilles on the 7th on board the Egyptus.

A PROSPECTUS of the Scinde Railway Company has been issued. The directors have every prospect of at least five per cent. per annum, from the East India Company, for 99 years. The line is to be 110 miles in length.

CHEAP LONDON PAPERS.—From facts which have come to our knowledge, we would recommend caution in dealing with advertisers of London papers at second-hand where pre-payment is required.

WORK FOR THE PRESENT SESSION.—On the opening of the session, there were forty-one notices of motions on the Order Book.

was undergoing some alteration; amongst other things, the wall was considerably reduced in one part. The young lady having heard the voice of the Freemasons, and prompted by the curiosity, natural to all, to see this mystery, so long and so secretly locked up from public view, she had the courage to pick a brick from the wall, with her scissors, and witnessed the ceremony. Curiosity satisfied, fear at once took possession of her mind. There was no mode of escape except through the very room in which the ceremony was being enacted, and that being at the far end, and the room a very large one, she had resolution sufficient to attempt her escape that way, and, with light but trembling step, gliding along unobserved, laid her hand on the handle of the door, and, gently opening it, before her stool, to her dismay, the Tyler with his drawn sword. A shriek that pierced through the apartment alarmed the members of the lodge, who rushed to the door, and finding Miss St. Leger had witnessed the ceremony, their rage was excessive. A consultation was held, and it was deemed advisable to initiate her, in preference to binding her by any ordinary oath—the obligation being so peculiarly impressive to a right and well-disposed mind. She consented, and became a member of that noble and ancient order; but little did they think that the member so strangely received into the craft would afterwards reflect the greatest lustre on the annals of Masonry.

THE TRIBUNALS.

JUDKINS v. FIELD.—This action was tried in the Queen's Bench; the plaintiff was the Rev. T. J. Judkins, the officiating minister of Somers Chapel; and he sued the defendant, A. G. Field, a surgeon, residing in Great Marlborough-street, to recover damages for an assault. The defendant pleaded only the general issue. It appeared, from the evidence given by the plaintiff, that he had some years since married the widow of the late Alderman Lanson, a lady having a jointure of £700 a year, and four daughters with fortunes of £6,000 each. The defendant had married one of these young ladies. The plaintiff's marriage with the widow did not appear to be a very happy one. His four daughters took part with the mother, and, in consequence, he had thought it necessary to forbid the defendant's wife to come to his house. On the 10th of June last, while the plaintiff was sitting in his study, he heard the defendant's wife going up stairs. He went out and ordered her to leave his house, and threatened to send for a policeman. The young lady refused to do this, and declared she would come and see her mother. The plaintiff retired to his study, and was then locked in by some member of the family. After some time he got out, and went into the dining-room. Here a "scene" took place, in the midst of which Mrs. Judkins fainted, or, as her husband said, made a "feint"—a performance which, he said, she had enacted on more than one occasion. He declared that his daughter had called him a "bear, with shaggy eyebrows," and he admitted that he retorted by calling her, in reference to her temper, a "nasty creature," and directing attention to a defect in her nose, said that she was "no beauty." The next day, which was Sunday, on returning from doing duty at church, the plaintiff received a letter from the defendant, demanding an apology for calling his (the defendant's) wife a "nasty creature." No answer was sent, but the next morning, at about ten o'clock, the defendant, armed with a riding-whip, and with his hat on, forced his way into the plaintiff's study, and demanded an apology. He then, almost immediately, gave the plaintiff two blows on the breast with his fist, and afterwards repeatedly struck him with the riding-whip, which he drew out of his pocket. The plaintiff was cross-examined at some length, with a view to show that he had charged the defendant with felony in connection with a picture-frame which had on one occasion been removed from the plaintiff's dining-room during his illness. The plaintiff denied that he had ever made such a charge against the defendant, though he confessed that he had said the frame had been taken away feloniously by some one. Mr. Leach, an artist, who was present during the assault, confirmed the evidence given by the plaintiff on that part of the case, and said he had not heard the plaintiff make such a charge as that suggested. On the other hand, the defendant's wife deposed that on the 10th of June her step-father, without provocation on her part, insulted her on account of her want of beauty, by directing attention to her nose. She stated that one of the ladies called the plaintiff a "devil," and that his own wife told him that he was "no beauty, with his shaggy eyebrows." The defendant also was called, and declared that he had not struck the plaintiff until he had been greatly provoked by being charged with felony and called a blackguard, though he was constrained to admit that he had taken the whip with him in order to demand an apology. Lord Campbell summed up the case to the jury, and they found a verdict for the plaintiff, with £50 damages.

MURDEROUS ASSAULT.—At the Mansion-house, on Tuesday, Charles Mallett was charged with the offence detailed in the following evidence:—Louisa Harrison, a delicate-looking young woman, wife of a master carpenter, said:—On Monday evening, I was sitting in my parlour, my two children being asleep on the sofa, when I heard a knock at the street-door. I opened it, and saw the prisoner, who said he had brought me some work from his sister. I am a dress-maker, and I asked him into the parlour to see what it was. He had a bundle in his hand, and the moment he came in he closed the door and blew out the light which was burning on the table. He then said, "Now, I want your money." I told him I had none, and he then hit me on the side of my dress, and the money I had in my pocket clinked. I had in it £1. 0s. 4d. in silver, and he immediately tore away my pocket through the pocket-hole of my dress, and, throwing some coppers I had upon the floor, he put the silver in his pocket. He then hit me on the nose with his fist, and I bled profusely and fell to the ground, and cut my head. He then dragged me along the floor to the other end of the room, across which was a clothes-line, which he cut with a chisel he had about him. He then struck me while I lay on the ground with my husband's large walking-stick, which was hanging on the line. I was stunned by the blow, but I got better. He then went to the other end of the room, and pulled two pistols out of his pocket and laid them on the table. Immediately afterwards he put the pistols in his pocket again, and he took the chisel out, and with it he cut the other end of the line, and then he tied my hands with the cord while I was on the ground. I tried to scream, but he put his hand over my mouth, and said, if I called out he would kill my baby. He then jammed me in between two chairs, left the room, shut the door, and went up stairs. I distinctly heard him, but was not able to speak at the time. Both my children, as he was leaving the room, woke up and screamed, and he then came down stairs and went out of the house, and looked over the curtain of the window as he passed. I saw him from the ground on which I was sitting bound, and a great many persons passed and re-passed at the time. I was bleeding from the side of my head and nose. My little girl, who is bere with me, was the first that gave the alarm. The lady who lodges in my house up stairs had been gone out only ten minutes, and myself and my child were the only persons in the house. Some further evidence having been given as to subsequent facts, and Mr. J. H. Cooke, surgeon, having deposed to the violent character of the assault, which may even yet prove fatal, Sir R. W. Gorden committed the prisoner for trial, stating that the act was one of the most outrageous which had been committed in the City for many years.

CRIMES AND CASUALTIES.

THE MURDER IN WARREN-STREET.—In our second edition of last week we gave a full account of this dreadful affair. It will be unnecessary to recapitulate the facts further than is incidentally detailed in the following. The second victim, Charles Collard, who attempted to arrest the murderer of Mr. Moore, died on Saturday last. The desperate character of the assassin may be gathered from the following articles found upon him:—A pair of pistols (the barrels about six inches long), twenty-four cartridges, some percussion caps, and a dagger, having a blade nine inches in length. One of the pistols was found on the ground near the spot where the assassin was stopped by Mr. Midden. Barthélemy is the same man who attracted so much attention in 1852 in respect to a duel which he fought, under extraordinary circumstances, with a French naval officer, Frederick Courmet, at Egham. M. Courmet was shot fatally. On the examination into this affair, the coroner's jury returned a verdict of wilful murder; but on the trial, though the same verdict was returned, Mr. Justice Coleridge, in consideration of the prisoner being foreigners, and probably unaware of our severe laws against duelling, merely sentenced them to two months' imprisonment.—The prisoner was examined at Marlborough-street, on Saturday, by Messrs. Hardwicke and Bingham. Charlotte Bennett, Mr. Moore's servant, deposed that on Friday night the prisoner called and asked for her master; he was accompanied by a female. She soon afterwards heard a scuffle, and subsequently heard the discharge of a pistol, and saw Mr. Moore fall, whereupon the prisoner attempted to escape.—Mr. R. S. Carter, surgeon, deposed to the surgical part of the case, proving that Mr. Moore's death was thus caused.—Mr. H. Kiallmark, house-surgeon at University College Hospital, gave evidence as to the death of Collard, deposing that when the prisoner was brought into the presence of the dying man, he exclaimed, "That is the man." Collard's dying testimony was read, testifying as to his own attempt to prevent the murderer's escape, and to the shot fired by him.—The prisoner made no remark on this deposition being read to him. Some other evidence of an unimportant character was given, and the examination was adjourned till Thursday.—On Monday Mr. Wakley held an inquest on the bodies of Mr. G. Moore, aged sixty, and of Charles Collard, thirty-six. The jury having viewed the bodies, Mr. J. Ericson, surgeon, of University College Hospital, deposed that he was called on Friday night to see Collard, who had received a bullet wound in the abdomen. He saw that the wound was mortal, and had no doubt that it was the only cause of his death.—The coroner remarked upon the inconvenience of the prisoner's absence from the inquest; and the jury concurring, it was resolved that a deputation should wait on Lord Palmerston, requesting that the prisoner should be brought before them at the adjourned inquest on the following Thursday. Suspicions were entertained that the person accompanying Barthélemy to Mr. Moore's house was a man in female attire, but this supposition has, it seems, proved to be erroneous. A subscription has been set on foot for the widow and family of Mr. Collard. It is going on favourably, and a considerable sum is likely to be obtained.—The adjourned inquest on Mr. Moore and Mr. Collard was held by Mr. Wakley on Thursday. Lord Palmerston declined to interfere as to the prisoner's presence at the inquest; he was not therefore brought up. Charlotte Bennett gave similar evidence to that given at Marlborough-street police-office, adding that she could not identify the party who accompanied Barthélemy. Inspector Checkley, however, said that the woman was known to them. The identity of Barthélemy having been proved, and a Mr. Mosley, painter, having testified to the circumstances of the prisoner's capture, Inspector Checkley stated that they had found out the residence of the accused at Chelsea, but it would tend to frustrate justice if more were said about it. He added that an impression had gone abroad that there had been another man concerned in the murder, and that the supposed woman was a man in woman's clothes. Such was not the case; the accused had gone to Mr. Moore's with two cloaks and two hats, and the woman had made her escape the back way in one of the cloaks and hats. One of the hats had been found at the accused's lodgings. He further stated that there seemed an absence of any motive for the act. The coroner summed up, and the jury returned a verdict of "Wilful murder" against Emmanuel Barthélemy.—On the same day, at Marlborough-street, Barthélemy was re-examined. He presented a most dejected appearance. Inspector Checkley having stated that he had a clue to the apprehension of the woman accompanying the prisoner, applied for a remand, which was acceded to.

SINGULAR RECOVERY OF A DEAD BODY.—On Monday afternoon, as a man named Peacock was fishing in the Medway, near Strood, he felt his net unusually heavy, and on dragging it to the surface brought up the body of his own son, who was drowned in the river about a month ago, since which time several persons had repeatedly tried to recover the body by hooks and drags, but without success.

SUICIDE AT NINETY YEARS OF AGE.—A widow woman named Scott, ninety years of age, committed suicide in Brechin on Saturday. A thin piece of rope fastened to a nail at no great height enabled the deceased to commit the rash act; and her determination is indicated by the fact that her feet more than reached the floor. Deceased had of late suffered occasionally from mental derangement.

BERGLARY IN LAMBETH.—On Saturday last some thieves entered the premises of Messrs. Anderson and Co., linen-drillers, Westminster-road. They cut away the skylight, and lowered themselves into a room, whence they passed into the warehouse, carrying off velvets, silks, and ribbons worth between five and six hundred pounds. The robbers have not yet been discovered.

CHARGE OF FELONY AGAINST A MERCHANT.—On Wednesday, Mr. J. Gilbert, jun., an oil merchant in Bristol, was arrested on a charge of having conspired with certain workmen in the employ of Messrs. Ayres and Co., of Temple gate Oilworks, to steal sundry parcels of oil, the property of that firm. Circumstances which came to the knowledge of Messrs. Ayres caused them to give three of their men into custody for stealing oil. One of the men made statements involving Mr. Gilbert, who, it was represented, had personally, and by his foreman, dealt with the prosecutor's oil cooper for oils stolen from his master's premises, paying only half the value. It was stated also that on one cask being purchased of the Messrs. Ayres in the regular way by defendant, there was an arrangement between the latter and the oil cooper that three casks should be delivered, and this had been done several times. Davey, the prisoner's foreman, has absconded, but the junior clerk in Mr. Gilbert's warehouse deposed at the examination before the magistrates to having been sent by his master to purchase oil of Messrs. Ayres, oil cooper, at 7s. the four-and-a-half gallon can. He further stated that Davey's flight was arranged with the prisoner. Officers have started in search of Davey, and Mr. Gilbert has been remanded till Monday next.

WAREHOUSES DESTROYED BY FIRE AT MANCHESTER.—On Thursday morning a warehouse filled with cotton waste, in Newton-street, Manchester, belonging to Mr. Adams, was almost totally destroyed by fire as early as two o'clock. The fire was discovered before midnight, by a watchman on duty, who gave notice to the fire brigade, and Mr. Rose, the superintendent, was soon in attendance, with the fire engines. Cotton waste, however, which consists of the sweepings of factories to a great extent, and is always more or less saturated with oil, from having come in contact with the joints and drippings of the machinery, is exceedingly inflammable, and on the present occasion the flames spread with more than ordinary fury. Portions of the lower story only of the building were saved, and the damage is estimated at about £6,000. The owners are insured.

EXTENSIVE FIRES IN THE METROPOLIS.—On Tuesday morning a fire of a fearful character, and attended with a considerable destruction of property, broke out in the premises of Mr. J. W. Thomas, a builder, Upper King-street, Bloomsbury. The flames soon shot into the air a distance of at least twenty feet; on the engines reaching the scene, the whole of the carpenters' and joiners' shops were enveloped in flame, and the fire was attacking the timber in the yard behind the dwelling-house. A plentiful supply of water having been procured, a number of engines were set into operation; but notwithstanding the exertions of the firemen and the many hired auxiliaries, the fire could not be extinguished until the workshops and all they contained were nearly destroyed, including the men's working tools. The premises of Mr. J. Evans, gold refiner, No. 12, in the same street, and those of Mr. T. Moore, bootmaker, No. 15, are also damaged. A short time before the above fire, another, equally large, happened in the premises belonging to Mr. W. A. Gale, corn dealer, King's-road, Hoxton. Owing to the inflammable nature of the stock, in less than five minutes after the alarm the whole building presented a huge sheet of fire, and the flames were forcing their way into the premises of Mr. J. Nelson, cabinet maker, No. 96, High-street, Hoxton. Some time was lost before the engines could be brought into full play, and speedily the building in which the conflagration commenced, with its contents, were destroyed; and the premises belonging to Mr. Nelson, cabinet-maker, were considerably damaged. The total loss is very serious. A fire has also destroyed a private residence in Albert-road, Mile-end; and another broke out at Messrs. Ellerby's, entlers, Ave Maria-lane. It was extinguished by cutting away the ceiling. Fires have also very lately taken place in Deunark-street, St. George's East; Bush-lane, Upper Thames-street; and Castle-street, Oxford-street.

RAILWAY ACCIDENT.—The body of a gentleman was discovered on Saturday in the Olive Mount cutting of the North-Western line. It was found to be a Mr. Threlfall, formerly an ironmonger, but lately a commercial traveller, belonging to St. Helens, who, it is supposed, had fallen out of the train on his return homewards from Liverpool. The body was so frightfully mangled that he could only be identified by the articles found upon him.

FEARFUL RAILWAY ACCIDENT AND LOSS OF LIFE.—On Wednesday morning a frightful accident occurred on the Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway at Pemberton, near Wigan. The ten o'clock train from Liverpool to Manchester, just before its arrival at Pemberton, about two miles from Wigan, ran violently into a loaded coal-train, which was passing from a siding on to the main line. The engine of the passenger train was thrown off the line on to the embankment by the concussion—the wheels and lower part of the engine blocking up the main line. The tender was also overturned, and the carriage adjoining it, fortunately empty, was smashed to atoms, as also the next carriage. Eight other carriages were thrown off the line, and both lines were blocked up during the greater part of the day. The stoker of the passenger train jumped off just before the collision; but before he could clear the tender, the engine fell upon him and killed him. The engine-driver's ribs were broken. How the passengers escaped serious injury is considered a miracle.

A SERIOUS COLLISION took place on the 5th, at the Didcott Junction of the South Staffordshire line. A passenger train containing about seventy persons caught a projecting waggon which had been imperfectly shunted. The waggon swung round and smashed two or three carriages, injuring several others. Fifteen or twenty of the passengers were more or less injured, one poor fellow, a hawker, having his leg broken in two places and two ribs fractured. An inquiry into the cause of the accident has led to some blame being attached to a policeman at the station.

SHIPWRECK AND LOSS OF LIFE.—News was received at Rotterdam on the 7th of the total loss of the Dutch barque, Hendrika. She had a valuable general cargo, forty-two passengers, and a complement of forty men, bound for Java, in the terrific gale which blew off the coast last Monday she was disabled, and struck upon the New Sandbank, to which place it was impossible to convey any assistance. She has been beaten to pieces by the fury of the storm, and not a soul has escaped. The passengers were for the greatest part connected with some of the first families in the country. A father and mother, with their seven children and servants, were among them.

FATAL ACCIDENT IN THE CHANNEL.—As the Clyde steamship was coming up Channel, on Tuesday, for Portsmouth, one of her boilers burst, by which two men were killed and seven others seriously wounded. The wounded men were sent on shore, and conveyed to the Royal Portsmouth, Portsea, and Gosport Hospital, where they are receiving every attention and the best treatment.

VOL. IV.—No. 104.]

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1854.

[WITH SUPPLEMENT, PRICE 6d.

TO ADVERTISERS.

EVERY SATURDAY, PRICE SIXPENCE, STAMPED.

THE FIELD:

The Country Gentleman's Newspaper.

A first-class Journal, devoted to every kind of information interesting to persons "Out of Town," as Hunting, Shooting, Racing, Angling, Coursing, Yachting, Boating, Archery.

AND
The Garden; | The Farm; | The Household.
It is expressly designed for Families.

The official Stamp Returns for the quarter ending June, 1853, give it a circulation of

3,872 Copies Weekly.

Great improvements are now being made in it, and its circulation is rapidly extending.

The following is the

SCALE OF CHARGES FOR ADVERTISING:

	£.	s.	d.
Twenty words and under.....	0	2	6
Each additional ten words.....	0	0	6
A half Column.....	1	15	0
A Column.....	3	0	0
A Page.....	8	0	0

For three insertions a reduction of one-eighth; and for six insertions a reduction of one-fourth will be made.

Field Office, 403, Strand.

AGRICULTURE, &c.

NONPAREIL PEAS.

WILLIAM FAIRBEARD begs to inform the trade that he is now ready to execute any orders he may be favoured with. This Pea W. F. is confident will become a general favourite both for Garden and Field culture. Price can be had on application. MOUNT PLEASANT NURSERY, GREEN-STREET, SITTING-BOURNE, KENT.

HORSES taken into WINTER GRAZING and STRAW-YARD, and Cattle to Graze, at BEDDINGTON PARK, BEDDINGTON, near Carshington and Croydon, Surrey. Inquire of WILLIAM TUFFS, the park keeper. Some excellent loose boxes for wintering horses are vacant, and can be had reasonable.

NEW FOOD FOR CATTLE.

By which Horses, Oxen, Pigs, and Sheep, are kept healthier, fed quicker, and at a less cost than by any other article now in use.

IMPORTANT DISCOVERY in the TREATMENT OF HORSES, since the Eastern War, by Feeding with the CIRCASSIAN SULPHURATED BARK MEAL.—A gentleman, writing to this country, remarks that its effects upon English horses are extraordinary, as it not only feeds them fast, but infuses new life into them, lines the coat, purifies the blood, assists the urine, and quickly improves their general appearance. When upon a journey, or after a heavy field-day, the Arabs and Circassians throw 4oz. of this meal into water. This article is most extensively used in racing, hunting, and private stables throughout Yorkshire, and most flattering accounts of its virtues are daily forwarded to Mr. HENRY the sole manufacturer in England, 6, Fishergate, York.

"This food contains much of the bitter principle grain has before it is ripe, and is as essential to herbivorous animals as salt is to carnivorous, acting as a stimulant; and no cattle can thrive so well upon food that does not contain a portion of the bitter principle."—York Herald.

Sold in packages of four fives, at 1s., with full directions for use; 7lb. 6s.; 14lb. 10s. 6d.; 28lb. 21s. May be had of Agents in most Towns in England; or in any quantity of Mr. F. C. WOOD, CENTRAL DEPOT, 158, BLACKFRIARS' ROAD, London.

SEWAGE CHARCOAL MANURE.

THIS highly fertilising MANURE, which is Peat Charcoal, completely saturated with London Sewage, will be found most efficient for every species of crop, more especially for Peas, Beans, Turnips, Mangold Wurzel, and other root crops. It will produce a greater return for the outlay than Guano or any other manure at an equivalent value; it also possesses the property of retaining its fertilising power longer than other Manures now in use. It may be obtained at the SEWAGE MANURE WORKS, Stanley-bridge, Fulham, at 24 per ton, and in quantities less than half a ton, at 3s. per cwt., for ready money only; and in quantities not less than a ton will be delivered at the London Termini of the Railroads free of charge for cartage. It may also be had from Messrs. G. GIBBS and Co., No. 26, Down-street, Piccadilly, Agricultural Seedsmen, Agents for London; and from all the other Agents of the Company.

SEED WHEAT.—Samples and Prices of RED HYBRID, NURSERY, and other kinds of Wheat, suitable for late sowing after Turnips, will be sent on application to Mr. H. RAYNBIRD, Basingstoke.

THE NEW CHINESE POTATO (DIOSCOREA JAPONICA)

MR. JOHN HENDERSON, formerly of the firm of John A. Henderson and Co., Pine Apple-place, London, has the pleasure of informing the Public that he has just completed the purchase from M. Paillet, of Paris, of his entire Saleable STOCK of the above introduction from China, the nutritive properties of which are said so far to surpass the ordinary Potato that it is likely, not only to act as an auxiliary, but entirely to supersede that valuable but uncertain esculent.

The most satisfactory results have followed from personal experiments, and proved that when cooked in the ordinary manner, from the large amount of farinaceous properties it contains, it can never become waxy, as is too generally the case with the Potato. Its flavour resembles in delicacy an early ASH-LEAVED KIDNEY; but, independent of the above excellent qualities, there is every probability of its taking a still more important position in the economy of this country; for, when dried and reduced to powder, it is equal to the best ARROW ROOT; or, mixed in the proportion of one-third with two-thirds of wheaten flour, it makes an extremely light and wholesome BREAD, as well as very superior PASTRY.

Messrs. Vilmorin and Co., speaking of it, observe:—"Of all the esculent roots proposed as substitutes for the diseased Potato, the DIOSCOREA JAPONICA is certainly the only important one. It is easily propagated. The tubers are large and long, the flesh very nutty and devoid of any peculiar or disagreeable flavour. The DIOSCOREA JAPONICA is, in our opinion, a precious acquisition."

M. Paillet, Horticulturist, Paris, in his supplementary Catalogue of this autumn says:—"A new alimentary root, introduced into France by M. Montigny, French Consul in China. Serious experiments have shown that this tuber will be much more advantageous to cultivate than the Potato, both in regard to its QUALITY as well as PRODUCE."

M. Paillet, to whom the Imperial Society of Agriculture and Commerce of France has awarded the sum of 3,000 francs, as encouragement for having brought it into cultivation, also writes that "this tuber attains at least 1 to 2 lbs weight. In its growth it is less delicate than the Potato, which unfortunately has of late years much degenerated. It does not require particular care, and its abundant produce amply repays cultivation. Its taste is pleasant, and being a root which contains a large amount of FARINA, will be a great addition to the FOOD of the PEOPLE, as soon as it becomes generally known. It is so HARDY that it has passed the winters of 1853 in the open ground, without having in the least suffered from frost. It is also found that the STEMS and LEAVES, which are very numerous, form an excellent FOOD for CATTLE."

Tubers, with description of the Chinese Mode of Culture, to be obtained of Mr. JOHN HENDERSON, KINGSKERSWELL, SOUTH DEVON, at the following prices, for cash only:—

Four Tubers.....	£0	10	0
Ten ditto.....	1	2	6
Fifty ditto.....	5	5	0
Hundred ditto.....	10	0	0

Post-office orders are requested to be made payable at Newton Abbott, South Devon. The usual discount allowed to the trade when not less than fifty are taken.

P.S.—All orders accompanied by a remittance will be considered as not received.

HORTICULTURE, &c.

EXOTIC NURSERY, CHELSEA.

JAMES VEITCH, Jun., having engaged, in addition to his other able Foreman, the assistance of Mr. John Milne, late gardener to Byam Martin, Esq., of Kingston-on-Thames—and before that, gardener and steward to the Right Hon. the Earl of Clare, Mount Shannon, Ireland—feels increased confidence in being able to give complete satisfaction to those who may kindly patronise him.

The long and extensive practical experience which he himself had at Exeter as well as since he came to Chelsea, combined with Mr. Milne's high standing as a practical gardener, induces him to tender his services to any lady or gentleman requiring advice in the improvement of their Gardens and Grounds, and in other Horticultural matters, particularly in reference to the erection of Conservatories, Forcing and Plant Houses, Heating Apparatus, &c., plans for which will be furnished on application; and examples can be seen both at the EXOTIC NURSERY, Chelsea, and at EXETER.

JAMES VEITCH, Jun., is fully impressed with the fact, that, to make Horticultural Buildings what they really should be, thorough practical Gardening experience is required to adapt the various erections to the several purposes for which they are intended. This desirable object it will be his anxious endeavour to accomplish.—Dec. 16.

EXOTIC NURSERY, CHELSEA.

JAMES VEITCH, Jun., will be happy to forward his new Retail VEGETABLE, AGRICULTURAL, and FLOWER SEED LISTS, on application, and desires to assure those who may kindly favour him with their orders, that he has spared no pains in procuring his supplies from the first growers on the Continent as well as in this country, and that he will use his best endeavours to give his customers entire satisfaction.

EXOTIC NURSERY, CHELSEA.

The numerous applications that have been made by Noblemen and Gentlemen to JAMES VEITCH, Jun. (successor to Messrs. Knight and Perry), for GARDENERS and BAILIFFS, and the success which has attended the recommendations he has made since he came to Chelsea, fully impresses him with the imperative necessity of only recommending such men as are of unexceptionable character and of suitable ability for the various places requiring them.

No branch of the Nursery business demanding more practical knowledge than this, J. V. Jun. has determined on devoting his own personal attention to it, and he pledges himself on no account to recommend a man of doubtful character, so far as it is possible for him to become acquainted with it.

If Noblemen and Gentlemen requiring GARDENERS, BAILIFFS, and WOODMEN, will favour JAMES VEITCH, Jun., with full particulars of the kind of person they require, and the salary given, he will make the best selection he can; and in cases where it might happen that he has not on his books a person suitable for a place, he will decline making any recommendation at all, rather than make a doubtful one. At the present moment, there are many highly respectable and thoroughly competent Gardeners employed at and on the books of the EXOTIC NURSERY.—December 16.

N.B.—JAMES VEITCH, Jun., desires it to be fully understood that no Gardener's name can be placed on the books of the EXOTIC NURSERY who cannot provide unexceptionable testimonials as to character.

RENDLE'S PRICE CURRENT and GARDEN DIRECTORY for 1855,

With Newspaper Stamp to go FREE by Post, is now in the Press, and will be Published on TUESDAY, DECEMBER 26.

The Proprietors of this well-known Publication have endeavoured, in the present Edition, to render it even more complete than the last, and have again obtained the valuable assistance of Mr. ROBERT ERRINGTON, Gardener to Sir P. Egerton, Oulton Park, who is acknowledged to be one of the best practical writers on Horticulture of the day.

It will contain very valuable Descriptive List of KITCHEN GARDEN SEEDS with prices affixed to every article; and in addition to the descriptions, there will be short and concise Cultural Remarks for every kind of Vegetable, pointing out the best varieties for early, medium, and general Crops.

The List of FLOWER SEEDS has been much improved, and contains descriptions of all the leading sorts, with Directions for Sowing Seeds, and other useful practical remarks; and in this department Mr. ERRINGTON has written expressly for the Work an Original Article on "ANNUALS and OTHER FLOWER SEEDS," which will be read with much interest.

The CALENDAR of OPERATIONS for the whole of the Year has also been revised, and will be found even more useful than the one in the last Edition.

There will be a good GARDEN ALMANACK, as usual, and the detailed quantities of Seeds contained in their usual "COLLECTIONS of SEEDS" are given in full.

A valuable REPORT of the EXPERIMENTS in their TRIAL GROUNDS is also given, and Descriptions of the NEWLY-INVENTED CLOCHE, or Hand Glass, and of the NEW CHINESE POTATO (DIOSCOREA JAPONICA).

The following Original Articles have also been written expressly by Mr. ERRINGTON:—"ON VEGETABLE FORCING," "LIGHT and AIR," "LIQUID MANURE," and "ROTATION of CROPS," and, in addition to the above, the Proprietors have been favoured with an Original Paper by J. B. LAWES, Esq., of Rothamsted Park, "ON THE ARTIFICIAL MANURE MOST SUITABLE FOR THE GROWTH OF BARLEY."

At the urgent request of several Correspondents, the Publishers have printed the present Edition in FIVE PARTS, so that those who wish to run BEND it with the present Volume of that valuable Paper, it will contain Thirty-two Folia Pages, "Chronicle," &c.

COPIES can be OBTAINED AFTER TUESDAY NEXT, Price SIXPENCE each, or FREE to PURCHASERS of SEEDS, and can be OBTAINED through the medium of any BOOKSELLER in the UNITED KINGDOM, from the LONDON PUBLISHING OFFICE, 291, STRAND, or from the Proprietors, WILLIAM E. REYNOLDS and Co., SEED MERCHANTS, PLYMOUTH.

GREAT NOVELTIES for the ENSUING SEASON!

FUCHSIAS

WITH WHITE COROLLAS.

LUCOMBE, PINCE, and Co. beg leave to announce that they shall be prepared to send out two splendid and entirely novel Seedling Fuchsias early in May next, viz.:—

FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE: Pure white corolla, with brilliant scarlet sepals finely reflexed. An extremely lovely and novel variety.

GALANTHIFLORA-PLENO: (The Double Snowdrop Corolla'd Fuchsia.) Pure double white corolla, resembling a fine large double snowdrop, with rich scarlet sepals; altogether distinct from anything of the kind ever yet produced.

Price 10s. 6d. each.

EXETER NURSERY, EXETER.
Established 1720.

THE PAMPAS GRASS, CYNERIUM ARGENTÆUM.

LUCOMBE, PINCE, and Co. have a fine healthy stock of this highly-ornamental plant, well established in pots, and fit to send out immediately.

Specimens of it are now, and have long been, flowering in their nursery; and it is universally admitted that few plants produce a more beautiful effect than this gigantic Grass. See woodcut and description of it in "Gardeners' Chronicle" of the 4th ult.

Sizes, prices, and all particulars may be had on application to LUCOMBE, PINCE, and Co., EXETER NURSERY, EXETER.

BEAUTIFUL NEW PLANT.

LUCOMBE, PINCE, and Co. are now prepared to send out their beautiful New VERONIA KERMESINA, raised by that eminent Horticulturist, J. Luscombe, Esq., of Coombe Royal, who sent specimens to Dr. Lindley at the time of its first flowering, who then pronounced his first opinion of it:—

"The variety sent with this was charming; a decided rose colour having mingled with the violet."

See also notice of Dr. Lindley in the "Chronicle" for December 2nd, 1854, as follows:—

"L. P., and Co.: Your V. Kermesina is a handsome dark variety of V. Speciosa, its beautiful large spikes of deep purplish crimson blossoms cannot fail to make it a favourite."

Price 7s. 6d. each.—A few extra-sized specimens may be had. The usual discount to the trade when three or more are taken.

EXETER NURSERY, EXETER.
Established 1720.

GENUINE GARDEN SEEDS.

LUCOMBE, PINCE, and Co. beg leave to announce that they have just completed their supply of the above, all carefully selected from the stocks of the best growers, and consequently superior in quality, and also at economical prices, to which they respectfully call the attention of those who require a really genuine article. Their long experience in the Seed Trade (always also proving the vitality of their Seeds by sowing them out) fully justifies them in saying that their Seeds cannot fail to give great satisfaction. Catalogues may be had on application.

EXETER NURSERY, EXETER.
Established 1720.

FRUIT TREES, FOREST TREES, EVERGREENS, SHRUBS, &c. Catalogues of the above may be had on application to WILLIAM BARRATT, WAKEFIELD.
A quantity of fine Transplanted White Thorns

WEEDS ON WALKS.

MR. FLEMING'S WEEDING or SAILING MACHINE for Gravel Walks, Court Yards, &c., manufactured and sold by ALEXANDER SHANKS and SON, ALBION, FORFAIRSHIRE, from whom particulars, with prices, may be had.

SWINESHEAD ASSOCIATION for the PROSECUTION OF FELONS, and for the Mutual Protection of Property.—NOTICE is HEREBY GIVEN, that the Annual Meeting of the Members of the Association will be held at the GRIFFIN INN, in SWINESHEAD, on THURSDAY, the 30th day of NOVEMBER, 1854.—The Directors will meet at eleven o'clock for receiving Subscriptions, Auditing Accounts, &c. Dinner at Two.

Also that the Directors will meet at the GRIFFIN INN at six o'clock on TUESDAY Evening, the 28th of NOVEMBER instant, when all Persons having any Claim on the Association are requested to present the same.

W. D. REDDISH, Treasurer.
Swineshead, Nov. 10, 1854.

OYSTERS.
J. SWEETING is happy to inform his Friends and the Public that his Burnham River NATIVE OYSTERS are as fine as last season. He has them six years old, four hours from the beds, at his Fish and Oyster Establishment, 159, CHEAPSIDE. Superior Oyster Rooms. Stead's Ale; Reed's Stout.

THE TWO GUINEA DRESS or FROCK COAT, the Guinea Dress Trouser, and the Half Guinea Waistcoat, made to order by B. BENJAMIN, MERCHANT TAILOR, 74, REGENT STREET, for quality, style, and workmanship cannot be equalled by any house in the kingdom. N.B.—A perfect fit guaranteed.

THE 16s. TROUSERS REDUCED TO 14s.; Trousers and Waistcoat, 22s.; Coat, Waistcoat, and Trousers, 47s. Made to order, from Scotch Tweeds, all wool, and thoroughly shrunken, by B. BENJAMIN, MERCHANT TAILOR, 74, REGENT STREET. N.B.—A perfect fit guaranteed.

HOT AIR, GAS, VESTA, JOYCE'S STOVES.—STOVES for the economical and safe-heating of Halls, Shops, Warehouses, Passages, Basements, and the like, being at this season demanded, WILLIAM S. BURTON invites attention to his unrivalled assortment, adapted (one or the other) to every conceivable requirement, at prices from 10s. each to 30 guineas. His variety of Registers and other Stoves is the largest existence.

WILLIAM S. BURTON has ten large Show Rooms devoted to the show of GENERAL FURNISHING IRONMONGERY (including cutlery, nickel-silver, plated and japanned wares, iron and brass bedsteads), so arranged and classified that purchasers may easily and at once make their selections.

Catalogues with engravings sent (per post) free. The money returned for every article not approved of.

30, OXFORD-STREET (corner of Newman-street); 1, 2, and 3, NEWMAN-STREET; and 4 and 5, PERCY'S-PLACE.

NO MORE PILLS NOR ANY OTHER MEDICINE.

For Indigestion (Dyspepsia), Constipation, Nervous, Bilious, and Liver Complaints, Cough, Consumption, and Debility.

DR. BARRY'S delicious REVALENTA ARABICA FOOD saves 50 times its cost in Medicine, and cures the above complaints and their consequences, such as flatulency, distension, acidity, heartburn, palpitation of the heart, and sore throats, hoarseness, noises in the head and ears, pains at the pit of the stomach and between the shoulders, diarrhoea, dysentery, impurities and poverty of the blood, scurvy, asthma, dropsy, rheumatism, gout, nausea and sickness during pregnancy, after eating, or at sea; loss of spirits, spasms, cramps, epileptic fits, spleen, general debility, inquietude, sleeplessness, involuntary shivering, paralysis, tremors, dislike to society, inability for study, loss of memory, delusions, vertigo, blood to the head, exhaustion, lameness, groundless fear, indecision. It is, moreover, the best food for infants and invalids generally, as it never purges or turns acid on the weakest stomach, nor interferes with a good liberal diet, but imparts a healthy relish for lunch and dinner, and restores the faculty of digestion, and nervous and muscular energy, to the most effectual.

Analysis by the Professor of Chemistry and Analytical Chemist, Andrew F. M. D., F.R.S., &c., &c.:—"London, June 3, 1849. I find it to be pure vegetable Farina, perfectly wholesome, easily digestible, likely to promote a healthy action of the stomach and bowels, and thereby to counteract dyspepsia, constipation, and their nervous consequences."

IMPORTANT CAUTION against the fearful dangers of spurious imitations:—"The Vice-Chancellor Sir William Page Wood granted an injunction on the 10th March, 1854, against Alfred Hooper Nevill, for imitating "Dr. Barry's Revalenta Arabica Food."

BAIRY DU BARRY & Co., 77, REGENT STREET, London.

A few out of 50,000 cures are here given:—

Cure No. 71, of dyspepsia, from the Right Hon. the Lord Stuart de Decies:—"I have derived considerable benefit from Du Barry's Revalenta Arabica Food, and consider it due to yourself and the public to authorise the publication of these lines."

Cure No. 49,832:—"Fifty years' indescribable agony from dyspepsia, nervousness, asthma, cough, constipation, flatulency, spasms, sickness at the stomach and vomiting, have been removed by Du Barry's excellent food."—Maria Jolly, Worthing, near Dis, Norfolk.

Cure No. 47,121:—"Miss Elizabeth Jacobs, of Nazing Vearage, Waltham-cress, Herts: A cure of extreme nervousness, indigestion, gatherings, loss of spirits, and nervous fancies."

Cure No. 45,314:—"Miss Elizabeth Yeoman, Gateacre, near Liverpool: A cure of ten years' dyspepsia, and all the horrors of nervous irritability."

Cure No. 3,905:—"Thirteen years' cough, indigestion, and general debility have been removed by Du Barry's excellent Revalenta Arabica Food."—Janet Porter, Athol street, Perth.

Cure No. 52,422:—"Bridgetown, Frintley, April 3, 1854.—I have suffered thirty-three years continually from disordered lungs, spitting of blood, liver derangement, deafness, slogging in the ears, constipation, debility, shortness of breath and cough; and during that period taken so much medicine, that I can safely say I have laid out upwards of a thousand pounds at the chemist's and doctors. I have actually worn out two medical men during my ailments without finding any improvement in my health. Indeed, I was in utter despair, and never expected to get over it, when I was fortunate enough to become acquainted with your Revalenta Arabica, which, Heaven be praised, restored me to a state of health which I long since despaired of attaining. My lungs, liver, stomach, head, and ears are all right, my hearing perfect, and my recovery is a marvel to all my acquaintances. I am, respectfully, James Roberts, Wool Mareham."

Cure No. 45,615:—"Plymouth, May 9th, 1851.—For the last ten years I have been suffering from dyspepsia, headaches, nervousness, loss of spirits, sleeplessness, and delusions, and swallowed an incredible amount of medicine without relief. I am happy to say that your Food has cured me, and I am now enjoying better health than I have had for many years past."—J. S. Newton.

Cure No. 18:—"Twenty-five years' nervousness, constipation, indigestion, and debility, from which I have suffered great misery, and which no medicine could remove or relieve, have been effectually cured by Du Barry's Food in a very short time."—W. R. Reeves, Pool Anthony, Tiverton.

In canisters, suitably packed for all climates, and with full directions. 1lb. 2s. 6d.; 2lb. 4s. 6d.; 5lb. 11s.; 10lb. 22s.; 20lb. 42s.; 50lb. 100s.; 100lb. 200s. All quantities in bulk at special rates. For full particulars and receipt of Post-office order, apply to B. BENJAMIN, MERCHANT TAILOR, 74, REGENT STREET, or to BAIRY DU BARRY & Co., 77, REGENT STREET, London.

CHAFF-CUTTING MACHINES.

AN ILLUSTRATED and PRICED LIST of CHAFF-CUTTING MACHINES will be sent free on application to WM. DRAV and Co., Agricultural Engineers, Swan-lane, Upper Thames-street.

OATS SHOULD BE BRUISED, BUT NOT PULVERISED.

AN ILLUSTRATED and PRICED LIST of CORN-BRUSING MACHINES will be sent free on application to WM. DRAV and Co., Agricultural Engineers, Swan-lane, Upper Thames-street.

MANGER, RACK, AND WATER-TROUGH, AS ONE FIXTURE. IMPROVED AND NEWLY PATENTED.

COTTAM and HALLEN, the original inventors, obtained the Great Exhibition Prize Medal for this arrangement, to which all the latest improvements are adapted, secured by Patent, including a method entirely new of attaching the roller weight and run from the back of the manger to the under front of the plate, allowing the horse greater freedom, and being useless in operation, add much to its comfort whilst feeding and convenience when at rest, as likewise, from their position, avoiding the liability of the most restive horse getting cast. No well-managed stable should be without these fittings.

COTTAM'S ENAMELLED MANGERS are constructed in the best possible manner, both as to form and utility; are cleanly in appearance, durable, and impervious to infection; manufactured Plain, Galvanized, and Enamelled. Improved Surface Drain, with safety Covers, Sanitary Traps, Stable Pumps, Loose Box, Fittings, Gutta Percha Preserving Saddle and Harness Brackets, and every article in stable furniture, in stock. An extensive assortment of Patterns for both Plain and Ornamental Castings, and every description of Wrought and Cast Iron Work for building and other purposes. Agricultural and Horticultural Implements, Iron Gates, both plain and ornamental, Hurdles, Strain Fencing, &c.

Estimates and Catalogues on application to COTTAM and HALLEN, 2, WINSLEY-STREET, OXFORD-STREET.

HORTICULTURE IN

ALL ITS BRANCHES.

JOHN WEEKS and Co., KING'S-ROAD, CHELSEA, HOTHOUSE BUILDERS.

The Nobility and Gentry, about to erect HORTICULTURAL BUILDINGS, or FIX HOT-WATER APPARATUS, will find at our Horticultural Establishment and Hothouse Works, King's-road, Chelsea, an extensive variety of Hothouses, Greenhouses, Conservatories, Pits, &c.,

erected, and in full operation, combining all modern improvements, so that a lady or gentleman can select the description of House best adapted for every required purpose.

The HOT-WATER APPARATUS, which passes through all the Houses and Pits, affording both top and bottom heat, is in constant operation, and particularly worthy of attention. Many of the Houses and Pits are of wide and lofty dimensions, and together equal in length 1000 feet. They are all effectually heated by ONE BOILER, which, during the severe winter months does not cost in labour and fuel more than 3s. 8d. per day, and the Apparatus is so arranged that each House or Pit may be heated separately and to the required temperature. The splendid collection of STOVE and GREENHOUSE PLANTS are also in the highest state of cultivation, and for sale at very low prices. Also a fine collection of strong GRATE VINES in Pots, from eyes, all the best sorts.

PLANS, MODELS, and ESTIMATES of HORTICULTURAL BUILDINGS; also CATALOGUES of PLANTS, VINES, SEEDS, &c., forwarded on application to JOHN WEEKS and Co., KING'S-ROAD, CHELSEA, LONDON.

CHEAP WIRE GAME and POULTRY NETTING.

2 1/2 inches wide, 2-inch mesh, 3d. to 4d. per yard plain; galvanised, 4d. per yard.
3 1/2 inches wide, 2-inch mesh, 6d. per yard plain; galvanised, 9d. per yard.
4 1/2 inches wide, 2-inch mesh, 9d. per yard plain; galvanised, 1s. per yard.
Sparrow Proof Netting, galvanised, 3l. per square foot, made to any size. This article is shown at the Sydenham Exhibition, where it is much admired.

W. CULLINGFORD, 1, EDMUND-TERRACE, BALD'S FORD-ROAD, near the Gate, Kingsland, London.

MELHUISS'S WESTERN HUNTING

CARRACK SAUCE, for Venison, Steaks, Chops, Hashed Mutton, Game, and all kinds of Meats and Fish, either hot or cold.—On trial of this new Sauce, all Sportsmen will find it one of the best Sauces for giving a zest to their dinner, by imparting a flavour unequalled by any now extant. Hotel Masters will find it a Sauce universally approved of, imparting a delicious flavour to all kinds of gravies, game, and fish, not requiring the further addition of pepper or salt.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.

One table-spoonful to be added to every half-pint of gravy: for steaks, chops, and hushies, a wine-glassful to every half-pint; for hashed meats, add according to taste: for venison and game, double the quantity: for cold meat, pour a little in the plate.

Sold in bottles, 1s. and 2s., the large bottles hold nearly three of the small ones, and can be obtained of Messrs. CROSS and BLACKWELL, Soho-square, London, or of the Proprietor, J. MELHUISS, DRUGGIST, FORE-STREET, TAUNTON, and may be had retail of Druggists or Grocers, on application.

DO YOU WANT LUXURANT

HAIR, WHISKERS, &c.—If so, ELLEN GRAHAM'S NIGROURNE is unobtainable in its efficacy. It reproduces the hair when lost by disease or decay, prevents its falling off, effectually checks greyness, strengthens weak hair, and is guaranteed to produce whiskers, moustaches, &c., in three or four weeks. For beautifying the hair, and sustaining its curling powers, it has no equal.

Sent post free on receipt of twenty-four post stamps, by Miss GRAHAM, 3, NEW-ROAD, BARNLEY, Yorkshire.

"My whiskers are greatly improved."—J. Short, Dudley.

"It has produced hair where I was bald."—W. Morgan, Milford.

"My hair has thickened since using it."—Miss Curwin, Bridgewater.

"I have a full pair of whiskers."—H. Robb, Hertford.

"It has effectually checked the greyness."—Mrs. Good, Dorking.

GREAT COMFORT TO INVALIDS.

A FIXED WATER-CLOSET for £1.

Placed in gardens converted into comfortable Water-closets by the PATENT HERMETICALLY SEALED PAN, with its Self-acting Valve, entirely preventing the return of cold air or odour. Any carpenter can fix it in two hours. Price 41s. Also, Hermetically-sealed Inodorous Chamber Commodes, £1, £2 4s., and £3; and Improved Portable Water-closets, with Pump, Cistern, and Self-acting Valve. A Prospectus, with Engravings, forwarded by enclosing two postage stamps.

At FIFE and Co.'s Sanatorium, 46, Leicester-square, London.

HENRY PEAT, HUNTING SADDLER, 14, OLD BOND-STREET, LONDON.

CRIBBITING and WIND-SUCKING prevented by the use of BLACKWELL'S PATENT STRAPS, 12s. and 15s., lined with leather.

BLACKWELL'S PATENTS for SADDLERY, HARNESS, &c., reduced 21 per cent by improved make and sale. Vulcanised India rubber Springs for Saddle Straps, Girths, Rollers, Belts, 2s. each. Gutta Percha Jockeys, for Breaking Horses, Bitts, Exercising, 3s. to 5s. Spring for ditto, 4s. Springs for bearing, driving, and riding-reins, recommended for Ladies' Bridles, attached to both Bits and one rein; Web Pedlock, Speedy Cut, and Leg Boots. At the Patentee's Saddlery and Harness Manufactory, 23, OXFORD-STREET, near the Marble Arch; Gallery, Crystal Palace; and of all Saddlers.

HORSE CLOTHING, HORSE RUG, and SADDLERY WOOLLEN WAREHOUSE, 9, GOSWELL-STREET, CITY. CHRISTOPHER ASKEW (successor to Mr. E. C. Davies) begs to inform the Nobility, Gentry, and all consumers of Horse Clothing, that his stock (well known to be the most extensive) is now replenished with every article necessary to the equipment of a horse or stable, and will be sold at these moderate prices which upwards of a century has obtained for this establishment a world-wide reputation. Carriage wrappers and knee-rugs in great variety. Warehouses—9, Goswell-street, London, and 17, Ranelagh-street, Liverpool. Manufactory—Kendall, Westmoreland.

LIVERY and COMMISSION STABLES, WILLOUGHBY HEATH FARM, near GRAN THAM.

T. W. GARNER begs to inform the Nobility, Gentry, and Public in general, that he is, as usual, preparing HORSES for HUNTING. Terms, including livery and riding to Hounds, £1. 8s. per week.

DO YOU BRUISE YOUR OATS? YET?—Great Saving.—New Oat Crushers, Chaff Cutters; Mangies, £1. 10s. 6d.; Flour Mills, £4. 10s. 6d.; Book on Feeding, 1s.—WEDLAKE and Co., 118, FENCHURCH-STREET.

IMPORTANT to OWNERS of HORSES.—A valuable RECEIPT, which stands unprecedented in quickly producing first rate condition, and a fine glossy skin; also, a RECEIPT, which will make the most vicious animal become perfectly quiet and tractable, for a trial on receipt of 1s. 6d. each, with stamp for reply.—GILBERT DYSON, 1100, Rochester, Kent.

CHARLES LENNY, Coach and Harness Manufacturer, 20, NORTH END, CROYDON.

BEGS to call attention to his Broughams, Churens, Barouches, with his registered mile-less wheel-jade, thus shortening the distance between the wheels, and lessening the draught for the horse, allowing the riders to lock quite under, and having high front wheels.

C. L. has constantly on sale Cab and Driving Phaetons, Stanhope and single Horse ditto, Pony Carriages, and Park Phaetons. He also solicits attention to his Newport Pagnel and other Carls, either with panels or wickerwork sides, and to his Bagot Cart, in panel or wickerwork, easy of access, and possessing all the advantages of the Mulvey Cart, but less expensive.

He has also a large stock of Croydon Basket Carriages, cheap and elegant, and in every variety of shape, either for sale or building to order, with or without heads, to suit either the Shetland Pony or the Horse.

C. L. would also invite an inspection of his registered Phaeton in basket-work, suitable either for one or a pair of ponies or horses. Carriages of all kinds let on hire for long or short engagements.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

MAJOR'S REMEDIES for the HORSE, the best and most effectual ever discovered, superseding the "burning iron" and the torture of "cauterisation."

MAJOR'S BRITISH REMEDY for the Cure of Ringbone, Spavins, Splints, &c. A single bottle sufficient to cure from four to six Spavins, price £1. 15s.

MAJOR'S SINOVITIC LOTION (the Remedy, No. 2), for Grogginess, Weak Joints, Sprains of the Back sinews, Ruptures of the Sheaths of Tendons, Suspensory Ligaments, Shoulder Lameness, and Inflammation; also for the cure and prevention of braking down, &c. In bottles, large size, 4l. 1s.; small, 10s. 6d. each. The above invaluable remedies can now be forwarded to any part of the United Kingdom. Pre-payment, by Check or Post-office order, made payable to Joseph Major, Post-office, Charing-cross.

Letters addressed to Joseph Major, Horse Infirmary, British-yard, Cockspur-street, London, or to the Agent for Newmarket, Mr. Thomas Dunning; for Scotland, Messrs Gardner and Ainslie, Edinburgh; Mr. W. F. Wells, chemist, 52, Sackville-street, agent for Dublin; agent for Glasgow, Mr. W. A. Preston, 16, Stockwell-street, and 44, Adelphi-street.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.

The most appropriate offerings for this season of festivity are those which tend to the promotion of health and personal attraction: none can be more acceptable than ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL, for imparting a transcendent lustre to the Hair, and sustaining it in decorative bloom.

ROWLAND'S KALYDOR imparts a radiant bloom to the Cheek, and a delicacy and softness to the Hands, Arms, and Neck; and ROWLAND'S ODONTO, or PEARL DENTIFRICK, bestows on the teeth a pearl-like whiteness, and renders the breath sweet and pure.

The patronage of Royalty throughout Europe, their general use by rank and fashion, and the universally-known efficacy of these articles, give them a celebrity unparalleled.

Sold by A. ROWLAND and SONS, 20, Hatton-garden, London, and by chemists and perfumers. BEWARE OF SPURIOUS IMITATIONS!!!

FOR CLEANING LEATHER BRECHES, GLOVES, &c.

PULLMAN'S IMPERIAL BLEACHING COMPOSITION.—This unrivalled composition renders the leather soft and pliable, restoring it to all its pristine beauty, and is especially valuable for its great freedom from dust. Sold by all leather breeches makers and brush manufacturers, and by R. and J. PULLMAN, LEATHER-DRESSERS, 17, GREEK STREET, SOHO.

CONTENTS.

Chronicle of the Week	1,203
Sport and Sportsmen	1,204
Hunting	1,205
Coursing	1,207
Shooting	1,207
Cricket	1,209
Yachting	1,204
Angling	1,209
Sportsman's Library	1,209
Field Sports and Pastimes	1,210
Gardening	1,210
The Country House	1,213
Poultry	1,213
Freemasonry	1,214
Letter Bag	1,211
SUPPLEMENT	1,217

NOTICE.

With the first number of the new volume of THE FIELD, and the new year, there will be presented to the Subscribers

THE SPORTSMAN'S ALMANAC,

AND

Country Gentleman's Calendar;

THE FIELD, THE GARDEN, THE FARM,
For the Year 1855.

This Almanack will contain superb Engravings, from designs by ANSDALL, WILSON, and others, with all the information useful for reference in the country house.

N.B.—This will be given to all who are Subscribers to THE FIELD for the year 1855.

ADVERTISEMENTS for "The Sportsman's Almanack" should be sent to THE FIELD Office without delay to secure insertion.

NOTICE.

On Monday next THE FIELD OFFICE will be removed to ESSEX HOUSE, Nos. 2 to 5, Essex-street, Strand; where all communications, orders, and advertisements, are requested to be addressed, to the Editor.

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

RACING.

Ashford.—We do not give advice on betting matters.

P. Q.—Won in a canter.

Quebec.—Walked over.

Simplex.—Had you perused our racing columns, you would have found "The Knight" did not show.

Jasper.—Scratched a few days before the race.

Traveller.—The weight was increased for the height.

N. P.—The winner was bought in.

HUNTING.

Shirrup.—In turning the hounds, the whistler-in cannot be too quiet.

Harrier.—Yes. It is almost the invariable practice with the hare to face the wind.

Harkness.—We shall always receive accounts of runs from you with pleasure.

Fern.—The run lasted about an hour.

Fischer.—Try bleeding; it is a safe and efficacious means of relief.

Searcher.—The foxes' feet are generally called "pads."

Della.—You will find the information in "Foxes' Guide to the Hounds of England."

COURSING.

T. T.—The Judge should have a full view of the course throughout.

Sulph.—A bye.

Max.—Benten hollow.

Source.—Modern coursing dates from the time of "good Queen Bess."

Francis.—In coursing, the dog pursues by sight only, not by scent, as in fox, hare, and stag-hunting.

SHOOTING.

Wild Duck.—Direct your aim by the noise of the wings.

Infanter.—Your wail of success may arise from trepidation at the moment of firing. This should be overcome, as decision is everything.

Snipe.—In a flying-shot, let the object get a fair distance before you fire.

CRICKET.

A. X.—No. It would not be out.

R. S.—Yes; as your question is framed, it would be so.

T.—Wait till the next season.

A. B.—Certainly not.

S. T. (Norwich).—Yes. Milch was at Norwich at the period you speak of.

J. Subserber.—Yes.

B. S.—The match you speak of was played at the Oval two years since.

York.—No.

G. S.—Renew your question in April.

YACHTING.

Horwich.—You are quite right. It was an error of the printer, who, by running the two answers into one, made it appear that the Novice was your Commodore's yacht.

J. P. H.—The question of shifting ballast will very soon be brought before the R. Y. C.

T. Wood.—We believe that it is the intention of the Royal Thames Yacht Club to follow the example of the Loyal Mercy, and give the whole proceeds of their ball to the Royal Patriotic Fund.

A. S. T.—It is all very well to say that the Vesper only beat the Arrow, &c., in consequence of very light winds, but when the breeze got up—which it did, and lasted more than an hour—the result was the same.

R. F. J. C.—The qualities of the yachts are so equal that it is almost impossible to say which is best. We should never offer an opinion on what might be the result of another match, unless we knew who would sail them.

ANGLING.

In Irishman.—Some years ago there were no stake or bag nets, and, consequently, salmon were then more plentiful than they are now.

The course from the rivers to the sea is now only clear at such times when the fish do not pass. Salmon will never become plentiful so long as the breeders are allowed to be destroyed by fixtures. We cannot promise to publish your suggestions. Send them, and if they are feasible, we will insert them. The framers of the proposed bill will, in all probability, at least see your communication.

POULTRY.

C. C.—Not to be compared with the eggs of the true black Spanish.

A. B.—Strew the house with gravel.

Chester.—The vessel from which the birds drink should have a cover to keep out dirt. There are patent "fountains" to be got at almost any earthenware shops.

Imy.—The lameness may arise from a cut foot. Examine the birds. Possibly a piece of broken china or glass may have been thrown where they scratch.

MISCELLANEOUS.

D. H. (Winchester).—In the game of foot-ball at Winchester College, our correspondent of last week should have stated that the Collegians won by 1, instead of 2.

C. H.—Undoubtedly it is an infringement.

Enlight.—The Law Reversary Interest Society is perfectly respectable, and safe to be dealt with.

We thank our truly friend for his communication. It arrived too late for insertion this week, but will appear in our next. We hope he will continue them.

NOTICE.—No contributions voluntarily sent to this Journal will be paid for. All, except such as are forwarded in pursuance of an express arrangement with the present Proprietors, will be received and treated as the usual gratuitous correspondence of a journal.

Some changes having been made in the Editorial Departments of THE FIELD, all communications are requested to be addressed, in future, to "the Editor of THE FIELD," 408, Strand.

The Field.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1854.

CHRONICLE OF THE WEEK.

THE extraordinary Session of Parliament, having served the purpose for which it was held, is at an end. Summoned for a special purpose, the estates of the realm have effected that and no more; and, certainly, if Parliament were nothing better than a mere machine, constitutionally necessary to the making of laws as drawn up by Her Majesty's Ministers, the present might have been judged to have performed its duty admirably. But the people of this country expect something more from Parliament; or, at least, from that portion of it which professes to represent them. They expect a jealous watchfulness over their rights and interests, and that free discussion of all new measures which alone can ventilate them thoroughly, and without which there can be nothing but legislation in the dark. In the present instance, though there has been a little lively discussion upon the Foreign Enlistment Bill, there has been very little, if any, real discussion worthy the name; and two most important measures have been passed within rather less than a fortnight, protected by a declaration from the Ministry that they considered discussion a factions opposition, and rejection as compelling them to resign. This may be called putting the screw upon Parliament very effectively. Of course, for the Ministry to resign would be, just now, a very inconvenient step, especially as we appear to be in doubt whether there is sufficient talent in the country to form another, and for that reason, our representatives grumbled and swallowed the obnoxious bill.

The Militia Bill passed without opposition. One or two amendments, proposed in a friendly spirit, were received in the same manner by the framers of the bill. The most important of these was a clause to prevent any militia regiment from being sent out of the country entirely at any one time. Depots are always to remain here. The advantages of this clause are obvious.

The Foreign Enlistment Bill, which proves not to be a measure for the organisation of a Polish Legion, but for a German one, provoked a degree of hostility against the Ministers; which, if not promptly smothered, might have caused a ministerial crisis. Lords Ellenborough and Derby headed the opposition in the Lords, and they based their objections principally upon the argument that it was unjust to the people of this country to have recourse to foreign mercenaries before all the channels of supply in our own country had been fairly tested. In answer to the precedents quoted by the supporters of the bill, it was very fairly argued that, in those cases, the auxiliaries were personally interested in the struggle; but that in no case had England availed herself of the services of mercenaries who had no other inducement to fight than the mere pay offered them. So powerful was the opposition in the House of Peers, that the bill only passed through by a very slight majority, and in the Commons the division upon the second reading only gave a majority of 39 in favour of the Ministry. Commenting upon the threat of the Ministry to resign in case of a defeat, Mr. Drummond said, with some bitterness:—"I think it was exceedingly unfair to say, that if we do not swallow this measure before the country has time to form its opinion upon it, we are to be threatened with the withdrawal of the great Duke of Newcastle. There are certain members of her Majesty's Government whom I should greatly grieve to lose; but, I confess that I should not greatly grieve if the Duke of Newcastle were to take his departure. I should not think they would go into mourning for the event in our camp before Sebastopol, though possibly the Emperor of Russia might receive the news with sorrow." The country has as yet expressed no opinion about this Foreign Enlistment Bill, but private conversation is altogether against it, as unjust and immoral. The country has, indeed, few opportunities of expressing any opinion; and when its so-called representatives meet, the Ministers snub them if they presume so much as to suggest a criticism.

The most graceful and pleasing function of Parliament has been the passing votes of thanks to the army, the navy, and our allies the French. Some discussion arose with respect to Admiral Dundas; but it was not deemed expedient to omit him from the vote. The vote of thanks to the French was unusual, but most graceful and appropriate. These interchanges of deserved compliment, and sincere tributes to each other's valour, will cement the alliance yet more firmly.

perhaps, have allies rendered such conspicuous service to those with whom they took the field as have the French to an army in its imminent peril upon the heights of Inkerman.

From Sebastopol we have no other news than that preparations for renewing the bombardment were proceeding vigorously. The allies were doing little more than replying gun for gun to the occasional firing of the Russians. Against the French lines the cannonading was at intervals more fierce, and sorties had been made without success. This is attributable to the fact, that the parallels of the French have approached nearer to the walls than our own. The siege works were very much impeded by the rain, which had converted "the trenches into dykes," and the men were busy hutting themselves. The troops last arrived upon the seat of war have suffered most from the weather, having been exposed to all its rigours before they became acclimatised.

"Negotiations" between the Cabinets of Vienna and St. Petersburg are said to be still on the tapis, but the result is yet hid in the womb of the future. The popular interpretation of the Austrian treaty is, that if the Czar should not accede to terms of peace satisfactory to the Western Powers before January, then Austria will become a belligerent Power, and will actively co-operate with the allies. If this be a correct view of the real state of the case, the prospects of peace become even more remote; for there cannot be a doubt, that however irritated the Czar may be against France and England, he will be still more implacable against his neighbour Austria, who has been trimming and temporising so long.

The result of the Marylebone election verifies our prediction of last week. Lord Ebrington's majority was overwhelming. Sir Charles Napier received telegraphic intimation from Government, that if he stood for Marylebone he must resign his command, and consequently the only candidates were Lord Ebrington and Mr. Bell. The vestry sided with the latter, but the aristocratic party proved too strong; and the vestry, which generally rules the roost, found itself, on this occasion, in a minority. Mr. Peto, by accepting the Government contract to construct a railway between Balaklava and the trenches, has brought himself under the scope of the Act of Parliament which forbids any Member to become a Government contractor. The spirit of this enactment is clear, and Mr. Peto is morally set beyond its reach by the abnegation of all profit; still the letter of an Act must be observed, and therefore Mr. Peto resigns the representation of Norwich.

It is very much to be hoped that the alternative given by the Government to Sir Charles Napier does not foreshadow his return to the Baltic next year. Yet, what else can it mean?

The case of Birch v. Forster proves this, at least,—that the press at large does not acquiesce in the morality of hiring itself out for the support of a government. Doubtless, some people will quote it as an example of the venality of the press; but these should remember, that the exposure of the offence came from the press itself, and that the defendant in this very action, who has administered to the offender such a severe and well-merited castigation, is a member of the press of far greater reputation than Birch, whose support of a Lord-Lieutenant was, nevertheless, deemed worth three thousand seven hundred pounds in hard cash. Now, it is well known the World was a paper of the very worst possible reputation, and was regarded in Dublin in very much the same light as the Satirist was in London; and it becomes a question that, if the World was worth purchasing at £3,700, what would the Examiner be worth, and what fabulous sum would represent the money value of the Times. The money argument is, after all, the best one to prove the impossibility of buying the press; at least, such organs of it as have any influence. If they circulate, what sum within the scope of a bribe could compensate the risk of destruction, inevitable upon discovery? if they do not circulate, their support is worth nothing. When a paper is bought, there must be a knave on one side and a fool on the other side of the bargain.

It has been announced, on very good authority, that our contemporary, the Sunday Times, is about to change hands; M. Kossuth, it is certain, is engaged to write political articles. If the noble Magyar writes the English language as well as he speaks it, these will be read with deep interest. At any rate, the appearance of the ex-governor of Hungary as a journalist is a significant fact, proving that, in his opinion, the pen is a more effective weapon in England than the sword, and that, after all, the best way to convince Englishmen is to reason with them.

The new graving dock at Southampton, was opened on Monday, and the General Screw Company's steamer Ceres was the first to enter it, which she did at high water. This was the first time it has been used. The dock is 500 feet in length, its width 88 feet, and its depth 14 feet. It is a fine specimen of the new dock would be a great help to the Admiralty.

SPORT AND SPORTSMEN.

"Pray, what is a gentleman without his recreations?"

The past week has been, without exception, one of the dullest of the year, the sportsman having had scarcely any thing to occupy his attention. Birds are wild—his hunters resting—no flat racing. He must therefore be content by preparing to meet his sporting brethren around the Christmas log, and there relate his adventures by "flood and field." He will have to record a falling-off in the number of moor-game bagged, when compared with the abundance of the preceding season. He will have witnessed a good race for the sporting race of the year—the St. Leger—the defeat of the favourite, and an honest trainer publicly attacked with severity by some dishonest parties, who would be scouted by any body of persons claiming the slightest pretensions to respectability. There is, however, a strange admixture of characters in the "ring." We find the statesman, the scholar, and the gentleman. We also find the outcasts of society; or, if not exactly outcasts, parties who have figured in peculiar transactions before the magistrates of the respective police-courts; and who, having "used up" their ordinary and accustomed modes of obtaining a livelihood, have entered the ring professionally, for the purpose of becoming "respectable." This class of the ring are apparently very particular with whom they have transactions. Before booking a bet, they take good care to inquire into the character of either the "gentleman, statesman, or scholar." They "assume a virtue if they have it not," and when a "robbery" or a "sell" takes place on the turf, there are no members so boisterous, and, to all appearance, so indignant—and so eager to punish the delinquents—as the new but respectable members of the enclosure. It was these worthies to whom John Scott, the eminent, and, we believe, the honest trainer, was indebted for the un-English and unsportsmanlike treatment that marked the late Doncaster meeting. Mr. Scott has not, we believe, taken steps to punish the miscreants; and he has, in our opinion, acted wisely in so doing; for, if we may judge of the past, his name and reputation will live when his assailants will be forgotten; or, if not forgotten, remembered only to be despised. But, to return. Our sportsman will have to record plenty of good hunting, a decrease in the number of the salmon, and an opportunity of chatting over the merits or demerits of the new bill for preserving the breed of this beautiful fresh-water fish. These subjects will be pleasing both to himself and friends. His adventures will, in all probability, be marked with remarkable and satisfactory incidents. There are, however, other adventures, by "flood and field," in a far-distant country, to be related by the cheerful fire-side—the daring exploits of many a good sportsman who were well known and beloved in their respective hunts—noted for their daring but skilful riding—for the cool yet graceful use of the deadly weapon. Poor fellows! Where are they now? Echo answers—where? Let us drink in silence to their immortal memory. Theirs is, indeed, a noble death; but who can avoid thinking deeply of their fate—a fate that called them from all that was dear. We shall never again meet them at the cover-side; for out of every ten officers who have fallen, at least seven were followers of the chase. Ought not the memory of these noble fellows to be cherished? Aye, their deeds shall ever be remembered, and let us hope that—"They have gone to a happier clime,

—And on a safer shore,
Where troubles never shall approach them more."

Large flocks of wild-fowl have made their appearance in various parts of England. In Ireland and Scotland, too, they are more numerous than have been known for several seasons past. In the extreme north of Scotland, immense large flocks of snow-fowls have been seen on the shores. "These snow buntings," says the John O'Groat Journal, "come in large flights to the Scottish coasts at this season of the year, and many of them fall a prey to hunger and the fowling-piece." The Journal does not explicitly state whether these birds are the "snow-birds" (Struthus hiemalis), or the "snow-buntings." We are inclined to think that the birds that visit the north are the "snow-birds." This species, which is a true finch, must not be confounded with the snow-bunting (Plectrophanes nivalis) of the Arctic regions of the old and new world, of which it is also a native, migrating in flocks southwards on the approach of winter. At first, snow-birds are most generally seen on the borders of woods, among the falling and decayed leaves, in loose flocks of thirty or forty together, always taking to the trees when disturbed. As the weather sets in colder, they approach nearer the farm-houses and villages, assembling in larger flocks, and doubly diligent in searching for food. When deep snow covers the ground, they become almost half-domesticated. They collect about the barns, stables, and other out-houses, and even round the steps of the doors, not only in the country and villages, but in towns, crowding around the threshold early in the morning, gleaning up the crumbs, and appearing lively and familiar. They retire northwards in April, breeding in the high latitudes, and making a nest on the ground. The snow-bird is about six inches long; the general colour is slate grey, deeper and purer in winter—the lower part of the breast, the under parts, the edges of the primaries, and the two outer tail-feathers, being white. In fine weather, they roost in the evergreen foliage of the holly, the cedar, and the pine; but, in cold weather, in holes in stacks, and other snug retreats. They afford pretty shooting, and make a delicious dish.

We learn that the fish will not lie in the lower pools of the river Ness owing to some imperfections which have been made in the beds by the proprietors. Last season the angling in this river was very unsuccessful, although thousands of grilse and salmon were seen playing about the mouth of the river. The net-fishing in Loch Ness, however, was unusually prolific. This speaks volumes against the existing fishery laws. In another part of The Field will be found a letter from "J. S.," showing the importance of altering the size of the trout statute-net. There is another suggestion worthy of consideration, viz. the use of fish by lime, or the wilful injection of any other noxious material. Fish can be poisoned for miles in the river by any evil-disposed or vicious miscreant. This offence should be rendered highly penal.

The coursing meetings for the week are:—

Place.	County.	Judge.	Date.
Holt	Worcestershire	Mr. A. Bennett	26
Scorton	York	Mr. Norval	20 and 27
Salisbury	Wiltshire	Mr. Nightingale	27 and 24
Barnston	Meath	Mr. Owens	23 and 29
Pynsdown
East Surrey (Banstead)		Mr. Lawrence	24 and 29

RACING.

DATES OF RACES.

FEBRUARY.—Nottingham	20	Nottingham	10
Liverpool Spring	28	Goodwood	31
MARCH.—Doncaster	6	AUGUST.—Brighton	8
Salisbury	8	Brighton Club	10
Warwick Spring	9	Wolverhampton	13
APRIL.—Newmarket Craven	20	Reading	14
York Spring	17	Lewes	16
Malton	10	York	22
Newmarket First Spring	23	Richam	28
MAY.—Chester Spring	1	Derby	28
Newmarket Second Spring	8	SEPTEMBER.—Warwick	4
Shrewsbury	10	Doncaster	11
Bath	15	Bedford	13
Epsom	22	Leicester	19
Manchester	30	Newmarket First October	25
JUNE.—Ascot	13	Northallerton	27
Hampton	14	OCTOBER.—Chester	2
Bury	20	Wrexham	4
Stockbridge	21	Newmarket Second October	8
Winchester	23	Warwick Autumn	16
Newcastle	26	Richmond	17
JULY.—Newmarket	3	Newmarket Houghton	22
Worcester	3	Worcester	29
Lancaster	6	NOVEMBER.—Epsom	1
Liverpool	11	Liverpool	6
Stanford	17	Strewsbury	13

RACING AND RACERS.

The dullness of the past week in Metropolitan racing circles has been partially relieved by the Waltham Abbey Steeple-chases, which have passed off in the usual manner, and added but little to the reputation of similar events in the vicinity of Bow bells. It is a strange fact that, popular as Steeple-chasing is in the provinces, it has never flourished in the metropolitan districts, and we verily believe that that most ancient patron of the sport, Mr. Tilbury, of Mount-street, better known as "Old Till," cannot call to mind any single square race of the kind, from the days of Beecher and Jem Mason, down to the present period of Green and Sait. The flagrant robberies practised in steeple-chasing—thanks to the exposures of the press—have, we are glad to record, exercised a salutary influence on that portion of the professionals who will, even now, venture to bet upon them; and the result is, that no man being able to back his horse, except at the post, all "arrangements" are defeated, and a tolerable fair contest is secured. It might, perhaps, also serve an useful end, if we were to point out how sure and gradual has been the decay of the patrons of steeple-chasing, consequent upon the villainies of some of its professors. When first we made our début on the turf, some thirty years back, steeple-chases, like angels' visits, were few and far between. The Squire (then in his zenith) and Mr. Horatio Ross, or rather Captain Ross, occasionally had a turn at each other, and Clunker and Clasher were "Household Words" in Leicestershire. Now, Captain Ross confines himself to his rifle in the Highland forests, while the Squire is but too delighted to win a fifty-pound plate at Stockbridge or Goodwood. Then followed the spied Captain Lamb, whose rupees so enlivened Leamington, and whose blue jacket and yellow cap was rendered so familiar in every shire by that pair of celebrities Vivian and the Captain; their constant rival being the Curraghmore marquis, with Cock Robin and Lancet. And of this lot, whose deeds were so faithfully chronicled in the journals of the day, who remains? Captain Lamb, who was skinned like his namesake, sleeps in a country churchyard, far removed from his scene of mirth and sport. Vivian, whose picture stopped you at every print-shop, ended his days in an Irish jaunting-car in Dublin. Captain Beecher, after enduring every species of vicissitude, was, when we last heard of him, filling the uncongenial appointment of inspector of sacks on the Great Northern Railway; and Lord Waterford, forsaking the purlieus of the Haymarket and St. James's, has settled down into his proper sphere of an Irish landlord; and which character, we are happy to state, he enacts to perfection. To this regime succeeded the Strathmore dynasty; and well do we call to mind how gallantly the young Earl came out with Red Lance, The Surteece, and St. Leger, and how ably his efforts were seconded by that prince of welter weights, Captain William Peel, who delighted the French sportsmen by the sty'e in which he carried off the grand French steeple-chase, obtaining from Louis Philippe the decoration of the Leg-on of Honour. Disgusted with the ingratitude of those whom his purse and his influence had befriended, Lord Strathmore did not long persevere; and therefore it was not surprising that the advertisement of a "Lot of Steeple-chase Horses, the property of a nobleman," were to be sold at Tattersall's, should have met the public eye. Since then we have never seen the Earl at a steeple-chase; and his contemporary, Sir Robert Clifton, is, if we err not greatly, an exile in a foreign land. Mr. Carew was the latest victim to the mania for the sport, and with him the name of the British Ycoman is honourably identified. He, too, in sporting language, is what is designated as "settled." His stud is dispersed, a stranger sits in his hall, and he himself is left to brood over his own folly and the ingratitude of those his former bounty fed! Now, by a reference to the cards of the day, it will be seen that no nobleman or gentleman of any position in life will have anything to do with a sport the delinquencies of which have out-Heroded any similar matters on the turf; and henceforth we shall anticipate the partakers of it confined to horse-dealers, small farmers, and plating-trainers; and until a healthier spirit springs up, we confess, for the interests of morality, that we should not be desirous of witnessing a return of the patronage of "the landed gentry." In the racing-stables nothing is doing, and trainers are enabled to snatch a little rest while they make out their employers' bills, enjoy a course with their dogs, or a gallop with the neighbouring hounds. Next week, however, a little more energy will be required, as the young ones will have to be put through the sieve previous to the 1st of January entries, which are expected to be quite up to the mark. The postponement of the St. Leger entry until July, to take place contemporaneously with the Derby and Oaks, is a step that must be approved of by all Turfites, as it was imperatively called for by the declining fortunes of the race, and had long been advocated by the Yorkshire trainers.

At Tattersall's, on Monday—being the last grand day previous to the breaking-up for the holidays—a fair share of business was got through. Graculus Esuriens retreated in favour of De Clare, upon whom "a monkey" was placed by a well-known partisan of the stable, and the son of a late City dignitary as celebrated for his caustic wit as for his great wealth. The St. Hubert and Onlston's commission has been worked well, but we can clearly discover that all the outlay upon the former cannot send back the latter, which is an object no doubt with Mr. Howard. Rifleman has also re-appeared in the market after a long absence; and we are strong converts to the belief that, if properly managed, the Rifleman will be very near hitting the Epsom target. His race for the Criterion we put on one side at once, as we were cognisant of the fact of his being amiss at the time he ran for it, and, to use a trainer's phrase, he was as dry as a chip. A host of outsiders were also backed at what Mr. Davis terms extremely liberal odds; but none of them, we conceive, will hurt any but their supporters.

John Day, Junior, we are glad to observe, has got up a subscription for the Patriotic Fund, amounting to upwards of twenty pounds, and Mr. John Scott is said to be following in his wake; and were all the great stables to unite in this charitable object, a large sum might be collected, and the sporting world be well represented in the national demonstration. Mr. Greville's horses will, it is said, in future be placed under the charge of Harlock; as Mr. Dockeray, from age and other causes, gives up. During his career, he has been remarkably fortunate for Mr. G. and his confederate Mr. Payne; although, from unforeseen causes, he was unlucky in the Derby and Oaks for them, his animals having always gone amiss on the day. With steeple-chasers he was more lucky, as the many victories of Lottery, Miss Mowbray, Oscar, and British Yeoman, will testify; and as far as he himself was concerned, his character has always been above reproach. Mr. Parr has advertised his stud for sale; but, from the prices he is understood to have put upon them, we are apprehensive he will be as long a time in finding customers for them as Lord Exeter was for his lot; and until we see them all at Hyde-park Corner, we shall not despair of seeing the puce and white jacket in the cards of the day. Should Mr. Parr, however, really persevere in his alleged intention of retiring, we do hope he will give to the public his racing reminiscences, for they will not only be varied, but valuable.

The decision of the Queen's Bench upon the Long-acre betting-case is regarded with much anxiety by the London turfites; as, if the appeal of the defendant is quashed, we may witness in Grosvenor-place some fine Monday afternoon, some curious proceedings; and it would be rather strange to see, arraigned at Marlborough-street on the following morning, the veteran Clerk of the Council, two or three lord-lieutenants of counties, a gallant admiral, some of the élite of our household troops, as well as a sprinkling of City merchants—all charged with assembling for the purpose of illegal betting, which is really the charge against the one hundred and fourteen individuals whom the police took in their foray. But, nevertheless, such an event is not only possible but most probable, in the event of the contingency to which we have alluded occurring. And now we will no longer detain our readers from the enjoyment of their Christmas cheer; and, trusting that our weekly budget will serve them for entertainment and reflection by their cheerful fireside, we lay down our pen.

REVIEW OF THE RACING SEASON, 1854.

No. 111.

The month of May proved an exceedingly busy one, and was opened at head-quarters by the First Spring Meeting. The list, however, was a very scanty one, and the only really interesting event was the 2000 Guineas, for which odds were laid on the roaring Boiardo, and a few "flats" were found to support the notorious Ruby as second favourite. The latter was wound up in the first hundred yards, and the Malton crack was no where, Middlesex running out to the left at the finish, and him and Alennie to do the same; but the outsider, Hermit, had them all safe, and won as he liked, which immediately brought Daneburg into strong vogue for the Surrey trust, it being pretty well understood that Andover was 10lbs better than his half-brother. In the Sweepstakes of £1,200 for three-year-old fillies, won by Lady Bird, Miranda and Moresca broke down. Bobby, 3 yrs, and Switeh, 3 yrs, were claimed here, the former for £70 and the latter for £80. The Queen's Plate, on the R.C., was a farce, the first two miles being walked over, and Ratanlan taking 25 min. 21 secs. to cover the whole distance! Meteora and Honcysuckle would not have faced Virago in the One Thousand but for the "cool hundred" allotted to the second. Chester moulted no feather in interest or strength this season. The Trades' Cup was worth £2,555, and two dozen competed, a three-year-old again triumphing—Epaminondas at 25 to 1—that unfortunate but splendid animal, the Indian Warrior, again getting a second place. John Scott still asserts that Acrobat (third) would have won but for the unwarrantable liberties young Garvey took with him. It was a pity that Wells should have been taken off. Another mistake, too, was manifest after the race—the scratching of Virago. We always dread the tussle for this race, round such a cock-pit course, but it was happily got over this journey without any "forcing over the rails." Dr. O'Toole, however, fell at the finish, but that was through his changing legs and being in difficulties. Brother to Troy and Bridekirk were claimed here, for 80 sovs. each; and the fund benefitted £208. 15s. from the sales of Dispute, 3 yrs (£30), and Pateycook (£50). The Second Spring Meeting at Newmarket, was devoid of interest, the first day's sport even consisting only of a brace of contests, and a walk over for the once-famed Rowley Mile Plate. The Silistria colt, 2 yrs (30 sovs.), and Anos, 3 yrs, were claimed under the new rule; and Para, 2 yrs, foreshadowed her autumnal successes by cleverly winning a sweepstakes of 200 sovs. value from five youngsters. Though the fields were strong at Shrewsbury, and there was lots of racing, the class of animals was by no means good, the steeple-chaser, Montague, winning the Great Cleveland Handicap of £331, for which eleven started. Pope Joan, 3 yrs (£50), Lady Flora, 4 yrs, Usner, 2 yrs (£50), the Reel colt, 3 yrs (£40), and Florist, 4 yrs, (£30), were severally bought in at 113, 105, 315, 85, and 45 guineas, so that the committee netted £520. 18s. by auctions alone. At Bath, the death-blow was dealt to the Epsom hopes of the Autocrat and King Tom partisans. Mr. Parr swept away £1,290 by the three triumphs of Rataplan and Defiance; Scandal broke down; and Oulston did not run up to his Salisbury form, experiencing much difficulty in shaking off Bessie in the Biennial Stakes of £190. There were two sales, Sussex, 3 yrs (£30), fetching 115 guineas, and Nourrice, 3 yrs (£20), being bought in at 105 guineas—the executive realising £207. 5s. Epsom also kept up its character for excitement, and was a truly great meeting, Mr. Dorling having strengthened the programme by sundry savoury additions. Flatterer, son of the deceased Netman Platoff, won the Woodcote with such ease, that he found ready supporters for his three-yr-old engagement here; and there was a dead heat between Hazlenut and Axwell, both four-yr-olds, and the latter receiving 8lbs. for the new race, the Summer Handicap of £345. There is no question that the best horse won the Derby, but we doubt if ever Mincenat could repeat the Oaks dose to Metera, even with a 10lb. allowance. The last two days' racing was held in June. Remnant, 3 yrs (£40), was sold for 155 guineas; Vaultress, 4 yrs (£60), bought in for 260 guineas; and Pebble, 3 yrs (£40), bought in for 73 guineas. Vaultress (£50), in a subsequent race, was claimed under the new rule. The minor meetings were numerous, but we are necessitated to pass them over. The month's summary stands thus:—

Meeting.	Days.	Stakes.	Horses.	Money.
Newmarket, F.S.	6	31	104	£11,653
Chester	4	23	192	7,170
Spalding	1	2	16	65
Newmarket, S.S.	3	14	66	1,165
Edinburgh	2	8	44	601
Plymouth	1	3	10	157
Shrewsbury	2	14	105	1,636
Bath	2	11	92	2,570
Tavistock	1	2	7	35
Royston	2	12	61	292
Winkton	1	3	15	49
Liverpool Hunt	2	10	44	601
Harpden	1	7	40	373
Wye	1	3	8	69
Epsom	4	24	190	13,605
Total	32	172	998	£39,422

* And three cups.

† Two days in June.

There was racing galore in June, twenty-one meetings extending over thirty-seven days. Manchester maintained its average, and Typee won a brace out of the trio of events for which she was "potted." Rataplan, too, surprised the natives by giving Balrownie (of his own year) 15lbs, and an easy beating, for the Manchester Cup of £1,005. Perhaps the greatest surprise of all, however, was the success of that queer-tempered son of the fleet Iago, Snowdon Dunhill, in the Union Cup race of £620. After his Chester pranks, neither the stable nor the public trusted him with a penny for his Castle Irwell essay; and, happening to be in a good humour, he bowled Typee over, after a very severe struggle, by a head. The sales of Patience, 4 yrs (£30), Bicharest, 3 yrs (£30), and Poor Dick, 2 yrs (£50), for 85, 140 and 66 guineas, respectively, brought £190. 6s. to the official exchequer. Royal Ascot was plethoric of sport, and the results were most important. Want of pace from the beginning made the Hermit's triumph over Rataplan a more easy one than it should have been; and the ease with which the Bonnie Morn achieved the Triennial gave additional zest to the backers of Græculus Esuriens. Little Harry gave the felders a turn for the Ascot Stakes of £625; and, in the Ascot Derby, poor Sim Templeman had a narrow escape of losing his life by Marley Hill blundering near the Brick-kiln road. West Australian (who has netted £2,460 this season) won his two races with consummate ease, ridden by Alfred Day, who triumphed in eight races during the meeting, principally for the Malton stable. Blue Peter broke down here; and Crosslance, 3 yrs, was claimed for 600 sovs. At Newcastle-on-Tyne they kept up the average of sport, but we wish it could be improved upon, as there is no town better deserving of a good meeting than Newcastle. Knight of St. George, who showed temper in the Derby, carried off the Members' Plate of £220, cleverly, from thirteen others; Sambrand, the Tyro Stakes of £250, from seven promising youngsters; and Grapeshot, 4 yrs, the Northumberland Plate of £965, from a field of fifteen others; Kingston (second) and the Early Bird being great "pots." Maid of Balmoral, 3 yrs, and the Swell, 4 yrs, each entered for £30, fetched 125 and 150 guineas. Hampton, a favourite resort of the Cockaigne denizens, manifested an improvement, but the racing calls for no particular comment. Exact, blessed with a queer disposition, was claimed for 500 sovs after her Queen's Plate win; and Speed the Plough (£100) also. Merry Peal, 6 yrs (£50), was sold for 85 guineas; Humboldt, 3 yrs (£150), for 325 guineas; and Economy (£30) for 115 guineas, so that the fund benefitted £321. 5s. Andover gave Ivan 10lbs at Stockbridge, where Bonnie Morn cantered away with the Triennial, for two-yr-olds. At Winchester there was very little to interest; Manicard, 3 yrs, and Michaelmas Maid, 4 yrs, entered at £30 each, realised 13 and 150 guineas. The results of the month's racing may be thus recorded:—

Meeting.	Days.	Stakes.	Horses.	Money.
Redhill	2	7	33	£129
Hadfield	2	4	13	3,790
North Shields	2	4	21	292
Manchester	2	6	23	229
Billing	1	3	18	93
Leam	1	4	17	90

Ulverstone	1	3	8	70
Stokeley	2	4	13	60
Ascol Heath	4	27	192	8,050*
Tembury	1	3	9	90
Newcastle	3	14	98	2,485
Hampton	2	11	70	912
Knighton	1	4	16	180
Carlisle	3	11	60	871
Bilbury Club	1	6	24	745
Ludlow	2	8	20	417
Beverley	2	11	73	984
Stockbridge	1	7	34	2,575
Winchester	1	6	24	694
Total	37	162	927	£23,725

* And three cups.

TATTERSALL'S.—MONDAY.

Chater Cup.		1000 to 25 agst The Reiver (t)		1000 to 10 agst Flomily (t)
1000 to 20	Wild Huntsman (t)	1000 to 10	Brinklow (t)
1000 to 10	Llanfara (t)
Derby.		10 to 1 agst De Clare (t)		10 to 1 agst Anrifer (t)
10 to 1	St. Hubert (11 to 1 t)	1000 to 15	The Bison (t)
11 to 1	Græculus Esuriens (off)	1000 to 10	Claret (1000 to 5)
12 to 1	Lord of the Isles (t)		also laid twice
15 to 1	Rifleman (t)	1000 to 10	Hickleton (t) taken
15 to 1	Oulston	1000 to 10	Marcespado (t) in one
22 to 1	Cruiser	1000 to 10	Elvaston (t) bet.
22 to 1	Wild Dayrell (t)	1000 to 5	Ingaton (t)
30 to 1	Polydore (t)	1000 to 5	Kilginstown (t)

THURSDAY.

Derby.		275 to 25 agst Mr. Howard's St. Hubert
1500 to 1200 and 500 to 400 on Rulman agst Oulston 1000 to 25 agst De Clare's winning the Derby and Bonnie Morn
the Two Thousand

MANCHESTER.—TUESDAY.

Derby.		100 to 8 agst Lord of the Isles (t and off)
10 to 1 agst Græculus Esuriens (t and off)		25 to 1	Dirk Hatterick (t)
11 to 1	De Clare (t)	25 to 1	Matterer (t and off)
16 to 1	Rifleman (t)
Two Thousand Guinea Stakes.		4 to 1 agst St. Hubert (5 to 1 t)	6 to 1 agst Bonnie Morn

WALTHAM ABBEY STEEPLE-CHASES.—WEDNESDAY.

The Abbey Stakes of 3 sovs each, with 20 added. Flat race. Half a mile.

Mr. Little's Firebrand, 3 yrs, 8st 3lb, £40	Steward	1
Mr. B. Land's Odham, 6 yrs, 9st 3lb, £30	Land, jun.	2
Mr. Green's Alma, 5 yrs, 8st 8lb, £20	St. Poole	3

Betting—3 to 1 on Firebrand, who won by a length; same distance between the second and third.

Selling Hurdle-race of 5 sovs each, with 25 added. Two miles, over five flights of hurdles.

Mr. Evans's Alp, aged, 10st 13lb, £50	Green	1
Mr. Hayward's Bullfinch, aged, 10st 8lb, £30	G. Ratwell	2
Mr. B. Land's Massaroni, 4 yrs, 8st 6lb, £30	Land, jun.	3
Mr. Jackson's Maid of Kildare, aged, 10st 8lb, £30	D. Poole	4
Mr. Clark's Luck's All, aged, 10st 8lb (car 11st), £30	Owner	5

Betting—6 to 4 on Alp, 5 to 2 agst Bullfinch, 3 to 1 agst Massaroni. Won by three-quarters of a length; bad third.

Grand Annual Steeple-chase of 10 sovs each, h.f. with 80 added. About four miles.

Mr. Mills's Janus, 9st 7lb	Griffiths	1
Mr. Price's Tom Gurney, 10st 6lb	T. Ablett	2
Mr. Barling's Old Mistry, 9st 8lb	G. Entwistle	3
Mr. Evans's Victress, 10st, Green
Mr. Tilbury's Tally, 9st 10lb, J. Newhall

The betting opened at 6 to 5 agst Tom Gurney, 5 to 1 agst Janus; but closed as follows:—2 to 1 agst Janus, 3 to 1 agst Victress, 7 to 1 agst Little John, 10 to 1 agst Old Mistry, 10 to 1 agst Tom Gurney offered. Won by two lengths; bad third. In the first round Little John ran out by the brook; where, on coming home, Tally jumped on Victress, whose stile was thereby much injured. Tally slipped up, and fell when within 300 yards of the winning-post.

For the Selling Steeple-chase of 5 sovs each, Mr. B. Land's Massaroni, 4 yrs, 10st 11lb, £50 (Land, jun.), walked over.

THURSDAY.

Handicap Hurdle-race of 5 sovs each, with 25 added. Two miles and a half, over six flights of hurdles.

Mr. B. Land's Odham, 6 yrs, 10st 9lb	Land, jun.	1
Mr. Mayo's Hamstead, 4 yrs, 11st	H. Bell	2
Mr. Evans's Alp, aged, 10st 4lb	Green	3
Mr. Wycheley's Warwick, aged, 10st 2lb	G. Boyce	4
Mr. Barling's Malmesbury, aged, 10st 7lb	G. Entwistle	5

Betting—Even on Odham, 2 to 1 agst Malmesbury, and 1 to 1 agst Warwick. Won by two lengths; Malmesbury beaten off.

Selling Plate-race of 3 sovs each. For three-yr-olds and upwards. Optional selling weights. One mile.

Mr. Little's Firebrand, 3 yrs, 8st 2lb, £40	Steward	1
Mr. Green's Alma, 5 yrs, 8st 8lb, £30	St. Poole	2

Betting—3 to 1 on Firebrand, who won by four lengths.

Free Handicap Selling Hurdle-race of 3 sovs each, with 20 added. About a mile and a half, over five flights of hurdles.

Mr. Evans's Alp, 10st 3lb, £20	Green	0 1
Mr. B. Land's Massaroni, 9st, £20	Land, jun.	0 2
Mr. Barling's Old Mistry, 9st 1lb, £20	G. Entwistle	3 0
Mr. Clark's Young Spider, 9st 4lb, Bailey
Mr. Jackson's Maid of Kildare, 9st 1lb, £60, D. Poole

Betting—6 to 4 agst Alp, 2 to 1 agst Massaroni and Old Mistry. A fine race in which Alp and Massaroni ended in a dead heat.

Dead Heat—6 to 4 on Massaroni, who was defeated easily by three lengths.

The Open Selling Steeple-chase did not fill.

MANCHESTER STEEPLE-CHASES.—The following horses have been entered for the above classes, which are fixed to come off on the 1st January, at the Trafford Hotel, Stretford.—Manchester Handicap: Columbine, Trout, Rosa, Encharess, Liucoln, Sailor, Labyrinth, Minerva, Garland, Speculation, Cervus, Victress, Jemmy the Black, Maria Day, Simple Peter, Forest Lad, King of Spain, Royal Blue, Grudely Lass, Ivanhoe, Adlington, Odham, Theodine, Star of the West, Nomme-de-guerre, Maria, and Tiuy. Stretford Selling Steeple-chase: Quickstep, Massaroni, Falcon, Liucoln, Ginger, Tiuy, Augcan, and Adlington.

The Newmarket jockeys and trainers have subscribed £84 to the Patriotic Fund.

We understand that Mr. Wm. King is about leaving the employ of Baron Rothschild as private trainer, and will afterwards become "mine host" of the Turf Tavern, Doncaster, as the successor of Mr. Daykins, who proposes, we believe, resuming his former occupation as coach proprietor.—Doncaster Gazette.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF A HORSE

For some days after the property of Miss Stafford, I last chapter I lost every day; but never by my mistress. I was, I am sorry to say, however, after the accident, I was ridden by Miss Stafford's groom a distance of about twenty miles, to a very large house standing in a magnificent park. I was taken to the stable, and spent a long time in wondering what life was before me, and who was to be my new possessor. Early in the morning of the next day I saw two ladies come into the stable. I was, of course, the subject of their conversation, and both ladies began to pat me. "Well, really, Julia," I heard one say, "she is a perfect beauty. Where did you get her?" "Oh, she belonged to Mary Stafford, a great friend of mine. She liked her immensely; but, unfortunately, the other day the horse got frightened at something, and threw her; and though, I hope, she was not much hurt, her father won't hear of her riding it again. So they wanted to sell Isabella to a kind mistress, who would not ride her too hard and too fast; and papa bought her for me." "And a real good purchase it is too; though I'm afraid your friend would not have sold her to me, for I do love riding long and fast. What is her name?" "Oh, she was always called Isabella; but I don't think I like that much. However, unless I can think of anything better, I suppose I had better not change." "What time shall we ride to-day? I am afraid Isabella will be quite ashamed of being seen with my poor beast." The hour was settled at which, for the present, my new mistress was to ride me; and I was led round to the front door, in company with a miserable animal who was to carry Lady Julia's riding.

We had just finished a quick canter, when the following conversation took place:—"Do you ever ride with the spur, Julia?" "Oh, no; but if I had one on I should always be too timid to use it; and, besides, I think it's a cruel thing for a lady to use;—do you use one?" "Well, even though you do think it cruel, I must plead guilty to always riding with one; with this poor broken-winded beast it is absolutely necessary. During this last canter I have had to administer several severe admonitions; but, whatever horse I am riding, I never feel safe and comfortable with him without more decided means of punishing him than the small whip. It looks so very bad to see a lady whipping a horse with might and main; and with a spur one can give a naughty horse any amount of merited punishment under the friendly shelter of the habit. I know perfectly well that you will say that your horse never wants whipping; and, I dare say, never going beyond a trot or slow canter, you may not require anything beyond your whip. But I do hate being obliged to go slow, or to stop any moment, for fear of tiring my horse; and so, I assure you, in my cross-country gallops I find a spur very useful." "Really, Bessy, I do think you are desperately cruel. I am sure you would not have done for Isabella." "Well now, then, I will confess to you the sins of my past life, and give an account of all my cruelties. Papa, about three years ago, bought me a beautiful horse—if possible, more beautiful than yours. He used to gallop and jump most splendidly. I used to ride him very hard, and at last, melancholy to relate, broke his wind, and inflicted on him many other calamities. Papa was very angry, and though I begged him to kill him, he insisted, as he had cost so much, in realising as much as possible out of him; so my poor horse was sold to a cabman! I declare it has often made me very sorry to think how much he may be suffering now. Well, after that I had no horse for almost a year. I told papa I should much rather not ride at all than have to ride very carefully for fear of hurting or spoiling my horse. So, for a year, I most patiently contented myself with walking, dining, and other innocent occupations not involving cruelty. However, a few weeks ago, papa declared I was looking unwell, and that I wanted some horse-exercise, and insisted on my beginning riding again; so he bought me this poor animal, which I have liberty to ride as fast as I can make him go. It is a comfort, certainly, to feel that one is riding a horse which one can't make worse than it is at present. And now, as I've made a clean breast to you of all my iniquities, I hope you will not blame me much. But, come, for another good canter."

We set off for another canter, during which, I suppose, the unfortunate animal by my side was spurred as in the former one; her rider, however, seemed in very high spirits, and she and Lady Julia laughed and talked immensely. Lady Julia was a very timid rider; though now, when compared to what I have suffered since and to what I am suffering now, my life with her seems almost happy, yet, at the time, it was an unpleasant change from my life with Miss Stafford. During the first ride, especially, she seemed in a constant fear that I was going to run away, and pulled at my mouth in a most meretricious manner. All the time she was thus holding me in, she kept touching me with her whip, which, certainly, was too slight to cause me any real pain, but which was extremely provoking and disagreeable. But, as I thought, how much real suffering the poor animal was undergoing along with me was undergoing, I could not but feel thankful that as I could no longer have Miss Stafford for my mistress, I had become the property of one so kind and merciful as Lady Julia Stanley.

(To be continued.)

HUNTING.

•• Masters of Hounds and Hunt-men will oblige by sending their names and addresses in full, in order that their papers may be forwarded direct, commencing with the new year.

APPOINTMENTS FOR THE WEEK.

THE QUEEN'S HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Marlow; Friday, Bracknell, at eleven.

THE CHERLTENHAM SUBSCRIPTION STAG-HOUNDS.—Wednesday, Cheltenham Gate; Friday, Hawling Gate, at half-past eleven.

THE BADSWORTH FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Womersley Park; Thursday, Red House; Saturday, Potton Village, at half-past ten.

THE TICKHAM FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Doddington-street; Thursday, White Hill; Saturday, Sydnale; Tuesday week, Manor House, Hollingbourn; Friday week, Leed Castle, at half-past ten.

THE EARL OF YANBOROUGH'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Tealby Cross Roads; Wednesday, Knebly Thorpe; Saturday, Roxton Wood, at eleven.

THE BRAMHAM MOOR FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Bramham Park; Wednesday, Harewood Bridge; Friday, Towton; Saturday, Mourk Windmill, at half-past ten.

THE DEACON'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Wednesday, Dartmoor Inn; Saturday, Sydenham House, at half-past ten.

THE FLEWELL FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Slaugh Bridge; Saturday, Farnham, at half-past ten.

EAST CURNWALL FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Ruthe Bridge; Thursday, Racecourse Inn, at half-past ten.

THE EARL OF WEMYSS'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Pallinsburn; Wednesday, Cockburn; Friday, Longridge; Saturday, Rowchester, at half-past ten.

THE EARL OF PORTSMOUTH'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Combe Village; Wednesday, Highclere Castle; Friday, Bedwyn Brails; Saturday, Hannington, at eleven.

Mass Hague, then to Marshall's Howe, Aislaby Whin, and at half-past six crossed above Pickering in the direction of Hole Dale, where it is supposed the gallant fox saved himself by going to earth, after a run of upwards of four hours. This chase will long be remembered at Sinnington.

THE ESSFX UNION HOUNDS met at Galleywood Common on the 18th instant. The Thrift and forest having been drawn without a find, they proceeded to White's Wood, from which Reynard was ejected; and after a chopping run of about twenty minutes he declined the contest, and took refuge in a drain at Stock Hall, from which he was eventually unhoused, and made to yield up his fox-hunting trophies.

HARRIERS.—The lovers of hunting enjoyed a day's capital sport with Fingler's harriers on Tuesday week. The meet was at Cheaving, the hare started near Knockholt-beeches, and the chase extended across Orenden's-green, by Chipstead and Bessels-green, to Dibden, near Montred Park, where puss was slain. A second meet took place on Wednesday at Offord, where the hare, after keeping the low grounds for a considerable time, took to the hills, and was lost near Warren House.

BEACON.—VELINFATCH HUNT.—This celebrated annual meet will occur on the first day of the new year. It anticipated that the amusements at the coming meeting will in no wise fall off from the high character already attained, and as an important addendum to the sport, the spirited host of the Velinfatch Inn intends providing bountifully those creature-comforts so necessary after a hard day's run.

A RUN.—In these days of war and battle it is pleasant to turn from the stern reality to the mimic warfare of the chase. Right well hath the old ballad sung:—

"Tis merry, 'tis merry, in the gay greenwood,
When the hawk and merle are singing,
When the deer sweep by,
And the hounds are in cry,
And the holler's horn is ringing.

So say I, but much jollier is to have a good burst in the open of fifty minutes, and the merry little pack run into Sir Reynard; so I fancy all old Pytchley and Quornites would say. Alas! in these diggings our fox-hunting is conducted in a very different way; the hunters use Shank's nag, no other being fitted for our fells. But we have our harriers, and a better little pack of currant-jelly dogs than the Eamon harriers are seldom met with. Our fields are generally small, but the men are of the right sort—good 'uns to go and straight too. Well, Saturday, Dec. 16, saw the meet at the Kennels, Penrith, where was a meet of twenty-three with an accompanying crowd of foot people. We soon found near the race-course, ran parallel with the old Carlisle-road, up to Mr. Bowat's, Maiden-hill; found again there crossed the old Carlisle-road, away, over some stifiish country, across the New-road, to the railway (Lancaster and Carlisle), which we crossed, away through the Bottom which were awfully heavy from the heavy rains, a run towards Catterlen, across the railway again, over the Potterill bridge, down the Meadows, across the river Petter three times—here one gentleman had a cold bath—away again to Newbiggin, where we had a long check; old Crosby, however, pricked her on along the road to Stainton, where we gave up, it being evident she was bound for the Dalemain preserves. The time we were running was one hour and thirty minutes; pricking, thirty minutes; total, two hours. There were only six up at the end. "Puss in Boots."

MR. THOMAS, MASTER OF THE SOUTHDOWN FOX-HOUNDS.—At a dinner at Hailsham, the Chairman read the following well-deserved compliment:—I don't know any gentleman who enjoys more popularity (and I appeal to anybody than my friend the master of the Southdown Fox-hounds (Cheers.) I don't know any one better deserving regard and esteem, and I honour him as a thorough sportsman and thorough good fellow. (Cheers.) I say that not only are his neighbours indebted to him, but the whole of this part of the country is indebted to him for the manner in which he has carried on those bounds. (Cheers.) I hardly know how he gets on; he has a great many ladies at Brighton but under all circumstances (and I have been out with good many pack of hounds) I never saw a man with such good temper, and I believe he is the same in the house as in the field. (Cheers.) As many of you go as of with him know that I speak the truth, and I beg to propose "the health of Mr. Thomas, and the Southdown hounds and I hope he will sit them long. (Great applause.)

THE MARQUIS'S FENCE AND THE "TODDLERS."—A few days ago three toddling fox-hunters were charged with having, in King's Wood, damaged a live fence, the property of the Marquis of Chandos. The damage was laid at one shilling. The defendants said they were after the fox-hounds, and that they did not do any damage, as, although they went over the quick fence, they went carefully. It appeared that there was no path where the defendants went, and that the Marquis was determined to put a stop to trespassers. The parties were fined in various sums.

SERIOUS ACCIDENTS TO SPORTSMEN.—On Saturday last a serious accident occurred to Reginald, a younger son of Sir Joseph Radcliffe, of Rudding Park, whilst hunting with the Braham Moor fox-hounds, in the neighbourhood of Pannal. When taking a fence, his horse "shied," and he was thrown with fearful violence against the trunk of a willow tree, whereby he sustained injuries on the head, from which it was for some time supposed he would not recover, but he has since rallied, and is happily, we believe, now out of danger. A similar accident occurred on Thursday week to Mr. William Walker, farmer, of Goldsbro', who was following the York and Ainsty hounds in the neighbourhood of Walshford. The injuries sustained by Mr. Walker were not quite of such a dangerous character.

THE WARD UNION STAG-HOUNDS.—On Monday last, the 18th instant, one of the most extraordinary runs on record took place with the above now justly far-famed pack. The meet appointed was the Eighth Mile Stone upon the high road which leads from Dublin to Ashbourne, and the deer having been untraced in presence of a very numerous field near the farm of Mr. Kennedy, of Fleenstown, started forward at a merry pace to the rear of the "Wootton," and, wheeling back in the direction from which he started, made for the high-road crossing the commons of "Coolquay," heading for Donnymore, where a slight check took place. The deer then set to work in right down earnest; and, running to the left, skirting the lands of Mr. John Tew Armstrong, rattled away to Chapel-Midway churchyard, inclining towards Mount Ambrose; and again wheeling to the right towards Saint Margaret's; through the piers of "Dubber," into Mr. Shoen's village, through Kildelan, into the town of Finglass, leaving the Cemetery; and the right, crossing opposite to it into the Royal Canal, wheeling along the Botanic Gardens, as also the "mike-gate, and up to the front of the Model Farm; taking to the soil, and, being prevented from getting out on the opposite bank, swam back again, retraced his steps along the bank, ran forward over the bridge beyond Philsboro'; crossing the Circular-road at the head of Ecclestreet, and straight away forward with the hounds, with but a very chosen few in close attendance, to the wonder and amazement of all the citizen folk who happened to witness it; wheeling down Dominick-street, and turning into the stable-yard of Coffey's hotel, where he was safely captured without a scratch.—Our Irish Correspondent.

COURSING.

* * Judges and Secretaries will oblige by sending their names and addresses in full, in order that their papers may be forwarded during the ensuing year.

APPOINTMENTS.

JANUARY.

PLACE.	DATE.	JUDGE.
Church Hill Open, Westward Winton (Cumberland)	1
Red Dial Open, Westward Winton (Cumberland)	11
Bigger Club (Lanark)	23
The renewed trial between North-Western and South-Western Coursers, at Lytham (Lancashire)	29 and fol. days

FEBRUARY.

Spelthorne (Wilts)	7, 8, and 9	Mr. Lawrence
Newmarket Open	12
Bigger Champion (Lanark)	13
Baron Hill, Beaumaris (Anglesea)

MARCH.

Caledonian Open (Lanark)	15
Bigger Open (Lanark)	27
Ridgway (Lancashire)

THE ALTAR COURSING MEETING.—Dec. 14 and 15. President: Earl of Sefton. Committee: B. H. Jones, J. Blundell, R. G. Jobb, C. Handell, and G. Cook, Esqs. Secretary: James Wicksted Seann, Esq. Judge: Mr. Assheton Hemlett.

THE ALTAR CUP.

Mr. Stanley's Shark beat Mr. Hornby's Honour-bright
Mr. Swan's Stockwell beat Mr. Graham's Vulcan
Lord Sefton's Sackcloth beat Mr. Jones's Jacobone
Mr. Wood's Wallflower beat Mr. Handell's Rival

Second Tie.

Stockwell beat Shark | Sackcloth beat Wallflower

Third Tie.

Stockwell beat Sackcloth.

THE SEFTON STAKES.

Mr. Graham's The Crescent beat Mr. Langton's Lunacy
Mr. Blundell's Bugle beat Mr. Wilson's War
Mr. Handell's Riot beat Mr. Jones's Jent Ward
Mr. Wilson's Varna beat Mr. Graham's The Western Powers

Second Tie.

Bugle beat Crescent | Varna beat Riot

Third Tie.

Varna beat Bugle.

THE ALTAR STAKES.

Mr. Swan's Sappho beat Mr. Brookbank's Bartolo
Mr. Jones's Jael beat Mr. Blundell's Blue-bell
Lord Sefton's Sylph beat Mr. Stanley's Select
Mr. Graham's Blooming Heather beat Mr. Blundell's Barleycorn
Lord Sefton's Sempstress beat Mr. Graham's Exodus
Mr. Neilson's Necklace beat Mr. Swan's St. Catherine
Mr. Jones's Joke beat Mr. Wood's Wenzig
Mr. Blundell's Bella Donna beat Mr. Wilson's Wallachia

Second Tie.

Jael beat Sappho | Necklace beat Sempstress

Sylph beat Blooming Heather | Bella Donna beat Joke

Third Tie.

Sylph beat Jael | Necklace beat Bella Donna

Deciding Course.

Sylph beat Necklace.

THE MOLYNEUX STAKES.

Wallflower beat Judith | Honour-bright beat Strategy
Wallachia beat Vulcan | Blue-bell beat Joke

Second Tie.

Wallflower beat Wallachia | Honour-bright beat Blue-bell

Third Tie.

Honour-bright beat Wallflower.

THE WEST DERBY STAKES.

Shark beat The Western Powers | Jacobone beat St. Catherine

Second Tie.

Shark beat Jacobone.

HOME PARK COURSING MEETING.

THURSDAY, December 21.

Stewards—Mr. F. Eley, Mr. Hanly, and Mr. Hatchett. Judge—Mr. R. Lawrence. Secretary—Mr. Luce.

ALBERT STAKES. Four dogs—puppies.

Mr. Hanley's b d Briton beat Mr. Eley's r and w d Jonon
Mr. Hatchett's r d Hypocrite beat Mr. Clitty's a and w d Critic
Mr. Hatchett's Hypocrite and Briton ran undecided, and Hypocrite wins

LADDOCK STAKES. Four dogs—puppies.

Mr. Ball's w d Dutchman beat Mr. Deary's f and w d Hattler
Mr. Chandler's t d Speed ran three undecided courses with Mr. Bristow's b d Benamont—Speed draws Dutchman beat Benamont

HOME PARK STAKES. Eight dogs—all ages.

Mr. Wynne's b d Carlo beat Mr. Clitty's f and w d Clipper
Mr. Hatchett's f k Hopeless beat Mr. Day's b b Esserha
Mr. Hanley's b d Malice beat Mr. Secretan's b b Highland-lad
Mr. Marshall's r d Knight of St. George beat Mr. Adams's b d Old Jem

Second Tie.

Carlo beat Hopeless | Malice beat Knight of St. George

Deciding Course.

Carlo beats Malice, and wins

WELLINGTON STAKES. Eight dogs—puppies.

Mr. Secretan's r b Spirey beat Mr. Clitty's f and w d Enllie
Mr. Secretan's r b Spirey beat Mr. Grimes's f b Garrick
Mr. Hanley's f and w d Emperor beat Mr. Wells's f b Rosebud
Mr. Hanley's b and w d Hotsour beat Mr. Day's f b Maldon

Second Tie.

Spirey beat Emperor | Hotsour beat Scip

Deciding Course.

Spirey beats Hotsour, and wins

INNERMAN STAKES. Four dogs—all ages.

Mr. Monk's r d Thunder beat Mr. Hanley's b b Swift

Mr. Kempter's r b Consequence beat Mr. Marshall's r b Lady Sherriton

Deciding Course.

Consequence beats Thunder, and wins

ALMA STAKES. Four dogs—all ages.

Mr. Kempter's r b Consequence against Mr. Bristow's r b Prima Donna —Consequence drawn, Prima Donna ran a lye

Mr. Cox's lrd b Beeswing beat Mr. Deary's f b Judy

Deciding Course.

Prima Donna beats Beeswing, and wins

MOUNTAINSTOWN (CO. MEATH) COURSING CLUB.

DEC. 12 and 13.

Stewards: Marquis Conyngham; Earl of Beective, M.P.; J. L. W. Naper, Esq.; M. Archdall, Esq., M.P.; G. A. Pollock, Esq.; and Captain Rodin. Judge: William Owens, Esq.

The first meeting of the above club took place on the 12th and 13th inst. at Castledown Cross. Although the weather was most inclement, which caused a rather limited attendance, and the hares to run wild, the trials were exceedingly well contested, and, in a few instances, the dogs were beaten hollow.

THE MOUNTAINSTOWN CLUB PRODUCE STAKES. 5 subs.

Mr. Pollock's f b b Cha received forfeit.

THE NURSERY STAKES OF £22.

Mr. Bayly's lrd d Annaghmore beat Lord Beective's bk and v b Buss
Mr. Pollock's r and t b Lyre beat Captain Rodin's f b b Nancy
Mr. Bayly's r b llythe beat Lord Beective's bk b Hatter Scotch
Mr. Pollock's r and t b Kate beat Captain Rodin's r b b The Dwarf

Second Tie.

Annaghmore beat Lyre | llythe beat Kate

Annaghmore and llythe divided the stakes.

THE CLONRANEY STAKES.

Mr. Bayly's w and r b Bess Neville beat Lord Beective's f b d Stilton
Captain Rodin's v and r d Spy beat Captain Rodin's r d Bearly
Mr. Pollock's f b d Scavenger beat Mr. Nicholson's lrd and v b Nameless Captain Rodin's lrd d Smoke beat Mr. Pollock's r d Little
Mr. James's r d South-wester beat Mr. Nicholson's r d North star
Mr. Bayly's bk b Bustle beat Mr. James's r b Zephyr

Second Tie.

Spy beat Bess Neville | Snake beat Scavenger

Third Tie.

Snake beat Spy | Bustle beat South-wester

Deciding Course.

Mr. Bayly's bk b Bustle beat Captain Rodin's bk d Snake, and won the stakes.

THE LOUGHCREW STAKES OF £18.

Mr. James's f b b Miss West beat Lord Beective's r b Bird's-eye
Lord Beective's r b Wimple beat Mr. Bayly's r b Rosponds
Mr. Bayly's r and t b Bright May beat Mr. James's r d Nor-wester

Second Tie.

Wimple beat Miss West | Bright May ran a lye

Deciding Course.

Mr. Bayly's r and t b Bright May beat Lord Beective's r b Wimple, and won the stakes.

MATCH £10, h. ft. Speed to the Hare.

Lord Beective's bk d Telegraph beat Mr. Pollock's r d Bostrolison.

MATCH £10, h. ft. One course.

Lord Beective's bk and t b Buss beat Mr. Bayly's r b Bird of Paradise.

BELLECK (CO. FERMANAGH) CLUB COURSING MEETING.—DECEMBER 15 and 16.

Stewards—Capt. Bloomfield, Jas. Johnson, Esq., John R. Dickson, Esq. Judge—Mr. Owens. Slipper—R. S. Lindsey, Esq.

PUPPY STAKES OF £2, 2s. each.

Mr. B. Stuart's f d Sardine beat Mr. Fox's r d Billy-the-hew
Mr. Wray's bk and v b Witch beat Mr. Dickson's r d Wolf
Mr. Anderson's lrd d Vengeance beat Mr. R. S. Lindsey's r b Linnet
Mr. Winder's bk b Woodbine beat Mr. Anderson's r and w b Lady

Second Tie.

Sardine beat Witch | Woodbine beat Vengeance

Deciding Course.

Sardine beat Woodbine, and won the Stakes

THE CASTLE CALDWELL STAKES. For all ages. £3, 5s. each.

Mr. Winder's bk b Blue beat Mr. Wray's r d Skirrip
Mr. Winder's b d d Luddah beat Mr. W. Johnston's lrd and v d Jack
Mr. Dickson's r d Go-lye beat Mr. Fox's lrd b Lady Bess
Mr. B. Stuart's r d Sorrel beat Mr. Fox's b d Walter
Mr. B. Stuart's f d Satyr a lye

Second Tie.

Go-lye beat Blue | Sorrel ran a lye

Third Tie.

Sorrel beat Luddah | Go-lye ran a lye

Deciding Course.

Sorrel, by Glencastle, dam Rosa, beat Go-lye, by Springy Jack, dam Ship-ney, and won the stakes

CONSOLATION STAKES OF £1, 5s. each.

Mr. Wray's bk and v b Witch beat Mr. Dickson's r d Wolf
Mr. W. Johnston's bk and v d Jack beat Mr. Wray's r d Skirrip
Mr. Fox's b b Lady Bess beat Mr. R. S. Lindsey's r b Linnet
Mr. Anderson's bk d Vengeance beat Mr. J. Johnson's f b Fen

Second Tie.

Witch beat Jack | Lady Bess beat Vengeance

In consequence of darkness the deciding course could not be run off, and the stake was divided.

LIMERICK COURSING CLUB.

TUESDAY and WEDNESDAY, December 19 and 20.

Stewards—William H. Harrington, James Spaight, Thomas Fobery, John Bayly, Jon., and Pierce G. Barton, Esqs. Honorary Treasurer and Secretary—James Marshall, Esq. Judge—William Owens, Esq. Slipper—Tom Saunders.

The members of this club met on the above dates at Glenstal Castle, the hospitable residence of Sir Matthew Harrington, Bart. The weather on both days was exceedingly fine, the attendance numerous and respectable, and the sport the best ever witnessed; the majority of the hares proving regular clippers, and in almost every instance beating the dogs. Appended is a return:—

THE GLENSTAL CUP.

Mr. Fosherry's b d d Humphrey May beat Mr. Clapp's b d d Prima Donna
Mr. Heeser's b d d Swiper beat Mr. Daniel's r and w b Sultan
Mr. Posherry's r b Bedlamite beat Mr. Whitehead's lrd b Bloomer
Mr. Posherry's r b Humble beat Mr. R. Westrop's r and w b Why-not.

Second Tie.

Swiper beat Humphrey May | Humble beat Bedlamite

Deciding Course.

Humble beat Swiper, and won the cup

THE TYRO STAKES.

Mr. Heeser's b d b Fleda beat Mr. Whitehead's w and bk d Sir Charles
Mr. Harrington's b d b Gold Dust beat Mr. Marshall's lrd d Tongest
Mr. R. Westrop's b d b Wild Irish Girl beat Mr. Massy's bk b Margaret

Second Tie.

Spaight's f b b Honey-moon ran a lye

Colonel Dickson's bk b Vestal absent

Second Tie.

Fleda beat Gold-dust | Honey-moon beat Wild Irish Girl

Deciding Course.

Fleda beat Honey-moon, and won the stakes

THE SELLING STAKES.

Mr. Daniel's r d Mickey Free beat Mr. Harrington's b d b Grace
Mr. Marshall's f b b Gossamer beat Mr. Massy's w and r b Marella
Mr. Harrington's b d b Alma beat Mr. Clapp's lrd b Laura Bell
Mr. Spaight's b b b Fleda beat Mr. Clapp's bk and w d Zonaro (late Carrick)

Second Tie.

Mickey Free beat Gossamer | Alma beat Fleda

Deciding Course.

Alma beat Mickey Free, and won the stakes.

CONSOLATION STAKES.

Mr. Harrington's Blooming-heather beat Mr. Marshall's Zouave
Mr. Fosherry's Humphrey May beat Mr. Daniel's Sultan
Mr. Westrop's Why-not beat Mr. Clapp's Prima Donna
Mr. Spaight's Sultan beat Mr. Massy's Mavorneen

Second Tie.

Humphrey May beat Blooming-heather

Deciding Course.

Why-not beat Humphrey May, and won the stakes

THE BRIDEKIRK COURSING was run on Tuesday, and was won by Mr. Jefferson's lrd Judge, beating Mr. Blackstock's Bartolozzi.

ASKHAM COURSING.—The Askham Coursing came off at Knipe Scur on the 15th inst. The Pique Stakes were won by Mr. Stockart's Hampton, beating Mr. James Sneath's King George. The All-Ago Stakes were won by Mr. Williamson's Judge, beating Mr. James Sneath's Uncle Bob.

SHOOTING.

[It is designed under this title to invite communication by our readers of whatever remarkable incidents may occur in their shooting experiences.]

GUN ADVENTURES.

SIR,—I rather doubt the safety of inviting from correspondents the communication of such remarkable incidents as may have occurred in their own shooting experiences; for some of them will be addicted to the long-bow, and may try to impose intruities on you and your readers; for as your correspondent "Dead Shot" says, one's friends are apt to think we are "humbug" when we tell our shooting stories. "Landing Rod" adds that such exploits are apt "to possess no general interest;" but, it must be borne in mind, that your papers will have an anxious perusal by many young sportsmen; and what may appear tedious and meretricious to older hands, may be very interesting to younger ones. I believe I have almost read everything pertaining to shooting; yet the extracts from the two new sporting works on Dogs and Shooting, which you have reviewed in your two last papers, are quite as refreshing to me as though I had not seen the ideas before; and depend upon it, on a careful perusal, something is to be learnt out of everything. Although "Dead Shot's" success borders on the Munchausen, still I, and many more sportsmen have met with similar occurrences. I have had a dead woodcock stolen for an instant by a weasel, but I recovered him. I have wounded a rabbit which has run out of a wood, and died on a turf field adjoining, been bitten in the head by a weasel, and I have trapped the weasel—all within half an hour. I have wounded a woodcock; the dogs, as I fancied, pointed him at the very spot where I marked his fall; a fresh cock got up, and I found the first cock dying thirty yards beyond the second. I have killed a hare with one barrel, and a brace of birds with another, at one rise, as it were. I have shot a hare and the dog has continued his point at a bird close by, without moving. I have seen a hare shot, another wounded and chased by a dog, who ran over another hare, and struck against her in her form, and all three hares were down together in the same field. I have seen a hawk killed off the top of a tree, at eighty measured yards from the foot of the tree. I once shot a hawk in the centre of one of our largest towns, whilst in pursuit of some pigeons. I have shot a hare with only three legs, and I never could find that the missing foreleg had any mark of having been trapped. I once killed two lantern bats, right and left, and two moles right and left. I have seen a woodcock fall and picked up; one of the party gave it to another to look at, and the bird flew clean away, though three barrels were sent after him. I found a lost woodcock a week after it was killed, hanging in a bush. A hundred other such experiences could be narrated, no doubt by experienced sportsmen, and I could enumerate many more myself—sed. ante prescribere longum est.

UMDRA.

CHANGING OF GUNS.

MR. EDITOR,—My habit is to shoot with a different gun every day, by way of experiment, and observation as to weight, length of barrel, amount of charge, &c. I said to a keeper, the other day—"Joe, I never knew how to shoot before till to-day." "Sir," said he, "shooting is like marriage—if you are changeable, you must be erratic." A clever observation, worthy of record; never be after changing your guns for whim's sake. Stand by your guns; and stick to one, and to one only, provided it be a good one.

UMDRA.

SNIPER SHOOTING.

To the Editor of THE FIELD.

SIR,—I send you a short account of my snipe-shooting in the hope that sportsmen in other parts of the country may be induced to do the same—the object being to ascertain the habits and haunts of the bird. On Monday, 11th December, found and killed three whole snipes; Tuesday, 12th, found three jacks and three whole snipes, and killed five; the last bird rose wild, and was not fired at; Wednesday, 13th, found and killed two jacks and one whole snipe; on Thursday, Friday, Saturday, not a snipe to be seen. During the week the weather has continued mild and open, and the ground, apparently, in excellent order; wind from the westward, and the moon waning. Monday, 18th the weather having changed to rough and stormy, with mingled showers of rain, snow, and sleet, and the wind having veered round to north-east—I took a walk in the hope of finding a duck; rather to my own surprise, I found and killed two snipes.

It has occurred to me since I wrote my last letter to you, that perhaps the snipes—which are so numerous on this coast in the autumn and early winter, and so scarce afterwards—may be fresh arrivals, taking a few days' rest after their journey, previous to dispersing themselves for the winter over the face of the country. If this be so, it goes far towards correcting a popular error respecting the habits of the jack snipe, and reconciling the observations quoted in my former letter with the facts of the case. The author of the "Journal of a Naturalist" is evidently an able, as well as an amiable, man; and most of his readers have, no doubt, acquiesced in the propriety of his observations on the jack snipe, as corroborated by their own experience; and I, myself, had no idea that the jack snipe was anything but an "anchorite from choice," until within the last three years. I am now convinced that his solitary habits are the result of necessity, not choice, and I account for them in the following manner:—The bill of the jack snipe is not only a great deal shorter than that of the large snipe, but also much softer—the naturalist, I think, calls it "spongy." They are restricted, then, by these circumstances in the choice of feeding-ground, and obliged to confine themselves to those spots so well known to the sportsman, where a roll of water keeps the ground constantly moist, and the coarse herbage thus produced affords convenient shelter. This explanation is rendered the more probable by the following:—In India, where I have shot thousands of snipe, I do not remember to have seen more than two jacks. In that country we have no trickling rills and running ditches, and the evaporation is so rapid of the standing water, that the surface of the ground speedily becomes too hard for them; thus they have, no doubt, discovered long ago, and have forsaken the country in consequence.

I resume my hints to young snipe-shooters, and I would particularly call their attention to the safety-guard. Nobody should use a double gun that is not provided with one; but everybody does not know that any respectable gun-maker, even in the provinces, will fit one to a gun that has it not, in two or three days, and at a trifling expense. I should say, that even under the most untoward circumstances of a long "break off," and trigger-plate to be altered, that the charge would not exceed a sovereign; but whatever the cost, it should be done without loss of time. By this one contrivance the accidents from fire-arms would be reduced one half; for who does not sometimes forget to make the second barrel safe before he re-loads the first; and who has not read of fingers and hands blown off in consequence? Should any one who reads this meet with an accident of this kind hereafter, it will be small consolation to reflect that it might have been prevented by the outlay of a few shillings.

I have seen a gun lately, by an eminent London maker with two safeties upon it. This I call carrying caution to an extreme—one I consider indispensable, but one is quite enough.

And now, to conclude my hints. Almost all the shots within the range of the gun that are missed, are missed in consequence of firing behind and under the game. These, then, are the two grand difficulties to be overcome by all young shooters, and especially by the snipe-shooter. The remedy on paper is simple enough. It is to fire high enough and well forward. To apply this simple rule effectually requires a great deal of practice, and when it is done, it turns the bad shot into a good one. One of the most difficult shots that can occur, and one that happens frequently, is that of a snipe rising rather will—say thirty or thirty-five yards from the gunner—and going away low without turning either to the right or left. I should say that an inexperienced shot will stand a better chance of killing him by firing quick at the ground full ten feet in front of him, than he will by taking aim at the bird. If this should seem incredible, I can only again recommend it to be tried a few times. The young snipe-shooter cannot use a better-sized shot than No. 10—it will kill with certainty at fifty yards, but is not fit for anything else; therefore, if there is a probability of meeting with any other species of game, No. 8 should be used. I need hardly remind him of the importance of constant practice; and fieldfars, redwings, blackbirds, and larks, will always afford plenty of opportunities.—I am, &c., LOADING ROD.

PATRIOTIC SPORTING.—Lord Ward, with some of his friends commenced shooting on the Hurcott Manor, on Friday last, the game which he intends to send to our soldiers in the Crimea. There were eight guns; and at the close of the day's warfare the result was the death of 336 hares, 140 rabbits, 78 pheasants, 3 partridges, and 1 woodcock; total, 558. On the following day his lordship, with Sir J. S. Pakington, Bart., and others, had a day's shooting for the same object on the Witley estates. There were nine guns; and the day's sport yielded 188 hares, 123 rabbits, and 103 pheasants, making a total of 414; and of both days, 972.

GOOD SPORT.—At Kimbolton a few days ago, two gentlemen, with two gamekeepers, in the Duke of Manchester's preserve, bagged in the course of three or four hours 85 head—namely, 58 hares, 11 pheasants, 15 rabbits, and 1 woodcock.

CASTLE DONINGTON.—PIGEON SHOOTING.—On Monday, the match (which has for the last few weeks been the principal topic in the sporting circle in this place) for the fat pig, fell by Mr. William Hardy, at the Bell and Crown Inn, came off in a field belonging to Mr. Briggs, in the presence of a large concourse of spectators. The shooting was not considered first-rate. The gentlemen who killed all their birds were Mr. Daft of Nottingham, and Mr. Noon of Milton, who agreed to halve the prize, or rather to receive £16 from Mr. Hardy, and allow him to keep the pig. On the following day another match came off between Mr. John Kilbourne of Lockington, and Mr. Stenson, of Ambaston, for £5, at five birds each, the former giving one bird, when Mr. Kilbourne was declared the winner. After which several minor matches came off.

CRICKET.

OUR GLANCE AT THE SEASON 1854.

NO. IV.

We resume our glances at the doings of the year. On Monday, the 19th of June, the M.C.C. were arrayed at "Lord's," in opposition to the county of Sussex—the Eleven of that county having been selected by Mr. Tredcroft, upon whose ground, at Hove, the return match, as will be seen when we have reached the proper period, was played. Sussex won by four wickets—the respective scores being—M.C.C., 77 and 134, or 211; Sussex, 152 and 60, or 212, with four wickets yet to go in. On the one side Mr. Haygarth made 10 and 28; Royston, 1 and 21; Hon. S. Ponsbury, 12 and 7; Mr. Nicholson, 16 and 12; Adams, 10 and 8; Grundy, 6 and 17; and Mr. Drake, 8 and 12; and then the club scored 11 byes—a large number for so high a class match. Upon the other side the main scores were obtained by J. Challen, jun., 37 and 1; Box, 34 and 4; John Lillywhite, 7 and 33 (not out); Dean, 18 and 2; Wisden, 16 and 0; Mr. Tredcroft, 13; G. Wells, 10; and Mr. Curtis, 1 and 10 (not out). In this instance, the slow bowling of Mr. Drake, in the second innings, played sad and effective havoc with the Sussex. Not any of them made a stand against it but Mr. Curtis and John Lillywhite. The following Thursday, the 22nd inst., the return match with the "Undergraduates of Cambridge" commenced at "Lord's," but the students were vanquished by 9 wickets, notwithstanding they had the benefit of Mr. Drake's bowling; but he was not at all times to the mark, and so the large total of the M.C.C. The final amounts were—Cambridge, 153 and 78, or 231; M.C.C., 209 and 24, or 233, with 9 wickets to the good. For the University, Mr. A. E. Ward contributed 45 and 1; Mr. G. Cayley, 37 and 0; Mr. J. McCannick, 5 and 25; Mr. E. Blore, 14 and 4; Mr. C. Ingram, 14 and 10; Mr. R. Fitzgerald, 6 and 10; Mr. J. Weston, 10 and 3 (not out). For Marylebone the doubles were gained by Mr. F. Walker, 42; Hon. R. Grimston, 35; Mr. G. Barker, 31; Hon. D. Campbell, 28; Dean, 24; Mr. F. Dugmore, 17; the Earl of Stamford, 13; and Mr. J. Walker, 13. Taking the Cambridge bowling from beginning to end, it was far from what it should have been. At times it could not have been much worse, and one effect was that the interest of the event was very considerably lessened. Monday, the 26th of this month, had been appointed for a match with Kent, under a novelty of character. For many years the Kent and England match has constituted one of the two great attractions of the cricket season at Lord's, but it has been found during the last year or two that, whilst age or accidents have weakened the play of some of the best of Kent, there has been an absence of any very great talent exhibited by the majority of the new blood which has from time to time been infused into her Eleven. Thus it occurred to the committee of the Marylebone Club, that rather than not have Kent up, they would arrange a match, so that she should have four players given; and the proposition having, as was understood, been agreed to on the part of Kent, the match was duly announced in the M.C.C. list. There being some difficulty in the way, however, another contest was put up for the 26th, in the form of "The Gentlemen of the Marylebone Club v. the Gentlemen of England," and in this way a novelty was continued. The occasion gave rise to a considerable amount of betting. The Gentlemen of England proved too much for their antagonists, and eventually won by 19 runs. The totals were—England 55 and 156, or 211; M.C.C., 77 and 85, or 162. The double numbers were thus contributed:—England—Mr. Sumner, 1 and 10; Mr. Blore, 16 and 12; Mr. C. Lane, 15 and 0; Mr. E. Napier, 17 and 8; Mr. Kempson, 1 and 10; Mr. H. Andrews, 0 and 36 (not out); Mr. H. Marshall, 0 and 22; Mr. W. Leake, 1 and 22; and Mr. W. Napier, 1 and 21. M.C.C.—Mr. F. Walker, 25 and 9; Mr. H. Vernon, 15 and 0; Mr. E. Drake, 8 and 11; and Mr. P. Knight, 7 and 38.

On Thursday, the 29th of June, the M.C.C. were face to face at Lord's with the Gentlemen of Rugby School. It proved to be a one-handed matter, for some of the former did much as they pleased with the bowling of the latter gentlemen. Indeed, the two first wickets, Messrs. P. Knight and Adams, obtained no fewer than 67 ere they were parted. The club marked up a total of 197, in which were as many as 5 double scores; namely, those of Mr. Knight, who contributed 46; of Mr. E. T. Drake, 41; of the Hon. C. E. Leigh, 25; of Mr. Haygarth, 24; and of Adams, 24. To these were added the most objectionable score to the eye of a good cricketer—byes, &c., 21. The Rugby first hands produced 87, and this against the bowling of Messrs. Drake and Nixon. Mr. W. Kempson headed the list in a numerical point of view, 37 being the amount of his offering. The only other two-figured score was the 14 by Mr. Sale. At the conclusion of this innings the gentlemen of Rugby were 109 in the minority, and so they had to follow their hands. In their efforts upon the second occasion, they yielded 81, or 6 less than before; and thus, having accumulated a gross total of not more than 168, they retired losers in one innings by 29 runs.

Monday, July 3, saw the representatives of our two universities pitted in opposition to each other at Lord's. In the course of the contest there was some admirable play exhibited; but Oxford were too strong for the eleven who came against them, and therefore they carried off the laurels of victory in one innings by 8 runs; the respective scores being—Cambridge, 70 and 60, or 130; Oxford, 138. The double numbers were as follow:—For Cambridge, Mr. McCormick, 0 and 10; Mr. E. T. Drake, 10 and 3; Mr. H. Perkins, 5 and 27; Mr. Tremlett, 18 and 0; and Mr. C. Fryer, 10 and 0. For Oxford, Mr. E. Bateman yielded 40; Mr. W. Fellowes, 33; and Mr. E. Willes, 14. On the Thursday in this week the return match with the latter university and the Marylebone Club came on; but the play was damaged by the unpropitious weather which reigned during its progress. In the first innings the M.C.C. had the advantage by 38 runs; whilst, when the final Oxonian wicket fell, that advantage was found to have been increased to 45, by which amount the representatives of Oxford were vanquished. The double scores were contributed for the M.C.C. by the Hon. R. Grimston, 34 and 2; Mr. J. Walker, 21 and 6; Mr. A. Wilson, 23 and 0; Grundy, 12 and 8; Mr. J. M. Fuller, 17 and 7; Mr. Haygarth, 10 and 15; Mr. McCormick, 4 and 14; and Royston, 4 and 14. In the first hands of the club, the Oxford men presented them, by bad play, with a bonus of 25, under the item of byes and wides. But for this result in the play, the latter would have lost by that number less. They would then have been beaten by 20, and not 45—a termination which would have presented a more graceful appearance in the university records of the doings of her elevens in these matches.

NEAN Kenosha, Wisconsin, a drunken man was a short time ago literally devoured by hogs while lying in the road in a state of beastly intoxication. His bones and a few remnants of his clothes were found.

Consumption when well developed has hitherto been considered incurable but latterly this dreadful disease in its worst form has yielded to the curative influence of Du Barry's Health restoring Revalenta Arabica Food; the following letter from the celebrated Dr. Oris will be read with interest:—"Magdeburg, 16 Sept., 1853. My wife, having suffered for years from a pulmonary complaint, became so ill at the beginning of this year, that I looked daily for her dissolution. The remedies which hitherto had relieved her, remained now without effect, and the ulcerations of the lungs and night sweats debilitated her fearfully. It was in this, evidently the last and hopeless stage of pulmonary consumption, when every medicine remained powerless in even affording temporary relief—that I was induced by a medical brother from Hanover, who makes pulmonary consumption his special study, and treats it with Du Barry's Revalenta Arabica, to try this strengthening and restorative food, and I am happy to be able to express my astonishment at its effects. My poor wife is now in as perfect a state of health as ever she was, attending to her household affairs and quite bappy. It is with pleasure and the most sincere gratitude to God for the restoration of my wife, that I fulfil my duty of making the extraordinary efficacy of Du Barry's Revalenta, in so fearful a complaint, known; and to recommend it to all other sufferers.—Grim, M.D." More ample details than our space permits will be found in Messrs. Du Barry's advertisements.

YACHTING.

NOTICE.

All Fixtures, Reports, Intelligence, or Communications relating to Yachting are requested to be addressed to "the Editor of THE FIELD, at the Office, 408, Strand."

HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE.

MORN.	EVEN.	MORN.	EVEN.
Dec. 23, Saturday	4.14	4.49	7.53
" 24, Sunday	4.9	5.34	8.25
" 25, Monday	6.0	6.23	8.53
" 26, Tuesday	6.52	7.49	9.11

To find High Water at the subjoined places, take the above time at London Bridge and add or subtract the time in the following Table.

SUBTRACT FROM LONDON BRIDGE.		ADD TO LONDON BRIDGE.
M.	M.	M.	M.
Brighton	3 6	Harwich	3 37
Bournemouth	2 4	Ipswich	2 7
Calais	2 19	Lowestoft	3 37
Chester Bar	3 37	Margate	3 9
Cornwall	3 33	Needles	4 22
Dublin	2 55	Norwich	0 58
Hover Pier	2 57	Ostend	1 13
Bournemouth	4 31	Portsmouth	2 37
Greenwich	0 37	Ramsgate	3 47
Greenwich	2 22	Shoeburyness	3 52
Greenwich	0 29	Southampton	3 57
Havre	4 15	Spilhead	4 37
Amsterdam	0 55	Hammer, mih.	3 33
Antwerp	1 18	Land's End	2 31
Brest	1 39	Lisbon	0 15
Malaga	3 53	Lisbon	3 35
Cherbourg	5 21	Lyons	3 38
Alger	4 53	Lyons	3 38
Cork	9 24	Rotterdam	0 53
Dover	3 38	Torbay	3 35
Weymouth	4 18	Weymouth	4 33
Plymouth	5 22	Whitby	1 39
Glasgow	4 23	Wibaux	5 52
Hamburg	3 53	Yonghal	5 52

CLUB MEETINGS, 1854.

December 27 (Wednesday).—Full Meeting of the Lilley Club, being the last for the year 1854.

THE NEW YEAR, 1855.

January 2.—Meeting of the Royal Mersey Yacht Club.
January 11.—Annual Ball of the Prince of Wales Yacht Club, at the Freemasons' Tavern.
February 14.—Annual Balls of the Royal London Yacht Club, at Willis's Rooms; and of the Royal Thames Yacht Club, at the Hanover Square Rooms.

ROYAL LONDON YACHT CLUB.

The monthly meeting of this club was held on Monday last, at the Caledonian Hotel, at which the treasurer, G. C. Eagle, Esq., presided. The minutes of the last meeting having been read and confirmed, and ten candidates ballotted for, and elected members of the club, Mr. Crookford proposed, seconded by Mr. Van de Wall, that Thomas Selby Egan, Esq., the editor of the aquatic department of Bell's Life, should be elected an honorary member of the club, which was carried unanimously. The following gentlemen were appointed stewards for the annual ball, which is to take place at Willis's Rooms, St. James's, on the 14th of February next, viz.:—

The Commodore.	Mr. Thos. Hoskins.
Vice-Commodore.	Mr. R. P. Mouk.
The Rev. T. A. Cooke.	Mr. E. Stanley Phillips.
Mr. Under-sheriff Croxley.	Mr. J. W. Stanbridge.
Mr. Edwin Croxley.	Mr. Rd. Tress.
Mr. C. F. Farmer.	Mr. Jno. Wilkinson.
Mr. Wm. Goodson.	Mr. R. H. Wood.

with power to add to their number, if thought proper. From the great satisfaction which the last ball gave to the visitors, as well as to the general body of members, a large attendance is anticipated.

The treasurer mentioned that there was a considerable balance at the club bankers, more than was needed for the purposes of the club, and recommended that £100 of it should be invested in Three-per-cent. Consols, which was agreed to.

Mr. Richard Tress stated that it had been the intention of a few of the members of the club privately to present a testimonial to the commodore, but that it soon became known amongst the members generally; many complained that they had not been acquainted with it; and the subscriptions came in so rapidly, that it was thought necessary to make it a club matter, he would, therefore, move—"That the members of this club, in acknowledgment of their gratitude to their commodore, James Goodson, Esq., for the valuable services rendered by him to this club, and for his uniform and gentlemanly conduct, do present him with a testimonial, and that a subscription list be open until the 21st of January next, for such purpose, and that no sum be received from any one member exceeding one guinea;" which proposition was carried by acclamation in the most enthusiastic manner. The following gentlemen were appointed to act as the committee, viz.:—

Capt. W. S. Andrews, V.C.	Mr. G. C. Eagle.
Mr. Rd. Claxton.	Mr. R. P. Mouk.
Mr. Wm. Claxton.	Mr. E. Stanley Phillips.
Mr. H. N. Claxton.	Mr. J. W. Stanbridge.
Mr. J. Crookford.	Mr. Richard Tress.
Mr. Under-sheriff Croxley.	Mr. P. Van de Wall.

Mr. Crookford, on behalf of the sailing committee, gave notice of several alterations in the club rules, which will come on for discussion at the next meeting. The treasurer, Mr. G. C. Eagle, also gave notice that the sailing committee would shortly bring the subject of shifting ballast and sliding keels under the notice of the club.

A vote of thanks having been passed to the annual dinner committee, and several gentlemen having been placed on the list for ballot, the meeting adjourned.

ROYAL MERSEY YACHT CLUB.

The annual club ball of this club went off with much éclat on the 6th of December last. The proceeds were given to the Royal Patriotic Fund, and produced upwards of £250. Mr. Lyun was presented by the committee of stewards with a handsome and massive silver snuff-box, with a suitable inscription, in testimony of his great liberality in supplying the refreshments gratuitously for the occasion. A similar testimonial will also be given to Mr. Gribbin, the band-master, for like services.

PRINCE OF WALES YACHT CLUB.

The monthly conversazione of this club was held at the club-house on Friday, the 15th inst., the treasurer, Percival Turner, Esq., presiding. Mr. Ditchburn attended, though at great personal inconvenience, suffering still from the effects of his late accident.

He introduced his subject by stating that a serious loss, both as regards life and property, was annually inflicted on the nation by shipwrecks; and he proposed to consider, first, the moral and physical causes; and, as the subject required a considerable degree of elucidation in extenso, he should merely confine his observations this evening to addressing the members on the nature of those laws, both moral, physical, and organic, which regulated the natural course of events, and the disobedience of which caused most of those disasters of which mortal man complained. He then proceeded most forcibly to impress on his audience the necessity, in all things, of obeying those wise and simple laws of nature which Providence had laid down for man's guidance; and he promised to illustrate the subject further, in continuation, at a future meeting, of which due notice will be given.

Now that the conversations are commenced again for the winter, we hope to see a full attendance of members.

BOSTON YACHT CLUB.

The closing supper of this club for the season was held at the club-house, White Hart Hotel, Boston, on Thursday, the 14th: Vice-Commodore Wilkinson in the chair. A very pleasant evening was passed. The supper was served in most excellent manner. Mr. Jas. A. Bontoft, the secretary, produced a statement of the accounts, from which it appeared that the expenditure and receipts were pretty nearly on a balance, and as there are several items in the expenditure incidental to the establishment of the club, which will not occur again, the finances may be stated to be in a flourishing condition. The number of members on the books is nearly 100, and there is no doubt next season will greatly increase this number, as the taste for yachting is rapidly spreading in Lincolnshire.

PRINCE OF WALES MODEL YACHT CLUB.

The usual monthly meeting of this club took place last Monday, instead of the 25th, the day originally fixed for it. The members and friends of the club attended on that night to meet the commodore, W. Ackroyd, and vice-commodore, J. Ackroyd, previous to their departure for Australia, as this was the last opportunity they would have of testifying their respect for those well-known and able model yacht sailors and builders.

THE NEW ROYAL STEAM YACHT.—By command of her Majesty, the new Royal Steam Yacht now nearly ready for launching at Pembroke is to be named the Victoria and Albert, and the present Victoria and Albert is to have her name changed to The Osborne.

The French royal steam-yacht La Reine Hortense arrived at Southampton on Thursday last, to tow the French sailing ship, Samroo, now loading in Southampton Docks with wooden huts for the French army at Balaklava. The Samroo will take out between 300 and 400 huts, sufficient to house nearly 10,000 soldiers.

ANGLING.

[We shall be glad to receive any angling information from secretaries of angling clubs, if they will be kind enough to forward it as early as possible to the Editor.]

NETTING MADE DIFFICULT.

EVERY true lover of our sport must, at times, have regretted the wholesale spoliation which is carried on by means of drag-nets, flues, and such other abominations. Various plans have been devised to hinder the poacher from his unlawful practices, and to prevent his attempts from being successful; but these have chiefly failed on account of indicating where the preventive measure was placed; take, for instance, the common system of staking a piece of water, and we shall see how useless is that practice. A certain portion of the water, well known to be the deepest, either in running streams or still waters, is marked out as eligible for a breeding-place, or shelter for the fish, and some one is deputed to fix into the ground, at regular intervals, a large quantity of stakes, the heads of which, sometimes, are under water, but more usually are left exposed. Now, if the spot staked be in a navigable river, something really formidable must be erected, similar to an Indian or Burmese stockade; but if it be only in a stream, the precaution of strength is not allowed to apply, and all that a few men, determined to have a haul of fish, need do, is to devote two or three hours pulling up the stakes; and what is there to hinder their doing so? Absolutely nothing. Strength of construction there is none; one man fixed them, another can dislodge them; and so it goes on, from day to day and year to year, without a practical remedy, and the fish are harassed, if escaping the net, from one place to another; while the angler may try all his cunning, skill, and craft, without effect, for the finny tribe have become shy, dispersed, and in bad condition. "Well!" exclaims some reader, "and what is to be done to lessen the mischief?" We will tell him. Now that anglers are generally warmly housed, let those who take an interest in the preservation of fish adopt a method which we saw in use last summer. Some old casks were procured, and about half-filled with bricks, and then headed up; in the sides there had previously been driven some sixty or seventy tenter-hooks, clenched inside the barrel, and about eight of those were distributed over something approaching to five and six acres of water: then came the trial; nets were brought, and dragging commenced, when one of these barrels was caught by the net. Pull which way they could, pull as hard as men could pull, the barrel, once caught, rolled round and round, tearing and further entangling its hooks in the meshes of the net at every motion. Suffice it to say, such an obstinate hold had the hooks on the net, that after a good hours' pulling and humouring the cords were let go and drawn through to the other side, the barrel taken up, and a net, or rather the fragments of such a net appeared, that no human ingenuity could render it of any further avail. This trial, which we witnessed, proved beyond a doubt the possibility of preserving any extent of water by such means, and has the further advantages over the stake system, i.e., one person need only know where the barrels are immersed, no five men, as we saw, could draw the barrel out of the water, except by using the cord which had been made fast to it for that purpose, all attempt with the net, or lines of the net, being perfectly futile. The cost is so trifling that no one can demur to it: tar-barrels are cheap; enough everywhere, loose rubbish can be had, and the expense of those we saw put down was stated to be two shillings and tenpence each—an amount, we feel perfectly sure, no one interested in any portion of a water would begrudge, and which, if thus expended, would return him an interest far beyond our calculation, by frustrating the practice of illegal netting, and so far crippling the poacher in his chief weapon—his net—as to make him chary of his visits to a water so protected.

OLD HICKORY.

THE FISHERY LAWS.

To the Editor of THE FIELD.

SIR,—Having but just returned from the Crimea I have not had an opportunity of seeing THE FIELD. I am, however, exceedingly glad to learn, through your columns, that that eminent naturalist, Mr. Henry Marshall, has intimated his intention of causing a bill to be introduced in the House of Commons, for the purpose of restoring our Salmon Fisheries.

As I happen to know that THE FIELD is read by several Members of Parliament, and nearly every master of fox-hounds, I sincerely hope you will bring your influence to bear upon the Government, to induce them to pass the bill. There is no one better qualified to prepare this bill than Mr. Marshall. He is practically acquainted with the habits and requirements of the salmon; and as he is not peculiarly interested in the fate of the bill, his motives for preparing it are fully appreciated and admired by all naturalists and admirers of the gentle art.

In speaking of the imperfect state of the fishing laws, Mr. Ransbottom remarks:—"Let us suppose that in a single river 5,000 grilse—the whole of which, be it remembered, have never propagated their species—are annually caught by the present statute net. If permitted to spawn, 2,500 females will deposit 12,500,000 ova; and, since calculations in connection with the yield of the Tay have shown that about one in every thousand ova arrives at maturity, it follows that, if instead of being prematurely destroyed, they were preserved for breeding purposes, 12,500 salmon, fit for food, would, in due time, be the result."

Those members of the House who will support this bill will receive universal thanks from thousands of poor people who never tasted salmon in their lives.

I enclose my card, and am, Sir, yours, &c.,

J. S.

SALMON FISHERIES.—It will be remembered how singularly unsuccessful the angling in the lower waters of the Ness turned out to be last season, notwithstanding that thousands of salmon and grilse were seen playing about the mouth of the river, and that the net-fishing in Loch Ness was unusually prolific. When put up for auction last week, no offer was made to take the fishings. The upset price was first £60, being £12 less than the rent paid last year, and was then reduced to £50. No offer was made, and the letting was postponed.—Inverness Courier.

BRECON RIVER USK FISHERIES.—The exertions of the association in detecting and preventing offences against the salmon laws are most satisfactory; a very large number of fish have been seen on the "buries," and many of them, owing to the favourableness of the season, have already finished their spawning. By thoroughly protecting salmon during the fence-months, what an incalculable improvement in our fisheries must take place!

SALMON BREEDING.—The interesting experiment made by the proprietors of the Tay salmon fishings upon the ova of that fish is reported to be proceeding most favourably. At a meeting of the proprietors, held a few days ago, it was stated that, on the 22nd of December, the breeding-boxes contained about 400,000 ova; these, having been carefully protected, gave birth, in March and April, to swarms of parr, which have been nourished with great care and attention, and are now beginning to reach the size and assume the silvery appearance of the salmon smolt; next season they will probably be allowed to go down to the sea with their brethren, born in the freer and less carefully tended breeding-places selected by the parent fish themselves; and then the success of the experiment will be tested by observing whether the increase in the number of grilse and salmon corresponds with the increased supply of smolt turned into the river. At the same meeting, the proprietors resolved to close the fishing season in the Tay by the 26th of August in place of the 14th of September, the present statutory period. It is sincerely to be hoped that all these various devices will have the desired effect of restoring the salmon fishings to something like their former success and value.

CARLISLE DISTRICT ANGLING ASSOCIATION.—Last week a numerous and influential meeting of the members of this association was held in the Town Hall. The chairman (W. N. Hodgson, Esq.) stated that the meeting had for its object the preservation of the fisheries in the river Eden, and the adoption of some measures for the purpose of better preserving the salmon when in its young state, whether as fry or whiting. The report, which was unanimously adopted, set forth that the endeavours of the association to protect the fisheries had hitherto been successful. Several resolutions, in accordance with the objects of the meeting, having been put and carried the re-election of officers took place, and the business of the meeting concluded.

FIELD SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

TROTTER MATCH.—A trotting match for £100 a-side has lately been made between Mr. Levy's Bohtail and Mr. Bebbington's Charley, both of Manchester, to come off on the 29th of January next; distance five miles. Mr. Levy is to have the choice of ground, and Mr. Bebbington the choice of ends. The weight to commence with is to be 12st. each, in addition to which Charley will have to carry 7lb extra for every inch he stands higher than Bobtail, which we understand is rather more than four inches, and, consequently, Charley's extra weight will be upwards of 28lb.

A BOLD ADVENTURER.—The gamekeeper in the employ of W. E. Matthews, Esq., of Gnatou Hall, happened a few days ago to spy a peregrine falcon in the act of getting the mastery over a gull on the ground, when he stepped hastily forward, and on putting his foot on him secured the prize. This affords a convincing proof of the boldness and intrepidity of this species of the falcon tribe, as well as the uninterrupted avidity with which they seize their prey.

BALAKLAVA.—A correspondent says: "I wish to God some lovers of horses in dear old England could come to our cavalry camp and see the manner in which our men must feed and treat the noble beasts, which are so dear to us all, and which are also very dear to the country. Stables of course are not to be had in camps; the rains of late have been heavy, and the wretched animals stand up to their ankles in deep pools of mud, slush, and water. These pools are to them heds and mangers. The hay is (and must be) thrown on the ground, and gets into their stomachs saturated with mud. But that is not all. The old nose-bags are used up—rotted into shreds by constant use and exposure—and the rations of barley must be thrown on the ground, where they half swim, half sink in the puddles; so that the chargers have the advantage of swallowing meat and drink at once and the same time. Why fresh nose-bags have not been provided by those whom it concerns to provide them, is a question which none but a novice in this campaign would ask. Why is everything done for the best, in the best possible manner, and with great care and ostentation, and why, when it comes to the scratch, is there always a screw loose somewhere, so that the affair falls to pieces the moment you attempt to work it, or gets locked in the wheels, or does something wonderful it was never meant to do! The man who would ask that question had better make up his mind to pause very long for a reply."

THE SPORTSMAN'S LIBRARY.

Fish and Fishing in the Lone Glens of Scotland. By Dr. KNOX. London: Routledge and Co.

Is there not in the very title of this book something that makes the angler's heart hum within him? A lone glen, a stream dashing down the rocky defile, bounding into the valley, there moving more soberly, as if taking breath after its rapid run down the hill-side, its surface broken here and there by boulders that have stood in its path for centuries, parting the waters, which murmur but obey—now whirling into huge boiling eddies, now almost sleeping in a deep black hole, and anon bubbling with a merry song over some broad shallow, where every ripple is turned into molten silver by the sunlight. Then again, diving into the dark recesses of the hills, it is lost to sight amid overhanging woods, where the angler cannot follow, but may only dream of the treasures of the deep that slumber there secure from his devices.

Yes; Scotland is the angler's paradise. If you doubt it, read Mr. Knox's account of fish and fishing there. If you have the means and the opportunity, follow his example!

We will endeavour to give you some idea of its attractions, as described by Mr. Knox, and if we don't tempt some of our readers to seize their rods and their carpet bags, and take the train to Scotland, when spring comes, and away into the lone glens, we shall be much surprised—they are not the enthusiasts we take them to be.

According to Mr. Knox there are three kinds of salmon in the rivers and lakes of Scotland: 1st, the salmon trout, or trout proper; 2nd, the sea trout; 3rd, the true salmon. He tells us how we may distinguish them, chiefly by the teeth, but into these details we have not space to enter. They must be sought in his book.

Of the trout, Scotland produces no less than seven kinds: 1st, the dark-spotted lake trout; 2nd, the red-spotted estuary trout—both of which have pink-coloured flesh, and are excellent eating; 3rd, the red-spotted common river trout, with pale flesh, and tasteless; 4th, the pink-coloured red-spotted common river trout; 5th, the parr trout; 6th, the dark-spotted river trout; and 7th, the great lake trout of the north.

You should go well-prepared with all necessary equipments. The matériel is as important in angling as in war. This should be

AN ANGLER'S KIT.

A short salmon rod, reel and line, from fifty to sixty feet is the best. It must have some spare tops enclosed in the butt. A basket somewhat longer than those in general use. A book containing tackle of every description used in fly, worm, and minnow fishing; choice of flies. Lastly, wrapped up in a waterproof bag, hose, and wading shoes. The suit of clothes he wears, made of Scottish plaiding, is quite enough. In his pockets he will place a few extras, not forgetting a knife and pair of scissors. Of waterproof clothing, I know but little; for, in the first place, none I have ever tried proved to be waterproof. And yet I could fancy a small cape useful, if light and not cumbersome.

And again,

Beware of attempting an unknown glen without some food in your basket. These lone glens are exceedingly deceptive, and might well overtake you, long before you reach the desired resting-place. I speak not of Highland glens, those of the Lammermuir and Cheviot are lonely and wild enough. Poach not over the same streams, but go boldly forward to new scenery and deeper pools. Leave nothing to be done at the water side, but have your tackle ready and in the best order. He is a poor soldier whose flint is in his pocket on first getting sight of the enemy. It answers, I have been told, well enough in Ireland and in the Highlands of Scotland, where nothing is in its place, and nothing is done in the right time. But it neither suits Scotland nor England, as the reader, if an Englishman, must oft have discovered to his cost.

A good angler is over ready and prompt, never late, never careless, and if anxious, he must take care to conceal his anxiety from trout and men.

Mr. Knox found in Scotland, what doubtless our readers have found everywhere, that

THE TROUT IS AFRAID OF THUNDER.

When I first fished this stream (the water of Leith) in the company of the best of anglers, I was a very young angler. My friend pointed out to me the ground, recommending me to keep well back and to lose no time. In a few minutes three admirable trout lay on the bank, when suddenly all sport ceased. I could not comprehend what had happened. My friend now returned from the upper part of the stream which he had selected for his ground, and told me I might put up my rod and prepare for the road; pointing, at the same time, to a dark and lowering cloud of an inky hue collecting over Pentland's summit. It was a thundercloud—over it came, wind, rain, lightning, thunder. Then I remembered Scott's "Lady of the Lake," which was just published. Pity it ever was.

"The springing trout lies still;
So darkly lowers yon thunder cloud,
Which swallows as with a purple shroud
Heaven's distant hill."

Often, subsequently, have I observed this singular phenomenon, the explanation of which is as obscure as all other physiological laws. Why should fish—trout, at least—dread thunder? The more strange that it is in certain fishes we find that wonderful electrical apparatus connecting in so remarkable a way the laws of the electric fluid with those which regulate the nerves and brain of man.

According to Mr. Knox

TROUT HAVE BAD SIGHT.

The sight of trout cannot be very good. In stormy weather ruffling the waters strongly, and in heavy rain, you may stand by the river side and take as many trout as you like, in still reaches, where there are neither rocks nor perceptible straws. The same happens in cloudy, stormy, windy weather, when the waters are clear. Along the base of Mountjoy, on the Whitwater, there is a long still reach, as straight as a canal, which, unless the waters be dark and flooded, no angler would think of fishing; for, as in walking along the banks he can see the trout, it is natural to suppose that they also see him; nevertheless, in heavy winds, though weather and river be clear, I have fished this reach with much success, taking many good-sized trout.

He is right. When a trout is lying or sailing to and fro under a bank, you may look at him within a yard or so, and he will snail on and take the flies upon the water as calmly and majestically as if you were invisible, instead of staring him full in the face. This is

THE TIME FOR FISHING IN SCOTLAND.

I have ever preferred angling in summer and in autumn, though well aware that April and May fishings are excellent. The trouts are ready, and have got, or are getting, into good order; but the land is not, and the forests are black and leafless. In April and in May the ground is drear, and cold, and black in Scotland, and even in England. I prefer, therefore, June or July, August, and September, and even October, though late for sport. I love to wander by the banks of streams, and on the by-paths in lonely glens, when west winds are beginning to strew the woodlands with yellow leaves; when salmon and grilse begin to run for the mountain streams, leaving their undiscovered oceanic haunts; pensive to mark, unpinched by eastern gales and splashing rain and sleet, the water-nuzel flitting from pool to pool, the campagnole plunging beneath the overhanging bank; to listen to the turtle-dove cooing in the wooded slopes; to mark the melancholy and solitary heron standing motionless by the willow-shaded pool. In a word, let not the angler seek the Scottish rivers too early.

Springtime is beautiful, most beautiful; but there is, properly, no spring in Scotland. Until June, the country is desolate; then comes forth joyous Nature, young, fresh, reanimating the lifeless earth. But pensive autumn has also its beauties; though summer, bright and glowing, is the noontide of life.

Here is a hint worth remembering:

TROLLING WITH MINNOWS.

And now you want some minnows; but where are they to be had? Perhaps you have brought some salted ones, and I have known such answer tolerably well. In England they have all sorts of artificial minnows, of silver and of brass, bright, burnished, like nothing that ever came from Nature's hands; and you may buy also artificial minnows tolerably well coloured, so as to resemble the real. Between the milldam of Abbey St. Bathans and the first heavy stream opposite the Retreat, I have caught in the Whitadder, with eight salted minnows, withered and dried up, six large trout, not one of which could be readily stowed away in the basket.

But to return. A minnow is an excellent bait for trout: it is the best, for it takes all the largest. You may fish with it in the smallest streams or largest rivers, in still water or in the rapid flowing current; at all times of the year, late in autumn, early in spring. To be a perfect angler with a minnow, you must have a strong arm and hand, and he at least five feet ten inches high. The minnow must be made to touch the waters as softly as a fly: it must be made to spin or revolve dexterously, and must show life by motion, although it be dead: for trout generally will not look at a straight and dead minnow, dragged by an unskillful fisher through the waters. Fishing for trout with a minnow is the most difficult mode of angling. It requires real dexterity—that is, if you are to fish, as it were openly, on the bank. The strength of the stream is your point, near some eddy or sunken rock: a rough stream full of large stones, long since fallen into the river. Such you find in mountain passes, where the river is making its way from one valley to another. But you may fish with minnow, successfully if dexterously, in brooks and small streams, standing well back, and cautiously dropping the minnow over the bank at the top of the stream. An excellent minnow fisher, a clergyman, who fished to supply the larder, assured me that, sauntering one clear, cold, and dreary day, along the banks of the Whitadder, the river low, the east wind blowing and hopeless of success, he merely, in sport, threw the minnow across the river, to a point where a small mountain streamlet, more like a drain, joins the main stream, never dreaming that there could be any trout there, or if there, any fish would be found insane enough to take the bait. But so it was, for four large trout came out in succession from their hiding-places, and were successively taken.

I have myself seen something like this, but nothing quite so bad, and can account for it only by imagining that during the prevalence of the easterly winds in Britain, neither man nor fish are absolutely in their senses.

Nevertheless I have had, on a Scottish river, an evening's sport whilst a strong east wind blew, which all but exceeded any I ever saw: it was in September.* To this I shall return when speaking of the Whitadder. Minnow fishing, to be entirely successful in small waters, where the trout are shy, requires you to carry a small jar, filled with fresh water and a good stock of live minnows. These you use when required. When trout are shy, they must be tempted with a fresh minnow, untouched, and but that moment used. With these precautions you may take trout in the sunniest rivulets; for, indeed, it is often there that the largest trout are found.

Mr. Knox enters at some length into the much-vexed question, What is the par? He contends, with arguments that appear to be conclusive, that it is not, as some assert, the young salmon, but a distinct fish. Here is a curious anecdote of

THE SOLITARY TROUT.

About a mile and a half, or it may be two miles, below Mill Know, travelling by the banks of the river, the stream forms a line, or pool at the base of a scarp. As I approached this, the last time I ever fished the Whitadder, it seemed alive with large trout. They rose at flies almost every instant. At the first cast of the line, I hooked a good-sized trout, and, placing it in my basket, threw again. Nothing rose: I stood amazed; for that pool, which an instant before was so full of life and of the finny brood, was now still as death. I mused and pondered. At once it flashed across my mind that I had caught the sole tenant of the pool and stream. To remove it carefully from the basket, to place it gently by the margin of the stream and in water sufficiently deep to recover it, was the work of an instant. At first it lay motionless, and turned upwards. I thought it dead. But presently I could perceive signs of returning life. It made a convulsive gasp or two, and springing above the waters, next diving into the pool, it disappeared.

Seated by the banks, I watched for some time to see if it should again appear; it did so, in chase of flies. I felt relieved and rejoiced, as I journeyed homeward, that I had not caught and destroyed the sole tenant of the pool.

We take brotherly leave of Mr. Knox, with some truthful remarks suggested by

SALMON FISHING IN THE TWEED.

At Peebles, the angler cannot fail of sport, whilst lower down, at Clovenford, he is sure to meet with salmon. It is not worth while fishing the Tweed, especially at this point, with a rod of less than twenty or more feet in length; and if you put on a pair of grilse flies, see that the running-line be clear, presenting no obstacles to the run of the fish. I once hooked a seven-pound salmon in a stream near Clovenford; it ran out some forty feet of line in an instant. I held on as well as I could; deep pools formed by heaps of stones, thrown in to protect the banks, flanked me on either side. I moved round one of these with great difficulty, and reached a gravelly and open bank. The salmon now ran directly across the river, and brought the top end of the rod under the water. I could do no more than hold on. At last he fatigued himself so much that I managed to get him safely landed on the gravelly bank. When the angler reaches Kelsae, he will find a different mode of fishing for salmon practised. The river is all taken, but the fishermen will hire a boat to you, and assist you with rod, line, &c.; the charge is moderate. What salmon or sea trout you take you may have at a reasonable charge. I think nothing of this kind of fishing. Command me to the river bank, taking every chance. It is the exercise, the exertion, the skill required, which constitutes the pleasure of angling; now roaming by some steep mountain side, now through the precipitous rocky gorge, or following the stream as it bursts forth from its hilly barriers, winding through woodlands and fields rich in grain. To follow the stream free and unrestrained is my delight, little booting whether the basket is to be filled or not; there is always enough to amuse, to interest, to induce me to travel onwards, never tired of the landscape, to me ever new, ever changing.

* In the Whitadder, under Shanna Bank; in "The Boat Hole."

THE GARDEN.

THE GREENHOUSE IN WINTER.

As we do not profess to write for the information of experienced gardeners, we must, in order to be useful, come down occasionally to what perhaps the gardener of his grace or my lord would term small gardening; and, in so doing, descend to those minutiae which it is necessary for the amateur or young gardener to become thoroughly acquainted with. We apprehend much benefit may arise from our labours through their adaptability to the period at which they appear to point; but, whilst we do this, we shall ever be alive to the propriety of inculcating those general principles which are common to all seasons, and which may be said to constitute the basis of every horticultural proceeding.

Not the least important to a majority of our readers will be the greenhouse; or, it may be, greenhouse andinery combined. Villas and suburban residences by thousands may be found near our principal towns, having this necessary appendage; for, in truth, it is in general the first structure thought of, and not infrequently the only one possessed by the owners. Now, as the treatment of these structures with vines, and without, varies occasionally, we must dodge from one to the other, as we see occasion, and thus suit all parties if possible.

During the dead of winter, frost and confined damp are the two great enemies to contend with; but there is yet another evil, of a serious character generally, arising from a dread of the visitations of King Frost, and this is an excessive degree of aridity, caused by strong fires. We need scarcely urge economy in the use of fuel; this will readily suggest itself, and we may add, that the less fire-heat is used the more robust will the stock be in the spring. Nevertheless, the use of it must not be so niggardly as to endanger the health or life of the inmates by frost; and, moreover, as many greenhouses contain plants which are of the nature of what are termed stove-plants, some compromise becomes essential; it is, indeed, unavoidable; we must therefore, in such cases, do as well as circumstances permit.

TEMPERATURE.—Before proceeding to advise on this head, let us observe, that to attempt to maintain a fixed day temperature would be most erroneous, whether in winter or summer—more especially the former. Our readers must here remember that it is a maxim with all good gardeners to apportion their heat to the degree of light. Plants grow, certainly, in the absence of light; but either blanching or attenuation of parts must be the necessary consequence, and that in exact proportion to the absence of light and the increase of temperature. When, therefore, a winter greenhouse contains plants which it is desirable to encourage by heat beyond the average of ordinary greenhouse plants, one of the prime secrets of management is to inclose much solar heat. There is no danger to be apprehended in winter from suffering an advance of fifteen degrees under such circumstances. As ordinary winter day temperature, by artificial warmth, we may say from forty to fifty-five degrees; and, as night temperature, from thirty-five to forty. In all cases of intense frost, and where it is difficult to sustain even these temperatures, it is far wiser to adopt even a lower standard, remembering that the thermometer must never be permitted to sink to the freezing point. The character of the internal atmosphere is, however, a thing of the utmost importance; and we must make the readers of THE FIELD familiar with the gardening phrase "coddling," for plants may be coddled as well as men. We need scarcely tell our friends that the longer any room is shut up closely the more vitiated the air becomes; and if this be true of the drawing-room or parlour, where there is no vegetable perspiration, or miasmal air, arising from the exuviae of decaying vegetables—no water thrown about to counteract dry heat—how much more necessary must ventilation be to a greenhouse, in which all the corrupting conditions just alluded to at all times exist in some degree? Thus much for argument; but it is, perhaps, superfluous; most of the readers of THE FIELD will have anticipated it. VENTILATION, then, is one of the most important duties of those who attend plant-houses; and the problem is how to "give air," as it is termed, practically, without admitting cutting winds, or even currents of too low a temperature to be favourable to vegetation.

We may here observe that we consider it necessary to give air in some degree, if possible, in severe weather; however, it sometimes happens that we gardeners cannot "give air" for two or three days together. Such, however, are extreme cases, and we merely quote them to show the young gardener what strange vicissitudes he must expect.

As to the mode of ventilating, most houses possess the power of admitting fresh air at a low level, and of discharging the heated air at a high level; we may here add, that the lower the one, and the higher the other, the more complete is the ventilation. Frequently, however, the front sashes of a greenhouse are the only means of giving fresh air; and as there is commonly a shelf or shelves containing choice plants in that position, the giving air at front requires much caution in severe weather—as much in regard of cold currents as of severe frost. In such cases the back apertures alone may be opened, and such may suffice for a few days; it is well, however, to seize every fair opportunity of opening the front sashes (if only an aperture of a quarter of an inch), for this better dispels any stagnant air than when the back sashes alone are opened. Whatever be the mode of ventilation, let all sharp draughts be avoided by all means; there can be no doubt that a somewhat vitiated atmosphere is better than a sharp and cutting air.

When a very severe frost occurs and continues, it is the best practice to cover the roof with some material which may, if needs be, remain on for several days continuously; but, in this case, much caution must be used as regards fire-heat. Under such circumstances, a day temperature of forty degrees is as much as ought to be permitted, whilst at night it will be quite sufficient to keep out the frost—say from thirty-four to thirty-six degrees. Under these circumstances, the plants will remain stationary, such temperatures being too low to encourage growth; and the development of blossoms will be, in like manner, arrested; the only mischief that can result will be a slight degree of etiolation; the paleness of the foliage will, however, soon be restored with returning sunshine and fair weather.

We may now advert to the application of water, whether to the roots of the plants, as helping them to sustenance, or as applied to floors, flues, or pipes, in order to counteract the aridity occasioned by the use of fire-heat. The following may, we think, be considered three sound maxims in the management of the atmosphere of hotheouses or plant-houses:—

1st. The more light plants receive, the better will they endure or enjoy a corresponding increase of heat.

2nd. The more heat and light they receive, the more they require an increase of air-moisture.

3rd. The more light, heat, and air-moisture they receive, the greater need is there for a liberal ventilation.

We need scarcely remind our readers that the above maxims refer to plants in a growing state.

But now the remaining part of our discussion refers chiefly to the degree, mode, and time of application of water in the greenhouse. We consider that, for the winter season, from nine to eleven o'clock a.m. is the best period at which both to water the pot plants, and to apply water, according to existing needs, to the floors, flues, or other surfaces. One thing we protest against, and that is the attempt to produce sudden gusts of steam from hot surfaces of piping or flue. When steam must be obtained by such means, we hold firmly to the opinion, that the surface, of whatever kind, on which the water is thrown, should be no more than milk-warm; or, let us say, not more than eighty degrees. But, in truth, very little "steaming" is requisite in greenhouses. The fact is, that where there is a house full of pot-plants of various kinds, the probability is that some few will require water daily, even in winter; and this, performed every morning about ten o'clock, will of itself produce as much air-moisture as the plants will require. If, however, signs of great aridity appear, let the floors be thoroughly washed, and any surfaces of walls or otherwise not hot receive a moistening. If any water is applied to pipes or flues, let it be when the fire is very low.

Another great point in greenhouse management during the dead of winter must be here adverted to—the picking off, at least once a-week, all decayed or decaying foliage. Such is a fertile source of a corrupt atmosphere, and cleanliness in every respect must be persisted in. The changing or moving of the plants is a thing of importance. The oftener they are changed, if done with care, the better. Every time a plant is changed, the chances are that a fresh portion of the foliage is presented to the sunlight, and this it is which prevents plants from becoming one-sided. Changing plants has a tendency also to prevent what is termed by gardeners "drawing;" that is to say, acquiring a lengthened or weak appearance.

Those who have plants of tenderer habit than ordinary greenhouse things may remember that in most houses there is one end a little warmer than the other; they should, therefore, keep their more tender pots at that end, as far as practicable; and, in addition, they may give less air at that end. By such contrivances, a temperature of nearly five degrees higher may be sustained on the average; and this, in winter, is very important to some things.

VINES IN GREENHOUSES.—Of course, where there are vines above, and pot-plants beneath, the vines will be confined to the rafters; at least, this is the usual practice, and it can scarcely be mended. Such vines will now be in a dormant or rest state; the leaves all fallen, or, if not so, let every one be pulled off, for foliage is of no use to vines when decayed and totally inactive. This, of course, refers to greenhouse vines, and when pot-plants have been kept beneath them. The vines must be pruned as soon as possible, the old loose bark peeled off, and the wood be instantly brushed over with the following mixture:—Soft soap, three ounces; sulphur, one pound; slacked lime, two quarts: these beat up thoroughly in a gallon of warm water. Every crevice must be searched with the mixture, and it may be applied with a painter's dusting-brush. The line is put in partly as a tell-tale. When the wood is dry, it will be seen if any portions have been missed. When done, the vines may be tied close to the rafters until February. We may suggest, as concluding advice: that if any portion of the glass of the house has become soiled or dimmed, it ought to be immediately washed, both for effect's sake, and for the benefit of the plants. Be assured that all the light a British winter affords, is needed in our plant-houses.

THE GENUS CYCLAMEN.—Several members of this charming family have been long esteemed for decorating the plant-house or drawing-room through winter and spring; the C. persicum especially is ever agreeable to the ladies, provided it is fragrant, for there is a variety but too common with scentless flowers. Whoever intends purchasing this species of a nurseryman, should by all means wait until they are in blossom, in order to select highly-fragrant kinds. The following extract so well describes their culture, that we may take the liberty of placing it before our readers:—

The Cyclamen hederifolium is indigenous; C. europæum is from Austria, and was in cultivation in this country in 1598; C. com. and C. vernum are from the south of Europe, and were introduced in 1731: in the southern countries these species are hardy, and flower in the open air freely. C. persicum is from the island of Cyprus, requiring a warm green-house temperature to be grown to perfection; of this species there are two varieties, the one scentless, the other highly odoriferous. C. repandum deserves especial notice, both from its variety and great beauty; its flowers are of a rosy-red colour, produced plentifully, and continue in bloom a long time; it usually flowers in May. The C. europæum and other hardy sorts seed freely, and if kept in pots undisturbed from year to year, will produce young plants in abundance without trouble; which, as the leaves dying off the second year, should be transplanted into a rich and light soil, and set in a shady place, protected from rain for a month, after which they should be occasionally watered, and housed through the following winter. The tubers will be about the size of marbles in three years, from seed, and may be expected to flower in the fourth or fifth season. The C. persicum and C. repandum are shy seeders in general; the former takes twelve months to ripen. On becoming black they should be sown in light and pretty good soil, and if a little bottom heat is given they will quickly vegetate. On the dying away of the leaves they should be kept dry until August, when they should be occasionally watered, and carefully protected from cold during winter. After the first year they should be annually potted, and treated as old plants. If successfully grown, they may be expected to flower the fourth year. In propagating C. persicum some cultivators cut the tubers into pieces; this practice, however, unless the plant divides itself or produces offsets, cannot be too highly deprecated: for, even if the plants live (and it is often otherwise), they take years to recover the effects of the wound, and sometimes quite die off after a year or two's nursing. The only safe way is to wait for the development of the seed if increase is desired. The whole of the species and varieties require one general treatment as to soil and water. After the flowering season of the spring-flowering sorts, and the decay of the leaves of the autumnal ones, the water should be discontinued gradually; and on the decay of the leaves the pots had better be placed in a shady place on their sides, to prevent any water falling on them, as, like bulbous plants, they require a season of rest. I would suggest that the whole of the soil be shaken from their roots early in August, and planted in a rich loamy soil, mixed with a good portion of well-composted dung and a little fine sand. I have not found peat to answer any good purpose, although some recommend it. They should then be plunged until September, putting a little soot in the bottom and about the holes they are put in, to keep out intruders. By November they will require shelter, but will also need plenty of air, and little water through November and December. In January they should be watered freely, top-dressed with rich soil, and kept close to the glass in a warm situation, airy rather than otherwise; they will be in flower in February and March generally. The pots should be twice the diameter of the tubers. Some florists use liquid manure in February; but, to those persons who wish a permanently healthy stock, I would advise a discontinuance of it, as, unless applied with judgment, it will in most cases prove injurious rather than beneficial. If used at all, it should be well diluted and fermented, and should not be kept many days, as it soon becomes acrid, and this acidity is often the cause of its failure; it is, moreover, in a nicely kept house, a nuisance, which had better be dispensed with. In conclusion, I cannot too highly recommend the genus Cyclamen to all those persons who are fond of fine flowers and are confined for room, or whose circumstances enable them to keep but a few plants, and those of easy culture.

The writer certainly gives an unnecessarily long period between the sowing of the seed and the arrival of the plant at blossoming pitch; we can bear testimony to the fact, that, as far as size in the tubers is concerned, a whole year may be gained by a very high and attentive course of culture all through, and this is most material. We must beg to differ slightly from the writer as to the time of shaking the soil from the roots; by shaking it away and re-potting them in the end of June, they will be a month or two earlier in the ensuing winter. About twenty years since, or indeed more, the late Mr. Willmot published what was considered superior practice in London's Magazine; it consisted in planting them out in raised and prepared beds in the end of May. This practice we have pursued in our day, and find indeed that they acquire great strength speedily; by the end of September, when taken up to be re-potted, they have a mass of new fibres, with a host of fine young leaves, the flowers already appearing at the base of each leaf. The writer suggests loam, dung, and sand as a compost, doubtless having found it answer; we have grown excellent Cyclamens in our day, but always considered heath-soil, leaf-mould, and sand, equal parts, the best material, using the compost rather coarse than otherwise. We do not, however, affirm it to be superior to the writer's compost.

INDICES TO SOILS.—All persons connected with land should learn to guess tolerably well at the character of the soil by the natural vegetation on its surface; and not only by its kind but by its degree of luxuriance. In judging thus, however, they must take care to distinguish between soil and sub-soil; as also between mere mechanical and chemical, or manurial powers. Many of our native plants derive much of their nourishment from a very low level, in fact, from the sub-soil. The peculiar character or prevalence of certain weeds on soils is not unfrequently a consequence of hard tillage, whereby everything of a more important character sinks in the scale, whilst the most worthless of weeds rise on their ruins. But not only weeds mark the natural character of soils—the trees, if any, are pretty good indices also. Who would be afraid to sow wheat where the oak tree attains high perfection, or where the hawthorn makes shoots nearly twenty feet in length in a summer; or, indeed, where the common thorn in the hedge, the wild sloe, or the crab, grows in luxuriance? Another point may here be adverted to, as influencing the produce of the soil, namely, adhesiveness, or that character which is ever one of the chief features of what is called a rich loam. To say nothing of the chemical character of such soils, the property of retaining a permanency of moisture during trying drougbts, and, with this, the facility in parting with a superfluous amount of moisture in cases the reverse of the former—is a matter of extreme importance, and boldly distinguishes them from either sands or clays. The following remarks, by Anderson, will prove interesting to some of our readers:—

There are few who do not know, although they may not be able to give the botanical names, that a light sandy soil is known by the presence of the purple arum (Zantedæa purpureum), and the shepherd's purse (Capella bursa-pastoris); that a barren infertile soil is often productive of bedstraw (Galium), or the air grasses (Aira), &c.; and also the parsley piers (Alchemilla aphanes); that a fertile loam is favourable to the growth of common ragwort (Senecio Jacobæa), and the corn-field cirina (Cirsium arvense); that fertility is denoted by the presence of the great nettle (Urtica dioica), the chickweed (Stellaria media), and the yarrow (Achillea millefolium), &c.; that a soil too finely pulverised is readily covered with corn-field spurry (Spergula arvensis). Moist, strong, black loam, with dry sub-soil, often produces the corn-field pimpernel (Anagallis arvensis), corn-field madier (Sherardia arvensis), corn-field growwell (Lithospermum arvense), salad lamb's lettuce (Valerianella olitoria), &c. &c. Alluvial and aquatic soils are distinguished by the rush tribe (Juncus), the meadow grasses (Poa), various species of the reed family (Arundin), and the amphibious polygonum (Polygonum amphibium); and Arnica mark the better classes of alluvial soils, and such as may become very productive by draining. A calcareous soil is favourable to sainfoin (Onobrychis sativa). Blue clay, or marly soil, produces the common coltsfoot (Tussilago farfara). A cold and retentive sub-soil is often marked by the corn-horse tail (Equisetum arvense), and other species of Equisetum. The inferior clays and tills, and peat, by the heaths (Erica), and peat by various species of Sphagnum, Lancashire bog asphodel (Narthecium ossifragum), &c. — Anderson, in Far. Mag.

THE GARDENER.

FORCING FRUITS, &c.—About the forcing of vines, which stands at the head of forcing matters, little need be said at present. Few of our readers will have a desire to begin until Christmas has passed; or, in other words, until the days begin to lengthen, when it is well known the chances of success are much increased, inasmuch as not only are the chances of light multiplied, but the trees, having received a tolerable share of rest, have, in the language of the scientific, "accumulated excitability." Those who are commencing, or have already commenced, must, above all things, mind two points: the one to secure a moist condition of air, the other to make all advances in air-heat progressively. We need scarcely remind such, that in proportion as the vines "break," that is, bud slowly, so will be the chances of a free development. The border where the roots are situated, if inside, must receive a liberal supply of moisture, if dry; manure water, such as Peruvian guano, four ounces to the gallon, at a temperature of ninety degrees, may be liberally applied. If the roots be outside, and forcing must commence, let no water be used; but let the borders receive a coating of fermenting material, care being taken to sustain a temperature of seventy to eighty degrees. As to the practice, under early forcing, greater moderation still must be exercised. People complain of the blossoms casting, but many do not give them time to develop their parts with the freedom they enjoy in a state of nature. Let the syringe be applied morning and evening.

PINES.—By this heading, we, of course, mean the pine-apple—not conifers. Fruits ripening, of course, require a dry atmosphere; such will, doubtless, be of the Jamaica or Montserrat class, or, perhaps, Cayennes. Of course no water will be required at the roots. Where pines are in houses possessing every proper appliance, a liberal ventilation may be allowed, and with liberal ventilation a liberal supply of air moisture. Rising stock, however, in what are termed pits heated by fermenting materials alone, will get more air moisture than they require. The walls, therefore, must be kept hot by renewed linings, in order that, through rarefaction, a motion in the air may be sustained, and, consequently, damp dispelled.

PLANTS' FLOWERS.—Of course the tulips and other bulbs are planted; about the second week in November is accounted a good time. See that young pansies, if in beds out doors, do not suffer by the slug, or earth-worm; we have found a mixture of ashes and quicklime very useful, sprinkled around their stems. Beware of coaling your carnations, peacocks, &c.; let them have air most liberally if in frames, and do not fear a few degrees of frost; damp, stagnated moisture is more prejudicial by far. Do not give them water unless they really droop, and this they will not readily do at this period.

Other departments of gardening will receive full attention in due time. We will endeavour to make all the gardening readers of THE FIELD "practicals."

FLOWER-POTS FOR ROOMS.—Fill a pot with coarse moss of any kind, in the same manner as it would be filled with earth, and place a cutting or a seed in this mass: it will succeed admirably, especially with plants destined to ornament a drawing room. In such a situation, plants grown in moss will thrive better than in garden mud, and possess the very great advantage of not casting dirt by the earth washing out of them when watered. The explanation of the practice seems to be this: that moss rammed into a pot, and subjected to continual watering, is soon brought into a state of decomposition, when it becomes a very pure vegetable mould; and it is well known that very pure vegetable mould is the most proper of all materials for the growth of almost all kinds of plants. The moss would also not retain more moisture than precisely the quantity heat adapted to the absorbent powers of the root, a condition which can scarcely be obtained with any certainty by the use of earth.

WORTH A TRIAL.—Most people know a little sweetmeat called comfits—viz., an almond, or something of the sort—encrusted with sugar to the size of a pea, or thereabouts. If farmers and gardeners could encrust their seeds in a similar way before sowing, with an artificial manure suitable to their early growth, it would be a saving, and perhaps a greater certainty that all the seeds would be left by birds, &c., to vegetation. —Correspondent of Agricultural Gazette.

A GOURD FROM FRANCE.—There is now to be seen in the shop-window of Mr. Watkinson, seedman and florist, market-place, Manchester, a large fruit of the gourd species, which has been sent by M. Armand Croncier, of Rouen, to Mr. Michael Delannoy, of this city, for Mr. Watkinson. The French name for this gourd is citrouille, or pumpkin; and it weighed in Rouen 55 kilograms, which is equivalent to 110 lb. English. We had its circumference measured, both horizontally and vertically, and found it to be horizontally six feet round, and vertically, or across the stem insertion, six feet one inch! This enormous fruit, the Potiron Jaune, or yellow pumpkin, of the French gardeners, is used in France in soups, as well as mashed like potatoes, as a vegetable, and also for pies. It keeps well during most of the winter, and is very thick in flesh. When mashed it has a very pleasant flavour, one quite peculiar to itself; and it is said to be an excellent substitute, as a variety, for carrots or turnips. The specimen at Mr. Watkinson's has evidently been grown resting upon the earth, for one side is much flattened by the pressure and resistance of the soil. It is in form like a large apple, but of a pale buff or salmon colour, slightly ribbed (in this respect resembling an onion), and thickly reticulated over the whole surface of its rind with narrow verrucular processes. It is said to be sufficiently hardy to admit of a treatment exactly like that of the common gourd, growing best in a fresh, loamy soil, well enriched with manure. When of small size, it makes a very pleasant vegetable; it should be thoroughly boiled, and the inside—when spread on toast and dressed with melted butter, pepper and salt—is an excellent substitute for marrow. It must not, however, be mistaken for the vegetable marrow, on the one hand, or for the squash or bottle-gourd on the other.

WHY IS A GARDEN FRUITFUL?—The almost universal opinion is, because it is more highly manured than fields, and therefore has a richer soil. Yet this is not always the case. There are other things to be attended to, in order to render the soil prolific. One is, to pulverise the soil; though this may seem a small matter to many farmers. But it is owing to the finely pulverised condition of the beds of a garden that it possesses a highly absorbent power to attract the moisture of the atmosphere—a source of fertility that many farmers scarcely seem aware that they possess. If the soil of the field was as carefully worked, and fresh earth constantly exposed to the atmosphere, as in the well-attended garden, the land would increase each year in fertility. Let the rule be, plough deep, cultivate well, pulverise lumps and sods, return your straw to the soil, and you may carry off an immense quantity of food, and have fertile soil still. Plants in their nature are organismic beings. By means of their roots, they take up food from the soil, and often the very food which the soil has taken up (by its power of absorption, from the atmosphere), which power is increased to an almost indefinite extent, by separating the particles of which it is composed. The acts of ploughing and harrowing are a part of the process of manuring. The act of stirring the earth, in times of drought, serves as a watering of the plants. The moisture thus absorbed is loaded with fertilising properties. If, then, you would have your fields as fertile as a garden, you must not depend upon manure alone, but pulverise freely, not upon the surface, but deep below it.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Can you give me any help with my chrysanthemums, which are suffering from mildew? My greenhouse is heated by hot water, and to which I attribute their destruction. Can I do anything to counteract the dampness consequent upon this method of warming?—Yours, W. W. W.

Durham, Dec. 18.

1. Can plants—say violets, roses, &c.—be conveyed alive across to Australia, and the heat way of doing so?
2. What are the ferns mentioned so often in Australia and New Zealand—i.e. the height, &c. Are they like our common ferns, the Bracken of Scotland? Hubert.

ANSWERS.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.—A grower of this charming tribe begs to inform "W. W. W." that hot-water heating cannot cause mildew any more than other modes of heating, unless the water be exposed. Give air most liberally, so that your plants are moist at root—neither wet nor dry—and apply flour of sulphur to the mildewed portions.

"A SUBSCRIBER," p. 1187.—Your kidney potatoes, if at the enormous width of a yard between the rows, are too far apart. Beans between, by all means. Lime and soot mixed is very bad agricultural chemistry; the lime will dissipate the ammonia and other qualities. Use the soot in the drills, taking care to blend it well with twice its bulk of any old powdery manure.

SEEDLING FLOWERS.

We shall be happy to receive blooms of any choice seedlings of florist flowers, and will give our opinion candidly as to their merits. They should be packed in boxes, and surrounded by damp (not brown paper). The boxes should be stout, so as not to be crushed in transit through the Post-office. The postage must be paid, and packets should be addressed to the Field office, Price House, 2 to 5, Fleet St., Second London.—Ed.]

THE FIGHTING POWERS OF DIFFERENT NATIONS.—The French are brilliant and formidable in an attack. If repulsed a revolution equally violent usually takes place, and would often prove fatal if it were not for the precaution of placing reserves. When these are not wanting, they are capable of being easily rallied, and their lively spirit is soon restored. The Russians are less excitable; but, nevertheless, in an attack they are not to be surpassed for bravery and perseverance by the troops of any European nation, with this advantage, that they appear to be incapable of panic, and, though they may be repulsed and defeated, they cannot be forced to run in confusion from the field of battle. The Prussian armies engaged in these campaigns were not, for the most part, very young soldiers; a spirit of enthusiasm pervaded their ranks, which rendered them capable of the most brilliant achievements. In cases of defeat, the effects of momentary hurry and confusion, to which all young troops are liable, were less violent with them than the French; but, though easily rallied, and their patriotic enthusiasm soon restored, they could not rival the Russian stoicism in adversity. The Austrians were highly disciplined and brave, but the infantry appeared deficient in energy when compared with the French or Prussians, and their physical powers could not be compared with those of the sturdy Russian soldiery.

THE FARM.

FARMING, always a hazardous pursuit, has been rendered doubly so during the last few years, by the failure of the potato-crop, disease amongst cattle and sheep, and mildew in wheat, especially in the fens. Still, as science becomes more developed, and the constituents of soils, and the ingredients of plants and roots, more understood, many of these evils, we hope, may be remedied. Farming, Mr. Mechi says, in his recent lecture on agriculture, before the Society of Arts, although a most agreeable occupation, is notoriously a slow business, attended with small profits. Fortunately it is so, otherwise our towns and cities would be comparatively deserted. In times of abundance, whether arising from unusually large harvests, as in the last (although I hear the yield is not of that fabulous character it was at first supposed), and when the high price of wheat is owing to the demand not being equal to the home supply, although it is supposed we have an excess this year over that of 1853, owing to the bounteous interposition of Providence, of two and a-half million quarters in our home growth alone; but, as it is impossible all our growth can avail us before another harvest, it is supposed we shall require an importation of foreign wheat and flour to the extent of some two to two and a-half million quarters to keep down prices within an available limit, and place us in security against the exigencies and contingencies of war, and the possibility of a bad harvest next year, or in times of scarcity, when the price of provisions of all kinds is rising. Extensive fluctuations in the price of corn must always upset those nice calculations which economy of farming produce; and in no year have the fluctuations been so great as in the present, varying nearly 100 per cent.; and in many of the large farms there is a difference of £1,000, balance-sheets exhibiting, at the same time, all the phases of agricultural prosperity and adversity. A wise agriculturist will, when things are prosperous, put by a portion of his gains to meet future difficulties, as there is generally a reaction in prices of agricultural commodities, as in manufacturing ones; and he should not invest his balance in enlarged buildings which may be a dead weight hereafter in times of difficulty. The home consumption of wheat is about 17,500,000 quarters, or about one quarter per head, off about 3,500,000 acres; added to which we generally import annually from five to seven million of quarters, with other grain in proportion; but a thorough knowledge of agricultural produce and live stock would tend to prevent those panics and fluctuations in the value of our produce which we have of late years experienced, so as in some measure to regulate supply and demand. The Government, through the Poor-law Board, in 1853, undertook the collection of agricultural statistics in Norfolk and Hampshire, and by the agencies of the board of guardians where practicable, the large measure of success which attended that experiment to obtain reliable information on a most important subject, considered in connection with the complete success of a somewhat similar operation in three Scotch counties, led to a renewal of these undertakings in 1854. The experiments of the present year embraced the whole of Scotland, and the following counties in England and Wales, viz., Norfolk, Suffolk, Southampton, Wilts, Leicester, Berks, Worcester, Salop, the West Riding of York, Brecon, and Denbigh. A statistical committee is appointed, with the chairman of the union for its chairman where practicable; and by employing, with the concurrence of the guardians, the clerk of the union as classifier, and the relieving officer as enumerator, most satisfactory results have ensued, as agricultural statistics will enable the farmer to adjust, in some measure, the supply to the demand, and thus the great fluctuations in the price of wheat will be prevented. Owing to a prevalence of south-westerly winds during the past week, the arrivals from the northern parts of Europe have not been so great as usual, consequently wheat has advanced from 2s. to 4s. per quarter; barley has also advanced a little; other grain being generally much the same since we last remarked upon it. Farmers, then, cannot complain, with wheat at 8s. per hushel, and meat at nearly 8d. a pound, and can manage to eat their Christmas dinner this year without regret.

FARMING PROSPECTS.

LAND DRAINAGE AND OTHER IMPROVEMENTS.

(From our Correspondent.)

As long as the Corn-laws existed, the question of drainage and other agricultural improvements, whether temporary or permanent, was not much mooted, and for this reason—the then existing fluctuating duty operated as a premium on the growth of corn in this country to the exclusion of foreign articles, and farmers went on doing their best in their usual jog-trot way. But the gradual advance in the price of land, occasioned by the increase of the population, and the wealth invested in the land, derived from manufacture and commerce, gave a powerful impetus to rural industry—augmenting agricultural capital, and calling forth a more enterprising race of cultivators—laid the foundation of that success which has placed us in the high position we now occupy among other nations of Europe. Within the last few years still further improvements having taken place by land-draining and subsoiling, economy of farming and labour, causing much land to be enclosed for the purpose of cultivation, contrary to the general supposition that, on the repeal of the Corn-laws, much poor land would go out of cultivation; thus at once facilitating the improvement of an immense quantity of common-lands, causing exchanges of lands and the division of intermixed lands, and providing remedies for the defective or incomplete execution of the powers of the general and local Enclosure Acts throughout the country. With a view, then, of meeting the position of farmers upon the repeal of the Corn-laws in 1846, when their prospects were not so bright as they are at present, and of improving the natural resources of the country as a set-off to the withdrawal of Parliamentary bounties, a bill for the improvement of agricultural tenant-right—giving to tenants a compensation for unexhausted improvements before the conclusion of their tenancy, as also remedies for enforcing the payment of tenants' farm-fixture, either by the landlord or by the incoming tenant, and which were subsequently embodied in the Landlord and Tenant Act of the 14 and 15 Vict. c. 25—was brought into the House by

Mr. Pusey, the then member for Berkshire; as also numerous Acts enabling owners of settled estates to defray the expenses of the drainage of these by way of mortgage, to be paid off by instalments; as also other Acts authorising the advance of public money, to be limited in amount, to promote the improvement of land in Great Britain and Ireland by works of drainage. It is no wonder, then—although the present autumn and winter has been almost the driest on record (so much so that many wells have been dried up altogether)—when we remember the unceasing rains which last year steeped our fields, brimmed our brooks, and deluged our valleys, that we should consider, more energetically than at any previous time, whether the arterial or general trunk drainage of the kingdom cannot be put and kept in a more perfect condition, especially as experience in other districts tells us that, with a further reduction in the amount of surface evaporated by means of drying and warming the soil to a greater depth, a still greater amelioration of climate and additional healthfulness would result. It is well known the Nene River, in its frequent swellings, often overflows ten or fifteen thousand acres between Northampton and Peterborough before it enters the Fens, the Ouse probably damaging a greater extent by inundating in a similar manner, and rendering the land for many months totally unfit for cultivation. "It is a wise provision of Nature," said Mr. Smith, of Deanstone, in 1846, "that just in proportion as soils contain clay, and are impervious to water in their original condition, so do they contract the more when affected by rains; whereas drift soil, which is full of sand and stones, and which is more open in its original condition, contracts less when it is laid dry, still it becomes open enough for the percolation of water; so that a distance of from eighteen to twenty-five feet from drain to drain would be found to be a good practical distance." On stiff clay lands he advocated frequent drains, at close intervals, of the depth of three feet, or shallow depths not exceeding thirty inches. And Mr. Bailey Denton, in the recent discussion at the Farmers' Club, "On the results arrived at from the several systems of drainage in practice during the last few years," called our attention particularly to the depth of drains, distance between drains, arrangements of system, and direction of drains; but the club, as I have already stated, could not arrive at any definite result, and for this reason you cannot generalise.

I am indebted to an experienced Berkshire drainer for the following statement:—"Take, for instance, a ridge or hog's-back, from east to west, on either side of which is a rather steep stiff clay subsoil—aspect, north and south. Now, that drainer of antiquity, the sun, will act on the south side so as to open the clays to the drains, and give the worms greater facility to work and act upon them. On the north side the practice would evidently be different—the sun and the worms not having the same facility to act as percolators—hence, it becomes a question for consideration by practical men, whether the drains on the north side should not be more frequent and shallower—by, say a third—than on the south side. This, however, is only one instance of the many diversities of circumstances to be considered; viz., the different sorts of clays and sands, springs and subsoils (porous or adhesive), or various surface soils, the degree of fall, and aspects, which are sufficient proofs that no general rule can be defined, other than acting on the sound practical common sense of the operator. Soapy clays require more frequent drains than stiff clays, and the drains may be made to run diagonally through the furrows into the main drain, which should be connected with the ditch or outlet."

Mr. Bailey Denton also remarked that it was impossible to lay pasture land to dry, for he had invariably remarked that, in the recent dry summer and autumn particularly, both in low-land meadows and upland pastures, those lands which had been most thoroughly drained by deep and frequent drains where those which had preserved the freshest and most profitable herbage, and he advocated a minimum depth of four feet where outfalls would admit; whilst Mr. Bullock Webster, another practical drainer, advocated a depth of three feet on retentive clay subsoils, at moderate distances, when surcharged with under water, as more efficacious than at a greater depth. Drainage may be performed by tile, turf, plug-wood, and hush or furze, tile-draining being the most durable, and generally costing from £3. 10s. to £5, according to the way the work is done. At first, a particular sort of mole-plough was used, which took out the soil to the depth of eighteen inches; but now the agricultural world is much indebted to Mr. Fowler, of Bristol, for his perseverance in exhibiting his draining-plough, as from time to time he has improved it. Draining is done before subsoiling. By subsoiling you give the water a clearer passage from the active soil, and the soil should be always open to the depth of eighteen inches, in order that the water may go right away and admit the air; and Mr. Smith, of Deanstone, says a couple of years ought to elapse between the time of putting in the drains, and breaking up the subsoil, or a great injury would be done to the active soil. There have been several drainage-of-land bills to facilitate outfalls, now embodied in Lord Lincoln's Act, 10 & 11 Vict., providing that those parties who wish to make any improvements, and to obtain an outfall through their neighbour's property, should have proper estimates sent in to the authorities in London, and that public notices should be given, so that any one living in the area of the district to be drained should have timely notice of what was intended; and Mr. Ker Seymour's Bill, which was unsuccessful last session, provided for the widening of rivers as outfalls, and suggested a mode of arbitration and compensation before the Enclosures Commissioners, which was thought too inquisitorial, and consequently, not palatable to the House. But, provided the rights of property are kept inviolate, and properly respected, there is no reason why extended special powers should not be given to tenants-for-life by Act of Parliament for works of drainage, and the other improvements so much wanted on entailed estates (tenants-in-fief can do as they like), without infringing upon the limitations of settlements; and it has often struck me, now that we hear so much of drainage and land-improvement companies, their powers are exceedingly apt and opportune, as they are now doing what the Government ought to have done on the issuing of the report of the Agricultural Customs' Committee of 1848, or why be at the trouble and expense of issuing it, and summoning practical men from all parts of the country to give their evidence on the subjects? And it would save an immense amount of inconvenience and ill-will if these improvements, whether temporary or permanent, were carried out by these companies instead of being half done, as they now are in many cases, by grumbling landlords, or by tenants-on-commission, at £5 per cent., or at so much per acre, under the now fashionable tenant-right agreements which are fast superseding leases in what are called the big farming counties. E. B. A.

Farmer's Club,
39, New Bridge-street, Blackfriars.

FARM NEWS.

In North Nottinghamshire, all the clay wheats have found a capital bed; and the plant, which has already made its appearance, has a very promising aspect. Some of the seed on the strong soils went in rather rough, but the recent fine rains have softened the soil and prepared the seed for germinating.—Contracts were taken at the Royal Clarence Victual-yard, Gosport, by Rear-Admiral Courtney, yesterday week, for 2,000 qrs. of wheat, at an average of 74s. per quarter.—The France d'Outre-Mer confirms the intelligence that a large dépôt of guano had been discovered at the Aves Islands, a group situated 11 deg. 59 min. north latitude, and 69 deg. 15 min. west longitude. These works were visited by the Ardent steamer, which found there an American vessel already in possession of the islands. The crew had raised a sort of fortification, on which they had placed two guns, and fifty men were taking in a lading of the manure. The quantity existing on these rocks was estimated at 250,000 tons.—A Vermont paper says: "Among the conspicuous men in the Vermont Legislature is Mr. B. G. Brigham, of Fairfield. He owns and cultivates 1,300 acres of land. Among his barn-yard items are 220 cows, twenty horses, and five yoke of oxen. In his dairy he makes butter only. The average yield of butter from the milk of each cow is 150lbs. Two huge 'dasher' churns are set in motion by two 'horse-powers,' and the butter is 'worked' by the old-fashioned 'paddle.' His stock of cattle consumes about 500 tons of hay annually. 20,000lbs. of pork, 500 bushels of wheat, from 400 to 500 bushels of corn, 1,000 bushels of oats, and from 1,000 to 2,000 bushels of potatoes, are among his yearly products."—A Swedish turnip, of the "Skirving variety," was taken up a short time since from a field at Madeley, Staffordshire, occupied by Mr. Hill, weighing, without the top, 24½lbs.—Mr. W. Baylis, at the Red Horse, Shipton, Oxon, has now in his flock a ewe, mother of twenty-five lambs, all of which she fostered; she had two single ones, ten doubles, and one three, at a hutt.—Of the 150,000 tons of flax annually brought into the United Kingdom, it appears that 60,000 tons come from Russia.—In order to success in potato cultivation four things must be attended to. 1st. A moderately dry friable soil, deeply stirred before planting. 2nd. No direct application of manure of any kind. 3rd. Whole sets of middling size, and sound. 4th. A clear space of twenty inches between the sets along drills.—If grass land be exhausted by continual mowing, you may get it up again soon by pasturing sheep and giving them food on the land. Three cwt. of guano, in compost with a lot of ditch mould (if you can get that free of weeds), will set the land up at once. Italian ryegrass may be sown in August on fresh-stirred stubble, but is best sown in April.—Agricultural Gazette.

THE LAND.

SO FAR AS THE SEASON has gone, there is every reason for anticipating a good crop next year. The land has been remarkably well cleaned and prepared, and a large breadth of wheat will certainly be sown.

USEFUL APPLICATION OF SEWAGE.—At a meeting of the Manchester Town Council, a week or two ago, a letter was read from Mr. Samuel Brooks, in which that gentleman made the handsome offer of placing £1,000 at the disposal of the council, to be expended in preliminary inquiries, and premiums for plans and experiments, as to the value of the nightsoil of the city. Mr. Brooks estimated the annual value of the sewage of the city of Manchester at £100,000 a-year, and his letter referred to the importance not only of properly disposing of it for agricultural purposes, but of rendering it subservient to other useful objects. The thanks of the council were unanimously voted to Mr. Brooks for his offer.

SUPPOSED ANTIDOTE AGAINST THE POTATO DISEASE.—The result of every inquiry or experiment tending to throw light on the mysterious failure of the potato, is worthy of attention; and whether the cause is atmospheric or whether the disease arises from the want of some element in the earth to promote its growth, are points for investigation. Acting upon the latter theory, and knowing that where we found the potato diseased the stalks have generally gone prematurely to decay, I was induced to try the following experiment with a view to stimulate the growth of the stalk. Having a small plot of land, I grew potatoes on it for three years in succession, and the last year (1853) two-thirds of the potatoes were diseased. In the spring of this year, I planted half the same land with potatoes, manured as usual; the other half I planted in a similar way with the addition of silicate of potash, which was neither more nor less than clinkers, or half vitrified residuum of coal, adhering to the grates of furnaces. This I caused to be ground very fine, and placed in the rows with the manure. The produce which I have now got is all right; the stalks remaining green and strong up to the time the potatoes were taken up, while in the other half-plot of land the stalks decayed early and the potatoes were very much diseased. For the information of the agriculturist, the article can be got in almost any quantity for merely carrying it away; the only expense will be the grinding, and it requires to be ground as fine as possible. I have to add, that I consider the clinkers superior to ashes for this purpose, inasmuch as ashes produced from wood (potashes) require siliceous earth to be added and fused with them; coal, on the other hand, contains a considerable quantity of siliceous earth and alumina or clay, which only chemically combines when melted or vitrified. In this neighbourhood the clinkers are always rejected by the agriculturists, and when used at all, it is only for repairing public roads.—T. B. in Mark Lane Express.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE DUTY ON CORN.—From an official paper just issued, it is shown that in the year ended the 5th of January last, the duty on corn amounted to £529,247, and in the preceding year, £404,385.

THE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY OF CLEMMONT, in the department of the Oise, has recommended the use of that agricultural nuisance couch-grass as a substitute for malt in the making of beer.

ACCORDING to a circular issued by M. J. Franke, a wine-dealer of Cette, the whole produce of the vineyards in the south of France this year scarcely reaches one-sixth of an average. Prices are "enormously high," but with only a year's consumption in hand there is not "the slightest chance of a full."

MANAGEMENT OF MILCH COWS IN FALL AND WINTER.—In almost every agricultural paper in the country, inquiry is being made on this important subject. It seems as though this subject ought to have been treated before this time by those who keep cows to produce milk for market. In a former number of the Farmer you make the following remarks:—That beets, carrots, and parsnips are all excellent to produce milk; but you say you prefer carrots, not only to produce rich milk but rich butter; and you ask if there is a better vegetable that can be grown for milk cows, all things considered? Let us hear from those who are in favour of its cultivation. There are a great many kinds of feed used for cows, such as slops or swill, and malt from distilleries; but this cannot be had by every one who keeps cows for the production of milk. I hope the day is not far distant when such feed cannot be had for cows or any other animal. Before the blight came on the potato, that tuber was more extensively grown to feed cows, in order to produce large quantities of milk, but not of good quality. I do not think it would do to raise potatoes to feed cows, at present prices. The vegetable I wish to recommend as the best, all things considered, is white fat turnips. Some, perhaps, will object to the turnip, because it will affect the taste of the milk and butter. So it does if fed raw; this can be avoided by boiling. For each cow boil half a bushel of turnips soft; while yet add five or six quarts of shorts, which will swell, and you will get the full worth of it. A mess like this fed to a cow once a day will produce more milk of a good quality than any other feed at the same cost. Turnips fed in this way do not taint either the milk or butter. One thing in favour of turnips as feed for cows is, they can be sown in August, or as late as the 1st of September. I sowed some as late as September last year, which were very fine. Turnips are also very profitable feed for pigs when boiled in the same way as for cows.—Northern Farmer.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

What is the best locality in New Zealand for a sheep farm, with a good run for sheep near by? HUBERT.

THE COUNTRY HOUSE.

HOUSEHOLD MATTERS.

TO ANNIHILATE BUGS.—Empty the place of everything moveable. Scrape off all paper or other loose material, and throw it, as the work proceeds, into a brazier of live charcoal. Then fill in all the cracks in plaster with a mixture of corrosive sublimate and plaster of Paris. Also prepare a sufficient quantity of soft soap, well mixed with corrosive sublimate, and with it fill, with a putty-knife, all cracks in wood-work, and every crevice in the floor. Burn old carpets, &c. As to the furniture, fill every joint, or crack, in which it is possible for bugs to harbour, with the same mixture of corrosive sublimate and soft soap. By this means, if the work is thoroughly well done, and by no other means, you may clear any house of these vermin.—Gardener's Chronicle.

TO TAKE OUT GREASE FROM LEAVES OF BOOKS.—After having warmed the paper, take as much of the grease or oil out as possible by means of blotting-paper. Then dip a small brush in well-rectified essential oil of turpentine, heated almost to ebullition, and draw it gently over both sides of the paper, which must be kept warm. This operation must be repeated as often as necessary. Then dip another brush in highly-rectified spirits of wine, and draw it over the place which was stained, and particularly round its edges. The spot will thus totally disappear, and the paper assume its original whiteness; and though written on or printed, no harm will ensue.

PRESERVATION OF OAK DOORS.—After the doors have been freed from the dirt and old varnish, by washing and scraping, give one coat of boiled linseed oil, covered with a little prepared asphaltum; allow three days for the oil to penetrate the wood and dry; then give two coats of copal varnish, allowing three days between each coat for the varnish to dry. This will restore the doors to their original colour.

TO KEEP BREAD MOIST.—Put about two inches of water in the bottom of a bread-pan which has a cover, and fit into the pan, just above the water, a board pierced with holes, on which the bread is to be placed, so as to prevent either the board or the bread from touching the water. Then put on the lid of the pan.

A "SHOPPING" SECRET FOR HUSBANDS.—Archdeacon Paley, in one of his familiar discourses, touching upon the expenses brought upon husbands and fathers, in the way of cambrics and satins, says—"I never let my women (be it understood he spoke of Mrs. Archdeacon Paley and the Misses Paley), when they shop, take credit. I always make them pay ready money, Sir; ready money is such a check upon the imagination."

LIBRARY.

MANY books have been published since we last advised upon the additions that should be made to the library of the country-house, either through the bookseller, the book-club, or the circulating library. But though in number they are many, in importance they are trifling; the absorption of the public mind by the war—the meeting of Parliament—still operating to deter publishers from bringing out expensive works, and making authors desirous of deferring their ventures to a season when fame is not so likely to be eclipsed by military renown. The most remarkable book that has appeared is entitled "Twelve Years of Foreign Policy," from the pen of a gentleman said to be in the foreign-office, who has already distinguished himself by a severe attack on Mr. Disraeli, but now has undertaken the less congenial duty of defence—the object of the work being an elaborate vindication of the foreign policy of Lord Aberdeen. It is temperately written; it has been laboriously compiled from documents not accessible to the public, and it is therefore extremely interesting and apposite to the time. Every book-club should have it. Only one new novel has appeared, and that is of high merit. "Herbert Lake" is the production of Miss Douglas—a lady who has made some stir in the literary world by two fictions that preceded this one—"Annie Dysart," and "The Heir of Ardennan;" both of which were very successful. She is remarkable for truthful portraiture of everyday people. She paints the world about as just as it is, without exaggeration, and with the minuteness of a daguerreotype. In this new adventure she has exhibited still more exalted powers, for "Herbert Lake" is pervaded by a fine tone of philosophical reflection, and a depth of thought that marks the progress of a reflective mind improving by experience, and turning to account its keen capacity for observation. We recommend

"Herbert Lake" to every country house. It will be delightful fireside reading.

Poetry is "the rage" just now among writers, although we fear that it receives very little encouragement from readers. There are floods of volumes every week, the greater part of them the vilest doggerels; the rest, with rare exceptions, mere mediocrities, of which the best that can be said is, that they have no glaring faults. But poetry is an art, and mediocrity in it is as unendurable as positive badness. It must be good, or it is worthless. One volume of a better class has appeared since we last chatted with our readers. Mr. Matthew Arnold, who was so extravagantly lauded by the Times some twelve months since, has published a second volume, precisely in the manner of the first. It is an attempt to revive the classical style. The expression is more subdued than the thought; there is much play of fancy, but very little of imagination. The structure of the poems is copied from the classical writers, and consequently is not in accordance with the tastes and tendencies of the times. Hence Mr. Arnold cannot hope to become a popular writer. But he will be read and enjoyed by a select circle, to whom he will recall the shadow of their youth, and all its pleasant associations, and to such we commend him. He is, at least, a pure, wholesome, and right-minded poet, which cannot be always said of more passionate and impulsive writers.

These are all the books of something more than merely temporary interest which have lately appeared—all that can properly be ordered in your book-club. We hope our next report will be more fruitful, for there are many promises in the book lists, that wait only a lull in the news from the Critica to make their appearance.

BOOKS.

Pippins and Pies. By J. STIRLING COYNE. Illustrated by WM. MCCONNELL. London: G. Routledge & Co.
Odds and Ends from an Old Drawer. By WERONA RETNIV, M.D. Illustrated by WM. MCCONNELL. London: George Routledge & Co.

MR. STIRLING COYNE has long held among us a high position as a dramatist, and he now appears before us a writer of a Christmas Book. "Pippins and Pies" is evidently meant for the younger branches, though there is much in it which cannot fail to prove attractive to older boys. The adventures and misadventures of a "young plague," yo!e!t Master Frank Pickleberry, are set forth in the pleasant little volume, which fully narrates the misdeeds that befel a thoughtless, but by no means a wicked boy. A good moral may be extracted from the work, for the youthful perusers, which will serve to show the inestimable value of obedience and thoughtfulness concerning the feelings of others. The artist, in his freely executed illustrations, has caught the author's spirit, and gives us a capital idea of the dramatis personæ.

The gentleman with the peculiar patronymic has, in "Odds and Ends," as the title serves to indicate, got together a number of fugitive sketches, which are not put forward with any flourish. "The Aristocratic Rooks," "Old Things by New Names," "Human Hair," and "The Wedding Bonnet," are among the best things in the collection, which, we should remark, is a republication. McConnell is happy in his illustrations, to which justice has been done by engraver and printer.

Flax and Hemp: their Culture and Manipulation. By E. B. DELAMER. London: Routledge & Co.

THIS is a valuable little manual on a subject which has been too much neglected. Flax and hemp—once much grown at home—have gradually been thrown out of cultivation. This volume will, perhaps, aid in reactivating our failing resources in these indispensable plants. Mr. Delamer gives a good account of the growth, qualities, preparation, and uses of the plants on which he treats, and illustrations assist the reader to comprehend the whole subject.

History for Boys. By J. G. EDGAR. London: D. Bogue. The old "history books," which the present generation thumbed and blundered over to no profit but that of the schoolmaster, have of late years been well superseded by lighter and more readable books—not the less instructive because they are more entertaining. The present is a book of the latter class. It is admirably adapted for a prize or a present. The narratives are arranged under the heads of the European countries; the principal features and great leading incidents of each country's history being taken as the topics. The volume is nicely illustrated and got up, as such a book should be.

Remarkable Sieges. By HENRY OTTLEY. London: Ingram & Co.

A BOOK for the time. Mr. Ottley epitomises a narrative of the most memorable sieges, from that of Constantinople, in 1453, to Sebastopol—we need not say in what year. Would that the latter were a fait accompli. There are also some appropriate observations on fortifications and siege operations. The sieges narrated are those of Constantinople, Rhodes, Vienna, Haarlem, Antwerp, Lisle, Maestricht, Gibraltar, Algiers, St. Sebastian, and (last, though not least) the apparently interminable Sebastopol. The book is well compiled, as might be expected from Mr. Ottley's long connection with the press.

A Boy's Adventures in the Wilds of Australia. By WILLIAM HOWITT. London: A. Hall, Virtue, & Co.

ONE of the many good books "just out," ready for Christmas. It would be a capital present for a boy seeking information as well as amusement. It is written in a lively, familiar style, and gives a good account of the natural history of a country, in this respect, one of the most suggestive on our globe. Mr. Howitt's actual residence in the scenes he has described, with a practised pen, and a love of natural history, have combined to make a very readable, sketchy, and instructive volume.

MUSIC.

Excelsior. Words by LONGFELLOW. Music by Miss M. LINDSAT. London: Robert Cocks and Co., New Burlington-street.

Le Pivoquet Quadrilles. By STEPHEN GLOYEN. London: Robert Cocks and Co., New Burlington-street.

THE undying words of Longfellow have been set to music by Miss Lindsay, with a skill which shows her to be a complete mistress of her art. The music is simple and unostentatious in its composition; but yet it contains in its strains an indescribable beauty that must arrest the attention of the auditor, and excite the enthusiasm of the executer. Words and music were never more happily wedded than in the case of "Excelsior."

Mr. Glover's quadrilles are spirited, and makes us dance whether we would or no. The music is particularly adapted to our younger friends, from the fact of its lying easy to the fingers, and a moderate proficiency on the pianoforte ensuring it a successful achievement. There is a beautifully coloured portrait of "Pretty Polly" on the title-page, which enhances the attractions of the quadrille.

POULTRY.

FOWL HOUSES.

In directions for building the fowl house, so much depends on the locality, in respect to aspect, and building materials, that no rule can be laid down on those points. If possible, the house should be facing, or as near as possible facing the south; it should stand on a piece of rather elevated ground, or at all events not in a hollow where it would be damp. If it can be built so that the wall of the dwelling-house can form any part of it, so much the better; and if that part be the back of the kitchen fire-place, a great point is gained; for warmth has much, very much, to do with making hens lay well. Having settled the site of the house, it is next to be considered of what it shall be built. In some parts of the country stone is as cheap as anything else, and much more durable; if stone walls are used they should not be less than eight inches thick, or they will not keep out the cold. Wooden houses are much used, the boards of which should be quite three-quarters of an inch thick, each board being made to overlap the one below it about an inch. A very warm and cheap house may be built by having two wattle walls about seven inches from each other, forming in fact two wattle houses, an outer and inner house, the space between the two wattles being filled with a mortar made of road scrapings and fresh burnt lime, in the proportion of five parts of the former to one of the latter. Such walls as these will, however, take some considerable time to properly dry, which is one of the greatest objections against their use. When dry, the out and inside may be plastered and whitewashed, when it will bear all the appearance of a stone wall. With regard to the form of the house, every one has his own fancy, but the following will be found the best size for one cock and three hens, which house will, according to the table in my last paper, have to contain thirty-one fowls, old and young, during some part of the year: length seven feet, depth from front to back twelve feet, height of the walls six and a-half feet. This size supposes that there is a shed or some other place where the chicken can be put on wet days, and where the fowls can be fattened. If there be no such place, the house must be made half as long again, the extra length being partitioned off from the rest of the house, forming quite a separate apartment. An opening at least two feet square should be left in one of the walls for a window (glazed), which should be made to open, as it is required as much for ventilation as for light. A row of holes should also be pierced about four inches from the top of the wall, opposite the window, and covered with a wooden slide, so that one or more holes may be opened, as the temperature of the house may require. Each hole should be about one inch in diameter. Having thus erected the walls, the next point is the roof, which should be made with rafters in the ordinary way, of such a pitch that the highest part of the roof, inside measure, should be ten feet from the floor of the house. These rafters should then be covered with half-inch boards, as if for slating. If the weather be fine, then cover the boards with hot tar, well brushed over every part; upon this lay, while the tar is still hot, old sheets or pieces of fine canvas; if more than one piece is used, care should be taken that each piece slightly overlap the one below it; the pieces should be then closely nailed, with large headed tacks, round the hedges, and the sheets or canvas well pressed into the hot tar on the boards below; a coating of hot tar should then be laid on the canvas, every part being carefully covered. It should then be left until the finger can be lightly pressed on it without being soiled, which will be in about two days, if the weather be warm. Another coat of hot tar should then be laid on, and again in a few days a third coat should be applied, and immediately after this third coat has been laid on, river sand should be finely sifted over every part of it, to the depth of about two inches; this should be left for a week or ten days, and the superfluous sand then swept off with a hair broom, and a good, sound, durable roof will be made. Having thus finished the walls and roof, we proceed to the floor, though this of course may be gone on with, while the several coats on the roof have been drying. The earth should be dug out from the floor to the depth of five inches, very fine gravel or small broken stone should be laid into the depth of three inches, and beaten down quite firm; over this should be evenly spread, with a mason's trowel, the following cement, so as to make up the remaining two inches:—Fresh burnt lime, and finally sifted road scrapings, equal quantities, with boiling tar enough to make it the consistence of soft mortar. This should be laid down immediately, before it has time to cool; this will gradually set until it becomes as hard as stone, and is much better than stone for the fowls to walk on. After it has been spread, it should be left for a fortnight before you attempt to walk on it. We have now finished building the house, and will, if possible, fit it up inside next week. RUSTICS.

(To be continued.)

KENT POULTRY SHOW.—At this show, which took place last week, there was no competition in Cochinchinas. The entries of Spanish were scanty, and for this class only the prizes were awarded. The only specimens of black Polands in the show were exhibited by Mr. Cooke, and although of pure breed, still had the defect of black feathers sprinkled over the crest. The gold and silver Hamburgs were plentiful and of good breed, as also were the bantams. The glory of the show, however, was, without question, the Dorkings. Of these there were about thirty pairs, most of which were of a very superior kind. The other sorts of poultry were not numerous. The turkeys, geese, and ducks were, however, altogether creditable, and some of them very superior.

CLEVELAND POULTRY SHOW.—The exhibition of birds was but small, and the competition therefore limited, Cochinchinas almost alone figuring in the collection. The premiums for the poultry were awarded to Lady Elton.

THE CALLINGTON POULTRY SHOW took place on the 14th. The specimens were confined mostly in baskets, which did not assist in making their good points visible. Some of the Rouen ducks were very fine; but a fat goose, shown by Lord Ashburton, Bicton, was more especially an object of admiration. There were also numerous cockerels, Cochinchina breed, sent, not for competition, from the stock of Mr. Park-house, Plymouth.

HORSHAM.—CHRISTMAS GESE.—One of the fine geese belonging to Mr. E. Churchman, of Rudgwick, that gained the first prize at our Stock and Poultry Show last week, weighed no less than 18½ lbs. (dead weight).

GESE PURCHASERS.—Geese reavers have this year good reason to felicitate themselves. Such is the demand, chiefly for export to Newcastle, that 4d. per lb., or a rise of 1½d. since 1852, is now freely given. Immense quantities have already been bought and exported.

Prodigious Eggs.—One day last week a half-bred Cochins hen, in the possession of Mr. Bastin, of Paris-street, laid an egg weighing four and a quarter ounces.

NOTES AND QUERIES. SPANISH FOWLS.

Sir,—I quite agree with your correspondent that prizes ought to be given for the red-faced as well as for the white-faced Spanish. Believing as I do, and not without reason, that the white face is not a sufficient indication of a separate variety, I should like to see the prizes for Spanish given to the best birds, quite independently of the accident or defect of the white face. A FARMER.

PTARMIGAN OR TURKEY FOWLS.

Some months since several notices, and an engraving, of ptarmigan fowls appeared in THE FIELD. The birds referred to, and represented, were those of Dr. Burney. It was then left in doubt as to whence this pretty variety of fowl had been derived. It has now been ascertained that they were brought from Constantinople about fourteen years since. It has also been ascertained that fowls of the same description are commonly bought in the markets of Constantinople. Should the Editor of THE FIELD desire it, the history of Dr. Burney's fowls can be furnished by W. H.

THE FIELD NATURALIST.

ONE of those rare and noble birds, the gyrfalcon, was shot on the 25th November, by a person named Dixon, near Robin Hood's Bay, on the moors of Sir J. V. B. Johnstone, M.P. It is a female, and in the finest adult plumage.

A MAD WOLF lately made its appearance in the streets of St. Petersburg, and before it was killed, bit thirty-four persons, of whom six were women.

MASONIC INTELLIGENCE.

MEETINGS.

THURSDAY, Dec. 26.—Morris Lodge, No. 109, London Tavern; Lodge of Faith, No. 165, Gun Tavern, Pall-mall; Lodge of Industry, No. 219, Swan Tavern, Hungerford; Chapter 7, Royal York Perseverance, Freemasons' Tavern.

WEDNESDAY, Dec. 25.—Lodge of Benevolence at seven; Lodge of United Pilgrims, No. 745, Huron Tavern, Kennington.

THURSDAY, Dec. 28.—Gen. Com. Fem. School at Freemasons' Tavern at twelve; Castle Lodge, No. 36, Raffle's Hotel; Grenadiers' Lodge, No. 79, Freemasons' Tavern; Chapter 206, Domestic, Fetter-lane.

OLD COVEND LODGE, No. 201.—This lodge again met on the first Tuesday of the month, at the Freemasons' Tavern: the business of the evening being one initiation, three passings—viz., Mrs. Laughlin, Silcock, and Henry Alfred Taylor—and election of W.M., treasurer, and tyler, for the ensuing year. The ceremonies were admirably performed, as usual, by the present W.M., Br. Kennedy. The election of W.M. fell upon Br. Gorton; the office of treasurer was conferred upon Br. Kennedy; and Br. Beckett was re-elected tyler, which office he has held for eleven years, this lodge being the first he has ever tyled. A ball was proposed for the purpose of giving a treat to the ladies of the members of the lodge, the profits of which are intended for the Benevolent Fund. We are glad also to record the fact of this lodge having commenced a subscription in aid of the Patriotic Fund, which will remain open until the first Tuesday in the ensuing month, the day of installation.

THE MASONIC MIRROR.—The second number of this work appeared, as announced, on the 1st of the month. Want of space has prevented our noticing it earlier, but we shall endeavour to do the anecdote in our review of the next. The first number was good, but the second is certainly an improvement. We heartily recommend it to our readers, not only for its excellent advocacy of Freemasonry, but for the general character of the literary portion.

THE LATE BROTHER MOORE.—This lamented gentleman, whose horrible assassination we had the painful duty of recording last week, was a Freemason of long standing. He had passed through all the offices appertaining to the order in a manner which reflected credit upon himself and to the craft in general. He was a member of the lodge of "Peace and Harmony," No. 72, for which lodge he served the office of Grand Steward for the years 1853-4, vice, Brother William Major, whose ill state of health compelled him to succed from that enviable position. Br. Moore was also a P.Z. of the "Robert Burns Chapter," No. 25. His kindness of disposition endeared him to all who had the happiness of knowing him. The Masonic charities were greatly indebted to him; he had served as a steward to each of them, and by indefatigable personal exertions materially aided the cause of these excellent institutions. The hand of the vile assassin has suddenly despoiled the orphan and widow of a kind protector, and without warning or preparation he was hurried to his last account. He carries with him the prayers and blessings of his fellow-creatures: may they obtain for him that charity there which he endeavoured, as the almoner of the Great Architect above, to carry out here.

OUR LETTER BAG.

RATS.

Sir,—I have seen in your last number a letter from a gentleman, inquiring how he may best destroy rats. I beg, in answer, to give the result of my experience. Last summer, the lower part of my house was infested with those odious vermin. I set traps and killed many, but still they continued to increase. At last I determined to try Roth and Hingelsen's phosphorus paste. I spread the paste on thin pieces of bread, which I placed near the rat holes. The poison was taken, and the rats disappeared. About three months after, one rat was seen in my kitchen. I set some more of the poison, and not a single rat has since appeared. Let your correspondent try this method, and, if I am not much mistaken, he will get rid of the nuisance he complains of.—I am, your obedient servant,

Dec. 18th, 1854.

FOOD FOR HORSES.

Sir,—In my communication of last week in reply to A. Z. you have misprinted the word stirred instead of stowed, perhaps you will be good enough to correct this in your next. My opinion of the cause of the poor condition of the horse is confirmed by that of your other correspondent; but he is wrong in saying that if worms are the cause the condition cannot be good until they are removed; this depends on the kind of worm, of which there are several. In some instances, with proper keep, a horse may be brought into condition long before these pests are eradicated.—Yours truly,
Chorlton, Dec. 18, 1854.

NAVAL AND MILITARY.

SIR CHARLES NAPIER arrived in his flag-ship, Duke of Wellington, at Spithead, on Sunday night, and on Monday morning he landed at Portsmouth from the Piro Queen, steam-yacht, which had been sent out to Spithead to bring him on shore. He was met by several of his personal friends. Victoria Pier was decorated with flags and banners. He appeared in good health and spirits. Sir Charles at once proceeded to the residence of Commander-in-Chief Vice-Admiral Sir T. Cochrane, in the dockyard, and breakfasted with that officer. He afterwards took a walk over the Dockyard, inspecting the new wooden huts for the troops in the Crimea, and subsequently proceeded to the George Hotel, where he met Lady Napier, who had arrived in the course of the morning. Sir Charles proceeded to London by the 1.20 train.

THE BLENHEIM screw-ship, Captain W. H. Hall (late of the Hecla), arrived at Spithead on Wednesday from the Baltic. Her former captain, the Hon. F. T. Pellam, has been appointed to the new 91 gun screw-ship Exmouth, fitting out at Plymouth.

THE DUKE OF WELLINGTON screw-ship remains at Portsmouth. The flag of Vice-Admiral Sir Charles Napier still flies at her fore, his absence in London being on official business.

NECESSITY OF A HARBOUR MASTER AT BALAKLAVA.—A letter has been addressed to the Admiralty on the subject of the dangers which exist to ships navigating the Black Sea during the winter months. It is recommended that the admiral on the station be instructed to direct all transports to proceed to a place of safety during the remainder of the winter months; and the importance is suggested of having an experienced naval officer to act as harbour-master in Balaklava harbour, to direct masters of transports as to safe anchorage and mooring for their vessels.

EXTRAORDINARY PRIZE.—Mr. George Mausfield, son of the late Mr. Mansfield, shipbuilder, of Lyme Regis, has had £5,000 awarded to him as salvage for recovering 60,000 sovereigns from the ship Sacramento, wrecked at Port Philip on the 28th of April last. His boat's crew, six in number, were also awarded—one £2,000, and the others £1,500 each; making a total of 14,500.

EXPENDITURE FOR THE ARMY, NAVY, &c.—From the account of public income and expenditure issued on the 15th it appears that the expenditure in the year ended the 10th October last on account of the army was £7,060,882; on account of the navy, £10,957,769. 5s. 10d.; on account of the ordnance, £3,690,890. 11s. 9d.; Kaffir war, £330,000, and a vote of credit; additional expenses, war with Russia, £220,000.

THE FOREIGN LEGION.—The proposed raising of a Foreign Legion has been the principal topic of the week. Numerous letters on the subject appear in the daily press. One gentleman, writing to the Times, reminds us that "Hart's Army List for the year 1843, gives the number of officers upon foreign half-pay at 520. The annual Army List of this year, gives the number on the 1st of January last at 305, the mere half-pay of which 305 amounts to about £26,500 per annum (exclusive of pensions to non-commissioned officers and privates), and from the period these officers were placed upon half-pay, in 1816, no less a sum has been sent out of this country than upwards of £1,000,000 sterling to meet the half-pay of the reduced number of 305 officers." "Vox Populi" proposes to raise the soldier's pay from 1s. 1d. to 1s. 6d., and anticipates thousands will be ready to enlist. "Half-pay" suggests the withdrawal from India of 10,000 men, the peninsula being tranquil, and the 250,000 men of the E. I. Company being amply sufficient for its security. "A Clerk at £60 per year" says, that "if the soldier were paid 2s. a day when on active service, the path of honour and promotion opened to merit, and each soldier armed with a Mivv's rifle and a revolver, he, (the clerk aforesaid) and hundreds like him, would prefer a soldier's life to being rooted to his desk without prospect of improvement." "A landed proprietor," knowing well the feeling of the agricultural population, says, "that if foreign hirings are to be enrolled, our agricultural labourers will only enlist when their bad conduct prevents them obtaining other employment." "R. N. G. M." would rather have the press-gang than thus openly proelium our need to the foe; he suggests the halloo, and second battalions to the militia regiments. "A field Officer of Militia," stating that his own regiment is fit for any kind of duty, calls on the Government to embody the whole of the militia, which will afford plenty of men to fill up the ranks of the line. "Why not have a Turkish legion?" says another; or rather than a German legion, he would prefer a regiment of Canadian riflemen, a mounted corps from the Cape, or a portion of our Indian forces. But better than all would be the Turks: properly disciplined and officered by British, none would be braver than they. Colonel Perronet Thompson testifies to the bravery of the "German mercenaries" at Waterloo, especially to the cool intrepidity of the officers; but his opinion is more than counterbalanced by the extracts read by Sir E. B. Lytton in the House of Commons. On the whole, public opinion seems much opposed to the measure.

THE EARL OF CARDIGAN, who has been suffering from severe indisposition, on board his lordship's yacht, the Hynd, off Sebastopol, arising from, we believe, the fatigues of the late conflicts with the Russian forces in the Crimea, is expected to return to England early in the ensuing month, for the improvement of his health.

SIR DE LACY EVANS is nearly allied to several Scottish families, having married Miss Josette Arbuthnot, a lineal descendant of the first Viscount Arbuthnot, and niece of Mrs. Patterson Rolfe, of Banckburn, with whom she resided in this city for many years. Her brother is Admiral Alexander Dundas Young Arbuthnot, Knight of Charles III.

and San Fernando, who was one of our gallant midshipmen at Trafalgar.

THE RECRUITING STANDARD.—HORSE GUARDS, December.—Referring to the General Order of the 30th October last, regulating the standard of recruits, the General Commanding in Chief has been pleased to direct that, until further orders, the standard for the Infantry shall be reduced to five feet four inches.—G. A. WETHERILL, A.G.

SAPPERS AND MINERS.—Orders were received on Wednesday by Colonel Jones, director of the Royal Engineer Establishment at Chatham, to complete the strength of the 1st company Royal Sappers and Miners to 100 men, and to hold them in readiness to embark at the shortest possible notice for service in the Crimea.

DURING the latter part of the week a great number of serviceable men have been entered for her Majesty's land forces at the Staff-office, Delahay-street, Westminster, at the reduced height of five feet four inches, and an increased hourly of £6 per man.

THE DETACHMENTS OF TROOPS ordered to the East are undergoing instructions at the Royal Engineer department at Portsmouth in erecting the wooden barracks ordered for the Crimea.

BILLETING.—In consequence of the number of recruits and volunteers who have joined the Plymouth division of Royal Marines, the barracks are now full and some of the men are obliged to be billeted on the innkeepers.

YEOMANRY AND MILITIA.

YEOMANRY CORPS.—There are thirty-three regiments of Yeomanry now in England, at an annual expense of about £88,000.

RECRUITING FOR THE MILITIA proceeds in all parts of the country with considerable activity. As one instance may be mentioned the recruiting parties from the 1st Royal Lancashire Regiment of Militia, quartered in Portsmouth, only left for Bury, Bolton, &c., about a fortnight since, to obtain volunteers into the line in consequence of the circular appealing to the militia to do so, and since they did so, these parties have sent between three and four hundred recruits to the above-named regiment. The great majority come from Manchester, where trade is flat, the men being mostly labourers, mechanics, &c. They are, however, a very fine class of men, and, in the opinion of the officers of the regiment, the exact material to make into a thoroughly efficient soldier.

THE ROYAL SUSSEX LIGHT INFANTRY MILITIA.—On Monday morning, a large portion of this battalion arrived by railway at Brighton, from the eastern part of Sussex, many of them being agricultural labourers, and fine hearty-looking young men, and mechanics from different small towns; some fifteen or twenty were dressed in a manner that denoted them to be of the superior class of mechanics. They numbered two or three hundred. They assembled in the riding-school of the Pavilion. On entering the Pavilion, the Duke of Richmond (colonel of the regiment), conversed freely with the men; and, in about half an hour after they had assembled, the word was given by the adjutant, "All the lads enrolled since the last training go to the far end of the building." Some 150 young men were then formed into line, whilst those who had already been formed into companies separated into their respective companies; and, after the names of those lately enrolled had been called over by the adjutant, they were drafted into different companies.

THE FIRST DEVON MILITIA assembled at Exeter on Monday. Although a large number have enlisted in the line, upwards of 700 mustered on the first day, and upwards of 100 more are expected to arrive from various parts of the county. Earl Portesone is colonel.

WEST KENT LIGHT INFANTRY AND KENT ARTILLERY.—Wednesday, the 3rd of January, has been fixed for the assembling, at Maidstone, of the West Kent Light Infantry Regiment, under the command of Colonel Sir T. M. Wilson, Bart. Volunteers are coming in daily. The Kent Artillery, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Cator, half-pay, Royal Artillery, will muster on the same day at headquarters, Dover Castle. The present strength of this corps is somewhat more than 200, but they are to be made up to three companies of 100 each.

THE 2ND REGIMENT OF LANCASHIRE MILITIA assembled on Monday in Liverpool, under command of Lieutenant-Colonel Sir Thomas G. Hesketh, for permanent duty.

THE NEW MILITIA DEPOT AT PRESTON.—The depot and storehouse for the 3rd Regiment of Lancashire Militia will be completed at the end of this month, when the regiment will assemble for permanent duty. The building, in the Tudor style, which has been erected, is three storeys in height, and contains quarters for fourteen sergeants and their families, together with rooms for the arms, accoutrements, and stores of the regiment, an orderly-room and office, a guard-room and prison-cells. The walls are crowned with a battlement, and flanked by massive square bastions at the angles. A spacious parade-ground surrounds the building, and sheds are provided under which the soldiers may be drilled.

The drill of the Dorset Regiment progresses satisfactorily, in Dorchester. The number on duty is about 600.

The recruiting parties in Liverpool and the surrounding districts are very busy; and, since the 1st of last January no less than 24,103 army recruits, including 1,010 militiamen have been "passed" at the police-office. Since the 1st of November 7,016 billets have been issued in the town.

IRISH MILITIA.—The undermentioned regiments of Irish militia are to be embodied, and placed under the orders of the General Commanding-in-Chief—viz., Antrim, North Cork, Dublin County, Galway, Kerry, South Mayo, and Queen's County. The enrolling of men for the County of Dublin Regiment of militia has commenced, and progresses spiritedly.

THE GALWAY MILITIA is being actively added to. Numbers are offering themselves for service.

BELFAST.—Accounts state that from the beginning of November the ordinary militia enrolled 166 men up to Saturday last; on that day nineteen came in. These are exclusive of the Artillery Militia, to which there are numerous volunteers, but they cannot enter, as the corps is not as yet fully embodied, though all are prepared to do duty. The Colonel of the Longford Militia has begun to enrol that regiment.

CITY OF DUBLIN ARTILLERY REGIMENT OF MILITIA.—A new corps, under this title, is to be enrolled, to consist of 320 men.

THE MISFORTUNES OF WAR.—Four sons from one family, in the neighbourhood of Maidstone, have been engaged in the Crimean war, all of whom have been killed.

THE PEOPLE'S LIGHT!
—NIBBS' PATENT OXY-
DATE AND COFFAGE LAMPS produce the Cheapest Oil Light extant. An Illustrated Price List for a stamped envelope. A 1s Lamp and Wicks for eighteen stamps. A 2s 6d. Hand Lamp and Wicks free for forty-two stamps.
Address J. S. NIBBS, Bakewell,
Derby.

PERFECT FITTING TROUSERS
for 16s.—The most extensive and varied Stock in London, consisting of upwards of 1,000 Patterns, in West of England, Scotch, Anglos, &c., all wool, and warranted thoroughly shrank, are unqualified for elasticity, fineness of texture, and durability of wear, to be obtained only at F.
STRAY and Co.'s, Registered Trousers Makers,
39 and 40, HAYMARKET, corner of Piccadilly.
Also, their celebrated Loose-sleeved Cape, lined throughout, at 28s., unquestionably the best fitting and most economical garment out this season. An immense stock kept on hand, or to order. The price of every article made, or to measure, marked in plain figures.

NEW KIND of WATERPROOF
BOOTS for the CRIMEA.—THOMAS
DUNCAN & Co., MILITARY BOOT-MAKERS,
61, FILL-MALL, and 49, PRINCES-STREET,
EDINBURGH, are the sole proprietors of a new and peculiar preparation of leather, which is entirely free from all the pernicious substances usually employed in waterproofing: is very soft and pliant, and has been thoroughly tested and patented by FIELD MARSHAL LORD RAG-
LAN and OFFICERS of the ARMY in the EAST.
The BOOTS DUNCAN and Co. are now making for the ARMY are lined with FUR, or otherwise, and are especially adapted for the severe winter of the Crimea. If any friends would wish to send out a pair, D. and Co. can make them from an old boot, on description of the size.
Admirably fitted for HUNTING and SHOOT-ING BOOTS.

IMPORTANT to FAMILIES FUR-
NISHING, who study elegance with economy.
JAMES COOK'S THREE GUINEA FRENCH-
POLISHED MAHOGANY ARABIAN BED-
STEAD, Bedding, Cabinet, Carpet, Looking-glass, and Upholstery Warehouse.—Brompton-house, 22 and 23, Queen's-buildings, Knightsbridge. Estimates given, and a list of prices sent post-free.

KNOW THYSELF!—The secret art of DISCOVERING the TRUE CHARAC-TER of INDIVIDUALS from the peculiarities of their HANDWRITING, has long been practised by ELLEN GRAHAM with astonishing success.
Her startling declarations are both full and detailed, differing from anything hitherto attempted.
All persons wishing to "know themselves," or any friend in whom they are interested, must send a specimen of their writing, stating sex and age, enclosing thirteen penny post stamps, to Miss GRAHAM, 3, NEW-ROAD, HORNSEY, Middlesex, and they will receive in a few days a minute detail of the mental and moral qualities, talents, instincts, affections, virtues, failings, &c., of the writer, with many other things hitherto unsuspected.
"Miss Graham is a most successful graphiolo-gist"—Family Herald.

DO YOU WANT BEAUTIFUL HAIR,
WHISKERS, EYEBROWS, &c.?—Notwithstanding the numerous oily, highly scented, and most injurious imitations which have been put forth, ROSALIE COUPELLE'S GENUINE is the only preparation to be depended on for the growth of Hair, Whiskers, &c., as also curling, nourishing, beautifying and strengthening the hair, and checking greyness. It is a most unique and elegant compound, and has never been known to fail. Price 2s. per bottle through all Chemists and Perfumers, or sent post free on receipt of 21 postage stamps, by ROSALIE COUPELLE, 69,
CASTLE-STREET, NEWMAN-STREET, OXFORD-STREET, London.

Mr. Williams, 8, Lowther-street, Liverpool.—"I can now show as fine a head of hair as any person, solely from using your Crinoline."

Sergeant Crover, Longford Barracks, Ireland.—
"Through using your Crinoline, I have an excellent mousetraps, which I had before despaired of."

Mr. Hallett, Chamberlain.—"It surpasses every thing of the kind."

Mrs. Carter, Pangbourne.—"My head, which was quite bald, is now covered with new hair."

Mr. Lane, Golden Lion, Macclesfield-street, City-road, London.—"A friend of mine, Mr. Harris, describes its effects as truly astonishing."

Mr. Yates, Hairdresser, Malton.—"The young man has now a good pair of whiskers. I want two bottles for other customers."

IF YOUR HAIR IS GREY OR RED use ROSALIE COUPELLE'S PURE IN-STANTANEOUS LIQUID HAIR DYE, universally acknowledged as the only perfect one, and infinitely superior to the numerous disgraceful imitations which smell horribly, burn the hair, and leave an unnatural tinge. Price 3s. 6d. per bottle, through all Chemists, &c., or sent free, secure from observation, for 32 postage stamps.

Mr. Whitaker, 22, Fargate, Sheffield.—"Your Hair Dye is highly spoken of by all who have purchased it of me."

Mr. Pearce, King-street, Lullow.—"Your Hair
Dye has succeeded admirably, it gives such a natural tinge."

Mr. Pearson, 29, Fishergate, Nottingham.—
"Your Hair Dye is excellent."

Mr. Casey, 2, Glosier-green, Oxford.—"It gives the greatest satisfaction."

James Thompson Esq., Middleton.—"It answers the highest expectations."

Mr. J. N. Clark, Killinick, Wexford.—"It is a most excellent and immediate Dye for the Hair, far preferable to all others."

Obtainable through all respectable Chemists and Perfumers, or of ROSALIE COUPELLE, 69,
CASTLE-STREET, NEWMAN-STREET, OXFORD-STREET, London.

RIMMEL'S TOILET VINEGAR,
(As exhibited in the Fountains at the Crystal Palace).
Is far superior to Eau de Cologne, as a Tonic and refreshing Lotion, for the Toilet or Bath, a reviving Perfume, and a powerful Disinfectant for apartments or sick rooms. Its numerous useful and sanitary properties render it an indispensable family requisite. Price 2s. 6d. and 5s.

Just out, price 6d.,
RIMMEL'S PERFUMED MINIATURE ALMANACK,
For importing a delightful and lasting scent in Pocket-banks, Cam-cases, Desks, Work-boxes, &c. It is beautifully illustrated, and forms a most acceptable Christmas Present to friends at home or abroad. Sent by post for seven stamps.

Sold by E. RIMMEL, Perfumer to her Majesty, 39, GERRARD-STREET, SOHO, London; and by all Booksellers, Perfumers, and Chemists.

SLACKS' NICKEL SILVER

Is the hardest and most perfect white metal ever invented; and equals Silver in durability and colour. Made into every article for the Table, as Tea and Coffee-pots, Cruet-frames, Candlesticks, Waiters, &c.

A Sample Tea-set will be sent Free on receipt of Ten Postage Stamps.

	Fiddle Pat.	Strong Fiddle.	Throat Pat.	Knob's Pat.
Table-spoons and Forks, per dozen	12s. & 15s.	17s.	24s.	30s.
Dessert ditto	10s. & 13s.	16s.	21s.	25s.
Ten-spoons	5s. & 6s.	8s.	11s.	12s.

SLACKS' NICKEL ELECTRO-PLATED.

R. and J. S. call attention to their NICKEL SILVER ELECTRO-PLATED, which cannot be distinguished from Sterling Silver.

	2nd Quality.	1st Quality.
Table-spoons and Forks, per dozen	36s.	40s.
Dessert ditto	20s.	24s.
Ten-spoons, per dozen	12s.	15s.

Also, every article for the Table, as in Silver.

SLACKS' TABLE CUTLERY AND FURNISHING WAREHOUSE

Has been celebrated for 50 years for quality and cheapness; and contains all the newest patterns in Fenders, Fire-irons, Ten-trays, Dish covers, and every article in Furnishing Ironmongery. Iron Fenders, from 3s. 6d.; Fire-irons, from 5s.; small set of Kitchen Furniture, £3; and every requisite in Furnishing Ironmongery, which, from their simple but satisfactory plan of marking each article in plain figures, at the Lowest Possible Prices consistent with quality, will at once prove the advantage of purchasing at their Establishment. Orders above £2 delivered carriage free, per rail. Their Book, containing upwards of 200 Engravings, may be had gratis, or sent to any part, post free.

RICHARD and JOHN SLACK, 336, STRAND (opposite Somerset House).

ALLEN'S ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE,

CONTAINING SIZE, PRICE, AND DESCRIPTION
OF UPWARDS OF 100 ARTICLES.

CONSISTING OF PORTMANTEAUS, TRAVELLING
BAGS, LADIES' PORTMANTEAUS, DESPATCH BOXES,
WRITING DESKS, DRESSING CASES, and other Travelling Requisites, forwarded on receipt of two stamps.

ALLEN'S Travelling Bag (patented) has the opening as large as the bag itself, and therefore possesses an immense advantage over all others.

ALLEN'S Registered Despatch Box and Writing Desk, and their
New Quadruple Portmanteau (containing four compartments), are the best articles of the kind ever produced.

J. W. & T. ALLEN,
MANUFACTURERS OF PORTABLE BARRACK-ROOM FURNITURE, AND
MILITARY OUTFITTERS (see separate Catalogue),
18 & 22, WEST STRAND.

TO SPORTSMEN, PEDESTRIANS, AND OTHERS.

A GREAT VARIETY OF NEW AND SECOND-HAND
SANDWICH BOXES, HUNTING FLASKS, DRAM BOTTLES,
IN SIZES, AND BEAKERS IN NESTS, IN ELECTRO-PLATE OR SILVER.

At THOMAS'S, Silversmiths and Platers, 153, New Bond-street, London.

WATER POISONED LEADEN PIPES.

"The above engraving represents accurately a section of a leaden pipe, which was employed for a short time in conveying water from a well on the grounds of Mr. Dick, of Bournemouth, Isle of Wight.
The original section of pipe is 8 1/2 in. long, 2 1/2 in. diameter, and 5-16 in. thick. A great part of the internal surface is corroded by the action of the water, but, as shown in the drawing, four deep excavations have been made, and another is shaded out of view by the manner in which the section of the pipe has been cut. The water has cut these deep pits almost through the pipe, and not only upon the portion which we have illustrated, but have formed similar channels throughout the entire length."— Expositor.

N.B.—The corrosive water of the Isle of Wight has no effect on Gutta Percha Tubing. See Testimonial below.

DURABILITY OF GUTTA PERCHA TUBING.

Many inquiries having been made as to the durability of Gutta Percha Tubing, the Gutta Percha
Company have pleasure in giving publicity to the following letter from Sir RAYMOND JARVIS, Ventnor, Isle of Wight.

(Second Testimonial) March 10, 1872.
"In reply to your letter received this morning, respecting the Gutta Percha Tubing for pump service, I can state, with much satisfaction, it answers perfectly. Many boilers and other pot-works intended to be used, and there is not the least apparent difference since the first laying down, now several years; and I am informed that it is to be adopted generally in the houses that are being erected here."

THE GUTTA PERCHA COMPANY, PATENTEES,
15, WHARF-ROAD, CITY-ROAD, LONDON.

FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS.

PATTERNS of the new
COLOURED SHIRT.
INGS in every variety of colours. Upwards of 200 different patterns for making FORD'S EUREKA SHIRTS sent per post (free) on receipt of six postage stamps. Price 27s. the half-dozen.

FORD'S WHITE EUREKA
SHIRTS, best quality, six for 10s.;
second quality, six for 8s.; if washed, ready for use, 2s.
extra.

CAUTION.—Ford's Eureka
Shirts are stamped, "F. S.
POULTRY, LONDON," without which none are genuine.

* Catalogues, with particulars, post free.

RICHARD FORD, 38, Poultry, London.

STAMMERING perfectly and permanently CURED, both Children and Adults.
The system is easily understood and applied, and has been successfully pursued for the last twenty years, by Mr. BARTHOLOMEW, who cured himself.
References to clergymen, gentlemen, and the parents of children cured.
Address Mr. BARTHOLOMEW, MELBOURNE-
SQUARE, NORTH BRITAIN.
Children received into the House.

FOOD and DIET.—HARD'S FARI- NACEOUS FOOD for INFANTS and INVALIDS.

"I have carefully examined, and repeatedly prescribed, 'Hard's Farinaceous Food' (see 'Perle's Recipes on Food and Diet,' pages 3 and 175, &c.), which is prepared from the most nutritious of the cereal grains. It combines both antiscorbutic and non-nutritious alimentary principles, and forms a very valuable food for children and invalids."
—JOHN PERLE, M.D., F.R.S.,
"Assistant Physician to the London Hospital."
"47, Finsbury-square. July 1, 1873."

Sold by all Chemists and Druggists, Patent Medicine Vendors, Grocers, Italian Warehousemen, and Confectioners, in 1s. and 2s. packets, and tin cases, 7s. 6d. each. Observe. All genuine packets and cases are signed "JAS. HARD'S" and manufactured at the Royal Victoria Mill, Dartford,
Kent.

DEAFNESS and NOISES in the HEAD.—Institution for the Cure of Deaf- ness, 2, Suffolk-place, Pall-mall, London.—Instant and permanent restoration of hearing guaranteed, without the use of ear-trumpets, instruments, or causing any moment's inconvenience to the most aged or nervous sufferer. Dr. HUGHES'S new and extraordinary discovery, by one consultation, enables deaf persons of either sex to hear imme- diately with perfect ease the lowest whisper, and magically removes all ringing in the ears. Hos- pitals and private testimonials, and certificates from the most eminent physicians and surgeons in England, in whose presence deaf persons had been cured, and many hundreds of private patients cured, can be seen or referred to. Hours of con- sultation, eleven till four every day. FRANCIS ROBERT HUGHES, Member of the London Royal College of Surgeons, May 2, 1873; Licentiate of the Apothecaries' Company, April 30, 1870.

Just Published,
SELF-CURE of DEAFNESS, for COUNTRY
FAMILIES: A Stop to Empiricism, Quackery, and Extortive Fees. Sent, on receipt of seven stamps, free. Examination free.
2, Suffolk-place, Pall-mall.

SOUND and ROBUST HEALTH.

THE blessing of Health may be enjoyed by every one by the use of RAY'S WORS-THERS' PILLS, which are now universally admitted to be the BEST REMEDY FOR MEDICINE in existence. Their peculiarly renovating and invigorating qualities render them valuable to all who, from exposure to impure atmosphere, residence in low and damp localities, or from sedentary habits, have become the victims of physical debility or extreme nervous sensitivness with their attendant miseries. These Pills, which are wholly composed of Vegetable Substances, are a fine stomachic, a mild yet efficient aperient, and thousands who have tried other medicines in vain have testified to the benefits they have received from their use.

Sold in boxes, at 1s. 1d., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d., each at the Depot, 51, FLEET-STREET, London, and by all Medicine Vendors.

DO YOU WANT BEAUTIFUL HAIR,

WHISKERS, &c.?—If so, use PALMA-TILLA, declared by thousands of testimonials to be magical in its effects. In all cases of baldness it is a certain remedy, causing a thick and luxuriant growth, strengthening weak hair, preventing its falling off, and checking greyness in all its stages. For the production of Whiskers and Moustaches in two or three weeks it has never been known to fail.

Price 2s.; sent post free (anywhere) on receipt of 21 penny postage stamps, by Miss ALICE MELVILLE, 25, Argyll-square, London.

"I was quite bald, but have now a good head of hair."—Wm. Hoyleton.

"My whiskers are growing very thick."—R.
Mole, Esq.

"It restored my hair, which I had lost in patches."—W. Sturt.

"It has quite checked the greyness."—Miss Ellis.

"My moustache is greatly improved."—Captain
Ross.

LEA & PERRINS' EXTRACT OF A LETTER from a MEDICAL GENTLEMAN at Madras, to his brother at Worcestershire, May, 1871.

"TALL LEA & PERRINS' SAUCE is the best I have ever used, and I am in my opinion, the most palatable as well as the most wholesome sauce that is made."

"I restored my hair, which I had lost in patches."—W. Sturt.

"It has quite checked the greyness."—Miss Ellis.

"My moustache is greatly improved."—Captain
Ross.

Worcestershire SAUCE.

Sold everywhere by the principal dealers in Sauces.

PROVINCED BY CONNOISSEURS, TO BE THE
"ONLY GOOD SAUCE" AND APPLICABLE TO EVERY VARIETY OF DISH.

Worcestershire SAUCE.

Worcestershire SAUCE.

Worcestershire SAUCE.

Worcestershire SAUCE.

Worcestershire SAUCE.

Worcestershire SAUCE.

Worcestershire SAUCE.

Worcestershire SAUCE.

Worcestershire SAUCE.

TO BE LET, SOLD, &c.

GAME and SHOOTING LODGE.—To be LET, for the term of seven years, the Shooting over about 10,000 acres, in the Parish of Gartau, Barony of Kilmarcan, County of Down. There are large quantities of Grouse, Partridge, Hares, Woodcocks, and Snipe on the property, which has been preserved. There is a comfortable two story Slate Lodge, with Stabling and Coach-house, that would be let, either with or without land. Apply to PITT SKIPTON.—Londonderry, 27th Nov. 1834.

TO FOX-HUNTERS or PRIVATE FAMILIES.—Gloucestershire.—Duke of Beaufort's, V. W. II., and Earl Fitzharding's Hounds.—To be LET, with immediate possession, a neat and convenient VILLA RESIDENCE, most pleasantly situated close to the town of Tetbury, comprising Drawing and Dining Rooms, and Library, seven Bed Rooms, Groom's Room, Stabling, and all necessary offices, well supplied with water; an excellent Garden. Rent moderate. Apply to Mr. GOODWIN, BOOKSELLER, TETBURY.

GLoucestershire
MANSSION to LET, furnished, with good SHOOTING over a Manor of 2,000 Acres, well stocked with Game, in a good Hunting country, being within easy distances from the Badminton and V. W. II. Kennels, and six miles from the Tetbury Road Station of the G. W. R. For particulars apply to G. Post-office, Avening, Stroud N. B. Rent £250 per annum.

RED and FALLOW DEER.
TO BE SOLD, a magnificent Herd of about 50 RED and 50 FALLOW DEER, many of the Does quite fat. Apply to Messrs. BEADEL and SONS, 25, GRESHAM-STREET, CITY.

DOG CART for SALE.—A light, superior Vehicle, with every convenience, nearly new, at ELLIOTT'S, 85, WESTMINSTER-BRIDGE-ROAD.

SPANISH and BRAHMA CHICKENS for SALE, bred from Mr. FOX's well-known PRIZE BIRDS, for 10s. each. Some splendid old birds, of both kinds, to be SOLD cheap, in consequence of Mr. FOX removing from the country. Very Game and Poultry Netting, Poultry Hurdles, Hen Houses, Chicken Coops, Flower Stands and Trainers, Garden Arches, Wire Blinds, Sieves, Screens, Wire Wire of every description, and all kinds of Wire Work useful and ornamental. Apply at F. H. FOX'S CITY OF LONDON WIRE WORKS, 41, SKINNESTREET, LONDON. *Illustrated Catalogues forwarded post free.

WANTED.

HORSES WANTED.—The Proprietor of the CENTRAL HORSE and CARRIAGE REPOSITORY begs to inform the Nobility, Gentry, and the Public that a great number of Horses are now WANTED for the ARMY. They should be strong, active, and from five to nine years old, at prices from £25 to £50. Owners of Horses can meet purchasers or agents daily at the Repository. Several applications for good Hunters, to carry 12 stone and upwards. All Horses sold will be paid for on the third day after the sale. R. D. FEA, Proprietor, Southwark, London.

RABBIT SHOOTING.—WANTED, for ONE MONTH, from end of DECEMBER to end of JANUARY, within a short distance of London, Warwickshire, or Ayrshire. Worcesterhire. Address S. B. J., Box 31, Post office, Birmingham.

FARM WANTED, from 50 to 150 Acres, about one-fourth Meadow, and the remainder Arable, with a good HOUSE, and all necessary Outbuildings. Address, stating rent, size of House, tithes (if any), amount of rates of taxes, and any further particulars, to J. C. S., 33, Lower Marine Terrace, Margate.

WANTED TO RENT, a moderate-sized old-fashioned COUNTRY HOUSE (a Black and White or Stone one preferred), situated within a few miles by road, or near to a Station within twenty miles by rail, from Birmingham. Apply, by letter only, 508 Herald Office, Birmingham.

FARM BAILIFF.—A respectable young Man, age 20, WANTS a SITUATION at Christmas. He has had the entire management for two last employers, and can be well recommended. Security if required. Address C. E., Post-office, Shiffnal.

WANTED, by a respectable Man, a SITUATION as GAMEKEEPER, one who thoroughly understands his business, or would have no objection to the care of a horse and chaise, or work in the garden; can have five years' good character. Address to L. G., at Mr. PALMER'S, Stationer, Eastgrinstead, Sussex.

WANTED, a Business Man, with £200, as PARTNER in a concern clearing £500 per annum, and may be doubled. Apply, by letter, P. P., Post-office, Hull.

WANTED, a stout, active Lad, as an APPRENTICE in a large FENCING MARKET GARDEN fifteen miles from London. A premium will be required. Direct W. BLACK, COLNEY-STREET, ST. ALBAN'S, KENT.

GROOM.
WANTED, immediately, a GROOM, to look after Three Hunters. He will be required to wait occasionally at table, and make himself generally useful. A lad under him Good character indispensable. Address J. R., Messrs. RIDGGS, booksellers, Grantham.

TO LANDED PROPRIETORS.
JOHN HALL, Esq., of Hestley Hall, near Bawtry, formerly Land Agent to the late Earl of Spencer, can with confidence recommend a Middle-aged Man as Farm Bailiff. He is practically acquainted with First-class Farming, has had much experience in Draining and reclaiming Waste Land, and thoroughly understands the management of Live Stock. His present employer (with whom he has been many years on a Model Farm) will be happy to recommend him, and only parts with him on account of the farm being let. Letters addressed as above will meet with immediate attention.

Published this day, crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 2s. 6d.

THE UNSPEAKABLE;

ON, LIFE AND ADVENTURES OF A STAMMERER.

LONDON: CLARKE & BEYTON, FLEET-STREET.

A GARDENER, who has had sixteen years' experience in general Foreing, Kitchen, and modern Flower Gardening, and a successful grower of the Fine Apple, being now at liberty, is wishful to engage himself to any Nobleman or Gentleman requiring the services of a thorough practical Man. Apply to Mr. SAMUEL ATTLEBY, Nursery, Balby, Doncaster.

AS HEAD GARDENER, or Gardener and Bailiff, a married Man.—A Gentleman leaving England will be glad to RECOMMEND his GARDENER to any nobleman or gentleman requiring a steady, trustworthy person. Extensive experience in forcing, thorough knowledge of stove and greenhouse plants; also the management of land and breeding of stock. Address H. II., post-office, Shooter's-hill, Kent.

BUILDING SOCIETIES.—The Important Judgment of the Lord Chancellor in "Fleming v. Self," involving the Rights and Liabilities of Building Societies, will appear verbatim in a Double Number of THE LAW TIMES of this Day. A copy sent to any person enclosing 18 postage stamps to the LAW TIMES Office, 29, Essex-street, Strand.

THE NEW MILITIA LAW.
THE MILITIA LAW, as altered by the Acts of last Session, and all the new Orders and Regulations, as supplied for this Work by the War Office. By THOS. W. SAUNDERS, Esq., Barrister-at-Law. Price 8s. 6d., cloth. CROCKFORD, 29, Essex-street, Strand.

COMMON BLUNDERS MADE in SPEAKING and WRITING. By CHARLES W. SMITH. Free by post for Five Stamps.

SMITH'S HINTS ON ELOCUTION. Post Free for Fourteen Stamps. "Materials for years of reflection."—Leader. Address Mr. SMITH, Buckingham Chambers, 11, Buckingham-street, Strand, London.

Just Published, price, in cloth, 2s. 6d.; by post, 3s.; as a pocket-book, with metallic paper and pencil, 4s. 6d.; by post, 5s.

RUFF'S GUIDE to the TURF; or, ROCKET RACING COMPANION for 1855.—Contents: The Nominations for Great Britain and Ireland for 1855, and the Great Stakes for 1855; a Complete Calendar of the Races in Great Britain and Ireland for 1854; the Horses Indexed, with their Pedigrees; Laws of Racing, Lengths of Courses; Revised and Enlarged Lists of the Trainers; Winners of the Great Races from their Commencement; Races to Come, Derby Lots, &c. &c. London: PIPER, STEPHENSON, and SKESE, 23, Paternoster-row. Sold by all Booksellers, and at all Railway Stations.

Now ready, Gratis and Post Free,
A LIST of NEW WORKS and NEW EDITIONS recently added to MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY. Also, a LIST of SURPLUS COPIES of Recent Works withdrawn from circulation, and offered to Country Librarians and others, at greatly reduced prices for cash. CHARLES EDWARD MUDIE, 51D, New Oxford-street.

Entirely New Comic Songs never before Published.

MR. W. LAMBERT EDMONDS begs to inform his friends and the public that the SECOND SERIES of his CREMONA COMIC SONG-BOOK is now ready, price One Shilling; post free, 1s. 6d. London: ALLMAN and Son, 42, Holborn-hill.

NEW VOCAL MUSIC PUBLISHED by ROBERT COCKS and Co.

EXCELSIOR. By Miss M. LINDSAY. Illustrated. 2s. 6d.

SPEAK GENTLY. By the Same. 2s. 6d.

PULASKI'S BANNER (Song of the Moravian Nuns): Duet. By the Same Illustrated. 3s.

FADING AWAY: Song. By Miss ANNE FRICKER. 2s.

TRUTH in ABSENCE: Song. By EDMUND B. HARPER. 2s.

AVE MARIA: Song. By FRANZ ABT. 2s.

The STAR and the TEAR. By RUCKEN. 2s. each; and MARY ASTORE. By STEPHEN GLOVER. 2s.

ROBERT COCKS and Co.'s HANDBOOK of STANDARD ENGLISH SONGS, &c. arranged with an acct. for the Pianoforte. By JOSEPH WARREN. Imperial 8vo. In Nine Numbers. Each 4d.

DUNOIS the BRAVE (or Partant pour la Syrie), as a Glee or Chorus. Arranged by FRANK MORI. No. 102 of the Handbook of Glee, price 2d. The same for two treble voices and bass, with pianoforte accompaniment, 2s. 6d. Also, Strew Roses—Gather Garlands: a Song of Victory. Words by Charles Mackay, Esq. Music by Frank Mori. Price 2s.

ORATORIOS, &c., for PRESENTS.—ROBERT COCKS and Co.'s Octavo Editions, Edited by JOHN BISHOP, of Cheltenham. Messiah (from Mozart's Score, with an Appendix of 57 pages). 6s. 6d.; The Creation, 4s. 6d.; Judas Maccabaeus, 4s. 6d.; Israel in Egypt, 4s. 6d.; Alexander's Feast, 3s.; Zadok the Priest, 6d.; Mozart's First Service, 2s. 6d.; Beethoven's First Mass in C, 3s. 6d. Also, Samson, by Dr. Clarke, 6s.

TO GLEE PARTIES, Amateur and Professional.—WARREN'S HANDBOOK of Glee, Catches, Canons, Madrigals, Part Songs, &c. with Piano Accompaniment. 102 Numbers, each 2d., or two vols., bound in cloth, gilt, each 4s.

TO-MORROW: Glee for Three Voices. Words by Charles Mackay, Esq. Music by Sir H. BISHOP, Mus. Doc Oxon. 3s.

"Oh! Ye TEARS! Oh! Ye TEARS!" Glee for Three Voices. Words by Charles Mackay, Esq. Music by Sir H. BISHOP. 2s. 6d. London: ROBERT COCKS and Co., New Burlington-street. Music Publishers to the Queen, and of all Musicians.

THE LONDON NEWSPAPERS.—GRATIS, a LIST of all the LONDON NEWSPAPERS and MAGAZINES, with their price, politics, and day of publication. The "Times," and all the other Newspapers, forwarded by the Morning and Evening Mails on the day of publication, and the day after, at reduced prices, and with printed directions, to insure punctuality. JOHN NASU & Co., 4, Saville-place, Regent-street.

ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS.
THE YEAR 1855 bids fair to be one of the most important and eventful of modern history. On the 6th of JANUARY, 1855, will be issued the FIRST NUMBER of a New Volume of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, and not only of a New Volume, but of a New Year—each volume being perfect and complete in itself—containing, for the time, a faithful record, pictorial and descriptive, of all events of interest in every part of the world. To that limited portion of the public who do not subscribe to this Journal, it may be stated that no period could be selected more opportune for commencing; the whole expense being but Twenty-six Shillings per annum exclusive of Double Numbers, which are issued on rare occasions, which would be impossible to crowd the important events and Engravings into a single Number; for this small sum the Subscriber will receive Twenty-four large Pages—Seventy-two Columns—of the most interesting information, carefully selected from the News of the Week, interspersed with a variety of charming Articles on the chief topics of the day.

The ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS has, by its impartial and consistent advocacy of the welfare of the public, secured for itself a political influence scarcely second to any Newspaper in the Empire; and reference can, with some pride, be made to the support afforded to all beneficial measures proposed and adopted by the English Parliament.

Foreign Politics will ever command the attention which ought to be devoted to so important a feature of a Newspaper. On the question of the Russian War, during the year 1854, ONE THOUSAND ENGRAVINGS appeared in the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS. Extensive arrangements, calculated to improve this popular Journal, and engagements, such as will greatly enrich its Literature, Scientific, and other departments, have been made, and will thus combine on this Paper the greatest talent of the day.

The ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS has been established thirteen years, during which period it has received a greater degree of encouragement and approbation than any Journal ever published. This is proved by the returns of Stamps issued from time to time by order of Parliament. The Stamps applied for the first six months of 1851 were valued at 2,734,000, showing a WEEKLY CIRCULATION of UPWARDS of ONE HUNDRED and THIRTY THOUSAND COPIES!

Terms, for payment in advance—Half-year, 17s. 6d.; Year, 26s.

Any of the Volumes of the ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, from the commencement to the present time, may now be had, in paper or cloth. Covers for Binding the Volumes, 2s. 6d. each.

All Numbers may be sent free by Post to any part of the Kingdom and the Colonies.

Give an order for Six Months, to ensure all the gratuitous Prints and Supplements. Supplied by all Booksellers and Newsmen.

The ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS is published in London every Saturday, Stamped, to go free by Post, Sixpence per Copy.

Office, 198, Strand, London.

A SUPPLEMENT GRATIS, with the WEEKLY DISPATCH, every week until further notice.

The unexampled interest which attaches to every incident connected with the operations of the Allied Armies in the East has determined the Proprietors of the WEEKLY DISPATCH to devote a greater space to the intelligence from the seat of war than the ordinary limits of this large newspaper published, could possibly afford, and with the view of giving the amplest details, they have resolved on the issue of a SERIES of SUPPLEMENTS gratis, which will include every particular of interest connected with the Siege and decision of the contest at Sebastopol, and will be continued whenever demanded by the progress of the Campaign.

By the publication of these Supplements the portion of the paper usually devoted to the incidents of domestic and political importance will be reserved intact, and the engrossing subject of the War will receive the fullest and most varied illustration.

A SUPPLEMENT will be published on SUNDAY NEXT (gratis), and on every succeeding week until further notice.

Orders may be given to all Newsvendors in town and country; and to the Publisher, at the DISPATCH OFFICE, 139, FLEET-STREET.

SUPERB NOVELTIES in PAPIER MACHE, at MEHUS, 4, LEADENHALL-STREET, LONDON—A visit to his Establishment will prove that there is not in London another such Stock of Elegancies. They consist of tables, envelope cases, netting boxes, companions, cabinets, jewel cases, work boxes, dressing cases, tea caddies, hand and pole screens, card racks, table inkstands, regency writing desks, portfolios, playing cards, and visiting card cases, cigar and bottle cases, note and cake baskets; also an assortment of needle cases, in pearl and tortoiseshell, silver and gold pencil cases, pen holders, and other articles suitable for presents. Inventor of the Patent Castulated Tooth-brush.

BILE! BILE! BILE!
If you suffer from the above distressing complaint, send twelve postage stamps to W. S. WORBOYS, CHEMIST, 76, NEW CUT, LAMBETH, London, and receive a Box of Pills, Diet Table, and plain rules in cases of sickness or accident, by return of post.

N.B.—If you wish to keep the doctor out of your house, don't neglect this timely advice.

DEAFNESS.—IMPORTANT DISCOVERY.—Dr. MANFRED, M.R.C.S., has this day published, free by post for eight postage stamps, a PHYSICIAN'S GUIDE for COUNTRY PATIENTS, for the Perfect and Permanent Restoration of Hearing, by his invaluable new treatment. Being a step to quackery, cruel impositions on the suffering public, and exorbitant charges, this book will save thousands from the impositions of the self-styled doctors, inasmuch as the hearing can be restored for life. Deafness of the most inveterate nature relieved in half an hour, cured in a few hours, almost instant cessation of noises in the ears and head, by painless treatment. Hundreds of letters may be seen, and persons referred to, who have heard the usual tone of conversation in a few hours. Patients received daily at Dr. MANFRED'S residence, 72, REGENT-STREET, London (first door in Air-street), where all letters must be addressed.

ST. GEORGE ASSURANCE COMPANY.

118, FALL MALL, LONDON.
Capital, £100,000, in Shares of £5 each,
(On which Interest at the rate of £5 per cent. per annum, exclusive of dividend, is guaranteed by the Deed of Settlement.)

DIRECTORS.
Chairman—VISCOUNT RANELAGH, Park-place, St. James's.
Deputy Chairman—HENRY POWNALL, Esq., Ladbroke-square, Notting Hill.
Borlase H. Adams, Esq., 35, Lincoln's-inn-fields.
J. C. Cobbold, Esq., M.P., Ipswich, Suffolk.
John Doherty, Esq., 6, Arlington-street.
Henry Haines, Esq., Rectory House, Mitcham.
Lewis Hough, Esq., Little Ealing, Middlesex.
Col. Brownlow Knox, M.P., 28, Wilton Crescent.
William Henry Lammie, Esq., Shorolds, Fulham.
Sir T. Herbert Maddock, M.P., 163, New Bond-street.
John Benjamin Nevill, Esq., Twickenham.
J. E. Panier, Esq., Fulham.
Secretary—W. C. URQUHART, Esq.

The leading features of this office are:—
1. Life Assurance in all its branches.
2. Premiums payable Quarterly, Half-yearly, Annually, or by a Single Sum.
3. The Assurance of Defective Titles, thereby restoring the property to its full value.
4. The Redemption of Leasholds, Lifeholds, and Mortgages.
5. The Enfranchisement of Copyholds.
6. Assurances for Members of Freehold Land and Building Societies.
7. Endowments for Husbands, Wives, or Nominees.
8. Endowments for Children on attaining a Certain Age.
9. Annuities of every description granted on Terms peculiarly favourable.
10. Deposit Assurances, offering all the usual advantages of a Bank.
11. Loans on real and Personal Security.
12. Loans, enabling parties to Purchase their own Houses, thus converting Rent Payments into Capital.
13. Dissolved Lives assured at Equitable Rates.
14. Policies granted upon Half-Credit Premiums.
15. Policies, without extra Rates, to Persons in the Militia, or others, not forfeited, if killed in defending the country from invasion.
16. Notices of Assignments of Policies Registered.
17. Medical Referees paid by the Company.
18. Age of the Life Assured admitted on all Policies, on reasonable proof being given.
19. Stamp Duties on Life Policies paid by the Company.
20. Three-fourths of the Profits on Life Policies apportioned every fifth year amongst the Assured whose Policies are of Three Years' standing.
For further particulars, Forms of Proposal, and Prospectuses, apply to the SECRETARY, at the Offices as above.

PROVISION AGAINST DISABILITY by Sickness or Accident, effected with the LAW PROPERTY and LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, 30, Essex-street, Strand.

Example: A person aged 30, may secure an Annuity of £100 a year in case of permanent disability, by payment of only 35s. per annum.

Forms and particulars forwarded to any applicant, by E. BARNES, Secretary.

REDEMPTION of MORTGAGES and LOANS secured by a Policy which guarantees the repayment of Loans at a fixed period, or earlier in case of death, so that the Property may pass unencumbered to the family, by the LAW PROPERTY and LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, 30, Essex-street, Strand. Apply to E. BARNES, Secretary.

BANK OF DEPOSIT, NATIONAL ASSURANCE and INVESTMENT ASSOCIATION,
No. 3, FALL MALL EAST, LONDON.
Established A.D. 1844.
Empowered by Special Act of Parliament.

PARTIES desirous of INVESTING MONEY are requested to examine the Plan of this Institution, by which a high rate of Interest may be obtained with perfect security.

The Interest is payable in January and July at the Head Office in London; and may also be received at the various Branches, or through Country Bankers, without delay or expense.

PETER MORRISON, Managing Director.
Prospectuses and Forms for opening accounts sent free on application.

MONEY.—ESTABLISHED 1849.

LOANS from £5 to £50 on the Personal Security of the Borrower, to be repaid by small Weekly, Monthly, or Quarterly instalments, as may suit the convenience of the borrower. A Form of Application and particulars sent to any part, on receipt of four postage stamps and a stamped directed envelope. Office (private), 16, PENTON-STREET, PENTONVILLE, London. T. SHORT, Secretary.

LOANS.—Persons desirous of obtaining ADVANCES from £50 to £250, upon approved personal security, repayable by easy instalments, extending over a lengthened period, are invited to examine the principles of the BRITISH MUTUAL SUBSCRIPTION LOAN ASSURANCE CLASSICS. Prospectuses, Reports, and every information, may be obtained on application at the British Mutual Life Office, 17, New Street, Blackfriars. Rules 6d. each copy, or 1s. per post. CHARLES JAMES THICKE, Resident Secretary.

MONEY for INVESTMENT on the personal security (without sureties) of gentlemen of responsibility, heirs to entailed estates, &c.; also, on reversions or life interests. This emanates from a party of the highest respectability, for which references will be given to responsible parties.

Address to S. N., care of Mr. GRIGG, Bookseller, 153, REGENT-STREET, London, and to whom also references may be made.

MONEY ADVANCED, to any Amount, on LIFE INTERESTS, MORTGAGE, or REVERSIONS. Loans of every description on good Personal or other Security. Large or small capitalists, desirous of safe and profitable investments, are invited to communicate with the Advertiser, who will wait upon gentlemen in any part of the kingdom on receipt of a remittance. Address to Mr. H. LEA, No. 33, GREAT WINCHESTER-STREET, CITY.

Printed by BENJAMIN LIXTON, of No. 28, Robert street, Boston, Parish of Shoreham, in the County of Middlesex, at the Printing-office of TAYLOR and CLAYDON, Nos. 4 and 5, Granville-place, Fetter-lane, and published by him at No. 48, Strand, opposite Adam-street, Adelphi, in the said County.—Duckworth 23, 1854.

THE FIELD SUPPLEMENT

VOL. IV.—No. 104.]

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1854.

[GRATIS.]

THE NEWSPAPER.

THE WAR.

SIEGE OF SEBASTOPOL.

The Daily News correspondent, writing from Balaklava on the 3rd, says:—"The siege operations present no features of interest. Little or no progress is making; our firing is slack, while the Russians are continually increasing and strengthening their works, and adding to the number of guns in action. We are still building mortar-batteries on our extreme right, but in the present state of the roads it is difficult, if not impossible, to bring up the mortars. The season is unfavourable to the transport of the matériel for a fresh battering cannonade. The French are slowly but surely advancing their works."

The correspondent of the Times, dating from Constantinople on the 3rd, states:—"From the 28th of November to the 3rd of December no guns were placed in the newly-constructed batteries, the weather being so bad and the mire so deep. The Turks had arrived at Balaklava, and it was found very difficult to provide food for them. The Russian army had quitted the valley for the heights commanding the Tcheruaya. Deserters say that the Russians suffer much. Every evening the garrison opens a fire of artillery on the French position, and makes sorties, which are always repulsed with loss. During the day the enemy's fire is slack. The soldiers are constructing huts. In the morning of the 2nd the Russians attacked an advanced guard of the 50th Regiment, which retired. The Rifles advanced to its assistance, drove back the Russians, and forced them to quit their positions. The cholera has re-appeared among the Turks."

Additional letters from Constantinople of the 5th, with news from the Crimea, state that General Canrobert had addressed an order of the day to the army, announcing that, so soon as the weather permitted, the bombardment of Sebastopol would be resumed, and the assault commenced. 20,000 Russians, utterly exhausted by privations, had marched to Simferopol to escape extinction by the sickness which was decimating the army in the marshes they occupied in their first position.

Letters received in Paris on Tuesday, from the French camp before Sebastopol, speak of the assault of that place as an event that may be soon expected. The second line of fortifications is described as very strong. "The Russians have availed themselves of every point where resistance can be offered. The difficulty, however, is not so much to take Sebastopol as to keep it, for we shall be unquestionably exposed to severe fire from the heights and fortresses on the north side. Sebastopol will probably be a complete ruin before we can get in, but, ruin as it may be, there is no alternative; and the opinion is that it must be stormed and captured to satisfy the amour propre of the army, and produce a moral effect throughout Europe. The Russians seem to have foreseen and provided for such a contingency; and they have made every preparation for retreat to the north side of the harbour, and have taken measures to place every impediment to our advance."

According to a despatch from St. Petersburg, dated the 20th, nothing of importance had occurred before Sebastopol up to the 13th of December. Some small sorties had been made with success. In one of them the Russians captured in the trenches of the allies some small mortars, and spiked some others of larger dimensions. The fire of the allies was feeble, and the Russian loss very slight.

MOVEMENTS OF THE BELLIGERENTS.

THE TURKISH ARMY.—On the departure of Omar Pasha's army for the Crimea, the command of the Turkish troops on the Danube has been given provisionally to Ismail Pasha. The Ottoman general will, it is expected, land his troops at Eupatoria, and occupy the country between the coast and the main road from Perekop to Simferopol, by which the Russian contingents, munitions of war, and provisions arrive. Sebastopol, which supplies food for the Russian army, must be pretty well exhausted by this. Almost all recent accounts concur in describing the situation of the Russians as deplorable. The difficulty of the communications has already reduced them to very great straits; and if Omar Pasha's soldiers prove themselves not to have degenerated since Oltenitz and Silistria, we may judge of the effect of an army of 36,000 men interrupting the convoys from the north, and menacing the reinforcements of Prince Menschikoff.

RUSSIAN PREPARATIONS FOR THE NEXT CAMPAIGN.—The Daily News correspondent from St. Petersburg says:—"The extensive preparations now making in the imperial arsenals for putting the Baltic fleet in a condition not only to carry on a defensive war, but even to assume the offensive, are of such vast magnitude that they ought not to be overlooked in England, or thought lightly of. The most important of these measures is the immediate formation of twenty-six reserve companies of sailors or ships' crews to replace those that may be swept off by the British and French cannon balls next summer. According to the Russian system, the Baltic fleet is divided into three divisions; the head-quarters of the first and second being at Cronstadt, and the third at Swenborg. The new companies or crews are to be formed of those sailors now on furlough and those whose time of service expires on the 13th January next." The building, repair, and refitting of ships, is going on briskly in Russia.

RUSSIAN RECRUITING IN SWITZERLAND.—Accounts from Bern state that a letter had been received by the master armorer of Zurich, from M. de Collette, the Secretary of the Government at St. Petersburg, inviting workmen and armourers from Switzerland to join the Russian regiments.

All expenses of their destination would be paid, with a salary of about £40 per annum, and they would be placed at the head of the workmen in the regiment.

THE COSSACKS.—The Vienna Presse of the 15th states that "a Cossack detachment has crossed the Pruth; and, in presence of the Austrian troops, destroyed the supplies of straw and hay which had been prepared for the Austrian army in Moldavia."

MORE LOSSES IN THE BLACK SEA.

On Thursday a communication was received by Captain Halsted, R.N., Secretary of Lloyd's, from the Admiralty, announcing the total loss of the transport ship Culloden, No. 86, and the capture by the Russians of the crew and Turkish troops who were on board.

The Culloden was of 538 tons, belonging to Mr. Ferguson, Glasgow. The loss occurred near Eupatoria, on the 13th of November. She had on board 35 rank and file of Ottoman troops, 35 baggage-horses, and about 300 cases of ammunition. The crew and the troops, who were all saved, are now prisoners on board the Russian ship Vladimir, at Sebastopol.

Another loss in the Black Sea was made known in the course of the day—that of the French transport Constance, Captain Charrier, which was wrecked on the same night as the Culloden, near Eupatoria; the crew succeeded in escaping from the vessel just before a troop of Cossacks reached the wreck and fired into her. The ship was afterwards burnt to the water's edge.

REINFORCEMENTS AND STORES—THE CAMP AND THE HOSPITAL.

IRON BATTERIES FOR THE BALTIC.—Some weeks since it was announced that our Government contemplated, through the suggestion of the French Government, ordering a number of floating batteries, to be constructed of wood, and cased with iron plates, as an auxiliary force to the allied fleets in the Baltic. The batteries are to be forty in number, and are to be ready in March next. They will be flat-bottomed, with round stem and stern, and nearly 2,000 tons burden, 180 feet long, 56 feet wide, 20 feet deep, and propelled by horizontal engines of 200-horse power. The strongest materials are to be employed in the building of these formidable engines of war, and in their construction the resources of Liverpool have not been overlooked. The Mersey Steel and Iron Company, at the south end of the town, have received a large order for the manufacture of the casing-plates, and the workmen are now engaged upon them night and day. A considerable portion of the plates have already been completed, and sent per rail to London. Each of the plates is 12 feet long, 3 feet wide, and 4 inches thick; and each battery will require 700 tons of those plates. These new flat-bottomed gunboats are to be armed with twelve of the largest Lancaster guns. Each boat will have two decks, the upper being horn-proof eight inches thick, and the lower will be the fighting deck. A number of these boats are already in a forward state, and the whole, no doubt, will be ready by the time required.

AMMUNITION.—The screw steam-frigate Malacca left Portsmouth on Sunday for the Crimea. She has on board a large quantity of shot, shell, and ammunition, with Capt. Child's company of Royal Artillery. The Esk is also loading with shot, &c., and will shortly sail.

THE WOODEN HUTS.—The huts already dispatched are to be followed up by others, and no doubt an abundant supply will be furnished as speedily as possible. The Royal Victoria transport has been engaged this week in shipping ninety officers' and privates' huts. There is but little difference in them, so far as warmth and actual comfort are concerned. The Sumroo, 1,000 tons, the Swiftsure, 1,800, and several other ships of large tonnage, are engaged for the same purpose. The vessels, for the sake of dispatch, are to be towed across the Bay of Biscay by French war steamers.

HUTS FOR THE FRENCH ARMY.—A letter from Constantinople of the 5th, says that 100,000 planks for huts, to shelter the French troops, have just been sent to the Crimea. The health of the army was generally good, and their spirits excellent.

STORES.—The Lady Franklin, sailing transport, has been loading, during the week, at Clarence Yard, with beef, pork, rum, hay, and biscuit, for the Crimea, to the extent of about 500 tons.

THE BALAKLAVA RAILWAY.—On Saturday last about 150 navvies in the employ of Messrs. Peto and Co., engaged for the construction of the railway from Balaklava to the trenches in front of Sebastopol, left town by a special train for North Shields, whence they are to be conveyed to the Austrian territory. The men are to have five shillings per day, and their lodgings, food, and clothes found them. The total number to be sent out will exceed 2,000.

RAILWAY SLEEPERS FOR THE CRIMEA.—During last week the workmen of Messrs. Reed and Co., of the crosscut works at the North Dock, Monkwearmouth, have been employed night and day preparing sleepers for the new railway in the Crimea. About 20,000 of these are now ready, and will be conveyed by the North Eastern Railway to the Tyne, where they will be loaded on board several large screw steamers, chartered by the Government, and sail direct for the Crimea.

THE HOSPITAL AT SCUTARI.—Lord Blantyre, writing to the Times of Monday, offers £100 for the Sick and Wounded Fund for Scutari, suggesting that much still remains to be done.

THE HIGHLAND REGIMENTS.—Instructions have been given, from the War-office, for immediately supplying every man of the 42nd, 79th, and 93rd Highland Regiments, now serving in the Crimea, with a pair of tartan trousers.

THE RIFLE BRIGADE.—About 1,000 men of various regiments embarked from Portsmouth during the week. The Gorgon, 6, paddle-sloop, took 100 men, 3 sergeants, and 2 officers of the 2nd battalion of the Rifle Brigade.

THE ROYAL ALBERT, a magnificent screw line-of-battle ship, destined for the flag of Sir Edmund Lyons, arrived at Malta on the 8th, and is to proceed to the Crimea without delay. The officers speak in the highest terms of her performances. She is a splendid vessel.

WARM CLOTHING LOST ON BOARD THE PRINCE.—A return just issued shows that 35,700 woollen socks, 53,000 woollen frocks, 17,000 flannel drawers, 2,500 watch-coats, 16,100 blankets, and 3,700 rugs, were lost on board the Prince.

ONE HUNDRED MEN and three sergeants of the 2nd battalion of the Rifle Brigade, on Wednesday, embarked from Portsmouth dockyard on board the paddle-wheel steam-sloop Gorgon, for passage to the Crimea.

THE AGNES BLAKEY, freight-ship, is now at the Royal Arsenal, Woolwich, taking on board 180 tons of shot and 250 tons of coke for conveyance to the Crimea.

NECESSARIES AND COMFORTS.—On Thursday a merchant ship, engaged by the committee of the Crimean Fund, left Irongate-wharf for the Crimea, heavily laden with provisions, clothing, &c., for the troops. The cargo consisted of several chests of tea, a large quantity of boxes of cocoa, preserved vegetables, meat, and milk, coloured blankets, a supply of warm clothing, &c. In a few days the yacht of the Earl of Ellesmere, which is placed at the disposal of the committee by his lordship, will start with a similar description of cargo.

PROVISION FOR WINTER.—On Thursday a large quantity of stoves for the Crimea were brought to the Tower, to be forwarded in a few days to their destination. Several hundred tin pipes were also brought, which will be fixed in the stoves when they are placed in the various tents.

HOSPITAL AT SCUTARI.—Messrs. Hayton and Howell, of Mark-lane, are shipping off a large number of free gifts for this hospital. They say the applications and contributions are beyond all power of reply, but all packages either have been, or will speedily be sent off to their destination.

MISS NIGHTINGALE'S NURSES AT SCUTARI.—At the monthly (December) meeting of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, Mr. T. B. Murray read a letter he had received from Mr. C. H. Braebridge, who reached Scutari towards the close of last month. He says, "They (the nurses) are well lodged in an angle of this great building, (Scutari Hospital), one of two noble barracks, a quarter of a mile apart, on a fine eminence at the end of the Scutari suburb. The soldiers, by the united testimony of doctors, chaplain, commandants, and from what I could see myself in the ward, want for nothing. The water, bread and meat, and air, are excellent. 1,400 are here, and from 1,000 to 1,100 in the other hospital."

REINFORCEMENTS FROM FRANCE.—The steam navigation companies of the Rhone have undertaken to convey, in ten days, to the Crimea, 100,000 tons of utensils, camp apparatus, and huts for the army. The greatest activity prevails in all the military ports of France. A levy of 600 carpenters has taken place in the maritime districts of Cherbourg, to forward the construction of ships on the stocks. The screw-transport La Mense, and the gunboats Eclair and Etnicelle, are to be ready for sea next spring. The screw floating battery Devastation, mounting sixteen 50-pounders, is nearly finished. Independently of these ships, there are on the stocks at Cherbourg, the steamship Ville de Nantes, the steam-frigate Impétueuse, and the screw vessels Rodour and Croiseur. It is reported that a portion of the Regiment of Guides, commanded by Colonel Fleury, will join the army in the East. The 1st and 2nd Regiments of Carabiniers, in garrison at Versailles, are to form part of the army at Lyons.

FRENCH SYMPATHY AND HELP.—The Emperor's objection to subscriptions for wounded soldiers, as an interference with his prerogative, does not extend to subscriptions for the comforts of the army generally. Several of these are now on foot. At Bourdeaux 15,000*l.* have been subscribed for tobacco and pipes. At Toulouse a committee has been formed for collecting a sufficient sum to send out 100,000 pairs of stockings. In the seventh arrondissement of Paris several of the inhabitants have determined to lay out a part of the money usually spent in Christmas-boxes in the purchase of wine and brandy for the troops. Several tobacco subscription lists are opened. M. Roger, the director of the Hamburg Theatre, has sent a contribution of 1,500*l.*, the clear proceeds of one night's performance of the "Dame Blanche," to M. Paulin, the editor of the Illustration, who was one of the first to open a subscription for tobacco.

FRENCH TROOPS.—The Cambria, Ripon, Thames, Niagara, and other English steamers, arrived in the Bosphorus on the 9th, with 5,000 French troops for the Crimea.

FRENCH SYMPATHY WITH THE WOUNDED.—Several inhabitants of Orleans having applied to the Prefect to sanction a public subscription in behalf of the wounded of the army of the East, the demand was forwarded to the Minister of the Interior. M. Billault replied that he had communicated this patriotic request to the Emperor, who highly commended the sentiments that had dictated it, but said he considered it a duty, and reserved to himself, the exclusive privilege of watching over the welfare of the wounded, ministering to all their wants, and recompensing, in the name of France, the services rendered to the country. All private subscriptions, in M. Billault's opinion, became useless in consequence of these intentions of the Emperor.

THE IMPERIAL GUARD.—Part of the French Imperial Guard is to be detached for service in the Crimea. It is intended that it shall form the nucleus of a distinct corps on the field, to be augmented successively by soldiers taken from the army under General Canrobert, and who have most distinguished themselves during the present operations. It will be commanded by a general officer.

INCIDENTS, ANECDOTES, AND MEMORANDA.

THE EMPRESS OF RUSSIA.—I have seen a private letter from St. Petersburg, dated Dec. 8, which states that from the moment when the news of the battle of Inkerman arrived, the Empress's health became worse. It is said that Prince Menschikoff's despatch was brought to the Czar in his wife's bed-room. On reading it an angry exclamation escaped him which frightened the Czarine. She fancied that some misfortune had happened to her sons, and fainted away. It was very long before she recovered her senses, and ever since that time she has suffered from constantly increasing fever. Even in court circles her death was spoken of as an event to be expected from one moment to another. The fêtes usually given to celebrate the anniversary of the Emperor's accession were reduced this year to a religious service.—Correspondent of Daily News.

PRINCE NAPOLEON.—By news from Constantinople, of the 7th, we learn that Prince Napoleon has had a relapse, and could not rejoin his division.

THE LATE STORM.—Letters from St. Petersburg state that the news of the hurricane on the 14th and the loss experienced by the allies, was received with an outburst of joy. This feeling was soon tempered by other reports from the Crimea, which told the pitiful state of the Russian troops themselves. They had been almost without provisions or forage during several days.

AN INCIDENT AT THE BATTLE OF INKERMANN.—The following is an extract from the letter of a servant, whose master, a British officer, was killed at the battle of Inkerman:—"I was with my poor master in all his engagements. We lay down together at night in his tent, and the same blanket covered us. It took me eight hours to pick him out from the dead; and when I found him his rough coat had been stripped off him. He had five bayonet wounds, and his undercoat was riddled with shot. I wrapped him up in his cloak and two blankets and carried him over the dead to his tent, laid him out, lit a fire outside of his tent, and watched over him all night. The next morning I got a stubborn jibbing mule and a gun carriage, to take him down to Balaklava to his brother, who had arrived out to see him about three days before. With difficulty I got along the road, about eight miles, when I met some blue-jackets—four. I told them what I was doing, and asked their help. 'Ay, ay, my lad, we'll help you.' They went into a field and got two bullocks and a cart, put the body on it, and most carefully conducted it to Balaklava; and when I offered to reward them not a farthing or a drop would any of them accept. Brave fellows, those blue-jackets! I then went on board one of the ships, had a coffin made, put the body into it, and buried it in the churchyard at Balaklava. Then I raised a headboard and planted his grave with cypress; and whenever after I went there, there I found the younger brother of my late master, Sir N—. I sailed with him from Balaklava in the Medway, and came overland to England."

ENGLISH PRISONERS OF WAR.—The subjoined letter has just been received by Mr. George Parker, tailor, Windsor, from his son, a private in the 11th Hussars:—"Simferopol, Nov. 5.—Dear Parents,—I and a great many more were taken prisoners by the Russians on the 26th of last month, in the skirmish at Bdadaklava. I must thank the Almighty I was taken prisoner as I was, without being wounded in the slightest. I was only hurt a little in the fall from my horse. I must say that since we have been in the hands of the Russians they have behaved like gentlemen to us in every respect; and we have been treated equally as well as if we had been with our own countrymen. They have even allowed us this very great indulgence of writing home. There is no telling how long we shall remain prisoners."

GENERAL PENNEFATHER is a cousin of the venerable judge of that name. His father—a Protestant clergyman—was rector many years of Newport, Tipperary. Major-General Pennefather for some time held the office of Deputy-Adjutant-General in Dublin. He volunteered for the East, and now takes the place of Sir De Lacy Evans, whose brilliant heroism he will no doubt emulate. Major-General Pennefather was the intimate friend of the late Sir Charles Napier, who said, almost on his deathbed, that either he or General Airey would some day do something grand.

PARLIAMENT.

SATURDAY, DEC. 16.

The Lords sat to receive the report on the Foreigners Enlistment Bill.—The Duke of Newcastle proposed the substitution of 10,000 for 15,000 as the number of troops to be raised.—This proposition having been adopted, the report was agreed to, and their Lordships adjourned.

MONDAY, DEC. 18.

In the Lords, Lord Brougham, after presenting some petitions respecting bills of exchange, entered into a review of the conduct of the war.—The Earl of Glengall inquired the intentions of the Government with relation to the embodiment of the Irish militia, and recommended them to rely upon a native force.—The Duke of Newcastle intimated that the whole number of the militia regiments in Ireland would ultimately be embodied as their ranks became filled up.—The third reading of the Foreigners Enlistment Bill was opposed by the Earl of Ellenborough, who denounced the measure as involving a traffic in blood not less detestable than the old African slave trade.—The Marquis of Lansdowne characterised the objections that had been raised against the bill as exaggerated and absurd, and declared that all the dangers which had been attributed to it would vanish like spectres upon investigation.—The Earl of Derby remarked upon the constitutional peril and national degradation which would follow the passing of the bill; but, after the vote of the previous night, declined to ask for another division.—After some remarks from Viscount Hardinge, Earl Grey supported the bill, though admitting the existence of some possible anomalies which it might occasion.—Earl Granville also defended the measure, which was then read a third time and passed.

In the Commons, in reply to a question from Mr. J. O'Connell, the Chancellor of the Exchequer stated that the Government had no intention of proposing any exemption from the income-tax in favour of officers belonging to either branch of the service on account of their being engaged in the war. Such a distinction would be invidious, and any reward which those officers had earned would be more appropriately given in another shape. On the motion of Lord J. Russell, the vote of thanks passed to the army on Friday was amended by the insertion of the names of Major-Generals Airey and Estcourt and Admiral Stophord.—The House then went into committee on the Militia Bill, and passed the several clauses with some slight amendments.—On resuming, Lord Drumlanrig brought up her Majesty's answer to the address of the Commons, which was read and ordered to be entered on the journals of the House.—The Foreigners Enlistment Bill was brought down from the House of Lords, and read a first time upon the motion of Lord J. Russell.

TUESDAY, DEC. 19.

In the Lords, in reply to the Duke of Grafton, the Earl of Aberdeen said it was not the intention of the Government to advise her Majesty to order a special day of thanksgiving or prayer for divine protection during the war.—The Militia and the Bills of Exchange Bills were read a first time.

In the Commons, in reply to Mr. Muntz, Lord J. Russell said no proposal had been made to the Emperor of the French by our Government to make payment to him for troops he may send to the East.—Mr. Beresford moved to bring in a bill to exempt from legacy duty the property of officers dying in the Crimea; but, on the Chancellor of the Exchequer objecting to it, it was withdrawn.—The Militia Bill was read a third time and passed.—Lord J. Russell, in moving the second reading of the Foreigners Enlistment Bill, entered into the policy that dictated the measure. He referred to the foreign assistance given to the Duke of Marlborough and the Duke of Wellington, and contended that similar aid should now be enlisted. The measure merely contemplated training foreigners in this country, and then sending them to the seat of war—never to employ them on home duty. He and his colleagues had advised her Majesty to call Parliament thus early, for the purpose of passing this measure; "and, of course," continued the noble lord, "the present ministry having adopted this plan, they could not attempt, with the loss of the confidence of this House, to carry on any longer the business of the country."—Sir E. B. Lytton admitted the bill had been framed in accordance with constitutional precedents, but it was unconstitutional in spirit. When we had a Hanoverian Legion, Hanover was united to this country. Our German Legions were allies, not mercenaries. If it was intended to form a Polish Legion, let the Government beware of encouraging expectations of a restoration of Poland, unless they had determined that such an event should be included in their plan of the war.—Mr. M. Milnes, Mr. Watson, Sir J. Fitzgerald, and Mr. S. Herbert, defended the bill, the latter gentleman saying that the German peasantry were subject to military service, and were generally twenty-six or twenty-seven years of age when their term of service had expired. In this country the case was different. Our recruits were mostly young men of sixteen or seventeen years of age, and not till the expiration of some years were they fit to bear the hardships of a campaign.—Mr. Adderley, Mr. E. Bill, and Mr. M. Gibson, opposed the bill. The latter speaker was not to be influenced by a threat of resignation; a more important matter was at stake, and he would use every parliamentary means to defeat the measure.—Lord Stanley contended that proper notice had not been given: the measure was not mentioned in the Queen's Speech, and it seemed like an attempt to smuggle the bill through Parliament. He denied its necessity, and said that no doubt sufficient numbers could be had for recruiting the army.—Lord Palmerston was surprised to find an opposition to the first measure the Government had proposed for the vigorous conduct of the war, after the reproaches against them for want of vigour. The present bill was not without precedent, for during the last war we had a large number of foreign troops.—Mr. Disraeli said Lord John Russell and Lord Palmerston had totally misrepresented the grounds of opposition to the bill: there was no objection to employing troops animated by a friendly feeling for the object for which we were fighting; but mercenaries had always deserted, and often betrayed the country that paid them.—Mr. Deedes and Mr. Muntz opposed the measure, as being contrary to national feeling.—Lord J. Russell, in reply, accused Mr. Disraeli of "gloating" over the prospects of disasters to our army in the Crimea, but hoped that, notwithstanding, the united flags of England and France would yet triumph.—After a few words from Colonel Sibthorp and the Marquis of Blandford, the House divided, when there appeared—for the motion, 241; against it, 202; majority in favour of the bill, 39.

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 20.

In the Commons, the Episcopal and Capitular Estates Management Bill, and the Public Libraries and Museums Bill, were read a first time.—The House having resolved itself into committee on the Consolidated Fund, the Chancellor of the Exchequer moved a resolution to form the foundation of a bill to amend the law relating to savings banks. This measure, he stated, would provide for the custody and accountability for the moneys of depositors, and would hereafter be followed by a supplemental measure regarding the internal management of the banks.—The resolution was agreed to, and leave given to bring in a bill founded upon it.—The motion for going into committee on the Foreigners Enlistment Bill led to a discussion on the merits of the proposition, in which several members took part, and prolonged the debate until the hour for adjourning the house was close at hand. The further progress of the measure was resisted by Mr. Liddell, Mr. Drummond, Colonel Verner, Mr. Otway, and Mr. Whiteside.—The Secretary-at-War reiterated some of the arguments he had advanced in the previous debate, defending the bill and the Government.—Mr. Napier characterised the measure as odious, and believed it to be repugnant to the feelings of the people.—Mr. Cobden admitted the necessity of supporting the army we had sent, though rashly as he considered, to the Crimea. He suspected, however, that our soldiers would esteem it a poor compliment to be reinforced by mercenary Germans.—Lord J. Russell regretted that the attempts to misrepresent the intentions of the Government and degrade the character of the proposed foreign levies should be so systematically persevered in. He vindicated the measure, and repeated the assurance that it formed but one of a series which ministers intended to introduce for the more vigorous prosecution of the war.—The debate was prolonged by Lord C. Hamilton, Mr. Digby Seymour, Mr. Phillips, Mr. Alcock, and other members, and ultimately adjourned till Thursday.

THURSDAY, DEC. 21.

In the Lords, the Marquis of Salisbury adverted to the recent blockade of the Baltic, and the movements of the Black Sea fleet. The discussion, however, was not persevered in, and the Earl of Derby gave notice of his intention on an early day to bring the whole subject under consideration.—The Duke of Newcastle moved the second reading of the Militia Bill, and the suspension of the standing orders.—The Earl of Derby did not approve of the bill in all its parts, but he would not offer any obstacle to its passing. He criticised some of the details, and insisted on the necessity of retaining one-fourth of the militia at home, to form a kind of nucleus whence reinforcements ought to be drawn. He questioned the policy of sending militia regiments to garrison Gibraltar, Malta, and the Ionian Islands. It would be better to encourage them to enlist into the regular army. Lord Derby adverted to the Baltic and Black Sea fleets, and passed severe strictures on the inaction that had been evidenced by the admirals.—Earl Granville, in reference to Lord Derby's remarks as to the inefficiency of the fleets in the Black Sea, stated that orders had been sent out two months ago to enforce the blockade, and to harass the enemy in every possible manner.—Earl Grey regretted the few privileges and advantages held out to militiamen. He contended that it was unjust to enlist the militia on terms so disadvantageous as those contemplated by the bill. The effect of the measure would be to make the militia force exactly like the ordinary army, except that it would be officered in a very inferior manner.—Other noble lords having spoken, the bill was read a second time, and was considered in committee.

In the Commons, the debate on going into committee on the Enlistment of Foreigners Bill was resumed by Mr. Connolly, who expressed his concurrence in the sentiments expressed by Mr. Milner Gibson and Mr. Cobden. The speeches of these gentlemen were candid, straightforward, and statesman-like. Government had not a shred to hang by in supporting the measure; their conduct had shown that they had no confidence in it.—Mr. Collier had supported the bill with reluctance; but in doing this he was not open to the taunt of thinking one way and of voting another way. There was a great difference between supporting a measure with reluctance, and of not deeming it necessary. The Government assert that it is necessary—the Opposition say it is not. Who have the best means of obtaining information? To a certainty it is the Government. He had heard no facts to show that the asked-for assistance was unnecessary.—Mr. Newdegate was convinced that the passing of the bill would discourage enlistment in this country. Already murmurs were heard; and let care be taken that these murmurs do not find practical vent in depriving you of the stout arm of Englishmen, and in leaving you to foreign aid alone. There was no guarantee for the fidelity of mercenary troops; Russia was notorious for her powers of corruption, and mercenaries were peculiarly liable to corruption. He was surprised a portion of the Indian army was not sent for. In four months a large force might arrive in the Crimea from that country.—Mr. Freshfield put it to the House whether any good could arise from protracting the debate. Everything had been said that could be said for and against the measure. He did not think the course pursued by the Opposition a patriotic one.—Mr. Murrough opposed the bill. He believed its fate had already been decided by the public out of doors.—Mr. Disraeli disclaimed any intention on the part of the Opposition to protract unnecessarily the debate. He was prepared now to go into committee, and to take the third reading on Friday.—Lord John Russell expressed his concurrence in this course.—After remarks from Mr. Packe, as to the necessity of fixing a definite limit to the duration of the measure, the Speaker left the chair.—On clause 1, Mr. Locke King urged the propriety of introducing a proviso—"That no contract with foreign soldiers shall be lawful, under the provisions of which this country shall be liable for any payments, except to officers disabled by wounds, to continue beyond the period of one year after the ratification of a definitive treaty of peace."—Mr. Sidney Herbert concurred in the spirit of the proviso, and would take it into consideration. There was no intention to give foreign officers half-pay.—Mr. Drummond did not approve of withholding half-pay from the officers.—Mr. Heuley urged the necessity of arrangements being made for supporting the wives and children of the foreign soldiers, without the burden being placed upon the existing poor rates.—The clause was then agreed to; as were the other clauses.

FRIDAY, DEC. 22.

In the Lords, the Duke of Newcastle moved the third reading of the Militia Bill, which was passed without opposition. Lord Montagu—after disavowing an opinion which had been attributed to him by some of the morning papers, that the interests of depositors in savings banks had been prejudiced by the measures of the Government—moved for a return of statements connected with Exchequer Bills and other Government securities, which were ordered, and the House adjourned.

In the Commons, the Chancellor of the Exchequer brought up his Savings Banks Bill, which was read a first time. He also intimated that it was the intention of Government, at the next financial statement, to propose that the duty on tea, instead of falling to 1s., continue at 1s. 6d. during the war. Sir W. Clay gave notice of a motion for the abolition of church-rates, and Sir J. Pakington of one for the promotion of education in England and Wales. In reply to Mr. Whiteside, Mr. S. Herbert stated that the number in the hospital at Balaklava was 2,325, and in the hospital at Scutari, 3,550. By this time he feared the numbers were larger. In reply to Major Reed, the Secretary at War also stated that it was intended to arm the whole of the army with Minié rifles, and that they were being issued with all possible dispatch. Sir James Graham, in answer to Mr. Disraeli, said that he believed Mencl had not been blockaded by Russian gun-boats. The third reading of the Foreigners Enlistment Bill was moved by Lord J. Russell. Sir E. Dering moved, as an amendment, that it be read that day six months. Mr. Cobden considered the war unholy and unnecessary. The Russians having been driven out of the Turkish territory, we might now propose terms of peace. Mr. Corry supported, and Mr. Phillimore opposed, the bill. Mr. Dauby Seymour strongly supported the bill, and Lord Lovaine denounced it. Sir Erskine Perry, in reply to Mr. Cobden, defended the bill, and eulogised the conduct of the Foreign Legion in our former wars. Mr. Evelyn and Mr. Beutnick opposed, and Lord Ebrington supported, the bill. Mr. Patrick O'Brien and Mr. Cowan supported, and Mr. Abel Smith opposed it. Mr. Laing feared that a peace with Russia could not be at present attained, and therefore he should, by his vote, strengthen the army by every means in his power. Mr. Duncombe (East Retford) stigmatised the measure as very unsatisfactory to the country. Mr. Vincent Scully, believing the Emperor of Russia to be bent upon the subjugation of Europe, thought we should require every man we could get, and therefore supported the bill. Mr. Isaac Butt denounced the measure as unconstitutional, and powerless for the end proposed. After some further discussion, in which Dr. Mitchell and Sir John Fitzgerald took part, Lord J. Russell stated the basis upon which a future peace could alone be framed—viz., the revision of the treaty of Adrianople, and the free navigation of the Danube. Sir John Pakington defended the course pursued by the Opposition.—[The debate continued when we went to press.]

FOREIGN NEWS.

FRANCE.

THANKS TO THE ARMY AND NAVY.—His Excellency Lord Cowley has addressed the following letter to the Minister of Foreign Affairs:—"Paris, Dec. 17. Monsieur le Ministre,—Never did a more pleasing and flattering duty devolve on me than that which I now fulfil, in transmitting to your Excellency the minutes of the sitting of the British Parliament of the 15th of this month, in which both Houses resolved unanimously to offer their thanks to the French army and navy for the cordial co-operation and assistance which they have given to the naval and military forces of the Queen in their combined operations. In conformity with the usages and rules of Parliament, Field-Marshal Lord Raglan and Vice-Admiral Dundas will be charged to convey to General Canrobert and to Admiral Hamelin the thanks of the two Houses; but I am at the same time instructed to make known to the Emperor and to his Government in what high esteem the British Parliament hold the conduct of the French army and navy, as also the great satisfaction with which the Government of the Queen has seen the national Legislature unite with so much cordiality in the sentiments which it itself professes for the Imperial army and navy. In begging your Excellency to be the medium of this communication, I am, &c., COWLEY."

FRENCH LOAN.—We learn on good authority from Paris, that a new loan, to be raised by national subscription, is intended to be issued. The amount of the loan is said to be 500 millions of francs. A bill on the subject has, we hear, been laid before the Council of State, and will be submitted to the Legislative Corps immediately after its meeting.—Morning Herald.

THE EMPEROR OF AUSTRIA has nominated the Emperor Napoleon Grand Cross of the Order of St. Stephen.

MARSHAL ST. ARNAUD.—The Emperor has, out of his own privy purse, doubled the pension of 20,000*fr.* already granted to the widow of Marshal St. Arnaud.

DEATH OF M. LEON FAUCHER.—M. Leon Faucher died at Marseilles on the morning of the 15th. Madame Faucher and her brother, the Count Wolowski, were with him in his last moments. M. L. Faucher, before being known as a statesman, was an eminent journalist. He conducted the Courrier Français from 1835 to 1844. The journal was always forward to advocate liberal opinions. His career as Minister of the Interior under Louis Napoleon, President of the Republic, is well known. The independence of his character was displayed in a letter written shortly after the coup d'état, in which he indignantly rejected the offer of a seat in the Senate. Ever since December 2, 1851, he has lived in retirement, writing occasionally on political economy in the Revue des Deux Mondes. He was scarcely fifty-five.

THE PARIS EXHIBITION.—Great progress has been made with the building: nearly all the oak flooring and the glazing is finished: at the two extremities are to be painted windows of a very costly character. The grand entrance, re-constructed by order of the Emperor, is not far advanced, but is progressing. The refreshment-rooms, at each corner of the building, will be beautifully sculptured and decorated. Eight hundred men—all of them French—are being employed on the works. The building has consumed no less than 300,000 cubic feet of stone. The Owen Jones system of colouring has been tried, and failed; greys have been substituted, which have been found neither dull nor tame, and they moreover heighten the effect of the articles exhibited. Many expect that the whole result will equal, and some believe it will surpass, the Palaces of Hyde Park and Sydenham. England has applied for so large an exhibition space, that, were it granted, the whole hall would be given up to her, and other nations would have to take shelter beneath the galleries, or in the supplementary building. The great gallery, however, is nearly three-quarters of a mile long; standing at one end, the visitor sees a point of light about as large as a shilling at the other—the effect of distance. This gallery is to be filled with machines in motion and agricultural implements. The palace is to be delivered up by the contractors on the 15th of January. The great picture-gallery is erected at the expense of the Government. The destiny of the building has not yet been resolved on; it is not adapted for a winter garden. The Emperor has frequently visited the works.

THE ORLEANS FAMILY.—At a low mass, celebrated by Bishop Morris (who officiated in the absence of Cardinal Wiseman), at the French Roman Catholic Chapel, at King-street, Baker-street, on Thursday morning, the first communion was administered to the Count D'Eau, eldest son of the Duc de Nemours. An afternoon service was held at half-past one o'clock; it lasted until shortly after three o'clock. There was an office and a sermon preached by l'Abbé Guille, chaplain to the Orleans family. The Count D'Eau read a renewal of his baptismal vows during the sermon, which was in the French language. A great crowd of persons were present at both services, among whom were Madame Amélie (the ex-Queen of the French), the Duke and Duchess de Nemours, the Duke d'Alençon, Princess Marguerite, Prince de Joinville and the Princess, Duke de Penthièvre and his sister, the Duke d'Aumale, Prince de Condé, and the Princess de Salerne.

SPAIN.

In the Cortes, on the 9th, the Minister of the Interior, in reply to a question, admitted that Queen Christina had received 1,365 piastres a month from the public Treasury of the Havana beyond the regular allowance, to make up for the difference of exchange. On the 12th, M. Heros, Intendant of the Queen's Household, announced that from the 1st of November all the royal domains, with the exception of the palaces and gardens, will pay the tax on real property. The question of suppressing the octroi was still before the Cortes. The import yields 89,000,000 reals per annum. Some disturbances by armed men had taken place at Aranjuez, and troops had been sent to repress them.—On the 13th a committee of the Cortes recommended to that body that a parliamentary investigation of the conduct of Queen Christina should be made.

The Diario says that General O'Donnell intends to make some sweeping reforms in the army, and amongst them to have no pay higher than 4,000 duros (20,000*fr.*), and to fix the number of captains-general of the army at six, of lieutenant-generals at thirty, and of marshals del campo at fifty. It mentions also that it was believed that the bank had come to an arrangement with the Government for the payment of the half-year's dividends, and that, in virtue of it, 28,000,000 reals were to be sent to London and Paris by the 15th for the payment of the foreign interest.

The same journal states that the Government is preparing to reform the Concordat, and to sell the property of the clergy to make up the deficit which will be occasioned by the suppression of the octroi. It says also that, in presenting the budget to the Cortes, it means to demand an authorisation to levy the taxes from the 1st of January next.

CUBA.—The accounts that have last reached Spain from the Havana represent the conspiracy of Baracoa to be of considerable importance, and that numerous families in the island are implicated in it. General de la Concha was employing the most energetic measures, and he answered for the safety of the colony.

PRUSSIA.

The Emancipation of Brussels says:—"We learn from Berlin that the Prussian Government has declared to the Courts of Russia, Austria, France, and England that it will adhere to the treaty of Vienna of the 2nd inst., if before the 2nd of January the Czar shall not have accepted the conditions which are offered to him."

THE PRUSSIAN PARLIAMENT.—The Prussian Minister of the Interior has laid before the Prussian Chambers a bill for regulating the title of the two bodies, and the privileges of the newly-constituted upper house. The First Chamber is to be called in future the House of Lords, the Second Chamber the House of Deputies. The joint name for both collectively is to be "General Diet." The House of Lords can come to no decision, unless sixty of its members are present.

BERLIN, Dec. 20.—In the Second Chamber this morning, it was unanimously resolved to throw open the Prussian coasting-trade to English vessels.

DENMARK.

OPENING OF THE DANISH PARLIAMENT.—The Parliament was opened on the 18th, by the Premier reading the Royal Message. The former presidents, vice-presidents, and secretaries were re-appointed. There were immense crowds. The King appeared on the balcony, and thanked the populace for this loyal demonstration. He was intensely cheered. On the 19th the ministerial programme was brought forward; it recognises the alteration in the fundamental law by which parliamentary representatives may have legislative power in financial questions, and in enacting laws. Members are to be nominated by the King. The foreign policy remains unchanged.

SARDINIA.

A letter from Turin, of the 12th, in the Indipendenza of Brussels says:—"The night before last the police arrested several emigrants. These arrests, it would appear, are connected with the plots of the Mazzinians, over whom the Government keep a very sharp watch. It is true that public order runs no risk of being disturbed, but the avowed object of the friends of M. Mazzini, is at any price to compromise Piedmont with the neighbouring Powers. The country and the Government very well know all this, and the latter will never meet with any opposition from the former, except it should, instead of showing energy, betray weakness."

AMERICA.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

The Canada Royal Mail steamship Canada arrived at Liverpool on Sunday, bringing the President's Message, which was delivered to the Senate at Washington, on the 4th inst. The news from Mexico is to the 22nd of Nov. Great preparations for war were being made at Vera Cruz, where stores of gunpowder and cannon-shot were landed from New York. The insurgents in Michoacan and elsewhere were, however, active and unyielding. Accounts from the Rio Grande represent the insurgents as actively organising, and they had solicited Carvajal to lend them to the fray. The following is the substance of the President's message. After some liberal remarks on the common interests of nations, the President thus speaks of the foreign policy of the United States:—

Our refusal to be brought within and subjected to their peculiar system, has, I fear, created a jealous distrust of our conduct, and, indeed, on their part, occasional acts of disturbing effect upon our foreign relations. Our present attitude and past course give assurance, which should not be questioned, that our purposes are not aggressive, nor threatening to the safety and welfare of other nations. Our military establishment, in time of peace, is adapted to maintain exterior defences, and to preserve order among the aboriginal tribes within the limits of the Union. Our naval force is intended only for the protection of our citizens abroad, and of our commerce, diffused, as it is, over all the seas of the globe. The Government of the United States, being essentially pacific in policy, stands prepared to repel invasion by the voluntary service of a patriotic people, and provides no permanent means of foreign aggression. These considerations should allay all apprehension that we are disposed to encroach on the rights, or endanger the security of other States.

Some European powers have recurred with disquieting concern to the territorial expansion of the United States. This rapid growth has resulted from the legitimate exercise of sovereign rights belonging alike to all nations, and by many liberally exercised. Under such circumstances, it could hardly have been expected that those among them which have, within a comparatively recent period, subdued and absorbed ancient kingdoms, planted their standards on every continent, and now possess or claim the control of the islands of every ocean as their appropriate domain, would look with malicious sentiments upon the acquisitions of this country, in every instance honourably obtained, or would feel themselves justified in fomenting our advancement to a spirit of aggression, or to a passion for political predominance.

The President next speaks of the rights of neutrals in time of war, the great interest of the United States in their maintenance, and the temporary and occasional admission of the principle that "free ships make free goods," by France and England, made last spring, and the fuller recognition of the same by the Czar, the King of Naples, and the King of Prussia. On the question of privateering, he says:—

The proposition to enter into engagements to forego resort to privateers, in case this country should be forced into war with a great naval power, is not entitled to more favourable consideration than would be a proposition to agree not to accept the services of volunteers for operations on land. When the honour or the rights of our country require it to assume a hostile attitude, it confidently relies upon the patriotism of its citizens, not ordinarily devoted to the military profession, to augment the army and navy so as to make them fully adequate to the emergency which calls them into action. The proposal to surrender the right to employ privateers is professedly founded upon the principle that private property of unoffending non-combatants, though enemies, should be exempt from the ravages of war; but the proposed surrender goes but little way in carrying out that principle, which equally requires that such private property should not be seized or molested by national ships of war. Should the leading powers of Europe concur in proposing, as a rule of international law, to exempt private property upon the ocean from seizure by public armed cruisers, as well as by privateers, the United States will readily meet them upon that broad ground.

The President next refers to the treaty between the United States and Great Britain relative to the coasting fisheries and reciprocal trade with the British North American colonies, mentions the steps taken on both sides to hasten and anticipate the operation of that treaty, and asks for them the sanction of the Legislature. A difference of opinion has arisen with Great Britain as to a territorial boundary line on the Pacific and as to the treaty of 1846 regarding the rights of the Hudson's Bay Company. He seeks the means of reconciling these differences in a power to be granted by Congress to a commission to be joined by one appointed by the Crown of England.

The friendship between the United States and France will not, the President hopes, be jeopardised by the French consul at San Francisco having been compelled to appear in a court of justice as a witness, against his will. Explanations have been made which it is hoped will prove satisfactory. As to M. Soule's affair, the French Government has distinctly disavowed any intention of denying the right of transit to the minister of the United States.

The relations of the United States with Spain are unchanged, but the President expresses the hope that the new ministers at Madrid will be more favourably inclined than their predecessors to do justice to American claims.

Negotiations are pending with Denmark for the discontinuance of the Sound Dues. The Washington Cabinet believes it can claim exemption as a right, and gives notice to that of Copenhagen to terminate the treaty of 1826.

The expedition to Japan has been successful, and certain parts of that country are by treaty to be opened.

Against Mexico the President alleges grievances, both new and old, for which his Government has been unable to obtain satisfaction; he claims credit for having discomfited and opposed expeditions contrary to the tranquillity of that republic.

With the Argentine Confederation, Uruguay and Paraguay, treaties securing the navigation of La Plata have been signed; endeavours to open the Amazon in like manner have not been equally successful.

Respecting the destruction of Greytown the President makes an elaborate statement. He alleges that the communications across the isthmus, and the unarmed boats freighted with millions of property, were in danger from the inhabitants.

On the subject of finance, the President, after announcing that the annual income of the Government greatly exceeds its public debt, recommends a reduction on import duties. After having referred to the extended limits and the frontier relations of the United States, President Pierce recommends an increase of the army and navy. The remainder of the message is merely of administrative import.

THE STEAMSHIP BALTIC, arrived on Thursday with dates from New York to the 9th inst., bringing fifty passengers, but no specie. Mr. Bright has been elected President of the United States Senate. In the House of Representatives, Mr. Soller's resolution, calling for information relating to the American diplomatic conference at Ostend, was referred to the committee on foreign relations. The money market has improved, and the demand for commercial paper is lessened. The market for common brands of flour was about 12½c. per barrel higher; other grades were unchanged. Corn was firmer, and sold at 32c. to 33c. The cotton market was easier.

HERR VON USEDOM, lately Prussian minister at Rome, left Berlin on Tuesday, on a special mission to London, to sound the English cabinet with reference to Prussia's joining the treaty of Dec. 2.—Morning Herald.

THE BAVARIAN MINISTRY is now urging forward a bill to abolish the general representation of the country introduced in 1848, and to substitute the system of representation of orders. Under this system the members of the elected chamber would be chosen respectively by the nobility, the clergy, the universities, landed proprietors, and civic corporations.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 17.—The proposal made by the Minister of Finance to raise the price of salt from 28 to 44 copecks has been accepted by the Czar as a profitable financial measure.

THE SAXON CHAMBERS have just introduced hoggish in galls, and extended it to the female sex.

HUNGARY.—The Austrian authorities have ordered that in future the German language shall be used in all proceedings before the tribunals of Hungary.

QUEEN ISABELLA II. (says the Madrid correspondent of La Presse) presents the Pope with a magnificent tiara, worth 200,000 francs, in honour of his decision respecting the Immaculate Conception. The tiara is now exposed to public view at Madrid.

SYRIA.—The Trieste Gazette of the 14th publishes accounts from Latakiah of the 30th ult., stating that the rebels have killed the governor, and dispersed and pursued the 200 forming the garrison. Other districts have also risen. Latakiah is now only protected by the French and Austrian consuls.

THE KING OF BAVARIA.—Advices from Munich to the 15th announce that King Louis had been seized with an apoplectic fit at Darmstadt. Later advices state that the condition of his Majesty was improving.

COLONIAL NEWS.

BRITISH INDIA.

HURRICANE IN BOMBAY.—On the 1st inst. Bombay was visited by a severe hurricane, or cyclone. It commenced about midnight, by a gale from the S.E. The wind increased, carrying destruction with it. At five o'clock in the morning the scene was frightful. Underneath the saluting battery the d-deis of the wrecks were heaped. Pieces of lumber-boats, ropes, spurs, and all the material of the harbour-boats, were strewn all over the bay. Hundreds of cotton bales were floating about. The steamer Phlox, sunk beneath the castle walls, had only her paddle-boxes visible above water, while the positions of the steamers Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, Sir George Russell Clerk, and Snake (Government steamer), were only known by their funnels appearing above water. The new Government steamer Assaye parted her moorings during the night, and struck the hard ground near the dock-yard, and has been much injured. The Hastings went on shore early in the morning. The Margaret cutter is smashed all to pieces. The Mandavie small cutter has also become a total wreck, and four pilot-boats have been entirely lost. The governor's barge, and that of Sir Henry Leake, have totally disappeared. Five large merchantmen are on shore—some masts gone; and about 100 bungalows are lost. The Nerbuddah cutter has become a total wreck, and the brig Palinurus is much disabled. When the Hastings got adrift and sprung a leak, she hoisted signals of distress from daylight. The Hon. Company's steamer Queen proceeded to take the distressed vessel in tow; but through mismanagement the Queen fouled the Mystery merchantman, and remained so for several hours. The fort presented a curious appearance. The streets were strewn with tiles. Trees, which one would have thought could have withstood the tempests of ages, were either uprooted or broken in twin like twigs. The crosses of the west side of the cathedral were blown off, the police-office was dismantled, and the theatre and the Supreme Court-house were more or less injured.

WEST INDIES.

The royal mail steam-ship La Plata arrived at Southampton on the 14th. She brings fifty-four passengers, a large cargo, and specie to the value of £130,000. The cholera was raging at St. Kitt's, the other islands being healthy. From Jamaica the news is unimportant. Patriotic meetings were to be held for the widows and orphans of the Alma. In the markets generally prices were firm. In Barbadoes trade was dull and money scarce.

NEWS OF THE UNITED KINGDOM.

MARYLEBONE ELECTION.—On Tuesday this contest was decided in favour of Lord Ebrington, the polling being conducted in a very orderly though spirited manner. At the close of the poll the numbers were: Viscount Ebrington, 6,919; Mr. Bell, 4,166; majority, 2,753. His Lordship took his seat on Wednesday.

HEALTH OF LONDON.—Thirteen hundred deaths were registered in London in the week that ended last Saturday. A small decrease is observed on the mortality of the two previous weeks, in which the deaths were 1,350 and 1,331. In the ten weeks corresponding to last week of the years 1844-53 the average number was 1,249; and if this is raised in proportion to increase of population, it becomes 1,374. The mortality of last week is therefore less than the estimated amount by 74 deaths. The return shows that 640 children under 15 years of age, 406 persons aged 15 years and under 60, and 236 persons of 60 years and upwards, died last week. The season is rather unfavourable to the youthful part of the community, who are peculiarly subject to scarlatina, and some other diseases of the zymotic class. Last week the births of 782 boys, and 817 girls, in all 1,599 children, were registered in London. In the nine corresponding weeks of the years 1845-53 the average number was 1,422.

ABOLITION OF THE CITY TOLLS.—Notices have been issued in compliance with an order of the Court of Common Council, that the tolls taken at the several bars of the city of London for the waggons, carts, &c., not being the property of the citizens of London, shall cease to be received on and after the 25th inst. These brought in a revenue annually of about £6,000, but much annoyance was caused by the mode of taking the toll, which amounted only to 2d. each cart.

THE CITY CORPORATION AND THE ROYAL COMMISSION OF INQUIRY.—The Consolidated Committee, to whom, on the 18th of May last, was referred the Report of the Commissioners of Inquiry into the state of the Corporation have agreed on certain propositions which were submitted to the Court of Common Council on Wednesday. On that day there was a very large attendance of aldermen and commoners. The chairman of the Consolidated Committee brought up their report and moved its adoption, which Mr. Graham seconded. Mr. Fry, in moving as an amendment, "That the consideration of the report be adjourned," said, his reason for proposing it was, the extraordinary time at which the court were summoned to discuss a subject of such importance when within twenty-four hours they would all be standing before their constituents for re-election. After a short discussion the court divided, when the amendment was carried by twenty-five majority.

CHRIST'S HOSPITAL.—On Tuesday a meeting of the governors of this ancient charity was held in the Court House. Part of the ordinary business was to consider a report from a committee of almoners nominating six governors on the committee of the hospital, and four governors as auditors; but Mr. Russell Gurney moved, as an amendment, the appointment of a "special committee, in order to consider what changes, if any, it would be desirable to make with respect to the constitution, powers, and duties of the committee of almoners." Mr. Baggaley seconded, and Archdeacon Hale supported, the amendment, which was carried. The following gentlemen composed the Committee of Inquiry:—Archdeacon Hale, Mr. Baggaley, Mr. Thomson Hankey, and Mr. Derby representing the Almoners; Alderman Wain, Alderman Wilson, Alderman Lawrence, Alderman Finnis, and Mr. Arnold representing the Foundation Governors; and Mr. Russell Gurney, Rev. Charles Kemble, Mr. Hanson, and Mr. John Randall, representing the general body of the Governors.

THE GOVERNMENT BALANCE-SHEET.—On the 15th the Government balance-sheet for the year ended the 10th October last was published. The net income was £55,296,566. 16s. 7d. The excess of expenditure over income in the year ended the 10th October was £887,369. 2s. 7d. On the 10th October, 1853, the balances in the Exchequer were £5,780,241. 6s. 6d., and on the 10th October last £5,626,529. 9s. 11d.

CUSTOMS AND EXCISE.—On Friday, the Government account was printed, showing that in the year ended the 10th October last the net revenue from the customs increased to £20,193,641. 18s. 9d., and from the excise, £15,526,892. 1s. 4d.

DEATH OF SIR JAMES KEMPT.—General the Right Hon. Sir James Kempt, G.C.B., Colonel of the 1st Regiment of Foot, died on Wednesday, at his residence in South Audley-street. This distinguished officer has spent more than seventy-one years in the service of his country, and his career has been marked by unusual distinction. He entered the army in 1783, and in 1799 he attained the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel. In that year he accompanied Sir Ralph Abercromby upon the expedition to Holland as aide-de-camp, and in 1800 he proceeded with the same general, as military secretary, to the Mediterranean, and remained with him until his death, after which he was attached to the staff of Lord Hutchinson, and was present throughout the Egyptian campaign. In 1806 Lieutenant-Colonel Kempt went in command of a battalion with the expedition to Naples, and commanded the Light Brigade at the Battle of Maida. Having attained the rank of Colonel in 1809, he proceeded in 1811 to the Peninsula, and was appointed to command a brigade in the 3rd division of the Duke of Wellington's army. At the siege of Badajoz he commanded the attack on Fort Picurina, and the brigade which led the attack and carried the Castle of Balafox by escalade, when he was severely wounded. In February, 1813, he was appointed to a brigade in the Light Division, which he commanded at Vittoria, the attack on the heights of Vera, at Nivelle, Nive, Orthes, Toulouse, and in several other minor engagements. Sir James Kempt, who had become a Major-General in 1812, was appointed to the command of a division in 1815, and was severely wounded when at its head, on the 18th of June.

EAST GLOUCESTERSHIRE ELECTION.—On Tuesday, R. S. Holford, Esq., of Westonbirt, a conservative, was elected without opposition to represent the eastern division of Gloucestershire in Parliament.

MR. BRIGHT AND HIS CONSTITUENTS.—A public meeting was held in the Town-hall, Manchester, on Monday, by requisition from upwards of 1,000 people. Lord calls were raised for an adjournment to the open air, but ineffectually. Mr. R. Wood, amid great clamour, moved the following resolution:—"That this meeting, having learned that the letter of John Bright, Esq., M.P., has been translated and circulated in Russia, desires publicly to declare that the citizens of Manchester do not concur in the opinions expressed by Mr. Bright; but, on the contrary, being convinced that the war is just and necessary, do earnestly desire that it may be carried on with the utmost vigour, until it shall be terminated by a secure and honourable peace." Mr. Absalom Watkin, in seconding the resolution, disclaimed any party considerations on the part of those who called the meeting; it had been convened for the purpose of enabling the people of Manchester to express their conviction that the war was necessary and just, and that the aggressions of Russia ought to be checked. Alderman Watkins differed from the preceding speakers, and moved an amendment supporting Mr. Bright in his expression of opinion, asserting his right of private judgment, and claiming for him the confidence of the constituency. The amendment was seconded by Mr. Alex. Henty, late M.P. for the county. Mr. Entwisle, banker, denied they were met to oppose Mr. Bright, but to offer to the Government the support of Manchester, in defence of our trade and commerce. Mr. Bright then came forward. He was received with a storm of groaning, hooting, cheering, and whistling, which lasted thirteen minutes before he attempted to utter a word. He claimed the right to express his sentiments by letter or otherwise; regretted that he differed from many of his constituents; said his object was to pave the way for public peace; rejoiced that his letter had created so much discussion; and fearlessly offered to prove everything he had advanced. Mr. Bright spoke through a continued uproar; and the confusion at last became so alarming that, after in vain attempting to obtain the sense of the meeting by show of hands, the mayor dissolved the meeting. Mr. Bright then proceeded to the League Rooms. The council room was soon filled with a numerous assembly, principally of Mr. Bright's friends. He here vindicated the steps he had taken, and spoke at length on the great topic of the day. He expressed his hatred of the system of Russian government, and his sympathy with Hungary. The people of this country believe, he said, that they are engaged in a war with a noble object, but he thought it would be found that this contest had no reference to the liberty of Europe or the advantage of this country. After expressing his sentiments against the proposal to raise a German legion, and his doubts as to the stability of the present Government, the meeting adjourned, a vote of thanks being passed to the mover and seconder of the amendment at the previous meeting.

FUNERAL OF LORD DUDLEY STUART.—The funeral of this distinguished nobleman took place at Hertford, on the 15th. The remains had been removed on the previous evening from Stratford-place to Balls-park, near Hertford, the seat of Captain Townshend, M.P. Notwithstanding the desire entertained by the family of Lord Dudley Stuart that the funeral should not be a public one, it was found impossible to carry this intention into effect with a due regard to the earnest wishes expressed by various public bodies that they might be permitted to testify their high respect for the deceased by following his remains to their last resting-place. In addition to Captain Stuart, the only son of Lord Dudley, the Earl and Countess of Harrowby, Lord James Stuart, Captain and Mrs. Townshend, and the younger branches of these families, there were present Sir B. Hall, the colleague of Lord Dudley Stuart in the representation of Marylebone; Mr. J. A. Smith, M.P., and some other very intimate friends of the deceased; Prince Ladislas Czartoryski and Mr. Blotnicki attended as representatives of Prince Adam Czartoryski and the Polish refugees in France; Colonel Szyrma and seven other gentlemen; as representatives of the Polish refugees in England; Mr. Kirby and three other gentlemen, as a deputation from the Literary Association of the Friends of Poland; a deputation of nine gentlemen from the vestry of Marylebone, and of nine from the vestry of St. Pancras. The windows were closed in the streets of Hertford, and the children of Christ's Hospital lined a portion of the road through which the long procession passed. The coffin of polished oak, in which the remains were brought from Stockholm, was deposited in the chancel amid manifestations of regret—neither equivocal nor confined to few.

LIMERICK COUNTY ELECTION.—Mr. Stephen De Vere will be returned without opposition. He is brother of Sir Vere De Vere, of Curragh Chase, nephew of Lord Monteagle, and cousin of the Earl of Limerick.

IRISH UNIVERSITY REFORM.—An official notification from the Board of Trinity College announces the contemplated relaxation of the statute which debarred Dissenters and Roman Catholics from attaining the honours and emoluments attached to the scholarships. The board have resolved to create some additional scholarships, "which will be open to students of all religious denominations, without distinction." They are to be called "Non-foundation Scholarships." Four will be filled up next Trinity term.

THE IRISH CHURCH.—Some valuable preferments have fallen vacant by the death, on Saturday morning, of the Ven. Thomas Magee, Archdeacon, of Kilmaedagh, incumbent of St. Thomas's, Dublin, &c. The deceased was one of the sons of the late celebrated William Magee, Archbishop of Dublin, and, until a recent period, was a prominent supporter of the extreme Protestant party. His probable successor in the incumbency of St. Thomas's parish—valued at nearly £1,000 per annum—will be the Rev. Charles Stuart Stanford, incumbent of St. Michael's.

IRISH PROSPERITY.—A vast quantity of clothing and bedding, belonging to the workhouse of Ballinasloe, has just been sold by auction, the articles having become useless from the enormous decrease in the number of paupers. At the time these necessities were purchased, the union was burdened with no less than 3,000 paupers, whereas now the number of inmates is little more than 400, with no prospect of any material increase.

THE WEATHER IN IRELAND.—Last week there was a very heavy gale blowing from the W. N. W., and on Saturday and Sunday it blew quite a hurricane on the Liffey and about Dublin. In the provinces there have been storms of thunder and lightning. In Mayo the steeple of a church was struck by the electric fluid, and sent crumbling through the roof only a minute or two after the clergyman and a christening party had left the building.

STATE OF TRADE IN IRELAND.—Trade continues dull, with no sign of amendment. Prices of produce, however, have been well maintained, but transactions have been on a limited scale. There was a very large amount of duties paid on Monday at the Customs—£10,000—but no further excitement after that day. The corn-market has been somewhat firmer. The Customs' duties this week exhibit again a large surplus over the corresponding week last year, being £25,235 against £19,442—increase, £5,813, chiefly on tea and sugar.

LORD RUTHERFURD, whose death we announced last week, was called to the Scottish bar in 1812, and soon obtained there an eminent position; his masterly power of analysis, his vast legal erudition, and his eloquence in forensic debate, rendering him at once distinguished as a lawyer and as a pleader. As a scholar and a critic he also attained considerable celebrity. From an early period Mr. Rutherford associated himself with the Whig party; in 1837 he was chosen Solicitor-General for Scotland, and in 1839 he was appointed Lord-Advocate. On the accession of Sir R. Peel in 1841 he vacated the post; but, on the return of the Whigs to office in 1846, he was reinstated, and filled it until 1851, when he was elevated to the bench, under the title of Lord Rutherford. From 1839 to 1851 he represented the Leith burghs in Parliament, and to his services there Scotland owes several most valuable measures—the Entail Reform Act in particular. The late judge was a member of Her Majesty's Privy Council.

SCOTTISH LAW COURTS.—The vacancy caused by Lord Rutherford's death will probably be filled by the Solicitor-General, Mr. Craufurd. Mr. Thomas Mackenzie, sheriff-depute of Ross and Cromarty, it is expected will be Solicitor-General. Lord Curriehill, as Senior Lord Ordinary, will occupy the vacant seat in the first division of the Court of Session, and Lord Rutherford's death causes no vacancy on the bench of the Justiciary Court.

THE TRIBUNALS.

COMPENSATION FOR INJURY ON A RAILWAY.—At the Court of Queen's Bench on Monday, Alderman Challis sought to recover compensation for an injury received while travelling on the Great Northern Railway. The defendants paid £30 into court. Sir Charles Trevelyan, Assistant Secretary to the Treasury, stated that on the 31st of August last he left London by the five o'clock p.m. express train. When the train reached Hornsey, there was a collision with a coal train, the express train at the time going at full speed. When he recovered from the shock, he saw Alderman Challis, who sat opposite to him, had received a deep cut across his nose, and was otherwise seriously injured. He assisted the plaintiff out of the carriage to a tavern close by. Alderman Challis deposed that he had suffered great pain and inconvenience, which had materially interfered with his private business. A gentleman from the company had called, and on hearing that the mere travelling expenses of the Alderman, who was going in state to the Cutlers' feast at Sheffield, were £23, the company had sent him a check for £14! The Alderman further stated that he had paid between £10 and £15 for medical expenses. He had a suit of clothes and outside coat spoiled by the accident, and had also lost his hat. He had sustained a pecuniary loss amounting to between £45 and £50. The jury, after a short consultation, gave the plaintiff a verdict, damages £200.

THE PRESS.—In the Court of Queen's Bench, on Wednesday, an action for libel was brought by Mr. Birch, late proprietor of the Dublin World, against Mr. John Foster, editor of the Examiner. The plaintiff had brought an action, in the courts of law in Dublin, against the Earl of Clarendon, for moneys alleged to be due in payment of his exertions in writing articles in support of "law and order," at a period when a considerable political agitation was going on in Ireland. In consequence of the facts which were elicited in the course of that trial, the defendant published an article, reviewing all the matters in the Examiner, in which he severely condemned the conduct of the plaintiff. This was the libellous article complained of. The plaintiff opened his case at considerable length, and went into details as to the position which he occupied in respect to Lord Clarendon. Lord Palmerston was then called, and examined as to the correspondence which had taken place with the Irish Executive, with the object of showing that the articles in the World were not of the nature alleged. Mr. Birch questioned Lord Palmerston on the subject of the motion in the House of Commons made by Lord Naas, but the Lord Chief Justice ruled that such questions could not be put. The Earl of Clarendon was next examined, and gave an account of the proceedings between Mr. Birch and himself. The Attorney-General addressed the court on behalf of the defendant, in a speech of remarkable ability, which occupied two hours in delivery. The articles published in the World were put in evidence, in support of the plea of justification, as were also the indictments against the plaintiff, on which he had twice been committed to prison for libels. Lord Campbell said it was a question for the jury whether the article complained of was a malicious libel, or was a fair comment on the public acts of the plaintiff. They would consider whether the defendant had, in his strictures, exceeded due bounds. Verdict for the defendant on both pleas.

GAMBLING AND HORSE-RACING.—At the Central Criminal Court on Monday, William Moody surrendered on a charge of keeping a house for betting and other illegal purposes. Mr. Ryland, for the prosecution, stated that the prisoner's house was a beer-shop in Cripplegate, but it appeared there were betting lists provided, and the result of every race was received by telegraph, and in fact there was every possible facility for infringing the Act of Parliament. Mr. Robinson for the prisoner, and the solicitor for the prosecution mutually agreed that the prisoner should plead guilty, and undertake not to repeat the offence; whereupon the Recorder discharged him with a caution, on his entering into a personal recognisance of £100 not to repeat the offence. —Stephen Brown, in answer to a similar charge, was dealt with on the same principle.

MURDEROUS ASSAULT.—At the Central Criminal Court on Wednesday, Francis Robert Newton and Philip William Newton, young men, surrendered to take their trial on an indictment which charged them with having unlawfully and feloniously inflicted upon Adam Stewart Ker an injury dun-gerous to life, with intent to murder him. The prosecutor was a gentleman living at Brompton. The prisoners had taken offence at something Mr. Ker had said or done concerning them, and, on the 10th of August, the prisoner William went to the residence of the prosecutor, and asked for an explanation. The prosecutor had some conversation with him, and he left; and, on the following day, while Mr. Ker was walking at Brompton, the prisoner Francis struck him with a stick, and Mr. Ker turned round and knocked him down. On the following day, Mr. Ker was one of a large party of ladies and gentlemen who had a picnic party at the Beulah Spa, and the assault now the subject of inquiry was committed on the prosecutor in the evening as he was about to return home. Mr. Ker deposed to the defendant, William Newton, calling on him for an explanation of some remarks of Mr. Ker's about Mr. Francis R. Newton. The latter gentleman, it seems, at a party, had "asked Mr. Ker to take wine with him," whereupon Mr. Ker had requested him "not to take that liberty again, as he wished to have no acquaintance with him." This had led to the two recurrences mentioned. As to the assault at Norwood, Mr. Ker said:—"I was about to leave the grounds when the prisoner, Francis Newton, rushed at me and struck me on the shoulder with a loaded whip, at the same time saying, 'As you would not give me any explanation, I have come here to punish you.' He struck me a second time with the whip, and I tried to grapple with him, but was jostled away by a crowd. I then saw the other prisoner, William, come up with what appeared to be the handle of a hunting-whip in his hand, and he struck me with it. Francis also continued to strike me, and I at length rushed at him and we fell, and Mrs. Newton, his mother, also attacked me, and exclaimed, 'Give it the fellow; murder him.' I at length got up, and Francis Newton then struck me on the head with the butt-end of the whip. My hat had been knocked off, and when I received the blow I called out, 'My God! my skull is broken in,' and I reeled back and grasped hold of the other prisoner, William, and we fell together over an arm-chair, and I then became insensible." The prosecutor underwent a long cross-examination, but nothing material was elicited in justification of the prisoners. Several witnesses were also examined, and Mr. Collier having addressed the jury for the defence, the learned judge summed up, and the jury retired to consider their verdict. They were absent about an hour and a-half, on their return finding both prisoners guilty of unlawfully wounding, but recommending the younger prisoner, William, to mercy. The prisoner Francis was then sentenced to nine months, and William to three months, in Newgate.

CRIMES AND CASUALTIES.

ROBBERY WITH VIOLENCE.—Charles Mallett was indicted at the Central Criminal Court, on Wednesday, for a robbery with violence upon Louisa Harrison. The facts were mentioned last week were corroborated, and the jury found the prisoner guilty, sentence of death being passed.

THE OPERA AT DRURY LANE.—At the Insolvent Debtors Court on Monday, Mr. Henry Jarrett, late musical director at Drury-lane Theatre, was heard on his application under the Protection Act. The insolvency arose from the non-success of the opera, and on a former occasion the object of the examination was to show that Mr. George Wood, music-seller, of Edinburgh, was a partner with the insolvent, so as to render him liable to between £7,000 and £8,000 of debts incurred on account of the speculation at Drury-lane. Since the former hearing the insolvent had amended his description, and re-advertised as of Alfred-place, Bedford-square, musical director renting the Theatre Royal Drury-lane, and carrying on therein certain operatic performances, and superintendent in conjunction with George Wood in the Royal Opera, Drury-lane. A long discussion ensued about this alleged partnership. Mr. Commissioner Phillips saying that that was not a court to inquire into a partnership; the parties must go to the Court of Chancery. His Honour named a day for the final order, and renewed the protection.

RAPHAELLE MONTI, the sculptor, well known to the public from his casts and statues in the Crystal Palace, appeared at the Insolvent Debtors Court on Wednesday. The accounts are extremely voluminous, and had not been filed. An adjournment was ordered.

TRIAL FOR MURDER.—At the Winter Assizes, held at Liverpool, Alfred Ogden was on Monday indicted for the murder of Joseph Kershaw at Acorington. Deceased was a weaver at Cheetham. On the 30th of November he left home, and not being heard of for some time, search was made, and his body found in a canal: his watch, guard-chain, &c., were missing. Some inconclusive evidence was offered against the prisoner, on hearing which Mr. Justice Erle stopped the case, and suggested to the jury that this evidence, instead of criminating the prisoner, rather had a tendency to prove his innocence. A verdict of Not guilty was thereupon returned.

DOUBLE CHARGE OF BIGAMY.—At Bow-street on Monday a young man and woman (the latter dressed rather gaily), rushed into court to prefer a charge of bigamy against each other. Inspector Mitchell, who accompanied them, said he had been listening to their statements, but they confused him so much that he hardly knew how to deal with the case. The young woman said that the young man was already married when she became his wife, and he had since married again, all the three wives being still alive. He responded to this statement by accusing her to be a married woman when she married him; to which she replied that this was not the fact, in a legal point of view, because her first husband had a wife living when he married her, and consequently she was at liberty to marry again. A stormy altercation was ensuing, when Mr. Hall, stopping the wrangle, said he could not interfere in the absence of legal evidence. They could indict one another if they liked, but they must do it legally.

MEAT UNFIT FOR FOOD.—On Tuesday Daniel Tiliuss, wholesale meat salesman, Newgate-market, was charged at Guildhall with selling two sides of beef unfit for food. The evidence was conflicting, but Mr. Ald. Salomons was satisfied the meat was bad, and fined the salesman £5 and costs.

THE SMOKE NUISANCE.—Messrs. Fry, chocolate manufacturers of Pentonville, re-appeared at Clerkenwell to answer a charge of nuisance from smoke. Mr. Currie fined them 40s. and costs, adding:—"I would advise immediate attention to the matter, for a more stringent and accumulative Act was never before passed in this country. Why twenty penalties, doubling themselves each time, would amount to £2,000,000 of money, a sum which it would be impossible for any manufacturer in London to pay."

On dit that an offer of £3,000 from Baron Rothschild (who is reported to have engaged Hayhoe, for many years with John Scott, at Whitewall, as private trainer) for Will Dayrell has been refused.

THE MURDER IN WARREN-STREET.—A further examination into this horrible affair took place at Marlborough-street Police office on Thursday. The court and its approaches were crowded, and that portion of the court allotted to the magistrates was also filled with privileged witnesses.—Charlotte Bennett, the late Mr. Moore's servant, deposed that she had been in his service thirteen years; that she had seen the prisoner about half-a-dozen times, and that he began to work for Mr. Moore three or four months ago. She never heard any quarrel between them.—Mr. G. Moore, son of deceased, deposed that on searching, after the murder, he found some silver in the cash-box, which was in an iron safe; the key of this safe he found on the floor, in a room where a struggle had evidently taken place.—Policemen gave evidence as to the finding of Mr. Moore lying in a pool of blood in the passage, and that on searching the prisoner they found on him a dagger, the sheath being tacked to the lining of his coat, twenty-four half-cartridges, and some percussion-caps.—Surgical evidence proved that death was caused by a pistol-ball.—Mr. J. R. Cox proved letting a house at Chelsea to the prisoner; that after the murder he (Mr. Cox) went over the house, and there found that in the kitchen the floor and joists had been cut through, and an excavation made four and a-half feet by four feet eight inches, and about the same depth. This hole was recent, and certainly was not there when he let the house.—William Beagleson and John Bell gave evidence as to the capture of the prisoner.—Mr. Herring, for the prisoner, stated that he should be able to dispel the suspicious excited by the hole in the kitchen, and Mr. G. Moore denied the statement that prisoner was connected with his deceased father by marriage. Barthélemy, who was handcuffed, appeared quite unmoved during the examination. He was fully committed. The police have ascertained that the woman who was in his company on the night of the murder has made her escape to the Continent.

SUICIDE IN OXFORD-STREET.—On Tuesday Mr. Bedford held an inquest at the Pantheon dining-rooms, Oxford-street, on the body of Mr. J. Jones, the late proprietor. Deceased was the subject of hallucinations of intellect, and had frequently threatened suicide. On Sunday night his manner was strange, and he alarmed the house by his cries. In the morning his excitement had so much increased that a surgeon was called in. Soothing medicines were administered, but shortly after deceased was found weltering in blood from a gash in the throat. The act was very deliberately done. Verdict, insanity.

DARING OUTRAGE AT EDGBASTON.—On Wednesday night an outrage of a daring and brutal character was committed in the Wheeley's-road, Edgbaston, close to this town. About seven o'clock two sons of Mr. Charles Clifford, of Farnley-street Mills, were taking an evening walk. When opposite the residence of Mr. Joseph Sturge, they were approached by two fellows from behind; one of these struck the elder boy, Walter, at the back of his head, the blow being inflicted with something very like a stocking with a stone in it; the other rascal struck at the younger boy, and hurt him slightly, but he escaped. The villains beat the elder boy so severely as to leave him insensible. They took his watch, and quickly decamped. Young Clifford was removed to his father's house, a short distance from the spot, and remains in a very precarious state.

THE LATE ACCIDENT ON THE SOUTH STAFFORDSHIRE RAILWAY.—The inquest on the body of Hugh Quin, who died from injuries received at the accident at Bescot-bridge, terminated on Wednesday night. The evidence went to show that Dawson, the pointsman, had neglected his duty, and the jury returned a verdict of "Manslaughter" against him; he was committed for trial.

THE LATE CASE OF ALLEGED NEGLECT AND DESTITUTION AT BRISTOL.—Mrs. O'Hara, who was found in such a neglected and filthy state by Dr. Budd, when called in to visit her professionally a few weeks since, that he brought the case before the magistrates, died on Sunday last in the Clifton Union Workhouse. At the inquest the jury, after some consultation, returned a verdict, "Died from natural causes," accompanying it with an expression of indignation at the filthy and disgusting state in which she was permitted to remain.

COLLIERY ACCIDENT.—An accident occurred on Monday night at the North-side coal works, Bealminster. The descent to the North-side Colliery is by a vertical shaft of great depth, and the men are raised and lowered by means of a cart, or bucket. On Monday evening a "journey" of four persons entered the cart to be lowered to their work in the pit. The men had descended the shaft to some distance in safety, when one of the cogs of the principal wheel gave way, and the cart being thus freed from all check, it descended at a fearfully accelerated pace to the bottom of the shaft, killing the four men, partly by the concussion and partly by suffocation in the drainage at the bottom of the well. A coroner's jury was held, but adjourned till Friday (yesterday) for the attendance of an inspector of collieries.

CAPTURE OF A GANG OF BURGLARS.—Burglary has lately prevailed to an alarming extent at Newcastle and Gateshead. Valuables of all kinds have been stolen from various houses, and in some cases merchants' iron safes have been blown open with gunpowder. The police have been on the alert, and Superintendent Dunne and seven detective officers have succeeded in capturing a gang of four burglars, with the implements of their nefarious calling upon them. They were taken at Byker Hill, a village near Newcastle, and a few hours before their arrest, they had attempted the premises of a butcher near Tynemouth.

CHARGE OF FELONY AGAINST A BRISTOL MERCHANT.—The Bristol magistrates were occupied on Monday in investigating several charges of felony against an oil-merchant of that city, Mr. John Gilbert, jun., and a man in his employ named Davey. Testimony was adduced in support of the charges which we last week recorded. The result of the investigation was, that the prisoners were both committed, Davey on the charge of stealing, and Gilbert receiving the oil knowing it to have been stolen.

SHIPWRECK ON THE GOODWIN SANDS.—During the snow-storm and gale from the N.W. on Monday evening, a fearful wreck took place on the Goodwin Sands to the bark Devonia, of London, 500 tons, Captain Lawson master, while on her way making for the Channel, on a voyage to Aguilas, from Shields, with a cargo of coke. The Devonia sailed from Shields on Saturday last, and, after encountering severe storms of snow and rain, fell in with a terrific storm off Yarmouth. The vessel was made all snug, and nothing happened to alarm the crew until about nine o'clock on Monday night, when a cry arose that the ship had struck; at the same time the sea made a complete breach over the vessel, washing overboard Richard Boyd and Allen Brown, who immediately perished. The remainder of the crew then ran to the poop for shelter, and had scarcely reached there before the vessel broke up, or rather parted in two or three places. They continued to hold on to the remains of the poop, which floated from the wreck and drifted about for ten hours, during which time the steward, John Caroline, and George Davis, the second mate, perished from exhaustion and cold. The chief mate had his shoulder dislocated, and was much bruised. They were at length providentially sighted from the Lord Warden steamer and the Princess Helen steamer, which instantly bore down to the spot, and, after a great deal of trouble, succeeded in taking them off. On the poor fellows being picked up, they were found to be almost in an insensible state from cold and exhaustion.

THE FATAL ACCIDENT ON BOARD THE CLYDE.—The adjourned inquest on the bodies of William Philip and Andrew Anderson, who were killed by the bursting of one of the boilers of the Clyde Screw Steamship Company's vessel Clyde, was held on Tuesday afternoon, when the following verdict was returned:—"The jury return a verdict of manslaughter against John Purvis, the chief engineer of the steam-ship Clyde. The jury cannot separate without expressing their opinion that the peculiar arrangement of the stop and safety-valves rendered the necessity of separate steam-gauges to each boiler of the highest importance for the guidance of the engineer." Poor Purvis has been delirious in the hospital from his sufferings, but both he and the other sufferers from the accident are going on as well as can be expected. The Clyde is in the hands of Mr. Murray and the dockyard engineer staff, and will be repaired in a few days more, and ready to embark troops for the seat of war.

WRECK OF THE CHARLOTTE.—Captain Affleck, late of the Charlotte, from London and Cork, for Calcutta, with troops, wrecked in Algoa Bay on the 20th of September last, landed at Deal on Friday the 15th from the ship Shepherdess. He reports his son, chief officer, steward, and butcher, and three of the ship's company saved; 113 souls lost; saved, five officers, 102 men, and five women, of the 27th Regiment.

WRECK OF THE SERINGAPATAM.—Letters were received in Cork on Saturday last, stating that the East India steamer Seringapatam, which sailed from London in July last for the Mauritius and Bombay—to the former with drafts of the 5th Fusiliers and 85th Regiments, to the latter with passengers and cargo—encountered some foul, but not severe, weather between the Cape and the Mauritius, sprang a leak, and made water in the hold at the rate of three feet per hour. Five heavy guns, and nearly 300 tons of cargo, were thrown overboard, and for twenty days she was in peril. In the middle of this danger the crew braced some brandy, got beastly drunk, and mutinied. Then came into play the order, discipline, and steadiness of the British soldiers, who continued night and day to work at the pumps, and brought the ship into St. Louis. A letter, signed by all the passengers, has been written and published in a St. Louis paper, describing the whole circumstances, and in which testimony is borne to the conduct, courage, and perseverance of the captain of the ship (Ginnett) and his officers. The officers and crew on board amounted to nearly 250 souls.

SHIP ON FIRE OFF BARMOUTH.—The splendid barque Pride of the Sea, was last week burnt to the water's edge, in Cardigan Bay, seven miles off Barmouth, presenting an awfully grand spectacle. The fire raged without intermission for thirty hours, and illuminated the country for miles. The range of the Merionethshire Hills was brilliantly lighted up and presented a wild and beautiful picture. The gale blew so strongly that no boats could put out, and the vessel was one entire sheet of flame fore and aft. The cargo, worth £30,000, is said to be fully insured, partly at Lloyd's and partly in Liverpool. Fragments of burnt timbers now strew the coast, and about 120 bales, besides a large quantity of loose cotton have been washed ashore. The ship was nearly new and splendidly fitted. The crew had fortunately left the vessel in their boats, which were in tow of the Barmouth river steamer, but they had a narrow escape, as in crossing Barmouth Bar their boats got swamped in a surf, and the men were struggling in the water, but they were picked up by the life-boatmen; the master, who is sole owner, says it is his belief that the catastrophe was occasioned by spontaneous combustion.

SMALL TALK.

HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL BOUNTIES to aged poor were distributed in the past week, and on Monday and Tuesday last, at the Almshouse Office, Whitehall.

THE GOLDSMITHS' AND GROCERS' COMPANIES, and several private individuals, are sending in their Christmas contributions to the London police-offices. This is one of the best modes of affording charity.

THE DUCHESS OF CAMBRIDGE has ordered that every widow in the Cambridge Asylum shall be supplied with a good dinner of roast beef, plum-pudding, and ale, on Christmas-day, at her Royal Highness's expense.

The convocation of prelates and clergy of the province of Canterbury was prorogued last week till February 6th.

Last week the wife of a labouring man, named Booth, living at Howden Clough, West Riding, gave birth to four children, three boys and a girl. They were all alive at the time of birth, but died shortly afterwards.

A PLURALIST.—The Rev. C. A. Thurlow, who has just been appointed to the chancellorship of Chester diocese, has at present on his hands the duties of the following offices:—Rector of Malpas (worth £1,000 a year), prebendary of York Cathedral, rural dean of Malpas, canon of Chester, and chaplain to the Archbishop of Canterbury.

A notice has been issued that on and after New Year's day, all waggons, &c., with heavy goods, when passing London-bridge, are to keep close to the kerb, the centre being reserved for quick traffic.

The Editor of the Scotman proposes to the Chancellor of the Exchequer to reduce the stamp duty on newspapers thus:—Papers half the present maximum, a halfpenny; a quarter that size, a farthing.

Vast quantities of herrings have recently been taken on the Devonshire coast. In three days the fishermen at Torcross, in Torbay, took 900,000.

The Duke of Newcastle's Under-Secretaries of State, Colonel Munday, and Mr. Henry Roberts, are, we understand, to receive salaries of £1,500 per annum.

A penny subscription has brought sufficient funds for a Christmas treat for the very large Ragged School in Sermone-lane, Islington.

A curious series of games at dominoes, fourteen only, has been played at Lyons, by two merchants. They agreed to play double or quits, beginning at five francs the game. The winner has gained 40,960 francs, nearly £1,800.

might be—intended for the delectation of the holiday-folk on Boxing-night. A brief glance at the titles, and a few of the features, in the Christmas novelties may not be out of place in this dearth of theatrical novelty. Drury Lane commences its campaign on Tuesday, the management having wisely abandoned the old system of playing to empty benches ten or twenty nights before Christmas. Mr. E. L. Blanchard, as heretofore, supplies the opening portion of the pantomime, which he has founded, we believe, upon the old familiar nursery jingle of "Jack and Gill." Mild Tom Matthews, the best humoured of clowns, has here been supplanted by Harry Boleno, of whom, as the King of Pantomime, we know little. Two columbines, a host of sprites and fairies, called the Allies, figure in the Christmas hill of fave, which, through the indefatigable research of the lessee, goes to establish the fact, that our Allies in the Crimea are the Dutch, for, in an emblem of the allied arms, the Hollanders' flag stands boldly forth. Mr. Nelson Lee, of pantomime celebrity, has supplied several of the comic scenes; and, from his experience in such matters, we may be certain that they will not contain the usual amount of dreary fun put forward as "comic" business. The last scene is to be a "blaze of triumph" in honour of our brave soldiers and sailors now at the seat of war. Mr. M. Morton has stepped into the lists to break a lance at pantomime, and has produced "Harlequin Bluebeard" for the novelty at the Princess's on the 26th. The subject affords capital opportunities for display, and Mr. Charles Kean has spared neither pains nor pounds in aiding the author availing himself of them. The tricks and transformations are new and striking—some imported from Paris, others manufactured in the theatre itself. Buckstone writes his own pantomime for the Haymarket, founded on "Little Bo-peep." The principal character in it will be sustained by Miss Lydia Thompson, a charming actress and danseuse, who danced herself into the public favour in "Silver Hair," last year. Mr. Planché has removed himself and his pen from the Lyceum to the Olympic; and (Wigan eschewing harlequinade for the nonce) has written the Christmas piece for that house—a burlesque on the well known necromantic and romantic tale, "The Yellow Dwarf;" an improvement on his late emanations, which were principally remarkable for brilliant costumes and dull dialogue. Mr. William Brongh is the author of the Lyceum burlesque this year, which is compiled from the story of "Prince Pretty-pet and the Butterfly." The St. James's, as we have before mentioned, has enlisted the witty pen of Mr. F. Talfourd, who has concocted a sparkling burlesque out of "Abon Hassan." The Adelphi is not behind-hand, although working away quietly. Mr. Mark Lemon is the author of the Christmas burlesque, which is entitled, "Zigzag Travels of Messrs. Danube and Pruthi, to learn the Truth." One of the most remarkable incidents in the burlesque will be the appearance of an army of fairies, each with a perfectly modelled and fully-rigged ship upon her head. At the east-end of the metropolis, the City of London takes the lead, Nelson Lee having been actively engaged for months in getting up a pantomime, written by himself, called, "Birds, Beasts, and Fishes, or Harlequin Natural History." At Astley's, the same pen has been called into requisition, for the purpose of transforming Swift's inimitable satire, "Gulliver's Travels," into pantomime. In this novelty, the Lilliputians are the Turks, the Emperor Blesfin is the Czar, and Gulliver, as a matter of course, the Allies. The introduction of Mr. Cooke's highly-trained stud—always a feature in the Christmas festivities here—will be most appropriate in the present instance. Another theatre has depended upon Mr. Lee's pantomime-producing powers—the Marylebone—and "Young Norval on the Grampian Hills; or, Harlequin and Lord Ullin's Daughter" will, on Tuesday evening, be the standing dish for the good folk of Marylebone. Mr. W. Wallack, the lessee of that theatre, who has with great spirit, and, we are happy to say, success, endeavoured to revive the once declining taste for drama at this end of the metropolis, has done all in his power to make the forthcoming revelry a hit. The stage has been elongated, and new machinery added. From this hurried glance at a few of the forthcoming novelties, it will be seen, that the present eventful year will close "right merrily."

THE WESTMINSTER PLAY.—The play this year is the "Eunuchus," which Terence compounded of two separate plays of Menander—the "Eunuchus," and the "Colax"—and thus secured a double amount of amusement; for, while the former piece supplied him with that notable exploit of Chereas which used to elicit indignant letters from British "fathers of families," till the scene with Autipho was omitted, the latter gave him the Bodadil and the Parasite, who are perhaps the most diverting personages in the play. The "Eunuchus" was always a favourite work with both the audience and the actors at St. Peter's College. The attack on the courtesan's house, by Thraso and his strange band, is a good piece of burlesque "fun," that produces an effect like that caused by the army of Bombastes Furiosos. The appearance of a Queen's scholar in female attire is always greeted with roars of laughter, and hence Thais has, at St. Peter's College, a popularity of a kind which the author did not exactly intend. Endowed as it is with so many stimulants for the promotion of hilarity, we cannot wonder that the "Eunuchus" has been brought forward this year a little out of its turn. The acting of the young gentlemen is of the kind which has long been familiar to the audiences of Westminster plays, consisting rather of a careful adoption of prescribed interpretations than of venturesome attempts in new paths. The prologue, after alluding to the death of two "Westminsters"—one, Mr. Clinton, the author of the "Fasti Hellenici," the other unnamed, but supposed to be Mr. Vaughan Williams—passed on to matters of public interest, and the mention of "Alma preclara dies" and "Balaklava tristis gloria" elicited applause, which was even exceeded by the shout which arose when the captain, Mr. Dickson, uttered a line contrasting the British soldier with the Thraso of the comedy:

Non noster est ille miles mercenarius.

The line was evidently taken as a "slap" at the Foreign Enlistment Bill, and was applauded accordingly, although, it appears, it was written before the bill was brought forward.

MADAME TOUSSAUD'S EXHIBITION, has its Christmas novelties in several figures of a most interesting character. They consist of portrait models of Lord Raglan, Omar Pasha, and other distinguished men serving in the present war. They are dressed in military costume, and reflect great credit on the artists employed.

ST. MARTIN'S HALL.—The "Messiah" was performed on Wednesday evening at St. Martin's hall, under the direction of Mr. Hullah. Of its performance it is sufficient to say that it was one of the best and most successful that Mr. Hullah has given. The hall was crowded, and many persons were unable to obtain admission. The principal singers were Mr. and Mrs. Sims Reeves, Miss Palmer, Miss Bleaden, and Mr. Thomas.

LECTURE ON SACRED MUSIC.—Mr. John Wass, a gentleman well known in the musical world as a composer of considerable merit, gave a lecture upon sacred music at Kensington on Tuesday evening, which was numerously and fashionably attended. Mr. Wass, in introducing the subject, said it had long been to him a source of surprise and regret that expression, which is the soul of music, should be so much neglected by vocal performers, both amateur and professional. He, therefore, begged to draw particular attention to the cultivation of this important part of vocalisation, and he would endeavour to point out the most essential requisites to effect so desirable an improvement. The lecturer adverted to the present advanced state of music, the principles of the art, the learning of the words, &c., which, by the bye, is certainly a desideratum, for the words of a song are of the least consideration with not only many amateurs but a vast number of professionals, who think the mere production of sound sufficient, the poor poet being of no importance at all, thus reducing the human voice to a mere instrument. The lecture was illustrated by a very tasteful selection from the works of Handel, Haydn, N. H. Callert, Wass, &c., the executants being Mrs. F. Inman, Mrs. Pyne Galton, and Mr. E. Rosenthal. Mrs. Galton sang her share of the music very artistically, and when we say she is a sister of the celebrated Louisa Pyne, it will easily be understood the school in which she has studied. Mr. Rosenthal possesses a good voice, and sang the music allotted to him carefully; but a vast amount of study is necessary to arrive at anything like perfection in vocalisation, more particularly with sacred music. The great feature of the evening, however, was the singing of Mrs. Inman, whose rendering of "Angels ever bright and fair," left nothing to be desired. The absence of unnecessary ornament, which is so often used to the detriment of this class of music, showed the lady's good taste; she also sang a charming composition of Mr. John Wass, "The Lord is Great," in a manner to occasion its being re-demanded. Mr. Wass's lecture was carefully written and well delivered.

THE CRYSTAL PALACE DURING THE HOLIDAYS.—Just now the Christmas tree, which occupies the centre of the transept, is the feature which most attracts attention. It rises to the height of nearly fifty feet, and stands upon a pedestal appearing to be one solid mass of evergreen. The branches are weighed down with gilt toys of every description, many of them of evident costliness, while here and there lanterns are visible, reflecting coloured lights, which contribute materially to the gaiety and beauty of the ensemble. The exhibition of Christmas trees, has been, we believe, constructed under the direction of Mr. Lewis Solomon, of Covent-garden. At the root of the tree animals, the size of life, symbolise the several seasons, such as the bear, the fawn, the hind, and the reindeer, besides which there is a variety of deer game, the handywork of Mr. Bartlett, the taxidermist, whose skill in this ingenious art is here strikingly demonstrated. The effect altogether of this Christmas tree is highly imposing, and during the vacation it will doubtless be examined with curious wonder by the juveniles who visit the Palace. The entire district is, however, dedicated to a similar species of decoration. The transept everywhere abounds in Christmas trees of smaller growth, it is true, than the monster which overhangs them, but nevertheless grateful to the eyes of young people. We have the trees in all sorts of form, and laden with all sorts of toys and sweetmeats. The district in question is therefore likely to be much frequented during the holidays. The weather was anything but favourable for the military concert (the third of the series) which took place on Thursday morning in the Crystal Palace. The five bands, however, were in attendance, and performed a variety of pieces from Meyerbeer, Anber, Verdi, and other composers, with their accustomed brilliancy and effect. There were upwards of 2,500 persons present.

THEATRICALS IN AMERICA.—The Boston Theatre has been doing "excellently well" of late, Mr. Forrest having fulfilled a three weeks' engagement. Among the principal actresses who have supported Mr. Forrest, was Mrs. Barrow, better known to us as Miss Julia Bennett. Of this charming lady, a correspondent in the New York Spirit of the Times says:—"From what I had seen of the previous efforts of this lady, I deemed her entitled to an exalted position as a spirited and sparkling comedy actress; but her impersonations, of late, have added another wreath to her fame as an artist possessing no ordinary degree of tragic ability; added to a fine figure and expressive face, she has a charming metallic and ringing voice."

CURIOUS EPIGRAPH.—The following singular epitaph is copied from a tombstone in Chard churchyard.

Beneath the Verdure of this earthen chest
Are laid the Garments of a soul undrest:
Here 'tis decreed that they awhile must lie;
'Till Time shall end, and Death itself shall die;
Then will the Saviour model them afresh,
And change this tattered raiment of the Flesh
Like His own, for that's an heavenly mode,
For to enrobe a favourite of God.

NAME AND FAME OF AN IRISH HERO.—There was once in Ireland a thirty old soul:—

His name was a terrible name indeed—
'Twas Timothy Thady Mulligan;
And whenever he emptied a tumbler of punch,
He always wanted it full or in.

ORIGIN OF NAMES.—The first imposition of names was founded on different views among different people. The most common was to mark the good wishes of the parents, or to entitle the children to the good fortune a happy name seemed to promise. Hence Victor, Castor, Faustus, Probus, &c. Originally every person had but one name, as amongst the Jews, Adam; among the Egyptians, Osiris; among the Chaldees, Ninus; among the Medes, Astyages; the Greeks, Diomedes; the Germans, Arivostus; the Romans, Romulus. Some writers, among whom was Camden, contend that names in all nations and languages were significative of some peculiar meaning or quality. This holds not only among the Jews, Greeks, Latins, &c., but also among the Turks, with whom Abollallah means servant of God; Soliman, peaceable; Mahomet, glorified, &c. The ancient Britons usually took their names from colours, because they painted themselves. They subsequently took Roman, and Danish, and Norman (the latter at the Conquest, bringing with them their German names), such as William, Robert, Henry, Hugh, &c. Subsequently Hebrew names, such as Matthew, David, Samson, were engrafted upon the language, and have continued in much use down to the present time. Surnames were introduced at an early period, and were at first formed by adding the name of the father to that of the son. This is evident in Scripture, as (Aleh is denominated the son of Jephunneh and Joshua the son of Nun. The old Normans used Fitz, which signifies son, as Fitzherbert, Fitzsimmons—the son of Herbert, the son of Simmons. The Irish used O, as O'Neal, the son of Neal; the Scotch Highlanders employed Mac, as Macdonald, the son of Donald; and the Norseman added the word son to the end of the father's name, as Williamson. Surnames were not used in France before the year 987, when the lords began to assume the names of their demesnes; in England they were taken up a little before the Conquest, under Edward the Confessor; but they were not fully established among the common people until Edward the Second's time. In Sweden, it is said, they were unknown until the year 1514. They were introduced into Scotland in the time of William the Conqueror by the English who fled into that country. It was long before any surnames were used in Wales except that of son, Evan ap Rice, Evan the son of Rice. Names were significant of quality of the mind or the body, as Bold, Hardy, Meek; others expressive of the trade or profession followed, such as Baker, Smith, Wright, Butler, Page, Marshall. The greater number were derived from the name of places, and Camden says, "There is not a village in Normandy but has given a name to some family in England."—My M.S. Note Book.

THE COURT AND WORLD OF FASHION.

Her Majesty during the week has been at the Castle, Windsor. The Royal dinner parties have had the usual select circle of visitors, amongst whom have been the Duke of Newcastle, the Duchess of Kent, the Earl of Aberdeen, the Marquis of Lansdowne, Viscount and Viscountess Palmerston, Major-General and Mrs. Bentinck, &c.

The Queen and Prince visited the Duchess of Cambridge, at Kew, on Tuesday afternoon, and returned to the Castle at a quarter past five o'clock. Her Majesty and his Royal Highness, attended by the Ladies and Gentlemen in Waiting, dined with the Duchess of Kent in the evening at Frogmore House.

On Monday his Royal Highness Prince Albert went to London by special train, to preside at a meeting of the Royal Commission for the Patriotic Fund. His Royal Highness was attended by Major-General the Hon. Charles Grey and Captain the Hon. D. de Ros. The Duke of Newcastle and Viscount Palmerston accompanied the Prince to London.

On Wednesday, his Royal Highness went to London, by a special train of the South-Western Railway, to preside at the meeting of a committee of the governors of the Wellington College.

GENEROSITY OF THE PRINCE OF WALES.—Last week Lord H. Rokeby, Lieut.-Colonel of the Scots Fusilier Guards, who is about to leave England for the Crimea, was sent for by the Prince. His Royal Highness informed the officer that he wished him to be the bearer of a fur cloak, as a present to Sergeant-Major Edwards, of the first battalion of Scots Fusilier Guards, who, when in England, was his Royal Highness's gymnastic preceptor. His Royal Highness, just after the route was received, sent for Edwards, and presented him with a gold-headed cane, as a token of the manner in which his services as his Royal Highness's tutor had been appreciated by the youthful Prince.

Numerous aristocratic families have during the week left their town residences for their country seats, for the Christmas holidays.

The French Ambassador visited the Earl of Clarendon on Monday.

ACCIDENT TO THE MARCHIONESS OF HASTINGS.—The Llewellyn packet, from Kingstown to Holyhead, had a very rough passage on Wednesday. The Marchioness of Hastings and her daughter, the Lady Bertha Hastings, were among the passengers, and had seated themselves on deck to windward. The sea struck the ship just where the Marchioness was seated, and with such force that both ladies were thrown with great violence off their seats and carried across the deck under the bow of the long-boat to leeward. The Marchioness was completely stunned, having sustained a severe blow on the temple, and some injury to her back. On assistance arriving, the Marchioness was found completely wedged in under the long-boat, from which position she was removed with difficulty. The Lady Bertha escaped comparatively unhurt, but on the Llewellyn arriving at Holyhead, the Marchioness was so ill that it was found necessary to remove her ladyship to the Royal Hotel, where she received the assiduous attentions required by the severity of the injuries she had sustained.

THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN'S JOURNAL.

FESTIVITIES AT EAST MAREHAM, NOTTS.—On Saturday last, the village of East Mareham was the scene of considerable excitement, it being the day on which John Henry Kirke, Esq., attained his majority. This young officer having been called to join his regiment for the Crimea some ten days previously, gave additional interest to the occasion. Although his absence was therefore inevitable, it was determined that a sumptuous dinner should be given to the tenantry and a few select friends on that day. Sir Thomas Wollaston White, Bart., uncle of the young gentleman, supplied abundance of game, and at two o'clock the tenantry and friends surrounded a table richly spread with every variety of substantial and luxurious fare. Amongst the guests were Sir Thomas Wollaston White, Bart., Joseph Denman, Esq. (chairman), Rev. W. H. Brandell (vicar of the parish), Rev. B. Ash, and John Thos. Rose, Esq. (vice-chairman). A series of loyal and appropriate toasts were proposed and responded to, and it may be justly stated, that an intelligent and intellectual treat, instructed and entertained the company.

LORD JOHN RUSSELL has purchased Bure Homage, the seat of Sir John Lither, at Christchurch, in Hants.

THE BARON VIDEL has left the Clarendon, on a visit to Sir Richard Sutton, at Lynford Hall, near Bramford, Suffolk.

THE REV. A. PEXTON has left the Clarendon for Duddington Rectory, near Chatteris.

THE LATE LADY PIERKINGTON, of CHEVEY.—The death of this revered lady took place at her ladyship's residence in Staffordshire, on Monday last. Lady Pierkington's death will be deplored not only by her afflicted family and friends, to whom the loss is simply irreplaceable, but by those numberless whom the loss is simply irreplaceable, but by those numberless poor to whom she was at once the kindest and most bountiful of benefactors. Her ladyship's whole life was a work of mercy.—Wakefield Journal.

MR. JOHN NAYLOR, of Leighton Hall, Montgomeryshire, lent some valuable paintings to grace the opening of St. George's Hall at Liverpool. To avoid danger by rail, the pictures were sent home in a van, and were smashed to tatters on a level-crossing by a train.

AT STOWMARKET PETTY SESSIONS on Monday last, Wm.

Thing, a shepherd, was sentenced to fourteen days' imprisonment, for misbehaviour in the service of James Ward, Esq., of Haughley. The defendant had been ordered to place some hurdles so as to prevent the sheep jumping through; this he neglected to do, whereby twenty-four of the sheep got through the gap, jumped down into the ditch, and were suffocated. They were fine breeding ewes, and could not have been worth less than £50.

WHOLESALE SHEEP-STEALING IN THE FOREST OF DEAN.—In the Forest of Dean there are extensive sheep-walks; but the crime of sheep stealing has of late become of so wholesale a character that, unless vigorous measures are taken for its speedy repression, these sheep-walks will be abandoned by the breeders. Among the most recent instances of large sheep robberies may be mentioned those of Mr. John Watkins, of the Speech House, who has had upwards of fifty sheep stolen; Mr. John James, of Pillawell, West Dean, who, out of a flock of 150 sheep, at Moseley Green, has had 100 recently stolen; Mr. Thomas Priest, of Breen, placed out a large flock of ewes for breeding, which have been, with the exception of twenty-one, all stolen; and Mr. John Priest, of the same portion of the forest, who, out of a flock of 238 ewes, in the open forest, has had them all stolen but one. The owners have shown great negligence in looking after their flocks, and this, with the laxity of the labourers in the forest, who, considering the sheep as forest-bred, have allowed them, without inquiry, to be taken and driven off by a large and organised band of sheep-stealers, who have sold them boldly at the markets at a short distance, has greatly facilitated this system of wholesale plunder.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

FIELD OFFICE, Saturday, 4 a.m.
PARIS, FRIDAY.

The following despatch has been received from Admiral Hamelin, addressed to the Minister of Marine:—

"Bay of Kamiesch, Dec. 12.

"Four thousand three hundred men arrived on the 10th, with ammunition. A brisk cannonade has been kept up for the last two days. The enemy has made some vigorous sorties on our own and on the English lines. They were driven back by our musketry, and in some instances at the point of the bayonet, after a fierce resistance."

THE TREATY WITH AUSTRIA.

[The following appeared last week in our SECOND EDITION.]
The following is the Treaty between her Majesty, the Emperor of Austria, and the Emperor of the French, signed at Vienna, December 2, ratified in the same city, Dec. 14:—

ARTICLE I.—The High Contracting Parties [here reference is made to some protocols and papers exchanged] engage mutually and reciprocally not to enter into any arrangement with the Imperial Court of Russia without having first deliberated thereupon in common.

ARTICLE II.—His Majesty the Emperor of Austria having, in virtue of the treaty concluded on the 14th of June last with the Sublime Porte, caused the Principalities of Moldavia and Wallachia to be occupied by his troops, he engages to defend the frontier of the said Principalities against any return of the Russian forces; the Austrian troops shall for this purpose occupy the positions necessary for guaranteeing those Principalities against any attack. Her Majesty the Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and his Majesty the Emperor of the French, having likewise concluded with the Sublime Porte on the 12th of March, a treaty which authorises them to direct their forces upon every part of the Ottoman empire, the above-mentioned occupation shall not interfere with the free movement of the Anglo-French or Ottoman troops upon these same territories against the military forces or the territory of Russia. There shall be formed at Vienna between the Plenipotentiaries of Austria, France, and Great Britain, a commission to which Turkey shall be invited to send a plenipotentiary, and which shall be charged with examining and regulating every question relating either to the exceptional and provisional state in which the said Principalities are now placed, or to the free passage of the different armies across their territory.

ARTICLE III.—In case hostilities should break out between Austria and Russia, her Majesty the Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, his Majesty the Emperor of Austria, and his Majesty the Emperor of the French, mutually promise to each other their offensive and defensive alliance in the present war, and will for that purpose employ, according to the requirements of the war, military and naval forces, the number, description, and destination whereof shall, if occasion should arise, be determined by subsequent arrangements.

ARTICLE IV.—In the case contemplated by the preceding article, the High Contracting Parties reciprocally engage not to entertain any overture or proposition on the part of the Imperial Court of Russia, having for its object the cessation of hostilities, without having come to an understanding thereupon between themselves.

ARTICLE V.—In case the re-establishment of general peace, upon the basis indicated in Article I. should not be assured in the course of the present year, her Majesty the Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, his Majesty the Emperor of Austria, and his Majesty the Emperor of the French, will deliberate without delay upon effectual means for obtaining the object of their alliance.

ARTICLE VI.—Great Britain, Austria, and France, will jointly communicate the present treaty to the Court of Prussia, and will with satisfaction receive its accession thereto, in case it should promise its co-operation for the accomplishment of the common object.

ARTICLE VII.—The present treaty shall be ratified, and the ratifications shall be exchanged at Vienna, in the space of a fortnight.

In witness whereof, &c.,
WESTMORELAND. (L.S.)
BROU-SCHAUENSTEIN. (L.S.)
BOURQUENEY. (L.S.)

NEW FOOD FOR CATTLE.—We are informed that the new food for cattle, advertised in another column, under the name of Bark Meal, is giving the greatest satisfaction to all, and is likely to become a leading article. Orders have been received from all quarters of the kingdom, and two gentlemen have ordered £55 worth, they having used it only twice before. Samples have also been placed in the hands of the Government, who are expected to use it largely.

ENLISTMENT OF FOREIGNERS BILL.

The following are the provisions of "an Act to permit foreigners to be enlisted and to serve as officers and soldiers in her Majesty's forces:—1. It shall be lawful for her Majesty to cause to be enlisted as soldiers into her service persons not being natural-born subjects or entitled to the privileges of natural-born subjects of her Majesty, who may voluntarily enter themselves for such service, and to grant commissions or letters of service to any such persons to serve as officers, the persons so enlisted and commissioned to be formed into separate regiments, battalions, and corps; and such enlistment, commission, and the services thereunder, shall be as lawful as if such persons were natural-born subjects of her Majesty.—2. Provided always, that the men serving under this act shall not be employed in the United Kingdom, except for the purpose of being trained, arrayed, and formed into regiments, battalions, or corps for foreign service, and except such bodies of reserve as may be kept in the United Kingdom for training and arraying recruits, and for supplying vacancies in such regiments, battalions, or corps; and that there shall not be within the United Kingdom more in the whole than 10,000 men serving under this Act at any one time.—3. Every person enlisted as a soldier under the authority of this Act shall be attested in such manner as her Majesty shall direct, and not otherwise; and all officers, non-commissioned officers, drummers, and private soldiers enlisting or commissioned under this Act shall take such oath for their fidelity during their continuance in her Majesty's service as her Majesty shall direct, and no other.—4. Subject to the provisions herein contained, all officers, non-commissioned officers, drummers, or private soldiers, serving under the provisions of this Act, shall be subject to all provisions contained in any Act for the time being in force "for punishing mutiny and desertion, and for the better payment of the army and their quarters," and the Articles of War made in pursuance thereof, in the same manner to all intents and purposes as any of her Majesty's regular forces are subject to the same.—5. This Act shall continue in force during the present war, and until one year after the ratification of a definitive treaty of peace.

ALMSHOUSES IN NEWLAND, WORCESTERSHIRE.—The late Earl of Beauchamp bequeathed £60,000 for the erection and endowment of almshouses at Newland, in Worcestershire, for the benefit of infirm agricultural labourers. Nearly two years having expired since the decease of the late lord, the poor of that county are anxiously expecting the executors and trustees of the charity to fulfil the intentions of the testator speedily, the land having been granted for this purpose a twelvemonth ago, by a deed of conveyance, according to the legal forms, which was enrolled in the Court of Chancery.

THERE WAS RECENTLY at the horse-market, Boulevard de l'Hôpital, an instance of a horse which had lost an ear having been supplied with one in caoutchouc.—Galignani.

GALLS ON HORSES.—"To cure galls on horses, take whiskey, and add as much pulverised alum as it will dissolve; with this bathe the parts affected. I have known the very worst of galls healed in this way, and the horse kept in constant use. I ever resort to this remedy, carrying it with me wherever I journey, and continue its use with undiminished approval. I apply no other remedy. When a horse has been put out for the winter, and has not been used, his breast and back get very tender; a single hour's use then, on a hot day, will scald his breast so as to cause serious injury. My uniform practice, therefore, has been, for a week or so before beginning to use the harness, to harden the breast and back by bathing them regularly two or three times a day. No injury has then resulted from the application of the collar."

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

Tuesday, December 19.

BANKRUPTS.

Joshua Vines and James Smith, Dover-road, Borough, builders—George Wilson and William Raynham, Notting-hill, builders—Joseph Lough, Great Queen-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields, and John James Limebeer, St. James's-street, bootmakers and blacking manufacturers—Joseph Gibb, Blue Lion-yard, Upper North-place, Gray's-inn-road, livery stable keeper—Charles Muskett, Diss, Norfolk, chymist—John Peter White, Mark-lane, merchant—George Clinnance, St. Alban's, baker—Jabez Cooper, Rowley, Regis, Staffordshire, linendraper—Frederick Reeves Barratt, Stamford, musicseller—Robert Wilson Wyllie, St. Leonard, Devonshire, flax seutcher—Jonathan, William, and Lupton Wright, Oxenhope, near Keighley, Yorkshire, worsted-spinners—William Allaway, Southport, dentist—James Sothern Tonge, Liverpool, commission agent—William Yates, Liverpool, cotton broker—John Fletcher, Unsworth Mill, near Bury, and Manchester, cotton manufacturer—Betty Barron, Henry William Knowles, and James Heggworth, Bacup, Lancashire, manufacturers.

Friday, December 22.

BANKRUPTS.

George Harding, Stoke Newington, linen draper—Henry Sheppard, Salisbury, grocer—George Newmarch, Nottingham, hatter and furrier—John Walters, Tokenhouse-yard, City, ship owner—Richard Ginks, Hartlebury, Worcestershire, wheelwright—Nicholson John Gardner, Water-lane, commission agent—John Gower, Lawrence-lane, London, warehouseman—James Mortimer, Grosvenor-road, Abbey-road, St. John's-wool, builder—Joseph Stodhart, North Leach, Gloucestershire, draper—Samuel Highfield, trader—John Marshall, Todmorden, Yorkshire, cotton spinner and innkeeper—William Chadwick, Liverpool, line burner, builder, and brickmaker—Joseph Poppleton, Leicester, lamb's-wool and worsted yarn spinner, and commission agent—Thomas Edwards, Shrewsbury, builder—Will Buckwell and Thomas Jones, Duke-street, Southwark, cement and stone manufacturers.

MONEY MARKET.

MONDAY.—The funds ruled at a decline of $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent., owing to the expected opposition to the Enlistment of Foreigners Bill. The tone was somewhat firmer towards the close, but there was little actual recovery in price. Business was limited.

TUESDAY.—The funds opened with steadiness at a slight improvement, and further advanced $\frac{1}{2}$, after which, however, there was a slight reaction.

WEDNESDAY.—The English funds were flat, but the decline at no time exceeded $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent., and at the close, was reduced to $\frac{1}{2}$.
THURSDAY.—The funds opened at a decline. Consols were first quoted at $91\frac{1}{2}$ to $91\frac{3}{4}$, ex. div., from which they receded until they touched 91 . Finally, however, they reached $91\frac{1}{2}$ to $91\frac{3}{4}$. Bank Stock, 207 to 209; Reduced, $91\frac{1}{2}$; New Three-per-Cents., $91\frac{1}{2}$; Long Annuities, 4 to 16; India Bonds, 9s. to 12s.; and Exchequer-bills, 4s. to 5s. premium. Foreign securities were heavy, and prices generally, at the close of business, were lower.

FRIDAY.—The Stock market has been somewhat firmer, but transactions have been limited. Consols were quoted at $91\frac{1}{2}$ to $91\frac{3}{4}$, but closed at $91\frac{1}{2}$ to $91\frac{3}{4}$, ex. div.; Bank Stock, 208 to 209.

THE MARKETS.

MARK LANE.

MONDAY.—Our market was fairly supplied with English wheat from Essex and Kent, and there was a good deal offering for delivery per rail. The inclement state of the weather continues to retard foreign arrivals. Factors commenced by asking considerably enhanced rates, and ended, as usual in such cases, in being unable to maintain the advance reported on Friday last; and the trade in Mark-lane ruled dull at that day's advance. Flour underwent no change. Barley was not dearer than on Friday last, with a more limited demand. Oats were in moderate request at an improvement of 6d. to 1s. per quarter. Beans and peas dull at former prices.

ARRIVALS INTO LONDON FROM DEC. 11 TO DEC. 16.

Quarters.	English.	Scotch.	Irish.	Foreign.
Wheat	3974	566	...	2901
Barley	9481	853	...	...
Oats	270	1850	9238	3571
Malt	5599	...	160	...

Flour, 6,826 sacks, and 1,568 barrels.

FRIDAY.—The arrivals of grain and flour this week have been small. To-day's market was but thinly attended, and a limited business only was transacted; the value of all articles is unaltered from Monday.

COUNTRY GRAIN.

IREWICK, Tuesday.—A small supply of wheat. The trade is firm, and all samples in condition sell at an advance of 1s. to 2s. per quarter upon last week's prices. Barley participates in this advance, and finds free sale at 1l. for all qualities. Beans and peas dearer. Prices to the growers: Wheat, red, 72s. to 16s.; ditto, white, 78s. to 82s. per quarter; barley, malting, 35s. to 38s.; ditto, grinding, 32s. to 36s. per quarter; beans, 52s. to 56s. per quarter; peas, 46s. per quarter. Averages for the week ending December 16th, 1854: Wheat, 950 quarters, at 71s. 10d.; barley, 2,626 quarters, at 38s. 2d.; oats, 39 quarters, at 30s. 5d.; beans, 33 quarters, at 49s. 7d.; peas, 82 quarters, at 45s. 10d.

DUBLIN COBN MARKET.

TUESDAY.—The attendance was small. Wheat was 6d. to 1s. per barrel higher; and oats, 3d. to 6d. For foreign wheat there was a small advance. We subjoin quotations:—White wheat, 41s. to 43s. 6d.; red ditto, 37s. to 41s. 6d.; barley, 16s. to 20s.; bere, 15s. 6d. to 16s. 9d.; old oats, 13s. to 15s.; oatmeal, per cwt., 16s. to 17s.; rappedseed, 27s. to 28s. 6d.; bakers' flour, 23s. to 27s.; Indian corn, per 480lbs, 40s. to 41s.

BOROUGH HOP MARKET.

MONDAY.—The market was very firm, with a fair trade doing in all new hops at full late prices.
FRIDAY.—But little doing; prices have an upward tendency.

SMITHFIELD.

MONDAY.—The supply of beasts was small, and in consequence, although many of the butchers were supplied for Christmas, the best qualities made very nearly as much as on Monday last. Trade was slow, and on the average must be quoted worse. We had a fair supply of sheep; choice qualities were in demand, at fully late rates. Good calves were not plentiful, and in a few instances better prices were obtained. From Germany and Holland there were 760 beasts, 1,130 sheep, and 80 calves; Scotland, 220 beasts; Norfolk and Suffolk, 900; and 1,000 from the Northern and Midland Counties.

Per stone of 14lbs.	s. d. s. d.	Per stone of 14lbs.	s. d. s. d.
Best Scots. Herefords	5 0 5 2	Best Dns. & Half-breds. Sh. 0	0 0 0
Best Short Horns	4 8 5 0	Best Long Wools	4 8 1 10
Second quality beasts	3 6 4 2	Do. do. Shorn	0 0 0 0
Calves	3 8 5 0	Ewes and second quality	3 8 4 2
1½s	3 8 4 8	Do. do. Shorn	0 0 0 0
Best Dns. & Half-breds	5 0 5 2	Lambs	0 0 0 0

Beasts at market, 3,133; sheep and lambs, 17,100; calves, 133; pigs, 305.
FRIDAY.—Although the supply of beasts on sale to-day was very moderate, the demand for all breeds ruled inactive. In prices, however, scarcely any change took place. We were very scantily supplied with sheep, which move off slowly, at barely late rates. Calves—the number of which was limited—were dull at Monday's currency. Pigs commanded very little attention, on lower terms.

COUNTRY CATTLE.

DEBBY SMITHFIELD, Tuesday.—This market was seasonably well supplied, and numerously attended by our town and county butchers and others surrounding us. The general quality of the stock exhibited was well suited for Christmas consumption. Some superior animals were exhibited, and many of the regular cattle dealers, and our own graziers, produced stock in the market that was universally admired for its real useful qualities. The prices obtained did not much exceed what we have regularly quoted. Beef, from 6d. to 7½d. per lb.; mutton, 6d. to 7d.; pork, 9s. to 9s. 6d. per score; but little real shown.

DUBLIN SMITHFIELD CATTLE MARKET.

THURSDAY.—We had a very small market to-day, and a decided falling-off in quality. Beasts were 18s. to 20s a head lower than last week, and mutton 4d. per lb. Beef, sinking off, fetched from 18s. to 60s. per cwt.; prime cow mutton, 4½d. to 6½d. per lb.; wether, ditto, 5½d. to 6½d.; veal, 7½d. to 8d. There was a small and inactive market of pork, which sold from 45s. to 47s. per cwt.

FOOD CONTRACTS.—During the past week the food contracts for the Unions in Devonshire have been taken (from Christmas to Lady-day) at prices by no means so high as many persons predicted would be paid during war time. The contract for bread at the Tiverton Union has been accepted at 7½d. to 7½d. per 4lb. loaf; flour, 57s. per sack; mutton, 5d. per lb. For the Totnes Union contracts for bread have been taken at 7½d. to 8½d. per 4lb. loaf; seconds flour, 56s. 6d. per 280 lbs.; beef, 6d. to 6½d.; mutton, 5½d.; and pork, 6½d. per lb.; fresh butter, 1s. 4d. ditto. A rather extraordinary fall in the price of pork occurred at the Exeter market last Friday. On the previous market day the price was as high as 10s. 3d. per score, whereas on the following Friday the price fell to 8s. and 9s. per score. A very large quantity of pigs was left unsold even at this reduction.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS.

BIRTHS.

On Wednesday the 13th inst., at Hampton Court Palace, the Hon. Mrs. Bradshaw, of a daughter.—On the 19th inst., in Kibury-street, Mrs. Charles E. Pollock, of a son.

MARRIAGES.

On the 16th inst., at St. John's Church, Chatham, by the Rev. M. Hathaway, incumbent of Darleston, Staffordshire, Mr. T. Hathaway, of Great Stanmore, Middlesex, to Catherine, eldest daughter of Mr. Etherington, of Chatham.—On the 19th inst., Edward Winsor, Esq., late of Wadham College, Oxford, to Anne, eldest daughter of the late James Teasdale, Esq., of Albemarle-street, Piccadilly.

DEATHS.

On the 14th ult., perished in the hurricane off Balaklava, on board the ill-fated screw-steamer Prince, in which he was midshipman, Mr. Chas. W. Adam, aged 16 years, younger son of J. Adam, Esq., of Boulogne-sur-mer, deeply lamented.—On the 16th inst., at Wimbledon, John Francis Scott, Esq., second son of the late John Scott, Esq., Public Secretary to Lord Nelson at the battle of Trafalgar.—On the 20th inst., at his residence, in Smith-street, deeply and deservedly lamented, General the Right Hon. Sir James Kempt, G.C.B., G.C.H., Colonel of the 1st, or Royal Regiment.

Printed by HENRY ADAMS, at No. 25, Robert street, Hatton, Parish of St. Giles, in the County of Middlesex, at the Printing Office of TAYLOR and HARRISON, Nos. 4 and 5, Lambeth-place, Fetter-lane; and published by John at No. 109, Strand, opposite Adonis-street, Adelphi in County.—DUBLIN 23, 1854.

Vol. IV.—No. 105.]

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1854.

[WITH SUPPLEMENT, PRICE 6d.]

TO ADVERTISERS.

EVERY SATURDAY, PRICE SIXPENCE, STAMPED.

THE FIELD:

The Country Gentleman's Newspaper.

A first class Journal, devoted to every kind of information interesting to persons "Out of Town," as

Hunting, | Racing, | Coursing, | Boating,
Shooting, | Angling, | Yachting, | Archery.

AND
The Garden; | The Farm; | The Household.
It is expressly designed for Families.

The official Stamp Returns for the quarter ending June, 1853, give it a circulation of

3,872 Copies Weekly.

Great improvements are now being made in it, and its circulation is rapidly extending.

The following is the

SCALE OF CHARGES FOR ADVERTISING:

	s.	d.
Twenty words and under, per line	0	2
Each additional ten words	0	6
A half Column	1	5
A Column	3	0
A Page	8	6

For three insertions a reduction of one-eighth; and for six insertions a reduction of one-fourth will be made.

Field Office, 408, Strand.

SPORTING.

YORK SPRING MEETING, 1855. will take place on TUESDAY and WEDNESDAY, APRIL 17th and 18th.
STEWARDS:—GODFREY WENTWORTH, Esq.; R. M. JAGGERS, Esq.; R. G. LUMLEY, Esq.
Under the same Rules and Regulations as at the August Meeting.

FIRST DAY.

THE SPRING ST. LEGGERS of 10 sows each, 11 ft. with 50 milch. For three-year-old colts, 8st 11lb; and fillies, 8st 2lb. A winner of any Stake of the value of £500 to carry 5lb extra. Mutton three-year-olds allowed 3lb. If twenty Subscribers, the second horse to receive back his Stake. One mile and a half. Ten Subscribers, or no race. To close and name on the 2nd January, 1855.

THE ZETLAND STAKES of 5 sows each, with 50 added. For two-year-old colts, 8st 11lb; and fillies, 8st 2lb. Winners before starting to carry 2lb extra. Beaten horses allowed 2lb. The second to receive back his stake; and the winner to pay £5 towards expenses. Half-a-mile. To close and name on the 2nd January, 1855.

THE GREAT NORTHERN HANDICAP of 25 sows each, 15 ft., and only 5 if declared by the 1st of February, with 800 added by the Licensed Victuallers and their Friends. The winner of any Handicap race of £100, subsequent to the declaration of the weights, to carry 5lb extra. The winner of the Metropolitan, the Northamptonshire, or any other Handicap value £500, 11lb extra; of any two Handicaps of £500 each, 10lb extra. The second horse in any Handicap value £500, to carry 5lb extra. No horse to carry more than 11lb extra. The winner to pay 10 guineas to the Charitable Fund of the York Licensed Victuallers' Association, and 10 guineas to the Judges. The second to receive £10 out of the Stake; and the third to receive back his Stake. Two miles, over the Old Course. To close and name on Tuesday, January 2nd, and the weights to be published on the 20th.

If the highest weight accepting is under 8st 7lb, it will be raised to that, and the others in proportion.

Mr. RICHARD JOHNSON, of York, Hunt-capper.

PRESENT SUBSCRIBERS:

Mr. Armstrong	Mr. Morris
Mr. G. N. Barber	Mr. F. Barr
Mr. Bell	Mr. Payne
Mr. Blyth	Mr. Pelly
Mr. J. Boswell	Mr. Perry
Lord Chesterfield	Mr. T. Poffan
Mr. E. R. Clark	Mr. C. Reynolds
Mr. J. C. Davies	Mr. C. Rigby
Mr. J. Day	Mr. W. Robinson
Mr. Edwards	Mr. J. C. Robson
Mr. Gully	Mr. J. Saxon
Mr. R. Harrison	Mr. W. Smith
Mr. J. J. Henderson	Colonel Smith
Mr. H. Hill	Mr. J. M. Stanley
Mr. Howard	Mr. St. John
Mr. J. Lingham	Mr. O. Scott
Mr. Justice	Mr. H. T. Thompson
Mr. H. Loy	Mr. Thornbury
Mr. Landley	Mr. D. Wray
Mr. Mather

For the full Programme of this Meeting see Sheet Calendar No. XLII.

*. NOMINATIONS received by Messrs C. and J. WEATHERBRY, 6, OLD BURLINGTON-STREET, LONDON; or by Mr. WM. NORTH, Clerk of the Course, YORK.
York, December 18, 1854.

ANNUAL PIGEON-SHOOTING.

JOSEPH PASK, of the Red Lion Inn, Wellington, near Lincoln, begs to inform his Sporting Friends and others that TWO FAT PIGS will be SHOT FOR on Wednesday next, Jan. 3, 1855, with fair party Guns.—First bird to fly at Eleven o'clock.

CROWN INN, SURFLEET.

MARK HARRISON begs to acquaint his Sporting Friends that the ANNUAL PIGEON-SHOOTING will take place at the above Inn on Thursday, the 11th January, 1855.
Surfleet, near Spalding, Dec. 18, 1854.

AGRICULTURE, &c.

SEWAGE CHARCOAL MANURE.

THIS highly fertilising MANURE, which is Peat Charcoal, completely saturated with London Sewage, will be found most efficient for every species of crop, more especially for Peas, Beans, Turnips, Mangold Wurzel, and other root crops. It will produce a greater return for the outlay than Guano or any other manure at an equivalent value; it also possesses the property of retaining its fertilising power longer than other Manures now in use. It may be obtained at the SEWAGE MANURE WORKS, Stanley-bridge, Fulham, at £4 per ton, and in quantities less than half a ton, at 5s. per cwt., for ready money only; and in quantities not less than 1 ton will be delivered at the London Termini of the Railroads free of charge for carriage. It may also be had from Messrs. G. GIBBS and Co., No. 26, Down-street, Piccadilly, Agricultural Seedsmen, Agents for London; and from all the other Agents of the Company.

THE NEW CHINESE POTATO (DIOSCOREA JAPONICA)

MR. JOHN HENDERSON, formerly of the firm of John A. Henderson and Co., Pine Apple-place, London, has the pleasure of informing the Public that he has just completed the purchase from M. Paillet, of Paris, of his entire valuable STOCK of the above introduction from China, the nutritive properties of which are said to far surpass the ordinary Potato that it is likely, not only to act as an auxiliary, but entirely to supersede that valuable but uncertain element.

The most satisfactory results have followed from personal experiments, and proved that when cooked in the ordinary manner, from the large amount of farinaceous properties it contains, it can never become waxy, as is too generally the case with the Potato. Its flavour resembles in delicacy an early ASH-LEAVED KIDNEY; but, independent of the above excellent qualities, there is every probability of its taking a still more important position in the economy of this country; for, when dried and reduced to powder, it is equal to the best ARROW ROOT; or, mixed in the proportion of one third with the best of wheat flour, it makes an extremely light and wholesome BREAD, as well as very superior PASTRY.

Messrs. Vilmorin and Co., speaking of it, observe:—"Of all the excellent roots proposed as substitutes for the diseased Potato, the DIOSCOREA JAPONICA is certainly the only important one. It is easily propagated. The tubers are large and long, the flesh very mealy and devoid of any peculiar or disagreeable flavour. The DIOSCOREA JAPONICA is, in our opinion, a precious acquisition."

M. Paillet, Horticulturist, Paris, in his supplementary Catalogue of this autumn says:—"A new alimentary root, introduced into France by M. Montigny, French Consul in China. Serious experiments have shown that this tuber will be much more advantageous to cultivate than the Potato, both in regard to its QUALITY as well as its PRODUCE."

M. Paillet, to whom the Imperial Society of Agriculture and Commerce of France has awarded the sum of 4,000 francs, as encouragement for having brought it into cultivation, also notices that this tuber attains at least 1 to 2 lbs. weight. In its growth it is less delicate than the Potato, which unfortunately has of late years much degenerated. It does not require particular care, and its abundant produce amply repays cultivation. Its taste is pleasant, and being a root which contains a large amount of FIBRE, it will be a great addition to the FOOD of the PEOPLE, as soon as it becomes generally known. It is so HARBY that it has passed the winters of 1853 in the open ground, without losing in the least its flavour and texture. It is also found that the STEMS and LEAVES, which are very numerous, form an excellent FOOD for CATTLE."

Tubers, with description of the Chinese Mode of Culture, is the abundance of Mr. JOHN HENDERSON, KING'S-KHESWELL, SOUTH DEVON, at the following prices, for each only:—
Four Tubers £2 10 0
Ten ditto 5 0 0
Fifty ditto 5 5 0
Hundred ditto 10 0 0

Post-office orders are requested to be made payable at Newton Abbot, South Devon. The receipt is not allowed to the trade when not less than fifty are taken.

P.S.—All orders unaccompanied by a remittance will be considered as not received.

SEED WHEAT.—Samples and Prices of RED HYBRID, NURSERY, and other kinds of Wheat, suitable for late sowing after Furness, will be sent on application to Mr. H. RAYNBIRD, Basing-stoke.

NONPAREIL PEAS.

WILLIAM FAIRBRARD begs to inform the trade that he is now ready to execute any orders he may be favoured with. This Pea W. F. is confident will become a general favourite both for Garden and Field culture. Price can be had on application. MOIST PLEASANT NURSERY, GREEN-STREET, SITTING BOURNE, KENT.

HORSES taken into WINTER GRAZING and SPRAY-YARD, and Cattle to Graze, at BEDDINGTON PARK, BEDDINGTON, near Guildenham and Croydon, Surrey. Inquire of WILLIAM TUFFS, the park-keeper. Some excellent loose boxes for wintering horses are erected, and can be had reasonable.

HORTICULTURE, &c.

EXPERIENCED GARDENERS.

LUCOMBE, PINCE, and Co. have now several excellent practical GARDENERS whom they can with confidence recommend, their testimonials as to character and abilities being in every respect unexceptionable.

EXETER NURSERY, EXETER.

Established 1820.

LARGE STOCK OF LARCH

LUCOMBE, PINCE, and Co. have a very large stock of fine, stout, well-rooted, twice-transplanted LARCH, from 2 to 3 feet, and 1 to 4 feet high, which they can offer at very low prices. Particulars may be had on application to the EXETER NURSERY, EXETER.
Established 1820.

THE PAMPAS GRASS, GYNERIUM ARGENTUM.

LUCOMBE, PINCE, and Co. have a fine healthy stock of this highly-ornamental plant, well established in pots, and fit to send out immediately.

It is universally admitted that few plants produce a more beautiful effect than this gigantic Grass. See woodcut and description of it in "Gardener's Chronicle" of the 11th ult.

Sizes, Prices, and all Particulars, may be had on application to LUCOMBE, PINCE, and Co., EXETER NURSERY, EXETER.
Established 1820.

GENUINE GARDEN SEEDS.

LUCOMBE, PINCE, and Co. beg leave to announce that they have just completed their supply of the above, all carefully selected from the stocks of the best growers, and consequently superior in quality, and also at the usual prices, to which they respectfully call the attention of those who require a really genuine article. Their long experience in the Seed Trade (always also proving the vitality of their Seeds before sending them out) fully justifies them in saying that their Seeds cannot fail to give great satisfaction. Catalogues may be had on application to EXETER NURSERY, EXETER.
Established 1820.

WEEDS ON WALKS.

MR. FLEMING'S WEEDING or SALTING MACHINE for Gravel Walks, Court Yards, &c., manufactured and sold by ALEXANDER SHANKS and SON, ALBION, FORFARSHIRE, from whom particulars, with prices, may be had.

THE PLANTING SEASON.

JAMES DICKSON and SONS, NEWTON NURSERIES, near CHESTER, and also at NEWTON, MONTGOMERYSHIRE, have on sale every description of FOREST TREES, of all ages and sizes, suitable for Villa Planting, so as to give immediate effect, as well as for forming new Plantations, by any extent, also FRUIT and ORNAMENTAL TREES, EVERGREEN and FLOWERING SHRUBS, ROSES, HERBACEOUS, STOVE, and GREEN HOUSE PLANTS, all healthy and vigorous, at very moderate prices.

Forest Tree Planting done by contract to any extent, and in the most efficient manner. Experienced Gardeners, Builders, and Woodmen recommended, whose characters and abilities may be strictly relied on.

The NEWTON NURSERIES and SEED WAREHOUSE, No. 102, EASTGATE STREET, CHESTER.

21st October, 1854.

The following Catalogues are published, and can be had on application: Dutch and other Flower Catalogues; Fruit Trees (descriptive); Roses, &c.; Forest Trees; Herbaceous and Alpine Plants; Stove and Greenhouse Plants; Garden and Flower Seeds; Ornamental Trees and Shrubs.

SPLENDID NEW RHUBARB.

SAFAR'S CRIMSON PERFECTION.

ROBERT SALT begs leave to inform the Gentry, Nurserymen, Gardeners, &c., that this splendid variety of Rhubarb is now ready for distribution. It is universally allowed to be the most early, prolific, and delicious variety ever offered to the Public.

See "Gardener's Chronicle," June 11, 1853:—"Very good, and of a most beautiful crimson; compared with others, it is a marvel for the small amount of seed it contains."—Ed.

Certificates of Merit were awarded for specimens exhibited at the Meeting of the Horticultural Society, Regent-street, London, June 28th, 1853; at Nottingham, May 21st, 1851; at Derby Midland, May 20th, 1851; at Ormskirk, Lancashire, August 10th, 1851. Price 7s. 6d. per root, three for one guinea, and six for £2.

Orders addressed to ROBERT SALT, LONGTON, STAFFORDSHIRE, or the following agents will have immediate attention: Messrs. Hurst and Mullen, 1, Leadenhall-street, London; Messrs. Burgess and Kent, Penkull, Staffordshire; Messrs. Burgess and Kent, Penkull, Staffordshire; Mr. Wood, Nurseryman, Copple, near Nottingham; Messrs. Francis and Arthur Dickson, Eastgate-street, Chester; Messrs. James Jackson and Sons, Seed Merchants and Nurserymen, 102, Eastgate-street, Chester, and 116, Deansgate, Manchester; Mr. Salisbury, Melbourne, Derbyshire. A liberal discount allowed to the trade. A Post-office order from unknown correspondents.—Longton, Dec. 9.

Now ready, price One Shilling,

THE NATIONAL GARDEN ALMANACK, HORTICULTURAL TRADE DIRECTORY, and FLORISTS' DIARY for 1855. By JOHN EDWARDS, F.R.S.

Wholesale Packets for the Nursery Trade may be obtained at £2, containing fifty copies; £1, containing twenty-four copies; 15s. 6d., containing twelve copies, from the Author only. They will be delivered free to any of the London Seedsmen, or otherwise, in town, as may be directed.

CHAPMAN and HALL, 193, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

RENDEL'S PRICE CURRENT and GARDEN

DIRECTORY for 1855.

With Newspaper Stamp to go FREE by Post, is now Published, and can be had from all Booksellers.

THE Proprietors of this well-known

Publication have endeavored, in the present Edition, to render it even more complete than the last, and have again obtained the valuable assistance of Mr. ROBERT ERRINGTON, Gardener to Sir P. Egerton, Oulton Park, who is acknowledged to be one of the best practical writers on Horticulture of the day.

It contains a very valuable descriptive list of KITCHEN GARDEN SEEDS with prices affixed to every article, and in addition to the descriptions, there are short and concise Cultural Remarks for every kind of Vegetable, pointing out the best varieties for early, medium, and general Crops.

The LIST of FLOWER SEEDS has been much improved, and contains descriptions of all the best sorts, with Directions for sowing seeds, and other most practical remarks; and in this department Mr. ERRINGTON has written expressly for the Work on Original Article on "ANNUALS and OTHER FLOWER SEEDS," which will be read with much interest.

The CALENDAR of OPERATIONS for the whole of the Year has also been revised, and will be found even more useful than the one in the last Edition.

There is a good GARDEN ALMANACK, as usual, and the detailed quantities of Seeds contained in their useful "COLLECTIONS of SEEDS" are given in full.

A valuable REPORT of the EXPERIMENTS in their TRIAL GROUNDS is also given, and Descriptions of the NEWLY-INVENTED CLOTH, or Hand Glass, and of the NEW CHINESE POTATO (DIOSCOREA JAPONICA). The following Original Articles have also been written expressly by Mr. ERRINGTON: "On VEGETABLE FORCING," "LIGHT and AIR," "LIQUID MANURE," and "ROTATION of CROPS," and, in addition to the above, the Proprietors have been favoured with an Original Paper, by J. R. LAMBS, Esq., of Rothamsted, on the "ARTIFICIAL MANURE MOST SUITABLE for the GROWTH of BARLEY."

*. If the urgent want of several Correspondents, the Publishers have printed the present Edition the SAME SIZE as the "GARDENER'S CHRONICLE," so that those who wish it may have it with the present Volume of that valuable Paper. (Woodcut thirty-two Folio Pages, of "Chronicle" size.)

COPY can be obtained, Price SIXPENCE each, or FIVE to PURCHASERS of SEEDS, through the medium of any BOOKSELLER in the UNITED KINGDOM, from the LONDON PUBLISHING OFFICE, 294, STRAND, or from the Proprietors.

WILLIAM F. RENDEL and Co., SEED MERCHANTS, PLYMOUTH.

HENRY PEAT,
HUNTING SADDLER,
14, OLD BOND-STREET,
LONDON.

HORSE CLOTHING, HORSE RUGS, and SADDLERY WOOLLEN WARE-HOUSE, 9, GOSWELL-STREET, CITY.
—CHRISTOPHER ASKEW (successor to Mr. E. C. Davies) begs to inform the Nobility, Gentry, and all consumers of Horse Clothing, that his stock (well known to be the most extensive) is now replete with every article necessary to the equipment of a horse or stable, and will be sold at these moderate prices which upwards of a century has obtained for this establishment a world-wide reputation. Carriage wrappers and knee-rugs in great variety. Warehouses—2, Goswell-street, London, and 17, Ranelagh street, Liverpool. Manufacture—Kendal, Westmoreland.

CHARLES LENNY,
Coach and Harness Manufacturer,
20, NORTH END, CROYDON.

BEGGS to call attention to his Broughams, Clarences, Harouches, with his registered no-less wheel-plate, thus shortening the distance between the wheels, and lessening the draught for the horse, allowing the wheels to lock quite under, and having high front wheels.

C. L. has constantly on sale Cab and Driving Phaetons, Stanbopes and single Horse-dittos, Pony Carriages, and Park Phaetons. He also solicits attention to his Newport Pagnel and other Carts, either with panels or wickerwork sides, and to his Bagot Cart, in panel or wickerwork, easy of access, and possessing all the advantages of the Malvern Cart, but less expensive.

He has also a large stock of Croydon Basket Carriages, cheap and elegant, and in every variety of shape, either for sale or building to order, with or without heads, to suit either the Shetland Pony or the Horse.

C. L. would also invite an inspection of his registered Phaeton in basket-work, suitable either for one or a pair of ponies or horses.

Carriages of all kinds let on hire for long or short engagements.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS
PATENT.

MAJOR'S REMEDIES for the HORSE,
the best and most effectual ever discovered, superseding the "burning iron" and the torture of
"cautery."

MAJOR'S BRITISH REMEDY for the Cure of Ringbone, Spavins, Splints, &c. A single bottle sufficient to cure from four to six Spavins, price
£1. 15s.

MAJOR'S SINOVITIC LOTION (the Remedy,
No. 2), for Grogginess, Weak Joints, Sprains of the Back sinews, Ruptures of the Sheaths of Tendons,
Suspensory Ligaments, Shoulder Lameness, and Inflammation; also for the cure and prevention of breaking down, &c. In bottles, large size, £1. 1s.; small, 16s. 6d. each. The above invaluable remedies can now be forwarded to any part of the United Kingdom, Pre-payment, by Check or Postoffice order, made payable to Joseph Major, Postoffice, Charing-cross.

Letters addressed to Joseph Major, Horse Infirmary, British-yard, Cockspur-street.

Agent for Newmarket, Mr. Thomas Dunning; for Scotland, Messrs Gardiner and Ainslie, Edinburgh; Mr. W. F. Wells, rheumat, 52, Sackville-street, agent for Dublin; agent for Glasgow, Mr.
W. A. Preston, 16, Stockwell-street, and 44,
Adelphi-street.

FOR CLEANING LEATHER BREECHES,
GLOVES, &c.

PULLMAN'S IMPERIAL BLEACH-ING COMPOSITION.—This unrivalled composition renders the leather soft and pliable, restoring it to all its pristine beauty, and is especially valuable for its great freedom from dust.
Sold by all leather breeches makers and brush manufacturers, and by R. and J. PULLMAN, LEATHER DRESSERS, 11, GREEN-STREET, SORO.

TO NOBLEMEN, GENTLEMEN OF THE HUNT, &c.

H. A. GOODYER wishes to call particular attention to the "Iron Duke" and Snaffle Bits, invented by F. Smith, Esq., peculiarly adapted for Hunters, as it can be used with the most tender-mouthed Horse, although no
Horse can pull against it, and may be considered a Safety Bit for Ladies and Children. Also in stock, the Segunda, Chiffney, Sefton, and Hanc-verian Cords and Pelhams, Cambridge Double and Gay Snaffles, &c.

Sole Agent for White's Patent Tube Hug Harness, to which was awarded a Prize Medal at the Great Exhibition of 1851, which may be seen and its advantages explained.

Saddles, with every improvement, made to order.

GUNS, RIFLES, AND REVOLVERS.

J. LANG has an extensive assortment of Second-hand GUNS, by all the first London Makers, at half their original cost, which he has taken in exchange, in addition to his own superior GUNS and RIFLES, as turned out by the late Joseph Manton, for the superior finish of which J. Lang obtained a prize medal at the Great Exhibition. Rifles on the most approved plan for the Conical Ball, for deer-hunting or long distances.
Revolving Pistols on J. Lang's own plan, as also Dean and Adams' Colts, &c., but a trial is recommended before risking money or life.
22, Cockspur-street, London.

TEETH.—By Her Majesty's Royal Letters
Patent.—Newly invented and Patented application of Chemically-prepared White Indian-rubber in the construction of Artificial Teeth, Gums, and Palates.—Mr. E. H. MOSLEY, Surgeon-Dentist, 64, Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, sole Inventor and Patentee. A new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of CHEMICALLY-PREPARED WHITE INDIAN-RUBBER as a lining to the ordinary gold or bone frame. By this application all sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings are required. A natural elasticity, hitherto wholly unattainable, and a fit perfectly with the most unerring accuracy. It is secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the material, the greatest support is given to the teeth, and the gums, loose, or rendered tender by the action of the gums. The acids of the food, and no agency on the Chemicallyprepared White Indian-rubber, and as it is a nonconductor, fluids of any temperature may be used with comfort, and it is imbedded and retained in the mouth, all unpleasurableness of smell or taste being at the same time wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of the preparation.

To be obtained only at 61, Lower Grosvenor-street, London, and 10, Eldonsquare, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

HORTICULTURE IN

ALL ITS BRANCHES.

JOHN WEEKS and Co., KING'S ROAD, CHELSEA, HOTHOUSE BUILDERS.

erected, and in full operation, combining all modern improvements, so that a lady or gentleman can select the description of House best adapted for every required purpose.

The HOT-WATER APPARATUS, which passes through all the Houses and Pits, affording both top and bottom heat, is in constant operation, and particularly worthy of attention. Many of the Houses and Pits are of wide and lofty dimensions, and together cover in length 1000 feet. They are all effectually heated by ONE BURNER, which, during the severe winter months does not rest in labour and fuel more than 3. 8d. per day, and the Apparatus is so arranged that each (house or pit) may be heated separately and to the required temperature. The splendid collection of STOVE and GREENHOUSE PLANTS are also in the highest state of cultivation, and for sale at very low prices. Also a fine collection of strong GRATE VINES in Pots, from eye, and the best sorts.

PLANS, MODELS, and ESTIMATES of HORTICULTURAL BUILDINGS; also CATALOGUES of PLANTS, VINES, SEEDS, &c., forwarded on application to JOHN WEEKS and Co., KING'S ROAD, CHELSEA, LONDON.

the Nobility and Gentry, about to erect HORTICULTURAL BUILDINGS, or a HOT-WATER APPARATUS, will find in our Horticultural Establishment and Hothouse Works, King's road, Chelsea, an extensive variety of Hothouses, Greenhouses, Conservatories, Pits, &c.

the several winter months does not rest in labour and fuel more than 3. 8d. per day, and the Apparatus is so arranged that each (house or pit) may be heated separately and to the required temperature. The splendid collection of STOVE and GREENHOUSE PLANTS are also in the highest state of cultivation, and for sale at very low prices. Also a fine collection of strong GRATE VINES in Pots, from eye, and the best sorts.

CHAFF-CUTTING MACHINES.

AN ILLUSTRATED and PRICED LIST of CHAFF-CUTTING MACHINES will be sent free on application to WM. DRAY and Co., Agricultural Engineers, Swan-lane, Upper Thames-street.

OATS SHOULD BE BRUISED, BUT NOT PULVERISED.

AN ILLUSTRATED and PRICED LIST of CORN-BRUSING MACHINES will be sent free on application to WM. DRAY and Co., Agricultural Engineers, Swan-lane, Upper Thames-street.

MANGER, RACK, AND WATER-TROUGH, AS ONE FIXTURE.

IMPROVED AND NEWLY PATENTED.

COTTAM and HALLEN, the original Inventors, obtained the Great Exhibition Prize Medal for this arrangement, to which all the latest improvements are adapted, secured by Patent, including a method entirely new of attaching the bulter-weight and rein from the back of the manger to the under front of the plate, allowing the horse greater freedom, and being noiseless in operation, and much to its comfort whilst feeding and convenience when at rest, as likewise, from their position, avoiding the liability of the most restive horse getting cast. No well-managed stable should be without these fittings.

COTTAM'S ENAMELLED MANGERS are constructed in the best possible manner, both as to form and utility; are cleanly in appearance, durable, and impervious to infection; manufactured Plain, Galvanized, and Enamelled. Improved Surface Drain, with Safety Covers, Sagittary Traps, Stable Pumps, Loose Box, Fittings, Gutta Percha Preserving Saddle and Harness Brackets, and every article in Stable furniture, in stock. An extensive assortment of Patterns for both Plain and Ornamental Castings, and every description of Wrought and Cast Iron Work for building and other purposes. Agricultural and Horticultural Implements, Iron Gates, both plain and ornamental, Hurdles, Strain Fencing, &c.

Estimates and Catalogues on application to COTTAM and HALLEN,
2, WINSLEY-STREET, OXFORD-STREET.

"The above engraving represents accurately a section of a leaden pipe, which was employed for a short time in conveying water from a well on the grounds of Mr. Duke, of Bonchurch, Isle of Wight. The original section of pipe is 8 1/2 in. long, 2 1/2 in. diameter, and 5-16 in. thick. A great part of the internal surface is corroded by the action of the water; but, as shown in the drawing, four deep excavations have been made, and another is shaded out of view by the manner in which the section of the pipe has been cut. The water has cut these deep pits almost through the pipe, and not only upon the portion which we have illustrated, but have formed similar channels throughout the entire length."—Expositor.

N.B.—The corrosive water of the Isle of Wight has no effect on Gutta Percha Tubing. See Testimonial below.

DURABILITY OF GUTTA PERCHA TUBING.

Many inquiries having been made as to the durability of Gutta Percha Tubing, the Gutta Percha Company have pleasure in giving publicly to the following letter from Sir RAYMOND JARVIS, Ventnor, Isle of Wight.

(Second Testimonial)

"In reply to your letter received this morning, respecting the Gutta Percha Tubing for pump service, I can state, with much satisfaction, it answers perfectly. Many builders and other persons have lately examined it, and there is not the least apparent difference since the first laying down, now several years; and I am informed that it is to be adopted generally in the houses that are being erected here."

THE GUTTA PERCHA COMPANY, PATENTEES,

18, WHARF-ROAD, CITY-ROAD, LONDON.

FOOD and DIET.—HARD'S FAR- NACIOUS FOOD for INFANTS and INVALIDS.

"I have carefully examined, and repeatedly prescribed, 'Hard's Farinaceous Food' (see 'Percher's Treatise on Food and Diet,' pages 3 and 473, &c.), which is prepared from the most nutritious of the cereal grains. It combines both nitrogenised and non-nitrogenised alimentary principles, and forms a very valuable food for children and invalids."

—JOHN PERCHER, M.D., F.R.S.

"Assistant Physician to the London Hospital
"47, Finsbury-square. July 1, 1853."
Sold by all Chemists and Druggists, Patent Medicine Vendors, Grocers, Italian War-bouquiers, and Confectioners; in 1s. and 2s. packets, and tin cans, 7s. 6d. each. Diverse. All evasive packets and cans are signed "JAS. HARD'S," and manufactured at the Royal Victoria Mill, Dartford,
Kent.

MELHUIS'S WESTERN HUNTING

GARRACK SAUCE, for Venison, Storks,
Chops, Hashed Mutton, Game, and all kinds of Meats and Fish, either hot or cold.—On trial of this new Sauce, all Sportsmen will find it one of the best Sauces for giving a zest to their dinner, by imparting a flavour unequalled by any now extant.

Hotel Masters will find it a Sauce universally approved of, imparting a delicious flavour to all kinds of gravies, game, and fish, not requiring the further addition of pepper or salt.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE.

One table-spoonful to be added to every half pint of gravy, for storks, chops, and hashes, a wine-glassful to every half-pint; for hash-meat, and according to taste; for venison and game, double the quantity; for cold meat, pour a little in the plate.

Sold in bottles, 1s. and 2s., the large bottles hold nearly three of the small ones, and can be obtained of Messrs. CRUSS and BLACKWELL, Stationers, London, or of the Proprietor, J. MEL-HUIS, DRUGGIST, FORE-STREET, TAUN-
TON, and may be had retail of Druggists or Grocers, on application.

HOT AIR, GAS, VESTA, JOYCE'S

STOVES.—STOVES for the economical and safe-heating of Halls, Shops, Workshops, Passages, Chambers, and the like, being at this season demanded, WILLIAM S. BURTON invites attention to his unrivalled assortment, adapted (one or the other) to every conceivable requirement, at prices from 10s. each to 30 guineas.
His variety of Register and other Stoves is the largest in existence.

WILLIAM S. BURTON has ten large Show
Rooms devoted to the show of GENERAL FUR-NISHING IRONMONGERY (including cutlery, metal silvers, plated and japanned wares, iron and brass bedsteads), so arranged and classified that purchasers may easily and at once make their selections.

Catalogues with engravings sent (per post) free.
The money returned for every article not approved of.

39, OXFORD-STREET (corner of Newman-street); 1, 2, and 3, NEWMAN-STREET; and 4 and 5, PERRY'S-PLACE.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.

THE most appropriate offerings for this season of festivity are those which tend to the promotion of health and personal attraction;
none can be more acceptable than ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL, for imparting a transcendent lustre to the hair, and sustaining it in decorative charm.

ROWLAND'S KALYDOK imparts a radiant glow to the cheek, and a delicacy and softness to the hands, arms, and neck; and ROWLAND'S TOBACCO, or PEARL, PERFUMED, bestows on the teeth a pearl-like whiteness, and renders the breath sweet and pure.

The patronage of Royalty throughout Europe, their general use by rank and fashion, and the universally-known efficacy of these articles, give them a celebrity unparallelled.

Sold by A. ROWLAND and SONS, 20, Hatton-garden, London, and by chemists and perfumers.
BEWARE OF SPURIOUS IMITATIONS!!

PROVISION AGAINST DISABILITY

by Sickness or Accident, effected with the
LAW PROPERTY and LIFE ASSURANCE
SOCIETY, 30, Essex-street, Strand.

Example: A person aged 30, may secure an Annuity of £100 a year in case of permanent disability, by payment of only 35s. per annum.

Forms and particulars forwarded to any applicant, by E. BARNES, Secretary.

REDEMPTION of MORTGAGES and

LOANS secured by a Policy which guarantees the repayment of Loans in a fixed period, or earlier in case of death, so that the Property may pass unincumbered to the family, by the
LAW PROPERTY and LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, 30, Essex-street, Strand. Apply to
E. BARNES, Secretary.

BANK of DEPOSIT.

NATIONAL ASSURANCE and INVEST-MENT ASSOCIATION.

No. 3, FILL MALL EAST, LONDON.

Established A.D. 1844.

Empowered by Special Act of Parliament.

PARTIES desirous of INVESTING
MONEY are requested to examine the Plan of this Institution, by which a high rate of interest may be obtained with perfect security.

The Interest is payable in January and July at the Head Office in London; and may also be received at the various Branches, or through Country
Bankers, without delay or expense.

PETER MORRISON, Managing Director,
Prospectuses and Forms for opening accounts sent free on application.

SWINESHEAD ASSOCIATION for the PROSECUTION of FELONS, and for the Mutual Protection of Property.—NOTICE is HEREBY GIVEN, that the Annual Meeting of the Members of the Association will be held at the GRIFFIN INN, in SWINESHEAD, on THUR-SDAY, the 30th day of NOVEMBER, 1854.—The Directors will meet at Eleven o'clock for receiving Subscriptions, Auditing Accounts, &c. Dinner at Two.

Also that the Directors will meet at the GRIFFIN INN at Six o'clock on TUESDAY Evening, the 28th of NOVEMBER instant, when all Persons having any Claim on the Association are requested to present the same.

W. D. REDDISH, Treasurer.
Swineshead, Nov. 10, 1854.

MONEY.—ESTABLISHED 1849.

LOANS from £5 to £50 on the Personal Security of the Borrower, to be repaid by small Weekly, Monthly, or quarterly instalments, as may suit the convenience of the borrower. A Form of Application and particulars sent to any part, on receipt of four postage stamps and a stamped directed envelope. Office (private), 16, PENTON-STREET, PENTONVILLE, London.
T. SHORT, Secretary.

LOANS.—Persons desirous of obtaining

ADVANCES from £50 to £250, upon approved personal security, repayable by easy instalments, extending over a lengthened period, are invited to examine the principles of the BRITISH MUTUAL SUBSCRIPTION LOAN ASSU-RANCE CLASSES. Prospectuses, Reports, and every information, may be obtained on application at the British Mutual Life Office, 17, New Bridge-street, Blackfriars. Rules 6d. each copy, or 1s. per post. CHARLES JAMES THICKE, Resident Secretary.

MONEY ADVANCED, to any Amount,

on LIFE INTERESTS, MORTGAGE, or REVERTIONS. Loans of every description on good Personal or other Security. Large or small capitalists, desirous of safe and profitable investments, are invited to communicate with the Advertiser, who will wait upon gentlemen in any part of the kingdom on receipt of a remittance.
Address to Mr. H. LEA, No. 35, GREAT WINCHESTER-STREET, CITY.

ST. GEORGE ASSURANCE

COMPANY.

118, FILL MALL, LONDON.

Capital, £100,000, in Shares of £5 each.

(On which interest at the rate of £3 per cent. per annum, exclusive of dividend, is guaranteed by the Deed of Settlement.)

DIRECTORS.
Chairman—VISCOUNT RANELAGH, Park-place, St. James's.

Deputy Chairman—HENRY FOWNALL, Esq.,
Ludbrook-square, Notting Hill.

Barnard H. Adams, Esq., 46, Lincoln's Inn-fields.

J. C. Colbath, Esq., M.P., Ipswich, Suffolk.

John Dalrymple, Esq., 8, Arlington-street.

Henry Haines, Esq., Rector House, Metchum.

Lewis Hovell, Esq., Little Faling, Middlesex.

Col. Brownlow Knox, M.P., 28, Wilton Crescent.

William Henry Lumsden, Esq., Shorrock, Fulham.

Sir T. Herbert Mordaunt, M.P., 169, New Bond-street.

John Benjamin Nevill, Esq., Twickenham.

J. E. Carter, Esq., Fulham.

Secretary—W. C. URQUHART, Esq.

The leading features of this office are:—

1. Life Assurance in all its branches.
2. Premiums payable Quarterly, Half-yearly, Annually, or by a Single Sum.
3. The Assurance of Defective Titles, thereby restoring the property to its full value.
4. The Redemption of Leaseholds, Lifeholds, and Mortgages.
5. The Enfranchisement of Copyholds.
6. Assurances for Members of Freehold Land and Building Societies.
7. Endowments for Husbands, Wives, or Nouncees.
8. Endowments for Children on attaining a Certain Age.
9. Annuities of every description granted on Terms peculiarly favourable.
10. Deposit Assurances, offering all the usual advantages of a Bank.
11. Loans on real and Personal Security.
12. Loans, enabling parties to Purchase their own Houses, thus converting Rent Payments into Capital.
13. Discounted Lives assured at Equitable Rates.
14. Policies granted upon Half-Credit Premiums.
15. Policies, without extra Rates, to Persons in the Military, or others, not forfeited, if killed in defending the country from Invasion.
16. Notices of Assignments of Policies Registered.
17. Medical Examinations made by the Company.
18. Age of the Life Assured admitted on all Policies, on reasonable proof being given.
19. Stamp Duties on Life Policies paid by the Company.
20. Three-fourths of the Profits on Life Policies apportioned every fifth year amongst the Assured whose Policies are of Three Years' standing.

For further particulars, Forms of Proposal, and Prospectuses, apply to the SECRETARY, at the Office as above.

CONTENTS.

Chronicle of the Week	1,27
Sport and Sportsmen	1,234
Hunting	1,2,9
Coursing	1,2,30
Shooting	1,2,1
Cricket	1,2,1
Yachting	1,2,32
Field Sports and Pastimes	1,2,32
Angling	1,2,33
Gardening	1,2,34
The Farm	1,2,34
The Country House	1,2,35
Poultry	1,2,37
Freemasonry	1,2,37
Letter Bag	1,2,37
SUPPLEMENT	1,2,41

NOTICE.

With the first number of the new volume of THE FIELD, and the new year, there will be presented to the Subscribers

THE SPORTSMAN'S ALMANAC,

AND

Country Gentleman's Calendar;

THE FIELD, THE GARDEN, THE FARM,
For the Year 1855

This Almanack will contain superb Engravings, from designs by ANSDALL, WILSON, and others, with all the information useful for reference in the country house.

N.B.—This will be given to all who are Subscribers to THE FIELD for the year 1855.

Advertisements for "The Sportsman's Almanack" should be sent to THE FIELD Office without delay to secure insertion.

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

RACING.

Whip.—Eosma Jelmina, by Lanercost, carried 11st 2lb.
P. P.—Alfred Day's lowest riding weight last year was 7st 12lb.
Stag.—No.
Coltish Bridge.—1. Won by half a length.—2. Inten off.—3. The horse started at 2 to 1.
N. N.—The services of any riders under articles must be obtained through their masters.
St. L..—A. is right—the race was established in 1779, though not named until two years afterwards.
For Fly.—If as you say, your opponent jostled you, his horse is distanced.
Snale.—A bet is rendered void by the death of either party before the match on which the bet is made comes off.

HUNTING.

Harkness.—Yes. Hares about this period lose their sluggishness, and run, perhaps, better than at any other season.
Horn.—The scent is warmer when the weather is mild.
Rover.—The dogs ought not to be whipped to cover.
Sim.—The harrier is, properly speaking, a combination of breeds best suited to the country to be hunted.
Jasper.—If the hounds are thorough-bred, they will seldom stop if the horses are close on them.
Whipper-in.—The hound offending should certainly be chastised.

COURSING.

Sylph.—Yes; nothing better than exercise.
Stake.—Heaten cleverly.
K. K..—Dress each day with a tolerably hard brush. A little oil may be used.

SHOOTING.

Willow.—You had better hide yourself behind a thick bush, and then you may be able to shoot plenty of fieldfares. You do not require so much powder as you do when shooting crows or wood-pigeons. Use No. 9 shot, and do not overcharge your gun. It is a great mistake to use a heavy charge of shot. The more you use, the weaker its effect.
Reverend.—We think it unsportmanlike to swot three ounces of shot after a pigeon from a trap. A field-sportsman would be ashamed to shoot with a gun exceeding three-quarters bore. It is no proof of skill for any one to stand with an immensely large-bored gun up to the shoulder before the bird is set at liberty. The most sporting-like way of shooting birds from a trap is to shoot with a gun not exceeding eleven-gauge—to pull the string of the trap yourself—and to keep the stock of the gun down below the hip until the bird takes wing.
Grouse Shooter.—Try the effect of a perforated bullet.
Snipe.—Take a well-seasoned dog with you.
J. J..—Fire well forward.
Cup.—The birds are invariably shy.
Whiffling.—Practice is better than precept. Fire well before the birds, and profit by experience.

CRICKET.

X. (Shuffield).—No. Not out.
H. X..—The "Oval" ground, at Kennington, is now in the possession of the "Surrey Club," to whose committee a lease of the premises has been granted, on behalf of the club.
A. H. (Surrey).—Yes. The "Oval" is considerably larger than "Lord's."
G. H. (Gloucester).—Obtain a copy of the Rules and Laws of Cricket from Mr. Robert Dark, Tennis-court, Lord's-ground, Marylebone, and the two questions you submit for our reply you will find answered. Strange it is that you have not, hitherto, possessed yourself of these things. They are as requisite for a "young cricketer" as his bat and spiked shoes. Impress this upon your colleagues.
Albion.—Yes; the decision was correct.
J. G. (Harrowford).—You will find the matches you allude to mentioned in "Our Glances of the Season 1854," as well as all the leading matches of the year. They must, however, be taken in their order.
S. Loring.—About the year 1817, we think; but we will refer to our "memoirs" of that period.
T. R. (Harrowford).—The best picture of the "Kent and Sussex" match played at Brighton, containing the portraits of a large number of cricketers and the patrons of the game, was got up and published by Mason, of the King's-road, Brighton.

YACHTING.

An Old Subscriber.—Illustrations will be introduced into THE FIELD whenever there is something that requires illustration. But water-pictures will not be given.
Four Phry.—Certainly they may anchor during a match if they require, provided they afterwards weigh it.
H. R..—In going free, you ought to have given way to those on a wind. We are afraid you are rather obstinate, for surely there were many present who could have answered so simple a question.
C. C..—Space permitting, we shall give an article on the subject next week.
Greenwich.—We often meet men who insist upon their yachts sailing faster on their beam ends than on an even keel; but surely, if you gave one minute's thought to the subject, you need not ask our opinion.
X. F..—Apply to Mr. Gregory, Secretary of the Royal London Yacht Club. You will also find a list of yachts for sale attached to the report of the Royal Thames Yacht Club in our columns of to-day.
Nox.—Over 25 tons.
J. S..—We cannot interfere in private quarrels, or give any opinion.
L. W. (Plymouth).—Freemasons' Tavern.
Peter.—You were misinformed; she did not start at all.

ANGLING.

R..—A fresh-run fish may be known by its corpulence, the shallow forking of the tail, and the whiteness and softness of its fins.
J. D. (Angler).—When salmon are tired of their sea-food and become fat, they leave the salt water for the estuaries and rivers.

POULTRY.

Bantam.—Yes. We shall be glad of the information.
X. X..—Hens seldom lay at this season of the year.
Impur.—See our article on fowl-houses in the last number of THE FIELD.
S. T..—The bird, though peculiar, is by no means uncommon.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Subscriber from the West.—We believe not. To attempt to obtain such assistance would, we should say, merely result in a cold, official answer.
G. H. C..—Yes.

H. J. J..—We have not received it. We presume it would now be valueless.
K. G..—Should have sent further particulars, with name and address.

NOTICE.—No contributions voluntarily sent to this Journal will be paid for. All, except such as are forwarded in pursuance of an express arrangement with the present Proprietors, will be received and treated as the usual gratuitous correspondence of a journal.

NOTICE.

THE FIELD OFFICE is removed to ESSEX HOUSE, Nos. 2, 3, 4, and 5, Essex-street, Strand; where all communications, orders, and advertisements, are requested to be addressed, to the Editor.

The Field.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1854.

CHRONICLE OF THE WEEK.

THE termination of the extraordinary session of Parliament, and the consequent suspension of political excitement at home, throw us back upon the slow progress (if progress it may be called) of the military operations in the Crimea. The last authentic news received from thence has been anything but inspiring in its character; and the public is beginning to distrust the croakings of those "dilettante civilians," upon whose assumption of military knowledge Lord John Russell so severely animadverted. During the past week, the efforts of that ministerial journal which claims to have the best information upon all matters relating to the war, have been directed to the task of transferring the blame of mismanagement from the shoulders of the Ministers at home, to the Generals of our army in the Crimea. The tenor of the correspondence has certainly indicated that tendency; and, yesterday, the nation was reminded, in the authoritative tone of a leading article, that it was "a troublesome reflection" in connexion with the war, "that the war is managed by men whose experience is not that of the present age, but that of the past." There can be no doubt that the erratic and alarmist temperament of this journal has been productive of the greatest disturbance to the commercial interests of the country, and has had the dangerous effect of unduly depressing and unreasonably exciting the feelings of the country with respect to the war. The very difficult task of defending an incompetent ministry may seem to explain many inconsistencies; but it must destroy the confidence of the nation in an authority which professes to be independent, and to be swayed by no other bias than that which inclines towards the popular warfare. It affords some satisfaction to notice, that in such a mass of contradictions some cannot fail to tell against the spirit which seeks to calumniate the great and good; and in the very same columns which insinuate incompetency and indifference to the sufferings of her soldiers, against Lord Raglan, we find a hearty and honest testimony, voluntarily rendered by a distinguished officer now serving under him, that the army has "a kind, generous, and considerate chief." We have been informed that the conduct of this journal, with respect to the war, has latterly excited the deepest disgust in the minds of a large and influential party in the City; and that, at a meeting of the City Club, held during the past week, it was unanimously resolved that all articles and statements appearing in its columns are henceforth to be received with the greatest suspicion. During the last few days a report has gained currency that the correspondent of that journal has been ordered out of the camp by the Commander-in-Chief; and, if that be true, we apprehend that few will be disinclined to support Lord Raglan. We must confess, however, that we do not believe the report.

As for the actual news from Sebastopol, it marks very little progress, if any. The hard frosts had enabled the men to advance the siege works, and to get up some more heavy guns from Balaklava. Winter clothing and reinforcements were arriving, and the preparations for the winter camp were proceeding, if not satisfactorily, at least hopefully. A large body of the Russian forces, encamped in the valley of the Telarmaya, had retired into the interior, leaving a sufficient strength to hold the position. The causes of this movement were supposed to be want of provisions and inability to resist the atmosphere of the marshes. The Russians were being decimated by sickness, but the ranks of the allies were not spared; for, according to the latest returns, we have 3,000 invalided at Balaklava, and 4,000 at Scutari. The Russians have also finally abandoned the redoubts near Balaklava, captured from the Turks. Turkish reinforcements were arriving very fast, but the mortality in their ranks was enormous. It was believed that the destination of these last was to be Perekop, and many arguments point to the desirability of holding this gate of the Crimea against all in-comers and out-goers. The quotation of bets among the officers was 10 to 1 against entering Sebastopol before New Year's Day; from which it would appear that Tattersall's has emigrated to the Crimea. As the Stock Exchange is going—represented by Peto and his "navvies"—why not "The Corner?"

As a fit pendant to her Majesty's speech at the opening of Parliament, we now have that of Napoleon III. at the opening of the Legislative Session. As with our Queen's speech, some passages have given the most unbounded satisfaction, and others have caused disquietude. Perhaps this must have been the inevitable effect of speaking about the war at the present crisis, when it is known beforehand that every word will be weighed. But whatever doubts may be excited by the estimate of the Austrian alliance, there can be none about this hearty appreciation of the glorious alliance now so thoroughly cemented "between England and fair France." "What ties," asks the Emperor, "can be more binding than the names of the victories belonging to the two armies, and recalling a glory in common—when the same uneasiness and the same hope agitate the two countries, and when the same intentions animate the two Governments upon every point of the globe? Thus the alliance with England is not the effect of a fleeting interest, or a policy of circumstances; it is the union of two powerful nations, associated together to obtain the triumph of a cause in which, for more than a century, were involved their greatness, the interests of civilisation, and, at the same time, the liberty of Europe." The Czar, who counted so confidently upon the traditional enmity between the two Powers, will see how baseless were his calculations, and how absurd his hopes (if he have any), when he reads these words.

The diplomatists are very busy, as their manner is, in the dark. Conferences "of a positive character," (whatever that may be) are said to have been held at Vienna, whereat M. Gortschakoff and Prince Armin were present. Prussia has sent over an envoy in the person of M. Von Usedom; but the object of his mission has not yet leaked out. The Times eagerly suspects that the object of the gentleman's visit is merely to deliver an autograph letter to the Queen, and to keep his eyes open, with a view of ascertaining which way the wind blows. It is impossible to hear of these secret conferences and back-stairs missions without great suspicion.

Sir Charles Napier is once more in England; and although the nation has not received him with enthusiastic public demonstration, he has been the honoured guest of the Queen, at Windsor. This may be fairly construed into a confession that the Court, at least, is satisfied with his conduct in the Baltic. By a curious coincidence, Sir James Graham was a fellow guest with Sir Charles at the table of royalty. Let us hope that the two convives reflected humbly upon the last dinner-party they attended together; and that one of them, at least, was more moderate in the use of the decanter.

The Conservative party has had two triumphs this week—at Ayr and at Norwich. Sir James Fergusson was returned for the former, against Mr. Oswald, Liberal, by a majority of 129; and Sir S. Bignold carried the latter by a majority of 270. Sir James Fergusson is now serving with his regiment, the Guards, in the Crimea. The seat for Sunderland has been vacated by the appointment of Mr. Digby Seymour to the Recordership of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, and it is reported that Sir Charles Napier is in the field. If, however, it was true that Government could not permit him to stand for Marylebone, this must be a false report.

The commercial world has been scandalised by the discovery of enormous frauds, perpetrated in the dark recesses of the London Dock Company. Hogsheads of sour wine, worth five shillings a piece, have, by some unexplained chemistry, become converted into first-rate wine, worth £38 and upwards. The coopers employed in the vaults are suspected of connivance with the purchasers of rubbish at the rummage sales. It appears that it has hitherto been the practice to stow the sour wine in the same vaults as the sound liquor; and the machinery of the fraud has been plausibly explained in a circular issued by Messrs. Ridley & Co.

The East vault occupies an area of about 1½ acres, containing 21,000 pipes, chiefly port; and it is a proverbial complaint that a greater loss is shown on regauge, when wines are delivered thence, than from any other; and whilst the company knows this to be a stubborn fact, it is surprising that more watchfulness has not been observed over the coopers. Suppose that some evil-disposed person wanted to fill 50 pipes from merchants' property; the stock of 21,000, on an average, need only be pilaged to the extent of about a quart each. Again: suppose, what is more likely in the frauds alluded to, that four gallons are taken from each pipe of fresh-house wine, and four gallons of the vatted rubbish substituted, a less quantity need only be pilandered. Some such plan may be easily accomplished in so large an area. After business hours (four o'clock), when the dingy oil lamps are extinguished, some one or more being, by design, locked in the demon-like regions in the dead of night, with the assistance of lucifers, they might light up for phylloxera, and with an abundance of rickling utensils at hand (which are professionally under charge of the foreman cooper), a very large amount of depredations might be carried on."

The company is said to be making the most strenuous efforts to discover the perpetrators of the fraud; private bonders are endeavouring to extract from the discovery some advantages to themselves.

The case of Hope v. Aguado, has excited the most intense curiosity amongst the frequenters of the Law Courts; but the facts have been known at the tea tables these months past. Although the case is not finished—for which reason, we defer our report—it is easy to see that the defence is to rest upon the assumption that the familiarities referred to were ordinary incidents in French etiquette. Whether this be successful or the reverse, let the moral of the case be, that rich Englishmen had better seek wives in their own country, than go abroad for the luxury.

SPORT AND SPORTSMEN.

"Pray, what is a gentleman without his recreations?"

WINTER, stern Winter, has at length set in; and, although the lovers of the trigger must, for a time, cease to roam in pursuit of hares and partridges, the season has arrived when they can enjoy some very pretty shooting—or, as we once heard Mr. Osbaldeston say, some "clean shooting at snipes." There are, however, but few counties in England where good snipe-shooting can be had, owing to the extent of drainage which has been carried on of late years. It was no uncommon occurrence, some ten years ago, to slip on our jack-boots, fill our shot-ponch with No. 9, and sally out in the fens of Lincolnshire or Cambridgeshire for a couple of hours, and bag from four to six brace of full-grown birds. We should have much difficulty in doing the like now; for, instead of low marshy ground, may be seen good arable land, producing the very best the earth can yield; we should now have to walk miles over the same ground before flushing a solitary snipe. Many a time—to our disgrace be it said—have we feigned illness, in order to shirk our school duties, to wander forth, frequenting the margins of rivulets, swamps, and sodden meadows, in search of the charmed bird. With what joy and emotion did we hear his "chick-chick," as he darted from the weeds beneath our feet. There was more pleasure in killing one of these birds, in good style, than in killing a dozen hares. The snipe, it is pretty generally known, is a bird of migratory habits, and very seldom breeds in this country. It moves about continually, from place to place, and on being disturbed, but rarely visits the same piece of ground more than two or three times. The jack-snipe, however, when once it takes up its quarters in this country, will not change its locality, although harassed by the sportsman; as proof of this assertion we knew a miller, in Kent, who resolved to kill a jack, which might be seen every afternoon, about three o'clock, near his mill-pond; not being a good shot he had to pay frequent visits to his little solitary friend, but eventually he succeeded in bagging his troublesome prize, not, however, before he had fired about sixty charges at it. This species is the smallest of the genus, being about half the size of the common snipe. It sits very close, and will almost allow the gunner to tread upon it before taking wing. Its weight scarcely ever exceeds two ounces and a quarter. We found the best plan to secure a good bag of snipes was to walk quietly with the wind, as they generally, on rising, turn and fly against the wind. Were they are but thinly scattered, the better way is to take with you a small spaniel, who will not work more than fifteen or twenty yards from you. If they are tolerably plentiful, we would recommend our brother sportsmen not to take a dog of any description, for the noise they make on rising is quite sufficient to rivet attention. They breed in the Orkneys, and the late Sir H. Davy remarks: "I found each nest contained two young birds, sometimes three, and the parents seemed exceedingly attached to their offspring." The snipe has been known to breed in Scotland, the New Forest, Cambridgeshire, and in Wales and Ireland. They make their nests of dry grass or herbage rarely put together, near water, swampy spots, or on marshy hills. The eggs are comparatively large, of a greenish white, and spotted at the larger end with different tints of brown. Their food consists of worms, insects, &c., to obtain which they thrust their bill in the mud. About the beginning of April they call to their mates, uttering a kissing or clicking note, accompanied at intervals by a humming noise. It often soars an immense height, and its notes may frequently be heard when the bird is out of sight. These flights are continued generally towards evening, during the time the female is engaged in incubation. Some good snipe-shooting may be found in Ireland, and in the north of Scotland, more especially in Caithness.

It is no difficult matter for a good shot to kill twenty brace a day in some parts of the north of Scotland. The great or solitary snipe, is a rare visitor to our shores. It may be found in Norway, Germany, and Sweden. Unlike the common snipe, it flies heavily and steadily, and often becomes so fat in the autumn that it has some difficulty in getting away at its ordinary speed. They are mostly found singly, but seldom in pairs; and their house or breeding-place is in Sweden and Norway. Mr. Griell says: "In the great or solitary snipe the tail is composed of sixteen feathers; middle of the first quill whitish; top of the head black, divided by a band of yellowish white; upper parts variegated with black and bright rusty, the latter colours being disposed longitudinally; under parts whitish rusty; abdomen and sides striped with black bands; bill inclining to reddish, brown at the point; feet greenish ash; length twelve inches. Females larger than the males. Weight from seven to nine ounces." About the beginning of November our homebirds are joined by accessions from the northern part of Europe. Good shooting can be secured in Brittany, where drainage has not driven them from their customary retreats, as in England. In frosty weather the sportsman will find them by the side of rills, or under hedges, where springs of water may be found. No. 9 shot is the best size. If they are flushed close at hand, the better plan is to refrain from firing until they have made their first dart or spring; but if they rise some forty yards, and when the wind is not favourable for the sportsman, they ought to be taken as soon as possible—shooting well before and over the bird.

In another part of THE FIELD will be found an account of the artificial propagation of salmon on the Tay, from which it will be observed that the method does not retard the growth of the young fish, as is evident from the fact that the parr now in the river are not larger than those in the pond. This, it will be remembered, was one of the many ridiculous objections raised against the experiments by writers in a contemporary. THE FIELD, it will be remembered, nearly stood alone in advocating the adoption of artificial breeding as one of the best means of re-stocking our barren rivers, and of bringing this "monarch of the finny tribe" within the reach of the poorer classes of the community. The report of the Tay proceedings states, "Most of the fish have been taken on one ford, at the junction of the Almonil with the Tay, and this was the place that furnished the aya last season; and it is a fact that on this ford the same fish have seldom been taken a second time (the fish which are taken are marked), proving that more than one pair of fish spawn on the identical spot." It is clear from this statement that the preceding beds must be disturbed, and the spawn devoured by the trout. The report adds, "We saw this day, brought in by one of the fishermen, a river-trout of about a pound weight, which was caught in the net along with the spawning fish, and which was gorged to the month, and when cut up upwards of two hundred newly-shed salmon ova were taken out of him." This is not the first instance we know of trout feeding on the ova. We remember a curious fact which occurred last year on the spawning-beds at Outerland. In taking up the spawning-salmon were likewise caught a large quantity of trout, and in every instance but one they contained salmon ova, on which they were preying. From the gullet of one large trout six hundred were by pressure ejected, and retained, with a farther quantity from other trout, and deposited all in boxes isolated from the others, a considerable portion of which came to life, and are with the other fry in the ponds at Outerland, where thousands of young salmon may be seen. This experiment again shows that the year of their deposit as ova is not that of their migration to the ocean; until that period, it is of great importance to retain the young fry in these ponds, where they are protected from their natural enemies. Hereafter they must necessarily be left to protect themselves; and, of course, are more capable of doing so. Up to that time, they should be occasionally fed with suitable food, and all the fish should be of similar age—the large fish proving very injurious to the smaller and weaker ones. Our expectations as to the result of these wonderful experiments were, from the first, sanguine. They have, however, been fully, if not more than, realised; and the question of breed artificially is now finally settled. We have generally admitted such communications as were sufficiently well written into our columns, from various authorities, on the salmon; and, at the same time, have observed, with feelings of contempt, the ungentlemanly attacks in a contemporary which were heaped upon nearly every promoter of the scheme some twelve months ago. As these ungenerous attacks did not appear in THE FIELD, we will give an extract verbatim et literaliter, as a sample of the elegant epistles in question:—

"In my humble judgment, we are just on the eve of a stupendous imposture; and it is because I feel this keenly, and because I know from experience that when a plausible illusion once takes possession of any considerable number of men, it becomes a disease, and runs like small-pox, from fever to eruption, from eruption to scab, and from scab to permanent disfigurement and deformity, that I now throw myself with all my might into this question, determined, if possible, to moderate the symptoms if I cannot cure the disorder."

Our readers will scarcely imagine that the above vulgar strictures were applied to some of our best-informed naturalists of the present day, when they first proposed the adoption of artificial breeding. After carefully reviewing and anticipating the then contemplated results, this "authority" concludes by saying that the artificial breeder will be a salmon poacher! and not a salmon preserver!! Time alone ought to convince these would-be authorities on the salmon that they know about as much of the real habits of this fish as amounts to something less than the value of a pin's point.

It would seem from the South Eastern Gazette that one of the worst enemies the farmer can possibly have is the wood-pigeon. One of these birds, it appears, was shot last week in Clowes's Wood, near Canterbury, and on being examined its crop was found to contain 937 grains of wheat, besides ninety-four tares. The grain thus discovered has been sown distinctly from other crops, in order to ascertain the quantity of corn capable of being produced from the grain found in a single wood-pigeon. We will, if possible, give our readers the result next year. At this season our woods swarm with these destructive birds. They will devour all kinds of grain, peas, herrings, and the green leaves of the turnip; and being remarkably strong and thickly feathered, they require to be struck very hard to kill them. The best plan to shoot any number of wood-pigeons is to build a narrow wooden house, about thirty yards within the edge of the wood; cover it over carefully with thorns, bushes, &c., and wait silently until they settle on the trees within gun shot. By this means from one to a dozen may be secured at one shot. We need scarcely add that they make a very good dish. No. 7 shot is the best size to load with.

A correspondence has recently appeared in the Times, showing the advantages of our army in the East using the Minié rifle in preference to the old musket, and vice versa.

The gentlemen who have argued in favour of old "brown Bess" we should imagine have never levelled the rifle and felled a deer at five, six, and seven hundred yards, as we have done, or they would not have committed themselves by asserting that the soldier's musket can do as much execution as the rifle. How many times, we ask, would the best shot in England, or in any other country, have to fire at a buck with "brown Bess," at a distance even of 300 yards, before killing, or even touching him? The rifle is a most deadly weapon at eight and nine hundred yards, whereas the ball of a musket is uncertain in its flight at even two hundred and fifty yards. It is impossible for a smooth bore barrel to carry with certainty a quarter of the distance as will a rifled barrel. Our only surprise is that the Times should have occupied its space by showing forth facts which every one accustomed to fire-arms has known since the time he first handled the fowling-piece.

It may be interesting to some of our readers to know that it is now illegal to use dogs for the purpose of drawing trucks, barrows, &c.; the Act of Parliament prohibiting this cruel and dangerous work is the 17th and 18th Vict. c. 60, and came into operation last Monday.

RACING.

DATES OF RACES.

FEBRUARY.—Nottingham	20	Nottingham	19
Liverpool Spring	28	Goodwood	31
MARCH.—Doncaster	6	AUGUST.—Brighton	8
Salsbury	8	Brighton Club	10
Warwick Spring	20	Wolverhampton	13
APRIL.—Newmarket Craven	9	Reading	14
York Spring	17	Lewes	23
Malton	19	York	23
Newmarket First Spring	21	Egham	24
MAY.—Chester Spring	8	1 Doyly	24
Newmarket Second Spring	10	SEPTEMBER.—Warwick	4
Shrewsbury	10	Doncaster	11
Bath	15	Bedford	18
Epsom	22	Lichester	19
Manchester	28	Newmarket First October	25
JUNE.—Ascot	5	Northallerton	27
Hampton	13	OCTOBER.—Chester	2
Ilbury	20	Wrexham	4
Stokebridge	21	Newmarket Second October	8
Winchester	22	Warwick Autumn	16
Newcastle	26	Richmond	17
JULY.—Newmarket	3	Newmarket Houghton	22
Worcester	3	Worcester	30
Lancaster	5	NOVEMBER.—Epsom	1
Liverpool	11	Liverpool	6
Stamford	17	Shrewsbury	13

RACING AND RACERS.

The past week has been almost a blank [one in the sporting world. Shooting taking precedence of hunting and racing, we have little to report in the shape of Turf matter. Next week, however, when the entries for the Great Spring Handicaps will have been made—and when we shall be enabled to discover the opinions of the trainers, both in the north and south, of their two-year-olds, by the way they engage them—we may be enabled to give some useful information as to their present fancies.

Tattersall's, on Monday, was, of course, a blank day; and on Thursday the reporter has strained to give an importance to the names which in reality they do not deserve. Why De Clare should have been backed so lately for upwards of a thousand pounds, we are at a loss to imagine, as it is utterly impossible that anything more could be known about him than what was witnessed at Doncaster by all the world. By some it is said that the investments were made by parties "speculating for the fall" of Greclus, whilst others urge that his public performances are of a character to make him a better favourite than Greclus Esquiers. As far as our opinion goes, we are free to confess that we should give the preference, both in judgment and information to the layers over the backers of De Clare, inasmuch as they have invariably stood against Scott's horses when they have won, and supported them when they have been beaten. And we may instance this argument very strongly by the case of West Australian last year, for the St. Leger. About the merits of Greclus a considerable division of opinion exists, not only among the noblemen and gentlemen of the stable, but also among the public at large. Some maintain him to be a great horse, and others avow him to be a rank impostor. At the present time we imagine there is no necessity to declare under which standard we will range ourselves—whether we vote for Mr. Bowes or Lord Derby. Both parties, we are satisfied, have good horses; and although the favourite has not been out yet, still we are certain that before Bonnie Morn ran at Ascot, he beat him three-quarters of a mile so cleverly, that it was considered a stone could hardly have brought them together. Under these circumstances, if fit and well at the post on the Derby Day, that man would be a bold one who would stand against him an unreasonable sum, merely from prejudice. Dick Hatterick is backed again, more, we believe, from the letters of the army of touts at Middleham, than from any other cause. Perhaps, also, the prevalent idea that he may be brought out for the Two Thousand may have something to do with the movement; and as Lord Eglintoun is a bold sportsman, and always likes to know the worst at once, and being cognisant of the money the British public have piled on his naz, it strikes us as being very probable that on the great Spring Day of Newmarket we shall see his old pilot, Charles Marlow, in his tartan jacket, emerging from the saddling-stables, and resolved to do or die in the Two Thousand field for the Lord of the Tonnery's colours. Unfortunately for Lord Eglintoun, at the present moment his stable has no schoolmaster sufficiently good to tell his trainer the truth relative to this colt; whereas formerly, so strong were his team, with Van Tromp, Elthron, and The Flying Dutchman, that a mistake with a young one was rarely, if ever, made. Polydore is sustained in the market, but does not appear to improve his position; nor will, we conceive, be likely to see a shorter price at present, his owner's commission having been executed; and until his real stable is known, the public will not touch. At Newmarket, last week, we gleaned good accounts of Paros, who was reported to have cleaned out Pugnator and all the Duke's lot. As yet, he is dark; but, at the same time, we must admit him to be a good-looking, short-legged horse.

His Spring engagements, which are numerous, and for which he is sure to appear, will be the best guide for our readers. Generally speaking, the Duke of Bedford's horses are only formidable over the short courses of Newmarket; very few of them being able to stay a distance of ground—although, in a stranger's hands, ride Weather-gage and Mr. Parr, the most opposite qualities have been discovered. The Isley Downs, which, from the number of first-class horses now trained upon them, are likely, ere long, to become as famous in racing stories as Langton Wold is in the north, are, we hear, alive with horses; and the bulletins from the large stables of Stevens, War-riner, Mat Dawson, and Joe Dawson are, we learn, most satisfactory to the backers of their Derby horses, Rifleman, Flatterer, and Frederick. The latter, from his good looks, his fashionable blood, his fine racing-like action, we look upon as the most dangerous outsider in the race; and should he prove the best of Stevens' lot in the Spring, his two-year-olds having run repeatedly with the best of their class, those who have now backed him will find that their investments have yielded a Californian profit.

For the next fortnight we shall have but a lightly-filled budget for our readers' entertainment and information; but upon the re-assembling of the Members of the Legislature, and the appearance of the Acceptances for the Spring Handicaps, affairs will assume a different complexion—business will become livelier. As the favourites are watched in their morning gallops, and from the sources of knowledge that are placed at our command, the Fields will find themselves as au courant to the pencillings of the turfites, as to the doings of the high-mettled racers.

John Scott's subscription to the Patriotic Fund, to which we before alluded, has, as we anticipated, proved worthy of the high character of the Whitewall establishment, the contribution being twenty-five pounds two shillings. We need not add our advice to others of his brethren, to "go and do likewise."

TATTERSALL'S.—THURSDAY.

50 to 1 offered on the Field	1000 to 15 agst Llanforda (t)
1000 to 20 agst Arthur Wellesley (t)	1000 to 15 — Monie Moses (t)
Two Thousand Guineas Stakes.
50 to 1 agst St. Hubert (t)	1000 to 15 — Cruiser (t to £60)
11 to 1 agst Graculus Esuriens	25 to 1 — Polydore (t six times)
12 to 1 — De Chere (t)	1000 to 35 — Rauchling Katie (t four times)
15 to 1 — Rifleman (t to £75)
20 to 1 — Wild Dayrell (t to £125)
20 to 1 — Dirk Hatterick (t to £30)

MANCHESTER.—TUESDAY.

The muster at the rooms to-day was chiefly confined to book-makers, and only a few investors were made. St. Hubert was backed at 4 to 1 for the Two Thousand Guineas Stakes, and at 11 to 1 for the Derby, for which event 10 to 1 was offered in London against either Graculus Esuriens or De Chere, and at the close 100 to 1 was offered against the latter. An ardent supporter of Bonnie More asked, by way of a feeler, for 1,000 to 20 against him, but met with no response; 40 to 1, however, had no takers. 12 to 1 would have been taken about Lord of the Isles; and Oulton, who has been on the decline of late, would have received support at 20 to 1. We understand that 400 to 10 was taken, on the quiet, about the Reiver, for the Chester Cup, but his name did not transpire in our hearing; a great number of horses continue to be backed at 100 to 1, but no sum of money has yet been invested upon anything calculated to create a sensation, such as has been the case in previous years. The following are the latest quotations:—

Two Thousand Guineas Stakes.

4 to 1 agst St. Hubert (t)	20 to 1 agst Cruiser (off)
Derby.
10 to 1 agst Graculus Esuriens (t 11 to 1)	20 to 1 — Dirk Hatterick (t 25 to 1)
11 to 1 — St. Hubert (t)	40 to 1 — Bonnie More (t 50 to 1)
100 to 9 — De Chere (t 12 to 1)	1000 to 10 — Bison (wanted)
12 to 1 — Lord of the Isles (wanted)	1000 to 10 — Elvaston (wanted)
15 to 1 — Rifleman (off)
100 to 6 — Oulton (t 20 to 1)
Oaks.
100 to 20 on the Field (off)

FALLS (COUNTY ANTRIM) STEEPLE-CHASES.—

MONDAY, Dec. 25.

On Christmas-day the inhabitants of Belfast, Falls, &c., got up (or attempted to get up) a steeple-chase, which turned out a complete failure, only three horses having entered for the handicap, which, if we except a race for hawks, was the only event decided. There was a very large attendance, composed principally of the lower orders. Shortly before two o'clock, the start took place for a Handicap Steeple-chase of 1 sov. each, with 10 added. Two ailes.

Mr. Saunders's Charley Magee, 10st 7lb M'Clory 1

Mr. Scott's Kate, 11st 7lb, Maceo

Mr. Johnston's Mr. Cool (late St. Alban's), 10st, J. O'Neill

Betting—2 to 1 on Kate. All crossed the first leap together; but Mr. Cool having stopped short in the second field, the race was at once reduced to a match between Charley Magee and Kate, the former winning by a distance, owing to Kate having fallen at the last fence, whereby she dislocated her near fore leg.

A second race was announced, but there having been no entries for it, the day's sports concluded with a scurry for hawks, which was won by Mr. Soaveville's Chance (Malay) beating Mr. Poulton's Old Fox and Mr. Ireland's Prince Albert.

MATCH AT TEMPLEMORE.

On Wednesday week the following match was run off on the lawn of Eastwood, the residence of Major Mearns, situated within one mile of Templemore. A large number of fashionable were present, amongst whom we noticed—Sir John C. Carden, Bart.; Captain Butler, J.P.; Chas. D. H. Webb, Esq.; John Langan, Esq., J.P.; Jas. Mason, Esq., J.P.; George Lloyd, Esq.; Richard Camble, Esq.; John Kennedy, Esq.; Capt. White; Capt. Arnold, 47th Regiment, and officers of the garrison, &c. Subjected is a return:—

Match 20 sovs a-side. Two miles. Flat course.

Mr. Valentine O'Mara's Lady Anne 1. Ident. Wellington 1

Mr. Theophilus Bennett's b n Pop-goes-the-Weasel 2. Owner 2

Pop-goes-the-Weasel led for the first mile, when she was collared by Lady Anne, and both kept together to the last turn; after rounding which the latter got slightly in front, and won a slashing race by barely a neck. A good deal of money changed hands on the event.

The DERBY SPRING MEETING is appointed for the 14th of February next. Mr. Denham, the much respected clerk of the course of this meeting for many years past, has resigned the office, and Mr. T. Marshall, jun., of Northampton, has been appointed in his place. Mr. Denham carries with him the best wishes of his sporting friends and neighbours, with whom he has so long been associated.

DOWN ROYAL CORPORATION SUMMER MEETING, 1855.—There are fifteen entries for the Downshire Stakes of 15 sovs. each, 10 ft, 50 sovs. added, and twenty-two for the North of Ireland Produce Stakes of 10 sovs. each, p.p., 100 sovs. added.

both for two-year-olds. For the latter stake, 1857, thirty-six mares have been named.

BELLEVUE STAKES, 1855.—The two-year-old stake at this meeting, which is fixed for the 4th and 5th of July, has closed with the following entries:—Lord Waterford's b f by Seahorse out of Pusa; Lord Waterford's b f by Freney out of Sharyogone's dam; Mr. Langan's ch f The Princess; Mr. Oskorne's ch e Heber; Mr. Irwin's h c Uncle Tom; Mr. A. McDonogh's b f Irene; and Mr. E. W. Nunn's ch c Good Friday.

An attempt to get up a steeple-chase at Tullagh on St. Stephen's-day, proved a failure in toto. There was little or no money collected, but even if there was enough, we question if there would have been any entries, so completely has this once favourite place of sport lost itself in the eyes of the racing public, from the manner in which its affairs are generally managed.

Master Tom won more races in Ireland this year than any other horse. He started eleven times, and was beaten but twice. Master Tom, who is by Bushful, was bred by Richard S. Hawkesworth, Esq., of Forest, Queen's County, but is now the property of George Bryan, Esq., of Jeukinstown, Kilkenny County, who, it is said, has him in training for steeple-chasing, and that he will be a dangerous horse for the Liverpool Grand National.

On the 1st of January, forfeits are to be declared for the second class of the Madrid Stakes and Kildare Handicap, at the Carragh April Meeting. The Post Waterford Stakes of 50 sovs. each, h ft., to be run for in September, 1856, close the same day, with J. R. Hunter, Esq., 5, Haddington-terrace, Kingstown. Mares are to be named at the same time and place, for the third class of the Post Waterford Stakes of 25 sovs. each, p.p., at the September Meeting, 1857.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF A HORSE.

CHAP. IV.

After the ladies had dismounted, we were led round to the stables, and found ourselves in stalls next to each other. We got into conversation, and the poor animal who had carried Miss Bessie told me the following story, which, for the benefit of my readers, I propose here to give to them precisely as told me.

Not many months ago, began my companion (though you may scarce credit me), I was as beautiful a horse as was ever seen. At that time I was the property of a Miss Clara Duncan, a first-rate horsewoman, and as kind a mistress as ever horse had. She used to ride me almost every day in company with her sister and her father, an old man, who could not hear any motion quicker than a gentle canter, so that my work was never severe. One day Miss Clara was accompanied in her ride by her father and by a young man; her sister was not with her that day. At the beginning of this ride I could not conceive what had come over my rider.

Every now and then, when I knew I had done nothing to deserve it, she gave me several smart touches with her whip, at the same time holding the bridle so tight as to hurt me not a little. This went on till I could stand it no longer. I kicked out violently, and became very restive. Mr. Duncan seemed much frightened, but my mistress gave me two or three cuts behind with all her might, at the same time slackening the bridle. I at once darted off at full gallop. At first my rider did not restrain me, but kept urging me on, till after about five minutes' hard gallop she pulled me in. Mr. Harcourt, the young man who was riding with her, was by her side; and I heard him say, "This is all right; we are safe for a few minutes. Thanks to your boldness in forcing your horse to run away." "I was so afraid Prince would not become restive, and it seemed so cruel whipping him for nothing; but now all is well." "Yes, Clara dearest, is your mind still the same?" "Yes." "Then let us meet to-night at eight o'clock at the back gate. I will see that the horses are there, and we will ride as for our lives. If possible, provide yourself with a spur, as we must ride far and fast, and must not spare ourselves." "I will get Louisa's spur; she always rides with one; and will you see that Prince gets well cared for in the interval?" "Certainly, for our sakes as well as his, he must be in good condition; but don't you think you had better ride your sister's horse. It has had no work to-day, and will, of course, be fresher and more up to the work." "Oh, no; if there is any fear of spoiling the horse, I should much rather take mine. Louisa is so fond of hers, I should be very sorry to do it any harm. Besides," she added, patting me, "I think good old Prince will carry me far better, even though he is not quite so fresh as Louisa's mare." "Very well, then, these two horses shall be there at eight o'clock. May they have good speed!" There was a little more affectionate talk about present risks and future happiness, and then we went back slowly to meet Mr. Duncan.

The lovers talked throughout the rest of the ride about my running away, and allowed Mr. Duncan to lay all the blame upon me. My mistress gave me several kind pats, and rode on as pleasantly as she always did; but my thoughts ran wholly upon the hard work which was before me. The ride was not a very long one, and when I got in there was about four hours' rest before me. At the appointed time I was saddled, and led out to the place of meeting. Miss Duncan quickly appeared, and, as she mounted me, she whispered to Mr. Harcourt—"We are suspected; we must ride hard." We started at a quick gallop. Miss Duncan was evidently much excited, and even at the beginning of that long and painful ride she used her spur violently, though certainly it was not then needful. Mr. H. advised her to spare me as much as possible at first, as there might be heavy work to come; but the advice was unheard, or unheeded.

After the first half-hour, when I was dreadfully exhausted both with pace and fatigue, my pace was slackened slightly, and my mistress seemed to be getting more composed. The lovers began to converse, and Mr. H. asked my rider how she had got off. She said: "Very well, till just as I was coming down stairs to start, I met one of the kitchen-maids. She stared at me having my riding habit on, but curtsied and passed on. She is herself too stupid to suspect anything, but I fear she will certainly repeat her wonder to some wiser person than herself, by whom we may be suspected. I am certain they will pursue if they have any suspicion. Don't you think we ought to ride faster?" "No, dearest; I almost think we should lose time by taking too much out of our horses yet; they have an immense deal before them, and it is such a still night, I think we should hear our pursuers a long way off, when, of course, we must put on speed, and if Prince and Hero can't beat any two horses in your father's stable, I am surprised." "How far along this road must we go?" "I am afraid nearly twenty miles more, when we can turn down by that small village—Elphington (or some such name), and, I hope and trust, give them all the slip. Till then these horses must carry us, and that will be no less than thirty miles altogether." "Poor things; for their sakes as well as for our own, I trust we shall not be pursued." "But if we are, we must not spare them."

For the next five miles almost we cantered quickly along; and during that time my rider, having got over her first nervousness, gave me rest from the spur, and often patted me kindly. While, however, there was a pause in the conversation of the lovers, my ear heard a tramp a long way off, and I involuntarily quickened. A few seconds afterwards Mr. Harcourt exclaimed: "I hear them; now, Clara, for a gallop for our lives!" Almost before I felt the whip and spur, which my rider used at the same moment violently, I started off at full gallop. The conversation ceased—only every now and then Mr. H. entreated Miss Duncan to hasten me a little, each of which entreaties procured for me a fresh infliction of the whip and spur. "We have ten more miles to go, Clara, before we reach the town," after some minutes exclaimed Mr. H., "can the horses do it?" "Mine is awfully tired, I am sure; but they must go on till they fall." What a prospect this was before me. I felt as if I should fall soon; but how I wished my rider would let me go on without the almost ceaseless punishment she was inflicting on me. Such agony as I endured that night I never could have conceived before; I hardly dare to think of it now. My wind utterly failed me—my legs felt as if they could go no further and at last I stopped. I trembled in every limb, the blood came streaming down my spur-galled side, and I felt as if I must die immediately. "Clara, we have only about three miles more; your horse must come on; directly we have taken the turn we shall change." I just heard my mistress say: "Oh, my poor Prince!" and such tortures from whip and spur as I had never conceived possible compelled me once more to gallop.

I cannot remember very distinctly anything that followed this. I know that I suffered greater agonies than I can describe, and I just remember my mistress dismounting at a little roadside inn. I heard her exclamation of sorrow and surprise at my bleeding side, testifying to the good use she had made of her spur, and then I fell down thoroughly exhausted from pain and from fatigue.

I never saw Miss Clara Duncan again—neither do I know whether she succeeded in her plans; for a fortnight or three weeks I was utterly unfit for anything, and was tended carefully in the stables of a large horse-dealer. I do not know whether kind treatment could ultimately have restored me to anything like my former condition—at any rate, my case now is hopeless. Broken-winded, and still suffering from that cruel ride, I was sold to my present mistress, from whom, as you may gather from what passed to-day, I do not meet with much kindness. Probably my time will soon come to be sold to be a cab-horse, as her last horse was; till then I have no help but to endure the daily suffering she inflicts upon me. Such was the story.

(To be continued.)

HUNTING.

* * * Masters of Hounds and Huntsmen will oblige by sending their names and addresses in full, in order that their papers may be forwarded direct, commencing with the new year.

APPOINTMENTS FOR THE WEEK.

THE QUEEN'S HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Belford Tollgate; Friday, Slough, at eleven.

THE CHELTENHAM SUBSCRIPTION STAG-HOUNDS (CAPTAIN WEST).—Friday, Teddington Cross-roads, at half-past eleven.

THE PECKERIDGE HOUNDS.—Monday, Hare-street; Wednesday, Woodside Green; Saturday, Watton, at half-past ten.

THE CRESLIEVE HOUNDS.—Monday, Norley Hall; Tuesday, Appleton; Thursday, Turin; Friday, Beeston Castle, at half-past ten.

THE HETHROP HOUNDS.—Monday, Boulter Barn; Wednesday, Fox Northerton; Friday, Bourton Bridge; Saturday, Ditchley, at half-past ten.

THE DEWLAND HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Jordanstone Raith; Friday, Mathry Cross-roads, at ten.

CAPTAIN HAMPTON LEWIS'S HOUNDS.—Wednesday, Storehouse Wen; Saturday, Llandudyan Low-gate, at eleven.

MR. GARTH'S HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Brick Bridge; Wednesday, Branshill Park; Friday, Greywell Hill, at half-past ten.

MR. WHEBLE'S HOUNDS.—Monday, Hardwick House; Tuesday, Burnt Hill; Thursday, Strathfieldsaye; Friday, Thatcham Gate.

MR. DEACON'S HOUNDS.—Monday, Viverton, at half-past ten.

MR. TRELAWNEY'S HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Carow Arms; Saturday, Plym Bridge, at half-past ten.

THE H. H.—Monday, Prestock Oak Hills; Tuesday, Bramdean Common; Thursday, Harroworth; Saturday, Hoddington House, at a quarter to eleven.

THE NORTH WAIKESHIRE HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Tile Hill; Thursday, Stoneleigh Abbey; Saturday, Rytton-on-Dunsmore, at eleven.

THE ATHERSTONE HOUNDS.—Monday, Barton-in-the-Beans; Wednesday, Meriden Sluffs; Friday, Gill's Corner; Saturday, Harris Bridge, at eleven.

THE NORTH STAFFORDSHIRE HOUNDS.—Monday, Woore; Wednesday, Stakeford Bridge; Friday, Adderley, at half-past ten.

THE WARWICKSHIRE HOUNDS.—Monday, Ufton Wood; Tuesday, Whitacre; Thursday, Lighthorne Village; Friday, Sun Rising, Edge Hill, at a quarter before eleven.

MR. DUKE'S HOUNDS.—Monday, Chilton Village; Tuesday, Weston-on-the-Green; Thursday, Ham Green; Saturday, Lower Beddington, at a quarter before eleven.

THE COTTESMORE HOUNDS.—Monday, Cottesworth; Tuesday, Seaton Windmill; Thursday, Horn Mills; Saturday, Little Dalby, at eleven.

MR. ASSHETON SMITH'S HOUNDS.—Monday, Longstock Down; Tuesday, Marningham; Wednesday, Farembur; Thursday, Penton; Friday, Southgrove; Saturday, Tythersley, at eleven.

EARL FITZWILLIAM'S HOUNDS.—Monday, Custer Hanglands; Wednesday, Old Weston Windmill; Friday, Farming Woods, at ten o'clock.

THE WORCESTERSHIRE HOUNDS.—Monday, Witley; Wednesday, Old Hills; Friday, Copent Elm, at half-past ten.

THE ESSEX (MR. HENLEY GRAVE'S) HOUNDS.—Monday, St. Leonard's; Wednesday, Forest Hall; Saturday, Takeley Gate, at eleven.

THE HEREFORDSHIRE (MR. HOLLIER'S).—Tuesday, Lugwardine Bridge; Thursday, Hampton Court; Friday, Harewood's End, at half-past ten.

H. C. MEYELL INGRAM'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Kettleston Inn; Thursday, Markeaton; Saturday, Aston.

THE LANARKSHIRE AND RENFREWSHIRE FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Ference Toll; Saturday, Broadfield House, at a quarter before eleven.

THE BRIMHAM MOOR FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Boot and Shoe Inn; Wednesday, High Rarrowgate; Friday, Wight's Park; Saturday, Bally Grange, at half-past ten.

THE PITCHFORD FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Brockhall; Tuesday, Rockingham; Wednesday, Crick; Friday, Naseby; Saturday, Bally Wood, at a quarter before eleven.

THE EARL OF YARMOUTH'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Pelham's Pillar; Wednesday, Lacey Cross-roads, at eleven; Friday, Greyhound Road, at half-past eleven.

YORK AND AINSLEY FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Cuckooanthorpe; Thursday, Providence; Saturday, Skelton, at half-past ten.

THE BARNWORTH FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Semilly Bar; Thursday, Wentbridge; Saturday, Aekworth Moor top, at half-past ten.

THE EAST ESSEX FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Stirmer Lion; Thursday, Messing Street; Saturday, Pinfild Green, at eleven.

THE F. B. FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Croft West; Tuesday, High Cross (Constantine); Friday, Kiggan, at half-past ten.

MR. COLYER'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Eynsford; Saturday, Stausted, at half-past ten.

THE DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Millinham; Tuesday, Headshaw; Thursday, Cessford; Saturday, Blainsie, at half-past ten.

THE OLD BUCKINGHAM FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Faringdon-road Station; Wednesday, Curbidge; Friday, Kingston's Inn, at half-past ten.

THE EARL OF PORTSMOUTH'S FOX-HOUNDS.—Monday, Archer Lodge; Tuesday, Wootton St. Lawrence; Wednesday, Smilford Priory; Friday, West Woodhay; Saturday, Uren Gate, at eleven.

THE EARL OF LONSDALE'S HARRIERS.—Friday, Marsh, at twelve.

THE CHAMBLE HARRIERS.—Monday, Dalston; Wednesday, White Quay; Friday, Halfway house, Dalston-road, at ten.

IRELAND.

THE KILKENNY FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Johnstown; Saturday, Ballykeef, at eleven.

THE TITMERRY FOX-HOUNDS.—Saturday (this day), Grove; Tuesday, Cahir; Saturday, Tullamaine Castle, at eleven.

THE CARLOW AND ISLAND FOX-HOUNDS.—Saturday (this day), Newtonbury, at eleven.

THE CLARE FOX-HOUNDS.—Saturday (this day), Morisk, at a quarter to eleven.

THE CORINTHIAN FOX-HOUNDS.—Saturday (this day), Vermon, at eleven.

THE GALWAY FOX-HOUNDS (the Blazers).—Saturday (this day), Ballinlerry, at eleven.

THE KILDARE FOX-HOUNDS.—Saturday (this day), Johnstown, at eleven.

MR. NAGHTEEN'S FOX-HOUNDS (the Koh-i-noors).—Saturday (this day), Mount Hassey, at eleven.

THE QUEEN'S COUNTY FOX-HOUNDS.—Saturday (this day), Knapton Wood, at eleven.

THE WESTMATH FOX-HOUNDS.—Saturday (this day), Castlepollard, at eleven.

THE WEXFORD FOX-HOUNDS.—Tuesday, Cross-roads of Wilkinstown; Friday, Castleboro', at eleven.

THE MEATH FOX-HOUNDS.—Saturday (this day), Kilmessan; Tuesday, Balrath; Thursday, Somerville; Friday, Lisnullen, at eleven.

THE ROCK (CASHIEL) HARRIERS.—Tuesday, Old Church; Friday, Grantstown Castle, no time stated.

THE WICKLOW HARRIERS.—Monday, Barndarrig Cross-roads, at eleven.

MR. BIDDULPH'S HARRIERS.—Saturday (this day), Pallas, at eleven.

THE 16TH LANCERS' (CAHIR) HARRIERS.—Saturday (this day), Ballylooly, at twelve.

THE 16TH LANCERS' (BALLINCOLLIE) HARRIERS.—Saturday (this day), Ballinora Chapel, at eleven.

THE LOUTH UNION HARRIERS.—Saturday (this day), Kilcort, at eleven.

MR. MANON'S HARRIERS (the Allies).—Every Monday, at the Pargo of Doon, no time stated.

THE PALMERSTOWN HARRIERS.—Saturday (this day), Moor of Meath, at twelve.

By the above it will be seen that in a very few instances have the January fixtures been issued; but this, we think, will scarcely interfere with the arrangements of our hunting friends in Ireland, where, we are informed, old Jack Frost has set in with unusual severity.

STAG HUNT.—A numerous field, headed by W. P. Honeywood, Esq., met at R. Sparrow's, Esq., Gosfield place, Hasted, on Thursday week, to hunt an outlying deer at Shardslow, near Gosfield. After a few minutes he broke cover in gallant style, with the hounds close to him; went direct to Hepworth Hall Bridge, across the country to Dyne's Hall, bore to the left towards Castle Heddingham, then turned to the right towards Goslingthorpe, passed the Belchamps, and, after a splendid run of ten miles, was taken at Birley Bridge. From the novelty of the scene, the excitement among the villagers was quite intense.

BOX WITH THE SINNINGTON HOUNDS.—The meet was, a few days ago, at the little village of Sinnington. The air was rather frosty, but the sun shone forth, determined to make it a scintillating morning. By half-past ten o'clock Parker and his darlings had arrived, and as usual seemed bent on mischief. The field was not so large as usual, but those present were of the right sort. The hounds were larked into the well-known Stabler Wood, and presently Ringwood's music told his companions in the chase that Mr. Sly was at home, which he left in gallant style for the earths in Sinnington Woods; from there to Appleton Common, with the merry pack close upon him; over the common, past Appleton, towards Lingmoor, and took a turn round by Hanley. At this point the chase had been so fast that but few were on good terms with the hounds. From Hanley Reynard made his way to Park Head, where he took shelter in a drain; but in a short time he was compelled to bolt, and, giving himself two or three good shakes, away he went, nothing daunted, past Askew to the Beck-house Plantation; then to the Black Park, over the River Seven, and on to Lasingham Moor, the hounds running him in view, and he was gallantly pulled down on the heath-clad hills near Rosedale, all well up to the finish. This was admitted to be the quickest run this year.

MR. ALBERTON SMITH'S HOUNDS.—On Wednesday last Mr. Ashton Smith met at Stowell Lodge, the residence of Col. Wroughton. The hounds proceeded to draw Wilcot Withy

Bed, which proved a blank. They then went on to Woodborough Spinney; in the second spinney a single hound spoke. He was cheered by the Squire, and in a minute a fine fox was viewed over the road; he put his head for Wilcot, but suddenly turning to the right, he went to Gibb's Plantation, and on to Shercock, then by Manningford, and forward over Manningford Down and straight on to Everley, where he saved his life, owing to a fresh fox jumping up.—RANGER.

MR. LINDLEY'S HOUNDS met on Tuesday at Fittingley Park, the residence of R. J. Bentley, Esq. The field was more than usually numerous, amounting, indeed, to full one hundred and fifty horsemen, many of them admirably mounted, and all animated with the high spirit which is one of the chief characteristics of fox-hunting. The doors of the hospitable mansion were thrown open, and its portals were graced by the presence of many strangers and visitors, particularly the ladies, whom the season had assembled together. Never was a more joyous instance of "taking the chill off" witnessed. With animated spirits, the hounds were thrown into the adjacent covers; and, among the crowd of horsemen, many an anxious eye was turned in the direction of Hurst Wood and the Hag Plantation. All listened with anxious attention; and at last a "note" from a well-known leading hound, immediately taken up by his fellows, announced that Reynard was at home; and soon the welcome sound smote the ear—"Broke cover—gone away!" All was animation, and few appeared to care for the disadvantages of a furious wind which, at intervals, blew "great guns," although it was afterwards found to be rather disadvantageous for the hounds in carrying the scent. The pack, however, was well laid on by the veteran Merry, and the whips were equally alert. Reynard shaped his course in the direction of Hayfields, leaving Brooks Wood and the Moor Flats on the left, and Insley Plantation and Twelve Month's Carr on the right. The little river Torne and the Mother Drain were crossed without difficulty, with Besocour Grange in front. A bend then took place, and the hounds, carrying the scent better than might have been expected, rushed through Hitchell Wood, and crossed the Doncaster and Bantay turnpike-road at the Keeper's Lodge, and rattled along right through the Old Warren Plantation. On reaching the lower side in the direction of the Mother Drain and Toad Holes, Reynard, by some mishap, appeared to be headed; for it was evidently his intention to reach the old Potteric, and, in that case, there would have been mark enough for the whole field—what with the railway, the wide drains, and rotten banks—with the prospect of a "dipper" and no mistake, whatever else might possibly have occurred. There was literally no "hark back," but something like a double. The horsemen galloped along the lane skirting the Old Warren, with Back Wood on the left, and so onwards to the turnpike-road already mentioned. In fact, the fox almost retraced his steps, and went again through Hitchell Wood, pointing homewards. Throughout the field was well up. The Torne was recrossed, and Hayfields repassed, in the direction of Hauging Carr. Some difficulties had to be encountered, and some queer fences to be cleared. The line next bent to Hurst House and the Hag Plantation, skirting the grounds of Fittingley Park, and so onwards into Pale Park. Hitherto some slight checks had occurred, and on reaching the spot just mentioned the hounds were at fault. The scent, in consequence of the high wind, which came in sudden gusts, would not lie so well as might have been desired. Every effort was made by Merry to recover it, but it was found to be impossible, and thus Reynard saved his life for another and probably a more tremendous burst. Piper Wood was afterwards drawn, and a fresh fox presently found, but as quickly again lost. At Swinnow Wood there was better success; but, after running a smart ring, Reynard got to ground.

A DAY WITH THE CARLOW AND ISLAND FOX-HOUNDS.—"Chaseaway," in the Leinster Express of last Saturday, gives the following sketch of a run with the above pack on the 20th inst.:—"The hounds met at Cooper Hill, and a large field was in attendance. I was pleased to observe the master in the best of health and spirits; his establishment turned out in first-rate condition. At twenty minutes past eleven o'clock the hounds were thrown into that beautiful covert of Sir Charles Coote's, called Maidenhead, but it was on this occasion drawn blank. Mr. Putland's plantation at Coonberg was the next drawn, and here a varmint fox was found, who, regardless of his pursuers, broke loudly against a southerly wind, taking his course through Kilmurise to Gale's Hill, closely followed by the valiant pack, and most of the field; here he verged through Knockforlagh to the Rushes School House; then turning through Aughaterry and Ballinskil, he made for the Ashfield plantations; but here he was, for most of the field unfortunately, headed, which put all lasting men and dodgers into an unhappy predicament; for their hopes of again getting in with him had vanished. Reynard, who was the prince of foxes, here struck boldly out through Woodlands and Upper Ballinacloy to Tolerton, when, being again headed, he went through Currighvagh to Mr. Cooper's plantation, near Cappalag; but scorning to enter the covert, he merely skirted it, and was heartily cheered by the foot-people on Cappalag-hill; he then went through Killishin, and crossed the turnpike-road, to the bog of Ardendale. At the summit of the hill, with the hounds, I observed the master, Messrs. Rochfort, O'Shea, Snijde, H. H. Cooper, Burton, Lecky, and Gale. Here there was a picturesque view; for this point commands the whole country below, and for miles were to be seen horses without riders, and some good men struggling in the distance; but having no fancy for the logs, Reynard, very much to our gratification, cantered down the hill, by Killishin-chapel; then taking across the bottoms, now verging to the side of Spring Hill, he passed through the copse at the back of Spring Hill House; then through General Thomas's Wood, at Rossmore, where we had a long check, which was now most agreeable to us and our jaded nags; he was again tallied on the mountains over Clogrenan Wood. The hounds having now got fresh on his drag, he went along the mountains at his best pace, skirting the bog and Bilbo Police Barrack; but finding his pursuers closing with him, he wheeled to the left, down the hill, by Ballynabramma Chapel, to the Millford plantation, which he passed through; and at Ravindon, in the County Carlow, the best dog-fox the Queen's County has produced for the last thirty years was now run into by this valiant pack, after a run of over twenty miles across one of the heaviest and stiffest countries in Ireland.

THE SUFFOLK FOX-HOUNDS.—The Suffolk fox-hounds met at Ashley a few days ago, when they proceeded to the Chevely park estate, first taking the Evelyn plantation, Moulton

Thrift, and then drew the extensive covers in the park, but Reynard was not at home. They then trotted off to the Green covers, and, after two or three ineffectual draws, returned unrepaid.

THE CHRISTMAS HUNT MEETING AT BRETBY PARK.—Mr. Meyuell Ingram's pack met on Thursday week, on which occasion there was a capital muster of red-coats; but the sport was indifferent, although there is no lack of foxes in the neighbourhood. Concerning the meet, a hunting farmer addresses the editor of the Derby Mercury:—"One of the finest sights, and certainly must have been gratifying to all there, was to see the amiable, kind, and noble young Lord Stanhope inviting all to go in and take refreshment; and they who go in must feel refreshed, for never was a more substantial repast put before sportsmen. I need not enumerate the good things, but cannot help speaking of the good old home-brewed ale you get there, one or two glasses of which sets one talking (not a little), and more particularly when we take a glass of shorts at finish. The doctors present, who seem to like the meet at Bretby, perhaps think there might perchance be an accident after the good fare before starting. I heard it stated that morning that the noble lord of Bretby had ordered to be slaughtered four good fat beasts, three of which were to be given away to the poor and workpeople on the estate; also a quantity of bread, and even money."

THE BROOK'S END HARRIERS.—The annual dinner of the members took place last week at the Elephant Hotel, on which occasion about twenty gentlemen sat down to a splendid repast, at which J. W. Price, Esq., officiated as chairman.

A FEW DAYS AGO, as the Carmarthenshire fox-hounds were crossing the railway at Banksfield, the train came up, and the engine killed one of the best hounds in the pack, cut off a portion of the tail of a second, and so much injured a third as to cause its death soon afterwards.

STRANGE CAPTURE OF A FOX.—Last week a shepherd, named Andrew Noble, whilst engaged gathering sheep on the hill of Coignafearn, was greatly surprised to find springing from amongst a lot of sheep a large-sized fox. Being a powerful lad, he pursued the fox, along with his dogs, and it turned to bay in the Findhorn; but poor Reynard was soon killed. When taken out of the river, it was found that the fox had not a single tooth in his head. We may add that no less than 124 foxes have been killed on Coignafearn-hill, within the last six years, by Mr. Macpherson, the gamekeeper, with the assistance of the shepherds.—Inverness Courier.

COURSING.

* * Judges and Secretaries will oblige by sending their names and addresses in full, in order that their juniors may be forwarded during the ensuing year.

APPOINTMENTS.

JANUARY.

PLACE.	DATE.	JUDGE.
Church Hill Open, Westward Wigton (Cumberland)	1
Red Dial Open, Westward Wigton (Cumberland)	11
Biggar Club (Lanark)	23
The renewed trial between North-Western and South-Western Coursers, at Lytham (Lancashire)	29 and fol. days

FEBRUARY.

Spelthorne (Wills)	7, 8, and 9	Mr. Lawrence
Newmarket Open	12
Biggar Club (Lanark)	13
Baron Hill, Beaumaris (Anglesea)

MARCH.

Cafedonlan Open (Lanark)	15
Biggar Open (Lanark)	27
Ridgway (Lancashire)

COUNTY WEXFORD COURSING CLUB.

Judges: Captain Pigott and J. Stannard, Esq., Stewards: E. R. Farrell and P. Galavan, Esqrs. J. Ralnor, Esq., Secretary: W.C.C.

The December meeting of the above club came off on Wednesday week, at Bricketstown, over the property of James Stannard, Esq., on which occasion the lovers of the long tails mustered in strong force. The game was in abundance, the dogs in splendid condition, and most of the courses were long and trying. The following is a return:—

ALL-AGED STAKES.

Mr. Sheppard's Spider beat Mr. Ralnor's Willie
Mr. Sweetman's Dart beat Mr. Corkick's Grasp
N. Y. Z.'s Spring beat Mr. Mayler's Varna
Mr. Sralian's Jauret ran a bye

Second Trial.

Spider beat Dart | Spring beat Jauret

Deciding Course.

After three undecided courses, Spring and Spider divided the stakes.

CONSOLATION STAKES.

Mr. Mayler's Varna beat Mr. Ralnor's Willie
Mr. Corkick's Grasp beat Mr. Sweetman's Dart
N. Y. Z.'s Daisy ran a bye

Second Trial.

Daisy beat Grasp | Varna ran a bye

Deciding Course.

Daisy beat Varna, and won the stakes.

CASTLECALDWELL (IRELAND) COURSING MEETING.

Judge: Wm. Owens, Esq. Slipper: Captain Lindsay.

A coursing meeting took place yesterday (Friday) week in the romantic grounds of Castle Caldwell, the seat of John C. Bloomfield, Esq., and was attended by a large number of the gentry of the surrounding neighbourhood. The weather was exceedingly fine, and the sport (a return of which we append) first-rate:—

THE PUPPY STAKES OF £2. 5s. each.

Mr. Stewart's Ed Sardinie beat Mr. Fox's b d Billy the Bear
Mr. Wray's bk w b Witch beat Mr. Dickson's r d Wolf
Mr. Anderson's bk d Vengeance beat Mr. Lindsay's f b Janet
Mr. Winder's bk d Woodline beat Mr. Anderson's r w b Lady

Second Trial.

Sardinie beat Witch | Woodline beat Vengeance

Deciding Course.

Sardinie beat Woodline, and won the stakes.

THE ALL-AGED STAKES OF £3. 5s. each.

Mr. Winder's bk d Blue beat Mr. Wray's r d Shriep
Mr. Winder's kr d Ludolph beat Mr. Johnston's b d Jack
Mr. Dickson's r d Co-bye beat Mr. Fox's b d Lady Bess
Mr. Stewart's f d Sardinie beat Mr. Fox's b d Wailer
Mr. Stewart's f d Sardinie ran a bye.

Second Trial.
Ludolph beat Satyr Sorrel ran a bye
Go-by (after two no-go's, and killing three hares) beat Bluo

Third Trial.
Sorrel beat Ludolph Go-by ran a bye

Deciding Course.
Sorrel beat Go-by, and won the stakes.

THE CONSOLATION STAKES OF £1. 5s. each, for the beaten dogs, were divided, after several most interesting courses, between Lady Bess and Witch.

KILKENNY COURSING CLUB.—The club will meet for coursing at Ballyragget, on Tuesday, the 9th; and at Clontarid, near Freshford, on Wednesday, the 10th of January.

AT THE COURSING MEETING lately held at Bourton, on the estate of Sir T. Biddulph, Bart., there was much admirable sport, thirteen hares being killed, in spite of the boisterous nature of the weather. There was a fair muster of dogs. Mr. Hayton, of Kilsby, brought five of his clippers; Mr. Blick brought a brace; and those who know the dog will be pleased to learn that Old Steamer has killed, and came out surprisingly both in his points and leaping; Mr. Hickin's Topper shone as usual; Mr. R. Cowley, of Kilsby, brought three; Mr. T. Lawrence brought a brace, one of which ran a molting course with Mr. Cowley's w. h., and killed her; Beeswing ran a hare single-handed, and killed her. A splendid run took place with Mr. Hayton's h. dog and Mr. Cowley's, but their hare left them after a long run, seeking shelter in Birdingbury Spinney. The hares were not similar in their movements here to some on the Birdingbury estate, and this may account for so many falling before so small a force of the enemy.

DISPUTED STAKES.—At the last County Court sittings, held in the neighbourhood of Warrington, a case was tried, in which one Williamson, the plaintiff, agreed with a man named Battersby to course rabbits, each party to deposit £10 with Wolly, the defendant in the action. The terms of agreement were that the owner of the dog which killed six out of eleven rabbits should be the winner. On October 21, the coursing took place, and after six rabbits were killed plaintiff withdrew his dog, the arbitrator not dealing fairly, as he thought; and he wanted to recover his £10. A copy of the rules, in which both parties agreed that if either did not run his dog when the time was up he should lose, was put in, but objected to on the ground of its not bearing a 2s. 6d. stamp. The Judge asked how the stakes could be recovered, when the 8th and 9th Vict. c. 109, sec. 18, sub. "all contracts or agreements, whether by parole or in writing, by way of wager, shall be null and void, and no suit shall be brought in any court of law or equity for recovering any sum of money or valuable thing alleged to be won upon any wager, or which shall have been deposited in the hands of any person to abide the issue of any wager." It was alleged that the present case came under the exceptions, as follows:—"But it is provided that the enactment shall not be deemed to apply to any subscription or contribution, or agreement to subscribe or contribute for or towards any plate, prize, or sum of money to be awarded to the winner of any lawful game or pastime or exercise." The case of "Carter v. Pybus" was quoted as in point, and in this it was contended that coursing was an illegal sport.—Mr. Baron Martin did not think there was anything illegal in a coursing match with greyhounds, and granted a rule, in order that arguments might be heard as to whether a party could recover his stake money on wishing to withdraw when two only out of three heats agreed upon had been run. The Judge of the County Court, in the present case, advised a nonsuit, with leave to enter a new trial, if the case quoted was in favour of the parties bringing it forward.

SHOOTING.

[It is designed under this title to invite communication by our readers of whatever remarkable incidents may occur in their shooting experiences.]

SHOOTING ADVENTURES.

THE BLACK RABBIT.

The events I am about to narrate occurred many years ago; but they may serve to amuse some of your juvenile readers who are at home for the Christmas holidays, and may perhaps even win a smile from "Percussion" and others of riper years. I pledge my word that they are strictly and substantially true; strictly true as far as relates to myself, and substantially true in the other parts. The parish of N— was not preserved in those days, and several sportsmen were in the habit of shooting over it. It was situated, of course, in a valley, with a brook running through it; and on the west side of the village was sloping ground, terminating in rather high table land, part of which was old pasture ground, and called "Gravel Close." The large field of sloping ground was sown in the year to which I am alluding, with barley and clover seeds; it had a trespass path across it, leading to Gravel Close, by which the girls of the village used to walk, in fine weather, at twelve o'clock, with their straw plait in their hands, to enjoy the pure air of Gravel Close.

It might have been the middle of October, or perhaps later in the year, when a party of gentlemen were assembled at dinner at the house of Dr. D., in the village of N—. After the cloth had been removed, and conversation became general, one of the gentlemen said that he had met with a most extraordinary adventure in Gravel Close. His dog had made a point; a black rabbit jumped out of a tuft of grass; he shot at it, and rolled it over, but, to his uttermost surprise, as he stooped to pick it up, it jumped up and ran away, and he could not find it again. The story was scarcely finished when another gentleman declared most solemnly that he had met with the very same adventure in Gravel Close; and again Dr. D. assured the company that he also had shot, as he supposed, a black rabbit in Gravel Close, which jumped up and ran into the hedge, when he stooped to pick it up, and he could not find it again. The story soon became public in the village and neighbourhood, and every one believed that Gravel Close was haunted by a certain nameless personage, in the similitude of a black rabbit.

In the preceding spring, Captain M— had come home from India, severely wounded. Sir Astley Cooper had sent him into the country for the benefit of his native air, and ordered him to lie on the sofa all day, and not to exert himself more than was absolutely necessary. As the shooting season approached, however, he purchased a setter from a neighbouring gamekeeper, and sallied forth on the 1st of September, with a crutch under one arm and a walking-stick in the other hand, with me for his companion, carrying his gun and sometimes my own too. Gravel Close belonged to Captain M.'s father; we did not often cross it at the beginning of the season, but after the marvellous tale of the black rabbit became public, we went sometimes to look for it.

We were never fortunate enough, however, to find it at home. At length the shooting season passed away—the black rabbit was seen no more, and the tale seemed to be sleeping in oblivion. Captain M—, in spite of Sir Astley Cooper's injunctions to keep himself quiet, got stronger every day; was able at length to carry his own gun and walk off my legs, and finally resolved to report himself fit for duty and proceed to India again. Amongst other preparations for the voyage, he purchased a new double-barrelled gun in London; and, at my solicitation, was to come to our house, and fire it into the water, to see how it threw its shot. The shortest road from his father's house to ours was through the sloping barley (now clover) field already described. We had almost reached the bottom of the field, when I desisted what I supposed to be an old shoe, almost hidden amongst the springing clover, and I suggested that it would be an excellent test of the new gun, as, if it would send the shot through the tough and hardened leather, it would kill anything. Captain M., willing to indulge me, consented. I walked up to what I considered a fair distance; and just before I fired, I said to Captain M., "Now, if that were the black rabbit, instead of an old shoe, I warrant it would never run away after I killed it." The gun was discharged, and the black rabbit (for it was nothing else) sprang a yard from the ground, and fell again perfectly motionless. I gave a shout of triumph, and ran to pick him up, but, just as I stooped, he jumped up and scampered to the hedge at the bottom of the field, which was only a few yards distant, before I had time to discharge the other barrel at him. However, after a little questing, we found him again, and I fired a second shot at him in vain. I dare say this time my aim was mistaken, for I was only fourteen years of age, and my feelings of surprise at what I had witnessed were, perhaps, not free from some degree of awe, at the possibility of something supernatural being connected with the black rabbit. We continued for some little time to look for him without success, and then proceeded to the trout stream to try the new gun upon the water.

All this happened between half-past eleven in the forenoon and twelve o'clock. At that time, the day being very fine, the girls of the village came out, as usual, for their walk in Gravel Close, and at the top of the clover field they found the black rabbit lying in the footpath, apparently quite dead. One of the girls picked it up, and put it into her apron, and, forthwith, they began quarrelling among themselves, about whom it belonged to—never dreaming, of course, that any one except themselves could have the slightest claim to it. I believe it was finally settled that it should be made into a pudding on the following day, and three or four of the older girls should have it for dinner. They finished their walk, and were returning home, when, while the girl who had the rabbit in her apron was crossing the stile at the bottom of the field, it began to kick and struggle violently. She threw it down in a fright, exclaiming that it certainly was the d—, and it scampered up the footpath towards Gravel Close, and was never seen again.—I am, &c.,

LOADING-ROD.

WATERPROOF PERCUSSION CAPS.

To the Editor of the Times.

SIR,—For the last twenty years I have had as much shooting as most men, yet I never saw a copper cap perfectly waterproof until April last, when I called upon Messrs. Eley, and was shown their newly-invented copper caps, lined throughout with india-rubber.

I tried them thoroughly in grouse-shooting during those very wet days in August, and have continued to use them ever since, without having a single misfire; and if our brave fellows in the East will only take the trouble to see that the nipples of their rifles are screwed well home, and these caps well pressed home also, they may depend upon their guns going off, even should they have been loaded for a week; and, as they are not more expensive than other caps, I do hope you will use your powerful influence in impressing upon the Government the great advantage of rendering the rifles of their soldiers serviceable in spite of the wettest weather. I am, Sir, your obliged,

Green-park, Bath.

T. C. HOOPER.

[In THE FIELD of the 16th Dec. is an account of a cap which is both waterproof and airtight; and which possesses many other advantages over the ordinary cap.—ED. FIELD.]

PIGEON SHOOTING.—In the Old Cricket-ground at Ashley, yesterday week, two sweepstakes, for £3 and £4, were shot off, and were won, the first by Mr. Tibbrook, gamekeeper to Colonel Hall, and the second by Mr. Wood.

WILD FOWL SHOOTING.—In the neighbourhood of Whitstable, sportsmen have become very numerous, and being principally oyster-droghers have abundance of time to devote to the pursuit of their game, and among them are some of the best marksmen in the county. The mode of shooting is peculiar to this place, and some notice of it may be interesting to many readers. A large and heavy gun is placed in a singularly-constructed boat called a "Pantoon," about twelve feet long and thirteen inches deep, flat bottomed, stern and stem like, the gun being laid flush fore and aft; the gunner observes a kneeling position, and propels his vessel with great rapidity by means of a double-bladed paddle, the use of which requires great dexterity. On nearing the birds he places himself at the bottom of the boat, which is only a few inches above the surface of the water, and is not to be seen until within range of his object. In this position he forces himself along by means of two smaller paddles, and upon the birds rising he discharges the gun, by which as many as sixty birds have been known to have had their flight arrested. After picking up the dead, he proceeds in pursuit of the wounded, which, being excellent swimmers and divers, call into requisition the use of a small gun. Great skill is required in the conduct of this sport, otherwise considerable danger is incurred. Another class of fowling have also a peculiar method which is frequently successful; at the commencement of the season a tub is sunk, at the ebb of the tide, sufficiently large to hide the sportsman, who there watches with great patience for the wild fowl, curlews, and hawk birds; at the two last of which the great-gunner dishes to fire. Many persons from the surrounding country visit this place for the purpose of shooting wild fowl, but are almost always disappointed, from not using one or the other of these methods; in fact they seldom obtain a single bird.

EXTRAORDINARY WOODCOCK.—A gentleman lately shot on the grounds of J. Tuthill, Esq., at Southwold, a woodcock, weighing 13 ounces. The usual weight is about 10 ounces.

STARTON SQUADS.—KIRK'S NEST PIGEON CLUB.—The members of this celebrated club held their 32nd annual meeting last week, when a formidable muster of "Crack Shots" assembled. The sweepstakes were awarded to Messrs. Lewis, Duggan, P. Stephens, and Thomason, and the "cup" after a spirited contest, fell to the lot of Mr. W. Webb, of High-street, Hereford. The dinner, under the able presidency of Mr. J. L. Stephens, well assisted by Mr. Thomas (Old Weir) as vice-president, passed off in the satisfactory style for which this comfortable "nest" is so justly celebrated.

CARELESSNESS IN USING THE GUN.—A poor man named John Hawker last week lost his life by one of the very numerous gun accidents which we almost daily hear of, and against which people in general do not seem inclined to take the slightest precaution. He was drawing the gun, loaded, through a hedge, with the muzzle towards him, when it exploded, and the contents went through his ribs. He died next day. An inquest was held by Mr. Best on Monday, when a verdict of "Accidental death" was returned.

WINTER AND WILDFOWL IN THE LAKE DISTRICT.—Last week the weather was, for the time of the year, unusually severe, and the consequence was that wildfowl arrived on Windermere and other lakes in numerous flocks, affording good sport. There was scarcely a day that large flocks of wild geese were not seen winging their way westward. It is an "old saying," that when wildfowl arrive with us early, and in great quantities, it betokens a severe winter. If there be anything to be gathered from the flight of birds, as indicating the approach of a hard winter, we may make up our minds we have entered upon one of storms and severity. The swallows and martins left us before the corn was well gathered in; the woodcocks were not slow to take their place, and the latter have been very abundant this season in the woods and high pastures of Furness-fells. Ducks and widgeons have been very abundant in our lakes and rivers, considering the earliness of the season for such visitors; whilst in our woods and hedges there may be seen the red wing, with a great variety of smaller birds, which we are seldom accustomed to see at any other time except during severe weather.

CRICKET.

OUR GLANCE AT THE SEASON 1851.

NO. V.

In continuation of these glances, we next have to point out that the next public exhibition at Lord's was that on Monday, July 10, when a novel contest was produced by Mr. Dark, under the title of the "United Eleven v. Fifteen Gentlemen of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge." The weather, however, in this instance, as in most of the first-class matches that were played up to the "day of tears" (St. Swithin), was wet, and anything but that which those who play and those who look on desire. Damp, cold, and cheerless was the morning wherein that contest, which many anticipated would prove one of the most exciting of the Marylebone Club season, was commenced; and the consequence was that the proceedings were not witnessed by such a number of spectators as one would have expected. A fine sunny morn, on the contrary, would have induced hundreds to visit Lord's upon this occasion; whilst those who personally participated in the game would not merely have played with more satisfaction to themselves, but in many cases far better. To use an almost obsolete expression, "the mutch was damped," no fault attributable to those engaged in it, seeing that it arose from a cause which none of them could control or prevent. A large amount of disappointment, therefore, resulted from the untoward circumstance. The Universities only scored 64 and 57, or 121; and the United won the honours of the event by two wickets, scoring 47 and 75, or 122. The latter, as most people of the present day are when they chance to meet it, were all abroad at the slow bowling. As we proceed with these notices the writer will have to say much upon this subject. In the two hands of the Universities there was but one double score in each—viz., that of Mr. Leake, 20, in the first, and that of Mr. R. A. Clement, 28, in the second. The United showed a 10, through the instrumentality of Lockyer (the Surrey wicket-keeper), in the first hands; and in the second Mr. Vernon headed the team with 16, and was followed by Lockyer with 14, and Wisden with the like number. There are not a few who regard these odd-numbered matches, not merely as a violation of the rules of the game, but as not being cricket. We have personally witnessed—everybody has seen by the enormous extension of the game during the last eight years—the advantages which have arisen from the introduction of this description of match by Clarke, the slow bowler, in the country. This step has done more towards the sowing and the cultivation of the "seeds of cricket," if we may be permitted the expression, throughout the land than all the combined efforts of clubs. Already we partake of a small portion of the fruits in the discovery that, by practice and emulation, several players, gentlemen as well as professionals, who had previously never been heard of beyond the limits of their own little district, have been brought out in consequence of their having been put into a "twenty-two," in opposition to the "Eleven," and so had the chance of showing what they could do against players individually superior to themselves. But for these matches this result would never have been arrived at. In the early stage of these matches the game was scarcely known, or at least but little supported and played in many parts of England; even still less was it carried on with any spirit in other portions of the United Kingdom. Since their introduction, there is scarcely a hamlet or village in this country which has not its cricket club, nor a town or city which has not several in whose practice and matches the noblemen and the more wealthy constantly participate with their less fortunate and more humble neighbours, and in that way a better opportunity is afforded to each class to gain a proper estimate the one of the other. Were it for these only, out of many other reasons, the writer would advocate the energetic support and continuance of these "odd-numbered" contests. Well, the present was a novelty at Lord's in the existing age, and sorry are we that its object was defeated by adverse weather, especially as it had been appointed expressly for the middle of the season.

Thursday, July 13, found Eleven Gentlemen from the County of Kent assembled at Lord's for the purpose of contesting the honours of the annual match with Eleven Gentlemen of England. The latter carried the day, winning by the large number of 136 runs, the light having been brought to its termination on the evening of the second day. The final totals were—Gentlemen of England, 91 and 183, or 279; Gentlemen of Kent, 93 and 50, or 143. There were some long scores in this affair. For England, Mr. Drake contributed 12 and 0; Mr. C. Wynch, 4 and 68; Mr. Balfour, 6 and 38; Mr. Haygarth, 6 and 21; Mr. W. Follows, 11 and (not out) 20; Mr. H. L. Nicholson, 19 and 10; and Mr. Hammersley, 12 and 0. On the part of Kent, the doubles were given by Mr. H. Andrews, 36 and 3; Mr. W. Norton, 21 and 5; and Mr. R. Streetfield, 2 and 11.

Upon the same day, namely, July 13, Eleven of the Marylebone Club and Ground played a match against the Harrow-school Eleven, at Harrow. In this matter, the M.C.C. won by 148 runs, mainly because the Harrow Eleven were unable to play the bowling of Grundy and Nixon. The scores were—M.C.C., 99 and 111, or 210; Harrow, 41 and 21, or 62. The two figures were obtained for the M.C.C. by Mr. A. Baillie, who made an offering of 27 and 35; by Mr. H. Paynter, 0 and 20; by Grundy, 13 and 27; by Mr. H. Vernon, 16 and 2; by Mr. S. Leigh, 16 and 2; and by Nixon, 10 and 0. Then, for "the School" there were not more than two doubles in the first, and not one in the second. Indeed, a "6" was at the head of the Harrovians' second effort. In the first, Mr. K. E. Digby made 13, and Mr. V. E. Walker 11.

On the Monday following, July 17, the grand annual contest between the "Gentlemen and Players" was opened, but the former were cleanly vanquished by the fine bowling which was brought into action by the Players, Wisden, Grundy, and Martingell have seldom been more effective; whilst the batting on their side proved too much for the bowling which the Gentlemen brought into the field upon this occasion. The scores were—"The Gentlemen," 95 and 71, or 166; "The Players," 118 and 20, with nine wickets up. And so by the nine wickets were the former beaten. In reference to the doubles in this match, the contributions were by Mr. C. Wynch, 20 and (not out) 20; by the Hon. S. Ponsonby, 25 and 2; by Mr. W. Nicholson, 11 and 14; by Sir P. Balfour, 12 and 0; and by Mr. Balfour, 1 and 11. On behalf of "the Players," Dean gave 27 and (not out) 4; Adams gave 23; Morlock (not out) 19 and 0; Wisden, 18; Clifford, 15; Lockyer, 11; and Challen, 11. There was a great deal of dissatisfaction expressed in consequence, as it was declared, of Clarke's having prevented some of the "All-England Eleven" from participating in this match as hitherto. The absence of Parr, Cesar, and Caffyn, as well as of Clarke himself, doubtless had the effect of diminishing the interest which this game has always excited. We have heard two or three versions offered as to the causes which led to the absence of the players in question. Which party (or parties) was in the wrong, or whose conduct and manner led to that result, we shall leave time and circumstances to disclose.

At the termination of this match another was entered upon for the purpose of filling out the day when, as in its predecessor, there was some beautiful cricket exhibited. In this instance, "the Gentlemen" scored 121, towards which amount Mr. F. Walker contributed 31, the Hon. S. Ponsonby 24, Mr. Charles 21, Mr. F. T. Drake 18, and Mr. W. Nicholson 12. The two figured offerings by "the Players" came from John Lillywhite (not out), 59, and Wisden, 13. This side had lost four wickets only when "time" was called, with a score of 83.

On the succeeding Thursday, July the 17th, the M.C.C. went with one player, Nixon, to Vincent-square, with the view of meeting an eleven of the "present Westminsters." The day ended in a "draw," as the club had 61 runs to obtain, with four wickets to go down, when all play ceased for the occasion. The "present Westminsters" placed 74 and 123, or 197, upon the score paper; if which number Mr. E. Burton made 13 and 4, Mr. H. Harrison 7 and 35, Mr. Harding 8 and 13, and Mr. Eden 0 and 22. But there was then a heavy item—the disgraceful item, we may term it—which with Marylebone men ought not to exist—"byes, 23." The M.C.C. scored 109 and 37, or 146; to which Mr. Henenge tendered 27 and 2, Mr. F. Oliver 25 and 16, and Nixon 17 and 7. The "School" also threw away 16 in the shape of "wides." More steadiness in your bowling, young gentlemen, will in future seasons be desirable.

FIELD SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

RUGBY FOOT-BALL SEASON.—There have been twelve goals kicked this year, which is considerably above the average; but the play in general was not so good as that of last year, the school having lost that splendid player, Mr. White; but, notwithstanding, it has been better than was expected. Below are the names of those who have dropped and place-kicked goals:—

	Drops.	Place Kicks
Wills	1	0
Newman	2	1
Booth	0	2
Hullock	3	0
Haughton	2	0
Rhoades	1	0

No. Dropped..... 9 No. Place kicked..... 5—Total 12. The following are the names of the most distinguished players: Mr. Wills (Evans's) is the finest player in the school. He is a first-rate forward player, and the best back player, and is a very awkward customer to be near in a backing scrummage. He is by far the best dodger in the school; he is always sure of his drop.—Mr. Booth (Mayor's) is the best forward player in the school. His play this year has been splendid; he is a great help to his side. He is a good place kick.—Mr. Haughton (School House) is the best place kick in the school, and a first-rate back player.—Mr. Bullock (Shairp's) is a good back player, but does much better forward. He is a good drop with his left leg, and dodges very well.—Mr. Newman (Shairp's) is a good back player, and does good when he goes forward; but he is rather too fond of running too far with the ball; in fact, it looks as if he was showing off, instead of playing.—Mr. Gregson (Mayor's) is a very fine player; he has made some of the longest drops this year that have ever been known. He is a good place kick.—Mr. Bernard (Mayor's) is a splendid forward player; but, owing to an accident, he has been kept from playing during the latter part of the season. He is a good place kick.—Mr. Irby (School House) is a good back player and drop; but he is too stiff in his movements.—Mr. Fisher (School House) is a fair back player, and occasionally makes a good drop. He is very good at ducking.—Mr. Fairbairn (Evans's) is a fine, able, forward player; is a good addition to his side.—Mr. Hills (Bradley's) is an active little player, and is a first-rate dodger.—RUBENS FLOREAT.

YACHTING.

NOTICE.

All Fictures, Reports, Intelligence, or Communications relating to Yachting are requested to be addressed to "The Editor of THE FIELD, at the Offices, Nos. 2 to 5, Essex-street, Strand."

HIGH WATER AT LONDON BRIDGE.

DATE.	TIME.	DATE.	TIME.
Jan. 1, Monday	0.33	Jan. 17, Wednesday	0.14
" 2, Tuesday	1.22	" 18, Thursday	1.38
" 3, Wednesday	2.3	" 19, Friday	2.24
" 4, Thursday	2.11	" 20, Saturday	3.31
" 5, Friday	3.19	" 21, Sunday	4.9
" 6, Saturday	4.31	" 22, Monday	5.15
" 7, Sunday	4.31	" 23, Tuesday	6.1
" 8, Monday	5.1	" 24, Wednesday	6.48
" 9, Tuesday	5.14	" 25, Thursday	7.19
" 10, Wednesday	6.17	" 26, Friday	8.1
" 11, Thursday	6.36	" 27, Saturday	9.5
" 12, Friday	7.13	" 28, Sunday	10.17
" 13, Saturday	8.14	" 29, Monday	11.36
" 14, Sunday	9.18	" 30, Tuesday	12.41
" 15, Monday	11.2	" 31, Wednesday	1.8
" 16, Tuesday	11.11

To find High Water at the adjacent places, take the above time at London Bridge and add or subtract the time in the following Table.

ADJACENT PLACES.	TIME.	ADJACENT PLACES.	TIME.
Brighton	3.0	Amsterdam	0.55
Boulogne	3.1	Antwerp	0.6
Calcutta	2.19	Bombay	1.53
Cherbourg	3.36	Brussels	0.52
Cochin	3.33	Cardiff	0.21
Hull	3.55	Colon	2.21
Lyons	2.57	Cork	2.23
Manila	4.21	Dover	2.38
Penang	0.47	Edinburgh	4.18
Portsmouth	2.22	Geneva	4.23
Southampton	2.27	Harbour	4.23
Swansea	4.15	Hamburg	3.53

CLUB MEETINGS.

January 2.—Meeting of the Royal Mersey Yacht Club.
January 2.—Monthly Meeting of the London Model Yacht Club.
January 5.—Monthly Meeting of the Prince of Wales Yacht Club.
January 10.—Monthly Meeting of the Ranelagh Yacht Club.
January 11.—Annual Ball of the Prince of Wales Yacht Club, at the Freemasons' Tavern.
January 15.—Monthly Meeting of the Royal London Yacht Club.
January 19.—Conversations of the Prince of Wales Yacht Club.
February 11.—Annual Ball of the Royal London Yacht Club, at Willis's Rooms; and of the Royal Thames Yacht Club, at the Hanover Square Rooms.

ROYAL THAMES YACHT CLUB.

The monthly meeting of this club will take place on Wednesday, Jan. 3rd, 1855, at half-past eight, when the following gentlemen will be ballotted for:—John Robinson, Esq., Highbury-park, Islington; Henry L. Allen, Esq., 5, North-wall, Dublin; Henry Arthur Herbert, Esq., M.P., 3, Grosvenor-crescent, Belgrave-square; John Bury, Esq., Cheetham-hill, Manchester; Alexander Fotheringham, Esq., Gunfield-house, Dartmouth.
The decision of the sailing committee on Mr. Harrison Clifton's motion, brought forward at the November general meeting, having been unanimously confirmed, in future, "No shifting ballast or sliding keels will be allowed to be used in the club matches."

The following resolution was unanimously carried at the general meeting held on the 6th instant, viz., "That it is the opinion of this meeting that the sum of fifty guineas should be given by this club to the Royal Patriotic Fund, subject to confirmation, agreeably to the laws, upon notice in the circulars at the January meeting." It was also resolved that "The annual ball under the auspices of the club, be held at the Hanover-square rooms, on Wednesday, Feb. 14th, 1855, and that the surplus be given to the Royal Patriotic Fund." The lists of stewards will be submitted at the general meeting, Jan. 3rd, 1855. Applications from gentlemen desirous of acting as such to be forwarded to the secretary.

Members and their friends who intend to dine at the monthly club dinner, on Wednesday, Jan. 3rd, 1855, must enter their names to the house-book on or before two o'clock on that day. Each member may introduce one friend. Dinner at six o'clock precisely.

The secretary will attend at the club-rooms on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday afternoons, from two to five o'clock, to receive subscriptions, &c. Subscriptions for the season 1855 will become due Jan. 1st.

The following yachts are for sale:—

Name and Rig.	Tons.	Name and Rig.	Tons.
Zephyrus, schooner	180	Daisy, cutter	16
Lily of the Test, ditto	91	Sunbeam, ditto	18
Vesta, ditto	75	Harvala, ditto	15
Guerilla, cutter	44	Waterwheel, ditto	15
Cygnal, ditto	35	Sea Nymph, ditto	10
Daring, ditto	31	Curlew, yawl, for gunning	10
Secret, ditto	25

PRINCE OF WALES YACHT CLUB.

The first monthly meeting of the Prince of Wales Yacht Club, for the ensuing year, will be held on Friday, Jan. 5th, at the Club-house, Freemasons' Tavern, when all members are particularly requested to attend, as the annual subscription (one guinea) is then due. It is very essential that members should send their subscriptions as early as possible, that the committee may regulate the disbursements of the year accordingly. The conversations take place on the third Friday in the month, at eight p.m., and gentlemen are invited to read a paper on any branch of nautical science. The stewards are busy making preparations for the annual ball, and they report that applications for tickets are very numerous. We advise our friends to apply early to either of the stewards, as the number will be limited, so as not to overcrowd the hall. The ball takes place at the Freemasons' Tavern, on the 11th January. Tickets may be obtained at the meeting on the 5th, or on application to either of the following stewards:—

F. Burne, Esq., 3, Rose-terrace, Queen's-clm, Brompton.
T. Brooks, Esq., 104, High-street, Borough.
N. Campbell, Esq., 29, Finsbury-circus.
G. F. Chubb, Esq., Myrtle-villa, Putney.
H. C. Cook, Esq., 2, Great Knight-riders-street, Doctor's-common.
J. Grant, Esq., 3, Finsbury-place south.
T. Harrison, Esq., 8, Bolton-square, Brompton.
R. Hewitt, Esq., Barkling, Essex.
B. Kitchin, Esq., Poplar-row, Crutched-friars.
W. Mann, Esq., Esq., 81, Katherine's-clock.
J. G. Robinson, Esq., 7, Gunter's-grove, Brompton.
R. Sadler, Esq., 68, Coleman-street, Bank.

J. K. Spratt, Esq., 3, Little Argyll-street.
P. Turner, Esq., Orchard-place, Blackwall.
A. Turner, Esq., 6, Billiter-street.
J. Webber, Esq., 13, Warwick-crescent, Harrow-road.

To the Editor of THE FIELD.

Sir,—Few clubs contain within themselves more elements of success and prosperity than the Prince of Wales Yacht Club, of which I have long been a member. In hardly any other club are there so many practical yachtsmen; but we have occasional disputes on trifling matters, that, unless checked, may lead to ill-feeling, and cause the retirement of many valuable members.

Lately, a motion has been carried, which, although proposed and adopted with the best intention, is, I think, a bad precedent, and may lead to much inconvenience; and on this subject I should feel much obliged if favoured with your opinion. In Mr. Berncastle we had an invaluable and most indefatigable commodore, and when, in consequence of receiving an appointment in the Colonies, he resigned his command and left us, I, in common, I believe, with every other member of the club, was most anxious to show him in some way or other how much we valued his services.

It was proposed by some that he should be elected rear-commodore, and sail under our colours in the Australian waters; but this was negatived, on the ground of its being infra dig. for any gentleman to accept a lower rank than he had previously held in the club. This was a difficulty to overcome; but fancy my astonishment, on returning to town lately, to find that a new rank had been created for the occasion, and that Mr. Berncastle is now rear-admiral of the Prince of Wales Yacht Club! Now, Sir, be good enough to tell me two things: What flag is he to carry? and, on his return home, will not our present commodore sink into second in command?

I do regret the adoption of such rank in the club, and have already found it a subject of ridicule. Commodore is all very well, and quite legitimate in yacht clubs. Now we have admirals, I shall be in daily expectation of some restless member proposing an admiralty board, with first, second, and third lord. I am, Sir, yours respectfully,

ONE OF THE P.W.Y.C.

[We think the subject of your letter sufficiently important to warrant insertion, and shall be glad to receive the opinions of other yachtsmen on the advisability of appointing admirals in yacht clubs. Our own opinion is decidedly against any rank higher than that of commodore being assumed, but undoubtedly Mr. Berncastle is still first in command. The flag is a very secondary matter.—Ed.]

LONDON MODEL YACHT CLUB.

The next general monthly meeting will be held on Tuesday, January 2nd, at eight o'clock precisely, when the following gentlemen will be ballotted for:—

Name and Address.	Proposed by	Seconded by
James Barnard, Esq., Holloway	Commodore.....	Hon. Sec.
Thomas Bartlett, Esq., Holly-hill
Kettle
George King, Esq., 4, Little Love
Lucy, Clapton
Henry Foot, Esq., 37, Upper Baker street, Portman-square

The maximum tonnage for the first-class yachts is eight tons. The annual subscription is ten shillings per annum, without entrance-fee or any further payment. To ensure a copy of the monthly circular through the post, each member is requested to furnish the honorary secretary with twelve unstamped envelopes, with his name and address already written thereon.

RANELAGH YACHT CLUB.

At the next meeting of this club, to be held at the Swan Tavern, Battersea, at seven o'clock, p.m., on Wednesday, the 10th January, 1855, the following notices of motion will come under discussion, and be put to the vote:—

Notice of motion by Mr. Adams:—"That rule No. 1 be altered from 'limited to fifty members,' to 'be unlimited in number of members.'"

Notice of motion by Mr. Capel:—"That rule No. 7 be altered, so far as regards 'one black ball do exclude,' to 'three black balls do exclude.'"

Notices of motion by Mr. C. H. Tidbury:—1st. "That the sailing committee shall have it in their power to call a special meeting at their own instance, instead of the same being sent to each member of the club (stating for what purpose the meeting is called) five clear days to such meeting—or that any member of the club shall be allowed to call a special meeting, provided he forward a requisition, in writing, to the secretary, signed by not less than seven members of the club, due notice being given to each member as above." 2nd. "That any member wishing to propose a gentleman to be elected a member of this club, shall give notice to the secretary to that effect, fourteen clear days to the next ensuing meeting, and send the name, address, and profession of the gentleman proposed, with the name of the proposer and seconder; the secretary to insert the same in the notice to be sent to each member, and that the election shall take place at the following meeting."

TESTIMONIAL TO JAMES GOODSON, ESQ., COM. R.L.Y.C.—So anxious are the members of the Royal London Yacht Club to show respect to their commodore, by subscribing to this testimonial, that, although no one is allowed to subscribe a greater amount than one guinea, upwards of one hundred pounds has already been received by the committee for the purpose.

THE "ERMINIA," Lord Ellesmere's yacht, is about being dispatched to the Black Sea with a quantity of medical stores, comforts, and other necessities required by the wounded soldiers in the Crimea. Part of her freight consists of about 4,000 pairs of mittens, comforters, &c., collected by the exertions of Miss Beacroft, as a donation from Worcestershire ladies. They will be distributed, according to the wishes of the donors, under the direction of Mr. Alfred Denison.

NEW INVENTION IN ANCHORS.—Mr. R. Ruston, engineer, has effected two improvements in the common anchor. The first is, that inside the stock of the anchor is a screw, working elastically, by means of a spiral spring. The anchor is thus prevented dragging, neither does the cable run the risk of breaking. With the large class of vessels now building these anchors will give as much as ten feet. The other improvement is an arrangement by which, in the event of the spring breaking, which the inventor does not think at all probable, the anchor will then act just as the ordinary anchor now does.

ANGLING.

[We shall be glad to receive any angling information from secretaries of angling clubs, if they will be kind enough to forward it as early as possible to the Editor.]

ARTIFICIAL PROPAGATION OF SALMON ON THE TAY.—It is now nearly twelve months since the last of the ova from which the young fry in the ponds was hatched at Perth was deposited in the boxes. These eggs were hatched principally in the month of April last, and at this date the boxes are again filled (with the exception of a few boxes) for hatching next spring. The fishermen who have been employed to re-stock the boxes at present state that the spawning in the Tay (and we suppose this to be the case in all the Scottish rivers) is a month earlier this year than last, as more than half of the fish taken in their net had spawned, which was not the case at this time last year. Most of the fish have been taken on one ford, at the junction of the Almond with the Tay, and this was the place that furnished the ova last season; and it is a fact that on this ford the same fish has seldom been taken a second time (the fish which are taken are marked), proving, as we have frequently witnessed from the Bridge of Perth, that more than one pair of fish spawn on the identical spot, and on doing so disturb the preceding bed; so that for all the spawn that is taken off this place by the stocking of the boxes, enough is left for stocking the ford. For a month past the young fry in the experimental pond have been taking less food—at present they are hardly taking any, but although this is the case they are plump and fat, and in fine condition, and no deaths occurring; the silvery smout appearance is increasing, and it is to be hoped that they will go seawards this spring. It has been ascertained that a very large proportion of the ova deposited in the natural way in the river are devoured by an enemy that was not thought of before, viz., the larvæ of the Mayfly. As the eggs of this insect are deposited in streams in summer, by the cleansing of the gravel before depositing the ova in the artificial method of rearing the fish, this enemy is avoided. It has been ascertained that all fry hatched from salmon ova are the same little fish that are found in all salmon rivers, which are called parr, but at what age the parr scales are entirely covered by those of the smout, this experiment has not had time to determine. It has also been ascertained that boiled liver, dried and well pulverised, is suitable food for the fry, notwithstanding what has been said to the contrary, as the fish thrive well on it, and devour it greedily; but since the temperature of the water has fallen, they have not shown the same desire for food. It has been proved that the temperature of the water in which the ova are hatched shortens or lengthens the time of hatching. A severe winter is a bad hatching season. We have learned, also, by this experiment, that the artificial method does not retard the growth of the young fish, for the parr in the river at the present time are not larger than those in the pond. On the whole, the experiment up to the time has been completely successful. The experiment has cost the salmon proprietors of the Tay up to this time £620, which sum, we understand, will carry it on for another year. The annual salmon rental of the Tay at present we believe to be about £10,000. The salmon fishings belonging to the city of Perth usually bring from £800 to £1,000 annually, and the sum paid as yet by the corporation for this experiment amounts to £76. The sum is small where so much is at stake: for it is well known that, from bad legislation, over-fishing, and other causes, the quantity of salmon caught in the Tay has fallen off much of late years.

THE TOWN COUNCIL OF PERTH have voted £26, as their share, in order to continue the experiment at present going on so successfully at Stomontfield, for the propagation of salmon from the ova.

THE GARDEN.

TENDER FLOWER-GARDEN PLANTS: HOW TO WINTER THEM ECONOMICALLY.

ONE of the greatest puzzles of our times with those who love a garden, and yet possess but moderate means, is how to winter such useful plants as shrubby calceolarias, fuchsias, geraniums, and indeed several other things which the above may tolerably well typify. The problem of course is, how to secure the services, during a future summer, of plants which have attained almost the character of shrubs; and that, too, without compromising the atmospheric conditions of the houses or pits where they are of necessity crammed or packed away through the winter.

We may read, in cut-and-dry calendars, of pushing such a thing into the peach-house; but not every one has a peach-house. What a majority of the public really wish to know is, how to secure the greatest quantity of the tender pets of the bygone summer with as little trouble and expense as possible; and it will be a pleasure on the part of THE FIELD to endeavour to "put them on the right scent."

As one of our most popular families, and one of the greatest service in decorating ornamental grounds, we may commence with the geranium. The older geranium-bushes get, the better their aptitude for flowering, and the more exotic-looking the grounds become where they are situated. This refers especially to the scarlets in all their grades, from such as Cerise unique, up to Punch, and deeper shades still. At this time we have two or three hundred huge bushes standing on the floor of an upstairs room, over the back sheds; not placed there because it is the best place for them, but because we had no other to spare. These were taken up as soon as their young points were discoloured by frost, and immediately placed in pots: in doing so, we of course scoured all the soil we could. They were not pruned at that moment, but had a slight watering, and were directly placed under a snug shed, facing the sun, the latter, however, not shining on them. Here they had mats nailed along the front and ends, to keep the wind from them. We gave them a slight watering, and here they remained three weeks untouched, when of course they had many decayed leaves through the check; and now we pruned them, simply removing all the immature and blighted twigs, and picking every decayed or decaying leaf from them.

They received another watering in about a fortnight after the potting period; since that they have not received any, neither will they until next February. The soil in their pots is now nearly desiccated. It will be seen here that two main points ruled this practice: the one a niggardly application of water, the other a total absence of all codling; in fact, as low a temperature as they could endure. To these may be added the pruning away of all unripened portions of the shoots. The last we consider very important, as the gangrene to which geraniums thus handled are necessarily liable is principally engendered by the immature wood. When they are in this state of repose, and the soil in their pots very dry, they will endure half-a-dozen degrees of frost in the structure where they may be situated.

At the period in which this is written, December 14th, our geranium bushes are in the loft before described, and as soon as a very hard frost occurs—say above ten degrees—we shall throw them all on their sides, and cover them at least a foot thick with dry straw; on the dryness of the latter material we lay much stress. They will then remain as they did last winter until the end of February, when they will be uncovered and examined; by this time they will again have engendered the gangrene before alluded to in some portions, and we again submit them to a pruning away of such parts. They are now set upright, and watered, and if we happen to have spare room in anyinery, peach-house, greenhouse, or pit, they are immediately bettered in condition by being removed to such a situation; indeed, those who wish to do justice to them should contrive so to do.

It must be remembered here that we have been describing a very hard course of treatment. Treat them, by all means, better if you can; but such a course they will endure, and, under a genial course of spring treatment, will make useful ornaments of the flower-garden, although, doubtless, some will not endure so severe a test of hardihood.

FUSCHIAS.—Everybody knows that these charming shrubs may be treated as an ordinary herbaceous perennial—that is to say, cut down to the soil in the autumn, and receiving a little protection over the crown of the root. But fuchsias thus treated will not, of course, blossom so early as those in which the main stems have been preserved; and as the latter are impatient of very low temperature, the best mode of preserving what gardeners term "the old wood" deserves a consideration. To endeavour to save all the lateral twigs, or a specimen, by the economic course of treatment we have to suggest, is certainly not needful. The main stems, however, may be easily saved, and from such, well preserved by a generous course of spring treatment, a host of fresh and vigorous young spray will proceed, which will leave little to be lamented as to the loss of the side twigs of the past year. Any outhouse will be adapted to their preservation. Let them be taken up with as much soil adhering to them as possible, but previous let all the side spray be cut clear to the main stem or stems, and the latter drawn closely to a stick by matting. They may here be "heeled," or planted close together against the back wall of the shed, or in an angle of the wall, and sloping considerably. Here let the heads lie uncovered until the thermometer sinks to twenty-four degrees out doors; then throw a mat over them, and cover the mat half a yard thick with very dry litter, straw or hay. When the frost is gone they must be uncovered, in order to dispel confined damps, which is more prejudicial than a moderate amount of dry frost; and thus proceed with them until the middle of February, when they should be potted and placed in some house or pit in which a little warmth is sustained, providing their blossoming is desired tolerably early; if only for an autumn display they may remain in the shed until the second week of March, and the coarser specimens may be planted at once as ordinary pleasure-ground ornaments. We ought to have observed, however, that every leaf should be plucked off them when put in the shed, and care should be taken to place them there before the bark of their stems is injured; if this becomes soft and loose the stems will be lost. We think that on an average the fuschia will not bear, uninjured, above six degrees of frost.

VERENAS.—This most popular flower has become of so much importance in our day, that no flower-garden would be considered complete without it. Being a sort of herbaceous perennial, of an evergreen character, means must of course be taken to preserve a certain amount of foliage in health through the winter. Continued darkness, therefore, is fatal to it. We may here refer to what may be termed the key-stone of the arch in this affair, viz., early propagation. Those who not only propagate early, but take care that the young plants are early established in their store-pots—other things being equal—will have the best chance of wintering them. We speak here of the stock intended for spring propagation, for, after all the apparent strength of well-saved plants of the previous autumn, we should prefer early spring cuttings, propagated betimes, potted-off betimes, and, we may add, having been well-established and properly cooled down—to use a technical phrase. Verbenas will succeed well in any cold frame or pit, if means be taken to avoid stagnated damps. Such means consist in selecting a dry site, and in elevating the base of the frame above the ground level; after this, in plunging the pots in cinder ashes, than which nothing can be better; as the ordeal these have passed through renders them incapable of producing corruption in the atmosphere of the frame or pit. The utmost attention must be paid to ventilation on every fitting occasion, and in covering the roof of the structure in severe frosts with plenty of dry litter. In addition, they should be frequently picked of all decaying foliage, mouldiness, &c. &c. The verberna will endure six or eight degrees of frost tolerably well.

CALCEOLARIAS.—It is not our intention here to deal with those herbaceous calceolarias which are so gaudily attractive at our exhibitions: we by no means disparage these, or the lovers of them—they deserve high consideration. There is a class known as the shrubby kind, peculiarly adapted for flower-garden purposes, and, doubtless, most of the readers of THE FIELD are familiar with them. The heading of this article will prove an apology for passing by the pot calceolarias for the present. These, although by no means so gaudy as the herbaceous kinds, are of immense importance in the bedding system, as conferring that exotic impress on the decorative portion of grounds which the richness of the stores now in possession of the gardening public of Britain are qualified to carry out. If we have not all the fine spottings of the herbaceous kinds in these shrubby varieties, we have the more solid quality of being better able to withstand the blast, before which the other fragile class sometimes quail, not to rise again. Who, indeed, can despise such peuces as Sultan, such good yellows as Kayii, or such canaries as amplexicaulis? Now, although herbaceous calceolarias may, for ordinary garden purposes, be wintered very well under a common hand-glass, having occasionally a little covering, we can scarcely say the same of the shrubby kinds, unless it be cuttings of the young shoots in a growing condition. To preserve the old stems, however, for three or four years, is a very different affair. It so happens that the bark of the old wood is very susceptible of injury from frost and damp air conjoined, and, of course, any scheme for averting mischief of the kind must provide against these. They keep best in any ordinaryinery, or, indeed, any house where the thermometer never sinks below 24 degrees, and where the air is generally dry. In such structures they may be kept going far years, the chief danger being wet at the collar, and, doubtless, as they get older the plan of potting beaths, known as McNab's plan, would answer, and for similar reasons. This our gardening readers doubtless know, consists in raising the old ball above the level of the rim of the pot. With these observations we for the present conclude.

THE YOUNG GARDENER'S MONTHLY REMEMBRANCE.

We have heard so many complaints against those dry calendars which are so highly sententious in their character, or so abstracted as merely to create desires without offering a single suggestion as to how to satisfy them, that we purpose taking, monthly, a sort of middle course, pointing not only to the chief features in the succeeding month's policy, but also offering hints as to economical and certain modes of carrying out the objects recommended. Our readers will doubtless readily appreciate the importance of what is termed grouping subjects, so as to save the reader time, and that bewilderment which is apt to occur through a multitude of trifles completely disjointed through mere alphabetical arrangement. Thus, to give an instance, old calendars will, in the months of March and April, talk of sowing basil, habn, savory, marjoram, &c., and of planting slips of or dividing other herbs; correct enough in its own nature to be sure, but (from each taking its alphabetical position) scattered so widely, that all the value arising from a classification as to affinities or identity in habit is lost.

Whatever calendar matter, therefore, we may give weekly, or whatever comments on popular subjects; we shall offer at the close of each month a condensed paper under such title as we have prefixed these remarks with. The new year is at hand, and with it doubtless will come that elasticity of purpose which the desire to advance, in common with other classes of society, naturally raises in the feelings of the lovers of horticulture. As one of the chief matters connected with future cultural proceedings, we would refer to the deep digging or trenching of all vacant ground, not even forgetting the vacant flower-beds. The benefits derivable from deep digging are universally recognised in these times. Ridging, of course, exposes the greatest degree of surface to the ameliorating influences of frost, at once humbling stubborn soils, destroying insects, and enabling the spring sower or planter to proceed in his operations with ease. Draining—without which water-logged soils are inert, or worse, be their inherent quality what it may—must be attended to at some period between November and February. Rotations of crops, or a scheme for the ensuing year, should have early attention; without this we are, as it were, groping in the dark. The manure or compost heaps must not be forgotten; the management and appropriation of these will of course depend on the course marked out in the rotation scheme in conjunction with the requirements of the pleasure-ground, the flower-garden, and the potting-shed.

But, whilst chatting over the more useful, let us not pass by the ornamentals. We must keep a future flower-garden in our eye, not forget the plant-house or conservatory, and see that the ladies of the household have something for the drawing-room and the spring bouquet. What are termed forced flowers must have attention of a peculiar kind.

Establishments differ, both as to wants and resources; but, as we cannot find space to particularise, we must skip lightly over such matters as are most generally useful. Every resource at command must be enlisted in this object, and we need scarcely observe that light is one primary affair, with a pretty good command of heat. It is absolutely essential that the cultivator be at all times able to command a thermometer of fifty degrees under adverse circumstances. About other details connected with this interesting branch of the gardener's art the readers of THE FIELD may consult our weekly advice.

During the early part of January the force of encumbers, melons, potatoes, kidney-beans, asparagus, sea-kale, &c.—any or all of these in dang-beds—takes care to provide a good body of fermenting material in due time; and, for this purpose, dung and tree-leaves, nearly equal parts, and well fermented, is not excelled by any heating material.

The preservation of ice, too, must not be forgotten, and it is well for those who cannot command an ice-house to know, that ice may be kept for many months in a conical heap; the only conditions being a high and dry spot, having the screen of a tree or two on the south side; and that the ice, well broken, be thatched over quite two feet in thickness.

In the course of the month, and during hard weather, the far-seeing gardener provides materials for the ensuing summer for training, staking, and other gardening operations. As matters under this head we may point to flower-sticks, shreds, bast, nails, trellises, &c. &c. Basket-making and besoms, or brooms, must be thought of, and the potting-shed will require a thorough examination; all dirty garden-pots or other vessels cleaned; crocks, charcoal, and other drainage materials broken, riddled, and sorted; and hooks or pegs cut and bundled.

The compost yard will require that all superfluous water from rain, snow, &c., be got away speedily, and compost already mixed, turned when frozen hard, in order to destroy the eggs of snails, slugs, wire worms, or other insects, as also to ameliorate them in regard of their mechanical texture.

To conclude, let us remind our readers of the propriety of providing protecting materials for their fruit-trees, as also pea-sticks, fir-boughs, and such other matters. The gardener thus provided, and with his eye well fixed on the prime features of the opening spring, will commence operations with a well-grounded confidence, and be able to carry them out with firmness and precision, and, consequently, expect a good share of success.

THE GARDENER.

ROSES: THEIR PROPAGATION, &C.

We much fear that many persons are deterred from indulging in an extended culture of this queen of flowers from an ignorance of the great facility with which roses may be propagated. The following plain advice, by "An Amateur," is so useful, that we give the extract entire:—

The following plan for the propagation of the rose I have practised with success:—In the first week in September I go over the rose trees, and thin out the shoots of struggling growth; for any wood that is pretty well ripened will make excellent cuttings. When I have collected a sufficient quantity I make them into cuttings about four or five inches long, being careful to cut them close to a bud, or else to leave a small piece of the old wood forming a heel to the cutting: either way will succeed. I have found three-year-old wood croit roots as freely as that which was only one year old. In making the cuttings I remove the leaves from such parts only as will be inserted in the ground, and then plant them in a north or east border, in rows one foot asunder and six inches apart in the row, and deep enough to leave about two buds above the surface; the soil is trodden close about them. They require no other care but to be kept free from weeds; and will be found to be well rooted by the following autumn, and may then be planted out where required. I have struck them by thousands in this way, and never found the plan to fail. For the more tender and delicate sorts I have practised the following method: I make up a gentle hotbed of leaves, old hotbed linings, &c., and prepare the cuttings in the same way, and at the same time as the others. I take care to have ready a quantity of pots prepared first with two inches of good drainage, and then filled up to within two or three inches of the rim with good rough sandy loam, and the remaining part with pure silver sand. The cuttings are then planted in the sand, so as to rest upon the soil underneath; a garden frame is placed on the hotbed, and the pots filled with cuttings are plunged to the rim in the bed; they then receive a gentle watering to settle the sand about them, and all is finished. It is necessary to give all the air possible in fine weather, and only to draw up the light in frosty or wet weather; there will be no linings required in the winter, as they only want a slight heat for the first two or three weeks. By the following March they will be rooted, when they should be potted off singly in small pots, and placed in a close cold frame until they have taken with the pots.

Our informant speaks of "early in September," and, doubtless, a capital time; but, where late perpetual and others are required to blossom liberally in the autumn, cultivators are scarcely disposed to abstract cuttings from them at that early period. It is proper to know that cuttings may be made up to the early part of November. Another point deserves attention: those who put out cuttings in September or October, desirous of their flowering during the succeeding autumn, may insert their cuttings in pots, and plunge the pots in a sheltered and shady border until the beginning of February, when, if they are removed to a frame possessing a bottom heat, and plunged in a shady part, they will root speedily, and may, with high culture, become charming little bushes by July, and produce a respectable bloom through the autumn months. It is not every kind, however, which will give this amount of satisfaction; they must be naturally free bloomers, and possess much of the really perpetual character about them. Without staying to give anything like a full solution, we may point to a few old kinds, which we have known to prove very useful in this way:—Phoenix, Géant des batailles, Pierre de St. Cyr, Standard of Marengo, Mrs. Bosanquet, Rose du Roi, Fellenberg, Baronne Prevost, Madame Desprez, Aimé Vibert, &c. &c. All that is requisite is a moist liberal soil, highly manured, and possessing a proportion of what is termed sound loam, slightly adhesive, and, of course, high in manurial principles. This, with such attention as precludes any serious attacks from the rose aphids, or other insects, will, beyond doubt, give satisfaction.

Roses being such highly-popular flowers, we shall feel it a duty to turn frequently to points in their culture.

ROTATION OF CROPS.

The following extract will serve to show forth the ideas attached to this subject by our brave Gallican neighbours. It is well now and then to compare notes, and endeavour to draw useful inferences.

The principles of rotating crops are laid down thus in the Cours Complet d'Agriculture:—1st. Every plant exhausts the soil. 2nd. All plants do not exhaust the soil equally. 3rd. Plants of different kinds do not exhaust the soil in the same manner. 4th. All plants do not restore to the soil the same quantity, nor the same quality of manure. 5th. All plants are not equally favourable to the growth of weeds. From these fundamental principles the following conclusions may be drawn, viz.:—1st. However well a soil may be prepared, it cannot long nourish crops of the same kind in succession, without becoming exhausted. 2nd. Every crop impoverishes a soil more or less, as more or less is restored to the soil by the plant cultivated. 3rd. Perpendicular rooting plants, and such as root horizontally, should succeed each other. 4th. Plants of the same kind should not return too frequent in rotation. 5th. Two plants favourable to the growth of weeds should not succeed each other. 6th. Such plants as eminently exhaust the soil, as the grain and oil plants, should only be sown when the land is in high condition. 7th. In proportion as a soil is found to exhaust itself by successive crops, plants which are least exhausting ought to be cultivated.

We pass by the "fundamental principles," as being truisms; the "conclusions," however, may be examined with perhaps some benefit. And, first, about the continuation of crops of the same kind in succession. We have always found it perfectly true in practice; but such is the rage for novelty, or the desire to sift every previous opinion, that long-established notions have been contravened in some quarters on this head. Whilst, however, we keep our minds open to the accession of facts, although they may antagonise what are called settled opinions, let us at the same time consider them as simply speculative until they attain more breadth. With the third corollary we cordially agree; it is a mere common-sense affair. The same of No. 4; which, of course, refers to the first conclusion. And here we may fairly ask those who assume to grow wheat and other matters on the same soil for years in succession, whether wheat is an exception to this rule? or, if they will, whether the rule may be recognised? This we know in gardening matters, that to take one family only—that termed "Cabbage Worts," which contains almost all of what are termed greens, from a bad cabbage up to a good cauliflower—all past practice repudiates the idea of several crops in succession. To be sure we get over the difficulty—although limpingly—by a high course of manuring, deep digging, &c.; but, be it remembered, these are rather expensive proceedings, as times go. Corollary 5th is eminently agricultural in its bearings, in some portions of this kingdom at least; whether scientific or not, it is at least economic in its tendencies as to the labour question. The seventh corollary, according to British notions, brings us to the idea of leys, or "rest," as it is termed, and this, by engendering a fresh amount of organic matter in the soil, though by a slow process, enables the owner to recommence his rotations.

With these remarks, we respectfully suggest that such extracts are worthy of grave consideration.

CHINESE YAMS.

Some of our readers have doubtless noticed an advertisement in the papers of a tuber under the name Dioscorea japonica; now it appears to be changed to D. batatas. Mr. Henderson, of Kingskerwell, in South Devon, is the advertiser, and is said to possess the whole of the saleable stock. Certainly anything in the shape of a long-keeping tuber, and eatable, is worthy of consideration, and we should be sorry by any remark to stifle a desire for experimenting upon new things; bearing in mind how we came by our Swede turnips, mangel wurzel, potatoes, &c. To advertise roots, however, of a soapy texture when cooked, as likely to supersede the potato, is a bold stroke. As we think it a duty to place any valuable facts which may come to hand as soon as possible before the readers of THE FIELD, we beg to offer the following extract from, it appears, a communication made by M. Pépin to the Imperial and Central Agricultural Society of France; it records experiments as to this yam made by himself:—

An advertisement having appeared in our columns respecting a new esculent root called Dioscorea japonica, it seems desirable to state what has up to the present time been ascertained respecting the plant. In the Gardener's Chronicle for the 22nd of July last, an account was given of a newly introduced hardy Chinese yam called Dioscorea batatas, by Prof. Decaisne, which is identical with this Dioscorea japonica, a name that, according to M. Decaisne, belongs to a very different species, and must therefore be abandoned.

Since the appearance of the account alluded to, a couple of plants were received by the Horticultural Society, and placed under the care of Mr. Thompson, who however failed in inducing them to form tubers. Others have been more successful, especially M. Pépin, who in a late communication to the Imperial and Central Agricultural Society of France, gives the following interesting account of his experiments:—

"This plant arrived in a very bad state, nearly all the roots having been destroyed by the fermentation which had taken place in the box during the voyage.

"After the pieces of the roots which were sound had been clean and dried for three days, they were planted in well-drained pots filled with sandy peat, mixed with about one-fifth of rotten dung so far decomposed as to be reduced to the state of mould. The pots were plunged in a hotbed, not covered by a frame, in order that vegetation might be accelerated by a gentle and steady bottom-heat; at the same time water was very sparingly given.

"At the end of a fortnight, by the aid of this artificial heat, fibrils and young stems had been developed. The plants were then taken out of the pots and planted in the open ground, in the end of May; a few were planted on an exhausted hotbed, in order that they might take root more readily, and produce a greater number of roots and stems. These means succeeded perfectly well, and we were enabled to preserve and propagate the plant. The roots taken up in the autumn of 1850 were put into a cellar where the frost could not reach them; and, having kept well through the winter, they were planted out in the spring of 1851, in well pulverised, deep garden soil. The growth of the plants was very vigorous, and the roots attained a large size; one of them, measured in the autumn of 1851, was about three feet in length; its form was cylindrical and tapering.

"The stems of this plant wither every year in the end of October. The first year they were cut off soon after, and the roots taken up under the impression that they had been injured by frost. The roots were in a growing state when taken up, and this led me to suppose that they might have been left in the ground till the end of November, and that they would have attained a still greater size. I have observed, up to the present time, that the tubers were simple, and had no tendency to ramify; but I have also seen two together, of equal size, that grew from the lower part of the terminal shoot, and had their origin from the same point.

"In August, 1851, before the stems of that year were fully matured, some young shoots were taken for cuttings. They were cut in lengths of between 4 and 5 inches, and horizontally below an eye. They were inserted in pots filled with peat, and placed on bottom-heat in a hot-house, covering them for several days with a bell-glass, so as to completely exclude the air. These cuttings succeeded perfectly well. At the end of a month they had made a sufficient quantity of roots to admit of their being potted singly in 3-inch pots. They were kept in a hot-house, where they continued to grow till December. They had then pushed to the length of from 12 to 14 inches. Up to the present time cuttings made during summer from the herbaceous shoots have only yielded tubers after the lapse of from 14 to 16 months; but those raised from pieces of the roots produced tubers which could be used in the same year.

"It was doubtful whether the roots of this plant would withstand our winters, although some small pieces that were left in the soil when the roots were taken up in 1852 remained alive all winter, and made shoots 13 to 19 inches in length during the ensuing summer; and the roots of one of these plants were as much as 14 inches deep. The roots which remained in the ground throughout the winter pushed their shoots about the 15th or 20th of April; those roots, on the other hand, which were planted in April did not exhibit shoots till the end of May, or more frequently not till the beginning of June. There is no longer any doubt as to the hardiness of the plants; they have withstood, as I have already stated, the 25° of frost which we have had this winter, and when taken up the skin was smooth and fresh, and the roots altogether were in a sound state, as M. Brongniart, who was present, can testify.

"I preserved a root in a cellar from October, 1852, to the 20th May, 1853, without any appearance of the development of shoots. It was unchanged, and had not lost weight. I think the tubers may be kept nearly throughout the year, which is not the case with either the common or the sweet potato.

"In June, 1853, after having been seven months out of the ground, a root of this plant was analysed, in order to ascertain the amount of nutritive matter which it contained. The following was the result in 100 parts:—

Water	70.40
Starch	18.30
Alkaline phosphates (ashes)	0.78
Albuminous matter (a large quantity), saccharine matter (trace), cellulose, isomeric substances, &c.	10.52
	100.00

"The proportion of starch was determined with the greatest possible care, but the quantity analysed was very small (163 grains); it would therefore be necessary to repeat the analysis with a greater quantity of root.

"In a few years we shall know to what extent the roots left in the ground will acquire weight and bulk, and how long they may remain in the soil without deterioration of quality. We know, however, that a tuber taken up at the end of three years had its cellular tissue healthy to the centre, where it was also neither hard nor woody.

"From these facts I believe that this plant will be admitted among our cultivated tuberous species, and I am also led to conclude that it will be useful in an agricultural point of view, inasmuch as it remains several years in the ground like the Jerusalem artichoke, requiring after planting little or no cultivation, and finally that it will furnish, at all seasons of the year, an aliment within the reach of every one."

This report appears to establish the fact that the roots of the Chinese yam are hardy and productive enough for garden cultivation. Of their quality we can speak from personal knowledge, a portion of a full-grown tuber having been obligingly sent us by Mr. J. Henderson, Kingskerwell, South Devon, in whose hands, we understand, is the whole saleable stock of the plant. Boiled like a potato it proved extremely good, with rather a nutty taste, but it did not become mealy, although the potatoes which were cooked with it were perfectly so; from which we infer that the roots require to be either steamed or roasted, if to be brought to table in perfection. At all events, it is certain that the Chinese yam belongs to the first class of garden root crops. Experience only will teach the best way of cooking it, and, we may add, of cultivating it also. Upon the latter important subject we have the following practical directions from Mr. Henderson:—

"The manner in which the Chinese cultivate it is extremely simple. The earth is first formed into ridges, when small tubers, or portions of large ones, are planted on the top, at about three feet apart; after the plants have attained a little strength, the shoots are spread over the sides of the ridges and pegged down at the leaf end, six or eight inches from each other (care being taken to cover the joints or parts pegged down with a portion of earth), when they soon strike root and throw out tubers; by this means, immense quantities of roots, of the size of early-framed kidney potatoes, are raised on a comparatively small piece of ground. The above is the ordinary Chinese mode of culture; but to obtain them of a large size, small tubers, or portions, are planted on ridges, from ten inches to one foot apart, and the plants are allowed to grow freely till late in the autumn, when the foliage is cut away and dried, or partially dried, and given to cattle; the tubers by this means attain on an average one pound and upwards in weight. The produce, when the ground is required for other purposes, is taken up and stored away for the winter and spring; and it seems a peculiarity in this root, if exposed to the frost, it is not injured by it, nor does it have any inclination for sprouting till the natural season for planting."

Mr. Henderson further states:—

"That he finds a much quicker way of procuring a stock of young tubers for seed by growing them in a cold frame, or on a gentle hotbed, and taking the cuttings as soon as they appear; it being only necessary to cut off a leaf, with a small piece of wood without a joint, which is inserted in the mould (ordinary cutting mould) to the leaf—a pot of six inches diameter would contain about fifty cuttings—the pots should then be placed in a gentle heat, and kept close, either by means of bell-glasses or otherwise. Before the cuttings strike root they will throw out small tubers on the surface of the mould (similar to those sent out to the public); as soon as they are the size of a pea they should be hardened off, and planted out thickly in the open ground, when many of the large ones will be fit for use the same season, if required. A good gardener, with a stock of fifty small tubers, ought to obtain from two to three thousand roots fit for the next year's seed."

There can be no doubt that the plant deserves the immediate and serious attention of all gentlemen's gardeners.—From the Gardener's Chronicle.

SEEDLING FLOWERS.

[We shall be happy to receive blazons of any choice seedlings of florist flowers, and will give our opinion candidly as to their merits. They should be packed in boxes, and surrounded by dampened straw paper. The boxes should be stout, so as not to be crushed in transit through the Post-office. The postage must be paid, and packets should be addressed to the FIELD OFFICE, River House, 2 to 5, FORT ST., Strand, London.—Ed.]

TRADE CATALOGUES.

[We shall be happy to receive catalogues from the trade, and they shall be noticed in our columns, and extracts will be made if deserving the attention of the general reader.—EDITH.]

GARDEN NEWS.

I have had some experience of the effects of such a soil as "Beta's" on apple and pear trees; and I would recommend him to make the holes for the trees about ten or twelve feet wide and eighteen inches deep, and then to concrete the bottom well with lime and gravel about six inches deep; or if lime-riddings, such as are rejected by bricklayers, can be procured, they will answer equally well, taking care to water and ram them well, as the firmer the concrete is put together the more certain is the attainment of the object in view, viz., the preventing of the roots from descending into the subsoil, which would cause canker.—Gardener's Chronicle.—The present is an excellent time for applying strong liquid manure to roses. It is astonishing how vigorous even the weaker growing varieties will become if treated with a liberal allowance of strong liquid manure, made with night-soil, and applied annually at about this season. This may be used again in spring, diluting it to about the consistency of thin paint, and giving each plant from two to three gallons.—A pear tree of the jargonelle species, growing on a farm of Mr. Purge, of Hill Land, Much Cowarne, has this year produced three crops. The first was gathered at the ordinary time (June); at Midsummer the tree was again full in bloom, the fruit being ripe shortly before Michaelmas, when the tree was for the third time in blossom. The first and second crops were exceedingly fine, but the last produced only small shrivelled-up fruit.—Mr. Frederick Brewer, late foreman at Messrs. Lucombe and Pince's nursery, has received a certificate of merit from the Horticultural Society, for an ingenious mat-making machine. Mr. Brewer says the rushes which grow in the Devonshire marshes are well suited for these mats, and remunerative employment might thus be afforded to many poor families.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PANPUS GRASS.—I got a plant of this in July, 1853, not rooted separately, and I was afraid that it would not take with the ground before winter. It, however, did so, and stood out all last winter (it was like a small leek when I got it), and it has grown during the summer to a good-sized bunch with leaves about three feet long, and now (Dec. 12) quite green. There were two or three stems like flower-stems, but being a young plant they did not come to anything. I intend to propagate it next season.—John Hutchison, Monyragh, Backan, north-east of Aberdeenshire.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

Many thanks for your reply to my query in your last number. I trouble you again. Be good enough to recommend me a practical work on gardening; one well adapted to initiate the tyro, for such I am, and about to inhabit a suburban villa with a small garden, and wish to check and direct a common, and, of course, prejudiced gardener, in the cultivation of vegetables, fruit trees (wall and standard), and a few flowers; it must contain, also, something about the greenhouse and frames—in fact, a good general work. The articles in your esteemed paper, under the head of "The Garden," &c., will be a great assistance; but they, of course, cannot meet all my present wants. They will be of more use to me as I advance and gain experience. Grant the request, and you will oblige, yours truly, C. W.

[Mrs. London's "Flower Garden" is an excellent little work.—ED. FIELD.]

THE FARM.

At this festive season, when farming pursuits are often retarded by frost and snow, or are almost forgotten in the more exciting pastimes of hunting and shooting, it must be a source of gratification to us amidst our recreations—when war is thinning the ranks abroad, and when a terrific pestilence is sweeping over the rocks and glens of the Crimea—to admire the heroic bravery of the allied forces, and to hope the burly rounds of the Prince's prize oxen may arrive in time to gladden hearts, and recall happy reminiscences of ancient halls, hearths, and homesteads. During the Christmas week London is as a tale that is told. How picturesquely wild is a scene in the provinces on a fine frosty morning, as you look over the fertile vale; from the vast area of down which overhangs it a small straggling village or two may be seen in the distance, with their old ivy-clad towers and fine meadows nourished by the meandering Stour. A narrow line of chalk-road, fringed with fir plantations, is seen for miles over the hills. It was the far-famed Great Western mail-road in the palmy days of coaching, when mails were dug out of snow-drifts with wonderful dispatch, or dragged by the plough-teams to the nearest public, and, long before the rail superseded the road, whirling us to our ancient home, the Argos of Dorsetshire. But we must leave Nature's romance for London life realities; the rugged hills for crowded cities; the sovereignty of wealth for the daily toil of labour; the lowing of kine for the eavillings of cabmen and the crowding of omnibuses. Still we sigh for green fields and pastures new, by which, on all sides, we have been surrounded.

The price of all kinds of grain remains pretty much the same as last week. Farmers continue to supply the markets pretty freely, but the deliveries have not been quite so liberal as last week. The importations from America have very much decreased this year, owing to the failure of the wheat and Indian meal and rye crops in many of the States. During the war the ports of Odessa and Galatz have been closed, and as France is a buyer here, we have drawn more largely than usual on Egypt and Syria, and other countries where the high price of corn has tempted them to sell. Labour is scarce, and wages have considerably advanced in some of the midland and eastern districts, and, owing to the abundance of the crop of 1854 over 1853, which was a very poor one, the farmer, who has the trade in his hands, should not reap all the advantages of high prices, but, on the live and let live principle, assist the labourer as much as he is able. A labourer with anything like a family requires a bushel of flour per week, the price of which is in many places 13s. 4d., and as the highest price of labour is only 12s. per week, and in many districts much lower, he deserves, and he ought to be, as well off as when the loaf was 4d. and wages 8s. He then had bread enough to spare; but now, with the loaf at 9d., he can hardly purchase it, putting aside the other commodities he wants during the week. As the weather has been of late particularly favourable for farming operations, and a much larger breadth of land sown this year than usual, and as corn well sown is half grown, let us hope prices may be better adjusted to relieve the wants of the labourers, and that during the next year, swords may be turned into ploughshares, an honourable peace proclaimed, which may have the effect of allowing us to use corn at a reasonable price, instead of a starving one to the consumer at the present time, and that our brave army may return to their peaceful homes, crowned with laurels, from fighting for truth and justice against a desperate and a common foe.

FARMING PROSPECTS. THE CAPABILITIES OF DIFFERENT SOILS.

(From our Correspondent.)

Most counties in England vary in their different peculiarities of soils, as a glance at a good geological map of the British Isles will at once show. In districts—even in parishes—approximating each other—farms differ most materially in soil and produce. We find good loamy land on one farm, stiff clays on another—as those on the red sandstone—light lands on a third, distinguished by certain peculiarities, such as porosity, friability, and looseness of texture, offering little resistance to the implements employed in cultivating them, and freedom from surface and stagnant water, until we come to the thin, chalky soils, of light scotts, situate on the Cotswold Hills in Gloucestershire, and which are found also to prevail in Dorsetshire, Wiltshire, part of Buckinghamshire, Northamptonshire, part of Lincolnshire, and so on, to the wolds of Yorkshire; but beyond this point it is not to be found in England, and is altogether unknown in Scotland. Wheat grows best in Kent, Essex, Lincolnshire, and some few favoured counties; whilst the barley and turnip lands are Norfolk, Suffolk, Northamptonshire, Cambridgeshire, Huntingdonshire, and Hertfordshire. The old turf lands, as I have already stated, suit cattle better and fatten them quicker than any other. The object of agricultural labour is to raise on any given space the greatest quantity of any kind of grain or vegetable, regard being had to the quality of the produce, at the least amount of expenditure, so as to secure success. This can only be effected by a proper outlay of capital, say £10 to £12 per acre, according to circumstances; but if you are to carry out subterranean irrigation, and all the modern improvements, you will want more, irrespective of landlord's improvements. The land should then be dug, forked, or ploughed, rolled, and harrowed, good rotted manure being laid on at the last moment, so as to prevent the saline particles from being dried up, instead of being washed by the rains into the earth. Around London the market gardeners use an immense quantity of night-soil with the manure, in a solid rather than in a liquid form, as recommended by Mr. Mechi. It generally remains on large and well managed premises a year at least, to solidify, and is then mixed up with road stuff and stable dung rotted, at the rate of twenty loads to the acre; and the market gardeners prefer it to our town sewage as regards agricultural fertilization.

Every genus of plant requires, for its perfect growth and fruitfulness, some particular principle or ingredient to be derived from the soil. Hence the land, when it has raised and supplied to a crop all that it possessed of that necessary principle, is no longer capable of nourishing it, but may be made capable of feeding some other crop, which draws another source of food from the soil, which without the aid of tillage would become barren. The earth must then be moved often, in order to bring fresh portions of it to the surface, and, as in young plants, the surface earth is loosened, in order to allow the sun to attract moisture to the roots, all particles in turn will become subject to atmospheric changes, and the fertility of the soil renewed by supplying other elements of nutrition, which the preceding crops have exhausted. The universal ingredients of plants—says Dr. Playfair—are bases: potash, soda, lime, magnesia, peroxide of iron, oxide of magnesia, and alumina; the acids are—silica acid, phosphoric acid, sulphuric acid, carbonic acid, chlorine, iodine, and bromine. Plants generally contain most of these ingredients, but in very different proportions. The silica plants are wheat straw, barley, and rye straw; the lime plants, pea straw, potatoe haulm, sainfoin, and meadow clover; the potash plants are maize straw, turnips, beetroot, and potatoes. The determination of the precise ingredients belongs to chemistry, but there are many variations in the qualities of apparently similarly constituted soils which geology, unassisted, can explain. By the aid of these sciences the quality of the soil for agricultural purposes is determined with considerable precision. The earth being surrounded by an atmosphere of organic matter, as well as oxygen, nitrogen, carbonic acid, and watery vapour, acts upon these bases (for instance, the lifting of a limestone rock after frost is a case in point), and there is a constant transformation from organic into inorganic elements. Plants being composed of organic and inorganic constituents, that which escapes during combustion being the organic portion, whilst that which remains in the ashes is the inorganic matter; the organic constituent arising from the atmosphere, the inorganic from the soil. The plants, by their roots, take up food from the soil, and often the very food which the soil has taken up by its power of absorption from the atmosphere, and which is increased by separating the particles of which it is composed. I hope I have made myself understood. I had great pleasure in reading the lectures of Dr. Playfair, delivered before the Royal Agricultural Society, some years ago, as also Dr. Ryan's lectures on agricultural chemistry. Since that time the rapid strides science has made in this country has awakened the public mind into action, and, greatly owing to the laudable exertions of such men as Messrs. Mechi, Huxtable, Hewitt, Davis, Laves, and others, the art of agriculture has been elevated, and now takes its stand among the other arts and sciences. We have an Agricultural College at Cirencester, exceedingly well conducted, and the only wonder is that they should be so few and far between. Surely there is room for another in the Eastern Counties; say, for instance, in Colchester, a town situate in a good farming district and easily approachable by railways. Lectures are now given annually, I believe, at the Society of Arts during the Christmas Cattle Show week. Lectures, we know, have long been well attended in the Universities of Edinburgh and Glasgow; and in the University of Gießen, in Prussia, Leibig gave his valuable lectures to admiring and crowded audiences. Farmers' clubs and local agricultural societies are now not without men of eminence belonging to them, for the purpose of expounding the nature and properties of organic chemistry, and of detecting the impurities mixed up with our food in manures, as also for the purpose of showing the hopeless absurdity of recommending any specific manure for a particular crop without a thorough knowledge of the capabilities of soils, the consti-tents of soils, and the ingredients of plants; so that we hope, in time, there may be hardly a country gentleman, or a single farmer, ignorant of the more simple stimulants to agriculture and the feeding of stock.

Farmers' Club House,

39, New Bridge Street, Blackfriars.

THE LAND. DRAINAGE.

(From a Correspondent.)

We propose directing our readers' attention to the very important subject of drainage, at the same time showing its intimate connection with seed sowing, and its great effects on the results of an abundant harvest. Much has lately been said and written by eminently-practical agriculturists on the merits of deep or shallow drainage; and as we intend only to show the advantages to be derived from one mode, namely, deep drains, we must not be understood to be partial, and wishful of inaugurating a similar agitation to that which has, and still continues, to rage between civil engineers on the respective merits of pipe or brick drains, &c. Our duty is entirely confined to showing the British farmer the great advantages of deep drains in clayey and other soils found in our geological formations. Where deep drains are used, the actual expense of each drain is, of course, increased with its depth; but, from the fact of fewer drains being required, that is, the drains being placed at much greater distances apart, considerable saving ensues in draining a fixed area of ground. The deep drains possess the following further advantages:—the water penetrating through a deeper filtering strata, is entirely freed from the finer and richer particles of manure it imbibes and incorporates, by affinity and otherwise, with itself, thus saving loss of nutriment—intended for the crops planted. Again, less chance of impediments or disarrangement arises, from the roots of trees, destruction by animals, frost, and divers other causes, to which shallow drains are liable. The difference also of the pressure on the surface gradually, though imperceptibly, increases with the depth, and tends to produce an atmospheric or syphon-like pressure, and consequently acts with considerable force to drive the water into the cavity of the drain, and thus facilitate its speedy escape. The vigour of plants is greatly increased, more particularly grain, as the straw of wheat will be generally found of a corresponding length to its root, which is easily demonstrated by trial. It is even apparent to the eye. In damp undrained land, if the season is wet, the straw is short and dark green, and the roots are short also, because the damp nature of the ground prevents them descending into it; they requiring air for the purpose of vitality like ourselves, which, in this case, is unattainable. In the same soil, during a dry season, the straw will grow high and slender, corresponding with the roots, which can descend and receive a copious supply of air from the particles of the soil being open and divided; yet, for the want of the chemical results produced by rain, it is not a fine or robust crop. Deep drainage effects both these objects in any season, if not carried to such an extent that the cubical contents of the soil above and around are not too great for the dimensions of the pipe to drain the excess of moisture from it. Thus, in all cases, is an indispensable condition; for we might as well propose to drain London with a twelve-inch pipe, as to use the same diameter of pipe at a depth of three feet as at nine feet. It will have come under the notice of our readers, the much superior quality and appearance of wheat grown on a natural fall, or on the edge of a declivity: this arises principally from the roots being enabled to penetrate a rich and light loam, well-drained from the angular surface of the ground, instead of penetrating a compact clay, highly impregnated with water and earthy salts. The effects above named have, in nine cases out of ten, raised the cry that the seed sown was bad, whereas the vitality of a seed is unattainable. The wheat which was buried with the ancient Egyptians has been sown, after 3,000 years, in this country with the most gratifying results (being exhumed with the bodies buried in the Pyramids). It was placed there as emblematic of eternity, from its indestructible nature. Again, let the plough tear up a dry and naturally-drained common, far removed from all weeds, perhaps not disturbed since the flood, and perfect virgin soil, immediately its surface will be covered with weeds, many of which were not known in the district before. Here, then, we have a convincing fact of the vitality of seed, and the folly of calling seed purchased bad because it fails to grow, when we ought to look for the cause in the damp soil, which decomposes the starch-like germ so soon as it vegetates in the parent seed.

It will, therefore, readily be seen, from the brief remarks we have made, that the crop depends upon the seed being placed in dry and suitable soil, possessed of sufficient nutriment to feed and produce the plant, and freed from damp to a depth sufficient for the purpose of the growth of the roots. When these indispensable conditions have been proved to demonstration, then, and then only, shall we be able to secure good crops. Many farmers, however, detract from the result named, when the above conditions are fulfilled, by sowing the grain so thick that the soil does not possess sufficient nutriment to support the numerous plants, and the air also is unable to circulate freely through them. The result of a crowded room, with no other than the ordinary ventilation, and no more provisions than what are consumed by the few usual occupants, will very pointedly illustrate the effects of thick sowing—which is corn in a crowd instead of human beings. Insects also increase much faster under such circumstances, as the mite is prevented washing them away, or the wind blowing them off. Thus we get smut and a hundred other abominations. Wheat set at nine inches or a foot apart, two seeds being placed in each hole, will produce twelve to twenty strong straws and a more abundant yield. Thus it will be seen how much depends on deep and effectual drainage, and that one drain is not as good as another, for the many reasons stated. We regret that diminished space necessitates our quitting this truly interesting and important subject, which we trust at some future day to renew, and endorse by the experience and approval of our corn-growing readers.

H. B. H., C.E.

SOME PRACTICAL HINTS.—The following excellent advice from a practical farmer in Wales has been addressed to a gentleman who had made some inquiries of him. His suggestions deserve the widest circulation.

Dear Sir,—Your letter I duly received. The point on which you write relating to agriculture is one of immense importance. Your opinion is exactly my own, and from experiments made by myself and other farmers in the county of Roxburgh, it was found that cleaning lands in autumn was a great deteriorating of the soil. Cleaning lands in autumn, scarifying, collecting, carting off or burning off the stubbles and other weeds, as some do, not only robs the land of a vast extent of valuable manure, but, when harrowed and laid down in a flat state, smother and destroys that property so essential for the vegetating of the truer seed of the turnip-plant. As you well know, it was my practice in Scotland, in preparing land for the turnip crop, to plough deep in autumn, and, as soon after the corn was removed from the land as possible, turning down stubbles and other vegetable plants to decompose below ground during the winter months, at a depth not less than ten or twelve inches, according to the nature of the soil, thereby keeping the land open, allowing the frosts and storms of winter blasts, Nature's grand pestleisers, to act powerfully and effectually upon it; and since I came to this country I have seen nothing as yet to make me alter the system which I so long successfully practised when conducting the management of the extensive farm of Newton, upon the banks of the Teviot. Early and deep ploughing lands in autumn, however foul, are cleared with more facility in spring than autumn; the action of winter's stormy tide having so meliorated and loosened the ground that all squinch and weeds that have not disappeared part freely from the soil with light labour, and which may be either burned or carted off as weather will permit. No one knows better than you the advantage of a good turnip crop to the farmer; it enables him to double his manure by keeping an extra number of cattle in the stalls and yards, and sheep in the fields, thereby enriching the fertility of his lands in a very great degree. Deep cultivation affords undeniable proofs of the productive powers of the soil even of the poorest class; and it is by following such a system, with largely increased supplies of manure and combined agricultural science, that landlord, tenant, and increasing population of this country are to be benefitted. The fattening of cattle too, in supplying the market with beef, is a matter much to be noticed, and much depends on the system of management in the feeding department, both as to quantity and quality of that article; and the principal points to be observed are, to see that beasts put in to feed be well chosen, thriving, and hearty; that the yards, stalls, and boxes are comfortable and well sheltered. Feeding cattle in yards is somewhat objectionable—the stronger ones rob the weaker; they cannot be kept sufficiently warm, and the manure exposed too much to the inclemency of the weather. In properly constructed boxes, cattle can be kept comfortable, and fed to more advantage in point of economy. Those fed in stalls get stiff in their joints, pained in the legs, and greatly retard the laying on of beef. Hours of feeding must be pointedly attended, the cattle provided with a littering of clean straw morning and night, and properly carried once a day. These necessary rules being promptly executed will add greatly to the general improvement of feeding cattle in boxes, stalls, or yards. Men whose practice has been extensive, and who have been engaged in and acquired knowledge from results of experimental proceedings, are able far to judge of the superiority of systems to be adapted in the farming of lands and other routine business of the farm than those merely possessing ideas of a theoretical nature, and, as you say very properly in your excellent letter, that such individuals are calculated to do much damage to the cause of agricultural improvement.—I am, dear Sir, yours faithfully, Cotwall, 21st October, 1854. W. THOMSON.

LEASES.—The Duke of Richmond, in the chair of the Smithfield club last week, uttered the following sensible remarks on the subject of leases:—

After visiting the north and coming to the south of England, he must say he was greatly surprised at the reluctance evinced by the tenant-farmers to accept leases. That, he thought, was a palpable mistake; and he hoped the time would soon arrive when they would all ask for leases. On these questions he always looked at what he should do if he were a tenant-farmer himself; and if he were a tenant-farmer, with the requisite capital, he should certainly put aside much of the feeling which his own tenant entertained. For in Sussex it so happened that he had not a single tenant who held under a lease. "No," they said, "we have never yet had a lease, and we don't think a lease necessary, for we do not suppose you will ever do anything else than what is just towards us." Well, that was a very pretty compliment, undoubtedly; but if he were a tenant-farmer in the possession of a good capital, he would never consent to lay it out upon any man's land without some sort of security. Indeed, he had no hesitation in saying that no prudent man would do so. This was an important question; and, as president of the Smithfield Cattle Club, he felt that it was a part of his duty to advise the farmers of England to ask for leases; assuring them that he himself would be too happy if all his tenants were to ask for them tomorrow.

THE CHAMPION LAND-DRAINING MATCH.—The match announced to take place under the patronage of Sir William Bowyer Smith, Bart., M.P., came off on the 5th inst., on Great Tawney Hall Farm, in the occupation of Mr. William Sworler. Sixteen companies of four each set to work with great spirit at half-past ten a.m. and completed their task at half-past one p.m., each company being recommended by a gentleman of the county. The draining was executed in a most creditable style, and the prizes were awarded by Sir William Bowyer Smith, who briefly addressed the company present on the events of the day. The judges were Mr. Thomas Stokes, Mr. James Stallibrass, and Mr. W. Brown. The following is a list of the competitors for the prizes:—

- Employed by
 1. Stallibrass, Jas. . . . H. Green, S. Green, J. Green, J. Welby.
 2. Markintosh . . . W. Stith, R. Fleck, W. Monk, G. Bull.
 3. Hicks, Daniel . . . J. Tavernor, M. Freshwater, S. Grayling, J. Clark.
 4. Palmer, John . . . W. Mison, W. Brown, A. Taylor, J. Harrington.
 5. Sworler, Wm . . . J. Clark, T. Bass, R. Welby, W. Moss.
 6. Stokes, Thos. . . D. Knight, J. Betts, E. Mead, W. Norris.
 7. Hall Dare, Esq. . . G. Turner, J. Cox, W. Crisp, J. Spiller.
 8. Arkwright, Esq. . . J. Caudle, senr., J. Caudle, junr., J. Caudle, W. Caudle. 4th prize, £1.
 9. Marsh, T. C., Esq. . . W. Pain, C. Gale, W. Gale. 1st prize, £4.
 10. Palmer, Esq. . . . J. Reeves, J. Radley, J. Grayling, J. Radley. 3rd prize, £2.
 11. Sworler, Wm. . . . T. Cox, J. Wright, T. Spearman, N. Wright. 2nd prize, £3.
 12. Lord Pte. J. Wade, G. Crosby, J. Auld, J. Abbott.
 13. Phillips, Esq. . . . D. Godsave, T. Godsave, S. Chapman, J. Chapman.
 14. Thompson, Esq. . . D. Parish, W. Berry, S. Barts, I. Westwood.
 15. Smith, Sir W. B. S. Crab, E. Nightingale, J. Wood, R. Merriday.
 16. Sworler, Wm. . . . T. Wood, G. Brewer, S. Gray, W. Jennings.
 In addition to the above, each competitor received 2s. 6d.

LIVE STOCK.

SALE OF PRIME BULLS.—On Friday last, being great market day, Mr. E. Russell sold by auction, in the yard of the Oak hotel, Westminster, six superior young bulls, the property of Mr. Roberts, of Livingston Bury. There was a large attendance, and the competition was keen. King James, a four-year-old, by Walford, dam by Original the 3rd, sold for £80; Uncle Tom, by King James, dam by Coningsby, calved, Jan. 2, 1853, £49; Raglan, by King James, dam by Original, calved Dec., 1853, £35; The Morning Star, by North Star, dam by Sir Andrew, calved Oct. 1853, £60; Fairfax, by King James, dam by Woodman, calved Oct. 1853, £67; and Basker, by King James, dam by Sir Andrew, calved Jan. 1854, £37. At the same time a yearling bull of great merit, belonging to Mr. Turner, of the Leen, Penbridge, was sold for £42.

FAT STOCK SALE AT COLEY FARM, SHROPSHIRE.—This important sale of truly choice and valuable fat stock, the property of Sir T. F. F. Boughley, Bart., took place on Monday last, when the sum of £2,402. 11s. was realised by Mr. Hallam, the auctioneer, in three hours. The sixty-two cattle averaged nearly £25, the fat pigs near £8, and the six Ross wether sheep about £1. 15s. each. Some of the ewe sheep were disposed of at reasonable prices, the demand for mutton previous to Christmas being not so great as that for beef. The sale was well and respectfully attended, and the number of cattle immediately taken away shows the increased requirements of the trade.

SPIRIT OF THE AGRICULTURAL MEETINGS.

It is much to be regretted that the meetings of the agricultural societies are not made more practical. We have read a multitude of reports during the past week, and very few of them contain more than speeches about the war, or of mutual compliment. The business of agriculture, for which they ostensibly meet, appears to be quite forgotten. We have only found one that has any extractable matter, that was a dinner of the East Penrith Association, where manners were earnestly and intelligibly debated. We take two or three passages that will be instructive. Mr. John Burgess, who had exhibited some remarkable turnips, said of them:—

TURNIP GROWING.

The turnips he had this day shown were all grown and tilled with only one day between them, and they all had the same amount or value of manure per acre, except one piece, where he tried Peruvian guano, and there the turnips were not fit to show in comparison with the others. Not that he would deprecate the use of the Peruvian guano on any farm, but other manures suited his soil much better. He had found Bolivian guano, or superphosphate and Peruvian guano, answer much better; and he believed that Mr. Basky and others, who had had Bolivian guano from him, had found that it exceeded Peruvian guano to a very great extent. We had been paying for Peruvian guano very smartly; and he hoped, if we could obtain the same results from Bolivian guano, farmers would be able to put in their green crops more economically. In 1853 he tried six sorts of manure. There were, first, the superphosphates—Laws's, Purser's, Norrington's, and the London Manure Company's; and those four varied very little in their produce. Laws's always stood highest in price and in name, but in its result it was best only to a trifling extent. Norrington's and Purser's were quite on a par; and then came the London Manure Company's, the produce from which was about 1 ton 8 cwt. less than from Laws's. He also tried the difference between superphosphate and guano together, and superphosphate alone; superphosphate alone was not worth so much by 25 per cent. as guano and superphosphate applied together. Two cwt. of superphosphate and 2 cwt. of guano would produce more than 6 cwt. of superphosphate alone, or 4 cwt. of Peruvian guano alone. Mr. Burgess stated the produce of Peruvian guano as twenty-eight tons per acre, while that of Bolivian guano was about twenty-five tons. But in a corn crop Peruvian guano was entirely exhausted; while the effect of Bolivian guano and of the four phosphates would remain distinctly visible; so that if a heavy corn crop was got out of the land with Peruvian guano, the guano was all extracted, and it was necessary to apply something else afterwards. As to house, he opened the drills and sowed it in the bottom, and the effect was visible in every row; but if the bone had been scattered over the land, the corn crop would have been irregular. If Peruvian guano had been used, another manure would have been wanted afterwards. Peruvian guano would do its work well the first year, but they must not expect to get a crop of wheat or barley after putting in 4 cwt. of Peruvian guano; that was not treating the land fairly. He might mention another experiment with Peruvian guano. He sowed Peruvian guano, and in seven weeks he cut five tons of hay per acre, and the gentlemen who inspected the farms said it was as good hay as they had ever seen. He was therefore certain that Peruvian guano would pay for grass as well as for any other thing; and then it had a lasting effect—it could be seen two years following.

Capt. J. Vivian said that he believed most persons might grow roots if they used proper means. He always grew them; and could now show, in fields where the land was dry and poor, crops of turnips as good as could be shown in the neighbourhood. He particularly mentioned a field of eight acres. The great secret of growing roots, it appeared to him, was to give the land proper rest. Many people, to put in their turnips, went muzzling, the land in March or April; but that was a plan which he never pursued. He generally put his crop into the wheat arishes; as soon as the corn was cleared off the ground, he thoroughly cleaned the ground so as to give it a nice winter's fallow; and then, in the spring, he could put in his root seeds as early as he pleased. As to manure, none that he had tried could possibly compete with Peruvian guano; with the exception of farmyard dung, which he always used, if within reasonable distance for carriage. The crop being put in in good time, he never ceased cleaning and hoeing it from the time the turnips were first seen to break rows. He believed that thousands of acres of turnips were destroyed by the fly from the want of early hoeing. By early hoeing, the fly was destroyed. He employed at least ten persons all the season through in cleaning his green crops, and he believed there was an advantage of 8 or 10 per cent. in favour of well-cleaned crops compared with those badly cleaned.

Mr. John Burgess said the roots he had shown that day were tilled in very poor land, to try which root would pay him best—the different sorts being grown with the same amount of manure. There was one root for which he did not get a prize, but which he fancied would be very valuable, to be eaten early; it had been the admiration of everyone who went through his field, and saw how quickly and beautifully it grew, with the same amount of manure as the other roots. He thought that one great object of this society's field inspection and show of roots should be to stimulate some person to propagate seed for the next season. A gentleman had spoken favourably of the Green Tankard; and he (Mr. Burgess) thought it a very valuable root to be eaten early. There had been shown to-day a class of mangold wurzels, which were very small, but their beautiful tip-roots, and their neatness of growth, deserved commendation. On the subject of Mr. Loity's allusion to the starving fly, Mr. Burgess thought that to starve the fly was a positive cure for that evil to the turnip crop. If a man could get ready his land three weeks before he put in the seed, he would save £1 an acre on such soil as his, and would starve the fly. In connection with this plan, Mr. Burgess recommended the laying cabbage-leaves on the land for three or four weeks. He stated that a Mr. Sowbey, who had written a pamphlet on the subject, said that by adopting that plan he had never lost a crop by the fly. Mr. Burgess added that he, himself, had never lost a crop since he had used superphosphate. He advocated Laws's superphosphate, and advised farmers, in making their purchases, not to be tempted by high prices, but to deal with respectable men. He recommended that with every crop of turnips should be put in 1½ cwt. of superphosphate per acre; he was certain that this would be a cure for the fly, while it would be of great assistance in bringing the root to maturity, and of proper shape. In explanation to Mr. Permewan, of his suggestion for getting rid of the fly, Mr. Burgess said if the land was wrought five three or four weeks before putting in the crop, the fly would come to life, and die for want of food, before the seed was put in. His use of cabbage-leaves on the ground was to prove whether the flies were alive or not; because, if there was nothing else to eat, the fly would feed on those leaves.

LAND AND MINING.—At the dinner of the Callington Agricultural Association, the Rev. R. Berkeley, of St. Cleer, Liskeard, alluding to burdens on land, is reported to have said:—

When he spoke of agriculturists he included himself in the number, and his opinion was that it was a monstrous injustice that certain burdens should be levied on the agricultural interest, whereas every privilege had been withdrawn. The hurdens he alluded to were the highway-rate and the poor-rate. They had growing up in their immediate neighbourhood an interest that was bringing great wealth to certain parties. He knew that it was so in the district in which he lived, where the mines were prosecuted with great vigour. But those mines did not contribute at all to the poor-rate, or if they did in a measure, it was handed over as a gift, whereas it ought to be insisted on as a right. The parties growing wealthy on mines thus gave very scantily for the maintenance of the poor, whom the mines were the cause in a great degree of creating. This he had come to regard as a grievance, and for several years, as a member of the Liskeard Board of Guardians, he had annually brought forward in that board a petition to the House of Commons begging of them to right this grievous wrong. He had not succeeded yet in passing it through the board, but as long as he remained a guardian, so long would he continue to press that petition. If they would move in it in the way they ought, and show altogether their sense of the injustice to the agriculturists, some remedy would be applied. There was some encouragement in the fact that one of their county members had exerted himself nobly to press the subject on the attention of the Government. That gentleman was Mr. N. Kendall, the member for East Cornwall, and he wished not to withhold praise from others to whom it was due—to Mr. Robartes and the members of the western division—(hear, hear)—who had supported Mr. Kendall; to the last was due the honour of having introduced the matter to public notice, and of having induced many to take up the question. He would recommend that in every parish in which the injustice was felt a petition should be prepared, calling on the House of Commons to redress the wrong, and apply a remedy.

The dinner at Golding's Hotel was well attended, and was ably presided over by Augustus Coryton, Esq., of Pentillie Castle, supported by Sir William Call, Bart., Deehle Beger, Esq., &c.

FARM NEWS.

The Stockport bench of magistrates, on Saturday, convicted Mr. Thomas Wilson, a corn miller, in the mitigated penalty of £5 and costs for having in his possession a large quantity of mineral white, or sulphate of lime, and other ingredients used in the adulteration of flour, contrary to the statute 6 and 7 Wm. IV. cap. 37.—A strange migration we hear of from the Pacific. A thorough-bred bull of the Durham breed and seven heifers, part of a drove of 113 head of cattle, had arrived at Sacramento from the Eastern States by the Salt Lakes.—Californian Paper.—A friend of mine has at this moment a portable railway of about a mile in length in daily operation on his farm. I believe it is the first time in this or any other country of its practical application for husbandry purposes, and most admirably and economically does it do its duty either in taking crops or putting on manure. It is constructed of wood, in sections of twenty feet long, with bands of iron sufficiently broad, about a quarter of an inch thick, and nailed to the rails.—Correspondent of the Times.—A rather extraordinary fall in the price of pork occurred at the Exeter market last Friday. On the previous market day the price was as high as 10s. 3d. per score, whereas on the following Friday the price fell to 8s. and 9s. per score. A very large quantity of pigs was left unsold even at this reduction.—In furtherance of the proposal of J. B. Dennison, Esq., arrangements have been made by Mr. R. White, of the Swan Inn, Mansfield, to receive contributions (to the Crutcher Army Fund) of hams, cheese, bacon, &c., when they will be packed and sent direct to the committee's depot, in London. Up to the present time, sixty hams, twelve cheeses, one fitch, and sundry pieces of bacon, besides a number of chaps, have been received; and as many more are promised, it is hoped they will be sent in without delay. We understand that the gross weight of the contributions passing through the hands of Mr. White alone, will not be less than a ton and a half.—It is with much regret we record the death of Mr. James Slight, engineer, and curator of models to the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland. This event, the result of a severe inflammatory attack, took place on Friday. Mr. Slight was born at Truncat in 1786. As a country wright, he had the foundation of that acquaintance with agricultural details and agricultural implements which characterized him in the latter part of his career. He acted as a superintendent under Mr. R. Stephenson, the celebrated engineer, in the construction of the Bell-Rock Lighthouse, and other important works. About twenty-five years ago a connection was formed by Mr. Slight with the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland. A large number of the models exhibited in the society's museum attached to the chair of agriculture in the university were constructed by him. We need not refer to his important services in connection with the reaping-machine and Usher's steam-plough, to both of which he devoted much of his time and attention. —Farmers are cautioned not to send game fowls or other provisions to persons professing to be salesmen at the Metropolitan markets unless they are well informed of their respectability. Inquiry in most instances will show that these parties are carrying on a system which ought to be fully exposed.

CORRESPONDENCE.

FARM LEASES.

To the Editor of THE FIELD.

SIR,—Too many of our English landlords are either poor or parsimonious, too many of our tenantry ignorant, narrow-minded, obstinate, tricky, and without capital; and between these the nation is the great sufferer. The poor landlord is ready for his rent before it is due, and can neither afford to drain nor to erect necessary buildings, nor even to repair existing ones. The parsimonious landlord, from his habit of mind, is backward in doing either; and to get anything out of him, except punctual applications for the rent—"the whole rent, and nothing but the rent"—is like getting an apple out of a bear's mouth. Tenants generally hold under one or other of this class of landlords. Now what a heart-breaking position it is for an enterprising tenant to be so placed; how soon a tenantry are thus made to degenerate into the sort to whom I have applied the epithets above!

The possession of land seems to me to be a perpetual struggle between landlord and tenant to "du" one another, each trying to exact what he can. As long as this state of things continues, so long will this country be half-cultivated, as it is at present. Difference of cultivation is the only thing which distinguishes a field from a garden; and although our fields may never become gardens, still they may approach to something garden-like. But how few men, speaking generally, will be found to turn a farm into a garden without the security of a lease. A noble family may get farming tenants, from long confidence, to hold farms in the country without a lease, and those tenants may employ a capital of three, four, five, or six thousand pounds, but not without sometimes asking themselves the question, "Am I safe—I may die; suppose a change of ownership—a new agent?" These thoughts will creep in, in spite of confidence in individual landlords, and are, at least, disturbing. Now this is not a natural nor a business-like state of things. The same noble family shall have an estate on the banks of the Thames, in London, vice for letting out on building leases, for manufacturing purposes; if upon a small lot of this land a tenant wishes to lay out, say only £200, in building a workshop or manufactory, will he not require a ninety-nine years' lease? Why then should farmers rely, or be expected to rely, on mere yearly tenancies? The want of leases, or, as it is called, "fixity of tenure," is the great drawback to the thorough cultivation of the land of this country; and so long as business is business, so long ought the principles of business to be carried into farming as it is into other trading pursuits. UMBRA.

THE COUNTRY HOUSE.

HOUSEHOLD MATTERS.

HALF-PAY PUDDING.—Four ounces each of flour, suet, currants, raisins, and bread crumbs, two tablespoonfuls of treacle, and half a pint of milk. Mix all well together, and boil in a mould three hours. Serve with wine or brandy sauce.

TO STEW SPRATS.—Wash and dry the fish, and lay them level in a stewpan. Between each layer put three pepper-corns and as many allspice, with a few grains of salt. Barely cover them with vinegar, and stew one hour over a slow fire, but must not boil. A bay leaf or two may be added.

NEW FOOD FOR INVALIDS AND INFANTS.—At the meeting of the Manchester Literary and Philosophical Society, held on the 28th ult., Professor Frankland directed the attention of the members to a very important discovery, recently made by Professor Liebig, relative to a highly-nutritive food for invalids, and also to some experiments of his own, which so far had been completely successful, on the preparation of a nutritive fluid for infants, having the same composition as human milk. In the preparation of a nutritive diet for invalids, the great object was the production of a material which should contain all the constituents requisite for the formation of blood, and which, at the same time, should be capable of assimilation with the least possible expenditure of the vital force. This object had not hitherto been accomplished. Beef tea, which was the nearest approach to it, did not contain the albumen of blood, and was also wanting in some other constituents necessary for the formation of healthy blood. The new diet contained apparently all the constituents requisite for the nutrition of the human body, and it was assimilated with the greatest ease by the organs of digestion. The new diet might be described as a cold extract of flesh, and was prepared as follows:—Half a pound of beef, free from fat, or the same weight of fowl's flesh, in both cases recently killed, is chopped very fine, and well mixed with one pint of distilled water, to which four drops of hydrochloric acid and 1-ounce of common salt have been added (if the Manchester pipe-water be used, six drops of hydrochloric acid should be employed). After the mixture has stood for one hour it is thrown upon a fine hair sieve or piece of calico, and the liquid allowed to drain off without pressure. The first portion of liquor is usually turbid, and must be returned to the sieve until it runs clear. When all the liquor has drained off, a quarter of a pint of pure water must be gently poured, in small quantities at a time, upon the residual minced flesh, and allowed to run into the liquid previously collected. There is in this way obtained about three-quarters of a pint of the cold extract of flesh, having a red colour and a pleasant, soup-like taste. It is to be administered cold to the invalid, a teaspoonful at a time. It must on no account be warmed, as the application of even a very slight heat causes its decomposition and the separation of a solid mass of coagulated albumen. This cold extract of flesh was not only much more highly nutritious than ordinary beef tea, but also contained a certain quantity of the red colouring matter of blood, in which was a much larger proportion of the iron requisite for the formation of blood-particles. The hydrochloric acid also greatly facilitated the process of digestion. The cold extract of flesh had been employed with great success both in the hospitals and in private practice in Munich, especially in certain stages of typhus and cholera, in which, owing to the absence of all energy in the digestive organs, there was the greatest difficulty in sustaining the strength of the patient. A very striking case of its efficacy occurred in the family of Professor Liebig himself. A young lady, who, in consequence of an inflammatory disease, could not take solid food, was supported exclusively upon this diet for two months—in fact, until she had perfectly recovered; and it was remarked that during this time she evidently increased both in flesh and strength. There could be no doubt that a supply of this admirable strength-sustaining agent would be of the highest value in our hospitals in the East, where hundreds of our wounded and suffering soldiers are lying in the last stage of exhaustion. The extract was admirably adapted for such a purpose; its preparation being so exceedingly simple, and not even requiring a fire. The disintegration of the flesh could also easily be effected on a large scale by a simple machine which any mechanic would easily invent and construct. The nutritive fluid for infants, to which Professor Frankland also directed attention, was of course intended for those children who were deprived of their natural nourishment. The great difference between cows' milk and human milk consisted in the former containing much more casein (cheese), and less sugar of milk than the latter, as might be seen from the following comparison, showing the average percentage composition of both:—

	Human milk.	Cows' milk.
Casein	3.0	4.5
Sugar	3.3	3.5
Sugar of milk	6.5	4.0
Ashes	5	6
Water	89.7	87.4
	1000	1000

The usual mode by which it was attempted to assimilate the composition of cows' milk to that of human milk, consisted in diluting it with one-half its bulk of water, and adding a certain proportion of cane sugar; but the almost invariable failure of this mixture was sufficient evidence of its non-fulfilment of the required conditions. The new infants' food was made as follows:—One-third of a pint of new milk is allowed to stand until the cream has separated; the latter is removed, and to the blue milk thus obtained, about a square inch of rennet is to be added, and the milk vessel placed in warm water. In about five minutes the curd will have separated, and the rennet (which may again be repeatedly used) being removed, the whey is carefully poured off and immediately heated to boiling to prevent its becoming sour; a further quantity of curd separates and must be removed by straining through calico. In one quarter of a pint of this lot whey is to be dissolved three-eighths of an ounce of milk sugar; and this solution, along with the cream removed from the one-third of a pint of milk, must be added to half a pint of new milk. This will constitute the food for an infant of from five to eight months' old, for twelve hours; or more correctly speaking, it will form one-half of the quantity required for twenty-four hours. It is absolutely necessary that a fresh quantity should be prepared every twelve hours, and it is scarcely necessary to add that the strictest cleanliness in all the vessels used is indispensable. Professor Frankland stated that he was led to the preparation of this milk by the severe illness of his infant son, who, deprived of his natural nourishment, had gradually sunk almost to the last stage of exhaustion, owing to every description of food proving unsuitable for him; but after the adoption of the above diet he gradually gained strength and flesh, and was now in vigorous health, after being fed upon it exclusively for two months. It would, however, be a great injustice to the medical skill of his colleague to attribute this result entirely to the new diet; but Professor Frankland had no doubt that the medical treatment had had a powerful auxiliary in a diet which had proved itself so completely suited to the wants of the infant. It was the desire that this food might be more extensively tried, and the sufferings of many families be thus perhaps relieved, which formed his apology for bringing such a simple matter before the society.

POULTRY.

HEREFORD POULTRY SHOW.—This show was such a one as only Hereford does produce. The supply was most abundant, the quality was never previously attained, much less surpassed, the poultry never looked more clean and delicately dressed, and the fair dames and daughters of our Herefordshire farmers never looked happier and healthier, chatted more agreeably, or "pushed" business more interestingly and more satisfactorily than on this occasion. Uniformity and excellence were the characteristics which struck us on Wednesday, the 20th. The average price of poultry was—for turkeys, 8d. per lb.; geese and ducks, from 7d. to 7½d.; fowls about the same. Among the display was a number of rarely fed turkeys, from 12lb. to 20lb., many of which sold as high as 10d. per lb. On Saturday the attendance and supply were even greater than on the first show day, and the prices realised much higher.

FATTING DORCKINGS.—To produce the fat fowls that are seen in greater perfection in the London markets than elsewhere, and which are generally termed (although they are not capons, Dorckings are cooped for fattening at the age of three to four months in summer and five to six in winter, being fed with oatmeal, mixed with water or milk; this must be given fresh three times a-day, the first meal being early in the morning; and, in addition, the birds should be supplied with whole corn (either dry or boiled), gravel, clean water, and a turf or green meat, the most scrupulous cleanliness as to troughs, coops, &c., being observed. By these means a fowl, if previously well fed, will be fat enough for any useful purpose in a fortnight to three weeks; should they be required very fit, some mutton suet, or what is equally good, the fatings of the loins of mutton, may be chopped up with the food. The unnatural process of cramming is frequently recommended, but I have never found it necessary. It should be borne in mind that a fowl cannot be kept in the greatest degree of fatness for any length of time, as the over-repletion soon causes internal disease. The houses must be dry, quiet, dark, and warm, and the fitting coops carefully kept from draught, and warmly covered at night during cold weather.—Veterinarian's Profitable Poultry.

SINGULAR PRODIGES.—Mr. John Gray, boot and shoemaker in the Market-place, West Hartlepool, has a pair of the Cochinchina breed, which, in nine successive days, has laid twelve eggs, all of a tolerable size, and is now laying regularly every day.

A horse last week voluntarily left his stable, and walked down to a bay near Hartlepool, where he took water and amused himself with a salt-water swim nearly two hours.

THE FIELD NATURALIST.

A SAGACIOUS DOG.—At the County Court Mr. Hopkins, of Cubley Lodge, Derbyshire, brought an action against A. C. Howard, Esq., of Brereton Hall, Cheshire, for the recovery of £10, the value of a dog which he had killed. The plaintiff rented a farm which the defendant had lately purchased. On the 19th September last, the dog got loose, and followed the plaintiff's son into some fields, where the defendant saw him. Defendant fired a double-barrelled gun at the dog, and killed him. The dog was represented as valuable and sagacious, and as an instance of its usefulness and sagacity Mr. Hopkins mentioned the following circumstance:—Last spring Mr. Hopkins was sitting up in the house, having some calves in the barn in the yard, in one of which the dog was. In the middle of the night a noise was heard at the door—scratching and barking. One of the servants went to the door and let in "Fid," who then went to its master, who was lying on a sofa, and jumped up to him, scratched him, and pulled him in the direction of the door, at the same time making a very peculiar noise. Mr. Hopkins followed, the dog, and it led him to one of the cow-houses, and he there found the cause of the anxiety of poor "Fid," two cows having got loose and going themselves in a shocking manner. Ever since this dog had been very much prized, and the value claimed (£10, 10s.) was not its full value. His Honour gave a verdict for the plaintiff for the full amount claimed, and costs.

RARE AVIS.—A specimen of the bog-bumper (Ardea Stellaris, Linn.), a bird rarely seen anywhere out of its native bogs and fens, was shot last week at Westwood.

SHOAL OF PORPOISES IN THE SOLWAY FIRTH.—The inhabitants along the shore of Solway, near Annan Waterfoot, were lately somewhat alarmed by an extraordinary noise in the frith. On the tide ebbing, the turmoil was explained by a large shoal of porpoises which were stranded on the sands. One of these monsters of the deep measured twenty feet in length. One fisherman secured eight as his share, from which he expects to receive oil to the value of £30. The tenant of Seafield had thirteen, and on attaching four horses to one to remove the fish beyond flood mark they were not able to move it. In addition to the carcasses will furnish a large quantity of excellent manure.

HABITS OF THE FOX.—A gentleman possessed a number of fine turkeys, which usually roosted on the branches of some tall firs. Reynard had an eye to these, and resorted to the following stratagem to catch them. He first scratched the ground with his fore feet, and then the base of the tree itself, to draw their attention. He then ran round the tree in rapid rings. The turkeys aware of their danger followed his quick movements with their eyes, and became confused and dizzy. Two of the birds soon fell to the ground, and were instantly killed and borne off to the earth.

DESTRUCTIVE NATURE OF THE WOOD-PIGEON.—A circumstance has just occurred in the neighbourhood of Canterbury which affords irrefragable proof of the destructive capabilities of the wood-pigeon. One of these birds was shot last week, in Clowes's wood, in the parish of St. Stephen's, and upon examining its crop it was found to contain no less than 937 grains of wheat, besides 94 tares—unmistakably showing that it had found good quarters, and had availed itself of the advantages afforded. We may probably, next year, be in a position to record the produce of the grain thus discovered, as Mr. Bedwell, of Breton Court, has sown it distinct from his other crops, in order to ascertain the quantity of corn capable of being produced from the consumption of a single wood-pigeon.

SNOW FOWLS.—Numerous flocks of these winter visitors are now seen about our shores—in some cases so large that they number many thousands of birds. These snow-buntings, as they are termed, come in large flights to the Scottish coasts at this season of the year, and many of them fall a prey to hunger and the fowling-piece.

SEA-FOWLS' EGGS.—San Francisco is supplied with an abundance of eggs of the sea-fowl called "murre," the thick-billed Guillemot of ornithology. In less than two months of last summer more than 500,000 of these eggs were sold in San Francisco, all taken from the rookery of Great Farallon, an island in the bay of San Francisco, where these birds swarm in myriads. The eggs are about three and a-half inches long, and are said to be delicate eating.

MASONIC INTELLIGENCE.

MEETINGS.

MONDAY, Jan. 1.—Quar. Gen. Meet. of Boys' School, at eleven; Robert Burns, No. 25, Freemasons' Tavern; Royal Jubilee Lodge, No. 85, Anderson's Hotel; St. John's Lodge, No. 107, Radley's Hotel; St. Luke's Lodge, No. 168, Builders' Arms, Russell-street, Chelsea; Lodge of Joppa, No. 223, White Hart Inn, 1, Bishopsgate; Emphrates Lodge, No. 327, George and Vulture; Lodge of Union, No. 318, Freemasons' Tavern; King's Arms Chapter, No. 30, Freemasons' Tavern.

TUESDAY, Jan. 2.—Audit. Com. Fem. School, at eleven; Albion Lodge, No. 2, Freemasons' Tavern; Old Dundee Lodge, No. 18, London Tavern; United Mariners' Lodge, No. 33, Chequer's Arms, Providence-road, Finsbury; United Lodge of Providence, No. 98, Albion Tavern, Aldersgate-street; Temple Lodge, No. 118, Ship and Turtle; Old Concord Lodge, No. 341, Freemasons' Tavern; Lodge of Stability, No. 264, George and Vulture; Lodge La Tolerance, No. 781, Freemasons' Tavern; St. John's Chapter, No. 196, Radley's Hotel.

THURSDAY, Jan. 4.—Egyptian Lodge, No. 29, George and Blue Boar; Strong Man Lodge, No. 33, Falcon Tavern, Fetter-lane; Lodge of Good Report, No. 158, Radley's Hotel; Lion and Lamb Lodge, No. 227, George and Vulture; St. Andrew's Lodge, No. 281, Freemasons' Tavern; Yarlborough Lodge, No. 812, George Tavern, Commercial-road East.

FRIDAY, Jan. 5.—Fidelity Chapter, No. 3, London Tavern.

SATURDAY, Jan. 6.—Com. Boys' School, at four; London Lodge, No. 125, Freemasons' Tavern; St. Thomas's Lodge, No. 166, ditto.

GLOBE LODGE, No. 23.—This excellent lodge resumed its masonic avocations on Thursday week, at the Freemasons' Tavern, the W.M. Br. Hewlett presiding in his usual able manner. Brs. Morris and Barnett were raised to the sublime degree of a master mason, and Br. W. Adams was passed to the second degree. The other business matter consisted of the election of W.M., treasurer, and Tyler, for the ensuing year. Br. Humphreys, the present S.W., being unanimously called upon to fill the chair. Br. Bennett was re-elected treasurer, and Br. Crawley elected tyler (vice Br. Dalton, deceased). The lodge business concluded, the brethren adjourned to a most recherché banquet. The usual loyal and masonic toasts being disposed of, the master proposed the health of the visitors, Brs. Lea, 169, Coggin, 778 (one of the respected proprietors of the tavern), and Morbey, 169, who returned thanks for the same. The W.M.'s health was then proposed by P.M. Br. Newton, who paid a well-deserved compliment to the master, for the excellent way in which he had passed through his year of office. Br. Hewlett, in returning thanks, eloquently dilated upon the beauties of Freemasonry, urging every brother to carry out the principles of the order as far as in him lay, and not forget, in his present enjoyment, his less fortunate brethren, and his duty to the Great Architect above. The toast of the P.M.'s—Bras. Newton, W. Watson, and Blackburn—was then given, who severally acknowledged the same, Br. Watson being unusually laconic. The W.M. proposed the health of his successor, congratulating the brethren upon the excellent choice they had made, for he was sure, from the way in which Br. Humphreys had frequently complimented him in his office, that he would make a most admirable master. Br. Humphreys responded, in a humorous speech, saying "that he had to charge the W.M. with violating one of the grand principles of the order—in fact, the grand principle, viz., Truth—when he said that he (Br. H.) would make a most admirable master, because, forsooth, he had complimented him for his excellent working; now he wished it understood, that he certainly knew when a dinner was well placed upon the table, and also when it was well cooked, but if he was asked to properly place it on the table, or to cook it, he would find that a very difficult task; so with regard to the chair—he knew when it was well filled; in fact, the present year was a sample of how it ought to be filled; nevertheless, he would try to follow the good example set him, and trusted the brethren would at least give him credit for endeavouring to deserve their good opinion." The next toast was, "The Brethren of the Army and Navy at present in the Crimea, wishing them a speedy relief to their sufferings, and a safe return to their native country." Br. Knight returned thanks for the toast, and said that "the army and navy of England had only to be told they were wanted, and they were ready; they had in this expedition added fresh laurels to those already gained by them, despite every disadvantage of position and numbers; they had shown that high moral, as well as physical courage, that is inherent in the British soldier and sailor; their deeds at Alma and Inkerman had shed a halo of glory around them which time can never efface, and he hoped to hear, ere long, with the assistance of our brave allies, that not only Sebastopol had fallen, but that the Czar and his vile advisers were buried in its ruins." Br. Watson returned thanks for the masonic charities, and ably advocated the cause of these admirable institutions. The Girls' School had been established ever since 1786, and not one solitary instance had been known of any of its inmates bringing discredit on it; to show the support this school receives, it need only be said, that the subscriptions at the last festival amounted to £1,600; the girls were not only taught to read and write, but instructed in such accomplishments as French, music, &c. Br. Watson briefly alluded to the other charities, and said, in conclusion, that "he was glad to learn that the Grand Lodge had signified an intention (notwithstanding the many local claims upon it) to vote a large sum towards the Patriotic Fund." After a few more toasts and speeches the brethren separated until the third Thursday in January.

MASONIC PROCEEDINGS AT OXFORD.—On Wednesday last the Brethren of the Alfred City Lodge assembled at the Masonic Hall, for the purpose of installing the Worshipful Master elect, Brother John Thorp, son of Mr. Alderman John Thorp. The ceremony of installation was admirably performed by Brother R. J. Spiers, Past Grand Sword-bearer of England, and late Mayor of this City. On the conclusion of the ceremony, the W.M. appointed the following Brethren to be his officers for the year:—Senior Warden, Br. J. T. Hester; Junior ditto, Br. Houghton; Chaplain, Br. Rev. J. S. Sidebottom, New College; Treasurer, Br. T. Randall; Secretaries, Brs. J. G. Bettens and Hobbs; Senior Deacon, Br. E. Bevers; Junior ditto, Br. Rainsford; Master of the Ceremonies, Br. Rev. T. Russell, St. John's College; Organists, Brs. Marshall and T. B. Hosken, Wor. Coll.; Inner Grand, Br. E. G. Britton. The anniversary festival of St. John the Evangelist was held in the evening, when a large number of Brethren, including the Deputy Provincial Grand Master, Br. Capt. Bowyer, Br. Alderman R. J. Spiers, Br. Ald. Dudley, the W.M. of the Churchill Lodge, Br. T. Joy, Br. Rev. W. P. Walsh, Vicar of Stanton Harcourt, no fewer than fourteen past masters sat down to an elegant banquet provided by the stewards, Brs. Frazer and Thurland. The W.M., who was well supported by all his officers, presided in a very able manner, introducing the various toasts in a neat and concise style, and afforded the best proof that he was qualified to discharge the duties which the Brethren, by their unanimous voice, selected him to fulfil. The addresses of the late Worshipful Master, Br. Randall, of Capt. Bowyer, and Br. Spiers, were well timed, and couched in striking and appropriate terms. The evening was spent in that happy and social manner so peculiar to this Order; and, judging from the "opening day" of the new Worshipful Master, and the number of initiations which will shortly take place, there is every reason to hope that the coming year will be as prosperous, as far as Masonry is concerned, as the last.

A VINDICATION OF FREEMASONRY.

(Continued from p. 1198.)

In fact, there are secrets in every profession, trade, or calling, which are necessary to be known to every person practising them. You cannot learn any art or trade without serving your regular time, and that according to the usual custom; which, when done to the credit of yourself, and satisfaction of your master, you are entitled to be made acquainted with the secrets and mysteries of your calling. And thus also as to Freemasonry; for any person of a good moral character may be initiated into its mysteries.

Enough has been said to prove that secrecy is no crime, but has, in all ages, been regarded as a virtue; and that it is foolish for individuals to calumniate our ancient and honourable order, on account of its secrecy and other virtues. Another objection urged against Freemasonry by some, is the immoral conduct of some individuals belonging to it: in answer to which, it may be observed, that if a worthless member is found, it is habitual vice which has brought him to the sad condition. Yet the defects of a solitary individual are not to stamp an indelible stain on the whole Brotherhood. Such men are a disgrace to any society, much more to Masonry; and so far from being countenanced by their brethren, they are admonished, and have wholesome advice given them. But God alone is able to rectify the heart—we can only use the means.

Freemasons relieve each other when in distress; they recommend each other; they protect each other; they do not shun the object of affliction, but with extended arms they receive him, and administer such comfort as he may need, and their abilities admit. They pay no attention to their country, religion, or colour; if they are Masons it is a sufficient claim—an impostor cannot succeed. If all that is good and amiable—if all that is useful to mankind or society be deserving a wise man's attention, Freemasonry claims it in the highest degree: it recommends every virtue that endears one man to another. Masonry countenances no error in no individual; it stamps an indelible mark of pre-eminence on its professors, which neither chance, power, nor fortune can bestow on those who have not been initiated into its mysteries. It is a friend who will not deceive, but will comfort and assist both in prosperity and adversity, and may be had recourse to when all other earthly comforts fail. By brotherly love, Freemasons are taught to regard the whole human species as one family—the high and low, the rich and poor—created by one Almighty Being, and sent into the world for the aid, support, and protection of each other.

In conclusion, "may Freemasonry be as universal as its principles are pure," may it prove a blessing to its members; may they ever live up to the spirit of the order; and may all poor and distressed brothers meet with that relief their wants entitle them to receive, without regard to country, colour, religion, sect, or party.

OUR LETTER BAG.

THE WHIP AND SPUR QUESTION.—LADIES AND THEIR HORSES.

To the Editor of THE FIELD.

SIR,—I abhor any cruelty to horses, and yet I have advocated the wearing of the spur by ladies, in your journal. I do not think the holding of these opinions irreconcilable, but as some of your correspondents appear to be of a different opinion, and as I should regret if anything I may have written should, by being misunderstood, lead to the ill-treatment of horses, I must beg again a little space in your paper, to add a corollary to my former letter. If there were only two classes of lady-riders, the one such as Miss Stafford is described, in the "Autobiography of a Horse," who would scarcely touch her favourite even with a whip, and the other like Lady Julia's friend, who seems, by the cruel use of her spur, to have ridden a fine animal into broken wind, I would at once forbid the spur to all ladies, without exception. I confess, however, I have a better opinion of the good sense and feeling of many of the fair sex, and so can advise them to wear a spur, without fearing they will use it cruelly. I think the spur is useful, because its slight and very occasional use makes many horses more alert and lively—renders some animals, which without it are really unfit to ride for pleasure, agreeable to the rider, and is the best and readiest method of subduing a refractory or obstinate horse. Every man who has ridden much will acknowledge the truth of the above remarks, and, however humane, uses a spur for these purposes. If, therefore, the objection to ladies being armed with such an instrument of punishment, is that they have not sufficient sense to learn when to apply it with propriety, I for one cannot assent to that opinion, as, with proper teaching, they are as capable of understanding the nature and capabilities of the horse as the lords of the creation.

If, again, the idea is, that they are so cruel as knowingly to torture the animal that carries them, and recklessly, by the use of the spur, to overtask his powers, I must still more emphatically dissent from it. That some such unlovely specimens of their sex may exist, there is no doubt, but they are rare exceptions; and those who, as I do, advocate the wearing of the spur by ladies, condemn them quite as severely as any of the anti-spirites can.

Your correspondent, in his interesting "Autobiography of a Horse," has given one or two very true specimens of lady riders, but I hope, before he finishes the list, he will give us an instance of one who can ride with the spur, and yet use it only when necessary. Without this his catalogue will not be complete, as I am sure it would be unfair to give the public the impression, that all ladies who wear a spur use it in the way Lady Julia's friend describes herself to have done.

I consider myself to be kind and considerate, beyond most men, in my treatment of my horses, and yet I ride with spurs, and use them if necessary, but never miles.

It is only because I believe ladies to be generally humane, and capable of equal discrimination with myself, that I have advised them, to increase the pleasure of their ride, to wear the spur also.—Your obedient servant, JUSTUS.

DRIVING.

To the Editor of THE FIELD.

SIR,—When the new management of THE FIELD, to the great joy of all subscribers, was announced, it was promised that some space should be devoted to the encouragement of driving. As yet that promise has not been fulfilled; and my object in troubling you with these few lines is to induce some person better qualified than myself for the task to give your readers some advice upon the subject. For above a year we have had a very interesting correspondence carried on in THE FIELD with respect to fair equestrians, and now I should much like some advice to be given to those ladies who aspire to "handle the ribbons," and to distinguish themselves as whips.

I think, Sir, the most beautiful sight with which we men are favoured is that of a handsome horse bearing the burden, and subject to the will and pleasure, of a beautiful woman. And, next to this, I do not know what is prettier than to see an equally beautiful woman dexterously driving a well-matched handsome pair of ponies. Now, Sir, it has often occurred to me that very few ladies know how to drive. A lady almost always uses her whip upon the legs of her steeds, which certainly, as it seems to me, should never be whipped. However, I am not going to enter upon the subject myself; but only wish to suggest to some great whip—if possibly some fair adept in the art—to impart some knowledge upon the subject to less successful practisers of the art.—I remain, Sir, yours obediently, P. P.

[We add our request to that of our correspondent, and we hope that some of our readers who are skilful whips will give to other readers who are not so the results of their experience.—ED. FIELD.]

THE FIELD.

To the Editor of THE FIELD.

SIR,—I am glad to see that THE FIELD has passed into new hands, for I have lately heard many complaints respecting it, and I should be very sorry to see it decline. May I offer the following suggestions:—

1. That advertisements only be printed on the first and last sheets of each number, so that when the papers are bound up these may be cut off, for I find that the outside sheet generally becomes much soiled.

2. Not to leave articles unfinished. Some time ago "Umbrā" began two distinct articles on shooting, neither of which has been yet concluded.

3. Would it not be advisable to give a short notice of the proceedings at the universities: I mean such things as class-lists, lists of those on whom degrees have been conferred, &c., for no doubt many of the readers of THE FIELD are interested in these things. Perhaps, also, presentations to livings, &c., might be noticed, as also the names, value, and patrons of vacant benefices. As you give a list of the promotions by the War-office, I see no reason why you should not notice also church matters, especially as most country gentlemen have one or more relations in the church.

4. Would it not be better to insert the hunting fixtures alphabetically? I notice that the names of very many of the fixtures are misspelt nearly every week, but this may perhaps be the fault of the bad writing of your correspondents. The list might also embrace more packs than it does now.

Pray continue to exclude all matter that would render THE FIELD unfit for the eyes of ladies. If I have offered anything that can be of service to you, I am sure you are heartily welcome to it, as I take great interest in your newspaper, and am desirous that it should prosper.—Truly yours, Yorkshire, 22nd December, 1854. J. B. F. M.

THE SALMON FISHERIES.

SIR,—Seeing some mention of salmon-netting, &c., in your valuable paper, I must also add my mite against that hurtful practice to salmon-fishers. I was accustomed to fish for salmon in many rivers in England, and, till the last few years, had excellent sport. It is now some eight years ago since I first saw anybody netting or spearing salmon; that was in the weirs, or, I should say, just below them, in some of the rivers of Devonshire. I remonstrated against it, and, I believe, was quietly cursed, and told that I had no business to interfere. Of course, the ground not belonging to me (I had leave to fish there), I could say nothing. Now this gradually increased, till, really, I could catch no fish at all. Now, Mr. Editor, cannot we fish-men enter into some way of preserving these said salmon? Say, that out of the population of England we take 200 in 1,000 as fishermen, we should then have 5,400. Now these subscribing 10s. annually, we should get £2,700; we might then have one or more keepers for every ten miles of salmon-fishing in Great Britain. If this was found insufficient, we might add another 10s. each, and double the number of keepers. Will you, Mr. Editor, have the goodness to lay this plan before the public, by means of your paper. I fancy it might be adopted with great ease—give encouragement to fishermen, and, in time, entirely put a stop to that infamous practice of netting or spearing salmon. I shall be happy to further it in any way that I possibly can. SALMO.

MANLY PURSUITS.

Some people hate those amusements for which they themselves have no taste, or for the enjoyment of which they have no capacity or capability. Hence it follows that some puny milkop, who has no taste either for riding, hunting, shooting, fishing, yachting, or cricketing, smiles, or rather sneers, at the enjoyment which others experience in the pursuit of those amusements. I will not speak of gymnastics, because they rather approach the questionable pursuit of pugilism; but, apart from the trifling of pugilism, what is more likely to make a good soldier than riding well across a country, or being strong and clever in gymnastics, the practice of the boxing gloves, the sword exercise, and the athletic games of Scotland. Lord Cardigan, when he jumped the enemy's guns at Inkerman, would have lost his life had he not been a good cross-country rider; and no doubt many other officers there escaped through their good hunting seats; for the military long stirrup-leather, with the toe-joint in the stirrup-iron, was never admitted to afford a good seat to hounds, and therefore not so good over the leaps and inequalities of a rough field of battle as the military and hunting seat combined. And what is more likely to inspire good seamanship than the beautiful appointments of a yacht, and the proud envy or emulation created by a fine set of well-paid and nicely-clad seamen, forming its trim and experienced crew? I know no more beautiful and exhilarating sight than to see a field of horsemen, splendidly mounted, by a cover side; and who more nationally useful, as regards the breed of horses, I should like to know? What more health-giving than shooting, when well and discreetly followed up? What more recreative and contemplative to the less hardy and robust than fishing?

Of yachting I have spoken. What more manly, and unself-forming, than cricket and gymnastics, fencing, sword exercise, singlestick, and the like; and even the use of the boxing-gloves, as a private exercise, rather than as a means of defence; although, I must say, as one of the old school, that it gives a man confidence when he feels that he is able to give a fellow a well-merited lick on the head for some impertinent intrusion. I say that all these pursuits and exercises may be accompanied by reading, and book-learning, and the most useful knowledge; and, as a proof of it, how many names of statesmen, members of parliament, county magistrates, and of eminent and clever people, might be adduced in favour of mixing the animal (call it so if you please) and the intellectual a little together. When I began this letter, I intended to inveigh against those who advocate the destruction of game—a subject suggesting itself to me by the tons upon tons of game which have been exposed for sale throughout this country, at this festive season, affording a great treat, in the shape of fool, for the middle classes—an opportunity for the interchange of little presents and civilities—but I must now leave off, and, with your permission, give these men "with soul so dead," a word or two in some future number. UMBRA.

To the Editor of THE FIELD.

SIR,—It may be that I have overlooked it, but I have not seen, in your admirable journal, the promised report of the novel steeple-chase in Ireland between a fair dam and a gallant knight. I am sure the particulars would be interesting to many of your readers, and not least so to your obedient servant, P. P.

The head mastership of St. Bee's Grammar School, rendered vacant by the prebend of the Rev. Miles Atkinson to the vicarage of Harwood, has been conferred by the Provost of Queen's College, Oxford, upon the Rev. G. H. Heslop, M.A., Rector of Enham, Hampshire.

THE TWO GUINEA DRESS or PROCK COAT, the Guinea Dress, Trousers, and the Half Guinea Waistcoat, made to order by B. BENJAMIN, MERCHANT TAILOR, 74, REGENT STREET, for quality, style, and workmanship, cannot be equalled by any house in the Kingdom. N.B.—A perfect fit guaranteed.

THE 16s. TROUSERS REDUCED to 11s.; Trousers and Waistcoat, 21s.; Coat, Waistcoat, and Trousers, 17s. Made to order, from Scotch Tweeds, all wool, and thoroughly shrunken, by B. BENJAMIN, MERCHANT TAILOR, 74, REGENT STREET. N.B.—A perfect fit guaranteed.

IMPORTANT TO FAMILIES FURNISHING, who study elegance with economy. JAMES COOK'S THREE GUINEA FRENCH POLISHED MAHOGANY ARABIAN BEDSTEAD, Bedding, Cabinet, Carpet, Looking-glass, and Upholstery Warehouse.—Brompton-house, 22 and 23, Queen's-buildings, Knightsbridge. Estimates given, and a list of prices sent post-free.

THE PEOPLE'S LIGHT!

—NIBBS'S PATENT OXY. DATE AND COTTAGE LAMPS produce the Cheapest Oil Light extant. An Illustrated Price List for a stamped envelope. A Is Lamp and Wicks free for eighteen stamps. A 2s. 6d. Hand-Lamp and Wicks free for forty-two stamps. Address J. S. NIBBS, Bakewell, Derby.

GREAT COMFORT TO INVALIDS.

A FIXED WATER-CLOSET for £1. Places in gardens converted into comfortable Water-closets by the PATENT HERMETICALLY SEALED PAN, with its Self-acting Valve, entirely preventing the return of cold air or effluvia. Any carpenter can fix it in two hours. Price £1. Also, Hermetically-sealed Inodorously Chamber Commodes, £1, £2 4s, and £3; and Improved Portable Water-closets, with Pump, Cistern, and Self-acting Valve. A Prospectus, with Engravings, forwarded by enclosing two postage stamps. At FIFE and Co.'s Sanatorium, 46, Leicester-square, London.

STAMMERING perfectly and permanently CURED, in both Children and Adults. The system is easily understood and applied, and has been successfully pursued for the last twenty years, by Mr. BARTHOLOPE, who cured himself. References to clergymen, gentlemen, and the parents of children cured. Address—Mr. BARTHOLOPE, MELBOURNE-SQUARE, NORTH BRITAIN. Children received into the House.

SOUND AND ROBUST HEALTH.

THE blessing of Health may be enjoyed by every one by the use of KAYE'S WORMS-DELL'S PILLS, which are now universally admitted to be the BEST RESTORATIVE MEDICINE in existence. Their peculiar purgative and invigorating qualities render them invaluable to all who, from exposure to impure atmosphere, residence in low and damp localities, or from sedentary habits, have become the victims of physical debility or extreme nervous sensitiveness with their attendant miseries. These Pills, which are wholly composed of Vegetable Substances, are a fine stomachic, a mild yet efficient aperient, and thousands who have tried other medicines in vain have testified to the benefits they have received from their use. Sold in boxes, at 1s. 11d., 2s. 9d., and 5s. 6d. each, at the Depot, 84, FLEET-STREET, London, and by all Medicine Vendors.

DO YOU WANT BEAUTIFUL HAIR, WHISKERS, &c.?—If so, use PALMA-PILLA, declared by thousands of testimonials to be magical in its effects. In all cases of baldness it is a certain remedy, causing a thick and luxuriant growth, strengthening weak hair, preventing its falling off, and checking greyness in all its stages. For the production of Whiskers and Moss patches in two or three weeks it has never been known to fail.

Price 2s.; sent post free (anywhere) on receipt of 21 penny postage stamps, by Miss ALICE MELVILLE, 25, Argyle-square, London. "I was quite bald, but have now a good head of hair."—Wm. Hepton. "My whiskers are growing very thick."—R. Meale, Esq. "It restored my hair, which I had lost in patches."—W. Sturt. "It has quite checked the greyness."—Miss Ellis. "My moustache is greatly improved."—Captain Ross.

LEA & PERRINS' CELEBRATED EXTRACT OF A LETTER from a MEDICAL GENTLEMAN at Madras, to his Brother at WORCESTER, May, 1851. "Tell LEA & PERRINS that their SAUCE is highly esteemed in India, and is, in my opinion, the most palatable as well as the most wholesome Sauce that is made." WORCESTERSHIRE SAUCE. Sold universally by the principal dealers in Sauces. ONLY GOOD SAUCE AND APPLICABLE TO EVERY VARIETY OF DISH. PROUDLY BY CONNOISSEURS, TO BE THE

IF YOU REQUIRE FAMILY ARMS, Send NAME and COUNTY to the HERALDIC OFFICE. Free for Search and Sketch of Arms, 3s. 6d., or Postage Stamps. Crest Engraved on Steel, Silver, Ring, &c., 8s. 6d. Arms, with Name on Plate, for Books, £1. 1s. Club Dies, Seal, &c., 1s. 6d. Monograms, Memorials, Votes of Thanks, &c., Written, Mounted, and Embellished.

Arms Painted, Empaled, Quartered, for Banners, Flags, &c.

H. SALT, Lincoln's Inn Heraldic Office, GREAT TURNSTILE, LINCOLN'S INN FIELDS.

BILLIARD TABLES.

MESSRS. THURSTON AND CO.,

MANUFACTURERS by appointment to Her Majesty, 11, Catherine-street, Strand, London, caution their friends and the public against spurious imitations of their Tables, lately advertised by men professing to have left their Establishment. They beg to say that they have not parted with any of their workmen whose services were worth retaining. N.B. 14, Catherine-street, Strand, is the only house where the THURSTON TABLE can be obtained. Messrs. Thurston and Co. are the patentees of the improved ventilated Churns, which retain their elasticity in the coldest climate. Also Manufacturers of the Central Revolving Lamp, the first light ever contrived for Billiard Tables.

ALLEN'S ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE,

CONTAINING SIZE, PRICE, AND DESCRIPTION OF UPWARDS OF 100 ARTICLES.

CONSISTING OF PORTMANTEAUS, TRAVELLING BAGS, LADIES' PORTMANTEAUS, DESPATCH BOXES, WRITING DESKS, DRESSING CASES, and other Travelling Requisites, forwarded on receipt of two stamps.

ALLEN'S Travelling Bag (patented) has the opening as large as the bag itself, and therefore possesses an immense advantage over all others.

ALLEN'S Registered Despatch Box and Writing Desk, and their New Quadruple Portmanteau (containing four compartments), are the best articles of the kind ever produced.

J. W. & T. ALLEN,

MANUFACTURERS OF PORTABLE BARRACK-ROOM FURNITURE, AND MILITARY OUTFITTERS (see separate Catalogue), 18 & 22, WEST STRAND.

TO SPORTSMEN, PEDESTRIANS, AND OTHERS.

COCOA, containing, as it does, a farinaceous substance, and a bland oil, is a most valuable article of diet. To adapt it, however, to delicate stomachs, it is essential that the farinaceous substance be perfectly incorporated with the oil, so that the one prevents the other from separating. Such union exists in the Cocoa here presented. The delightful flavour, in part dependent on the oil, is fully developed and the whole preparation made grateful to the weakest digestion.

JAMES EPPS, HOMOEOPATHIC CHEMIST, EGYPTIAN HALL, PICCADILLY, 112, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, 43, Old Broad-street, City.

In regard to purity, see the Report of the Analytical Commission in the "Lancet," July 3, 1853.

BILE! BILE! BILE!

If you suffer from the above distressing complaint, send twelve postage stamps to W. S. WILKES, CHEMIST, 16, NEW CT. LAMBETH, London, and receive a Box of Pills, Diet Table, and plain rules in cases of sickness or accident, by return of post.

N.B.—If you wish to keep the doctor out of your house, don't neglect this timely advice.

DEAFNESS.—IMPORTANT DISCOVERY.—Dr. MANFRED, M.B.C.S., has this day published, free by post for eight postage stamps, a PHYSICIAN'S GUIDE for CHRONIC PATIENTS, for the Perfect and Permanent Restoration of Hearing, by his invaluable new treatment. Being a step to quackery, cruel impositions on the suffering public, and exorbitant charges, this book will save thousands from the impostures of the self-styled doctors, inasmuch as the book can be restored for life. Deafness of the most inveterate nature relieved in half an hour, cured in a few hours, and instant cessation of noises in the ears and head, by needless treatment. Hundreds of letters may be seen and presented referred to, who have heard the sound time of conversation in a few hours. Patients received daily at Dr. MANFRED'S residence, 72, REGENT-STREET, London (first door in Air-street), where all letters must be addressed.

NO MORE PILLS NOR ANY OTHER MEDICINE

For Indigestion (Dyspepsia), Constipation, Nervous, Bilious, and Liver Complaints, Cough, Consumption, and Debility.

DR. BARRY'S delicious REVELANTA

ARABICA FOOD cures, in 50 times its cost in Medicine, and turns the above complaints and their consequences—such as flatulency, distension, acidity, heartburn, palpitation of the heart, nervous headaches, dizziness, noises in the head and ears, pains at the pit of the stomach and between the shoulders, diarrhoea, dysentery, hemorrhages, and poverty of the blood, scrofula, asthma, dropsy, rheumatism, gout, nausea and sickness during pregnancy, after eating, or at sea; low spirits, spasms, cramps, epileptic fits, spiles, general debility, inquietude, sleeplessness, involuntary blanking, paralysis, tremors, dizziness, indigestion, for study, loss of memory, delirious, vertigo, blood to the head, exhaustion, melancholy, groundless fear, imbecility. It is, moreover, the best food for infants and invalids generally, as it never purges or turns acid in the weakest stomach, nor interferes with a good liberal diet, but imparts a healthy relish for lunch and dinner, and restores the faculty of digestion, and nervous and muscular energy, to the most debilitated.

Analysis by the Professor of Chemistry and Analytical Chemist, Andrew Ure, M.D., F.R.S., &c., &c., London, June 3, 1851. I find it to be a pure vegetable Farina, perfectly inodorous, easily digestible, likely to promote a healthy action of the stomach and bowels, and thereby to counteract dyspepsia, constipation, and their various consequences.

IMPORTANT CAUTION against the fearful dangers of spurious imitations.—The Vice-Chancellor Sir William Page Wood granted an injunction on the 10th March, 1851, against Alfred Hooper Nevill, for imitating "Du Barry's Revelanta Arabica Food."

BARRY DU BARRY & Co., 77, REGENT-STREET, London.

A few out of 5000 cures are here given.—

Cure No. 4238.—"Eight years' dyspepsia, nervous debility, with cramps, spasms, and nausea, have been effectually removed by Du Barry's health-restoring food. I shall be happy to answer any inquiries.—Rev John W. Flavell, Riddington Rectory, Northants."

No. 81.—"Twenty years' liver complaint, with disorders of the stomach, bowels, and nerves, Andrew Fraser, Haddington."

No. 4130, Major-General King, cure of general debility and nervousness. No. 32,110, Captain Parker D. Bingham, R.N., who was cured of twenty-seven years' dyspepsia in six weeks' time. Cure No. 25,104, William Hunt, Esq., Barrister-at-law, sixty years' partial paralysis. No. 32,434, Captain Allen, recording the cure of a lady from epileptic fits. No. 26,439, the Rev. Charles Hart, a cure of functional disorders. No. 24,514, the Rev. Thomas Munster, cure of five years' nervousness, with spasms and daily vomitings. No. 41,617, Dr. James Sharland, late surgeon in the 90th Regiment, a cure of dropsy.

No. 37,003, Samuel Linton, Esq., a cure of two years' diarrhoea; Mr. William Martin, a cure of eight years' daily vomiting; Richard Willoughby, Esq., a cure of many years' biliousness.

No. 32,839.—"Three years' excessive nervousness, with pains in my neck and left arm, and general debility, which rendered my life miserable, have been effectually removed by Du Barry's health-restoring food.—Alex. Stuart, Archbishop of Ross, Skeltern."

No. 58,331.—"Grammar School, Stevenage, Dec. 16, 1850.—Gentlemen,—We have found it admirably adapted for infants. Our baby has never once had disordered bowels since taking it.—R. Ambler."

No. 52,118, Dr. Guies, Magdeburg, recording the cure of his wife from pulmonary consumption, with night sweats and ulcerated lungs, which had resisted all medicines, and appeared a hopeless case. No. 52,121, Dr. Gattiker, Zurich, cure of cancer of the stomach and fearfully distressing vomitings, indolent indolence, and cholera. All the above parties will be happy to answer any inquiries.

No. 51, Dr. Wurzer.—"It is particularly useful in enfeebled habit of body, as also in diarrhoea, bowel complaints, and hemorrhoids. Also in bronchial and pulmonary complaints, where irritation and pain are to be removed, and in pulmonary and bronchial consumption, in which it counteracts effectually the troublesome cough; and I am enabled, with perfect truth, to express the conviction that Du Barry's Revelanta Arabica is adapted to the cure of incipient hectic complaint, and consumption.—Dr. Rud. Wurzer, Command of Medicine and practical M.D. in Bonn." Col. H. Watkinson, Grammar School, cure of gout; Mr. Joseph Walters, Broadwell Valley, Oldbury, near Birmingham, a cure of angina pectoris; and 50,000 other well known individuals.

In canisters, suitably packed for all climates, and with full instructions, 1lb, 2s. 9d.; 2lb, 4s. 6d.; 5lb, 11s.; 12lb, 22s.; super refined, 1lb, 6s.; 2lb, 11s.; 5lb, 22s.; 12lb, 33s. The 1lb and 2lb canisters are forwarded carriage free, on receipt of Post office order. BARRY DU BARRY & Co., 77, Regent-street, London; Fortnum, Mason, and Co., Purveyors to Her Majesty, 152, Piccadilly.

WHISTLER'S, 11, STRAND. GUNS, RIFLES, AND PISTOLS

BY EVERY MAKER IN THE WORLD.

SPORTSMEN are invited to inspect

WHISTLER'S

SECOND-HAND STOCK.

They will find a Gun to suit their Shooting, and easy to the pocket.

ANY ARTICLE TAKEN IN EXCHANGE.

WHISTLER, 11, STRAND,

OPPOSITE THE

GOLDEN CROSS HOTEL.

RIMMEL'S TOILET VINEGAR,

(As exhibited in the Fountains at the Crystal Palace).

Is far superior to Eau de Cologne, as a Tonic and refreshing Lotion, for the Toilet or Bath, a reviving Perfume, and a powerful Disinfectant for apartments or sick rooms. Its numerous useful and sanitary properties render it an indispensable family requisite. Price 2s. 6d. and 5s.

Just out, price 6d.

RIMMEL'S PERFUMED MINIATURE ALMANACK,

FOR imparting a delightful and lasting scent to Pocket-books, Card-cases, Desks, Work-boxes, &c. It is beautifully illustrated, and forms a most acceptable Christmas Present to friends at home or abroad. Sent by post for seven stamps.

Sold by E. RIMMEL, Perfumer to Her Majesty, 39, GERRARD-STREET, SOHO, London; and by all Booksellers, Perfumers, and Chemists.

QUEEN ELIZABETH'S GRAMMAR SCHOOL, GAINSBOROUGH.—Head Master, the Rev. J. H. WILLAN, M.A., late of St. John's College, Cambridge. The above School will re-open on Monday, the 5th February next.

HORNCastle GRAMMAR SCHOOL.—Head Master—The Rev. S. Lodge, M.A., of Lincoln College, Oxford. Second Master—The Rev. T. Warr, M.A., of St. John's College, Cambridge. French and German Master—Mr. Loxton.

THE HEAD MASTER receives a limited number of Boarders into his House, who are entitled to all the privileges of the School. The course of instruction at which comprehensive and liberal branches of a liberal Education. For Terms and other Particulars, apply to the Rev. S. LODGE, Horncastle.

CLASSICAL, MATHEMATICAL, AND COMMERCIAL ACADEMY, ST. IVES, HUNTS.—MR. THOMAS begs to give Notice that in consequence of the rapid increase of his School he has removed from Cromwell-street to that large commodious House in the Sheep-market recently occupied by the Rev. S. Waltham. Mr. T. is, therefore, now in a position to receive an increased number of Pupils, who will enjoy a sound and liberal Education, combined with the comforts of home. The course of instruction comprises a thorough knowledge of the English Language, Geography (including Map Drawing), Penmanship, Arithmetic, Sacred and Profane History, Mercantile Accounts, Algebra, Euclid, Modern Languages, Latin, and Greek. Terms, Twenty Guineas per annum.

The highest references given.—Prospectuses forwarded on application. The Duties of the School will be resumed on the 15th of JANUARY.

TO BE LET, SOLD, &c.

TO SHOEINGSMITHS.—The Shoeing Business of a Veterinary Surgeon to be LET, in one of the best situations in London. A Good will will be required, and the party expected to give ample security for the performance of all engagements. None but shoeing-smiths need apply, as the Veterinary Business is not to be disposed of. Apply, by letter, post-paid, to the care of Mr. PETER BROAD, 9, FAYSTOCK-STREET, COVENT GARDEN.

FANCY POULTRY.—PERIODICAL SALE.—MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL by AUCTION, at his Green Room, 38, KING-STREET, COVENT GARDEN, on THURSDAY, 2nd JANUARY, at twelve o'clock precisely, a SELECTION of very CHOICE POULTRY, from the yard of Mrs. Hower Williams, of Eaton Massey, consisting of all the favorite varieties; also many first-class birds from C. J. Moll, Esq., of Belvoir; Mr. Gibbs, Huddell; Mr. Ely, Huddell; including Puff and White Cochins, Spanish Poles, Hamburgs, Dorkings, Choice Fancy Pigeons, &c. Catalogues, by enclosing a stamp-directed envelope to Mr. J. C. STEVENS, 38, KING-STREET, COVENT GARDEN.

SPANISH BRAZILIAN CHICKENS from MEXICO'S MOUNTAINS, &c. &c. for the table. Some splendid couples of both kinds, to be SOLD cheap, in consequence of Mr. Fox removing from the country. Wire Cages, and Poultry Netting, Poultry Hurdles, Hen Houses, Chicken Coops, Flower Stands, and Trainers, Garden Arches, Wire Blinds, Screens, Wove Ware of every description, and all kinds of Wire Work of elegant and ornamental. Apply to T. O. FOX'S CITY OF LONDON WIRE WORKS, 44, SKINNER STREET, LONDON. Illustrated Catalogues forwarded post free.

WANTED.

WANTED TO PURCHASE (with or without Harness, or Harness and Carriage) a PAIR of PONIES, just under 13 hands, about six years old, warranted sound, and quiet to ride and drive. The Advertiser could arrange to see them at Stamford, Grantham, Newark, Lincoln, or Tuxford. Address (pre paid), with price and full particulars, M.A., Post-office, Flintham, Newark.

TO NOBLEMEN AND GENTLEMEN DESIRING TO IMPROVE THEIR ESTATES.—A respectable young Man, experienced in general Farming Business, and of active habits, is desirous of undertaking the General Management of an Estate either in England or Scotland, or to act in the capacity of an AGENT or GENERAL FARM MANAGER. He is thoroughly conversant with all the modern improvements in agriculture, and has all his life had considerable personal and successful experience in the cropping of different soils, breeding and feeding of cattle, draining, &c. Unexceptionable references as to ability and integrity. Address, M. A., Post-office, Saudon, Stone, Stafford.

TO LANDED PROPRIETORS and OTHERS.—WANTED, a Situation as UNDER FACTOR or LAND-STEWARD. The applicant can be well recommended as possessing a good knowledge in the modern system of Agriculture, together with the breeding and rearing of stock. Apply, free, to No. 563, "North British Advertiser" Office, Edinburgh.

FARM OVERSEER.—A Young Man of considerable experience is at present open to an Engagement. Good testimonials or references can be given. Address, J. HARTER, Post-office, Tossie, near Puchiebridge, Mid-Lothian.

TO LANDED PROPRIETORS.—A Solicitor of highly respectable connection, who contemplates retiring from practice, is desirous of engaging with a gentleman or gentleman as ESTATE MANAGER and GENERAL AGENT. The most satisfactory testimonials to qualifications and integrity can be given. Address, F. G. H., care of Mr. Blenkarn, law bookseller, Bell-yard, Temple-bar.

TO LAND AGENTS and others.—A Middle-aged Man, of active industrious habits, is anxious to meet with EMPLOYMENT. He would be found useful to any one requiring an assistant in valuing land, stock, timber, buildings, &c., and has a practical knowledge of agriculture. Having had many years' experience he would give satisfaction to his employer. Address, C. B. P., Leopard Coffee House, 3, Bridge-street, Lambeth.

TO NOBLEMEN AND GENTLEMEN.—WANTED, by a single man, thirty-three years of age, a first-class Situation as FARM PAINTER. The best references can be given. Address, W. L. Myers, Jackson, bookseller, Lamb.

PARLOUR LIBRARY,

Vol. 120, price 1s. 6d.

THE HUNTER'S FEAST;

OR, CONVERSATIONS AROUND THE CAMP-FIRE.

By CAPTAIN MAYNE RIEDE

Also, by the same Author, in this Series,

THE RIFLE RANGERS, 1s. 6d.

SCALP HUNTERS, 1s. 6d.

Volume 119 of the Series contains:

MATRICE TIERNAY, THE SOLDIER OF FORTUNE.

By the Author of "SIR JASPER CAREW," &c., &c.

"One of the best military romances ever written."—Dispatch.

London: THOMAS HODGSON, 13, PATERNOSTER-ROW.

PICTURES in the COLLECTIONS of HER MAJESTY the QUEEN and H.R.H. PRINCE ALBERT.

THE ART JOURNAL for January, 1854, (Price 2s. 6d.) commences a NEW SERIES, and contains Three Engravings on Steel; two from Pictures in

THE ROYAL GALLERIES, and one from a Statue in Her Majesty's possession. It also includes numerous Wood Engravings, illustrative of subjects connected with Art, Artists, and Art-Manufacture.

ILLUSTRATIONS ON STEEL.—The Royal Yacht of Mount St. Michael, by Stanfield. The Duchess of Devonshire and Child, by Reynolds. Sappho (a Statue by Theod.)

The Literary Contents include:—A Memoir of Constable, with specimens of his Paintings. National Museum at Marlborough House, illustrated.

Albert Durer, his Life and Times, by F. W. Fairholt, F.S.A.

Taste in Ladies' Work, by Mrs. Merryfield, illustrated.

Nomenclature of Historical Art, by J. H. Pyne.

Pragmatic Influence of Art-Manufacture, by Professor Hunt, &c., &c.

Biographical Sketch of the late W. H. Bartlett. VINTAGE, HALL, and VINTAGE, 25, PATERNOSTER-ROW.

Now ready, price 41. 11s. 6d. cloth.

THE ART JOURNAL for 1854, containing Thirty-five Engravings on Steel, and several Hundred Illustrations on Wood. This Volume completes the VERNON GALLERY SERIES, and includes copies of Landwehr's Peace and War, Mache's Hamlet, and other gems of that Collection. The Letter-press forms an illustrated record of the Progress of Art and Art-Manufacture during the year.

VINTAGE, HALL, and VINTAGE, 25, PATERNOSTER-ROW.

Just Published, 6pp 8vo, 5s., cloth elegant.

OCEAN and HER RULERS: a Narrative of the Nations who have, from the earliest Ages, held Dominion over the Sea. By A. FREDERICK.

Be it with valuable and interesting information. — Illustrated. An admirable book for a boy. — Art Journal. GRANT and GRIFFITH, corner of St. Paul's Church.

On the 1st of January, 1853, will be Published, price One Shilling, with Two Illustrations by H. K. BROWN (this), Part 3 of HARRY COVERDALE'S COURTSHIP AND ALL THAT CAME OF IT: Showing how this misguided young man fell from the ways of good fellowship and (in)sobriety; how for his sins he was condemned to—Mortification; together with a detailed account of his sufferings in that state of bondage! By FRANK E. SMEDLEY, author of "Frank Fairleigh," &c. Lewis Arnold, &c.

VINTAGE, HALL, and VINTAGE, PATERNOSTER-ROW.

NEW JOURNAL OF FREEMASONRY. Now ready, price 6d., or 7d. stamped. No 3 of the MASONIC MIRROR: A Monthly Journal of Freemasonry, Literature, and News.

CONTENTS:—The Grand Lodge and the Ancient Rites—Full Report of the Proceedings at Grand Lodge, with all the Masonic Intelligence of the Month, and a large amount of useful and interesting reading for all classes of society.

Published by Brother BARNES, 11, Wellington-street North, Strand; and sold by Brother CLEMENTS, Little Pultney-street, and all Booksellers.

Remember the Title, and that this is the only Masonic Journal ever published at 6d.

BUILDING SOCIETIES.—The Important Judgment of the Lord Chancellor in "Fleming v. Self," involving the Rights and Liabilities of Building Societies, will appear verbatim in a Double Number of THE LAW TIMES of this Day. A copy sent to any person enclosing 18 postage stamps to the Law Times Office, 29, Essex-street, Strand.

THE NEW MILITIA LAW.

THE MILITIA LAW, as altered by the Acts of last Session, and all the new Orders and Regulations, as supplied for the Work by the War Office. By THOMAS W. SAUNDERS, Esq., Barrister at Law. Price 3s. 6d. cloth. CROCKFORD, 29, Essex-street, Strand.

A SUPPLEMENT GRATIS, with the WEEKLY DISPATCH, every week until further notice.

The unexpressed interest which attaches to every incident connected with the operations of the Allied Armies in the East has determined the Proprietors of the WEEKLY DISPATCH to devote a greater space in the Intelligence from the seat of war than the ordinary limits of this, the largest newspaper published, could possibly afford, and, with the view of giving the simplest details, they have resolved on the issue of a SERIES of SUPPLEMENTS gratis, which will include every particular of interest connected with the Siege and decision of the contest at Sebastopol, and will be continued whenever demanded by the progress of the Campaign.

By the publication of these Supplements the portion of the paper usually devoted to the incidents of domestic and political importance will be reserved intact, and the engrossing subject of the War will receive the fullest and most varied illustration.

A SUPPLEMENT will be published on SUNDAY NEXT (gratis), and on every succeeding week until further notice.

Orders may be given to all News-vendors in town and country; and to the Publisher, at the DISPATCH OFFICE, 139, FLEET-STREET.

Just Published, price, in cloth, 2s. 6d.; by post, 3s.; as a pocket-book, with metallic paper and pencil, 4s. 6d.; by post, 5s.

RUFF'S GUIDE to the TURF; or, POCKET RACING COMPANION for 1855.—Contents: The Nominations for Great Britain and Ireland for 1855, and the Great Stakes for 1855; a Complete Calendar of the Races in Great Britain and Ireland for 1855; the Horses Indexed, with their Pedigrees; Laws of Racing, Lengths of Courses; Revised and Enlarged Lists of the Trainers; Winners of the Great Races from their Commencement; Races to Come, Derby Lots, &c., &c.

London: PIPER, STEPHENSON, and SPENCE, 23, PATERNOSTER-ROW. Sold by all Booksellers, and at all Railway Stations.

Now ready, Gratis and Post Free.

A LIST of NEW WORKS and NEW EDITIONS recently added to MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

Also, a LIST of SURPLUS COPIES of Recent Works withdrawn from circulation, and offered to Country Librarians and others, at greatly reduced prices for cash.

CHARLES EDWARD MUDIE, 510, New Oxford-street.

HOW to KILL RATS and MICE by HUNDREDS.—A Receipt may be had to do so (honestly worth £20), without any trouble, by sending Thirty Postage Stamps, and a directed envelope, to MR. WILLIAM FRANKLIN, 118, 118, OFFICE-STREET, NORTHWICH, who will forward it per return, with every instruction, &c.

This wonderful receipt is a fortune to every Farmer, Merchant, or Miller in the world, it will save them pounds yearly, by killing every rat or mouse, either in the field, stack, or house.

ENTRANTS FROM TESTIMONIALS.—August, 1854—I was astonished at the efficacy of your remedy for vermin; the receipts are cheap at a sovereign; use my name if of any use to you.—Frederick Beckham, 37, Burlington-street, Manchester.

"After one dressing we destroyed upwards of 170 rats and mice."—F. Coker, Ware, Herts.

"We have quite cleared our premises from vermin; with we had known of your receipts before."—H. N. Frye, Charlotte-street, Yarmouth.

DO YOU WANT LUXURANT HAIR, WHISKERS, &c.?—If so, ELLEN GRAHAM'S NOUKRENE is unfailing in its efficacy. It reproduces the hair when lost by disease or decay, prevents its falling off, effectually checks greyness, strengthens weak hair, and is guaranteed to produce whiskers, moustaches, &c., in three or four weeks. For beautifying the hair, and sustaining its curling powers, it has no equal.

Sent post free on receipt of twenty-four post stamps, by Miss GRAHAM, 3, NEW-ROAD, HOLBORN, Middlesex.

"My whiskers are greatly improved."—J. Short, Dulley.

"It has produced hair where I was bald."—W. Morgan, Milford.

"My hair has thickened since using it."—Miss Cowie, Bridgwater.

"I have a full pair of whiskers."—H. Robb, Hertford.

"It has effectually checked the greyness."—Mrs. Hood, Dorking.

DO YOU WANT BEAUTIFUL HAIR, WHISKERS, EYEBROWS, &c.?—Notwithstanding the numerous oils, highly scented, and most injurious imitations which have been put forth, ROSALIE COUPELLES CRINUTRIK is the only preparation to be depended on for the growth of Hair, Whiskers, &c., as also curling, nourishing, beautifying and strengthening the hair, and checking greyness. It is a most unique and elegant compound, and has never been known to fail.

Price 2s. per bottle through all Chemists and Perfumers, or sent post free on receipt of 24 postage stamps, by ROSALIE COUPELLE, 69, CASTLE-STREET, NEWMAN-STREET, OXFORD-STREET, London.

Mr. Williams, 8, Lowther-street, Liverpool.—"I can now show as fine a head of hair as any person, solely from using your Crinutrik."

Sergeant Craven, Longford Barracks, Ireland.—"Through using your Crinutrik, I have an excellent moustache, which I had before despaired of."

Mr. Hailey, Cumberland.—"It surpasses every thing of the kind."

Mrs. Carter, Pangbourne.—"My head, which was quite bald, is now covered with new hair."

Mr. Lane, Golden Lion, Macclesfield-street, City-road, London.—"A friend of mine, Mr. Harris, describes its effects as truly astonishing."

Mr. Yates, Hairdresser, Maitland.—"The young man has now a good pair of whiskers. I want two bottles for other customers."

IF YOUR HAIR IS GREY OR RED use ROSALIE COUPELLES PURE INSTANTANEOUS LIQUID HAIR DYE, universally acknowledged as the only perfect one, and infinitely superior to the numerous discoloured imitations which smell terribly, burn the hair, and leave no natural tinge. Price 3s. 6d. per bottle, through all Chemists, &c., or sent free, secure from observation, for 52 postage stamps.

Mr. Whitaker, 22, Fargate, Sheffield.—"Your Hair Dye is highly spoken of by all who have purchased it of me."

Mr. Pearce, King-street, Lulworth.—"Your Hair Dye has succeeded a mirably, it gives such a natural tinge."

Mr. Pearson, 20, Fishergate, Nottingham.—"Your Hair Dye is excellent."

Mr. Casey, 2, Gloucester-green, Oxford.—"It gives the gratest satisfaction."

James Thompson, Esq., Middleton.—"It answers the highest expectations."

Mr. J. N. Clark, Kidlington, Westbury.—"It is a most excellent and marvellous Dye for the Hair, far preferable to all others."

Obtainable through all respectable Chemists and Perfumers, or of ROSALIE COUPELLE, 69, CASTLE-STREET, NEWMAN-STREET, OXFORD-STREET, London.

IMPORTANT TO FLOCKMASTERS.

GEORGE PATTERSON (late Wood-roff), CHEMIST and DISTILLER, RED LION-SQUARE, STAMFORD, begs to inform his Agricultural friends generally that his SHEEP OINTMENT, prepared by machinery with the greatest care, is warranted to cure the most inveterate Scab, and respectfully solicits their kind orders.

NETTING for SHEEPFOLDS, made of Cocoa-nut Fibre; a material known to possess the most extraordinary durability when exposed to the alternations of weather. It will wear out several sets of tarred hemp netting, and is so light that a herdsmen may with ease carry 200 yards of it. Price 4d. and 6d. per yard. Sold in Nets of 50 and 100 yards long, 48 inches high, by the Manufacturer, W. CULLENFORD, 1, ED-MUND-TERRACE, BALL'S POOD-ROAD, near Kingsland-gate, London.

DO YOU BRUISE YOUR OATS YET?—Great Saving.—New Out Crushers, Chaff Cutters, Mangles, &c. 10s. 6d.; Flour Mills, &c. 15s. 6d.; Book on Feeding, &c.—WEDLAKE and Co., 114, FENCHURCH-STREET.

MILITARY HORSES WANTED, at REA'S CENTRAL REPOSITORY.—Farmers, Breeders, and Owners of Horses generally, are respectfully informed that Government has appointed the above Repository as their Depot for the purchase of Horses for the Army. Agents attend daily to buy any quantity. Size, 15 hands 1 to 16 hands; Five Years old or over; Price 25 to 60 Guineas. Payment third day after the sale. St. George's-maid, Southwark, adjacent to the Elephant and Castle. Sales, 5 per Cent. Keep, 3s. per day and night—Horses taken from the London Stations free from charge.

GREAT LOSS OF HORSES IN THE EAST. It will be seen by the weekly news that the loss of British Horses is immense. One Gentleman, writing in the "Time," says the very fair falls off from their Manes and Tails, from exposure to cold, and want of proper nourishment. Great are the hardships undergone by our men, and various have been the suggestions for their personal comfort; and justly so, for what English heart is there that has not responded, flag who has suggested anything to save that noble animal the horse, who cannot speak to tell of his privations, but still requires our attention? for what else in the brute creation is so serviceable to man—a hero in combined power and docility, with such instinctive reason that he trembles at the sound of the whip, speeds as on the wings of the wind at his master's voice, and favours at his pace? View his anxiety to be foremost in the field on the race-course; and behold him on the battle-plain! The roar of the cannon, the clashing of steel, the roll of the drums, hath no terror to him. Snorting with pride, proudly he faces the enemy, bidding defiance to all, in thousands of instances, saving his owner's life at the sacrifice of his own.

The Horse deserves our attention; and G. W. HENRI offers his CIRCASSIAN BARK MEAL as an article far more extractive than either Wheat, Oats, Barley, or Potatoes, possessing great medicinal properties, and better adapted for feeding at the same time soothing and purifying the system, than any article in use, and most adapted for the British troops, there being four feeds in a pound weight.

The Sole Manufacturer, G. W. HENRI, 6, FISBURGATE, YORK, returns his sincere thanks to the House-masters in this Country for their great patronage, as he is now selling from Two to Three Tons per Week, and begs to inform them that the genuine article may be had at the CENTRAL DEPOT, 158, BLAGKFERIERS-ROAD, London, or of the following Agents:—

Mr. Wragham, Chemist, Malton; Mr. J. Thompson, Chemist, Thurst; Mr. Page Woodcock, Chemist, Lincoln; Mr. Reast, Chemist, Grimsby; Mr. Allington, Hull; Mr. B. Brown, Carr-le-hull; Mr. Hammond, Wholesale Drug Warehouse, Lime-street, Hull; Mr. J. C. Reinhardt, Newest Market-place, Hull; Mr. Milnes, Groveterrace, Scarborough; Mr. Goulson, Chemist, Scarborough; Mr. Wm. Papp, Chemist, Beverley; Mr. Capet, Chemist, Caistor, Lincoln; Mr. John McKenzie, Gainsborough; Mr. H. Watson, Chemist, Lacey; Mr. T. Lumley, Chemist, Kirkstonside; Mr. T. Gurnall, Juggler, Northallerton; Mr. J. Stokes, Selby; Mr. Reiter, Mirehill, Bristol; Mr. Lowe, Newark; Mr. Thompson, Doncaster; Messrs. Meyer and Son, Bath; Mr. J. Stevenson, Monkwearmouth; Messrs. Reinhardt and Son, Leeds; Messrs. Maule and Wilson, Bradford; Mr. J. Stephenson, Poole-ington; Mr. Chaleconbe, Bristol and Ilfracombe; Mr. J. Thompson, Fenchgate, Doncaster.

WANTED a Respectable Person to MANAGE a Branch Concern. Salary, £80 per annum.

DEAFNESS and NOISES in the HEAD.—Institution for the Cure of Deafness, 9, Suffolk-place, Pall-mall, London.—Instant and permanent restoration of hearing guaranteed, without the use of ear-trumpets, instruments, or causing one moment's inconvenience to the most aged or nervous sufferer. DR. HOUGHTON'S new and extraordinary discovery, by one consultation, enables deaf persons of either sex to hear immediately with perfect ease the lowest whisper, and magically removes all ringing in the ears. Hospitals and private testimonials, and certificates from the most eminent physicians and surgeons in England, in whose presence deaf persons had been cured, and many hundreds of private patients cured, can be seen or referred to. Hours of consultation, eleven till four every day. FRANKS ROBERT HOUGHTON, Member of the London Royal College of Surgeons, May 2, 1851; Licentiate of the Apothecaries' Company, April 30, 1850.

Just Published, SKILL-CURE of DEAFNESS, for COUNTRY PATIENTS; a Stop to Empiricism, Quackery, and Exorbitant Fees. Sent, on receipt of seven stamps, free. Examination free.

9, Suffolk-place, Pall-mall.

KNOW THYSELF!—The secret art of DISCOVERING the TRUE CHARACTER of INDIVIDUALS from the peculiarities of their HANDWRITING, has long been practised by ELLEN GRAHAM with astonishing success. Her startling delineations are both full and detailed, differing from anything hitherto attempted. All persons wishing to "know themselves," or any friend in whom they are interested, must send a specimen of their writing, stating sex and age, enclosing thirteen penny post stamps, to Miss GRAHAM, 3, NEW-ROAD, HOLBORN, Middlesex; and they will receive in a few days a minute detail of the mental and moral qualities, talents, tastes, affections, virtues, failings, &c., of the writer, with many other things hitherto unsuspected.

Miss Graham is a most successful graphologist.—Family Herald.

London. Printed by JOHN DODDART, 11, Little Prince-street, New Theatre, in the Parish of St. Peter, Bloomsbury; and published by the said JOHN DODDART, 11, Little Prince-street, New Theatre, No. 2, 3, 4, and 5, Great Court, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, Middlesex.—LONDON: 1854.

THE FIELD SUPPLEMENT

VOL. IV.—No. 105.]

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1854.

[GRATIS.]

THE NEWSPAPER.

THE WAR.

SIEGE OF SEBASTOPOL.

From a letter in the Courrier de Marseilles of the 22nd, we find that the French are slowly strengthening their position, and extending their batteries and siege works. The army is anxious for the assault:—"The city, properly speaking, has suffered little, but the suburbs of the marine and the Tartar quarter are destroyed. They are, it is true, outside the ramparts. We can see, from the heights occupied by the English, what is going on in the city. Notwithstanding all that has been reported, nothing indicates that confusion prevails within its walls. The most perfect order, on the contrary, appears to exist there. The inhabitants quietly walk about the streets, troops move in every direction without any apparent anxiety, and on several points we perceive long lines of muskets piled up. No woman or child is anywhere to be seen. The Russians carefully watch our movements, and are particularly alarmed at the progress making by the French in the direction of the Quarantine."

The correspondent of the Daily News, dating from Balaklava, Dec. 6, after referring to the inactivity of our army before Sebastopol, as well as of the besieged, says:—"These marks of a declining spirit on the part of the besieged—unless it hides some deep plan—corroborate the assertions of almost all the deserters during the last few days. They describe the condition of the garrison as lamentable. According to the statements of these men, the place is untenable; a storming party of 12,000 might any day carry it with very little loss. On the other hand, there are unmistakable signs of a determination on the part of the commander, at least, to hold out; at all events to baffle any attempt of ours to bombard the town into submission. The works are carried on by day and by night; mud forts and batteries rise up as if by enchantment. The fortress is actually getting stronger under the operation of our siege. Perhaps the day of storming is nearer at hand than we fancy. With the reinforcements already come up—the 90th Regiment landed two days ago, and the 71st and 31st are off the harbour—with the 1st battalion of Grenadier Guards, the Fusilier Guards, and the troops announced as coming in the latest English papers, and with the large reinforcements to the French army that are daily landing at the Chersonesus—we certainly do not want numbers to assault the town, and at the same time to hold our Balaklava position."

A despatch from Sebastopol of the 14th announces that on the 11th the Russians attacked the French outposts, and gained possession of the mortars, but were repulsed with the loss of fifty men. It is also stated that Prince Menschikoff is ill, and that Osten-Sacken exercises the command during the sickness of the Commander-in-Chief.

By news from Constantinople of the 16th, we learn that the Russians sustained a loss of 700 men in a sortie on the 12th.

The Times correspondent at Vienna, dating the 23rd, says:—"Most reliable intelligence has been given me that scientific officers who have recently returned from the Crimea to Constantinople express their firm conviction that very shortly after the attack on Sebastopol is renewed, a part, if not the whole, must fall into the hands of the Allies. It is believed that, after a tremendous bombardment, some of the forts will be taken by storm, but this last operation will hardly be attempted until all the reinforcements have been received. The landing place of Omar Pasha's army is kept profoundly secret, but it is considered certain that it will be on the north side of the fortress."

MOVEMENTS OF THE BELLIGERENTS.

ODESSA.—The Oesterreichische Correspondenz has letters from Odessa of the 12th, stating that the fear of an attack by the Allies is so great that new strand batteries have been constructed and intrenchments made on the land side. General Schabelsky, a most energetic man, has succeeded General Anuenkoff as Governor. The rainy weather continues, and the roads are so bad that it takes three days to travel fifty English miles in the Crimea. The garrison of Odessa now consists of 50,000 men. Eight steamers have been taking soundings off Ketchakoff; and it is feared the Allies will make a descent on Kinburn preparatory to an attack on Perekop.

NEW RUSSIAN CORPS.—The Emperor Nicholas has appointed Colonel Arhusoff commander of the new regiment of Riflemen of the Imperial Family. The corps, formed on the model of the French Foot Chasseurs, was reviewed by the Emperor, and has been sent off to the Crimea.

Letters from Constantinople of the 16th inform us that Turkish reinforcements were proceeding to the Crimea, in order to act in reference to Perekop. From the 13th to the 20th 8,000 English and French troops had passed Malta; and the Royal Albert, having on board 1,500 men, had passed Constantinople.

A despatch from Varna of the 17th states that 5,000 Turks had embarked to the Crimea.

THE RUSSIAN ARMY.—The Ost. Deutsche Post of Vienna has the following from Odessa, 12th:—"The great event of the day is the recall of the Grand Dukes Michael and Nicholas, which has been decided on. They will probably return to the theatre of war next spring with the Czar himself. It is stated that the princes have been recalled because Prince Menschikoff complained at St. Petersburg that his plans were thwarted by other influence. Prince Menschikoff has received an autograph letter from the Emperor, in which the latter thanks the army for the fidelity and devotedness which it has hitherto shown, and expresses a conviction that Russia, protected by so brave an army, need not fear for the whole world. But the letter contained remonstrances of a nature to prevent the recurrence of events similar to those of the 5th. The tone of the letter is so severe, that it is very clear that the result of that day has produced a very deep impression on the Czar. General Osten-Sacken arrived at the Russian headquarters on the 7th, and immediately announced in an order of the day that he had assumed the command of the 4th corps d'armée. Each division of the active army has by recent arrangements been made 32,000 strong, exclusive of cavalry. Orders have been received that the Russians are to keep themselves strictly on the defensive in the event of any diversion being attempted by Omar Pasha in Bessarabia." A letter from St. Petersburg, in the Hamburg News, says:—"The corps of grenadiers, as well as the corps of infantry, will be reinforced by two battalions for each regiment from the depots. This measure proves that there is no idea of peace." A despatch from the Times correspondent at Berlin, of December 24, states that, by an ukase dated the 13th a levy of 10 men in every 1,000 throughout the eastern half of the empire is decreed. This levy will commence on the 15th of February, and must be finished by the 15th of March. The Jews are not exempt. Another despatch, dated from Vienna, December 26, informs us that a Russian ukase ordains that whoever after a battle commits acts of cruelty on the wounded or unresisting shall suffer the punishment of death.

RUSSIAN TROOPS IN POLAND.—The Augsburg Gazette has the following from Vienna:—"A well-informed agent, who has just returned from Warsaw, gives us the following information:—"The Grand Duke, the heir presumptive, is to arrive in Warsaw in January, and to pass the winter there. The Guards continue entering Poland, and it is probable that they are all there at present. Six regiments of cavalry are on the Bug, and part of the troops who were in the governments of Lublin and Radom, to the number of 18,000, are passing into Volhynia. Troops are still marching from the north to the south. All the garrisons of Lithuania have received orders to march towards the south. The garrisons of Berdzen, Constantinowen, Volhynia, Wuicka, and Mohilew, in Podolia, are all proceeding to the fortified camps of Kamienie-Podolski and Chotini. The videttes of these corps advance quite close to the Austrian frontier. Other videttes are placed on the left bank of the Zbruck and on the right bank of the Dniester. Below Czernowitz, where the frontier is open, the Russians are constructing redoubts on the territory of Bessarabia."

RUSSIAN POLICY.—The Russian Government has forbidden the export of sheepskins for the remaining term of the war. An imperial ukase also prohibits the export of cattle, silted wheat, fresh provisions, rope, sailcloth, and linen, from the ports of the Danube, Black Sea, and Sea of Azoff. Notice is also given, that any Russian subject resident in the kingdom of Poland who shall quit the imperial dominions without leave, will be punished by the confiscation of his estates and effects. The internal prospects of Russia are gloomy in the extreme. Trade is paralysed and money is scarce. Imports have advanced forty-two copeks.

THE FRENCH MARINE.—The Journal du Havre announces that the Minister of Marine has ordered a new levy of all seamen having served less than four years on board the ships of the Imperial navy.

EGYPTIAN TROOPS.—On the 8th inst., when the Tagus left Alexandria, 5,000 Egyptian troops were embarking for Constantinople.

THE TURKISH ARMY.—The correspondent of the Daily News at Vienna says:—"Reliable information has been given me, that not more than 20,000 or 25,000 Turks will be left in the Dobrudscha and Moldavia, as all doubt as to the resolve of Austria to defend the lines of the Pruth and Danube against any aggressive operations on the part of Russia are entirely removed."

OUR ARMY IN THE CRIMEA.

Writing from the camp before Sebastopol, Dec. 4, the Times correspondent says:—"The whole plateau on which stands the camp—the entire of the angle of land from Balaklava round to Cherson, and thence to the valley of Inkerman—is fitted at this moment for the reception and delectation of any number of ichthyosaurs, sauri, and crocodiles; it is a vast, black, dreary wilderness of mud, dotted with little lochs of foul water, and seamed by dirty brownish and tawny-coloured streams running down to and along the ravines. A grand plateau of bog, varying in depth from a foot to two feet, extends from the valley of Inkerman to the sea at Balaklava. All over its surface are strewn the carcasses of horses and miserable animals, torn by dogs and smothered in mud. Vultures sweep over the mounds in flocks; carrion crows and 'birds of prey obscene' hover over their prey, menace the hideous dogs who are feasting below, or sit in gloomy dyspepsia, with drooped head and drooping wing, on the remnants of their banquet. Horses drop exhausted on the road, and their loads are removed and added to the burdens of the struggling survivors; then, after a few efforts to get out of their Slough of Despond, the poor brutes succumb and lie down to die in their graves. Men wade and plunge about, and stumble through the mud, with muttered imprecations, or sit down on a projecting stone, exhausted, pictures of dirt and woe unutterable. Sometimes on the route the overworked and sickly soldier is seized with illness, and the sad aspect of a fellow countryman dying before his eyes shocks every passer-by—the more because aid is all but hopeless and impossible." After giving us further incidents, as to the position of our army, he says:—"Why should not roads have been made when we sat down before the place? Their formation would have saved many lives, and have spared our men much sickness and pain. Had there been the least foresight—nay, had there existed among us the ordinary instincts of self-preservation, we would have set the Turks to work at once while the weather was fine, and have constructed the roads which we are now trying to make under most disadvantageous conditions." The Russians take advantage of what Mr. Russell calls "our inactivity," to prowl about and beat up the advanced posts. The pickets of the 50th were surprised one night, and some of the men were bayoneted as they lay in their blankets by the Russians. "Our advanced parallel, or rather a trench which has been continued by a single approach from the trench before the right attack, is now within 300 yards of the earthwork of the Russian works, and is filled with our best riflemen. It will not be possible to open embrasures in the parapet owing to the nature of the ground." The mortality among the Turks, by the last accounts was frightful. Processions of men bearing half-covered corpses on litters, were passing throughout the day, till at last Colonel Daveney gave orders that the Turkish dead should be buried on the hill-side beyond the town. "Yesterday (3rd inst.), before evening, upwards of seventy bodies were carried to their long home, and deposited in shallow graves, not above a few inches deep, and were left, with a shovelful or two of earth and pebbles over them, as close as they could be packed. To-day the same process is going on. The dead are frightful to look upon." By a letter, dated the 5th, we learn that "the whole of the works of our new attack have been completed, and are now awaiting their armament. Owing to the cessation of rain we have been enabled to get up to the artillery park five guns of position and three 13-inch mortars. The scarcity of rations continues, except among the Guards, the Marines, and Rifles on the heights, and the Highland Brigade near the town of Balaklava." An attack seems to have been contemplated by the Russians on the night of the 5th ult. In the valley of Balaklava the hum of great crowds of men was heard, and lights were seen moving about, by the pickets. "It was supposed that the enemy had received reinforcements or were about to make a dash at our position before Balaklava. The Hospital Guards and the invalid battalion were at once turned out, and the French, shrouded in their capotes, grimly waited in the lines the first decisive movement of the enemy. The night was cold, but not clear, and after a time the noise of wheels and the tramp of men ceased, and the alarm was over. Ere morning, however, we knew the cause of it, for about five o'clock a.m. an outburst of flames from the redoubts in which the Russians had huddled themselves illuminated the sky, and at the same time the fire broke out in the cottages on the slope of the hill before Kamara. When morning came the smoke was seen ascending to heaven, and the Russians were visible in much diminished numbers on the higher plateaux of the hills near Tchernom and Kamara. The faint rays of the morning sun played on the bayonets of another portion of the force as they wound up the road towards Mackenzie's Farm, and passed through the wood over the right bank of the Teberuaya. The reason of this retreat remains unknown to us as yet. The French pushed down their cavalry, and seized the plain. They found dummies (mock guns) in the embrasures, the Russians having carried off all their artillery, to the number of eighty-five pieces." From the 7th the weather has improved, becoming warmer and drier; in the nights, however, frost takes place.

That the comforts which have now been so plentifully forwarded were needed is proved by the following extract from a letter recently received from a soldier in the Crimea, dated Dec. 7:—"Our hospitals are all got quite full again; it is quite a common occurrence to have to take man to the hospital in the middle of the night; the poor fellows got cramped in the inside from the cold, which strikes to their very hearts. We have only one blanket to roll round us when we lie down, and our tents, owing to so much rain having fallen, are very damp. I have seen men, after a heavy rain in the night, wake up and find themselves in a puddle of water. Our men are in a shocking state here. The French are far before us in every respect in regard to the private soldiers' comfort. The French have had warm clothing sent out to them; our people have been talking about doing so, and that is all. What is our boasted wealthy nation thinking about, allowing their army to remain in such a wretched state as we are now in?"

HEALTH OF THE TROOPS IN THE CRIMEA.—We learn, by a private letter from the camp, that, when the last mail left Balaklava (Dec. 3), there were about 3,000 sick. The mortality was considerable—84 men died on the 30th of November; 114 out of the 173 wounded Russians, carried to Balaklava after the battle of Inkerman, had died. Cholera of a severe type was prevalent. Horses, mules, and bullocks were dying by dozens. Forage was exceedingly short, and provisions, &c., generally were very scarce; fowls, 8s. a couple; omdles, 3s. per lb.; jams, 5s. a very small jar.—Medical Times and Gazette.

THE HOSPITAL AT SCUTARI.—The Times correspondent, writing from Scutari on the 10th ult., says:—"The number of invalids sent down here from the Crimea does not diminish, and dysentery and fever have been, for the last month, more powerful and fatal enemies than the sword. There are no less than 2,200 sick in hospital at Balaklava, and steamers continue to arrive thence freighted with as dismal cargoes of human suffering as if they had on board the wounded after some great battle. Three days ago the Avon came down with more than 300 men, the vast majority of them dysentery and fever patients. At Balaklava the provision made for the sick and wounded is stated, on unquestionable authority, to be in many respects deplorably defective. The hospital arrangements at Scutari continue to improve; but the increasing number of patients surrounds the management of such vast establishments with fresh difficulties. In the two buildings there cannot now be much less than 4,000 patients—an accumulation of suffering for which it is impossible in all respects satisfactorily to provide. Gangrene, I regret to say, exists in many of the wards, and low fever also; but cholera, which reappeared some days ago, has fortunately not extended."

REINFORCEMENTS AND STORES—THE CAMP AND THE HOSPITAL.

EMBARKATION OF TROOPS.—L'Imperatrice screw steamship arrived at Portsmouth on Saturday, from Liverpool, to embark troops for the Crimea. She has incurred some damage to her machinery, which will take some days to repair. She takes out 952 privates of various regiments, 4 captains, 7 lieutenants, 9 ensigns, and 25 sergeants; in all, 997.—The steam transport Adelaide arrived at Spithead on Saturday, to embark troops for the East. She takes out detachments of the 19th, 38th, and 86th Regiments, and 2nd battalion of the Rifle Brigade; calling at Plymouth for a detachment of the 34th Regiment.—Two companies of Royal Artillery have arrived at Woolwich from Jersey, and are to embark for the Crimea on the 3rd of January next.—Captain Engledue has arrived at Southampton from Toulon and Marseilles, where he has been engaged superintending the embarkation, on board the Peninsular and Oriental Company's vessels, of French troops for the Black Sea.

MINIE RIFLES.—The Government has entered into contracts for 50,000 Minié rifles and rifle carbines; the contracts have been taken by manufacturers at Liège, Birmingham, and London. The most extensive contracts have been taken by Belgian houses, and it is stated that the supply from all places will extend over 3,000 per week; the Government being extremely urgent, the workmen and women were engaged the whole of Christmas-day.

RIFLES, CARBINES, &c. FOR THE CRIMEA.—During the week upwards of 200 labourers, including fatigue parties from the Tower garrison, have been employed in shipping Minié rifles, carbines, sabres, medical stores, &c., from the Tower-wharf, for the seat of war. Although the supply is enormous, it is not equal to the demand from Malta and Constantinople, a reserve of fire-arms being kept at both places for the purpose of supplying the troops of both nations in the Crimea. The supply of fur clothing also is very insufficient, the contractors being unable, even with the assistance of the Hudson's Bay Company, to obtain a sufficient quantity of prepared skins. There are now upwards of 20,000 cloaks made, with the exception of the fur linings.

SIEGE-GUNS.—The Black Prince screw steam-vessel, with a large supply of siege-guns, &c., sails immediately for the Crimea, and the Lady Eglinton screw is to follow her. A considerable number of newly-invented iron bedsteads, with sacking centres, for the sick and wounded, have been delivered at the Tower-wharf for conveyance to the Crimea; a number of newly-invented water-beds, which will save a vast amount of suffering, are also ordered out to the East.

GUN-COTTON.—At Vienna 160 guns have been just cast, to employ gun-cotton instead of gunpowder. By the employment of the former it is stated that 6-pounders can be converted with "superior effect into twelve of the description which the Russians are now employing." "Cottonensis," writing to the Times, says—"Gun-cotton is from four to six times as powerful as gunpowder; it is quicker in discharge, but is quick or slow according to the degree of compression; it makes little smoke, it does not foul the gun, it saves the delay of priming, it seldom misses fire in the worst weather, it may even be kept in water seven years uninjured; it heats a gun less than powder, and it will be found safer in use, and eventually less dangerous to manufacture. An impression has gone abroad that gun-cotton explodes spontaneously, or by an ordinary blow, like chloride of nitrogen, or detonating powder. This is not correct; it is a chemical substance which will only explode by some means capable of producing a temperature of 350°. I have never had an accident with it myself, although I have submitted it to the severest tests. The bombardment by the allied fleets on the 17th of October would have been much more effective if the discharge of each broadside had been smokeless, and capable of being directed at embrasures instead of being chance shots at a granite wall. How many a gallant Englishman would live to tell of the bloody dawn of Inkerman if the powder of the Miniés had not been rendered useless by nightwork in the trenches! Sufficient ammunition for immediate use could have been recovered from the wrecks of the 14th of November, and innumerable other advantages secured, if our Ordnance authorities had been but a step in advance of the Viennese. Seven years ago gun-cotton underwent a few experiments at Woolwich, but by the help of the vested interests of the gunpowder manufacturers, it was suppressed in the act of birth. Seven years' experience of it, and on a large scale, have satisfied me, as it has many others, that it possesses an enormous advantage over gunpowder, and very few of its defects. A 12-pounder gun loaded with cotton weighing one-half the usual charge of powder, produces the effect usually attributed to an 18-pounder; and the increase of range obtained by its use will soon, if this war goes on, create a revolution in all ordnance affairs. With cotton there is no difficulty in arriving at the long-talked-of desideratum of dispensing with a touch-hole, and firing the charge in the very centre by galvanic agency."

HUTS FOR THE FRENCH ARMY.—The shipping of huts for the French army, from Southampton, proceeds very satisfactorily. Several vessels are being rapidly loaded with them, amongst which are the Smuroo, 1,000 tons; the Saladdin, 900 tons; the Swiftsure, 1,500 tons, and the Falcon clipper. A company of French engineers are to sail with each ship.

The Opinione of Turin states from Berio that orders have been received there for the manufacture of 20,000 wooden shoes for the English troops in the Crimea.

THE PATRIOTIC FUND.—A poor woman, named Haseltine, 70 years of age, at East Hardwick, near Poutefract, who for a number of years has sold spices, whilst her husband has been breaking stones upon the road, had saved 130 farthings, which no persuasion could induce her to part with hitherto. She has now presented them to the Patriotic Fund.

MESSERS. BENNETT, of the Spon-lane Foundry, West Bromwich, have accepted a contract for 1,000 tons of 8, 10, and 12-inch shells, to be executed without delay, for the Crimea.

MATERIAL FOR THE RAILWAY IN THE CRIMEA.—Messrs. Butler, of Stanningley, near Bradford, have despatched, per railway, to Birkenhead, 3,220 railway chairs for consignment to the Crimea; and they also, on the 19th, despatched 2,860. These consignments weighed twenty-one tons ten hundred-weight. By the North-Eastern Railway, a large quantity of chairs have likewise been sent by Messrs. Butler to Sunderland and Hull, for immediate shipment. These, we are informed, were addressed to "Messrs. Peto, Brassey, and Betts, Crimea," and will be conveyed to their destination at Balaklava by the Earl of Durham transport.

COMFORTS FOR THE CRIMEA.—The provincial journals

now abound with announcements of subscriptions and contributions for our army. The interest taken in the matter is indeed surprising and gratifying. All sects and parties—rich and poor—"old men and children, young men and maidens," join in the good work. Warm clothing, linen, hats, and every imaginable article of dress—Bibles, Prayer-books, and works of general literature—tobacco, cigars, and snuff—meats, delicacies, and luxuries—cooking utensils, and stoves—in fact, everything that is necessary—are being forwarded. Especial praise is due to the ladies, who are foremost in subscribing and working for the common object.

A SCOTCH GENTLEMAN, now in Rome, hearing of the losses of soldiers' winter clothing by the shipwrecks in the Black Sea, sent off an immediate order to Leghorn for £450 worth of flannels, &c., to be purchased and shipped for the Crimea.

ROGER AND THE ALLIED TROOPS IN THE CRIMEA.—The celebrated French tenor Roger, late of the Grand Opera at Paris, who is making a musical tour in Germany, seeing in the Paris paper l'Illustration the appeal of the well-known Comtesse de G— to the public, to send a supply of cigars and tobacco, as a Christmas present to the British and French troops in the Crimea, wrote to offer his contribution of one evening's profit at the theatre, and fixed on the opera of La Dame Blanche, in which he would have to sing the aria "Oh quel plaisir d'être soldat." As the circumstances were well known at Hamburg, the house was crowded, and Roger sent to Paris a bill for 1,500 francs.

INCIDENTS, ANECDOTES, AND MEMORANDA.

LORD RAGLAN'S LUNCHEON AT INKERMANN.—At the battle of Inkerman, when the fire was the hottest, a pouf, with a pair of papiers, led by Lord Raglan's German servant, was seen advancing towards the position of the Commander-in-Chief. Every officer whom the man passed in his way desired him to go back, as the balls were falling thickly around, and the chances were that he would be killed. The cool German replied, "My master is always ill if he does not have luncheon, and his luncheon he shall have." The man reached his lordship's post through the fiery storm, and returned in safety.

THE HEROIC PRIVATE who slew so many Russians on the bloody field of Inkerman ere he fell, was Fergusson Bowie, formerly a flax-dresser, and native of Arbroath.

THE LIGHT CAVALRY CHARGE AT BALAKLAVA.—A private of the 11th Hussars, W. H. Pennington, in writing to his mother says—"It was a mad though gallant charge made by our light cavalry at Balaklava. The word was given to 'charge guns to the front.' We advanced at a gallop to these guns, amid a fearful fire of grape, shell, and canister; with ditto on the right and left flanks, and infantry also pouring in a tremendous fire; horses and men fell thick and fast, but even this did not check our onward rush. All the Russian artillerymen were sabred, and for an instant we were masters of the guns, but having no support could not keep them. In this condition we were charged in flank and rear by numerous regiments of Russians and cavalry; and, but for the desperation with which our fellows cut their way, there would not have been a single man return from that fatal charge. I never reached the guns in front, as a grapeshot went through my busby, two inches above my head, another through the calf of my leg, and the next through my horse's head. I was at the mercy of their Lancers, whom I saw lancing our dismounted men. The demons gave no quarter when you are down. At this moment the 8th Hussars came by, with a horse without its rider. This I mounted, and formed in the rear of the 8th, and dashed on. But worse again—we were obliged to wheel 'right about,' and to pass through a strong body of the enemy's cavalry, which had gathered in our rear, cutting off our retreat. Of course, with our handful, it was life or death, so we rushed at them to break through them, but as soon as we got through one body there was another to engage. At any rate, with five or six of our fellows at my rear, I galloped on, parrying with the determination not to lose my life, breaking the lances of the cowards who attacked us in the proportion of three or four to one, occasionally catching one a slap with the sword across his teeth, and giving another the point in his arm or breast. At any rate they kept close on me till I got sight of our heavies, when, thanks be to God, they stopped pursuing me, and I got clear without a scratch from their lances." Well may the gallant fellow add, "I will not disgrace you as a soldier, take my word."

THE ABBE FERRARI, chaplain to the French army of the Crimea, died of cholera, at Constantinople, on the 7th inst. His funeral was attended by an immense crowd of Europeans. Dr. Levy pronounced an eloquent oration over the grave.

FRENCH MINERS AT SEBASTOPOL.—The inhabitants of this city, it seems, anticipating its destruction, have buried many articles of value, which they hoped to be able to dig up again when the army should have departed. They, however, did not reckon on the works of the miners, and every day these men find something of value in the shape of silver and plated articles, jewels, and costly ornaments, and among other things is an elegant bonnet carefully packed in a box. The bonnet is of pink satin, of the first style of fashion, and still bears the address of the maker in the Rue de la Paix, in Paris. This bonnet, after having been tried on by all the men, has since been hung up as an ornament in one of their tents.

A MERRY MARINE.—The following letter from a marine serving before Sebastopol is an instance proving how much our happiness is of our own making, even under the most disadvantageous circumstances, (always supposing the letter was not written under the influence of the rum which he mentions):—"Heights of Balaklava, November 24. I have not had my clothes off to sleep since I have been here, and I shan't if we stop for six months. We sleep with our belts on and sixty rounds of ammunition, and our muskets loaded by our side. There are sixteen of us crammed in a small tent that was made to hold eight, and when it rains we may as well go outside as stop in, for the water comes through in larger drops than it would if there was no tent at all. They may do very well for Chobham, to please the Cockneys, but they do not please us. I do not think the people in England know how we are served, but I shan't not say any more about it. It is no part of a soldier's duty to grumble; and, thank God, I am able to go through it, even if the hardships were ten times as severe. We had a dreadful storm the other day. All our tents were blown down; there was not one left standing. Two or three of the Rifle corps were killed, some of our men were severely bruised, our colonel got his leg dislocated, and a great many lost all their clothes except what they had on. I lost nothing; I felt quite at home; I have seen plenty of storms at sea, and I was glad of the chance of seeing one on land; but I am sorry to say there has been very great destruction among the shipping. I should like you just to see my mug. I have not had a shave these ten weeks, and I get a wash once in three or four days, and change my shirt once in 14 days, but I feel quite comfortable, and am as happy as the day is long. I get three pints of the best rum in a week. What do you think of that? You can tell Bob I have got a slap-up greatcoat for him that I got one night when I was out on picket: the man that had it that night will never want it again, for he was not able to carry away a small bit of lead I made him a present of."

PARLIAMENT.

SATURDAY, DEC. 23.

In the Lords, the Enlistment of Foreigners' Bill, as amended by the House of Commons, was considered and agreed to, and the Royal Assent was given to it, as also to the Militia Bill. Their Lordships then adjourned, on the motion of the Duke of Argyll, till Tuesday, January 23.

In the Commons, the following notices of motion were given:—By Sir J. V. Shelley, to inquire into the removal of the Hon. T. F. Kennedy from the office of Commissioner of Woods and Forests; by Sir W. Jolliffe, to bring in a bill for promotion of education; by Sir B. Hall, to bring in bills to amend the Public Health Act, the Nuisances Removal Act, and the better local management of the metropolis; and by Mr. Heywood, to extend and alter the act prohibiting marriages within certain degrees of affinity. The House then adjourned till Tuesday, January 23.

FOREIGN AND COLONIAL NEWS.

FRANCE.

THE EMPEROR'S SPEECH.—The Emperor opened the Legislative Session on Tuesday. The following is the substance of his speech:—"Senators and Deputies,—Since our last meeting great events have happened. The appeal which I made to the country to provide for the expenses of the war was so well responded to that the result even exceeds my hopes. Our arms have been victorious in the Baltic as well as in the Black Sea. Two great battles have shed lustre on our flag. Striking testimony has been afforded of the intimacy of our connexion with England. The Parliament has voted thanks to our generals and our soldiers. A great empire made young again by the chivalrous sentiments of its Sovereign has detached itself from the Power which for forty years threatened the independence of Europe. The Emperor of Austria has concluded a treaty, defensive now, to be offensive, perhaps, soon, which unites his cause to that of France and England. . . . The alliance with England is not the effect of a fleeting interest or a policy of circumstances: it is the union of two powerful nations, associated to obtain the triumph of a cause in which for more than a century were involved their greatness, the interests of civilisation, and at the same time the liberty of Europe. Join with me, then, upon this solemn occasion, in thanking, in the name of France, the Parliament for its cordial and hearty demonstration, and the English army and its worthy chief for their valiant co-operation. Next year, should not peace be then re-established, I hope to have the same thanks to address to Austria and to that Germany whose union and prosperity we desire. I am happy to pay a just tribute of eulogium to the army and the fleet, which, by their devotion and their discipline have, in France as well as in Algeria, in the north as well as in the south, worthily fulfilled my expectations. The army in the East has up to this time suffered everything and overcome everything. . . . Let us, then, declare it together, the army and the fleet have merited well of their country. . . . The army is now composed of 581,000 soldiers and 113,000 horses; the navy of 62,000 sailors afloat. To keep up this force is indispensable. Therefore, to fill up the vacancies occasioned by annual retirements and by the war, I ask you, the same as last year, for a levy of 140,000 men. A law will be presented to you, having for its object to ameliorate, without augmenting, the burden of the Treasury; this law, I hope, will soon receive your approval. I shall ask your authority to raise a fresh national loan. No doubt, this measure will increase the public debt. Nevertheless, let us not forget that by the conversion of the stock the interest of that debt has been reduced twenty-five millions and a half. . . . The struggle which is proceeding, circumscribed by moderation and justice, although it may frighten some, gives so little alarm to great interests, that soon the different parts of the globe may expect to enjoy the fruits of peace. Foreigners cannot fail to be struck with the touching spectacle of a country which, relying upon Divine protection, sustains with energy a war at 600 leagues distance from its frontiers, and which develops with the same ardour its internal riches—a country where war does not prevent agriculture and industry from prospering, or the arts from flourishing, and where the genius of the nation is displayed in everything that can tend to the glory of France."

THE MONITEUR publishes an Imperial decree opening a credit of 5,000,000*fr.* in the Ministry of the Interior, to afford labour during winter to the working-classes, and to be distributed among charitable institutions.

It is said that the budget which has been laid before the Council of State shows a deficit from 80,000,000*fr.* to 87,000,000*fr.* This is not extraordinary when we consider the expenditure of the war. But it must be made up. The way in which this is proposed to be done is by re-imposing on real property the 17 centimes which had been taken off at the time of the proclamation of the Empire, and which, it is expected, will produce about 20,000,000*fr.* The remainder will be provided by means of a loan. The grant of 5,000,000*fr.* for the relief of the working-classes, decreed in the Moniteur, is the gilding of the pill.

THE NEW LOAN.—On Wednesday, a projet de loi was presented to the Legislative Body, authorising a loan of 500,000,000*fr.* The report of the Ministerial programme was received with acclamation by the Assembly, which immediately withdrew to its bureaux to name the commission charged with the examination of the project.

On Thursday the Legislative Body unanimously adopted the bill authorising the Minister of Finance to borrow a sum of 500,000,000*fr.* 241 members were present.

FIRING AT GENERAL ROSTOLAN.—At Marseilles, on Saturday, a recruit (a substitute), who is supposed to be insane, fired at General Rostolan in the street. The ball missed the General, but struck Colonel Fornier Saint Lary, the head of his staff, in the leg. The wound is but slight. The assassin was arrested on the spot: indeed he did not attempt to escape. Another pistol, fully charged, was found on him. It caused great excitement through the town, as it was at first feared that it was the result of a political conspiracy.

On questioning the young ruffian, however, it appeared that his object was to revenge what he considered a personal insult in having been rejected several times as a military substitute.

REDUCTION OF FRENCH POSTAGE.—A new postal treaty has been entered into with France, the effect of which will be the reduction of the postage on prepaid letters weighing not more than 10z. to 4d., instead of 8d. or 10d., as heretofore. This reduced postage will carry the letter from any part of the United Kingdom to any part of France or Algeria. If the letter be posted unpaid the charge will be double. The postage on letters passing through England and France will also in many cases be reduced. The new treaty will come into operation on the 1st of January.

AUSTRIA.

THE AUSTRIAN ARMY.—The light cavalry regiments now consist of 1,749 horses, and the heavy ones of 1,133 horses; but when the Oriental crisis began they were not half so strong. An officer of rank, who was speaking on the probable issue of a war with Russia, thus expressed himself:—"If we had been obliged to go to war with the Russians at the beginning of this year, their cavalry would have given us a vast deal of trouble, but now we are fully equal to them. As to our infantry and artillery, it is superior to theirs." The whole strength of the 15 or 16 heavy, and the 23 or 24 Austrian light cavalry regiments is estimated at 67,000 men, with 57,500 horses. It is generally thought in Vienna, that if the St. Petersburg Cabinet unreservedly accepts the preliminary points, the Imperial Cabinet will refuse to join the Western Powers in a demand for material guarantees; but others express surprise that people can suppose that Austria, "the Power which is sure to be most exposed to the chicanery and vengeance of Russia," will require less security for the future than the Western Powers.

THE FOUR POINTS.—The Paris papers publish a letter, from Berlin, alleging that the Cabinet of Vienna has formerly informed Prussia that it was disposed to accede to the proposal which she had made, to have the four points discussed in common at Vienna by plenipotentiaries, and to have a positive understanding come to as to their precise meaning. It is believed that conferences will be immediately opened at Vienna. The Prussian Cabinet has made an application to that effect at London and at Paris.

PRUSSIA.

In Prussia the whole population, with the exception of the peasantry in localities where there is little or no intercommunication of thought or knowledge, and the numerically insignificant Kreuz Zeitung party, is pervaded with an intense aversion to Russia. The animosity that has been bred in the people by the conduct of the Russians when co-operating with Prussia in 1813-15, as friends, has been thrown into the shade by the many indignities, humiliations, and injuries that Prussia has had to suffer from her neighbour since then.

Under these circumstances, the present would seem a favourable moment to establish a northern league in Europe against Russia. By the treaty of December 2nd, Austria formally interred the Holy Alliance, whose death-knell she rang when she sent her congratulations on the battle of the Alma to London and Paris. Prussia is perfectly satisfied with this step taken by Austria, although highly indignant at the manner in which it was taken. She has now a security that if she should co-operate with the Western Powers she would have nothing to fear on the part of Austria.

SPAIN.

On the 19th M. Luzuriaga, Minister of Foreign Affairs, read the programme of the Cabinet to the Spanish Cortes. Its substance is as follows:—"Sovereign liberty of the Cortes to decree the bases of the constitution; a constitutional throne; royal sanction for the ordinary laws; individual safety, with no limit save that required for the safety of the public; right of petition; religious unity in whatever may have an interior character, without trespassing on the respect due to other forms of belief; strong parliamentary power, that the regal power may not be destroyed; organisation of parliament in both houses; the right of refusing taxes not voted by the Cortes; ministerial responsibility; a national guard; enlightened decentralisation; peace and friendship with all nations; assimilation of the colonies to the peninsula; general system of railways; civil equality for obtaining public situations; special instruction in arts and sciences; free press with trial by jury." Marshal Espartero demanded a compact majority and a good constitution. If any one should attempt to make the nation retrograde he would put himself at the head of the National Guard and army, in order to protect the laws. On the 20th the Queen gave a grand ball to celebrate the birthday of the Princess of the Asturias, dancing with General Espartero, M. Madoz, President of the Cortes, and General San Miguel. Her Majesty showed marked courtesy to General Espartero, and the King danced with the Duchess de la Victoria. In the Cortes, on the same day, bills were "presented" enacting that the deficit of 1855 shall not be reckoned in the budget of 1856; to abolish the sinking fund, to sell by auction the property of charitable establishments. The debate on the address was resumed, and concluded favourably on the 21st. M. Soulé was present at the discussion which took place in the Chamber relative to the sale of Cuba.

The number of National Guards in Spain is 205,000, and of them 56,000 are armed.

The Madrid journals of the 22nd contain no intelligence of importance. It is stated that on the 16th a small Carlist band of thirty men had appeared in the small town of Villa de Mola, and proclaimed Charles VI. King of Spain. The band then left, and a company of infantry was sent in pursuit of it. Another still smaller band of Carlists had made its appearance for a moment in the environs of Tuleel. In the Cortes, on the 22nd, General O'Donnell was attacked by the opposition for having neglected to arm the National Guard. He replied that he had already given out 92,330 muskets. M. Labrador made a motion, calling for modifications in the organisation of the army. It was rejected. The Queen distributed colours to the national militia. Her Majesty was received with enthusiasm.

On the 23rd the Cortes voted the bill fixing the effective force of the army at 70,000 men.

DENMARK.

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 20.—The programme of the new Ministry, laid before the Chambers by Messrs. Bang and Hall, has been received with great satisfaction, which appears to be shared in by the press and the public. The Government freely and fully accept, as the basis of the institutions to be given to the monarchy and the duchies, the principle of a complete separation of special and ordinary affairs, and the replacing of the present Danish Diet by an assembly invested with complete legislative powers, and in which larger functions will be given to the national representation. As to foreign policy, the Ministry declare that no change will take place. Nevertheless, it is generally thought that if the new Cabinet continues to observe neutrality, it will be done in a more extended manner than by the preceding administration.

ROME.

FINANCIAL EMBARRASMENTS.—A commercial and financial crisis threatens Rome. The ambiguity of the Government's conduct towards the state bank has left everybody uncertain as to whether the bank paper is obligatory or not, and the squabbles on the exchange have been so great that it has been found necessary to establish two rates of exchange, there being about two per cent. difference between notes and silver. Meanwhile the bank's discount operations having been suspended throughout the state, the consternation of mercantile men, who had hoped for a renewal of their bills, is at the utmost. The secret of the whole crisis may be told in a few words. Cardinal Antonelli and his brother (who is governor of the bank) had fully intended and expected that the silver currency would not have been re-established, and consequently had extended the bank operations enormously, but the Pope's immovable resolution to extirpate the forced paper currency by the end of the year produced a run on the bank which would have been fatal without the Deus intersit mediation of the Secretary of State.

NAPLES.

A curious quarrel has lately broken out between the Neapolitan Government and the Jesuits in Naples. The latter had been in the habit of teaching that the Pope was superior to all the other sovereigns of the earth, and the former has thought proper to regard this not very novel doctrine among Roman Catholics as highly revolutionary in its tendency. The consequence was, that M. Mazza, the Director of Police, sent for Padre Giuseppe, the chief of the Jesuits, the other day, and told him that they must discontinue this practice, and should recollect that in 1848 they were sent out of the country in carriages; "but if these things continue," said the worthy Minister, "the Government will kick you out of the kingdom." The reverend father, much distressed at the result of his interview, hastened back to his convent, and lost no time in compiling a protest, which was published at Naples a day or two after.

INDIA AND CHINA.

BY THE ARRIVAL of the steamer Bombay at Trieste, on the 24th, we learn that Dost Mahomed has opened a friendly correspondence with the Governor-General; and a treaty had been made with the Khan of Khelat, to protect our frontier from Kurachee to Candahar. Nepal was increasing her military forces. The Burmese Envoy from Ava was expected at Calcutta. Capital was abundant and almost redundant. At Bombay trade was bad. In the north of China the Imperialists had gained some advantages over the insurgents, and they expected shortly to recover Shanghai. The stock of teas at Canton was very trifling.

Despatches in anticipation of the Overland Mail arrived on Thursday. The following is from the Bombay Times of the 28th November:—

"The intelligence from Cabul states that Dost Mahomed, finding himself advancing in years, is anxious to make arrangements for the succession of his son. Amongst a high-spirited but factious people like the Afghans, the succession will be determined by the sword, by which the Dost himself cut his way to supremacy. The Soodazye dynasty is extinct, but the Barukzayes have no claim to dominion save the power to maintain it; and as Goolam Hyder Khan, destined for the succession, is neither the oldest nor most energetic of the Amcer's sons, a contest is sure to ensue, when British intervention is likely to be asked for. Dost's brothers of Candahar, with whom he has for twenty years been at feud, have taken the alarm, and applied to Persia to assist them in extinguishing the supremacy of English influence. The Russians are said to be fostering these animosities, and to be promising supplies of men and money. Our north-west frontier altogether seems so satisfactory that even alarmists have ceased to prate of danger. The commander-in-chief of the Indian navy, Sir Henry Leake, proceeds to Calcutta, by order of the Governor-General, to make arrangements for the reconstruction of the Indian navy, the head quarters of which will hereafter be in Bengal. An action has been lately decided before the Supreme Court in Bombay, to the effect that the Shop and Stall Tax, which yields from £5,000 to £6,000 a year to the Municipal Fund, is illegal. Out of from ten to fifteen thousand people who pay the tax, Mr. Connou, Editor of the Bombay Gazette, was the only man who had the spirit to resist and carry the matter into court, where he was triumphant. On the 24th and 25th of September, and again on the 6th of October, violent hurricanes prevailed in the China Seas. A furious rain and thunderstorm occurred in the desert, betwixt Cairo and Suez, on the 20th of October, and rain was experienced all down the Red Sea in the end of the month, two inches having been measured at Aden, these regions being in general rainless. On the 7th day of November a second storm of some severity occurred in the lower part of the Red Sea; and after several days of intensely dry weather, with every appearance of continuing fair, Bombay was on the afternoon of the 26th visited with a heavy fall of rain. A brilliant display of meteors occurred at Kurachee at daybreak on the 14th November; they first made their appearance about 4 A.M., and for the next two hours they continued to shoot, without intermission, across the firmament, until, indeed, daylight obscured them. The Legislative Council of India have agreed to throw open their meetings to the public. The Council itself, it is said, is working indifferently, and the Chief Justice, Sir Lawrence Peel, will, it is affirmed, on his return to England, make disclosures on the subject that will astonish the community. The new Council is in mechanism a miserable botch, compared to the Legislative Councils for the three presidencies, proposed by the Queen's Judge, in 1831, published in the Blue Books of the time; but then it provides valuable Civil Service appointments, and that is quite enough to make the best of measures be transformed to the worst.—The embassy at Ava had not, at our latest dates, reached Calcutta.—The Governor-General is at Calcutta, and the Governors of Madras and Bombay at their respective seats of authority. Sir Henry Somerset arrived at Bombay on Thursday the 16th instant, and immediately assumed the command of the army; he has gone to Poona on duty. A magnificent launch took place at Bombay on the 21st—the steamer Punjab, 1,800 tons and 600 horse power, the consort of the Assaye, a ship of similar birth launched in March. The two were intended for the packet line to Suez, when the Court of Directors resisted all outcries to abandon the mail contract. They will (now that it has been conferred on the P. & O. Company), it is supposed be employed on the Bengal side, and the head quarters of the Indian Navy be transferred to Calcutta.—Trade is dull, and there is a greater stringency in the money market than at the date of our last summary."

RUSSIAN POLICY IN CENTRAL ASIA.—The Delhi Gazette asserts that there is evidence, hardly now to be gained, that Russia is becoming possessed of the whole Doab of the Jaxartes and the Oxus, a country which for ten centuries of history and twenty more of tradition has supplied India with invaders. The head quarters of a Russian force—how large or how small that force is of little moment—are now established within 500 miles of our north-west frontier. The Friend of China says:—"About a month since an envoy from Kokan, named Shahzada Sultan Mahomed Suddozye, came into Peshawur on a mission to the chief commissioner. He had been six months on the road, and was full of the Russian approach towards his own province. He was followed by a more important embassy. Dost Mahomed is really frightened; his cause of alarm is really a Russian advance, and he has redly despatched an embassy to the British Government. About the 12th October Meerza Kassim Khan, moulburdard or keeper of the great seal to Dost Mahomed, arrived at Peshawur as envoy from the Amcer. Major Edwards was in the Liazars, and thither the envoy proceeded with his credentials. Of course his master's views as yet remain a secret; but it is thoroughly understood that the Amcer is anxious for assistance.

The following is from the Cabul correspondent of the Delhi Gazette:—"The King of Bokhara, who has always been sore on the possession of Bulkh by the Afghans, has sent a friendly mission to the Russian general near the Kokan country, which, if not now subject to Russia, must sooner or later become its dependent. The Russians have taken a place called Taj Gung. These statements are not only sent to Dost Mahomed by his son the ruler of Bulkh, but they are confirmed by reports which have since arrived here. The Sirdar (who is very anxious to know the result of the negotiations at Peshawur) further informs his father that 2,000 Persian troops are quartered at Heemt, that Zaheer-ool-dowlah does nothing without consulting their commander, and has become a mere creature of Persia. A report, says the Sirdar, has also reached us to the effect that Meer Walee and certain other ex-Oosbeg chiefs, expelled from the country by Dost Mahomed, have been urging the King of Bokhara to cross the Oxus with his army and turn me out of my government. If the King of Bokhara does not take this step, the Oosbeg chiefs say that they will lay their honour (nang) at the feet of the Russians, and enter into the service of the Russian general at Kokan. The King of Bokhara has asked them, in reply, to await the report of his mission which he has sent to the Russian general."

THE REBELLION IN CHINA.—By letters from Hong Kong of November 11, we learn that the rebellion holds its ground, although unable to make headway, and the Imperialists do little more than act on the defensive, beyond buying up the insurgent chiefs at whatever rates demanded, and in this way the Mandarins hope to effect a quick and complete reorganisation. Europeans think otherwise. The rebellion is everywhere popular, notwithstanding the weakness of the insurgents, arising from the want of arms and ammunition. Shanghai still holds out; it is, however, generally believed that the city will shortly succumb, not to the valour of the Imperial force, but the seducing influence of the sycee, and the demoralisation and weakness incidental to the altered circumstances of the rebels, some of whom are from the dregs of the population, although now sitting and acting as men of authority. Such are the prospects in the north. Towards the south the rebel cause is not less unfavourable. The Imperialists have had two or three successful encounters with the insurgents, and on every occasion the latter were routed with severe loss. Canton not only remains in the hands of the Imperial authorities, but is likely to continue so; the better class of people within the city have agreed to pay 10,000 soldiers to protect the place, and carrying on offensive operations against the rebels. The excessive demands for contributions on the part of the rebels have made their cause desperate, if not hopeless, in the south. Recently, the rebels succeeded in capturing twenty-one chops of tea whilst in transit from the interior to Canton. Some of the tea has reached Hong Kong, and 1,460 chests were seized by the police. An investigation is going on at the police-office, which will probably implicate some of our native trading population as being mixed up in the affair.

SINGAPORE.—THE BORNEO INQUIRY.—The commissioners have, as they think, completed their task, and the investigation has ceased. They do not proceed to Labuan or Borneo, but terminate their proceedings, and make their report to her Majesty's Government. That it will be favourable to Sir James Brooke, the commissioners have not concealed.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.—In Bombay the stringency of the money market had increased, and an advance of one per cent had taken place on the discount of several banks. The goods market, on the whole, is depressed. Freights have declined. In Calcutta, trade is dull, the rice and hide markets being the only exception.

AMERICA.

THE AFRICA arrived at Liverpool, on the 24th, with advices from New York, to the 13th. She brings no specie. The Pacific arrived out on the 13th. In the House of Representatives a motion was made requesting the President to tender his mediation in the war with Russia. It was refused. A run had commenced on the savings-banks. The papers state that the President will use every means in his power to accomplish a modification of the present tariff. Blodgett and Co., of Boston, had suspended—liabilities, $2,000,000. Taylor and Cassidy, of New Orleans, had also failed. Several other houses were likewise named. Lord Elgin was to leave for England about the end of the month. The Nova Scotia Legislature passed the Reciprocity Bill on the 11th. Advices from Mexico to the 6th report an engagement on the 24th of November, in which the rebels were routed with loss. The commander of the Government forces was killed. The cities of Mexico and Vera Cruz had voted almost unanimously in favour of continuing Santa Anna as President. The plague was raging in the interior. Five civil judges had been suspended for making disrespectful allusions to the President. One hundred and sixty of Count Bonin's former followers had been released, in compliment to the Emperor Napoleon. The revolution appeared to be gaining ground. According to advices from the Sandwich Islands, the King had ratified the treaty of annexation to the United States. A portion of the United States Japan Squadron had arrived at Honolulu. It was said that the Government of Honduras had agreed to sell Tiger Island to the United States for $20,000. A more cheerful tone pervaded the New York money-market, though little or no relief had been experienced by the mercantile community. Trade generally continued dull.

THE LABOUR MARKET IN THE UNITED STATES.—During the last twelve months nearly 30,000 British subjects, who had emigrated to the United States, have returned to their native land, much to the relief of the country, since there is an amazing surplus of labourers. The wages of labour in the United States are falling, and have been falling for six or eight months, in almost every department of ingenuity and industry. The necessities of life have gone up almost to famine prices, and if the English lower classes know when they are well off they had better stay at home or go to Canada, where Lord Elgin, who has just resigned the Governor-Generalship, has left the most attractive colonies of the British Empire open to emigration.

AUSTRALIA.

THE NEWS from this colony is not of very great importance. Australia is indeed looking with more interest upon European affairs than upon her own, and the public opinion of our colonists is thoroughly and heartily with England in her great struggle.

A day has been set apart in all the provinces for public prayer and humiliation; in New South Wales it was the 18th of August, in Victoria the 14th. In the capitals and in the towns of the interior the day was strictly kept. Collections were made at the churches and chapels for the benefit of the wives and children of the soldiers and sailors engaged in the war. In Sydney £2,000 was thus raised, and the contribution from the whole province will probably be twice that amount.

The growing expense of the Local Government is beginning to create a determined opposition in the Council, exhibited in attempts, of late rather successful, to cut down the estimates. It is calculated that the cost of the Government of New South Wales is, for its small population, more per head than that of Great Britain, though it has neither fleets, armies, nor a national debt.

Lists have been opened for the enrolment of the volunteer forces to be raised for the defence of the colony, the expenses of which have been sanctioned by the Council.

As to the gold fields, two facts are evident—that the gold-seeking population has largely increased in numbers, and that the quantity of gold raised in the first half of the present year is much less than that procured in the same period of 1853; and this is the case though the number of what are called goldfields has also increased from three in 1851 to ten at the present moment. With more fields and a greater population on them, and both rather on the increase than otherwise, the quantity of the precious metal raised shows a gradual diminution. The gold-digging population is not, in the mass, prosperous; the complaints of poverty and destitution are frequent; crimes against property are on the increase; and—a still darker feature—so are cases of insanity. There is no regular occupation in the colony that does not pay better than gold digging—a fact which most of the skilled workmen of the towns have long since discovered; they willingly leave the pursuit to new comers.

Commercial business in Sydney and Melbourne is in a state of depression, almost of stagnation. The markets are choked with goods, and it will require some time for the consumption to reduce the immense supply.

QUEEN VICTORIA AND SANTA ANNA.—According to a Mexican correspondent of the New York Herald, her Majesty Queen Victoria has refused to accept the grand Order of Guadalupe from Santa Anna.

THE KING OF BAVARIA.—Letters from Darmstadt of the 22nd report that the health of King Louis of Bavaria had suffered a serious relapse. On the 21st, at two p.m., the physicians' bulletin informs us that the King was suddenly overtaken by a return of his malady, became unconscious, and exhibited symptoms so alarming that for hours his life was considered to be in extreme danger. About five o'clock he began to recover, and by six the immediate danger was past. The bulletin of the 22nd states that the King had passed a quiet night, but had slept little, and was very weak.

URACHT, Dec. 25.—A few days ago some workmen, while digging up the foundation of an old house in this city, discovered a pan of gold coins—in number about 600—most of them Spanish, but some English. The earliest date is of 1436, the latest of 1534.

NEWS OF THE UNITED KINGDOM.

LONDON AND NORTH-WESTERN AND GREAT-WESTERN RAILWAYS.—An arrangement has been come to for charging equal rates to and from all points accommodated by the lines of these companies. A final meeting of managers was held at the Queen's Hotel, Birmingham, on Saturday last, to determine the increase of rates which is to commence upon lines running north of London on the 1st of January, 1855. The discussion was chiefly in reference to the goods traffic on trunk and branch lines, which have hitherto been considered as competing railways. The result was, that after the date named goods of all descriptions will be subjected to a large increase of charge for conveyance. The advance will vary from 2s. 6d. to 10s. a ton, according to the quality of the goods and the distance they are conveyed. The arrangements are much the same with regard to the passenger traffic. Up to the present time very low fares have been charged, especially between Birmingham, Shrewsbury, and Liverpool; but now the increase of charge will not be less than 500 per cent.; and on the trunk lines the advance will be considerable.

LOSS OF A THOROUGFARE.—The Builder calls attention to the gates now being built at the Buckingham Palace end of Birdcage-walk, and the shutting-up of the thoroughfare that communicated from Constitution-hill and St. James's Palace road with Birdcage-walk, leading to the Courts at Westminster and Houses of Parliament. The gates which were open to pedestrians and equestrians have been removed, and the iron-railing continued to the keeper's lodge.

THE NEW RAILWAY BETWEEN PADDINGTON AND THE NORTH-WEST.—This route is now open, giving the public a speed of above forty miles per hour for 213 miles by the broad gauge, via Birmingham, Wolverhampton, and Shrewsbury, within the same fares and time as by the old routes; but it inflicts upon the public a slow train between Chester and Birkenhead of fifteen miles, occupying three-quarters of an hour, and stopping at every station.

THE LATE DR. KITTO.—The following letter, containing the reply made to an application on behalf of the widow and large family of the late Dr. Kitto, will interest those whose sympathy has been called forth in their behalf. The pension now granted will be a grateful aid to his family in the circumstances in which they are left, through the cessation of the Literary Pension of £100 a year enjoyed by the late Dr. Kitto:—"Dorning street, Dec. 23, 1854. Sir,—I am desired by Lord Aberdeen to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 7th inst., bringing under his notice the case of the widow and family of the late Dr. Kitto, with a view to the pension enjoyed by Dr. Kitto being continued to them. Lord Aberdeen regrets extremely that the very limited sum out of which Civil List Pensions are granted is almost entirely appropriated, but he has had much pleasure in submitting the name of Mrs. Kitto to the Queen for a pension of £50 a year, which is all that remains available from the sum in question, with which recommendation her Majesty has been graciously pleased to comply."

NORWICH ELECTION.—Mr. Peto having undertaken a Government contract—to execute the railway at Balaklava—has necessarily vacated his seat for Norwich. The candidates for the vacancy were Sir Samuel Bignold, Conservative, and Mr. Hamond, Liberal. The nomination took place on Wednesday, and the election on the following day. The election was a spirited one on both sides. At the close of the poll, the numbers were—for Sir S. Bignold, 1,899; for Mr. Hamond, 1,629; majority for Sir Samuel, 270.

DEATH OF THE PRESIDENT OF MAGDALEN COLLEGE.—The Rev. Martin Joseph Routh, D.D., and President of Magdalen College, Oxford, expired on Friday evening the 22nd, a little before eight o'clock, in the 100th year of his age, and after a few days' illness. Dr. Routh had held the headship upwards of sixty years.

DEATH OF PETER MATHIESON.—Peter Mathieson, for nearly thirty years coachman to Sir Walter Scott, died at Abbotsford on the 21st, at the age of eighty-five. He was brother-in-law of Sir Walter's faithful Tom Purdie, and was taken into the poet's service about the year 1801, when Scott first set up a carriage. The pages of "Lockhart's Life" make frequent mention of the trusty and favourite charioteer. The bowling-green at Abbotsford was placed where it is in order that Sir Walter might listen of an evening to the voice of prayer and praise from the coachman's cottage. When Scott's misfortune arose, honest Peter cheerfully descended from the "dignified coachman" to be "ploughman in ordinary." Lockhart thus alludes to Peter's change of character, and his master's feelings on the subject: "I cannot forget, in particular, how his (Scott's) eyes sparkled when he first pointed out to me Peter Mathieson guiding the plough on the haugh. 'Egad,' said he, 'and Papa (this was the children's name for their good friend) and Papa's whistling at his drag. The honest fellow said a yoking in a deep field would do both him and the blackies good. If things get round with me, snug shall be Papa's cushion.'" This last expression was amply redeemed by Sir Walter and his descendants; for old Peter lived and died, where he was wont to live, at "Peterhouse," in comfort, respected and beloved, not merely by those descendants and every member of the family, but by all who knew him.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE SAVINGS BANK.—Never was so much money deposited in the savings bank of Newcastle as on the eve of the present Christmas—an indication of abundant employment for labour, and of increased forethought and providence in the labouring classes.

LIMERICK ELECTION.—On Tuesday Mr. Stephen de Vere was elected to the seat vacant by the death of Mr. Wyndham Gould.

VALUE OF LAND IN IRELAND.—As an instance of the improved value of land in Ireland, it may be mentioned that the fee simple of twenty-nine Irish acres in a rural district of Longford was sold last week for £910.

REPRESENTATION OF AYR.—On Thursday the election for Ayr was decided in favour of Sir James Fergusson, Conservative, who obtained 1,510 votes, against 1,381 for Mr. Oswald, Liberal.

THE TRIBUNALS.

OMNIBUSES AND THE EXCISE.—At the Mansion-house on Tuesday, Mr. Brown, a parliamentary agent, was summoned for 3d., the fare from Kingsland to the Bank. Defendant was put down at the top of Threadneedle-street instead of at the Bank, and he refused on public grounds to pay the fare unless the omnibuses took him to the destination he had bargained for. On Alderman Wilson asking complainant why he did not drive round by Cornhill (Threadneedle-street being blocked up) complainant said that the Excise make them pay a fine if they go in any direction but that specified on their license. On the other hand, the Act of Parliament binds the omnibus proprietors to take passengers to the exact spots mentioned on the omnibus. This latter condition not having been complied with, the magistrate decided that the passenger had no right to pay any fare.

BOOK-STEALING.—Joseph Brasby was on Wednesday charged at Guildhall with stealing twenty-nine books, the property of the Religious Tract Society. The evidence being conclusive, the prisoner was remanded for an inquiry into his previous character.

ROBBING AN EMPLOYER.—At Guildhall on Thursday, Charles Epps, in the service of Mr. Benham, gold and silver refiner, of 54, Barbican, was charged with robbing his employer of old gold and silver to the value of £110. Mr. Benham received information that the prisoner had been seen exhibiting £13 in a public-house, and suspecting it was not his own money he questioned him on the subject. The prisoner stated that the money was his sister's, taken from her by him in sport. Subsequent inquiry showed that this was false; and ultimately, on being pressed, Epps admitted to his employer that he had been robbing him for some months. It was proved, further, that the prisoner had received, between the 22nd of June and the 26th of December, more than £100 for gold, and silver, and lace sold; having disarmed suspicion by representing that his brother was a dealer in the country, and melted lace and silver, which were then transmitted to him (prisoner) for sale in London. This being a common practice in the trade, it appeared a fair price had always been given him. The prisoner was remanded.

BURGLARY AND VIOLENCE.—On Tuesday, at the Southwark Police-court, John Baker, a tall powerful-looking man was charged with being concerned, with another not in custody, in committing a daring robbery on Sunday evening. Eliza Bateman, a servant to Mr. Restell, an independent gentleman said, that on Sunday evening she heard a knock at the door of her master's house in Harper-street, New Kent-road. On opening it a man told her he had come to pay Mr. Restell some money. Not believing the tale, she refused to admit him, closing the door; but almost immediately afterwards the street-door opened and the prisoner and another entered. The latter rushed upon her, saying they were come to rob the house, and threatening to cut her throat if she raised any alarm. They then commenced breaking open drawers and cupboards, and took £4. 10s. and some rings and other articles. Prisoner was apprehended at a beer-shop on the Monday, and identified by the servant. Remanded for a week.

SAVAGE ASSAULT ON A WIFE.—At Southwark Police-court, on Wednesday, Patrick Sullivan was charged with an assault on his wife, who, after mentioning several acts of gross violence, stated that her present complaint was, that on Saturday night, he came home about half-past ten o'clock, and came up stairs to their room, where she was preparing supper. He was under the influence of liquor, and began to abuse her. She got out of the room to avoid his violence, and as she was descending the stairs he kicked her down to the bottom. He followed her, and kicked her on the side of the body, arms, and face. Some of her neighbours heard her screams, and fetched in a police-constable. He was sentenced to three months' imprisonment.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY.—At the Lambeth Police-court on Tuesday, Stephen Minnin was charged with highway robbery. On Saturday night, while a man named Pursell, residing at Bromley, Kent, was walking along the London-road, with a bundle of wearing-apparel, the prisoner rushed at and gave him a desperate blow on the mouth, which knocked him down, and seized his bundle. The prisoner made off, but was followed and secured. The fact of the prisoner having been frequently in custody and tried for various offences was given in evidence, and it was said that at the last Surrey Sessions he was tried on a charge of highway robbery, in which there was not the least doubt of his guilt, yet the jury thought proper to acquit him. Fully committed.

ROBBERY FROM A DWELLING-HOUSE.—Charles Kemble, a boy of fourteen, was on Tuesday charged at the Clerkenwell Police-office with robbing the house of Mr. Taylor, Stoke Newington. The parlour window had been left ajar, and the prisoner entered the room, stealing a pair of silver sugar-tongs, a money-box with some silver in it, and several other articles. He was apprehended through offering the sugar-tongs for sale to a cabman, and was identified also by means of a waistcoat-button he had torn off in getting through the window, which button had been left behind him. He was committed for trial.

BRUTAL ASSAULT.—At Worship-street, on Wednesday, Thomas Gibbs, a cabinet-maker, was charged with a brutal and aggravated assault on Margaret Hughes, a young woman with whom he cohabited. The prisoner had returned home the previous night in a state of savage excitement, and after partaking of a comfortable supper, he commenced to ill-treat her for not providing better fare. He threw a heavy dish at her, knocked her down, and beat her unmercifully as she lay on the ground. The complainant's face was shockingly contused and lacerated, and she was scarcely able to articulate from excessive pain and debility. The defence was, as usual, intoxication. Mr. D'Eyncourt, in severe terms, sentenced him to six months' imprisonment and hard labour.

FRAUD AND FORGERY.—At Bethnal-green Police-court, on Friday, David Jones was charged with fraud and forgery upon his employer, Mr. Cox, solicitor, Hamilton-terrace, St. John's-wood. The prisoner had presented bills to his master for corn, hay, &c., and received money for them, and did not pay it over to the person to whom it was due. His master stated he had been plundered, to the best of his belief, no less a sum than £300. Numerous bills, purporting to be signed, were forgeries. From what further transpired, it was made apparent that the prisoner had been twice tried and convicted for felony, though a good character had been received with him. He was remanded for a week.

RUSSIAN PRISONERS.—At the Thames Police-court, on Tuesday, Captain Wallace, master of the ship Star of the East, stated that thirteen Russian Finlanders, prisoners of war on board her Majesty's ship Devonshire, had been released on application to the Government, on condition of their serving on board the Star of the East, on her voyage to Aden and China. They were put on board, and appeared well satisfied with the ship and the voyage. On the following morning three of them deserted, and their number on Sunday night was reduced to four, and it was feared they had left or were about to leave. A similar number of Russian Finlanders, prisoners of war, had been transferred from the Devonshire to the Antagoust, which had since sailed for Madras, and the men were quite satisfied. There was no doubt the foreigners put on board the Star of the East would have remained if they had not been interfered with by a notorious crimp living in Shadwell, who induced them to desert by offering them higher wages in another English ship. It appearing, however, that the men had not signed the ship's articles, Mr. Yardley felt he had no power to force them to sail in the Star of the East; they were now, he said, prisoners of war at large, and, as such, he granted a warrant for their apprehension.

SMUGGLING.—At the Thames Police-court, on Thursday, Ann Blankney, a Flemish woman, and Caroline Fenninger, a Swiss, were charged with smuggling. It appeared from the evidence that the prisoners were passengers by the Steamer Holland, from Ostend to Gravesend. During the passage Blankney took off a canvas apron, fastened by straps to her shoulders, apparently to relieve herself of its weight. Something excited suspicion, and the tide-surveyor who boarded the vessel at Gravesend received a hint, which led to the discovery of about 500 lbs. of manufactured foreign tobacco on the persons of the prisoners, contained in canvas bags. It was stated that the prisoners were constantly travelling between Belgium and England. They were fined £100 each, and in default of payment, were sentenced to six months' imprisonment.

FALSE CERTIFICATE.—At the same court, and on the same day, Jacob Cluness was sentenced to six weeks' imprisonment for making use of a forged certificate.

PUNISHMENT OF A CAPTAIN OF AN EMIGRANT SHIP FOR NEGLIGENCE.—At the Liverpool Borough Sessions, on Tuesday, Captain J. T. Peat, late of the emigrant ship Golden Era, from Melbourne to Liverpool, convicted the previous Saturday of drunkenness and neglect of duty on her last passage home, thereby endangering the lives of the crew and passengers, was sentenced to be imprisoned for eight months.

CRIMES AND CASUALTIES.

CAPTURE OF ANOTHER GANG OF BURGLARS.—We last week recorded the taking of four burglars near Newcastle. The detective police have captured two more. From statements made by them they appear to have gathered up their notions from reading Mr. Harrison Ainsworth's work "Jack Sheppard," a well-thumbed copy of which, with a mask, dark lantern, skeleton keys, &c., was found in possession of Douglass, who is a young man only twenty years of age. On the 18th of March, they broke into the shop of a Mr. Lee, stealing three pistols and several other articles. They subsequently robbed the shops of Mr. Carr, tailor, and of Mr. Cail, builder, stealing a large quantity of ready-made clothing, some lead, &c. Their last and fourth scheme of plunder was the house of Mrs. Atkinson, Elswick-place, when they contrived to carry off plate to the value of £100, and several portraits. On Friday, W. Gligghorn, W. Goulthorpe, W. Smith, and J. Bevan were brought before the Tynemouth magistrates, charged with attempting to break into a linendraper's shop in that town, as reported last week. The first three prisoners, who were ascertained to be returned convicts, were remanded. Bevan was discharged. A silversmith, Oswald Story, and another man, known as "Jack the Chessman," but whose proper name is John Stony, are also in custody, on suspicion of being concerned in passing stolen property out of the district. All the prisoners are under remand, to give the police time to complete the evidence. The thieves have not all been taken into custody yet, as since the apprehension of the prisoners already named a silversmith's shop in North Shields has been broken into, and more plate and jewellery have been stolen in the same adroit manner as the former robberies.

DARING BURGLARY IN BIRMINGHAM.—A daring attempt at burglary was made at the Bell Inn, Bristol-road, Birmingham, about two o'clock on Sunday morning. The landlord (Mr. Reynolds) was disturbed by sounds which induced him to think that some person was attempting to break into the house. He armed himself with a revolver, descended the staircase, and suddenly unbolting the back door, he heard some person jump to the ground and run along the stable-yard. Mr. Reynolds called upon him to stop, or he would shoot him. The burglar redoubled his speed, and Mr. Reynolds fired, but missed him. He fired a second time with no better result; but the third shot took effect in the head, and the robber, closing on his assailant, a fearful struggle ensued. Mr. Reynolds was the successful combatant, and succeeded in securing the prisoner until a policeman arrived. The prisoner turned out to be a notorious character named Charles Davies, who had twice broken into Mr. Reynolds' premises, and been once sentenced to transportation for a burglary at Walsall. He was severely injured by shots in the head, and was conveyed to the Queen's Hospital. Mr. Reynolds presented also a frightful appearance. The burglar had broken through the back window, and removed several tiles from the roof of the pent-house.

EXTRAORDINARY SUICIDE.—Last week a melancholy occurrence took place at the Eagle Furnaces, West Bromwich, so appalling that the circumstances are hardly credible. A man unknown to the workmen, who were a dejected aspect, went to the above works on Tuesday, and, without appearing to have any object, sat down. After remaining seated a short time, he was desired to move out of the way, and he changed his position without making any remark. A workman was engaged near the spot, but being busy, did not notice him for ten minutes or so. Happening then to turn his head, he saw the unfortunate man lying on his face under the ash grate of the furnace, with all his clothes off, except his shirt and trousers. He lay, head first, under the grate; his back was raised, and nearly touched the bars above. Beneath him the ground was covered with cinders red-hot, and the flame was so strong he could hardly be discerned. The man laid hold of his leg and drew him out. He was scorched all over, and was quite dead. It was evident he could not have fallen under the grate by accident, and it is difficult to conceive the tenacity with which he sought so fearful a death, as he must have crawled, as it were, into a roasting fire. None of the workmen heard deceased make any noise. At the inquest, one of the brothers of deceased stated that a few days before his death he was informed that his brother had gone mad, having turned the chairs and tables over, and after pursuing one of his fellow-servants a considerable distance, had left. The jury returned a verdict of insanity.

TWO PERSONS FOUND DROWNED.—On Sunday information was received that a man of respectable appearance had been found drowned in the Loudon Docks. A bunch of keys and some articles marked H. Freeman were found on the body. Also that of another man, apparently about thirty-five years, in the Thames, off the Bishop's-walk, Lambeth.

FATAL ACCIDENT ON LONDON-BRIDGE.—On Saturday Mr. Payne held an inquest at St. Thomas's Hospital on the body of Thomas Ridley, aged seventy. Mr. Pierce, an engineer, stated that on the previous Tuesday he was on an omnibus on the bridge; the deceased in attempting to cross, found himself just before the omnibus on which witness was. The driver called out to him, and he escaped from one only to come in contact with another. Deceased seemed to lose his presence of mind; he slipped and fell, and the wheel of one omnibus went over his body, and that of another over his leg. His collar bone, eight or nine ribs, and his left leg, were thus broken, and death ensued. Verdict, "Accidental death." It is indeed high time that further accommodation for the frightful traffic of this bridge should be afforded.

RAILWAY ACCIDENT.—A respectable and well-conducted officer of the Waterford and Limerick Railway, named Thomas Barry, was decapitated on the 22nd by the train, while running out to give a signal near the Ballysimon station.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY AT LEEDS.—On Wednesday last a powerful fellow, named Bull, who is known to the Leeds police as a desperate character, was charged at Leeds with a murderous assault and robbery the previous night. About midnight on Tuesday an elderly farm-servant, named James Crossley, called at the Black Bear, and was served with a glass of ale. He drank it at the door of the bar, and observed that Bull and several women were in the tap-room. Not liking their appearance he hastened out quickly, followed by Bull and two of the women. Bull knocked him down by a heavy blow on the head, seized him by the throat, and beat his head against the ground, swearing that if the poor fellow attempted to cry out he should be murdered. Bull was assisted by the two women; and the three, after beating him until he was helpless and bleeding profusely from the ears, rifled his pockets of £14, 10s. 10d., took his cravat from his neck, and his hat from his head, and then ran away. Crossley was subsequently found in a sad state, and conveyed to the chief police-office. There he described his assailants, and Bull and a female named Collinson were at once apprehended. None of the stolen property, however, was found upon either of them. The evidence against Collinson was inconclusive, and she was discharged; Bull was committed for trial at the York assizes.

FATAL RAILWAY ACCIDENTS.—Alexander White, aged about twenty-two years, a stoker on the Edinburgh and Glasgow Railway, was lubricating an engine on Friday the 22nd, at Edinburgh; and, while doing so, his head and arm being through the spokes of the wheel, the engine moved, and he was killed on the spot. On Saturday, another accident occurred at the Walsall station of the South Staffordshire Railway. About one o'clock a goods train arrived from Burton-on-Trent to wait the departure of a passenger train before entering the station. Whilst remaining on the main line in the cutting, another double goods train, heavily laden, and drawn by two engines, came up on the same side, and dashed into the luggage train, smashing eight or nine of the waggon, and nearly destroying one of the engines. A brakeman on the train, named Stretton, was severely injured, and died on Sunday morning. The loss of property by the destruction of the engine and waggon is very considerable.

MYSTERIOUS ACCIDENT ON THE EASTERN COUNTIES RAILWAY.—Mr. Payne held a long inquiry on Wednesday at Guy's Hospital, as to the circumstances attending the death of Ebenezer Samuel Butler, on the Woolwich branch of the Eastern Counties Railway. On the night of the 22nd instant, on the arrival of the nine o'clock down train at the Barking-road station of the Woolwich branch, the inspector and porter went round as usual to collect the tickets. On asking the deceased, who was in a second-class carriage, for his ticket, he handed a piece of tobacco-paper. Finding remonstrance with him unavailing, the man was taken from the carriage, removed from the company's premises, and placed in the main road. From thence he proceeded to the Railway Hotel, and left the house with a labourer at the Victoria Docks, and proceeded with him for half a mile, when they separated. The next morning, about four o'clock, a man, a labourer going to his work, heard the voice of a man who was lying on a heap of ballast, on the main road, outside the fencing of the railway, imploring assistance, as his foot was cut off; he said it had been done near the Barking-road station, and that he had crawled where he was found on his hands and knees. The man was conveyed to his home at Woolwich. His foot appeared to have been cut off. While the deceased was at home he told his wife that he was at the station at Barking, waiting on the platform for the train, and that whilst talking to a young man he heard the whistle for the train to start. He ran to catch the train, and clung to the handle of one of the carriages, when he fell down, and the wheels of the carriages passed over his foot. He called out, "For God's sake, help me; have pity on me;" but no one came to him, although persons were on the platform, and the lights were soon after put out. He added that after that he went on his hands and knees along the line until he was exhausted, and was picked up by a navigator at four o'clock in the morning. This statement he repeated to his brother whilst dying, in Guy's Hospital. The place where he was picked up was a mile and a quarter from the Barking station, and fully three-quarters of a mile from the place where he parted with the witness Bartholomew. The railway people persisted that he was but once at the Barking station, whilst the friends of the deceased, relying on his dying declaration, were impressed with the belief that he made his way back to Barking after parting with Bartholomew, and that on his second visit he met with the injury in the way he described; but this remarkable fact was elicited from the wife of the deceased, that on his being taken home after the accident she searched his pockets, but found no railway ticket. The inspector, with a friend of the deceased, went for half a mile down the line, and no traces of blood could be seen, and no person could have got on to the line for more than half a mile, as it was bounded by a wall nearly eight feet high. It was, however, asserted that below that point traces of blood could be seen for three quarters of a mile—that statement being made by the friends of the deceased only, who are most anxious that the foot of the deceased should be restored to the body. Neither the deceased's foot, boot, or hat, had been found, and it was therefore supposed by the railway people that the accident had not occurred on the line at all. The house surgeon said the deceased was brought in on Saturday morning, being then almost in a state of collapse, with the right foot completely fractured, and several other injuries. The jury returned a verdict of "Accidental death."

SUICIDE IN BETHLEHEM HOSPITAL.—On Thursday Mr. W. J. Payne held an inquest at Bethlehem Hospital, on the body of Martha Day, an inmate of the asylum, who committed suicide by hanging herself. The deceased was admitted on the 15th of June last as a maniacal and suicidal patient, and was labouring under great depression of spirits. She had twice attempted the life of her husband. Since her admission she had betrayed no indication of making any attempt on her life, nor had even spoken on the subject of the past. On Tuesday night she went to bed in rather better spirits than usual. The nurse, on going into deceased's room at six o'clock on the Wednesday morning, found her hanging by the neck from the window frame. She had tied one of her stockings and a silk apron together. Verdict, "Insanity."

EXTRAORDINARY SUICIDE.—On Saturday an inquest was held at Liverpool on the body of Susannah Hudson. Inspector Scott deposed that, about four o'clock on the morning of the 12th instant, he was in the neighbourhood of Clayton-square, when he heard the cry of "Murder" from No. 19, Cases-street—an eating and lodging-house kept by William Court. He perceived a young woman at the fourth storey window, with her back towards him, apparently in the act of jumping out of the window. He called to her not to jump, when she turned round and exclaimed, "But I will jump out." She threw herself into the street. He tried to break her fall, in doing which he was himself severely bruised. On lifting the woman up he found that her leg was broken. She appeared to be very much in liquor. The owner of the lodging-house deposed that deceased and a man whom she called her husband engaged the lodgings, representing they were about to emigrate. They were frequently tipsy, and quarrelled much.—Verdict "Temporary insanity."

HIGHWAY ROBBERY BY A SOLDIER.—At the Bury (Lancashire) Petty Sessions, on Tuesday, John Hackett, a soldier in the 36th regiment, was charged with highway robbery. On the evening of Christmas-day he had met a farmer named Joseph Jackson, near Bury, upon whom he drew his bayonet and demanded his money. Jackson had only a shilling and three pence, which, by the soldier's direction, he threw upon the road. The latter then took up the money and cautioned the farmer not to take any steps to follow him, but the latter subsequently gave notice at the Bury barracks, and he was found, about two miles distant, in a public-house. The prisoner pleaded that he was drunk. Another witness stated that the prisoner had demanded his money the same evening, threatening to blow his brains out. The magistrates committed the prisoner for trial at the next Assizes at Liverpool.

MURDER IN TIPPERARY.—On Tuesday, a murder was committed at Carraduff, Tipperary. The deceased—Patrick Hocter, a fine athletic young man, not more than twenty-four, and unmarried—came to Personstown, with friends, to enjoy the holiday. After enjoying themselves they proceeded homewards. They were all seated in a car, driven by Carroll. They had some dispute with a party in another car. The police interposed, and peace was restored. The parties were conveyed before a magistrate, who, as the affray was a very trivial one, ordered them to be discharged. Nothing further was heard of them until after nine o'clock, when a report reached the Riverstown police-barracks that Hocter had been murdered, and one or two of his companions nearly beaten to death. Constable Sheahan and party at once proceeded to the lands of Carraduff, where they found Hocter lying dead in a barn, his brains having been knocked out. In an adjoining farm-house lay his relative Carroll, who had received several wounds. The police ascertained that Hocter and his relatives were waylaid at Carraduff by a party of ten men, one of whom was armed with a stone hammer, another with a turpentine-hoe, and the remainder with sticks and heavy bludgeons. Some of them seized the horse, while the remainder of the gang attacked the deceased and those who were in the car. The first blow knocked him into the ditch, where his brains were soon scattered with either the hammer or hoe, both of which were subsequently discovered by Constable Sheahan. A quantity of the hair and blood of the deceased were on the hoe. When Carroll, who was driving, received the first blow, he jumped off the car and ran into a field, whither he was pursued and beaten. The woman screamed loudly, and the small boy ran to the next house, the owner of which, having got a lantern in readiness, proceeded along the road, and very soon found poor Hocter lying in a pool of blood, a lifeless corpse. Three fellows, against whom there are strong grounds of suspicion—one of them was found in the act of washing his trousers—have been arrested.

HORRIBLE MURDER IN THE COUNTY DOWNS.—A most barbarous murder has been perpetrated in the neighbourhood of Warminster, on the person of an aged and inoffensive small farmer, residing in Bavar, named Patrick Gribben. He was the only resident of his cottage. The diabolical occurrence took place on the night of the 9th instant, and was discovered during Sunday, the 10th. A neighbouring woman, with a married daughter of the deceased man, on knocking at his door received no reply, but heard moans. They pushed open the door, when the old man was found lying on his bed, with an extensive wound across the upper part of his head. On interrogating the old man, he distinctly told who the man was who inflicted the wounds, again denying it, and being, from some feeling, disinclined to admit the fact—the accused being no less than his own son-in-law. He lingered until the Friday night following, when he died. The injuries he sustained were a long transverse wound across the upper part of his temple, which was inflicted by a hatchet or chopper, and which not only divided the covering of the skull, but cut also through it, and an extensive fracture of the arm and ribs. An inquest, of three days' duration, was held on the body. The jury were divided in opinion as to who the murderer was—a legal majority not being prepared to make a finding.

FATAL DOG BITE AT PAISLEY.—We regret to notice the sudden death of Mr. George Lyall, wine and spirit merchant, Paisley. Mr. Lyall, on Friday evening, had been assisting to separate two of his dogs that were fighting, and in so doing received several wounds on his left hand. No evil effects developed themselves till late on Tuesday evening last, when he became rapidly worse, and died at half-past one on Thursday morning. The dogs, both of which were great favourites of the deceased, have since been shot.

NAVAL AND MILITARY.

DURING THE WEEK the greatest activity has been displayed in our dockyards and naval establishments—in our ports and harbours. Ships are being repaired and refitted; stores, ammunition, and clothing, are being shipped, and crews organised for the seat of war. It would be impossible to chronicle all these movements, but the following are some of the principal naval and military events of the week.

ON SATURDAY, another Russian vessel, the Ariel, was seized in the port of Belfast, sailing under false colours. Her crew, six in number, were sent prisoners to Greenock, and put on board the Athol troop-ship, to be brought to London in her Majesty's ship Powerful.

THE CLYDE steam-transport, on board of which the late fatal explosion occurred, has had her boiler repaired by the engineer establishment of Portsmouth dockyard; she has coaled, and hauled alongside the dockyard-jetty to ship troops and stores for the Crimea.

THE SCUEW steam frigate Euryalus, 51, arrived in Plymouth Sound on Saturday. She left Sheerness for the Baltic on the 12th of March. On the 12th of November, in thick weather, she ran into the Imperieuse and carried away her bowsprit, and when off the Seaw a bark ran into her and carried away her jury bowsprit, the bark being injured. In chasing a Russian steamer, the Euryalus grounded two hours, but, by throwing shot overboard, was got off again without injury. Before leaving the cruising ground, the 27th November, the spray which was washed up in her bows had become one mass of ice, and the thermometer was at fourteen degrees below freezing point. From the 12th of March to the 29th of November the officers did not set foot ashore, and, excepting part of the passage home, the ship has been without a pilot during her absence. She is considered one of the best steam-vessels in the Baltic expedition. She frequently made twelve knots an hour.

THE AMPHION, now at Sheerness, during her last voyage has been underway 200 days. She left the Downs on the 13th of March, arriving at Copenhagen, from whence she began cruising off Courland, to intercept Russian vessels. She cut her way through the ice in the Gulf of Riga, and captured the barks Carolina and Gelorders. The Amphion was repeatedly fired on, but escaped without serious damage. She subsequently captured eight other Russian vessels, and was present at the operations before Bomarsund. Her boats were the first to land on the Russian soil, close under the Russian batteries, and one of her officers had the honour of hoisting the first English Jack at Bomarsund. On destroying the forts she returned to her former station, her commander being senior officer on the coast of Courland. On the large screwships being recalled to Kiel, this ship formed one of the flying squadron under Captain Watson, of the Imperieuse, cruising in the Gulf of Finland, until the ice compelled her to withdraw. She then returned to Faro Sound, left Faro for Elsinore on the 3rd of December, arrived at Elsinore on the 7th, and steered homeward.

SIR CHARLES NAPEL returned to Portsmouth on Saturday last, from his official business in London. At sunset his flag was struck on board his flag-ship the Duke of Wellington, 131, screw-ship. It is reported that this is but a temporary cessation of the gallant admiral's command, the Baltic fleet being now dispersed, and engaged in conveying troops and other service till the spring. The admiral was honoured by an invitation to Windsor Castle on Wednesday, from whence he left for his residence in Altham-street.

THE OFFICERS AND CREW of the late steam-frigate Tiger are to return from their leave of absence to the Victory, flag-ship, on the 3rd of January, shortly after which they will take their trial for the loss of that ship at Odessa.

ON TUESDAY the preliminary notices with respect to the Russian vessel Pandia having expired, the Court of Admiralty proceeded to condemn her as a lawful capture, she having been seized under simulated papers in Hull.

VOLUNTEERING FOR THE NAVY.—In the past week a very large number of fine, athletic young men, from eighteen to twenty-one years of age, and not less than five feet six inches, attended at the naval rendezvous, Tower-hill, and volunteered for general service for any of her Majesty's ships and vessels. The majority were approved and sent on board her Majesty's ship Crocodile.

THE TRANSPORT SERVICE.—The number of sailing vessels now employed by our Government as transports is 108, and of steamers 56, making a total of 164.

THE DUKE OF CAMBRIDGE.—Constantinople letters of the 10th, in the Constitutionnel, state that the Duke of Cambridge was going to the Crimea again, instead of coming to England.

THE CAVALRY REGIMENTS IN IRELAND have received orders to raise each 120 men, instead of 60 already authorised, for each of the cavalry corps in the East, and have been directed to use every means in their power to have the men drilled within four months, in order that strong reinforcements of draughts and remnants may be ready for active service in the spring. The commanding officers have been instructed to pay every attention to the riding drill.

MEDICAL MEN FOR THE ARMY.—The Royal College of Surgeons of Edinburgh have issued a notice to medical students, intimating that those whose course of study would be completed at the end of the present session, and who intend to apply for admission to the army medical service, may be admitted to examination for the diploma on or after the 16th January, provided they produce a certificate from the Director-General, stating that it is his intention so to employ them if found competent. The examinations, however, will be as strict and comprehensive as if the candidates had finished their course of study.

ARMY APPOINTMENTS.—A correspondent of the Herald says:—Of all the appointments recently made by the authorities at the Horse Guards we defy any one to exhibit a more flagrant combination of the fatal leaven of family interest and favour, bearing with signal injustice on the service generally, but more especially on certain distinguished and meritorious officers, than that of Lord Mark Kerr, a lieutenant-colonel of 1853, who, from the unattached list, has just been gazetted to the command of the 13th Light Infantry, vice Colonel Stuart, who has retired upon half-pay. We find the command of one of the finest and most justly distinguished corps in her Majesty's service conferred upon a young and inexperienced officer, whom we believe never to have had the good fortune of seeing any active service in the field, and who is, moreover, junior by several years to both the field officers, as well as to the three senior captains (brevet majors) of the regiment, all of whom fought bravely, and most of them bled freely, in the service of their Queen and country!

SIR DE LACY EVANS.—This gallant general, who fought so bravely at Inkerman, and who is compelled to return home invalided, arrived at Paris on the 22nd, and had an audience with the Emperor. He left that city on the following day, and is staying at Folkestone.

DEATH OF GENERAL ARNOLD.—We regret to announce the death, in his 73rd year, of Lieutenant-General James Robertson Arnold, K.H., K.C., of the Royal Engineers, which took place on Wednesday, at his house in Onslow-square. He entered the army in 1793, and attained the rank of Lieutenant-General in 1851. He served through the campaign of 1801 in Egypt, and passed several years in the West Indies. At Surinam he was wounded, and for his conduct there was presented by the Patriotic Fund Committee with a sword of the value of a hundred sovereigns.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF having decided on the formation of an artillery barrack at Devonport, the Ordnance are taking steps for its immediate construction.

THE DEATH OF BRIGADIER-GENERAL GEORGE GUSTAVUS DU PLAT, K.H., her Majesty's military commissioner at the headquarters of the Austrian army, took place at Vienna, of dropsy, on the 21st inst. The deceased officer entered the Royal Engineers in 1814, and at the time of his death held the rank of brevet colonel in that corps. His son, Capt. Du Plat, of the Royal Artillery, is equerry to Prince Albert.

ON WEDNESDAY were interred at the Cemetery, Kensal-green, the remains of that distinguished officer, General the Right Hon. Sir James Kempt, G.C.B., G.C.H., colonel of the 1st or Royal Regiment. The ceremony was attended by Sir James Hamilton, Sir George Couper, General the Viscount Hardinge, Major-General Yorke, Lieut.-General Sir Harry Smith, and others.

HALF-PAY OFFICERS.—A return has been ordered of all officers under the rank of field officers now on half-pay, who are willing to serve, and the number who are fit for active service, and also the number and rank of all such officers who have applied to be placed upon active service. This return was ordered on Saturday last, on the motion of Mr. Macartney.

THE FRENCH SOLDIERS have been honoured on the part of the citizens of Gloucester. On Thursday the 21st, a sumptuous dinner was given to them at the Spread Eagle Hotel, as a manifestation of cordial fraternisation. About 100 gentlemen sat down, under the presidency of H. Milnes, Esq., and speeches of the most patriotic character were delivered in both French and English.

THE 10th HUSSARS are under orders to proceed to the Crimea.

GREAT ACTIVITY prevails in the small-arm department of the Ordnance, Enfield, in the manufacture of swords, sabres, bayonets, and rifles. The premises not being sufficiently commodious, the Board of Ordnance are to effect extensive enlargements.

THE BOARD OF ORDNANCE have given orders for the construction of a formidable redoubt at Freshwater, Isle of Wight.

RECRUITING.—On Saturday fifteen additional recruiting parties from various regiments at the seat of war, and quartered in the Mediterranean colonies, arrived in the metropolis and, although it is not customary to march recruits or volunteers on the Sabbath, so great is the demand for men, that more than 100 arrived at the recruiting depot, Delahay-street, Westminster, on the Sunday.

COMPOUND RIFLE CANNON-SHOT.—On Saturday experiments were carried on under the direction of Colonel Wilson, at Shoeburyness, to test the qualities of the compound rifle cannon-shot, submitted to the Board of Ordnance and select committee by Mr. Alfred Jeffery. Twelve rounds were fired with various charges of powder and degrees of elevation; and on the recovery of the shot, in not one instance were the metals, a compound of lead and iron, found detached or fractured, nor did they appear to show any signs of weakness, and their comparative direction of flight was good.

HORSES FOR H. M. FORCES.—No three-year-old horses are for the present to be purchased. Officers commanding are to use their utmost exertions in procuring four-year-old horses, at the present price, £26. 5s. With a view to rendering the augmentation recently authorised to the cavalry regiments, serving at home and in Turkey (but especially those in Turkey), available for service with the least possible delay, the Secretary at War has sanctioned seasoned horses being purchased at the following rates:—Five or six years old, £32; seven and eight years old, £40. These horses must be in good condition, and no horses purchased at these prices that is not at once fit to be put into the ranks, as regards condition and stamina. As few horses, of the class from which cavalry horses are purchased, arrive at the age of seven or eight years without being blemished, or showing some defect, veterinary surgeons are to be instructed not to reject horses for defects which will not interfere with a horse doing his work, and to bear in mind that the object to be obtained is to procure a constitutionally sound horse, fit for the immediate service for which he is required.

YEOMANRY AND MILITIA.

THE EMBODIMENT AND DRILLING OF THE MILITIA is being proceeded with spiritedly throughout the country, and volunteering into the line also continues, though great doubts are entertained as to the sufficient reinforcement by this means. The number volunteering into the line now reaches nearly 8,000. The following is a summary of the movements of the week:

ROYAL LONDON MILITIA.—A special meeting of the City Court of Lieutenancy was held at Guildhall on the 22nd, to receive Lord Palmerston's answer to the request of the commissioners, that her Majesty would "embody the Royal London Militia, and accept their services wherever she might direct." The court was crowded, the Lord Mayor presiding, supported by Colonel Wilson (colonel of the regiment), and numerous aldermen, &c. Lord Palmerston's reply stated that he would comply with the request, but he thought the officers too numerous in proportion to the number of men present at the last training; and he proposed to take one lieutenant, one colonel, one major, four captains, and eight subalterns for her Majesty's service. A long discussion ensued as to whether Lord Palmerston referred to foreign or home service: it was finally decided that foreign service was intended. A vote of thanks was then carried to Lord Palmerston, and a notice of motion was given for the next court to increase the regiment from 600 to 1,000 men. Many of the officers were present, and expressed much satisfaction at the result.

THE FIRST SURREY assembled for permanent duty at Richmond on the 20th instant. The officers have mustered in their usual strength, and about 500 men have already answered to the roll.

THE THIRD ROYAL LANCASHIRE assembled in Preston on Wednesday, and is to remain there for six weeks, at the expiration of which time it will probably be dispatched to Dublin.

UPWARDS of 200 men of the 3d West York Militia, now stationed at Richmond barracks, Dublin, have already volunteered into the line, and the number is daily increasing.

THE CORNWALL RANGERS are to be embodied at Bodmin on the 16th of January.

THE OXFORDSHIRE MILITIA have established schools for the men.

THE FOURTH WEST YORK, stationed at Leeds, have received orders for permanent service.

THE BRECON MILITIA are to be quartered at Horfield Barracks, Bristol.

THE WEST KENT LIGHT INFANTRY assembled at Maidstone on January 3d. Ninety-six of them have joined the line. The West Kent served, during the last war, in Ireland, and gave 2,040 men to the regiments in the Peninsula.

THE SECOND ROYAL LANCASHIRE are to occupy barracks built for them at Everton.

THE ROYAL SOUTH GLOUCESTERSHIRE INFANTRY and the North Gloucester, are to be embodied on Tuesday next.

THE WORCESTERSHIRE MILITIA assembled for embodiment last week. An intimation has been received by the commanding officer that the regiment will not be removed from the country for a considerable time.

THE SECOND SOMERSET have received upwards of 100 recruits, who embark next week for Cork, where the regiment is stationed, and whence it will be sent to Malta in the spring.

THE ROYAL MONMOUTHSHIRE have volunteered to a man for foreign service.

THE FIRST DEVON, quartered at Exeter, have mustered for drill in the Castle-yard. Earl Portescue is colonel. The regiment is billeted on the publicans of the city.

THE ROYAL CARMARTHENSHIRE RIFLES are daily expecting to be called out on permanent duty.

MAJOR TYNDAL, a major in the West Middlesex Militia, expired at Anglessea on Sunday, aged 59. The deceased served in the Peninsula with the 51st Light Infantry, and had received the war medal, with five clasps, for the battles of Salamanca, Vittoria, Pyrenees, Nivelle, and Orthes. He was also for many years major of brigade at Corfu, and military secretary to Sir Alexander Woodford at Gibraltar. The gallant deceased was also present at Waterloo, where he was wounded.

THE FIRST AND SECOND WARWICK, each mustering upwards of 700 men, are embodied for permanent duty at Warwick.

THE NAVAL COAST VOLUNTEERS are to be embodied at Yarmouth.

THE EAST MIDDLESEX mustered for permanent duty on Tuesday, at Hampstead.

THE SECOND CHESTER, having received notice of embodiment, will muster at Stockport.

THE SOUTH DEVON, stationed at Devonport, consists of twenty-nine officers and nearly six hundred men.

THE CORPS of the ROYAL SUSSEX LIGHT INFANTRY is to be increased to 1,018 as speedily as may be. At present they do not exceed 600; but from the rapidity with which the men continue to be enrolled, the complement will, it is expected, soon be made up.

THE WEST ESSEX mustered for permanent duty on Wednesday, at Chelmsford, eight sergeants of the Guards having arrived to assist in the drill.

THE ROYAL ANTRIM RIFLES are now rapidly filling up. Already 200 rank and file, and 12 sergeants, and 16 bnglers, are embodied. The volunteers are promising young men, seem delighted with their new occupation, and undergo a daily training. The clothing and accoutrements are expected in a few days.

WARRANTS have been issued by the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland for the embodiment of the undermentioned regiments of militia:—The Queen's Own Royal Regiment of Militia for the city of Dublin; the Limerick County Regiment, the Fermanagh, the Wexford County Regiment, and the Monaghan County Regiment, already embodied.

THE GALWAY MILITIA are being embodied at Loughrea, from whence they proceed to Galway barracks.

THE COUNTY LIMERICK and the LONGFORD MILITIA have both been eminently successful in enrolling volunteers, and have also sent several to the line.

SMALL TALK.

Lord Palmerston has appointed the Rev. W. H. Buck, curate of St. George the Martyr, Southwark, to the chaplaincy of the Queen's Prison, the Rev. H. Vachell having resigned.

There are no less than seventy-two members of the House of Commons who claim to be excused on election committees on account of being more than sixty years of age.

Mr. Digby Seymour, M.P., is appointed Recorder of Newcastle-upon-Tyne. This appointment renders necessary a new election for Sunderland.

The Lord Chancellor has presented the Hon. and Rev. Frank Sguden to the Vicarage of Brignall, the Rev. J. Bacon to Vicarage of Baxterley, the Rev. Cyril W. Wood to the Vicarage of Aswick, and the Rev. E. Edmunds to the Vicarage of St. Michael's, Southampton.

On Christmas-day the inmates of the metropolitan workhouse were, as usual, regaled on Christmas fare. The Christmas pudding for the in-door paupers of St. Pancras parish was composed of 5½ cwt. of fruit, 1 cwt. of sugar, 3 lbs. of spice, and 3 sacks of flour, 300 eggs, 9 gallons of milk, &c. 84 stone of 14 lbs. was the quantity of beef cooked.

The Assembly Rooms at Congleton are thrown open to the working-classes every Tuesday and Thursday evening, when the news of the war is read out to them.

Among the notices of sales in the Dublin papers is the unusual one of a "Whale to be sold by private contract!" The monster, which is twenty-two feet long, was captured by the Will-o'-the-Wisp steamer off Whitehaven.

Mr. Bagsbaw, of the Chancery bar, has been appointed one of her Majesty's counsel.

A cake weighing upwards of a ton, and containing tickets for fifteen silver-plated tea-pots and two silver watches, was sold at 1s. per pound by a confectioner in Chesterfield, in the course of Friday and Saturday last.

A pig of the pure small breed was exhibited at the recent show at Darlington: it weighed 43st. 6lb. The head was sold to be exhibited in London.

A prize fight, which was to take place on January 3rd, between Martin Madden and John Lawrence at Leeds, has been prevented by the men being bound over to keep the peace.

In a cairn which has been opened within 200 yards of the site of John O'Groat's House, there have been discovered seven human skulls.

On Christmas morning, there were given away at the Soup-kitchen, Ham-yard, St. James's, 1,200 lbs. of beef and mutton, and 600 lbs. of plum-pudding, so that 300 families received each 4 lbs. of the former and 2 lbs. of the latter, accompanied by a half-quarter loaf, a quart of beer, and a packet of tea or coffee.

A canonry in the cathedral church of St. Asaph, in the gift of the bishop, has become vacant by the death of the Rev. Henry Parry, M.A.

ADULTERATION OF GIN.—From an elaborate report of the Analytical Sanitary Commission, in the Lancet, it appears that, out of 38 samples purchased in various parts of the metropolis, and submitted to a severe test, most of them contained combined sulphates; that seven contained cayenne pepper in very large quantities, so that the syrupy extract left on evaporation possessed a burning and fiery taste. The quantity of sugar in gin ranged from little more than 3oz. to upwards of 13oz. per gallon. It is added that in no case was sulphuric acid detected in the London gin, though, on the authority of Dr. Muspratt, it existed in large quantities in the Plymouth gin. On reference to the tables published by the Analytical Commission, it appears that the largest quantity of adulterations exists in the "vile compound" sold in the neighbourhood of harracks and markets, such as Knightsbridge and Westminster, and Smithfield and Whitechapel. The report states that it is impossible to conceive a more scandalous adulteration of gin than cayenne pepper or grains of paradise, sulphuric acid and sulphate of zinc, or, as it is commonly called white vitriol, or white copperas, which, it is stated, is very common, the introduction into the stomach of raw spirit being sufficiently destructive, without the addition of such a rid substances as those mentioned.

RIMMEL'S PERFUMED CRYSTAL PALACE ALMANAC, which has always been greatly approved by ladies, is now more perfect than ever, though equally compact and cheap as in former years.

AMUSEMENTS.

THEATRE ROYAL DRURY LANE.—
Lessee, Mr. E. T. SMITH.
FIRST MORNING PERFORMANCE ON WEDNESDAY NEXT.

The success of the new Christmas Pantomime is beyond all precedent. The united London Press have pronounced it perfect. Magnificent effects. Scenery resplendent with jewels and gold. Wonderful mechanical changes. Fairy ballet. Grotesque sprites. The famous Italian brothers, Azile Clown, graceful Columbines, and 200 performers, engaged in this National Pantomime, presenting a galaxy of talent and combination of attraction never before presented to the public, and which has been received, on each representation, with enthusiastic applause by audiences so crowded that hundreds have been unable to gain admission nightly.

MONDAY, Jan. 1st, and during the week, a new Drama, EUGENE. Messrs. T. Menz, Belton, A. Young, Worrell, Misses Marriott, Arden, Warrington, &c. After which, THE DEAD SHOT. To conclude with the most successful Pantomime of JACK AND GILL, OR HARLEQUIN KING MUSTARD AND FOUR AND TWENTY BLACKBIRDS BAKED IN A PIE. Harlequin, M. Milano; Columbines, Mlles. Heleno and Helen Honey; Pantaloon, Herr Kohl; Sprite, Herr Willkind; Clown, Harry Heleno; Principal Dancers, Mlles. Bertin Moshlin (Principal Dancers from the Imperial Theatre, Vienna), Mlles. Therese and Annie Gushlin, Miss Smith, &c.

Ice-cream Prices as usual.

THEATRE ROYAL, ADELPHI.—Proprietor and Manager, Mr. R. WEBSTER. Directress, Madame CELESTE. Splendid Scenery, Dancing, and Effects! Les Flottes! Appropos Act Drop, Wellington and Napoleon. The Grand New Spectacular Extravaganza of ZIG-ZAG every Evening, in which MADEMOISELLE MAQUETTA, Principal Danseuse of the Theatre Impérial de l'Opéra, Paris, and MADEMOISELLE BÉNONI, Principal Danseuse of the La Scala, Milan, will perform their Grand Pas.—THREE JUVENILE NIGHTS, Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, when the Grand Extravaganza will commence at Eight o'clock.—Review of the popular Drama of THE MYSTERIOUS STRANGER, in which Madame Celeste, Mr. Leigh Murray, and Mr. Keeley, will appear.

MONDAY, TUESDAY, and WEDNESDAY (Three Juvenile Nights), BONA FIDE TRAVELLERS, by Mr. Keeley, Mr. Paul Bedford, and Mrs. Keeley, with the greatly successful New Grand Spectacular Extravaganza, in Two Acts, of ZIG-ZAG TRAVELS OF DANUBE AND PRUTH, with Cuts, and New Scenery, Dresses, Ballet, and Effects. Principal Characters by Mrs. Keeley, Miss Woolgar, Miss M. Keeley, Miss Windham, Mademoiselle Marqueta, Principal Danseuse from the Theatre Impérial de l'Opéra, Paris, Mademoiselle Bénoni, Principal Danseuse from the La Scala, Milan; Mr. Paul Bedford, Mr. C. Selby, Mr. J. Rogers, &c. After which, THE CAMP AT CHOBHAM, by Mr. Keeley, Mr. Leigh Murray, and Miss M. Keeley. To conclude with THE RAILWAY BELLE.

THURSDAY, FRIDAY, and SATURDAY, will be revived the popular Drama of THE MYSTERIOUS STRANGER, or SATAN IN PARIS. Principal characters by Mr. Leigh Murray, Mr. Keeley, Mr. C. Selby, Mr. Paul Bedford, Mr. Gordon, Mr. Farsell, Madame Celeste, Mrs. Leigh Murray, Miss Windham, Miss M. Keeley, &c.; with the Grand New Spectacular Extravaganza of ZIG-ZAG TRAVELS OF DANUBE AND PRUTH, with Grand Ballet, Scenery, &c., and THE RAILWAY BELLE.

Stage Manager, Mr. LEIGH MURRAY.

LYCEUM THEATRE.—Under the Management of Madame VESTRIS.

Sole Lessee, Mr. CHAS. MATTHEWS.

On MONDAY, Jan. 1, 1875, will be presented the new Comic Drama, in Two Acts, entitled AGGRAVATING SAM. Principal characters by Mr. Charles Matthews, Mr. R. Roxby, Mr. B. Baker, Miss M. Oliver, Mrs. Macnamara, and Miss Martindale. After which will be produced a New and Original Fairy Extravaganza, entitled PRINCE PRITTYPET AND THE BUTTERFLY. Principal characters—Messrs. P. Matthews, B. Baker, Williams, J. Blund, L. Brough, H. Buller, Swan, Tompkinson, Miss H. Gordon, Miss Eglington, Miss Wadhams, Mrs. P. Matthews, Miss M. Oliver, Miss F. Tennant, Miss Martindale, Miss Wastell, and Miss Cherry.

To conclude with, TWO HEADS ARE BETTER THAN ONE. Principal characters—Messrs. R. Roxby, B. Baker, Williams, Swan, and Miss Hughes.

Stage Manager, Mr. R. Roxby. Box-office open daily from Ten till Six.

Mr. ALLCROFT, 15, New Bond street, is appointed sole agent for the Private Boxes, to whom all applications must be made.

ROYAL OLYMPIC THEATRE.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. ALFRED WIGAN.

MONDAY and during the week will be performed, the New Comedietta, A WIFE'S JOURNAL. Brown, Mr. Emery; Harcourt, Mr. Leslie; Mrs. Brown, Miss Muscull. After which, a New Fairy Extravaganza, by J. R. Manche, Esq., called THE YELLOW DWARF AND THE KING OF THE GOLD MINES. Characters by Messrs. F. Robson, Danvers, Clifton, White, H. Cooper, Miss Julia St. George, Miss E. Oranoid, Miss Marston, Miss Bromley (her first appearance), and Mrs. Fitzalan. To conclude with the Farce called A BLIGHTED BEING; in which Messrs. F. Robson, Leslie, Danvers, H. Cooper, and Miss E. Turner, will appear.

ASTLEY'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—
Lessee and Manager, Mr. WILLIAM COOKE.

THREE GRAND MORNING PERFORMANCES will take place on MONDAY, Jan. 1, MONDAY, 8th, and MONDAY, 15th, 1875, each commencing at Two o'clock.

The most varied round of entertainment in London is to be found at this vast Establishment, where, in addition to the usual powerful Dramatic and Equestrian Talent, 100 Auxiliaries are expressly engaged in the GLORIOUS BATTLE OF THE ALMA, with unapproachable acts of Horsemanship, and the New Gorgeous Equestrian CHRISTMAS PANTOMIME, nightly presented to overflowing and delighted Auditories, terminating as near eleven o'clock as possible.

MONDAY, Jan. 1, and During the Week, the Spectodid Spectacle of THE BATTLE OF THE ALMA. After which a Novel Series of SCENES IN THE CIRCLE. To conclude with the New COMIC PANTOMIME OF GULLIVER'S TRAVELS THROUGH THE HOUSE ISLANDS; or, HARLEQUIN BRITANNIA.

ROYAL MARIONETTE THEATRE.

Great Attraction. Every Morning at Three, MONS. DESARRAIS' Wonderful Troupe of DOGS AND MONKEYS, accompanied by SIG. BENVENUTI'S talented Band. Every Evening at Eight, HUGO VAMP'S highly successful Entertainment, THE MIRROR OF LIFE, AND FOUR OF RABELAIS' FEATS. Musical Illustrations by Mr. and Mrs. R. Timpus. Mode Boxes, 10s. 6d. Stalls, 2s. 6d., 2s., and 1s. 6d. Balconies, 1s.

CHRISTMAS HOLIDAYS.

ROYAL POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTION.—
The following Remarkable Novelties have been Specially Prepared:—

Lecture by J. H. Pepper, Esq., on Professor Wheatstone's Experiments on the Transmission of Sound through Solid Conductors, illustrated by a Telephone Concert.
First Part of an Entirely New and Splendid Optical Diorama, illustrating the Voyages of Sinbad the Sailor, with beautiful Phantasmagoria Effects, and appropriate Music arranged by Mr. W. Waud.

Monday Evening, the 1st of January,—first of a New Course of Monday Evening Lectures to the Industrial Classes: On the Chemistry of Life, by Dr. Letheby.

Great Increase in the Views of the War. The Battle of the Alma, Siege of Sebastopol, the English Battles, &c., &c.

Lecture on the Mine Rifle, and that powerful implement of war the Steam Gun, projecting Sixty Balls per Minute, which has been erected by Mr. Perkins, and will be discharged daily, and in the Evenings.

Lectures on Electricity, by Dr. Bachoffner.

Mr. Crawford's Vocal Entertainment of the Patriotic Songs of Scotland. Ford's special Amusement of the Juvenile Auditory, Davis's Ingenious Marionettes will be exhibited. All the other Lectures, Exhibitions of Models, &c., &c. Fresh Decorations.

Special Juvenile Night on the 3rd of January, and gratuitous distribution of the Ornaments of a beautiful Christmas Tree amongst the Young People.

Mr. Van Noorden's New Musical Game, the Poly-harmonic, explained daily by the Inventor.

TURKISH EXHIBITION, HYDE-PARK-CORNER, PICCADILLY.

This Superb and greatest COLLECTION OF WAX-WORK MODELS, all life size, in their brilliant and unique Oriental costume, in addition to the Shoe Bazaar, Cafe, Bath, Carriage, Harem, and the Court of the Sultan, giving every detail of Turkish life and manners. The Museum is open daily from Ten a.m. till ten p.m.—Admission, 1s.; Saturdays, 2s. 6d.; children, 1s. 6d.; family tickets for five, 10s.

FEUILLETON.

THEATRES.

DRURY LANE.—After a representation of the doleful tragedy "George Barnwell" on Tuesday evening, the new pantomime of "Harlequin Jack and Jill" was presented. The novelty is described by its author as "extraordinary, literary, traditional, comic, gastronomic, and peculiarly culinary, fantastic, domestic, and grand." The dialogue is lively, the incidents laughter-stirring, and following each other with great rapidity. The scenery is unquestionably superior to any hitherto presented at Old Drury; and this fact, combined with the enlivening efforts of the pantomimic characters, aided in no small degree by the intrepid Italian Brothers, secured for the pantomime a very successful inauguration.

PRINCESS'S.—Mr. Charles Reade's "Courier of Lyons" preceded the pantomime, which is entitled "Harlequin and Bluebeard, or the Good Fairy triumphant over the Demon Discord." It was decidedly successful, though somewhat too long. Mr. Cormack as Harlequin, Miss Desborough as Columbine, Mr. Huline, Clown, and Mr. Paolo, Pantaloon, all deserve praise, several of the tricks and transformations being very cleverly performed.

LYCEUM.—"Prince Prittypet and the Butterfly," a fairy extravaganza, was this year's novelty. The piece is under the vehicle for brilliant scenery, splendid dresses, and some well-managed dancing and grouping. Mr. W. Brough is the author, and he has thrown into it not a little fun. The acting was excellent, and the music, which was judiciously arranged, gave hearty approval, as encores proved. The author and Mr. W. Beverley, who in some of the scenery displayed extraordinary taste, were called before the curtain at the close.

HAYMARKET.—"Little Bo-peep, or, the Girl who has lost her Sheep," is the title of the pantomime presented here on Boxing Night. In the opening portions, the scenery and effects are equal to almost anything we remember to have seen on the stage. This remark more particularly applies to the "Bower of Laburnum," a scene painted by Cdeott, and a perfect gem in its way. The dresses are good and picturesque, and the pantomime altogether is a brisk and bustling affair, save some scenes in the harlequinade, where success depends upon the clown, who, to our thinking, is hardly up to his work.

ADELPHI.—"Zigzag Travels of Messrs. Pruth and Danube," the Christmas burlesque at this house, is an eccentric production, containing no very defined story, but abounding in patriotic allusions, pretty scenery, and lively dancing. The chief incidents in the piece are the difficulties encountered by The Pruth (Mrs. Keeley), The Danube (Miss Woolgar), and The Baltic (Miss Mary Keeley), during a journey in human form undertaken for the purpose of seeing the position of affairs. Three new dances made their debuts on the occasion, Mademoiselle Marquita Frouleim, Helene Spad, and Miss Dalton, and created a most favourable impression. One of the dances, called "Les Flottes," in which the corps de ballet, with model ships on their heads, representing the combined and Russian fleets, was very novel and graceful, the dancers representing the tossing of the vessels on the sea. "Pierre the Foundling," and "The Railway Belle," were the other pieces performed.

OLYMPIC.—A fairy extravaganza by Mr. Planché, called the "Yellow Dwarf and the King of the Golden Mines," was the Christmas novelty. It is an adaptation from the French. Puns and merry jests abound. There are scenes, however, which are too long and rather dull; but, on the whole, it was successful. Mr. Robson's acting was deservedly applauded. The costumes are gorgeous, the scenery picturesque and fanciful, and some of the transformations unique.

ST. JAMES'S.—The Arabian Nights furnishes the extravaganza at this theatre. The piece is humorous and filled with puns and jokes, many of them very happy. It contains a pretty ballet, in which Mademoiselles D'Antoine and Elise danced with grace and effect. The curtain fell in the midst of loud and hearty plaudits. The author, Mr. Francis Talford, was called for.

SADLER'S WELLS.—This year's pantomime is "Harlequin Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves; or, Morgiana and the Arabian Nights." It is full of wit and humour, which was heartily relished by a large audience. The dancing was extremely good, and the actors throughout successfully exerted themselves to amuse.

ROYAL MARLBOROUGH THEATRE.—The pantomime here on Boxing Night was "Young Norval on the Graupian Hills, or Harlequin Lord Ullin's Daughter." The curtain rises discovering Brutality, Tyranny, Despotism, Ignorance, Misery, Selfishness, and Blue-Ruin, rejoicing in the cave of Barbarism, and agreeing to upset the Christmas sports throughout the nation. The fairy queen, Civilization, is resolved this shall not be fulfilled, and has secured Young Norval—whom she intends to unite to Lord Ullin's daughter. Three Barbarians arrive to plunder old Norval's barn. Young Norval, pierces their chief, and is then admitted to the sports at Lord Ullin's, and gains the prize and the love of Bonnie Annie, Lord Ullin's daughter. The lovers, while trying to elope, get upset, when the entire scene changes to the Magic Halls of Sparkling Gems, and the transformation takes place. Replete with the whims of the day, the pantomime is admirably put upon the stage, and supported by excellent pantomimists. Young Walbourn is a first-rate clown.

CITY OF LONDON.—This theatre has long been celebrated for its pantomime, and Mr. Nelson Lee has, from his inexhaustible resources, drawn a first-rate Christmas novelty this year. The title is "Birds, Beasts, and Fishes; or, Harlequin Natural History," and all the opportunities for display afforded by the subject have been eagerly caught up by the author, and the management. Paul Herring and Stilt are two of the most amusing clowns on the stage; and their fun, though fast, never grows fatiguing.

SURREY.—An old stock piece, the "Foundling of the Forest," with all the usual Surrey effects, was barely listened to, the audience—if that might be called an audience which seemed to hear nothing—being occasionally amused by a pugilistic outburst in pit or gallery. Then came the pantomime, and mutual accommodation was the order of the night. It was called "Harlequin Little One-Eye, Little Two-Eyes, and Little Three Eyes; or, Beasts and Beauties," founded on the household story of the Brothers Grimm. The scenery was gorgeous in the extreme, even for the Surrey, and the changes and tricks were neatly managed. The whole affair was successful, and was highly applauded.

ASTLEY'S was crowded to excess to witness "Gulliver's Travels through the Horse Islands, or Harlequin Britannia." Many of the scenes are very pretty, and, enlivened by song and dance, had a very good effect. There are several allusions in the plot to the present war, but the connexion is not very obvious. All, however, seemed to give great satisfaction.

VICTORIA.—A Victoria pantomime and a Victoria boxing-night are like nothing else theatrical. "Gorgeous attire" and no attire worth mentioning—mysterious-looking bottles, lights, oranges, and sandwiches—strikes, whistling, and beer—are some of the discordant elements. The pantomime was "Harlequin Prince Fortune and Prince Fatal; or King Stoneyblatter and Queen Silverwing of the Butterfly Bowers of Brilliants." With such a title, what but success could be expected? The scenery was good, and the tricks deftly managed. The applause was vociferous.

ROYAL MARIONETTE THEATRE.—The entertainments at this elegant establishment are well calculated to amuse the Christmas pleasure-seekers of the great metropolis. Hugo Vamp's "Mirror of Life" introduces a brilliant succession of characteristic changes, which are sustained with dramatic effect of the delineator, and the music by Mr. and Mrs. Timpus and Bouveant's talented artists, is really admirable. As for Mr. Desarra's monkeys, they perform feats which are almost incredible to relate. To form an apt appreciation of their talents, it is absolutely necessary to see them, and we can confidently assert that their labours will amply repay the trouble of a visit. They hold morning sessions at three daily; and also give an interlude between the parts of the "Mirror of Life."

THE EXHIBITIONS.—The Gallery of Illustration, with its pictures of the Theatre of War; the Polytechnic and Piccadilly, with their science made easy and delightful; the Great Globe, with its Model of Sebastopol; Burford's Panorama of the Battle of the Alma; Madame Tussaud, with the "new additions" of Lord Raglan and Lieutenant Perry, and the Chamber of Horrors; the Turkish Museum, with its Scenes of Ottoman Life; the Aztecs, whatever they may be; the ever-new Colosseum; the ever-entertaining Albert Smith; Charles Cotton, and his sea-songs; the Proteus Mr. Love and his many voices—all have had their share of delighted and instructed visitors.

THE CECILIAN SOCIETY.—This ancient society, in accordance with its custom since its formation in 1785, of performing the sacred oratorio of the "Messiah" annually on Christmas eve, met for that purpose on Saturday last, at Albion-hall, Moorfields, in consequence of the usual day falling on Sunday this year. The songs and choruses were effectively given, and the whole passed off to the entire satisfaction of a numerous audience.

THE COURT AND WORLD OF FASHION.

Her Majesty during the week has continued at Windsor. Among the company at the royal dinner parties have been her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, Sir Charles Napier, Sir James Graham, the Duke of Newcastle, the Dowager Marchioness of Downshire, Viscount Canning, Lady Fanny Howard, Lady Frances Bruce, Lady Caroline Barrington, Baron and Baroness d'Ussoud, the Baroness de Speth, Major-General the Hon. C. and Mrs. Grey, Colonel the Hon. C. B. and Mrs. Phipps, Colonel the Hon. N. and Lady Mary Hood, Colonel and Lady Emily Seymour, and Mr. Glover.

On Saturday, Prince Albert left Windsor by special train for Sandhurst, and inspected the site for the Wellington College.

The Marquis of Lansdowne left Lansdowne-house on Sunday for Bowood-park, Wilts.

The Lord Chancellor, accompanied by Lady Chaworth, left town on Saturday for Bexley, Kent.

The Right Hon. Sidney Herbert, M.P., and Mrs. Herbert, left town on Saturday evening for Wilton-house, near Salisbury.

Sir George Grey, the Secretary for the Colonial Department, left town on Saturday, for Fillingdon, near Hawick.

Viscount Palmerston has vacated his house in Carlton-gardens, and removed to the mansion he has taken of Mr. Beaumont, M.P., in Piccadilly.

The Duke of Argyll has taken possession of Bedford-lodge, Campden-hill, formerly the residence of the Dowager Duchess of Bedford. The Duchess and family arrived there on Saturday, from visiting the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland at Tretham.

Lord John Russell left London on Saturday, to join her ladyship at the Duke of Bedford's seat in Bedfordshire.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer and Mrs. Gladstone left the official residence in Downing-street on Saturday for Hawarden Castle, Flintshire.

The Right Hon. Sir C. Wood, Bart., left Chesham-place on Saturday evening for Hickleton Hall, Yorkshire, to pass the Christmas with Lady Mary Wood and family.

The Duke of Newcastle, Sir James Graham, and the Earl of Aberdeen, are in town, public business demanding their constant attention to their respective departments in the State.

The Earl of Clarendon left town on Saturday night for the Grove, near Watford, Herts.

The Duke of Somerset has again rallied at Somerset House, Park-lane, and hopes are entertained of his grace's eventual recovery.

THE MARCHIONESS CANNON expired on Saturday morning, at Wilderness Park, near Sevenoaks, Kent, after a short illness. By the lamented decease of this charitable lady, the families of the Earl and Countess of Kinross, the Bishop of Rochester, the Duke and Duchess of Atholl, Lady Morand, &c., are placed in mourning.

THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN'S JOURNAL.

THE ROYAL BARON OF BEEF.—The baron of beef, which from time immemorial has formed the principal Christmas dish of the sovereigns of England, was this year supplied by Mr. Minton, of Piccadilly, Windsor, butcher to her Majesty. It was cut from the carcass of a fine Highland ox, fed by his Royal Highness Prince Albert, at the Model Farm, in the Home Park. The baron weighed precisely 60 stone, or 480 lb., and judges pronounced the meat to be of very superior quality. The baron was put down before an enormous fire on Saturday afternoon, and for fourteen hours was watched and basted by relays of assistants, under the superintendence of the head roasting cook. After the baron is taken up and allowed sufficient time to set and cool, comes the operation of paring and trimming, which materially improves its outward appearance. Placed on a dish as large as an ordinarily-sized table, it is then decorated. The royal cypher is traced round the edges of the dish; the holly and mistletoe apparently sprout from the outside fat of the meat; the baron is then placed on the sideboard of the dining-room in Windsor Castle, where her Majesty the Queen and the royal circle partake of their Christmas banquet. On Monday evening, the baron was placed on the royal sideboard.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

FESTIVITIES ON THE COMING OF AGE OF W. DE SODINGTON BLOUNT, Esq. The eldest son of Sir Edward Blount, Bart., of Mawley Hall, near Cleobury Mortimer, attained his majority on Tuesday last, and the event was celebrated in a manner betokening the respect entertained for the Blount family by all classes. The family is one of the oldest in the kingdom. A fat ox was purchased, with three sheep, and some bread, for distribution among the poor of the parish. The clock had scarcely struck twelve on Monday night, ere the festivities commenced. Cannons, lent for the occasion, were fired. A German band immediately left Cleobury for Mawley Hall; the church bells poured forth their merry peals, and the town was quite in a commotion at an early hour. The splendid ox was placed on a dais (being gaily decorated with flowers, ribbons, and evergreens), supported right and left by a knight of the cleaver, with an arched garland in front. The sheep were also suitably decorated. The procession, formed of the children of a school supported by Lady Blount, and the principal tradesmen of the town, &c., walked from the Market Hall, through the principal streets, to the baronial mansion. The ox was conveyed to the market-place, decorated with evergreens, and there cut up, and with 400 loaves of bread 202 families' hearts were gladdened by the distribution, under the head of ten classes. During the carving up and distribution of the beef, which weighed about nine cwt., the three sheep were roasted whole, and afterwards, with bread, given away among the hungry recipients, the last sheep being taken possession of vi et armis, and literally torn to pieces. The dinner at the Talbot was served in capital style. The bill of fare presented no lack of creature comforts. C. Wicksteed, Esq., presided, and James Adams, Esq., and J. Bourne, Esq., acted as vice presidents. Congratulatory and complimentary toasts concluded the festivities.

The Earl of Chesterfield distributed his annual donation to the poor of Brethby, and the workpeople employed on the estate, on Saturday last, consisting of three excellent fat heifers, three hundred loaves of bread, and eight pounds in money. Each person receives 3lb. of meat, a sixpenny loaf, and sixpence in money. His lordship also educates and clothes 24 boys and 24 girls, who are regaled with a good old English dinner on entering upon the new year.

THE DUKE OF NORTHUMBERLAND'S BIRTH-DAY was celebrated last week at Rothbury, at the Black Bull Inn, when the Rev. C. V. Harcourt filled the chair, and the Rev. G. S. Thomson, Vicar of Alnham, the vice-chair. It was generously attended by the neighbouring gentry, farmers, and tradespeople. The proceedings were maintained with great harmony to a late hour. Similar festivities took place at Warkworth, Felton, Corbridge, Wark, Tyne-mouth, Elsdon, Otterburn, and other places in the county of Northumberland, all ranks and classes being anxious to evince their respect and attachment to the ancient and illustrious House of Percy.

MARRIAGE OF CAPTAIN STRETFIELD.—The wedding of Captain H. D. Stretefield with the daughter of Oswald Smith, Esq., was celebrated at Chiddingfold, by the tenants and neighbours of the bridegroom on Tuesday last, when the gallant captain brought home his bride. His ancestors have been residents in the parish for upwards of three hundred years. Triumphant arches were erected on the line of road, a band of music engaged, and the tenant farmers, on horseback, met the happy pair entering the village, and escorted them to their residence in the park, the horses having been taken out of the carriage by the labourers, who drew it themselves to the mansion. After a few words of acknowledgment from Captain Stretefield on alighting, the cavalcade returned to the village, where the assemblage partook of a substantial dinner provided by the captain at the inn.

CHRISTMAS CHEER.—The usual distribution of beef at this season of the year, the gift of Earl and Countess Amherst to the poor of the parish, was made at the market-house, Sevenoaks, on Saturday morning last.—The poor on the estates of the Duke of Northumberland, at Alnwick and Stanwick, have been regaled with Christmas cheer.—On St. Thomas's-day, the whole of the labourers and poor on Earl Fitzwilliam's estate, at Wentworth, were given an ample supply of the comforts of the season, agreeable to his lordship's annual custom.—In several workhouses throughout the country, Sussex taking the lead of the English counties, the inmates have been plentifully regaled with fare which reminds one of the olden time.

CHRISTMAS OFFERING.—On Christmas-day an elegant service of communion-plate was presented by W. W. Hawkins, Esq., M.P., for use in the parish church of Alresford, and consisted of flagon, chalice, paten, and alms-dish, silver gilt, of the Camden pattern, each engraved with a Scriptural text from the Latin. The service was enclosed in an oak case, bearing the simple inscription—"Presented by William Warwick Hawkins and his wife Harriet, of Alresford Hall, to the parish of Alresford, on Christmas-day, 1854."

THE LATE LADY PILKINGTON, OF BUTTERTON HALL.—The funeral of this much-lamented lady took place on Wednesday, and was marked by all the respect due to her station. The procession was headed by the Rev. G. L. Thorpe, minister of Butterton Church. The pall-bearers were the principal tenants. Sir W. M. S. Pilkington, Bart., and L. Pilkington, Esq., followed as chief mourners, and after them a long retinue of tenants.

THE CHAIRMAN OF THE STAFFORDSHIRE QUARTER SESSIONS.—The presentation of the testimonial to Francis Twynlow, Esq., Chairman of the Quarter Sessions for this county, will be made on Monday next, the day on which the next sessions commence. It consists of a handsome service of plate, of the value of £1,200.

A HANDSOME SILVER INKSTAND was presented, on Wednesday last, by the Guardians of the Nuneaton Union, to their Chairman, H. R. Harpur, Esq., as a token of their estimation of the manner in which he has discharged his duties.

It has been determined by the Bar on the Oxford circuit to place the bust of Mr. Justice Talford in the Crown Court of Stafford.

THE SUBSCRIPTIONS for the testimonial to Francis Twynlow, Esq., who has so long and with such distinguished ability discharged the duties of Chairman of the Quarter Sessions for Staffordshire, have been closed, and the amount realised is upwards of £1,200. A service of plate has been ordered, which will be presented to Mr. Twynlow at the Shire Hall, Stafford, on the first day of the ensuing year.

PARIS, FRIDAY MORNING.—Yesterday evening, the President of the Bureau Legislatif, accompanied by all the Deputies, waited on the Emperor at the Tuileries, and presented the bill for the loan voted on that day, with an assurance of their devotion and unreserved co-operation. The President also laid before the Emperor an expression of the high sense they entertained towards the English army, its fleet, and illustrious chiefs, as also their solicitude and admiration for the valiant armies of France on land and sea. The Emperor, in returning thanks, concluded by saying that France, with the loyal and energetic assistance of its Allies, might wait with confidence the issue of the war in which she was engaged; and, supported by her brave Allies, by land and sea, she will know how to maintain the rank due to her in the continent of Europe.

The following despatch is dated Constantinople, Dec. 18:—"Admiral Douda goes home. He is to be succeeded by Sir Edmund Lyons. Admiral Hamelin will shortly be relieved by Admiral Bruat. Since the three sorties of the 6th, 10th, and 11th, the garrison of Sebastopol has remained inactive. General Liprandi is manoeuvring in the neighbourhood of Balaklava with 40,000 men. The Allies are in force ready to give battle. The third parallel of the French is now mounted with guns. Admiral Bruat has captured a fire-ship near Kamiesch."

SWALLOWS.—A foreign paper informs us that an experiment has just been successfully made of employing swallows to carry letters, as pigeons were used some years back. Six swallows, taken in their nests at Paris, were conveyed by railway to Vienna, and there let go, with a small roll of paper containing 1,500 words under the wing of each. They were liberated at a quarter after eleven in the morning. Two arrived at Paris a few minutes before one, one at a quarter past two, one at four o'clock, and the remaining two did not make their appearance at all.

The renowned Dr. Gattiker, of Zurich, has effected the most successful cure of cancer of the stomach without medicine; the learned Dr. writes as follows:—"Zurich, 3rd September, 1853.—I have tried Dr. Barry's Revalenta Arabica for a complaint which had hitherto resisted all other remedies—viz., Cancer of the Stomach—and, I am happy to say, with the most successful result. This soothing remedy has the effect, not only of arresting the vomiting, which is so fearfully distressing in cancer of the stomach, but also of restoring perfect digestion and assimilation. The same satisfactory influence of this excellent remedy I have found in all complaints of the digestive organs; it has also proved effectual in a most obstinate case of habitual flatulence and colic of many years standing. I look upon this delicious food as the most excellent restorative gift of Nature.—Dr. Gattiker." More ample details about this valuable discovery than we have room for, will be found in Messrs. Du Barry's advertisements.

FLOORING FOR STABLES—WALLS FOR OPEN CISTERNS, &c.—Those who live easily accessible to cities, or where gas-tar may be obtained, may make a hard and water-proof coating, by a mixture of gas-tar and coarse sand. We have seen compact floor-like walks in gardens and pleasure-grounds made in this way, at a moderate cost and on sloping surfaces; it possesses the eminent advantages of not being liable to wash. As the water does not enter it, it is not cracked nor affected by the frost. Water-line cisterns answer a good purpose for retaining water, where the frost cannot reach them, but on freezing completely ruins them. This is not the case with the tar and sand; hence it may be used for open reservoirs, small ponds in ornamental grounds, &c. Impervious stable-floors may be made in the same way, which will possess the advantage of carrying off without waste all the liquid portions of the manure, to tanks, reservoirs, or absorbents placed for this purpose. Common tar would probably succeed better than gas-tar, but is much more costly. We have known, where a small portion of tar had escaped from a barrel on a bed of sand, a compound formed as hard as sandstone, and which was not in the least affected by the freezing and thawing of successive winters.—Country Gentleman.

THE LONDON GAZETTE.

Tuesday, December 26.

BANKRUPTS.

Edward Jenner Stannard, 7, Trinity-square, Tower-hill, City, wine merchant.—Watson Lemon, 4, Bridgehouse-place, Newington-causeway, Surrey, painter and builder.—Charles Maidlow, 10, Adelaide-terrace, Westbourne-grove, Middlesex, builder.—John Hall, Purfleet-wharf, Camden-town, Middlesex, wharfinger and carman.—Henry Savill, Colchester, Essex, grocer.—Samuel Tyler, Queen's Head Inn, Denham, Buckingham, innkeeper.—Thomas Standen, Goudhurst, Kent, general dealer.—Francis George Elkins, 8, London-street, Greenwich, watchmaker and jeweller.—Isaac Barton, Stafford, grocer.—Jane Warren, Bristol, haberdasher.—John Evans, Exeter, bookseller and stationer.—George Brand Hussey, Plymouth, innkeeper.—John Hamond, Manchester, tobaccoist.—Edward Wright, Welwick, Holderness, York, draper.

Friday, December 29.

BANKRUPTS.

Samuel Lampkin, Gibson-street, Oakley-street, Lambeth, Baker.—George Fifoot Lyle, Church-passage, Basinghall-street, sewed muslin and lace maker.—George Brand Hussey, Plymouth, innkeeper.—William Kinton Gibbs, Dudley, Worcestershire, grocer and provision dealer.—James Atkinson and Alfred Atkinson, Huntington, drapers.—Henry Albert Linford, Sherborne-lane, City, tavern and eating-house-keeper.—George James Lee, Chertsey, Surrey, builder.—Charles Maryon Crooks, Church-row, Houndsditch, licensed victualler and wine and spirit merchant.—John Marshall, Toldmorden, Yorkshire, cotton spinner and innkeeper.—James Mortimer, Grosvenor-road, Abbey-road, St. John's Wood, builder.—Isadore Barnstein, formerly of Essex-street, Strand, afterwards of California, then of Melbourne, Australia, and now of Liverpool, commission agent and merchant.—Ann Wilkinson, Crompton, Ellensmere, Salop, innkeeper.—Bartholomew Steel, Sheffield, glass, china, and earthenware dealer.

MONEY MARKET.

MONDAY.—This being Christmas-day, it was observed as a holiday in the City, and the Bank and Stock Exchange were closed.

TUESDAY.—A small attendance, and English funds very quiet; nor was much business transacted in foreign securities.

WEDNESDAY.—The Funds were rather unfavourable, influenced by the warlike tone of the French Emperor's speech. They, however, recovered something of firmness before closing. The amount of business was trifling.

THURSDAY.—The Funds were flat to-day, especially towards the close. Three per Cent. Consols, for account, 10th January, 91½, 3½, 4½, ex. div. Three per Cent. Reduced, 90½, 91½. New Three per Cent., 91½, 91½, 91½. Three-and-a-half per Cent. Exchequer Bonds, falling payable in 1859, 93½, 94. Bank Stock, 209, 209½. Exchequer Bills, 4s. to 4s. prem. Russian Fires, 97 to 99; Turkish, 75½, 75½.

FRIDAY.—The English Stock market was very quiet. Consols 91½ to 91½ for account. Exchequer Bills 4s. to 7s. premium. Exchequer Bonds have been quoted 93½. Bank Stock firm at 208 to 209½. The New Three per Cent. 91½ to 91½, and the Reduced 90½ to 91.

THE MARKETS.

MARK LANE.

FRIDAY.—The present week's arrival of English wheat have been moderate, and the show of samples to-day limited. Fine white qualities sold steadily at fully last week's prices; but red parcels were dull, at barley late rates. With foreign wheat we were rather scantily supplied. In prices, however, we have no change to notice. Barley, the supply moderate, moved off slowly on former terms. The malt trade heavy at barely previous rates. A good demand for oats, and sound heavy corn was rather dearer. Beans, peas, and flour were slow in sale.

COUNTRY GRAIN.

Isleworth, Tuesday.—An average supply of wheat; trade not quite so firm, and the growers give way 1s. per quarter. A very good supply of barley; trade steady at last week's prices, and in some instances 1s. per quarter more is made for choice quality. Beans and peas as of late. Prices to the growers: Wheat, red, 74s. to 76s.; ditto, white, 80s. to 82s. per quarter; barley, malling, 54s. to 58s.; ditto, grinding, 32s. to 33s. per quarter; beans, 46s. to 48s. per quarter; peas, 45s. to 46s. per quarter. Averages for the week ending 23rd December: Wheat, 1,31½ quarters, at 73s. 3d.; barley, 3,371 quarters, a 30s. 10d.; beans, 2 quarters, at 49s.; peas, 74 quarters, at 45s. 5d.

DUBLIN CORN EXCHANGE.

TUESDAY.—There was a very poor supply of wheat, and a small attendance at market to-day. We note no alteration in the currencies of last Friday. White wheat, 41s. 6d. to 41s.; red ditto, 38s. to 42s. 6d.; barley, 16s. 6d. to 21s.; burr, 15s. 6d. to 16s. 9d.; new oats, 13s. 6d. to 16s. 9d.; oatmeal, per cwt., 15s. to 17s. 6d.; rapeseed, 27s. to 28s. 6d.; bakers' flour, 23s. to 28s.; Indian corn, per 40lbs., 42s. to 48s. 6d.

THE IRISH GRAIN TRADE.

The markets in Ireland have further advanced for most descriptions of grain. Wheat has advanced 1s. to 2s. 6d., and oats and barley 3d. to 6d. per barrel on the week. The stock of foreign wheat is so nearly exhausted in some markets, that our friends have ceased quotations. Oats are still quoted 15s. to 16s. per barrel of 196 lbs. raw to the farmer, which leaves little margin for profit to exporters. Indian corn has gone more largely into consumption; and, notwithstanding the prospect of considerable supplies from the United States, prices must be quoted 2s. 6d. to 5s. per ton dearer. The present year will close with smaller stocks of grain of all kinds in the hands of merchants and dealers in Ireland than has ever been remembered.

BOROUGH HOP MARKET.

FRIDAY.—Our market has been extremely inactive this week. In the general quotations we have no change to notice. The imports amount to 178 bales from Ostend, 696 from New York, 6 from Antwerp, and 45 from Rotterdam. New Mid and East Kent pebbles, £15. 15s. to £22. Wealth of Kent ditto, £15. to £16. 10s.; Sussex ditto, £14. 10s. to £15. 10s. per ton.

SMITHFIELD.

MONDAY.—This being Christmas-day, it was a holiday market at Smithfield. The supplies of meat were on a diminished scale, and the attendance of butchers was less numerous than usual on a Monday's market. The tone of trade was generally quiet.

SMITHFIELD, FRIDAY.—Market fairly supplied with beasts in but middling condition. The beef trade ruled somewhat active, and, in some instances, the primest Scotch realised 5s. 4d. per 8lbs. An average supply of sheep on offer. Mutton trade firm, and Monday's currency fully supported. Calves—supply limited; advanced 4d. per 8lbs. Pigs were somewhat firmer. Minkhows realised 41s. 10s. to 41s. 10s., including their small cull.

Per stone of 14lbs.	s. d. s. d.	Per stone of 14lbs.	s. d. s. d.
Inferior Beasts	3 0-3 4	Prime Southdown	5 0-5 4
Second quality beasts	3 0-3 4	Large ewe, calves	4 6-5 4
Prime large oxen	3 0-3 4	Prime small do.	6 0-6 0
Prime Scots, &c.	0 5-0 5 2	Large hogs	3 0-3 4
Inferior Sheep	3 0-3 4	Small porkers	1 0-1 6
Second quality	4 0-4 4	Suckling calves	22 0-22 0
Prime ewe-willed	4 0-4 4	Quarter old pigs	21 0-21 0

COUNTRY CATTLE.

DEBY SMITHFIELD, Tuesday.—There was but a limited supply of fat beasts to-day, with a flat demand. The number of sheep was less than usual, without any alteration of price. The supply of fat pigs was more than equal to the demand, and several lots were left unsold. Beef made 6d. to 6½d.; mutton, 6½d. to 7d.; veal, 7d. per lb.; pigs, 5s. 6d. per score; rough fat, 6s. 5d. per stone, commencing 25th of October; hides, young, 8s. and above, 3½d. per lb.; ditto, young, under 8s. 3½d.; old cows, all weights, 30d.; cut hides, 2½d.; calf skins, 10lb. and under, 4d.; above 10 and under 16, 1½d.; above 16, 1½d.; all cut calf skins 4d. less.

DUBLIN SMITHFIELD CATTLE MARKET.

THURSDAY.—We had a wretchedly small market to-day, scarcely half the usual number of beasts. Prices of beef very firm, 52s. to 65s. per cwt.; mutton, 5½d. to 7d.; and veal, 8d. to 8½d. per lb. In the pig market, bacon brought from 54s. to 58s. per cwt.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS.

BIRTHS.

On the 22nd inst., at Brighton, the wife of the Rev. F. C. Cox, of a son.—On the 18th inst., at Sutherland-terrace, Brighton, Mrs. H. S. East, of a son.—On the 23rd inst., at Holland-place, North Brixton, Mrs. N. Horne, of a son.—On the 27th inst., at 19, Cavendish-square, the Viscountess Maudslayi, of a daughter.—On the 27th inst., at her residence, 130, Park-street, Grosvenor-square, Lady (Bedford) Wilson, of a daughter.—On Christmas-day, at 1, Chestelands-street, Mayfair, the lady of Colonel Robert Wood, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

On the 23rd inst., at St. Barnabas Church, Kennington, by the Rev. W. Barker, George S. Barlow, Esq., of Grosvenor, Hylton, to Margaret Jane Huxtable, youngest daughter of the late Edward Huxtable, Esq., of the Lawn, South Lambeth.—On the 23rd inst., at St. Gregory's, by St. Paul, Mr. F. T. Hunt, of King-street, Cheapside, to Mary Ann, eldest daughter of the late Mr. J. E. Mitchell, of Doctors'-commons.—On the 21st inst., at St. John the Divine Church, Finsbury, by the Rev. W. Cahler, M.A., T. B. Omerod, Esq., of Manchester, to Fanny, daughter of B. Poole, Esq., of Liverpool.

DEATHS.

On the 22nd inst., at Upton Parsonage, Cheshire, George Forster Dalton, Esq., at the advanced age of 99 years.—On the 26th inst., at 12, Hyde Park-gardens, Slaney, aged 11 months, the youngest son of Thomas Dent, Esq.—On the 5th inst., at Seaford, from the effects of a wound, Lieutenant Charles Harriott, R.M., 41st Regiment, aged 21.—On the 23rd inst., J. Scott, Esq., of River-street, Clerkenwell, aged 66.

London: Printed by JOHN POWELL & COBBY, at 13, Little Prince-street, New Theatre, in the Parish of St. Giles, Bloomsbury; and published by the said JOHN POWELL & COBBY, at the Office, Essex House, Nos. 2, 3, 4, & 5, Essex-street, Strand, in the Parish of St. Clement Danes, Middlesex.—DECEMBER 30, 1854.

